Essential questions

- What does The Yellow Wallpaper suggest about women and medical authority?
- What does The Yellow Wallpaper suggest about confinement and madness?
- What does The Yellow Wallpaper suggest about voice and silence?

Objectives

- Students will cite at least 2 quotations, with locations, to support each written claim about what the text says explicitly and implicitly (scored on the writing-prompt rubric).
- Students will trace one theme across at least 3 sections of the story in the final paper, earning at least 70 of 100 rubric points.
- Students will explain how characters, setting and point of view interact in at least 3 exit tickets, each meeting the claim-evidence-reasoning criteria.
- Students will determine the in-context meaning of taught vocabulary, scoring at least 80% on the vocabulary items of the story quizzes.
- Students will write an argument with a clear claim, reasons and relevant evidence, scoring at least 80% on the unit test's short-answer scoring guides.

Author biography

Charlotte Perkins Gilman was born in Hartford, Connecticut, on 3 July 1860, a relative of the Beecher family (Harriet Beecher Stowe was her great-aunt). After the birth of her daughter in 1885 she suffered severe depression and in 1887 was treated by the neurologist S. Weir Mitchell with his "rest cure," which forbade intellectual work; she later said it brought her near breakdown. She separated from her husband, moved to California and became a lecturer and writer on women's economic independence (Women and Economics, 1898) and author of the utopian story Herland (1915). Facing incurable cancer, she ended her life on 17 August 1935.

Historical and cultural context

In the nineteenth century, women with depression or "nervous" illness were often prescribed the "rest cure" of the neurologist S. Weir Mitchell: isolation, bed rest, overfeeding and a ban on intellectual work. Gilman underwent a version of it after the birth of her daughter in 1885. Married women had few legal rights, and doctors (usually men) had great authority over their patients.

Publication and reception, then and now

First published in The New England Magazine in January 1892. Gilman later said the editor of The Atlantic, Horace Scudder, rejected it, writing that he could not forgive himself if he made others as miserable as he had made himself.

Then: Many readers read it as a horror story about madness; a Boston doctor protested that it could drive readers insane.

Now: A foundational feminist text, rediscovered in the 1970s (the Feminist Press reissued it in 1973), and a classic of psychological horror and the unreliable narrator.

Overview (spoiler-free)

A young mother, taken by her physician husband John to a rented country house for a "rest cure," keeps a secret journal. She is forbidden to write and confined to a former nursery with hideous yellow wallpaper.

Main themes

- oppression of women.

- mental illness and medical authority.
- imprisonment and freedom.

Why it matters

The story helped change how people thought about depression and women's autonomy, and it remains a powerful study of how silencing someone harms them.

Spoilers · teacher only

She becomes convinced a woman is trapped behind the wallpaper's pattern, and in the end she tears it off, identifies with the trapped woman, and creeps around the room as her husband faints.

Model a close reading of one passage using the written think-aloud below.
First, meaning. I read "John laughs at me, of course, but one expects that in marriage" slowly and put it in my own words: The narrator says her husband laughs at her, and adds that one expects that in marriage. Next, craft. I notice the tone is light, but "of course" and "one expects" show she has accepted being dismissed as normal. The strongest word is "laughs": laughing is not cruelty exactly, but it refuses to take her seriously, which is the core problem in the story. Then, effect. What does this line show about the narrator's marriage? My answer: Gilman shows how a husband who controls his wife "for her own good" makes her fears seem silly; the casual tone hides a real lack of power.

Gilman was herself given the "rest cure" for depression in the 1880s. Why did she say she wrote this story? Answer: She wrote it to show the harm of the rest cure and to persuade doctors (including Dr. S. Weir Mitchell) to stop forbidding women all work and thought; accept answers that connect her own treatment to the story's purpose.

Lesson 2: The Yellow Wallpaper

Focus: confinement driving a woman into madness

Objective: Students will analyze how point of view develops in “The Yellow Wallpaper” by writing a claim-evidence-reasoning paragraph that cites at least 2 quotations from the section, and will score at least 80% on the section quiz.

Standards: Common Core RL.9-10.1, W.9-10.1, L.9-10.4

Content note (postpartum depression and psychosis, controlling marriage, suicidal thoughts, suicide, alcohol or drugs (mentioned)): Sensitive content: Postpartum depression and psychosis; controlling marriage; suicidal thoughts. Preview the story, tell students in advance, and allow a pass on reading aloud. Keep discussion on how the writer uses these elements, not on graphic detail. This section mentions drinking or a drug (“…and lots of tonics and things, to say nothing of ale and wine and rare meat. Dear John! He l…”). Treat it as period custom or plot detail; name it plainly and don't glamorize it.
Student preview: Heads-up: this story includes postpartum depression and psychosis; controlling marriage; suicidal thoughts. Support is available if this is hard to read.
Suggested language: “Why does the writer include this, and what does it make us notice?”
Safe messaging: Discuss the character's despair and what the text does with it; do not dwell on methods. Before the lesson, remind students that support is available and how to reach the counselor. Check in privately with any student who seems affected and follow your school's referral protocol. Share with students: If you or someone you know is struggling or thinking about suicide, call or text 988 (Suicide & Crisis Lifeline, U.S.) or talk with a school counselor today. Let a counselor know in advance that this story is being taught.

Teacher only · spoilers

A woman recovering from what her physician husband John calls a 'temporary nervous depression' after childbirth keeps a secret journal during a summer 'rest cure' in an old mansion. Forbidden to write or work, she is confined to a nursery with barred windows and hideous yellow wallpaper. She comes to see a woman trapped behind its pattern. On the last night she tears the paper off to free her, identifies with her, and creeps around the room; John faints at the sight.

Background: Gilman (1892) based it on her own treatment by S. Weir Mitchell, whose 'rest cure' forbade intellectual work. She said she wrote it to save people from being driven crazy.

Significance: A foundational feminist text and a Gale Short Stories for Students (vol. 1) selection.

First, meaning. I read "There are things in that paper that nobody knows but me" slowly and put it in my own words: She insists that the wallpaper holds secrets and that she alone can see them. Next, craft. I notice the claim is private and proud, using "nobody... but me," which cuts her off from everyone else. The strongest word is "nobody": it makes her knowledge feel special but also lonely, the sign of a mind being shut in. Then, effect. What does the narrator mean when she says only she knows the things in the paper? My answer: When she says only she knows the things in the paper, the narrator means her isolation has turned the wallpaper into her private world; what she sees there is really her own trapped situation, which no one around her will acknowledge.

3. How does the symbolism in this story shape what we understand about confinement driving a woman into madness? [DOK 3 · thinkPairShare · wait 8 s · RL.9-10.4, SL.9-10.1, RL.11-12.4] Look for: Look for objects, places or actions that stand for larger ideas.

   Answer guidance: A defensible line of argument: The narrator's madness is a response to her confinement. Useful evidence: "John laughs at me, of course, but one expects that in marriage" (The Yellow Wallpaper, paragraph 5): Irony. On symbolism: The wallpaper's pattern becomes bars; the woman behind it is the narrator herself and all women confined. Credit any position that is supported by quotation and reasoning; push one-sided answers to address the strongest counterpoint.
4. In the passage that begins "Then the floor is scratched and gouged and splintered, the plaster itself is dug out here and there, and this great heavy bed, which is all we found in the room, looks as if it…", why might Gilman have chosen these particular words? Pick two and explain their connotations. [DOK 2 · followUp · wait 5 s · RL.9-10.4, SL.9-10.1, RL.11-12.4] Look for: Diction analysis of two words in the anchor passage.

[DOK 2 · followUp · wait 5 s · RL.9-10.3, SL.9-10.1, RL.11-12.3] Look for: A woman recovering from what her physician husband John calls a 'temporary nervous depression' after childbirth keeps a secret journal during a summer 'rest cure' in an old mansion. Forbidden to write or work, she is confined to a nursery with barred windows and hideous yellow wallpaper. She comes…

6. As the opening story, what does “The Yellow Wallpaper” set up that the rest of The Yellow Wallpaper will need? [DOK 3 · thinkPairShare · wait 8 s · RL.9-10.5, SL.9-10.1, RL.11-12.5] Look for: A causal or structural link between this and the previous story.
   Answer guidance: A defensible line of argument: The narrator's madness is a response to her confinement. Useful evidence: “There are things in that paper that nobody knows but me” (The Yellow Wallpaper, paragraph 120): Obsession begins. Theme link: she is infantilized in a nursery. Credit any position that is supported by quotation and reasoning; push one-sided answers to address the strongest counterpoint.
7. What can we infer about a character's motives from what they say and do here, as opposed to what they claim? [DOK 3 · followUp · wait 8 s · RL.9-10.3, SL.9-10.1, RL.11-12.3] Look for: An inference about motive supported by a quoted line.
   Answer guidance: A defensible line of argument: The narrator's madness is a response to her confinement. Useful evidence: “I've got out at last” (The Yellow Wallpaper, paragraph 257): Her "freedom." Theme link: she is infantilized in a nursery. Credit any position that is supported by quotation and reasoning; push one-sided answers to address the strongest counterpoint.
8. The bell-ringer asked: “How would you feel if you were not allowed to do the things that keep you yourself?” Now that we have read closely, how would you revise your first answer, and which line changed your mind? [DOK 2 · thinkPairShare · wait 5 s · RL.9-10.2, SL.9-10.1, RL.11-12.2] Look for: A revised answer anchored in the text.
9. Where does imagery appear, and how does it connect this story to the larger concern with women and medical authority? [DOK 3 · followUp · wait 8 s · RL.9-10.4, SL.9-10.1, RL.11-12.4] Look for: Look for sensory details (sight, sound, cold, light) and what mood they create.
   Answer guidance: A defensible line of argument: The narrator's madness is a response to her confinement. Useful evidence: “John laughs at me, of course, but one expects that in marriage” (The Yellow Wallpaper, paragraph 5): Irony. Theme link: she is infantilized in a nursery. Credit any position that is supported by quotation and reasoning; push one-sided answers to address the strongest counterpoint.
10. Background: Gilman (1892) based it on her own treatment by S. Weir Mitchell, whose 'rest cure' forbade intellectual work. She said she wrote it to save people from being driven crazy. How does knowing this change the way you read one moment in the story? [DOK 3 · thinkPairShare · wait 8 s · RL.9-10.3, SL.9-10.1, RL.11-12.3] Look for: A specific moment reread in light of the context.

Writing prompts (eleven rigor levels)

Scaffolded support (250 words; Common Core: RL.9-10.1, W.9-10.1): Supported track (work from the passage your teacher selects). In “The Yellow Wallpaper,” how does Gilman show confinement driving a woman into madness? Write a paragraph that states your claim, quotes two details from the passage, and explains how each detail supports your idea. Use the point of view you noticed as one piece of evidence.

HS Freshman (350 words; Common Core: RL.9-10.1, W.9-10.1): In The Yellow Wallpaper, how does Gilman develop the idea of confinement driving a woman into madness? State a clear claim, support it with two or three quotations, and explain how the point of view in the story helps build that idea.

HS Sophomore (450 words; Common Core: RL.9-10.1, W.9-10.1): Analyze how The Yellow Wallpaper develops the idea of confinement driving a woman into madness. Make a precise claim, support it with at least three pieces of textual evidence, and explain how the author's use of point of view and symbolism shapes that idea. Address one possible counterclaim.

HS Junior (550 words; Common Core: RL.11-12.5, RL.11-12.1, W.11-12.1, RL.11-12.9): Analyze how the structure of The Yellow Wallpaper (where it begins, turns and ends) and its point of view shape the reader's understanding of confinement driving a woman into madness. Identify one place where the text leaves matters uncertain and explain how that uncertainty adds to its meaning. Distinguish what is directly stated from what is really meant.

HS Senior (600 words; Common Core: RL.11-12.6, W.11-12.1, RL.11-12.9): Two readers disagree about what The Yellow Wallpaper suggests about confinement driving a woman into madness. Lay out two plausible interpretations, weigh the evidence for each (including the story's point of view and symbolism), and argue for the stronger one in a sustained, well-organized essay. Distinguish what is directly stated from what is really meant.

AP (650 words; Common Core: RL.11-12.6, W.11-12.1): Write a literary argument in which you analyze how Charlotte Perkins Gilman uses point of view in The Yellow Wallpaper to complicate the reader's understanding of confinement driving a woman into madness. Develop a defensible thesis, select evidence purposefully, and explain how specific choices of diction and syntax create meaning.

College Freshman (1000 words; Common Core: see unit standards): Situate The Yellow Wallpaper within its historical and literary context and argue how the story's treatment of confinement driving a woman into madness responds to that context. Engage with at least one secondary perspective (a critic, historian or the author's own statements), integrate quotations smoothly, and cite in MLA style.

College Sophomore (1250 words; Common Core: see unit standards): Read The Yellow Wallpaper alongside the conventions of its genre and period. Argue how the story's handling of confinement driving a woman into madness follows or bends those conventions, using the point of view as evidence, and test your reading against one published critic. Document two secondary sources in MLA.

College Junior (1500 words; Common Core: see unit standards): Apply a named critical approach (for example formalist, historicist, feminist, psychoanalytic or ecocritical) to The Yellow Wallpaper and its treatment of confinement driving a woman into madness. State your method, show what it reveals in the story's point of view and symbolism, and identify where the text resists it.

College Senior (2000 words; Common Core: see unit standards): Develop a research argument that reads The Yellow Wallpaper as evidence for a larger claim about confinement driving a woman into madness in The Yellow Wallpaper. Connect close reading of the story to the whole story, engage at least four scholarly sources, and state precisely where your reading departs from theirs (Chicago style).

Graduate / PhD (2500 words; Common Core: see unit standards): Develop an original argument that reads The Yellow Wallpaper as a hinge in the story's larger treatment of confinement driving a woman into madness. Position your reading within a named critical conversation (for example formalist, historicist, psychoanalytic, feminist or postcolonial approaches), account for the textual history where relevant, and articulate the stakes of your intervention for scholarship on The Yellow Wallpaper.

Final paper

The Yellow Wallpaper: final paper (formal literary analysis). Choose one prompt.

1. Analyze how Charlotte Perkins Gilman develops women and medical authority across The Yellow Wallpaper. Trace the idea through at least three moments (beginning, middle and end) and argue what the ending finally suggests.
2. Choose one recurring symbol, image or motif in The Yellow Wallpaper and argue how its meaning changes over the story and why that change matters to confinement and madness.
3. Analyze a central character's choices in The Yellow Wallpaper. Argue whether the story judges that character, and how its structure or point of view shapes your answer.
4. Two readers disagree about whether The Yellow Wallpaper finally endorses or criticizes its society's view of voice and silence. Weigh both readings and argue for one, answering the strongest objection.

Length: Scaffolded support 500-700 words; HS Freshman 700-900 words; HS Sophomore 900-1,100 words; HS Junior 1,000-1,300 words; HS Senior 1,200-1,500 words; AP 1,300-1,600 words; College Freshman 1,500-2,000 words; College Sophomore 2,000-2,500 words; College Junior 2,500-3,000 words; College Senior 3,000-4,000 words; Graduate / PhD 4,000-6,000 words Evidence requirement: at least 4 quotations from at least two parts of the story. Quote the reading text exactly and cite the paragraph (MLA style). HS Senior and above: one scholarly or historical source; College Sophomore and above: two, cited in MLA.

Criterion	Points	Descriptor
Thesis	20	A specific, arguable claim that answers the prompt and organizes the paper.
Evidence	25	Well-chosen, accurately quoted and cited passages from across the work, meeting the evidence requirement.
Analysis	30	Explains how language, structure and literary elements create meaning; goes beyond summary.
Organization	15	Logical progression, clear topic sentences and transitions; introduction and conclusion frame the argument.
Style and conventions	10	Formal academic voice, present tense for literature, correct grammar and MLA format.
