

Siddhartha

Hermann Hesse · 1922

English translation by Gunther Olesch, Anke Dreher, Amy Coulter, Stefan Langer and Semyon Chaichenets (Project Gutenberg #2500; Standard Ebooks edition)

TEACHER EDITION · CURRICULUM UNIT

Answers and teacher notes included; the separate Student Packet has the questions with room to write.

Dual Credit (Indiana College Core) edition (standards shown for this framework only)

12 chapter lessons plus 1 seminar day(s), a test day and an essay day: 17 class days of 90 minutes, 5 a week (block schedule), 4 weeks
Syllabus · 90-minute lesson plans · lecture scripts · vocabulary · quizzes with keys · writing prompts at eleven rigor levels · SAT-style items · whole-book test · essays

Liber et Libri · Lux et Libri LLC

Cover: Claude Monet, Autumn at Argenteuil (1873). Public domain (Wikimedia Commons).

Contents and unit overview

1. Unit overview and the 90-minute lesson
2. Syllabus (weekly pacing)
3. Lesson 1: introduction (author, context, reception, overview)
4. Lesson plans and lecture scripts (chapters 1–12), each with vocabulary, discussion questions, annotation focus, quiz and key, writing prompts and SAT-style items
5. Unit test (eleven rigor versions) with answer keys and scoring guides
6. Final paper
7. Essay assignments at eleven rigor levels

Edition: Translated from the German by Gunther Olesch, Anke Dreher, Amy Coulter, Stefan Langer and Semyon Chaichenets for Project Gutenberg (ebook #2500); this text is the Standard Ebooks edition, believed to be in the U.S. public domain, with Standard Ebooks' own contributions dedicated under CC0 1.0. Word-choice analysis studies the translators' English, not Hesse's German.

Content note for teachers: Cultural representation: Siddhartha is a German novelist's adaptation of Hindu and Buddhist ideas, not a sacred or authoritative text. Discuss whose perspective shapes the story, and frame the caste system as a system of harm.

Grades: Grades 10–12 (high school only; scales to graduate via rigor levels). Scaffolded-support track (grade-9 floor): students work from teacher-selected passages with scaffolds, sentence starters and partial-credit probes. Weeks: 4. Class days: 17 × 90 minutes (12 chapter lessons plus seminar, test and essay days).

Essential questions

- What does Siddhartha suggest about the search for self-knowledge?
- What does Siddhartha suggest about experience versus teaching?
- What does Siddhartha suggest about the unity of all things?
- What does Siddhartha suggest about the river and time?
- What does Siddhartha suggest about love and attachment?

Objectives

- Students will cite at least 2 quotations, with locations, to support each written claim about what the text says explicitly and implicitly (scored on the writing-prompt rubric).
- Students will trace one theme across at least 3 sections of the novel in the final paper, earning at least 70 of 100 rubric points.
- Students will explain how characters, setting and point of view interact in at least 3 exit tickets, each meeting the claim-evidence-reasoning criteria.

- Students will determine the in-context meaning of taught vocabulary, scoring at least 80% on the vocabulary items of the chapter quizzes.
- Students will write an argument with a clear claim, reasons and relevant evidence, scoring at least 80% on the unit test's short-answer scoring guides.

Standards: Dual Credit (Indiana College Core)

ICC-WC-1.1, ICC-WC-1.3, ICC-WC-1.4, ICC-WC-1.5, ICC-WC-1.7

Indiana College Core, Written Communication outcomes 1.1–1.7 (CHE guidance); ICC-WC-x IDs are ours

Assessments: Daily chapter quizzes (auto-graded); Weekly writing prompt (rubric); Socratic seminars (scheduled days); Whole-book test (scheduled day); Final essay (scheduled day); College Sophomore and above write one essay of the five Differentiation: Every prompt and quiz has eleven rigor levels (Scaffolded support through Graduate / PhD); the app applies student override, then class standard, then the automatic level. Each prompt is tagged for Common Core, Indiana 2023, Dual Credit (Indiana College Core), AP and Cambridge where they apply.
Materials: Liber et Libri reader; Annotation journal; Chapter lecture slides or script

The 90-minute lesson

#	Segment	Mode	Minutes	Clock
1	Bell-ringer	You do	8	0–8
2	Vocabulary with etymology notes	We do	10	8–18
3	Background and context	I do	10	18–28
4	I do: modeled close reading	I do	12	28–40
5	We do: guided annotation	We do	15	40–55
6	You do: independent annotation	You do	15	55–70
7	Discussion	We do	10	70–80
8	Exit ticket / chapter quiz	You do	7	80–87
9	Closure	I do	3	87–90
	Total		90

The 60-minute lesson

60-minute version for shorter class periods: the same sequence with tighter timings. Keep the bell-ringer to one prompt, teach three vocabulary words, read only the opening of the mini-lecture script, model one quotation in the I do, and use the level focus set (12 of the 30 tiered discussion questions). The chapter quiz can move to homework if time runs short.

#	Segment	Mode	Minutes	Clock

1	Bell-ringer	You do	5	0–5
2	Vocabulary with etymology notes	We do	5	5–10
3	Background and context	I do	6	10–16
4	I do: modeled close reading	I do	8	16–24
5	We do: guided annotation	We do	10	24–34
6	You do: independent annotation	You do	10	34–44
7	Discussion	We do	10	44–54
8	Exit ticket / chapter quiz	You do	4	54–58
9	Closure	I do	2	58–60
	Total		60

Syllabus

Week	Chapters	Lessons	Focus and activities	Assessment
1	Introduction: author, context and reception The Son of the Brahmin With the Samanas Gotama Awakening	5 × 90 min (450 min)	the search for self-knowledge • Daily 90-minute lesson: bell-ringer, vocabulary and word histories, background, I do / We do / You do, discussion, exit ticket, closure • Chapter quizzes in the app • Introduction: author, context and reception • Writing prompt at assigned rigor (one graded per week)	Quiz average plus one graded writing prompt
2	Kamala Socratic seminar on the search for self-knowledge With the Childlike People Sansara By the River	5 × 90 min (450 min)	experience versus teaching • Daily 90-minute lesson: bell-ringer, vocabulary and word histories, background, I do / We do / You do, discussion, exit ticket, closure • Chapter quizzes in the app • Socratic seminar on the search for self-knowledge • Writing prompt at assigned rigor (one graded per week)	Quiz average plus one graded writing prompt
3	The Ferryman The Son Om Govinda Whole-book test (90 minutes)	5 × 90 min (450 min)	the unity of all things • Daily 90-minute lesson: bell-ringer, vocabulary and word histories, background, I do / We do / You do, discussion, exit ticket, closure • Chapter quizzes in the app • Whole-book test (90 minutes) • Writing prompt at assigned rigor (one graded per week)	Whole-book test and final essay
4	Final paper writing workshop (drafting in class; finish the draft as homework) Final paper: peer review, revision and submission	2 × 90 min (180 min)	the river and time • Daily 90-minute lesson: bell-ringer, vocabulary and word histories, background, I do / We do / You do, discussion, exit ticket, closure • Chapter quizzes in the app • Final paper writing workshop (drafting in class; finish the draft as homework) • Final paper: peer review, revision and submission	Whole-book test and final essay

			• Writing prompt at assigned rigor (one graded per week)

Lesson plans and lecture scripts

Each chapter is one 90-minute class. Scripts are a starting point; adapt them to your students. Teacher summaries contain spoilers.

Lesson 1: Introduction to Siddhartha

Objective: Students will explain, in a 3-sentence exit ticket, how one fact about Hermann Hesse's life or times connects to the search for self-knowledge in “Siddhartha”, and will set up a reading journal with a prediction and a question for each of 3 themes (the search for self-knowledge, experience versus teaching, the unity of all things).

Standards: Dual Credit (Indiana College Core): ICC-WC-1.1, ICC-WC-1.3, ICC-WC-1.4, ICC-WC-1.5

Author biography

Hermann Hesse was born on 2 July 1877 in Calw, in the German kingdom of Württemberg, into a family of Pietist Protestant missionaries with deep ties to India: his father, Johannes Hesse, had served with the Basel Mission there, his mother, Marie Gundert, was born in India, and his grandfather Hermann Gundert was a missionary scholar of Malayalam. As a teenager Hesse ran away from the Protestant seminary at Maulbronn and went through a severe personal crisis before training as a bookseller in Tübingen and Basel. His first success, Peter Camenzind (1904), let him live as a writer. During the First World War he published an appeal against nationalist hatred and was denounced in the German press; after the war, amid a breakdown of his marriage and his health, he moved to Montagnola in Switzerland and became a Swiss citizen in 1924. His major novels include Demian (1919), Siddhartha (1922), Steppenwolf (1927) and The Glass Bead Game (1943). He received the Nobel Prize in Literature in 1946 and died in Montagnola on 9 August 1962.

Historical and cultural context

Siddhartha is set in India in the time of the Buddha (around the fifth century BCE), but it was written in Europe just after the First World War, when many young Germans had lost faith in the nation, the church and their parents' certainties. Hesse had grown up among books and stories about India, travelled in 1911 to Ceylon (Sri Lanka), Malaya and Sumatra, and read the Upanishads, the Bhagavad Gita and Buddhist texts in translation. He was also influenced by psychoanalysis; he underwent analysis with a follower of Carl Jung around 1916–17. The novel is a European writer's imagined India: it uses Hindu and Buddhist ideas (Atman, Brahman, the Samanas, nirvana, Om, the cycle of Sansara) to tell a very personal story about finding one's own way. Teacher note on the portrait of Gotama: Hesse's Gotama is a European novelist's fictional portrait of the Buddha, not a historical record. The hero, Siddhartha, shares the historical Buddha's personal name (Siddhartha Gautama) but is a different, invented character; in the novel the two meet as separate people. The book is not a guide to Buddhist or Hindu teaching or practice, and Siddhartha's rejection of teachings (“nobody will obtain salvation by means of teachings!” (Hesse, 1922/2015, Gotama, para. 37)) is the character's view, not a verdict of Buddhism or Hinduism (Hesse, 1922/2001a; Müller, 1881/1999).

Publication and reception, then and now

Hesse wrote the first part in 1919–20, then stopped for about a year and a half because, as he later explained, he could not write about a stage of experience he had not yet lived. The book appeared in 1922 from S. Fischer Verlag in Berlin, subtitled "an Indian poem"; the first part is dedicated to the French writer Romain Rolland and the second to Hesse's cousin Wilhelm Gundert, a scholar of Japan. An English translation by Hilda Rosner was published in the United States by New Directions in 1951.

Then: In Germany in the 1920s the book was respected but not one of Hesse's bestsellers; readers knew him better for Demian. Some critics found its Indian setting exotic decoration for a European story of the self.

Now: Siddhartha became a worldwide success after the 1951 English translation, especially in the 1960s, when the American counterculture embraced Hesse as a prophet of self-discovery and Eastern spirituality. It is now one of the most widely translated German novels and is taught in world literature and philosophy classes. Scholars today also discuss its limits: it is a Western, idealized picture of Indian religion, and its hero is not the Buddha but a seeker who rejects every teacher, including the Buddha.

Overview (spoiler-free)

Siddhartha, the gifted son of a Brahmin priest, leaves home with his friend Govinda to search for the truth about the self. He tries the life of the wandering ascetics, meets the Buddha, enters the world of a great city and a beautiful courtesan, and finally comes to a river and a ferryman. The book follows one man's whole life as he tests every path to wisdom.

Main themes

- the search for the self: what Siddhartha is looking for, and why no teacher can hand it to him.
- teaching versus experience: Siddhartha learns from every person he meets but follows no one; ask what he learns and how.
- the river and time: the river becomes a teacher; watch how it is described each time it appears.
- love and attachment: from friendship to the senses to a father's love; what does each kind of love teach him?
- unity of opposites: life and death, sin and holiness, stone and Buddha; the book's ending holds them together.

Why it matters

Students are at the age when Siddhartha leaves home, and the novel asks their questions: can you learn wisdom from teachers, or must you live it? It also lets classes examine how a Western writer imagined India, a useful lesson in reading cultural representation critically.

Spoilers · teacher only

Siddhartha rejects the Buddha's teaching (though he reveres him), learns love from Kamala and business from Kamaswami, grows rich and empty, comes close to ending his life, and is renewed by the river. He becomes Vasudeva's fellow ferryman, meets Kamala again as she dies, and loses his son, who runs away. Listening to the river he hears the unity of all voices in Om; in old age he tells Govinda that wisdom cannot be taught, and Govinda sees all things in his face.

Lesson plan (90 minutes)

0–8 min · Bell-ringer · You do (8 min)
Students write to the bell-ringer, then pair-share.
Before we open Siddhartha: Think of the best teacher you have had. Could they have taught you everything you need to know about life? Why or why not?
Prompt: Before we open Siddhartha: Think of the best teacher you have had. Could they have taught you everything you need to know about life? Why or why not?

8–18 min · Key terms · We do (10 min)
Key literary terms for the unit.
Brahmin (the priestly class in Hindu society); Atman (the self or soul); Brahman (ultimate reality); Samana (a wandering ascetic); Om (a sacred syllable); nirvana (release from the cycle of suffering and rebirth); Sansara (the cycle of birth, death and desire); Gotama (Siddhartha Gautama, the Buddha).

18–28 min · Mini-lecture: author, context, reception · I do (10 min)

Mini-lecture on the author, the historical context and the reception (read or adapt the script).

About the author. Hermann Hesse was born on 2 July 1877 in Calw, in the German kingdom of Württemberg, into a family of Pietist Protestant missionaries with deep ties to India: his father, Johannes Hesse, had served with the Basel Mission there, his mother, Marie Gundert, was born in India, and his grandfather Hermann Gundert was a missionary scholar of Malayalam. As a teenager Hesse ran away from the Protestant seminary at Maulbronn and went through a severe personal crisis before training as a bookseller in Tübingen and Basel. His first success, Peter Camenzind (1904), let him live as a writer. During the First World War he published an appeal against nationalist hatred and was denounced in the German press; after the war, amid a breakdown of his marriage and his health, he moved to Montagnola in Switzerland and became a Swiss citizen in 1924. His major novels include Demian (1919), Siddhartha (1922), Steppenwolf (1927) and The Glass Bead Game (1943). He received the Nobel Prize in Literature in 1946 and died in Montagnola on 9 August 1962. The world of the book. Siddhartha is set in India in the time of the Buddha (around the fifth century BCE), but it was written in Europe just after the First World War, when many young Germans had lost faith in the nation, the church and their parents' certainties. Hesse had grown up among books and stories about India, travelled in 1911 to Ceylon (Sri Lanka), Malaya and Sumatra, and read the Upanishads, the Bhagavad Gita and Buddhist texts in translation. He was also influenced by psychoanalysis; he underwent analysis with a follower of Carl Jung around 1916–17. The novel is a European writer's imagined India: it uses Hindu and Buddhist ideas (Atman, Brahman, the Samanas, nirvana, Om, the cycle of Sansara) to tell a very personal story about finding one's own way. Publication and reception. Hesse wrote the first part in 1919–20, then stopped for about a year and a half because, as he later explained, he could not write about a stage of experience he had not yet lived. The book appeared in 1922 from S. Fischer Verlag in Berlin, subtitled "an Indian poem"; the first part is dedicated to the French writer Romain Rolland and the second to Hesse's cousin Wilhelm Gundert, a scholar of Japan. An English translation by Hilda Rosner was published in the United States by New Directions in 1951. Then: In Germany in the 1920s the book was respected but not one of Hesse's bestsellers; readers knew him better for Demian. Some critics found its Indian setting exotic decoration for a European story of the self. Now: Siddhartha became a worldwide success after the 1951 English translation, especially in the 1960s, when the American counterculture embraced Hesse as a prophet of self-discovery and Eastern spirituality. It is now one of the most widely translated German novels and is taught in world literature and philosophy classes. Scholars today also discuss its limits: it is a Western, idealized picture of Indian religion, and its hero is not the Buddha but a seeker who rejects every teacher, including the Buddha.

28–40 min · I do: the book in one passage · I do (12 min)
Model a close reading of one passage using the written think-aloud below.
First, meaning. I read "In the shade of the house, in the sunshine of the riverbank near the boats, in the shade of the Sal-wood forest, in the shade of the fig..." slowly and put it in my own words: Siddhartha grows up in shade and sunshine, near the river and the forest. Next, craft. I notice the repeated "in the shade," which creates a calm, chanting rhythm like a song. The strongest word is "shade": it suggests protection and comfort, the sheltered life he will leave. Then, effect. What does this opening picture tell us about Siddhartha's early life? My answer: His childhood is peaceful and beautiful, yet the story will show he leaves it to search for something more; the river already appears.

> In the shade of the house, in the sunshine of the riverbank near the boats, in the shade of the Sal-wood forest, in the shade of the fig tree is where Siddhartha grew up (The Son of the Brahmin, paragraph 1)

Think-aloud: First, meaning. I read "In the shade of the house, in the sunshine of the riverbank near the boats, in the shade of the Sal-wood forest, in the shade of the fig…" slowly and put it in my own words: Siddhartha grows up in shade and sunshine, near the river and the forest. Next, craft. I notice the repeated "in the shade," which creates a calm, chanting rhythm like a song. The strongest word is "shade": it suggests protection and comfort, the sheltered life he will leave. Then, effect. What does this opening picture tell us about Siddhartha's early life? My answer: His childhood is peaceful and beautiful, yet the story will show he leaves it to search for something more; the river already appears.

40–55 min · We do: overview and themes · We do (15 min)
Read the spoiler-free overview together and name the themes to track.
What the book is about (no spoilers): Siddhartha, the gifted son of a Brahmin priest, leaves home with his friend Govinda to search for the truth about the self. He tries the life of the wandering ascetics, meets the Buddha, enters the world of a great city and a beautiful courtesan, and finally comes to a river and a ferryman. The book follows one man's whole life as he tests every path to wisdom. Themes to track: the search for the self: what Siddhartha is looking for, and why no teacher can hand it to him. teaching versus experience: Siddhartha learns from every person he meets but follows no one; ask what he learns and how. the river and time: the river becomes a teacher; watch how it is described each time it appears. love and attachment: from friendship to the senses to a father's love; what does each kind of love teach him? unity of opposites: life and death, sin and holiness, stone and Buddha; the book's ending holds them together.

55–70 min · You do: reading journal · You do (15 min)
Set up a reading journal: one page per theme, with a prediction and a question (example given).
Set up a reading journal: one page per theme with a prediction and a question. Theme page "teaching versus experience": Prediction: Siddhartha will reject his teachers. Question: will he ever find someone he can learn from?
Task: Set up a reading journal for Siddhartha: one page per theme, each with a prediction and a question.
Exemplar: Theme page "teaching versus experience": Prediction: Siddhartha will reject his teachers. Question: will he ever find someone he can learn from?

70–80 min · Discussion · We do (10 min)
Whole-class discussion: why the book is still taught.
Why does Siddhartha still matter? Students are at the age when Siddhartha leaves home, and the novel asks their questions: can you learn wisdom from teachers, or must you live it? It also lets classes examine how a Western writer imagined India, a useful lesson in reading cultural representation critically.
Anchor question: Why might Siddhartha still be taught today?
Facilitation: Students are at the age when Siddhartha leaves home, and the novel asks their questions: can you learn wisdom from teachers, or must you live it? It also lets classes examine how a Western writer imagined India, a useful lesson in reading cultural representation critically.

80–87 min · Exit ticket · You do (7 min)
Exit ticket on the author and context (answer given).
Hesse, a German writer, studied Indian religions and published Siddhartha in 1922 after a visit to Asia. What might a European writer be searching for in Eastern philosophy after World War I? Answer: Accept answers such as: peace after the war; an alternative to Western materialism; a spiritual answer to suffering.
Exit ticket: Hesse, a German writer, studied Indian religions and published Siddhartha in 1922 after a visit to Asia. What might a European writer be searching for in Eastern philosophy after World War I?
Answer: Accept answers such as: peace after the war; an alternative to Western materialism; a spiritual answer to suffering.

87–90 min · Closure · I do (3 min)
Preview the first reading.
Tomorrow we begin reading: The Son of the Brahmin.

Teacher notes · sources: Nobel Prize, "Hermann Hesse: Biographical" (https://www.nobelprize.org/prizes/literature/1946/hesse/biographical/); Britannica, "Hermann Hesse" and "Siddhartha" (https://www.britannica.com/biography/Hermann-Hesse); Theodore Ziolkowski, The Novels of Hermann Hesse (Princeton, 1965) (https://press.princeton.edu/); New Directions, publication history of the Hilda Rosner translation (https://www.ndbooks.com/book/siddhartha/); Project Gutenberg #2500 (reading text) (https://www.gutenberg.org/ebooks/2500)

Flags (verify before teaching):

- Accounts of Hesse's analysis differ in detail: he saw the Jungian analyst Josef Bernhard Lang from 1916; he also met Jung. Say "a follower of Jung" unless you have checked a biography.
- The length of the writing pause (about eighteen months) comes from Hesse's own later statements and his letters; present it as his account.
- Sales figures for the 1960s boom vary widely by source; do not quote a number.

Lesson 2: The Son of the Brahmin

Focus: restlessness despite privilege

Objective: Students will analyze how characterization develops in "The Son of the Brahmin" by writing a claim-evidence-reasoning paragraph that cites at least 2 quotations from the section, and will score at least 80% on the section quiz.

Standards: Dual Credit (Indiana College Core): ICC-WC-1.1, ICC-WC-1.3, ICC-WC-1.4, ICC-WC-1.5

Teacher only · spoilers

Siddhartha, a gifted Brahmin's son loved by everyone, including his devoted friend Govinda, feels that the teachings and rituals of his elders have not given him inner peace. He asks his father for permission to join the wandering ascetics called Samanas; his father refuses, but Siddhartha stands silently all night until his father consents. Govinda goes with him.

Background: Brahmins were the priestly caste in ancient India. The caste system ranked people by birth and caused lasting harm and exclusion, especially to those placed at the bottom or outside it; discuss it as a system of injustice, not a neutral backdrop. the Upanishads and the idea of Atman (the inner self) shape Siddhartha's questions. Hesse, a German writer, studied Indian thought and wrote during the years after World War I.

Significance: The opening establishes the novel's central pattern: knowledge received from teachers cannot replace knowledge gained by living.

Lesson plan and lecture script (90 minutes)

0–8 min · Bell-ringer · You do (8 min)
Students write to the bell-ringer, then pair-share.
Why isn't Siddhartha satisfied, even though he is admired and successful? Write for five minutes. Starters: I think... because... / This connects to the search for the self because....
Prompt: Why isn't Siddhartha satisfied, even though he is admired and successful?
Sentence starters: I think… because… · This connects to the search for the self because…
Strong response: A strong response takes a position and anticipates this: Siddhartha asks where the Atman, the innermost self, can be found, and sees that the rituals and teachers have not found it.

8–18 min · Vocabulary with etymology notes · We do (10 min)
Five key words in context, with verified word histories.
Today's words: ablution — a ritual washing of the body; ascetics — people who give up comforts for spiritual reasons; pristine — original; existing from the very beginning; invocation — a prayer calling on a god for help; partaking — taking part in; sharing. "ablution": Origin: Old French ablution; earlier Late Latin ablūtiō ("a washing away"). "invocation": Origin: Old French invocacion; earlier Latin invocatio.
Words: ablution: a ritual washing of the body · ascetics: people who give up comforts for spiritual reasons · pristine: original; existing from the very beginning · invocation: a prayer calling on a god for help · partaking: taking part in; sharing

18–28 min · Background and context · I do (10 min)

Mini-lecture (read or adapt the script). Teacher note (not read aloud): discuss caste as a system of injustice, not a neutral backdrop. Source for the opening clause: The Son of the Brahmin, paragraph 1.

Siddhartha is a Brahmin's son, and Brahmins were the priestly caste in ancient India. The caste system ranked people by birth, and it caused lasting harm and exclusion, especially to those placed at the bottom or outside it. The Upanishads and the idea of Atman, the inner self, shape Siddhartha's questions. Hesse was a German writer who studied Indian thought, and he wrote this book in the years after World War I. Here's the pattern the opening sets up: knowledge received from teachers can't replace knowledge gained by living. Picture the setting first. It's a lush, ordered world: the riverbank, the fig tree, the Brahmins' rituals. Hesse keeps repeating "in the shade of," and the repetition makes it feel timeless and sheltered. Now look at Siddhartha himself. His father, his mother, the girls and Govinda all love him, yet he's discontented. Hesse makes that restlessness more striking by giving him everything. Then comes the conflict: the son's will against the father's. Siddhartha stands all night until his father relents. It's a quiet conflict, but a total one. One last thing to watch for: the river. It's there in the very first sentence, and nobody remarks on it. Later it becomes the novel's central symbol.

28–40 min · I do: modeled close reading · I do (12 min)

Model the close reading of the anchor quotation using the written think-aloud below.

First, meaning. I read "Siddhartha had started to nurse discontent in himself" slowly and put it in my own words: Siddhartha, though loved and admired, starts to feel unsatisfied inside. Next, craft. I notice the word "nurse," as if discontent is a child he is feeding. The strongest word is "discontent": it names the restlessness that drives his whole journey. Then, effect. Why has Siddhartha begun to feel discontent? My answer: Siddhartha has begun to feel discontent because his teachers, his parents and their rituals cannot give him the peace he seeks; the discontent shows he must find his own path.

> Siddhartha had started to nurse discontent in himself (The Son of the Brahmin, paragraph 8)

Think-aloud: First, meaning. I read "Siddhartha had started to nurse discontent in himself" slowly and put it in my own words: Siddhartha, though loved and admired, starts to feel unsatisfied inside. Next, craft. I notice the word "nurse," as if discontent is a child he is feeding. The strongest word is "discontent": it names the restlessness that drives his whole journey. Then, effect. Why has Siddhartha begun to feel discontent? My answer: Siddhartha has begun to feel discontent because his teachers, his parents and their rituals cannot give him the peace he seeks; the discontent shows he must find his own path.

40–55 min · We do: guided annotation · We do (15 min)
Guided analysis of a second quotation; expected answers given.
Ask: What words in this line stand out, and what do they suggest? Expected: The repetition "where, where" shows urgency; "innermost" and "ultimate" show he seeks something deeper than ritual. This connects to the search for the self. Ask: How does this line connect to the search for the self? Expected: Siddhartha asks where the Atman, the innermost self, can be found, and sees that the rituals and teachers have not found it. (The question that drives the whole novel, repeated for emphasis.)

> But where, where was this self, this innermost part, this ultimate part (The Son of the Brahmin, paragraph 8)

Ask: What words in this line stand out, and what do they suggest?
Expected answer: The repetition "where, where" shows urgency; "innermost" and "ultimate" show he seeks something deeper than ritual. This connects to the search for the self.
Ask: How does this line connect to the search for the self?
Expected answer: Siddhartha asks where the Atman, the innermost self, can be found, and sees that the rituals and teachers have not found it. (The question that drives the whole novel, repeated for emphasis.)

55–70 min · You do: independent annotation · You do (15 min)
Independent annotation and a claim-evidence-reasoning paragraph (exemplar given).
Annotate the chapter for setting, characterization (three marks with a margin note each), then write one claim-evidence-reasoning paragraph: what does this chapter suggest about restlessness despite privilege? Then start your writing prompt at your assigned level (HS Sophomore: Analyze how The Son of the Brahmin develops the idea of restlessness despite privilege. Make a precise claim, support it with at least three pieces of textual evidence, and explain how the author's use of characterization and setting shapes that idea. Address one possible counterclaim. (You are reading the English translation by Gunther Olesch, Anke Dreher, Amy Coulter, Stefan Langer and Semyon Chaichenets, so word-choice evidence is the translators' English.)) Exemplar: Siddhartha leaves home not because his life is bad but because no one around him has found what he seeks. When the text says “Siddhartha had started to nurse discontent in himself” (The Son of the Brahmin, paragraph 8), it shows this directly. He "had started to nurse discontent in himself" despite universal love and asks "where, where was this self," a question his father's rituals cannot answer.
Task: Annotate the chapter for setting, characterization (three marks with a margin note each), then write one claim-evidence-reasoning paragraph: what does this chapter suggest about restlessness despite privilege? Then start your writing prompt at your assigned level (HS Sophomore: Analyze how The Son of the Brahmin develops the idea of restlessness despite privilege. Make a precise claim, support it with at least three pieces of textual evidence, and explain how the author's use of characterization and setting shapes that idea. Address one possible counterclaim. (You are reading the English translation by Gunther Olesch, Anke Dreher, Amy Coulter, Stefan Langer and Semyon Chaichenets, so word-choice evidence is the translators' English.))
Exemplar: Siddhartha leaves home not because his life is bad but because no one around him has found what he seeks. When the text says “Siddhartha had started to nurse discontent in himself” (The Son of the Brahmin, paragraph 8), it shows this directly. He "had started to nurse discontent in himself" despite universal love and asks "where, where was this self," a question his father's rituals cannot answer.

70–80 min · Discussion · We do (10 min)
Structured discussion from the 30 tiered questions, with facilitation notes.
Anchor question: Why isn't Siddhartha satisfied, even though he is admired and successful? Ask: is Siddhartha selfish to leave his parents? Let students argue both ways with lines from the father scene.
Anchor question: Why isn't Siddhartha satisfied, even though he is admired and successful?
Facilitation: Ask: is Siddhartha selfish to leave his parents? Let students argue both ways with lines from the father scene.

80–87 min · Exit ticket / chapter quiz · You do (7 min)
Chapter quiz in the app and an exit ticket (answer given).
Chapter quiz in the app, then: In one sentence, what does this chapter suggest about restlessness despite privilege? Support it with one short quotation. Model answer: Siddhartha leaves home not because his life is bad but because no one around him has found what he seeks. ("Siddhartha had started to nurse discontent in himself", The Son of the Brahmin, paragraph 8). Accept any defensible claim backed by a quotation from the chapter; the answer key for the quiz is in the Quiz section.
Exit ticket: In one sentence, what does this chapter suggest about restlessness despite privilege? Support it with one short quotation.
Answer: Model answer: Siddhartha leaves home not because his life is bad but because no one around him has found what he seeks. ("Siddhartha had started to nurse discontent in himself", The Son of the Brahmin, paragraph 8). Accept any defensible claim backed by a quotation from the chapter; the answer key for the quiz is in the Quiz section.

87–90 min · Closure · I do (3 min)
Summarize the lesson and preview the next reading.
Today we saw how setting shapes restlessness despite privilege. Key takeaway: Siddhartha asks where the Atman, the innermost self, can be found, and sees that the rituals and teachers have not found it.

Total: 90 minutes.

60-minute version of this lesson

Same script and content as above, with these timings (60 minutes).

Clock	Segment	Minutes	What to keep
0–5	Bell-ringer	5	Students write to the bell-ringer, then pair-share.
5–10	Vocabulary with etymology notes	5	Five key words in context, with verified word histories.
10–16	Background and context	6	Mini-lecture (read or adapt the script). Teacher note (not read aloud): discuss caste as a system of injustice, not a neutral backdrop. Source for the opening clause: The Son of the Brahmin, paragraph 1.
16–24	I do: modeled close reading	8	Model the close reading of the anchor quotation using the written think-aloud below.
24–34		10	Guided analysis of a second quotation; expected answers given.

	We do: guided annotation
34–44	You do: independent annotation	10	Independent annotation and a claim-evidence-reasoning paragraph (exemplar given).
44–54	Discussion	10	Structured discussion from the 30 tiered questions, with facilitation notes.
54–58	Exit ticket / chapter quiz	4	Chapter quiz in the app and an exit ticket (answer given).
58–60	Closure	2	Summarize the lesson and preview the next reading.

Teacher analysis (spoilers)

Literary elements

- Setting: The opening is a lush, ordered world: the riverbank, the fig tree, the Brahmins' rituals. Repetition ("in the shade of") makes it feel timeless and sheltered.
- Characterization: Everyone loves Siddhartha (his father, mother, the girls, Govinda), yet he is discontented. Hesse makes his restlessness more striking by giving him everything.
- Conflict: The son's will against the father's: the scene of Siddhartha standing all night until his father relents is a quiet, total conflict.

Themes and how they develop

- the search for the self: Siddhartha asks where the Atman, the innermost self, can be found, and sees that the rituals and teachers have not found it.

Symbols and motifs

- the river: present in the very first sentence, unremarked; later it becomes the novel's central symbol.

Key quotations (checked against the reading text)

- “Siddhartha had started to nurse discontent in himself” (The Son of the Brahmin, paragraph 8) The turning point of the chapter: discontent, not rebellion.
- “But where, where was this self, this innermost part, this ultimate part” (The Son of the Brahmin, paragraph 8) The question that drives the whole novel, repeated for emphasis.
- “Early tomorrow morning, my friend, Siddhartha will go to the Samanas. He will become a Samana” (The Son of the Brahmin, paragraph 17) He speaks of himself in the third person, as if already detached.

Model claim-evidence-reasoning

Claim: Siddhartha leaves home not because his life is bad but because no one around him has found what he seeks.
Evidence: “Siddhartha had started to nurse discontent in himself” (The Son of the Brahmin, paragraph 8)
Reasoning: He "had started to nurse discontent in himself" despite universal love and asks "where, where was this self," a question his father's rituals cannot answer.

Passages referenced in this lesson (full text)

In the shade of the house, in the sunshine of the riverbank near the boats, in the shade of the Sal-wood forest, in the shade of the fig tree is where Siddhartha grew up, the handsome son of the Brahmin, the young falcon, together with his friend Govinda, son of a Brahmin. The sun tanned his light shoulders by the banks of the river when bathing, performing the sacred ablutions, the sacred offerings. In the mango grove, shade poured into his black eyes, when playing as a boy, when his mother sang, when the sacred offerings were made, when his father, the scholar, taught him, when the wise men talked. For a long time, Siddhartha had been partaking in the discussions of the wise men, practising debate with Govinda, practising with Govinda the art of reflection, the service of meditation. He already knew how to speak the Om silently, the word of words, to speak it silently into himself while inhaling, to speak it silently out of himself while exhaling, with all the concentration of his soul, the forehead surrounded by the glow of the clear-thinking spirit. He already knew to feel Atman in the depths of his being, indestructible, one with the universe. (The Son of the Brahmin, paragraph 1)

Joy leapt in his father's heart for his son who was quick to learn, thirsty for knowledge; he saw him growing up to become great wise man and priest, a prince among the Brahmins. (The Son of the Brahmin, paragraph 2)

Bliss leapt in his mother's breast when she saw him, when she saw him walking, when she saw him sit down and get up, Siddhartha, strong, handsome, he who was walking on slender legs, greeting her with perfect respect. (The Son of the Brahmin, paragraph 3)

Love touched the hearts of the Brahmins' young daughters when Siddhartha walked through the lanes of the town with the luminous forehead, with the eye of a king, with his slim hips. (The Son of the Brahmin, paragraph 4)

But more than all the others he was loved by Govinda, his friend, the son of a Brahmin. He loved Siddhartha's eye and sweet voice, he loved his walk and the perfect decency of his movements, he loved everything Siddhartha did and said and what he loved most was his spirit, his transcendent, fiery thoughts, his ardent will, his high calling. Govinda knew: he would not become a common Brahmin, not a lazy official in charge of offerings; not a greedy merchant with magic spells; not a vain, vacuous speaker; not a mean, deceitful priest; and also not a decent, stupid sheep in the herd of the many. No, and he, Govinda, as well did not want to become one of those, not one of those tens of thousands of Brahmins. He wanted to follow Siddhartha, the beloved, the splendid. And in days to come, when Siddhartha would become a god, when he would join the glorious, then Govinda wanted to follow him as his friend, his companion, his servant, his spear-carrier, his shadow. (The Son of the Brahmin, paragraph 5)

Siddhartha was thus loved by everyone. He was a source of joy for everybody, he was a delight for them all. (The Son of the Brahmin, paragraph 6)

But he, Siddhartha, was not a source of joy for himself, he found no delight in himself. Walking the rosy paths of the fig tree garden, sitting in the bluish shade of the grove of contemplation, washing his limbs daily in the bath of repentance, sacrificing in the dim shade of the mango forest, his gestures of perfect decency, everyone's love and joy, he still lacked all joy in his heart. Dreams and restless thoughts came into his mind, flowing from the water of the river, sparkling from the stars of the night, melting from the beams of the sun, dreams came to him and a restlessness of the soul, fuming from the sacrifices, breathing forth from the verses of the Rig-Veda, being infused into him, drop by drop, from the teachings of the old Brahmins. (The Son of the Brahmin, paragraph 7)

Siddhartha had started to nurse discontent in himself, he had started to feel that the love of his father and the love of his mother, and also the love of his friend, Govinda, would not bring him joy for ever and ever, would not nurse him, feed him, satisfy him. He had started to suspect that his venerable father and his other teachers, that the wise Brahmins had already revealed to him the most and best of their wisdom, that they had already filled his expecting vessel with their richness, and the vessel was not full, the spirit was not content, the soul was not calm, the heart was not satisfied. The ablutions were good, but they were water, they did not wash off the sin, they did not heal the spirit's thirst, they did not relieve the fear in his heart. The sacrifices and the invocation of the gods were excellent —but was that all? Did the sacrifices give a happy fortune? And what about the gods? Was it really Prajapati who had created the world? Was it not the Atman, He, the only one, the singular one? Were the gods not creations, created like me and you, subject to time, mortal? Was it therefore good, was it right, was it meaningful and the highest occupation to make offerings to the gods? For whom else were offerings to be made, who else was to be worshipped but Him, the only one, the Atman? And where was Atman to be found, where did He reside, where did his eternal heart beat, where else but in one's own self, in its innermost part, in its indestructible part, which everyone had in himself? But where, where was this self, this innermost part, this ultimate part? It was not flesh and bone, it was neither thought nor consciousness, thus the wisest ones taught. So, where, where was it? To reach this place, the self, myself, the Atman, there was another way, which was worthwhile looking for? Alas, and nobody showed this way, nobody knew it, not the father, and not the teachers and wise men, not the holy sacrificial songs! They knew everything, the Brahmins and their holy books, they knew everything, they had taken care of everything and of more than everything, the creation of the world, the origin of speech, of food, of inhaling, of exhaling, the arrangement of the senses, the acts of the gods, they knew infinitely much—but was it valuable to know all of this, not knowing that one and only thing, the most important thing, the solely important thing? (The Son of the Brahmin, paragraph 8)

Surely, many verses of the holy books, particularly in the Upanishades of Samaveda, spoke of this innermost and ultimate thing, wonderful verses. "Your soul is the whole world" was written there, and it was written that man in his sleep, in his deep sleep, would meet with his innermost part and would reside in the Atman. Marvellous wisdom was in these verses, all knowledge of the wisest ones had been collected here in magic words, pure as honey collected by bees. No, not to be looked down upon was the tremendous amount of enlightenment which lay here collected and preserved by innumerable generations of wise Brahmins.—But where were the Brahmins, where the priests, where the wise men or penitents, who had succeeded in not just knowing this deepest of all knowledge but also to live it? Where was the knowledgeable one who wove his spell to bring his familiarity with the Atman out of the sleep into the state of being awake, into the life, into every step of the way, into word and deed? Siddhartha knew many venerable Brahmins, chiefly his father, the pure one, the scholar, the most venerable one. His father was to be admired, quiet and noble were his manners, pure his life, wise his words, delicate and noble thoughts lived behind its brow—but even he, who knew so much, did he live in blissfulness, did he have peace, was he not also just a searching man, a thirsty man? Did he not, again and again, have to drink from holy sources, as a thirsty man, from the offerings, from the books, from the disputes of the Brahmins? Why did he, the irreproachable one, have to wash off sins every day, strive for a cleansing every day, over and over every day? Was not Atman in him, did not the pristine source spring from his heart? It had to be found, the pristine source in one's own self, it had to be possessed! Everything else was searching, was a detour, was getting lost. (The Son of the Brahmin, paragraph 9)

Thus were Siddhartha's thoughts, this was his thirst, this was his suffering. (The Son of the Brahmin, paragraph 10)

Often he spoke to himself from a Chandogya-Upanishad the words: "Truly, the name of the Brahman is satyam—verily, he who knows such a thing, will enter the heavenly world every day." Often, it seemed near, the heavenly world, but never had he reached it completely, never had he quenched the ultimate thirst. And among all the wise and wisest men, he knew and whose instructions had he received, among all of them there was no one, who had reached it completely, the heavenly world, who had quenched it completely, the eternal thirst. (The Son of the Brahmin, paragraph 11)

"Govinda," Siddhartha spoke to his friend, "Govinda, my dear, come with me under the banyan tree, let's practise meditation." (The Son of the Brahmin, paragraph 12)

They went to the banyan tree, they sat down, Siddhartha right here, Govinda twenty paces away. While putting himself down, ready to speak the Om, Siddhartha repeated murmuring the verse: (The Son of the Brahmin, paragraph 13)

After the usual time of the exercise in meditation had passed, Govinda rose. The evening had come, it was time to perform the evening's ablution. He called Siddhartha's name. Siddhartha did not answer. Siddhartha sat there lost in thought, his eyes were rigidly focused towards a very distant target, the tip of his tongue was protruding a little between the teeth, he seemed not to breathe. Thus sat he, wrapped up in contemplation, thinking Om, his soul sent after the Brahman as an arrow. (The Son of the Brahmin, paragraph 14)

Once, Samanas had travelled through Siddhartha's town, ascetics on a pilgrimage, three skinny, withered men, neither old nor young, with dusty and bloody shoulders, almost naked, scorched by the sun, surrounded by loneliness, strangers and enemies to the world, strangers and lank jackals in the realm of humans. Behind them blew a hot scent of quiet passion, of destructive service, of merciless self-denial. (The Son of the Brahmin, paragraph 15)

In the evening, after the hour of contemplation, Siddhartha spoke to Govinda: "Early tomorrow morning, my friend, Siddhartha will go to the Samanas. He will become a Samana." (The Son of the Brahmin, paragraph 16)

Govinda turned pale, when he heard these words and read the decision in the motionless face of his friend, unstoppable like the arrow shot from the bow. Soon and with the first glance, Govinda realized: Now it is beginning, now Siddhartha is taking his own way, now his fate is beginning to sprout, and with his, my own. And he turned pale like a dry banana skin. (The Son of the Brahmin, paragraph 17)

"O Siddhartha," he exclaimed, "will your father permit you to do that?" (The Son of the Brahmin, paragraph 18)

Siddhartha looked over as if he was just waking up. Arrow-fast he read in Govinda's soul, read the fear, read the submission. (The Son of the Brahmin, paragraph 19)

"O Govinda," he spoke quietly, "let's not waste words. Tomorrow, at daybreak I will begin the life of the Samanas. Speak no more of it." (The Son of the Brahmin, paragraph 20)

Siddhartha entered the chamber, where his father was sitting on a mat of bast, and stepped behind his father and remained standing there, until his father felt that someone was standing behind him. Quoth the Brahmin: "Is that you, Siddhartha? Then say what you came to say." (The Son of the Brahmin, paragraph 21)

Quoth Siddhartha: "With your permission, my father. I came to tell you that it is my longing to leave your house tomorrow and go to the ascetics. My desire is to become a Samana. May my father not oppose this." (The Son of the Brahmin, paragraph 22)

Slowly, the Brahmin rose; Siddhartha stood silently, his arms folded. (The Son of the Brahmin, paragraph 24)

"What are you waiting for?" asked the father. (The Son of the Brahmin, paragraph 25)

Quoth Siddhartha: "You know what." (The Son of the Brahmin, paragraph 26)

Indignant, the father left the chamber; indignant, he went to his bed and lay down. (The Son of the Brahmin, paragraph 27)

After an hour, since no sleep had come over his eyes, the Brahmin stood up, paced to and fro, and left the house. Through the small window of the chamber he looked back inside, and there he saw Siddhartha standing, his arms folded, not moving from his spot. Pale shimmered his bright robe. With anxiety in his heart, the father returned to his bed. (The Son of the Brahmin, paragraph 28)

After another hour, since no sleep had come over his eyes, the Brahmin stood up again, paced to and fro, walked out of the house and saw that the moon had risen. Through the window of the chamber he looked back inside; there stood Siddhartha, not moving from his spot, his arms folded, moonlight reflecting from his bare shins. With worry in his heart, the father went back to bed. (The Son of the Brahmin, paragraph 29)

And he came back after an hour, he came back after two hours, looked through the small window, saw Siddhartha standing, in the moon light, by the light of the stars, in the darkness. And he came back hour after hour, silently, he looked into the chamber, saw him standing in the same place, filled his heart with anger, filled his heart with unrest, filled his heart with anguish, filled it with sadness. (The Son of the Brahmin, paragraph 30)

And in the night's last hour, before the day began, he returned, stepped into the room, saw the young man standing there, who seemed tall and like a stranger to him. (The Son of the Brahmin, paragraph 31)

"Siddhartha," he spoke, "what are you waiting for?" (The Son of the Brahmin, paragraph 32)

"I will stand and wait." (The Son of the Brahmin, paragraph 35)

"You will become tired, Siddhartha." (The Son of the Brahmin, paragraph 36)

"I will become tired." (The Son of the Brahmin, paragraph 37)

"You will fall asleep, Siddhartha." (The Son of the Brahmin, paragraph 38)

"I will not fall asleep." (The Son of the Brahmin, paragraph 39)

"You will die, Siddhartha." (The Son of the Brahmin, paragraph 40)

"I will die." (The Son of the Brahmin, paragraph 41)

"And would you rather die, than obey your father?" (The Son of the Brahmin, paragraph 42)

"Siddhartha has always obeyed his father." (The Son of the Brahmin, paragraph 43)

"So will you abandon your plan?" (The Son of the Brahmin, paragraph 44)

The first light of day shone into the room. The Brahmin saw that Siddhartha was trembling softly in his knees. In Siddhartha's face he saw no trembling, his eyes were fixed on a distant spot. Then his father realized that even now Siddhartha no longer dwelt with him in his home, that he had already left him. (The Son of the Brahmin, paragraph 46)

The Father touched Siddhartha's shoulder. (The Son of the Brahmin, paragraph 47)

He took his hand from the shoulder of his son and went outside. Siddhartha wavered to the side, as he tried to walk. He put his limbs back under control, bowed to his father, and went to his mother to do as his father had said. (The Son of the Brahmin, paragraph 49)

As he slowly left on stiff legs in the first light of day the still quiet town, a shadow rose near the last hut, who had crouched there, and joined the pilgrim—Govinda. (The Son of the Brahmin, paragraph 50)

"You have come," said Siddhartha and smiled. (The Son of the Brahmin, paragraph 51)

Vocabulary with etymology notes

Word	Definition (in this sentence)	In context	Word history
ablution (noun)	a ritual washing of the body	The evening had come, it was time to perform the evening's ablution.	"ablution": Origin: Old French ablution; earlier Late Latin ablūtiō ("a washing away"). (Liber et Libri origin note, https://en.wiktionary.org/wiki/ablution#Etymology)

ascetics (noun)	people who give up comforts for spiritual reasons	I came to tell you that it is my longing to leave your house tomorrow and go to the ascetics.
pristine (adjective)	original; existing from the very beginning	Was not Atman in him, did not the pristine source spring from his heart?
invocation (noun)	a prayer calling on a god for help	The sacrifices and the invocation of the gods were excellent—but was that all?	"invocation": Origin: Old French invocacion; earlier Latin invocatio. (Liber et Libri origin note, https://en.wiktionary.org/wiki/invocation#Etymology)
partaking (verb)	taking part in; sharing	For a long time, Siddhartha had been partaking in the discussions of the wise men, practising debate with Govinda, practising with Govinda the art of reflection, the service of meditation.
merciless (adjective)	having or showing no mercy	Behind them blew a hot scent of quiet passion, of destructive service, of merciless self-denial.	"merciless": Origin: an English formation from mercy + -less. (Liber et Libri origin note, https://en.wiktionary.org/wiki/merciless#Etymology)

Discussion questions

1. Why isn't Siddhartha satisfied, even though he is admired and successful?
2. Where does characterization appear in this chapter, and what effect does it have? Point to one passage.
3. How does this chapter connect to the book's larger concern with the search for self-knowledge?

Tiered discussion questions (30: recall, inferential, evaluative)

Wait time after every question (3 s for DOK 1, 5 s for DOK 2, 8 to 10 s for DOK 3 and 4); think-pair-share on DOK 3 and 4; answer each response with a follow-up probe; close with student-generated questions. Focus sets by rigor level: HS Sophomore: 1, 2, 3, 4, 13, 14, 15, 16, 17, 23, 24, 25; HS Junior: 1, 2, 3, 14, 15, 16, 17, 18, 24, 25, 26, 27; HS Senior: 1, 2, 3, 15, 16, 17, 18, 25, 26, 27, 28, 29; AP: 1, 2, 16, 17, 18, 19, 20, 26, 27, 28, 29, 30; College Freshman: 1, 2, 17, 18, 19, 20, 21, 22, 27, 28, 29, 30; College Sophomore: 1, 2, 11, 18, 19, 20, 21, 22, 23, 28, 29, 30; College Junior: 1, 11, 12, 19, 20, 21, 22, 23, 24, 25, 29, 30; College Senior: 1, 11, 12, 13, 20, 21, 22, 23, 24, 25, 26, 30; Graduate / PhD: 1, 11, 12, 13, 21, 22, 23, 24, 25, 26, 27, 28

Literal / recall

1. What is Siddhartha's family background? [DOK 1 · Cold call with support: call on a student by name, offering a sentence starter or rephrasing if needed · wait 3 s · Dual Credit (Indiana College Core): ICC-WC-1.1, ICC-WC-1.3, ICC-WC-1.4, ICC-WC-1.5] Look for: He is the son of a Brahmin
   Answer guidance: He is the son of a Brahmin, a priest, and is being trained for the priesthood: his father sees him "growing up to become great wise man and priest" (The Son of the Brahmin, paragraph 2).
2. How does Siddhartha's mother feel when she sees him walk, sit down and get up? [DOK 1 · Turn and Talk: students discuss briefly with a neighbor before answering · wait 3 s · Dual Credit (Indiana College Core): ICC-WC-1.1, ICC-

WC-1.3, ICC-WC-1.4, ICC-WC-1.5] Look for: Bliss leaps in her breast

Answer guidance: "Bliss leapt in his mother's breast when she saw him" (The Son of the Brahmin, paragraph 3).

3. Whom does Siddhartha want to join? [DOK 1 · Cold call with support: call on a student by name, offering a sentence starter or rephrasing if needed · wait 3 s · Dual Credit (Indiana College Core): ICC-WC-1.1, ICC-WC-1.3, ICC-WC-1.4, ICC-WC-1.5] Look for: The Samanas

   Answer guidance: The Samanas, the wandering ascetics who passed through his town. He tells Govinda: "Early tomorrow morning, my friend, Siddhartha will go to the Samanas." (The Son of the Brahmin, paragraph 17)

4. What does the father see each time he looks through the chamber window during the night? [DOK 1 · Turn and Talk: students discuss briefly with a neighbor before answering · wait 3 s · Dual Credit (Indiana College Core): ICC-WC-1.1, ICC-WC-1.3, ICC-WC-1.4, ICC-WC-1.5] Look for: Siddhartha still standing in the same spot, not moving

   Answer guidance: Siddhartha standing exactly where he was, not moving from his spot (The Son of the Brahmin, paragraph 29), each hour of the night.

5. What does Siddhartha seek that rituals have not given him? [DOK 1 · Cold call with support: call on a student by name, offering a sentence starter or rephrasing if needed · wait 3 s · Dual Credit (Indiana College Core): ICC-WC-1.1, ICC-WC-1.3, ICC-WC-1.4, ICC-WC-1.5] Look for: Inner peace and knowledge of Atman

   Answer guidance: He wants the self, Atman, known from within rather than through offerings and verses; the rituals and teachers have not given him peace. See "Siddhartha had started to nurse discontent in himself" (The Son of the Brahmin, paragraph 8), and "Thus were Siddhartha's thoughts, this was his thirst, this was his suffering." (The Son of the Brahmin, paragraph 10)

6. Retell the three most important events of "The Son of the Brahmin" in order, in one sentence each. [DOK 1 · Turn and Talk: students discuss briefly with a neighbor before answering · wait 3 s · Dual Credit (Indiana College Core): ICC-WC-1.1, ICC-WC-1.3, ICC-WC-1.4, ICC-WC-1.5] Look for: Siddhartha, a gifted Brahmin's son loved by everyone, including his devoted friend Govinda, feels that the teachings and rituals of his elders have not given him inner peace. He asks his father for permission to join the wandering ascetics called Samanas; his father refuses, but Siddhartha stands silently all night until his father consents. Govinda goes with him.

   Answer guidance: A clear sequence: Siddhartha, loved by all, grows discontent (The Son of the Brahmin, paragraphs 7–8); he tells Govinda and then his father that he will join the Samanas (paragraphs 17 and 23); he stands all night until his father lets him go, and Govinda follows him (paragraphs 47–53).

7. Which characters appear or are mentioned in "The Son of the Brahmin"? Name two and one thing each says or does. [DOK 1 · Cold call with support: call on a student by name, offering a sentence starter or rephrasing if needed · wait 3 s · Dual Credit (Indiana College Core): ICC-WC-1.1, ICC-WC-1.3, ICC-WC-1.4, ICC-WC-1.5] Look for: Names and actions taken from the chapter; check against the teacher summary.

   Answer guidance: Two of: the father, who refuses and then relents ("You will" (The Son of the Brahmin, paragraph 49)… "go into the forest and be a Samana"); Govinda, who follows him at dawn ("I have come" (The Son of the Brahmin, paragraph 53)); the mother, whose "Bliss leapt" at the sight of him (paragraph 3).

8. Where and when does "The Son of the Brahmin" take place? Point to the line that tells you. [DOK 1 · Turn and Talk: students discuss briefly with a neighbor before answering · wait 3 s · Dual Credit (Indiana College Core): ICC-WC-1.1, ICC-WC-1.3, ICC-WC-1.4, ICC-WC-1.5] Look for: A place/time detail quoted from the chapter.

   Answer guidance: An Indian town of Brahmins by a river, in the time of the Buddha. The opening sets it: "In the shade of the house, in the sunshine of the riverbank near the boats" (The Son of the Brahmin, paragraph 1). The night scene is timed by the moon and stars in paragraphs 24–31.

9. Reread: “Surely, many verses of the holy books, particularly in the Upanishades of Samaveda, spoke of this innermost and ultimate thing, wonderful verses.” What does “particularly” mean here, and what is literally happening in this line? [DOK 1 · Turn and Talk: students discuss briefly with a neighbor before answering · wait 3 s · Dual Credit (Indiana College Core): ICC-WC-1.1, ICC-WC-1.3, ICC-WC-1.4, ICC-WC-1.5] Look for: particularly: especially; more than others.
   Answer guidance: “Particularly” here means: especially; more than others. In The Son of the Brahmin, paragraph 9, Siddhartha recalls that the holy books, above all the Upanishads, describe the innermost self, yet reading about it has not brought him there.
10. Reread: “silent and motionless sat the father on the mat, and the stars traced their paths in the sky.” What does “traced” mean here, and what is literally happening in this line? [DOK 1 · Turn and Talk: students discuss briefly with a neighbor before answering · wait 3 s · Dual Credit (Indiana College Core): ICC-WC-1.1, ICC-WC-1.3, ICC-WC-1.4, ICC-WC-1.5] Look for: traced: followed or marked out (a line or path).
    Answer guidance: “Traced” here means: followed or marked out (a line or path). In The Son of the Brahmin, paragraph 24, father and son stay still through the night while the stars move across the sky, which shows how long the silent standoff lasts.

Inferential / analytical

1. What does “The Son of the Brahmin” suggest about restlessness despite privilege? State the inference and the line that supports it. [DOK 2 · Think-Pair-Share: students think alone, discuss with a partner, then share with the class · wait 5 s · Dual Credit (Indiana College Core): ICC-WC-1.1, ICC-WC-1.3, ICC-WC-1.4, ICC-WC-1.5] Look for: A stated inference (for example, that being loved and successful cannot fill an inner emptiness) backed by one located line, such as the one in The Son of the Brahmin, paragraph 7.
   Answer guidance: The chapter suggests that being loved and successful cannot fill an inner emptiness. The best support is the turn from everyone’s joy to his own: “But he, Siddhartha, was not a source of joy for himself, he found no delight in himself.” (The Son of the Brahmin, paragraph 7)
2. Find one example of characterization in this chapter. What does it reveal that a plain statement would not? [DOK 2 · Follow-up: ask a probing question that builds on the previous answer · wait 5 s · Dual Credit (Indiana College Core): ICC-WC-1.1, ICC-WC-1.3, ICC-WC-1.4, ICC-WC-1.5] Look for: Look for what characters say, do and think, and how others react to them.
   Answer guidance: Strong choices: the father’s sleepless night, shown by action, not statement (“After an hour, since no sleep had come over his eyes, the Brahmin stood up” (The Son of the Brahmin, paragraph 29)), reveals love and fear; or Govinda turning pale at the news (“Govinda turned pale” (The Son of the Brahmin, paragraph 18)), which reveals his dependence on Siddhartha.
3. How does the setting in this chapter shape what we understand about restlessness despite privilege? [DOK 3 · Think-Pair-Share: students think alone, discuss with a partner, then share with the class · wait 8 s · Dual Credit (Indiana College Core): ICC-WC-1.1, ICC-WC-1.3, ICC-WC-1.4, ICC-WC-1.5] Look for: Look for where and when events happen and how place shapes action or feeling.
   Answer guidance: Comfortable, shaded places (house, riverbank, fig garden) frame his restlessness: he is unhappy in the middle of beauty. Use “Walking the rosy paths of the fig tree garden” (The Son of the Brahmin, paragraph 7) against paragraph 1’s shade and sunshine.
4. In the passage that begins “After the usual time of the exercise in meditation had passed, Govinda rose.”, why might Hesse have chosen these particular words? Pick two and explain their connotations. [DOK 2 · Follow-up: ask a probing question that builds on the previous answer · wait 5 s · Dual Credit (Indiana College Core): ICC-

WC-1.1, ICC-WC-1.3, ICC-WC-1.4, ICC-WC-1.5] Look for: Diction analysis of two words in the anchor passage.

Answer guidance: Look for "usual" (the routine Siddhartha is tired of) and "ablution"/"perform" (ritual done on schedule). Both words in The Son of the Brahmin, paragraph 15, make religion sound like habit, which is what he is leaving.

5. What causes the main turn in "The Son of the Brahmin", and what effect is it likely to have on what follows? [DOK 2 · Follow-up: ask a probing question that builds on the previous answer · wait 5 s · Dual Credit (Indiana College Core): ICC-WC-1.1, ICC-WC-1.3, ICC-WC-1.4, ICC-WC-1.5] Look for: Siddhartha, a gifted Brahmin's son loved by everyone, including his devoted friend Govinda, feels that the teachings and rituals of his elders have not given him inner peace. He asks his father for permission to join the wandering ascetics called Samanas; his father refuses, but Siddhartha stands…

   Answer guidance: The turn is his decision to join the Samanas after the ascetics pass through town (The Son of the Brahmin, paragraph 16), driven by the discontent of paragraph 8. The effect: he leaves home, and the next chapter tests whether self-denial gives what ritual did not.

6. As the opening chapter, what does "The Son of the Brahmin" set up that the rest of Siddhartha will need? [DOK 3 · Think-Pair-Share: students think alone, discuss with a partner, then share with the class · wait 8 s · Dual Credit (Indiana College Core): ICC-WC-1.1, ICC-WC-1.3, ICC-WC-1.4, ICC-WC-1.5] Look for: What this opening sets up for later chapters: the search, the friendship with Govinda, or the father's challenge, each tied to a line.

   Answer guidance: It sets up the search (Atman not found through teachers, paragraph 8), the friendship with Govinda as follower (paragraphs 51–53) and the father's challenge: "When you'll have found blissfulness in the forest, then come back and teach me to be blissful." (The Son of the Brahmin, paragraph 49)

7. What can we infer about a character's motives from what they say and do here, as opposed to what they claim? [DOK 3 · Follow-up: ask a probing question that builds on the previous answer · wait 8 s · Dual Credit (Indiana College Core): ICC-WC-1.1, ICC-WC-1.3, ICC-WC-1.4, ICC-WC-1.5] Look for: An inference about motive supported by a quoted line.

   Answer guidance: Siddhartha claims obedience ("Siddhartha has always obeyed his father," paragraph 44) while defying him all night; his real motive is the search in paragraph 8. Govinda's motive is love, not conviction: "He loved Siddhartha's eye and sweet voice" (The Son of the Brahmin, paragraph 5).

8. The bell-ringer asked: "Why isn't Siddhartha satisfied, even though he is admired and successful?" Now that we have read closely, how would you revise your first answer, and which line changed your mind? [DOK 2 · Think-Pair-Share: students think alone, discuss with a partner, then share with the class · wait 5 s · Dual Credit (Indiana College Core): ICC-WC-1.1, ICC-WC-1.3, ICC-WC-1.4, ICC-WC-1.5] Look for: A revised answer anchored in the text.

   Answer guidance: A revised answer should move from 'he wants more' to the text's reason: the love and learning he receives do not reach the self, as in "he had started to feel that the love of his father and the love of his mother, and also the love of his friend, Govinda, would not bring him joy for ever and ever" (The Son of the Brahmin, paragraph 8).

9. Where does symbolism appear, and how does it connect this chapter to the larger concern with the search for self-knowledge? [DOK 3 · Follow-up: ask a probing question that builds on the previous answer · wait 8 s · Dual Credit (Indiana College Core): ICC-WC-1.1, ICC-WC-1.3, ICC-WC-1.4, ICC-WC-1.5] Look for: Look for objects, places or actions that stand for larger ideas.

   Answer guidance: Om and the arrow in the verse (The Son of the Brahmin, paragraph 14) stand for the soul aimed at Brahman, and the fixed, arrow-like resolve reappears when Govinda reads "the decision in the motionless face of his friend, unstoppable like the arrow shot from the bow" (paragraph 18).

10. Background: Brahmins were the priestly caste in ancient India. The caste system ranked people by birth and caused lasting harm and exclusion, especially to those placed at the bottom or outside it; discuss it as a system of… How does knowing this change the way you read one moment in the chapter? [DOK 3 · Think-Pair-Share: students think alone, discuss with a partner, then share with the class · wait 8 s · Dual Credit (Indiana College Core): ICC-WC-1.1, ICC-WC-1.3, ICC-WC-1.4, ICC-WC-1.5] Look for: A specific moment reread in light of the context.
    Answer guidance: Knowing that Brahmins were the top, priestly caste sharpens what Siddhartha gives up: his father sees him becoming a "great wise man and priest" (The Son of the Brahmin, paragraph 2). Leaving for the casteless Samanas is a rejection of rank, though the chapter itself does not question the caste system.

Evaluative / synthesis / creative

1. A critic might argue: "The opening establishes the novel's central pattern: knowledge received from teachers cannot replace knowledge gained by living." How far do you agree? Take a stand and defend it with two lines from the chapter. [DOK 3 · Four Corners: students move to the corner that matches their position and explain why · wait 8 s · ICC-WC-1.5] Look for: A defended position with evidence and one counterpoint.
    Answer guidance: Agree with qualification: the chapter shows teachings failing him ("Siddhartha had started to nurse discontent in himself" (The Son of the Brahmin, paragraph 8)), but he has not yet lived anything else; the claim about 'knowledge gained by living' is only a promise at this point, since his next step is another teaching, the Samanas'.
2. Which character in this chapter acts most wisely, and which least? Judge them by a standard you name. [DOK 3 · Think-Pair-Share: students think alone, discuss with a partner, then share with the class · wait 8 s · ICC-WC-1.5] Look for: An evaluation using an explicit criterion and evidence.
    Answer guidance: One defensible judgment: the father acts most wisely, because he lets his son go and asks to be taught in return (paragraph 49); Govinda least, because he follows without a search of his own (paragraph 5). Students must name their standard (independence, love, honesty).
3. Rewrite one moment of "The Son of the Brahmin" from the point of view of a different character. What does the new angle reveal or hide about restlessness despite privilege? [DOK 4 · Think-Pair-Share: students think alone, discuss with a partner, then share with the class · wait 8 s · Dual Credit (Indiana College Core): ICC-WC-1.1, ICC-WC-1.3, ICC-WC-1.4, ICC-WC-1.5] Look for: A rewrite that keeps the chapter's events accurate, speaks in the chosen character's voice, and ends with a sentence on what the new angle shows or hides.
    Answer guidance: The father's night is the richest moment to retell: his repeated returns to the window (paragraphs 29–32) can be told in his voice; the angle shows love and fear that Siddhartha's silence hides, and must keep that he never forces his son.
4. Write three questions of your own about "The Son of the Brahmin": one recall, one "why/how", and one "should/what if". Trade with a partner and answer theirs. [DOK 3 · Student-generated: students write and pose their own questions · wait 8 s · Dual Credit (Indiana College Core): ICC-WC-1.1, ICC-WC-1.3, ICC-WC-1.4, ICC-WC-1.5] Look for: Three questions at three levels, each answerable from the chapter, traded and answered with a line.
    Answer guidance: Example set: recall, 'Where do Siddhartha and Govinda meditate?' (under the banyan tree, paragraph 13); why/how, 'Why does the father give in?' (he sees Siddhartha will not change, paragraph 47); what if, 'Should Siddhartha have obeyed?'

5. Connect this chapter to experience versus teaching: is the link strong or weak so far? What would Hesse need to show next to strengthen it? [DOK 4 · Socratic circle: an inner circle discusses while the outer circle listens and takes notes, then they switch · wait 8 s · ICC-WC-1.5] Look for: A judgment of thematic development across the work.
   Answer guidance: Weak so far but set up: the chapter shows teaching failing (The Son of the Brahmin, paragraph 8) but no experience yet. Hesse needs to show Siddhartha learning something by living it, which the father's challenge in paragraph 49 points toward.
6. Is the characterization in this chapter effective, or does it feel heavy-handed? Evaluate it as a reader would in a review. [DOK 3 · Four Corners: students move to the corner that matches their position and explain why · wait 8 s · ICC-WC-1.5] Look for: An evaluative judgment with criteria and evidence.
   Answer guidance: Effective: the repeated parallel openings in paragraphs 2–4 build the adored son before paragraph 7 turns, and the father's night is shown, not told. A fair criticism is that Govinda is drawn only through his love for Siddhartha (paragraph 5).
7. Compare how "The Son of the Brahmin" treats restlessness despite privilege with how another text, film or event you know treats a similar idea. What does Siddhartha see that the other misses? [DOK 4 · Socratic circle: an inner circle discusses while the outer circle listens and takes notes, then they switch · wait 8 s · ICC-WC-1.5] Look for: A cross-text synthesis.
   Answer guidance: Any comparison must name the parallel (a privileged young person who leaves a secure life) and quote the chapter's reason, such as "he found no delight in himself" (The Son of the Brahmin, paragraph 7); Siddhartha's version is spiritual, not rebellion for its own sake.
8. Predict what "With the Samanas" will bring, using two clues from this chapter. After reading, evaluate your prediction. [DOK 3 · Think-Pair-Share: students think alone, discuss with a partner, then share with the class · wait 8 s · Dual Credit (Indiana College Core): ICC-WC-1.1, ICC-WC-1.3, ICC-WC-1.4, ICC-WC-1.5] Look for: A prediction or judgment justified with textual clues.
   Answer guidance: Clues: the Samanas' self-denial in paragraph 16 ("dusty and bloody shoulders") and the father's condition, "When you'll have found blissfulness in the forest, then come back and teach me to be blissful." (The Son of the Brahmin, paragraph 49) A good prediction: hard ascetic training that may not bring the bliss he wants.
9. Design a one-paragraph modern adaptation of this chapter (setting, characters, conflict). What must stay the same for it to still be about restlessness despite privilege? [DOK 4 · Think-Pair-Share: students think alone, discuss with a partner, then share with the class · wait 8 s · Dual Credit (Indiana College Core): ICC-WC-1.1, ICC-WC-1.3, ICC-WC-1.4, ICC-WC-1.5] Look for: A modern setting, characters and conflict that keep the chapter's core idea, with the one element that must not change named.
   Answer guidance: A modern version keeps a gifted, admired young person who leaves a respected path to search for meaning and a parent who lets go. What must stay is the inner discontent of paragraph 8, not the setting.
10. What question would you most like to ask Hermann Hesse about this chapter, and what answer do you think the text itself gives? [DOK 4 · Student-generated: students write and pose their own questions · wait 8 s · Dual Credit (Indiana College Core): ICC-WC-1.1, ICC-WC-1.3, ICC-WC-1.4, ICC-WC-1.5] Look for: A student-generated question answered from evidence.
    Answer guidance: Example: 'Why does Siddhartha leave if he is loved?' The text answers: love from others cannot give him the self he seeks (The Son of the Brahmin, paragraphs 7–8).

Annotation focus

- Characterization: look for what characters say, do and think, and how others react to them (anchor passage in the We do segment)
- Also notice Setting: where and when events happen and how place shapes action or feeling
- Also notice Symbolism: objects, places or actions that stand for larger ideas

Chapter quiz: item bank (all eleven rigor versions)

1. [fill · recall · DOK 1] Complete the quotation from The Son of the Brahmin, paragraph 13: "They went to the _____ tree, they sat down, Siddhartha right here, Govinda twenty paces away." Word bank: river, temple, banyan, market

   Key: banyan

2. [mc · recall · DOK 1] In the line "The evening had come, it was time to perform the evening's ablution.", what does "ablution" most nearly mean?

   A. a person left stranded after a shipwreck
   B. a ritual washing of the body
   C. a tank for storing water
   D. people who punish themselves for their sins

   Key: B (a ritual washing of the body)

3. [mc · recall · DOK 1] Before Siddhartha leaves, what does his father ask him to do?

   A. Give away his fine clothes to the poor of the town
   B. Wait one more day and sleep before he goes
   C. Pray at the temple with the Brahmins first
   D. Kiss his mother and tell her where he is going

   Key: D (Kiss his mother and tell her where he is going)

4. [mc · recall · DOK 1] In the line "I came to tell you that it is my longing to leave your house tomorrow and go to the ascetics.", what does "ascetics" most nearly mean?

   A. people who give up comforts for spiritual reasons
   B. steadiness of mind under stress
   C. a trait of dignified seriousness
   D. an event that might have been arranged although it was really accidental

   Key: A (people who give up comforts for spiritual reasons)

5. [mc · recall · DOK 1] Which word completes this sentence from The Son of the Brahmin, paragraph 9? "all knowledge of the wisest ones had been collected here in _____ words, pure as honey collected by bees."

   A. muddy
   B. magic
   C. rusty
   D. wooden

   Key: B (magic)

6. [fill · recall · DOK 1] Complete the quotation from The Son of the Brahmin, paragraph 5: "he would not become a common Brahmin, not a lazy _____ in charge of offerings;"
   Key: official
7. [mc · recall · DOK 1] What do the three Samanas who pass through the town look like?
   A. Skinny, withered and almost naked
   B. Fat, rich and finely dressed
   C. Young men laughing and singing songs
   D. Old men riding on oxcarts

   Key: A (Skinny, withered and almost naked)
8. [mc · recall · DOK 1] In the line "Was not Atman in him, did not the pristine source spring from his heart?", what does "pristine" most nearly mean?
   A. original; existing from the very beginning
   B. strikingly unusual or odd
   C. too bold or forward; presumptuous
   D. occurring or operating at the same time

   Key: A (original; existing from the very beginning)
9. [fill · recall · DOK 1] Complete the quotation from The Son of the Brahmin, paragraph 50: "He put his _____ back under control, bowed to his father, and went to his mother to do as his father had said." Word bank: ladders, pebbles, limbs, kettles
   Key: limbs
10. [fill · recall · DOK 1] Complete the quotation from The Son of the Brahmin, paragraph 22: "Siddhartha entered the chamber, where his father was sitting on a _____ of bast." Word bank: mat, horse, roof, boat
    Key: mat
11. [fill · recall · DOK 1] Fill in the blank with the vocabulary word that fits: "Behind them blew a hot scent of quiet passion, of destructive service, of _____ self-denial." Word bank: gentle, merciless, lazy, comfortable
    Key: merciless
12. [short · inference · DOK 2] What can you infer from this line? "Did he not, again and again, have to drink from holy sources, as a thirsty man, from the offerings, from the books, from the disputes of the Brahmins?" (The Son of the Brahmin, paragraph 9) Answer in two or three sentences with one detail.
    Sample answer: Siddhartha feels that the Brahmin way of learning never satisfies him for long. The evidence is "Did he not, again and again, have to drink from holy sources, as a thirsty man, from the offerings, from the books, from the disputes of the Brahmins?" (The Son of the Brahmin, paragraph 9). The words "again and again" show that every drink of holy learning leaves him as thirsty as before.
13. [mc · inference · DOK 2] Which of these passages comes earliest in The Son of the Brahmin?
    A. "But more than all the others he was loved by Govinda, his friend, the son of a Brahmin."
    B. "Joy leapt in his father's heart for his son who was quick to learn,…"
    C. "Love touched the hearts of the Brahmins' young daughters when Siddhartha walked through the lanes of the town with the luminous forehead,…"
    D. "Bliss leapt in his mother's breast when she saw him, when she saw him walking, when she saw him sit down and get up, Siddhartha, strong,…"

    Key: B ("Joy leapt in his father's heart for his son who was quick to learn,…")

14. [short · analysis · DOK 3] Analyze the word choice in "Early tomorrow morning, my friend, Siddhartha will go to the Samanas. He will become a Samana." (The Son of the Brahmin, paragraph 17). Pick two words and explain what they suggest.

    Sample answer: "Early tomorrow morning, my friend, Siddhartha will go to the Samanas. He will become a Samana." (The Son of the Brahmin, paragraph 17). The name "Siddhartha" in place of "I" makes him speak of himself in the third person, as if he already stands outside his old life. The repeated "will" turns the plan into a statement of fact rather than a hope, so his leaving already sounds settled.

15. [short · synthesis · DOK 4] Evaluate this claim about the chapter: "Siddhartha leaves home not because his life is bad but because no one around him has found what he seeks." Is it fully persuasive? Argue with evidence, including a passage that complicates it.

    Sample answer: The claim is persuasive in part. Siddhartha measures every wise man around him and finds each still searching: "did he live in blissfulness, did he have peace, was he not also just a searching man, a thirsty man?" (The Son of the Brahmin, paragraph 9) shows this. His father is loved and learned, yet even he has not found the self, so leaving follows from what no one around him possesses. But "where, where was this self, this innermost part, this ultimate part?" (The Son of the Brahmin, paragraph 8) complicates it: the question is Siddhartha's own, not borrowed from any teacher's failure; it rises from inside him before he weighs any teacher, so the push comes from his own hunger as much as from others' lack. So the claim stands only in a qualified form: others' limits confirm his decision, but the need starts in him.

16. [fill · recall · DOK 1] Complete the quotation from The Son of the Brahmin, paragraph 18: "Soon and with the first _____, Govinda realized:" Word bank: glance, kettle, pebble, ladder

    Key: glance

17. [fill · recall · DOK 1] Complete the quotation from The Son of the Brahmin, paragraph 4: "Love touched the hearts of the Brahmins' young daughters when Siddhartha walked through the lanes of the town with the luminous _____, with the eye of a king, with his slim hips." Word bank: garland, forehead, sandals, staff

    Key: forehead

18. [fill · recall · DOK 1] Complete the quotation from The Son of the Brahmin, paragraph 21: "Tomorrow, at daybreak I will begin the life of the _____. Speak no more of it."

    Key: Samanas

19. [mc · recall · DOK 1] What does Siddhartha's father finally tell him to do at dawn?

    A. Take Govinda with him to the city

    B. Stay home and become a priest

    C. Wait one more year before deciding

    D. Go into the forest and be a Samana

    Key: D (Go into the forest and be a Samana)

20. [fill · recall · DOK 1] Complete the quotation from The Son of the Brahmin, paragraph 29: "there he saw Siddhartha standing, his arms _____, not moving from his spot." Word bank: folded, singing, melted, burning

    Key: folded

21. [mc · recall · DOK 1] Where does Siddhartha ask Govinda to practise meditation with him?

    A. Under the banyan tree

    B. In the temple courtyard

    C. On the boats by the riverbank

    D. In his father's chamber

    Key: A (Under the banyan tree)

22. [mc · recall · DOK 1] In the line “what he loved most was his spirit, his transcendent, fiery thoughts”, what does “transcendent” most nearly mean?

    A. going beyond ordinary limits

    B. dull and ordinary

    C. borrowed from others

    D. angry and bitter

    Key: A (going beyond ordinary limits)

23. [mc · recall · DOK 1] In the line “The sacrifices and the invocation of the gods were excellent—but was that all?”, what does “invocation” most nearly mean?

    A. a person left stranded after a shipwreck

    B. wild dogs that hunt or scavenge

    C. a prayer calling on a god for help

    D. steadiness of mind under stress

    Key: C (a prayer calling on a god for help)

24. [mc · recall · DOK 1] In the line “he loved his walk and the perfect decency of his movements”, what does “decency” most nearly mean?

    A. great speed

    B. proper, respectful behaviour

    C. clumsiness

    D. loud laughter

    Key: B (proper, respectful behaviour)

25. [mc · recall · DOK 1] Which word completes this sentence from The Son of the Brahmin, paragraph 18? “Govinda turned pale, when he heard these words and read the decision in the motionless face of his friend, unstoppable like the _____ shot from the bow.”

    A. arrow

    B. bird

    C. spark

    D. stone

    Key: A (arrow)

26. [fill · recall · DOK 1] Complete the quotation from The Son of the Brahmin, paragraph 18: “now his fate is beginning to _____, and with his, my own.” Word bank: sprout, sneeze, knit, paint

    Key: sprout

27. [mc · inference · DOK 2] Which of these passages comes last in The Son of the Brahmin?

    A. “Go now and kiss your mother, tell her where you are going to.”

    B. “After another hour, since no sleep had come over his eyes, the Brahmin stood up again”

    C. “Indignant, the father left the chamber; indignant, he went to his bed and lay down.”

    D. “You have come,” said Siddhartha and smiled.

    Key: D (“You have come,” said Siddhartha and smiled.)

28. [short · inference · DOK 3] Siddhartha is loved by everyone around him. What does this line show about him, and why does it matter for the plot? “And in days to come, when Siddhartha would become a god, when he would join the glorious, then Govinda wanted to follow him as his friend, his companion, his servant, his spear-carrier, his shadow." (The Son of the Brahmin, paragraph 5) Then find a second passage elsewhere in this same chapter: quote it and explain how the two passages together develop the idea.

Sample answer: The line shows how much Siddhartha is admired: "And in days to come, when Siddhartha would become a god, when he would join the glorious, then Govinda wanted to follow him as his friend, his companion, his servant, his spear-carrier, his shadow." (The Son of the Brahmin, paragraph 5). The rising list, from "friend" to "shadow," shows Govinda ready to give up his own path for his. A second passage, "Siddhartha had started to nurse discontent in himself" (The Son of the Brahmin, paragraph 8), shows the other side: the young man everyone admires is not content. Together the passages set up the plot, because the hero whom all love must leave all of them to find himself, and Govinda will follow.

29. [short · analysis · DOK 3] Analyze the word choice in "And he turned pale like a dry banana skin." (The Son of the Brahmin, paragraph 18). Pick two words and explain what they suggest.

Sample answer: Govinda's shock drains the life out of him in a single image. The evidence is "And he turned pale like a dry banana skin." (The Son of the Brahmin, paragraph 18). "Pale" shows the blood leaving his face as he grasps that Siddhartha will really go, and "dry" makes the simile withered and almost comic, as if fear has shrivelled him on the spot. Together the words show how completely Govinda's life depends on his friend.

30. [short · analysis · DOK 3] Analyze the tone of this line. Name the tone and two words that create it. "the vessel was not full, the spirit was not content, the soul was not calm, the heart was not satisfied." (The Son of the Brahmin, paragraph 8)

Sample answer: The tone is restless and dissatisfied. In "the vessel was not full, the spirit was not content, the soul was not calm, the heart was not satisfied." (The Son of the Brahmin, paragraph 8), the four "not" clauses ("not full," "not content," "not calm," "not satisfied") pile up like a list of failures, and "vessel" pictures his self as a container that rituals have failed to fill.

31. [fill · recall · DOK 1] Complete the quotation from The Son of the Brahmin, paragraph 32: "And in the night's last hour, before the day began, he returned, stepped into the room, saw the young man standing there, who seemed tall and like a _____ to him."

Key: stranger

32. [mc · recall · DOK 1] When Govinda hears Siddhartha's plan, he turns pale like what?

A. A dry banana skin
B. The morning moon
C. White river sand
D. A sheet of white linen

Key: A (A dry banana skin)

33. [fill · recall · DOK 1] Fill in the blank with the vocabulary word that fits: "For a long time, Siddhartha had been _____ in the discussions of the wise men, practising debate with Govinda, practising with Govinda the art of reflection, the service of meditation." Word bank: hiding, fishing, dancing, partaking

Key: partaking

34. [mc · recall · DOK 1] In the line "when Siddhartha walked through the lanes of the town with the luminous forehead", what does "luminous" most nearly mean?

A. wrinkled with worry
B. glowing with light
C. hidden by a hood
D. burned by the sun

Key: B (glowing with light)

35. [fill · recall · DOK 1] Complete the quotation from The Son of the Brahmin, paragraph 24: "The Brahmin fell silent, and remained silent for so long that the _____ in the small window wandered and changed their relative positions, ere the silence was broken." Word bank: candles, stars, curtains, lamps

    Key: stars

36. [fill · recall · DOK 1] Fill in the blank with the vocabulary word that fits: "Once, Samanas had travelled through Siddhartha's town, _____ on a pilgrimage, three skinny, withered men, neither old nor young"

    Word bank: merchants, soldiers, ascetics, dancers

    Key: ascetics

37. [mc · recall · DOK 1] In paragraph 11, which words from a Chandogya-Upanishad does Siddhartha often speak to himself?

    A. "Truly, the name of the Brahman is satyam"

    B. "The self is a river that never ends"

    C. "The gods are older than all of the mountains"

    D. "Wisdom is a lamp lit by the father"

    Key: A ("Truly, the name of the Brahman is satyam")

38. [fill · recall · DOK 1] Complete the quotation from The Son of the Brahmin, paragraph 5: "He wanted to follow Siddhartha, the beloved, the _____." Word bank: merchant, stranger, splendid, servant

    Key: splendid

39. [mc · recall · DOK 1] In the line "his transcendent, fiery thoughts, his ardent will, his high calling", what does "ardent" most nearly mean?

    A. weak and unsure

    B. cold, distant and uncaring

    C. careless and lazy

    D. passionate and eager

    Key: D (passionate and eager)

40. [mc · inference · DOK 2] Which of these lines does Siddhartha's father speak first in The Son of the Brahmin?

    A. "You will become tired, Siddhartha."

    B. "So will you abandon your plan?"

    C. "Go now and kiss your mother, tell her where you are going to."

    D. "Not proper it is for a Brahmin to speak harsh and angry words."

    Key: D ("Not proper it is for a Brahmin to speak harsh and angry words.")

41. [short · inference · DOK 2] Siddhartha is loved by everyone around him. What does this line show about him, and why does it matter for the plot? "But he, Siddhartha, was not a source of joy for himself, he found no delight in himself." (The Son of the Brahmin, paragraph 7)

    Sample answer: Despite everyone's love, Siddhartha takes no joy in himself: "But he, Siddhartha, was not a source of joy for himself, he found no delight in himself." (The Son of the Brahmin, paragraph 7). The repeated "himself" turns the problem inward, so the cause of his unhappiness lies in him, not in his circumstances. That is why no outside teacher or ritual can fix it, and he must leave.

42. [mc · inference · DOK 2] What does this passage most clearly show? “But where, where was this self, this innermost part, this ultimate part?” (The Son of the Brahmin, paragraph 8)

    A. His confidence that the priests and wise men have already found it.

    B. His wish to become a priest like his father.

    C. His search for a self that no teaching has shown him.

    D. His fear of leaving Govinda behind.

    Key: C (His search for a self that no teaching has shown him.)

43. [short · analysis · DOK 3] Analyze the word choice in “Behind them blew a hot scent of quiet passion, of destructive service, of merciless self-denial.” (The Son of the Brahmin, paragraph 16). Pick two words and explain what they suggest.

    Sample answer: The Samanas’ way of life is made to seem fierce and frightening, yet strangely attractive. The evidence is “Behind them blew a hot scent of quiet passion, of destructive service, of merciless self-denial.” (The Son of the Brahmin, paragraph 16). “Hot” suggests a burning, consuming energy that trails behind the men like smoke, and “merciless” shows that their self-denial spares nothing, not even the self. Together the words explain why this harsh life draws a restless young man like Siddhartha.

44. [short · analysis · DOK 3] Analyze the tone of this line. Name the tone and two words that create it. “Not proper it is for a Brahmin to speak harsh and angry words. But indignation is in my heart.” (The Son of the Brahmin, paragraph 24)

    Sample answer: The tone is controlled anger: the father is furious but holds himself to a Brahmin’s dignity. The evidence is “Not proper it is for a Brahmin to speak harsh and angry words. But indignation is in my heart.” (The Son of the Brahmin, paragraph 24). “Proper” shows him reaching for the rules of his caste to restrain himself, while “indignation” admits the anger he refuses to voice. The stiff, formal word order makes the restraint audible, which is why the conflict turns into a silent standoff rather than a quarrel.

45. [short · synthesis · DOK 4] Evaluate this claim about the chapter: “Siddhartha’s father gives in only because he is worn down by his son’s stubbornness.” Is it fully persuasive? Argue with evidence, including a passage that complicates it.

    Sample answer: The claim is persuasive in part. “filled his heart with anger, filled his heart with unrest, filled his heart with anguish” (The Son of the Brahmin, paragraph 31) supports it: hour after hour the silent standoff wears the father down. But “Then his father realized that even now Siddhartha no longer dwelt with him in his home, that he had already left him.” (The Son of the Brahmin, paragraph 47) complicates it: the father yields not to stubbornness but to the recognition that his son has already gone, and his farewell even asks Siddhartha to come back and teach him. A fair verdict is that the claim is too narrow: the father is worn down, but he lets his son go out of understanding, not only defeat.

46. [fill · recall · DOK 1] Complete the quotation from The Son of the Brahmin, paragraph 5: “and also not a decent, stupid _____ in the herd of the many.” Word bank: sheep, kettle, ladder, pebble

    Key: sheep

47. [fill · recall · DOK 1] Complete the quotation from The Son of the Brahmin, paragraph 9: “it was written that man in his sleep, in his deep sleep, would meet with his innermost part and would _____ in the Atman.”

    Word bank: reside, argue, trade, bargain

    Key: reside

48. [mc · inference · DOK 2] Which of these lines does Siddhartha speak first in The Son of the Brahmin?

    A. “You have come,” said Siddhartha and smiled.

    B. “I will stand and wait.”

C. “With your permission, my father.”

D. “O Govinda,” he spoke quietly, “let’s not waste words.”

Key: D (“O Govinda,” he spoke quietly, “let’s not waste words.”)

49. [mc · inference · DOK 2] In paragraph 17, Siddhartha says, “Early tomorrow morning, my friend, Siddhartha will go to the Samanas. He will become a Samana.” What does his way of speaking show about him?

A. He asks Govinda’s blessing, unsure he has the courage to go.

B. He speaks of himself in the third person, already detached.

C. He repeats a plan his father has already agreed to at home.

D. He teases Govinda, sure that his friend will try to stop him.

Key: B (He speaks of himself in the third person, already detached.)

50. [short · inference · DOK 2] Siddhartha has just told Govinda his plan. What does this line show about Siddhartha, and why does it matter for the plot? “Arrow-fast he read in Govinda’s soul, read the fear, read the submission.” (The Son of the Brahmin, paragraph 20)

Sample answer: Siddhartha sees straight through his friend: he knows at once that Govinda is afraid and will give way to him. The evidence is “Arrow-fast he read in Govinda’s soul, read the fear, read the submission.” (The Son of the Brahmin, paragraph 20). “Arrow-fast” ties his mind to the arrow of the Om verse, sharp and already aimed at its target, and “submission” shows that Govinda will follow rather than oppose him. That matters for the plot because it sets up their journey together, with Govinda as the follower.

51. [mc · inference · DOK 2] Why do the daily ablutions fail to satisfy Siddhartha?

A. His father forbids him to perform them alone

B. He performs them too carelessly to work

C. The river water is believed to be impure

D. They clean the body but not his inner thirst

Key: D (They clean the body but not his inner thirst)

52. [tf · inference · DOK 2] True or false: Siddhartha believes his father has found the peace that he himself lacks.

Key: False (He asks whether his father was “not also just a searching man, a thirsty man.”)

53. [tf · inference · DOK 2] True or false: The father gives his consent only after he sees that, in spirit, his son has already left home.

Key: True (At first light he sees the trembling knees and the steady face, and realizes that his son “no longer dwelt with him in his home.”)

54. [mc · inference · DOK 2] Why does Siddhartha cut Govinda off with “let’s not waste words”?

A. He fears his father will overhear

B. His decision is already made

C. He is angry at Govinda’s fear

D. He has taken a vow of silence

Key: B (His decision is already made)

55. [tf · inference · DOK 2] True or false: Govinda joins Siddhartha at the edge of town without being asked.

Key: True (Near “the last hut” a shadow “who had crouched there” rose and joined the pilgrim: Govinda comes unasked.)

56. [mc · analysis · DOK 3] Which literary element is at work here? Everyone loves Siddhartha, yet he is discontented, and Hesse makes his restlessness more striking by giving him everything.

    A. Simile

    B. Figurative language

    C. Setting

    D. Characterization

    Key: D (Characterization)

57. [short · analysis · DOK 3] Analyze the tone of this line. Name the tone and two words that create it. “Often, it seemed near, the heavenly world, but never had he reached it completely, never had he quenched the ultimate thirst.” (The Son of the Brahmin, paragraph 11)

    Sample answer: The tone is frustrated longing. The evidence is “Often, it seemed near, the heavenly world, but never had he reached it completely, never had he quenched the ultimate thirst.” (The Son of the Brahmin, paragraph 11). “Near” raises hope, but the repeated “never” keeps snatching it away, and “quenched” turns his search into a bodily thirst that nothing has satisfied. The line explains why the rituals that please everyone else leave Siddhartha restless enough to leave home.

58. [short · synthesis · DOK 4] Evaluate this claim about the chapter: “Govinda follows Siddhartha only because he cannot imagine a path of his own.” Is it fully persuasive? Argue with evidence, including a passage that complicates it.

    Sample answer: The claim is persuasive in part. “then Govinda wanted to follow him as his friend, his companion, his servant, his spear-carrier, his shadow” (The Son of the Brahmin, paragraph 5) supports it: the list shrinks Govinda step by step until he is only a “shadow.” But “now his fate is beginning to sprout, and with his, my own” (The Son of the Brahmin, paragraph 18) complicates it: Govinda sees that his own fate begins at this moment too, so following is a choice he makes rather than a lack of one. A fair verdict is that the claim overstates his passivity: Govinda follows, but he knowingly ties his destiny to his friend’s.

59. [short · synthesis · DOK 4] Close reading: how do the diction and syntax of “Siddhartha sat there lost in thought, his eyes were rigidly focused towards a very distant target, the tip of his tongue was protruding a little between the teeth, he seemed not to breathe.” (The Son of the Brahmin, paragraph 15) shape its meaning? Consider a second, competing reading.

    Sample answer: The long sentence piles up physical details, the “rigidly focused” eyes, the tongue “protruding a little,” the breath that seems to stop, in “Siddhartha sat there lost in thought, his eyes were rigidly focused towards a very distant target, the tip of his tongue was protruding a little between the teeth, he seemed not to breathe.” (The Son of the Brahmin, paragraph 15), so that Siddhartha’s concentration is shown from outside, as a body almost turned to stone. The “very distant target” links his gaze to the verse of the bow and arrow. A competing reading sees comic awkwardness in the tongue between the teeth; but that small human detail only makes the stillness more real, showing a boy already straining past what the Brahmin life offers.

60. [short · synthesis · DOK 4] Close reading: how do the diction and syntax of “But where, where was this self, this innermost part, this ultimate part?” (The Son of the Brahmin, paragraph 8) shape its meaning? Consider a second, competing reading.

    Sample answer: The doubled “where, where” and the stacked appositives make each phrase narrow the search without arriving: “But where, where was this self, this innermost part, this ultimate part?” (The Son of the Brahmin, paragraph 8). The syntax acts out a search that keeps going deeper and finds nothing. A competing reading takes the question as rhetorical, a hint that Siddhartha already doubts the self exists at all. But the same paragraph shows a real and growing hunger, “Siddhartha had started to nurse discontent in himself” (The Son of the Brahmin, paragraph 8): he asks because he expects an answer that his teachers have not given.

61. [fill · recall · DOK 1 · Dual Credit (Indiana College Core): ICC-WC-1.5] Fill in the blank with the vocabulary word that fits: "The sacrifices and the _____ of the gods were excellent—but was that all?" Word bank: hunger, enemies, invocation, sleep

    Key: invocation

62. [mc · inference · DOK 2 · Dual Credit (Indiana College Core): ICC-WC-1.5] Which of these moments in the father's sleepless night comes earliest in The Son of the Brahmin?

    A. "Indignant, the father left the chamber"

    B. "saw Siddhartha standing, in the moon light, by the light of the stars, in the darkness"

    C. "The first light of day shone into the room."

    D. "And in the night's last hour, before the day began, he returned"

    Key: A ("Indignant, the father left the chamber")

63. [mc · inference · DOK 2 · Dual Credit (Indiana College Core): ICC-WC-1.5] In paragraph 27, Siddhartha answers his father's question with only "You know what." What does this reply show about him?

    A. He is too frightened to explain himself again.

    B. He will not argue, because his decision is already made.

    C. He wants his father to guess and be proved wrong.

    D. He has forgotten why he came into the room.

    Key: B (He will not argue, because his decision is already made.)

64. [short · inference · DOK 2 · Dual Credit (Indiana College Core): ICC-WC-1.5] Siddhartha has asked to leave home. What does this line show about his father, and why does it matter for the plot? "Indignant, the father left the chamber; indignant, he went to his bed and lay down." (The Son of the Brahmin, paragraph 28)

    Sample answer: The father is deeply offended, yet he refuses to argue or forbid his son outright. The evidence is "Indignant, the father left the chamber; indignant, he went to his bed and lay down." (The Son of the Brahmin, paragraph 28). The repeated "indignant" shows his anger carrying him out of the room and into bed, but he says nothing more. Because neither man will speak, the conflict becomes a silent night-long test of will, which Siddhartha wins by simply standing and waiting.

65. [tf · inference · DOK 2 · Dual Credit (Indiana College Core): ICC-WC-1.5] True or false: At his first refusal, the father admits that he is angry.

    Key: True (He says that harsh words are not proper for a Brahmin, "But indignation is in my heart.")

66. [match · inference · DOK 2 · Dual Credit (Indiana College Core): ICC-WC-1.5] Govinda knows his friend will never become any of these men. Match each figure (1-4) to the failing it stands for (A-D). Use each letter once.

    1. "a lazy official in charge of offerings" (paragraph 5)
    2. "a greedy merchant with magic spells" (paragraph 5)
    3. "a vain, vacuous speaker" (paragraph 5)
    4. "a decent, stupid sheep in the herd of the many" (paragraph 5)

    A. Goodness that only follows the crowd

    B. Holiness sold for profit

    C. Fine words with nothing behind them

    D. Ritual performed without spirit

    Key: 1-D, 2-B, 3-C, 4-A

67. [mc · analysis · DOK 3 · Dual Credit (Indiana College Core): ICC-WC-1.5] Paragraphs 2-6 move through his father, his mother, the young daughters and Govinda before paragraph 7 turns to his own lack of joy. What does this ordering accomplish?

    A. It builds a full outer world of approval, then names the lack

    B. It suggests that his family cares for him less than Govinda does

    C. It shows that the praise of the town has made him vain and proud

    D. It prepares the reader for a quarrel between his father and mother

    Key: A (It builds a full outer world of approval, then names the lack)

68. [match · analysis · DOK 3 · Dual Credit (Indiana College Core): ICC-WC-1.5] Paragraph 8 pictures the Brahmins' teaching through several images. Match each phrase (1-4) to what it suggests (A-D). Use each letter once.

    1. "his expecting vessel" (paragraph 8)
    2. "but they were water" (paragraph 8)
    3. "the spirit's thirst" (paragraph 8)
    4. "they knew infinitely much" (paragraph 8)

    A. A need that no ceremony has met

    B. A rite that cleans the body and leaves the spirit as it was

    C. Learning that is vast yet misses the one thing

    D. A self waiting to be filled from outside

    Key: 1-D, 2-B, 3-A, 4-C

69. [mc · analysis · DOK 3 · Dual Credit (Indiana College Core): ICC-WC-1.5] Siddhartha's night-long standing is best described as…

    A. Open rebellion against his father's authority

    B. Obedient defiance: obeying, yet not yielding

    C. A penance for having asked to leave

    D. A meditation exercise he forgets to end

    Key: B (Obedient defiance: obeying, yet not yielding)

70. [mc · analysis · DOK 3 · Dual Credit (Indiana College Core): ICC-WC-1.5] What does the father's parting request reveal?

    A. He expects his son to fail and come back

    B. He wants his son to lead the Samanas someday

    C. He is quietly sending his son into exile

    D. He half hopes his son finds what he lacks

    Key: D (He half hopes his son finds what he lacks)

71. [short · analysis · DOK 3 · Dual Credit (Indiana College Core): ICC-WC-1.5] Why does Govinda turn pale at Siddhartha's announcement? Answer in two or three sentences, quoting the text.

    Sample answer: Govinda grasps at once that his friend's choice decides his own life too: "now his fate is beginning to sprout, and with his, my own" (The Son of the Brahmin, paragraph 18). His pallor is fear of the coming upheaval, not disapproval, and it foreshadows his joining Siddhartha at dawn.

72. [mc · analysis · DOK 3 · Dual Credit (Indiana College Core): ICC-WC-1.5] What does the Samanas' visit do to Siddhartha's discontent?

    A. Convinces him the Brahmins are corrupt

    B. Makes him fear the forest

    C. Gives his restlessness a concrete path

    D. Turns it into anger at his father

    Key: C (Gives his restlessness a concrete path)

73. [short · synthesis · DOK 4 · Dual Credit (Indiana College Core): ICC-WC-1.5] His father hopes he will become "a prince" in his caste (paragraph 2); Govinda imagines the day he "would become a god" (paragraph 5). Compare these two pictured futures and argue which one Siddhartha's discontent in paragraphs 8-9 rejects more completely.

    Sample answer: Both futures are other people's pictures of him, but the discontent rejects the father's more completely, because it names the father himself as the problem. The father sees him growing up "to become great wise man and priest, a prince among the Brahmins" (The Son of the Brahmin, paragraph 2): the old life, done better. Paragraph 9 turns on exactly that model: even his father, who "knew so much," is "just a searching man, a thirsty man," who must "wash off sins every day." To become the father's ideal would be to inherit his thirst. Govinda's future is vaguer and higher: he would not be "a common Brahmin" but would "join the glorious" (paragraph 5). That picture is closer to what Siddhartha wants, a life beyond the rituals, though it still makes him an object of worship rather than a seeker. So the chapter rejects the father's future outright and Govinda's only in its hero-worship; it is Govinda, after all, who follows him at the end (paragraph 51).

74. [short · synthesis · DOK 4 · Dual Credit (Indiana College Core): ICC-WC-1.5] Paragraph 9 ends on two exclamations: the source "had to be found" and "possessed!", while all else "was a detour". How do the diction and the turn to exclamation shape Siddhartha's resolve? Consider a second, competing reading.

    Sample answer: The ending turns the paragraph's questions into a command. Until here paragraph 9 asks: where were the wise men who lived their knowledge, "did not the pristine source spring from his heart?" (The Son of the Brahmin, paragraph 9). Then the syntax changes to statement and exclamation: "It had to be found" and "it had to be possessed!" The doubled "had to" makes the search an obligation, and "possessed" is a strong, almost greedy word for a spiritual goal. The final list, "was searching, was a detour, was getting lost", sweeps every other practice into one judgment. A competing reading hears arrogance: he dismisses offerings, books and disputes he has just called "Marvellous wisdom". That reading has force, but the exclamation follows a paragraph of honest praise and doubt, so it reads as resolve earned by the argument, the moment the question becomes a decision.

75. [short · synthesis · DOK 4 · Dual Credit (Indiana College Core): ICC-WC-1.5] Paragraph 8 uses "nurse" twice: Siddhartha begins to "nurse discontent," and the love around him "would not nurse him" or feed him. What does the repeated verb suggest about where his discontent comes from? Consider a second, competing reading.

    Sample answer: The repeated verb suggests that the discontent grows in the place where love should feed him. In the first use he is the one nursing: he "had started to nurse discontent in himself" (The Son of the Brahmin, paragraph 8), tending it like something alive. In the second the love of father, mother and friend "would not nurse him, feed him, satisfy him" (paragraph 8). The verb links the two: what the love fails to nurse, he nurses instead, so the discontent is not rebellion against his family but a hunger their care cannot reach. A competing reading hears the first "nurse" as self-indulgent, as if he coddles a grievance. The rest of the paragraph tells against that, since the lack is spelled out as a real need: "the vessel was not full, the spirit was not content." The diction makes the discontent a growth, not a sulk.

76. [fill · recall · DOK 1] Complete the quotation from The Son of the Brahmin, paragraph 51: "As he slowly left on stiff legs in the first light of day the still quiet town, a shadow rose near the last hut, who had crouched there, and joined the _____—Govinda." Word bank: merchant, soldier, pilgrim, priest

Key: pilgrim

77. [mc · inference · DOK 2] What does this passage most clearly show? "Why did he, the irreproachable one, have to wash off sins every day, strive for a cleansing every day, over and over every day?" (The Son of the Brahmin, paragraph 9)

    A. His father is secretly guilty of great sins.

    B. Siddhartha wants to replace the rituals with new ones.

    C. Even his father has not found lasting peace.

    D. The Brahmins wash too rarely to stay pure.

    Key: C (Even his father has not found lasting peace.)

78. [short · inference · DOK 2] The father looks in on his son during the night. What does this line show about Siddhartha, and why does it matter for the plot? "Pale shimmered his bright robe." (The Son of the Brahmin, paragraph 29)

    Sample answer: Siddhartha stands so still and silent that he seems hardly part of the room any more. The evidence is "Pale shimmered his bright robe." (The Son of the Brahmin, paragraph 29). "Pale" and "shimmered" make him look ghostly in the dark, almost like a vision rather than a son, and the inverted word order slows the image down. It matters for the plot because his unmoving presence works on the father all night and prepares the moment when he sees that his son has already left in spirit.

79. [mc · analysis · DOK 3] Asked what he is waiting for, Siddhartha answers only "You know what." What do the clipped replies add to the scene?

    A. Calm certainty that needs no further explanation

    B. Rudeness showing he no longer loves his father

    C. Confusion after a long night without any sleep

    D. Fear that keeps him from speaking his mind

    Key: A (Calm certainty that needs no further explanation)

80. [mc · analysis · DOK 3] Paragraph 6 calls him "a source of joy" to everybody; paragraph 7 answers that he himself "found no delight". Which reading of this mirrored pair does the rest of paragraph 7 best support?

    A. The town's admiration hides a secret dislike of him

    B. The rites that should content him are where his unrest grows

    C. His lack of joy comes from guilt over a wrong he has done

    D. His gloom is a passing mood that the next meditation will lift

    Key: B (The rites that should content him are where his unrest grows)

81. [short · analysis · DOK 3] Analyze the word choice in "In Siddhartha's face he saw no trembling, his eyes were fixed on a distant spot." (The Son of the Brahmin, paragraph 47). Pick two words and explain what they suggest.

    Sample answer: Siddhartha's body is exhausted, but his will is unshaken and already elsewhere. The evidence is "In Siddhartha's face he saw no trembling, his eyes were fixed on a distant spot." (The Son of the Brahmin, paragraph 47). "No trembling" sets his calm face against his shaking knees, so the weakness is only physical, and "distant" shows that his mind has already left the room for the life ahead. The father reads this and understands that his son has, in spirit, already gone.

82. [short · analysis · DOK 3] Claim: Siddhartha leaves home not because his life is bad but because no one around him has found what he seeks. Explain how this evidence supports the claim: "Siddhartha had started to nurse discontent in himself" (The Son of the Brahmin, paragraph 8).

Sample answer: He "had started to nurse discontent in himself" despite universal love and asks "where, where was this self," a question his father's rituals cannot answer. The evidence is "Siddhartha had started to nurse discontent in himself" (The Son of the Brahmin, paragraph 8), which shows the turning point of the chapter: discontent, not rebellion.

83. [short · analysis · DOK 3] Paragraph 8 first states the lack as a series of "not" clauses and then breaks into questions: "but was that all?" Trace how the paragraph moves from statement to question, and argue what the shift shows about Siddhartha's state of mind.

Sample answer: The shift shows a mind moving from sensing a lack to testing the whole tradition. The paragraph begins with what he feels: the teachers have filled his vessel "and the vessel was not full, the spirit was not content" (The Son of the Brahmin, paragraph 8). These are statements, and they still accept the frame of the teaching; they only report that it has not worked. Then the syntax breaks: "The sacrifices and the invocation of the gods were excellent—but was that all?" From here the questions multiply ("Was it really Prajapati who had created the world?" "But where, where was this self"), and they are no longer about his feelings but about whether the rites are "meaningful and the highest occupation." Disappointment becomes inquiry. The tone hardens with it, from restless to almost accusing in "nobody showed this way, nobody knew it."

84. [mc · analysis · DOK 3] The father's hourly returns to the window chiefly trace…

A. His anger cooling into calm approval

B. His feelings deepening from anger to sadness

C. Siddhartha's strength slowly giving way

D. The ritual hours of the Brahmin night prayers

Key: B (His feelings deepening from anger to sadness)

85. [mc · analysis · DOK 3] The chapter's arrow images link which two things?

A. Hunting and princely duty

B. War and Govinda's loyalty

C. The father's anger and his son's fear

D. Meditation and his resolve to leave

Key: D (Meditation and his resolve to leave)

86. [short · analysis · DOK 3] What is ironic about how much the Brahmins know? Quote the passage that sets up the irony.

Sample answer: The Brahmins know "the creation of the world, the origin of speech, of food" and more, yet they lack "that one and only thing, the most important thing" (The Son of the Brahmin, paragraph 8). The irony is that their vast knowledge leaves out the single thing that matters, the way to the self, so knowing everything amounts to knowing nothing essential.

87. [mc · analysis · DOK 3] The stars moving across the window during the father's silence mark…

A. An omen of Siddhartha's coming fate

B. The father's silent prayer to the gods

C. Siddhartha's dream of the distant forest

D. How long the silent standoff lasts

Key: D (How long the silent standoff lasts)

88. [short · analysis · DOK 3] Near dawn the father makes predictions and Siddhartha repeats them back (paragraphs 35-46). What does this echoing show about Siddhartha? Quote one exchange.

Sample answer: Siddhartha turns each warning into a calm statement of acceptance: to "You will die, Siddhartha" (The Son of the Brahmin, paragraph 41) he answers only "I will die" (paragraph 42). By repeating his father's words instead of arguing, he shows that no threat can move him, since even death has been accepted in advance. The echo also keeps him respectful, because he never contradicts his father outright.

89. [match · analysis · DOK 3] Match each arrow image (1-4) to what it describes (A-D). Use each letter once.

    1. "Om is the bow, the arrow is soul" (paragraph 14)
    2. "his soul sent after the Brahman as an arrow" (paragraph 15)
    3. "unstoppable like the arrow shot from the bow" (paragraph 18)
    4. "Arrow-fast he read in Govinda's soul" (paragraph 20)

    A. Siddhartha putting the verse into practice

    B. A decision that can no longer be recalled

    C. Quick insight into his friend's fear

    D. The sacred verse that frames meditation

    Key: 1-D, 2-A, 3-B, 4-C

90. [short · synthesis · DOK 4] Two readings of paragraph 9: (a) Siddhartha honours the Brahmin tradition and faults only the way it is lived; (b) he condemns the tradition itself. Weigh both against the paragraph's own words and argue which is better supported.

    Sample answer: Reading (a) is better supported, though the end of the paragraph pushes toward (b). Paragraph 9 praises the books in strong terms: "Marvellous wisdom was in these verses," and "not to be looked down upon was the tremendous amount of enlightenment" (The Son of the Brahmin, paragraph 9). The complaint comes after the dash and is about living, not knowing: "where the wise men or penitents, who had succeeded in not just knowing this deepest of all knowledge but also to live it?" Even the father is faulted for his thirst, not his learning. That is (a). But the closing lines go further: "Everything else was searching, was a detour, was getting lost." If the source must be found "in one's own self," then the offerings, books and disputes are not merely badly lived; they are the wrong road. So the paragraph honours the tradition's wisdom while denying that its practices can reach it, and (b) is where the argument is heading rather than what it says.

91. [fill · recall · DOK 1] Complete the quotation from The Son of the Brahmin, paragraph 30: "After _____ hour, since no sleep had come over his eyes, the Brahmin stood up again, paced to and fro, walked out of the house and saw that the moon had risen." Word bank: every, no, each, another

    Key: another

92. [mc · inference · DOK 2] In paragraph 46, Siddhartha says, "Siddhartha will do what his father will tell him to do." What does this way of speaking show about him?

    A. He has decided at last to give up his plan.

    B. He obeys in words while his silent stand makes his will plain.

    C. He mocks his father's authority openly.

    D. He hopes that Govinda will speak for him.

    Key: B (He obeys in words while his silent stand makes his will plain.)

93. [short · inference · DOK 2] At the night's last hour the father returns. What does this line show about the change in Siddhartha, and why does it matter for the plot? "saw the young man standing there, who seemed tall and like a stranger to him" (The Son of the Brahmin, paragraph 32)

    Sample answer: In one night Siddhartha has grown, in his father's eyes, from a son into a separate man. The evidence is "saw the young man standing there, who seemed tall and like a stranger to him" (The Son of the Brahmin, paragraph 32). "Tall" gives him a new stature and authority, and "stranger" shows that the father no longer recognizes him as the boy he raised. This is the turning point of the chapter: once the father sees him as a stranger, he can no longer hold him and lets him go.

94. [short · analysis · DOK 3] The father's farewell imagines two endings for his son's search. What does each reveal about the father?

    Sample answer: If his son finds bliss, the father asks him to "come back and teach me to be blissful" (The Son of the Brahmin, paragraph 49), which admits that he has not found it himself. If he finds disappointment, they will "once again make offerings to the gods together," so the father still trusts the old way. Together the endings show a man who doubts quietly but keeps faith with his rituals, and who loves his son enough to leave both doors open.

95. [mc · analysis · DOK 3] Paragraph 7 lists the places of Siddhartha's piety, from "the rosy paths of the fig tree garden" to "the bath of repentance," before saying that he "still lacked all joy." What does the long list do?

    A. It shows that he has begun to neglect his daily rituals
    B. It sets perfect outward forms against a single inner lack
    C. It proves that he performs his duties to please other people
    D. It suggests that the garden itself is the cause of his unrest

    Key: B (It sets perfect outward forms against a single inner lack)

96. [short · analysis · DOK 3] Paragraph 7 says Siddhartha's restless dreams come "flowing from the water of the river" and "fuming from the sacrifices." What is surprising about where Hesse locates the sources of his unrest, and what does it suggest?

    Sample answer: The sources are the very things that are supposed to satisfy him. His dreams and "a restlessness of the soul" come from the river, the stars and the sun, and also from the sacrifices, "the verses of the Rig-Veda" and "the teachings of the old Brahmins" (The Son of the Brahmin, paragraph 7). Hesse does not make doubt invade the sacred world from outside; he has it seep out of that world, "drop by drop." The suggestion is that Siddhartha's discontent is a product of his education rather than a revolt against it: the teachings that formed him are what make him ask for more than they give.

97. [mc · analysis · DOK 3] In paragraph 8 Siddhartha grants that the sacrifices were "excellent" and then asks, "but was that all?" What does the turn from statement to question do?

    A. It shows that he expects his father to answer each point
    B. It mocks the gods by making their worship seem foolish
    C. It turns settled praise into doubt that no one answers
    D. It tests Govinda with riddles taken from the Vedas

    Key: C (It turns settled praise into doubt that no one answers)

98. [mc · analysis · DOK 3] Siddhartha's core complaint about the Brahmins is that they…

    A. Teach false doctrines about the Atman
    B. Keep the Atman secret from the young
    C. Know of the Atman but do not live it
    D. Value debate over meditation

    Key: C (Know of the Atman but do not live it)

99. [mc · analysis · DOK 3] What does Siddhartha conclude about the wise men he knows?

    A. Not one has reached the heavenly world completely
    B. Not one has ever glimpsed the heavenly world
    C. Not one of them knows all of the sacred verses by heart
    D. Not one will take him on as a Vedas student

Key: A (Not one has reached the heavenly world completely)

100. [mc · analysis · DOK 3] The list of what Siddhartha will never become mainly reveals…

A. Govinda's idealized view of his friend

B. Siddhartha's contempt for Brahmins

C. The father's plans for his son

D. The narrator's attack on the priesthood

Key: A (Govinda's idealized view of his friend)

101. [match · analysis · DOK 3] Match each of Siddhartha's questions (1-4) to the target of his doubt (A-D). Use each letter once.

1. "The ablutions were good, but they were water" (paragraph 8)
2. "Did the sacrifices give a happy fortune?" (paragraph 8)
3. "Was it really Prajapati who had created the world?" (paragraph 8)
4. "Were the gods not creations, created like me and you, subject to time, mortal?" (paragraph 8)

A. The creator's claim to have made the world

B. The rituals of purification

C. The worth of offerings

D. The gods' claim to be eternal

Key: 1-B, 2-C, 3-A, 4-D

102. [short · analysis · DOK 3] Siddhartha calls everything outside the self "a detour." What does the word imply about his father's daily rituals? Quote one detail.

Sample answer: A detour is not a wrong road but an indirect one: it circles the goal without reaching it. Siddhartha notes that his father must "wash off sins every day, strive for a cleansing every day" (The Son of the Brahmin, paragraph 9), and a cleansing that has to be repeated daily has plainly not reached its end. For Siddhartha the goal is "the pristine source in one's own self", so every outward act only postpones the search.

103. [short · analysis · DOK 3] At dawn the son seems to his father "tall and like a stranger." What has changed, and why does Hesse show it through the father's eyes?

Sample answer: The night of standing has turned the obedient boy into someone the father no longer recognizes: the young man "seemed tall and like a stranger to him" (The Son of the Brahmin, paragraph 32). Seen through the father, the change registers as loss, because he realizes that his son already belongs elsewhere. It prepares his surrender a moment later, when he sees that Siddhartha "had already left him."

104. [short · synthesis · DOK 4] Is Siddhartha's leaving an act of disobedience? Argue both sides using the night scene, then decide.

Sample answer: In one sense it is not: he never defies his father aloud and even insists, "Siddhartha has always obeyed his father" (The Son of the Brahmin, paragraph 44). He waits for permission rather than leaving without it. In another sense it is: by standing all night he makes refusal impossible, so his obedience becomes a form of pressure, and the father yields only when he sees that his son "had already left him" (paragraph 47). The strongest reading is that Siddhartha obeys the form of authority while overruling its substance.

105. [short · synthesis · DOK 4] Is Siddhartha's discontent in paragraphs 7-11 a judgment on the Brahmins or on himself? Argue one reading with evidence, then answer the other.

Sample answer: It reads best as a judgment on what the Brahmins have not done, held with real respect for what they have. He grants that "Marvellous wisdom was in these verses" and that the learning is "not to be looked down upon" (The Son of the Brahmin, paragraph 9), but he asks where anyone is who has managed "not just knowing this deepest of all knowledge but also to live it?" (paragraph 9), and he finds that "nobody showed this way, nobody knew it, not the father" (paragraph 8). The other reading has support: the chapter begins with a lack in him, "he found no delight in himself" (paragraph 7), and he "had started to nurse discontent in himself" (paragraph 8), which makes the fault sound inward. The two meet in paragraph 11: he has not quenched "the ultimate thirst," and neither has anyone he knows. His discontent turns on himself first and then on the Brahmins, because their example shows him that his own lack is not his alone.

106. [fill · recall · DOK 1] Complete the quotation from The Son of the Brahmin, paragraph 8: "For whom else were offerings to be made, who else was to be _____ but Him, the only one, the Atman?" Word bank: worshipped, sold, hunted, taxed

    Key: worshipped

107. [mc · inference · DOK 2] Which of these passages about Govinda comes earliest in The Son of the Brahmin?

    A. "And he turned pale like a dry banana skin."

    B. "a shadow rose near the last hut, who had crouched there"

    C. "He wanted to follow Siddhartha, the beloved, the splendid."

    D. "I have come," said Govinda.

    Key: C ("He wanted to follow Siddhartha, the beloved, the splendid.")

108. [mc · inference · DOK 2] What does this passage most clearly show? "Often, it seemed near, the heavenly world, but never had he reached it completely, never had he quenched the ultimate thirst." (The Son of the Brahmin, paragraph 11)

    A. He has grown tired of studying the holy books.

    B. He is physically weak from too much fasting.

    C. His spiritual longing has never been satisfied.

    D. He believes the heavenly world does not exist.

    Key: C (His spiritual longing has never been satisfied.)

109. [mc · inference · DOK 2] In paragraph 21, Siddhartha tells Govinda, "let's not waste words." What does this show about him?

    A. He is angry that Govinda doubts him.

    B. His decision is final and needs no discussion.

    C. He wants to keep the plan secret from his father.

    D. He thinks Govinda talks too much.

    Key: B (His decision is final and needs no discussion.)

110. [short · inference · DOK 2] His father has just let him go. What does this line show about Siddhartha, and why does it matter for the plot? "Siddhartha wavered to the side, as he tried to walk." (The Son of the Brahmin, paragraph 50)

    Sample answer: The night-long vigil has cost Siddhartha's body far more than he showed. The evidence is "Siddhartha wavered to the side, as he tried to walk." (The Son of the Brahmin, paragraph 50). "Wavered" is the first sign of weakness he has allowed himself all night, yet he at once puts his limbs back under control and bows to his father. That matters for the plot because it shows the iron will he will need as a Samana, and that his discipline already rules his body.

111. [mc · analysis · DOK 3] The passing Samanas are "strangers and lank jackals in the realm of humans," yet behind them blows a scent of "quiet passion" (paragraph 16). Why does this figure draw Siddhartha rather than repel him?

    A. Their hardship offers an intensity his ordered life lacks

    B. Their poverty reminds him of his own duty to give alms to all

    C. Their great age promises wisdom the Brahmins lack

    D. Their fame in the town makes the path seem safe

    Key: A (Their hardship offers an intensity his ordered life lacks)

112. [short · analysis · DOK 3] Paragraph 9 begins in praise of the verses ("Marvellous wisdom") and ends in judgment ("was getting lost"). Locate the turn, describe how the tone changes, and explain why Hesse has Siddhartha concede before he objects.

    Sample answer: The turn comes at the dash: "—But where were the Brahmins, where the priests" (The Son of the Brahmin, paragraph 9). Before it the tone is reverent, with honey "collected by bees" and wisdom gathered "by innumerable generations." After it the sentences become questions and then flat, short claims, ending in the triple "was searching, was a detour, was getting lost." The concession matters because it makes the objection fair: Siddhartha is not dismissing the books out of ignorance but measuring them against the one test they fail, whether anyone lives what they say. Praise first gives the later judgment more weight.

113. [match · analysis · DOK 3] Near dawn Siddhartha answers each of his father's predictions. Match each reply (1-4) to what it does in the exchange (A-D). Use each letter once.

    1. "I will become tired" (paragraph 38)
    2. "I will not fall asleep" (paragraph 40)
    3. "Siddhartha has always obeyed his father" (paragraph 44)
    4. "Siddhartha will do what his father will tell him to do" (paragraph 46)

    A. Accepting a cost his father names

    B. Claiming obedience as his own ground

    C. Correcting his father's prediction

    D. Handing the final word back to his father

    Key: 1-A, 2-C, 3-B, 4-D

114. [short · analysis · DOK 3] The chapter opens with three parallel sentences: "Joy leapt in his father's heart," "Bliss leapt in his mother's breast," "Love touched the hearts." How does this pattern set up paragraph 7?

    Sample answer: The parallel openings pile up the joy Siddhartha gives others, and paragraph 6 sums them up: "He was a source of joy for everybody, he was a delight for them all." Paragraph 7 then turns on "But" and reverses the pattern, since he "was not a source of joy for himself" (The Son of the Brahmin, paragraph 7). The repetition makes the reversal sharp, so his discontent reads as an inner lack rather than a lack of love.

115. [match · analysis · DOK 3] Match each phrase (1-4) to what it reveals about Siddhartha's discontent (A-D). Use each letter once.

    1. "would not bring him joy for ever and ever" (paragraph 8)
    2. "filled his expecting vessel with their richness" (paragraph 8)
    3. "they did not relieve the fear in his heart" (paragraph 8)
    4. "this was his thirst, this was his suffering" (paragraph 10)

    A. Ritual that leaves his fear untouched

B. Teaching that has not filled him

C. Doubt felt as a bodily need

D. Love that cannot satisfy him

Key: 1-D, 2-B, 3-A, 4-C

116. [short · synthesis · DOK 4] Is Siddhartha's father a foil to his son or a mirror of him? Argue one reading with evidence from the night scene and the farewell (paragraphs 24-49), and answer the other.

Sample answer: He is more mirror than foil. His silence lasts so long that "the stars in the small window wandered" (The Son of the Brahmin, paragraph 24), a stubbornness that matches his son's standing; and his farewell, "come back and teach me to be blissful" (paragraph 49), admits that he too has not found what Siddhartha seeks, just as paragraph 9 had suspected he was "a thirsty man." The foil reading rests on what he does next: he offers to "make offerings to the gods together" if the search fails and goes straight "to the river and to perform the first ablution" (paragraph 49), choosing the rites his son has left. So he mirrors his son's need and will, and differs only in his answer to that need, which makes him a mirror who chose the other road.

117. [mc · synthesis · DOK 4] By the chapter's logic, any teaching from outside the self is…

A. A necessary first step to Atman

B. A betrayal of his caste

C. The only reliable path to Atman

D. A detour from the source within

Key: D (A detour from the source within)

118. [mc · synthesis · DOK 4] Trembling knees but a steady face at dawn suggest…

A. Anger he hides from his father

B. Illness from fasting he has kept secret

C. A body giving way while the will holds

D. Regret he is too proud to admit

Key: C (A body giving way while the will holds)

119. [mc · synthesis · DOK 4] Govinda waiting at the last hut fulfils which earlier wish?

A. To become a great Brahmin

B. To lead Siddhartha to the gods

C. To win the father's blessing first

D. To follow Siddhartha as his shadow

Key: D (To follow Siddhartha as his shadow)

120. [short · synthesis · DOK 4] Paragraph 1 says Siddhartha "already knew to feel Atman in the depths of his being," yet paragraph 8 asks where the self is. Reconcile the two.

Sample answer: The two passages separate feeling the self from living in it. In paragraph 1 he can sense Atman in meditation, but by paragraph 8 he sees that no one has shown him how to dwell there; he looks in vain for someone who succeeded "in not just knowing this deepest of all knowledge but also to live it?" (The Son of the Brahmin, paragraph 9). The opening skill is real but momentary, and the chapter's discontent grows from the gap between a glimpse and a whole life. A competing reading takes paragraph 1 as others' praise of his talent rather than his own experience; even so, the gap between skill and peace remains.

121. [fill · recall · DOK 1] Complete the quotation from The Son of the Brahmin, paragraph 8: "Was it therefore good, was it right, was it meaningful and the highest _____ to make offerings to the gods?" Word bank: kettle, occupation, pebble, ladder

Key: occupation

122. [mc · inference · DOK 2] Which of these images of the long night comes last in The Son of the Brahmin?

A. “no sleep had come over his eyes”

B. “The first light of day shone into the room.”

C. “saw that the moon had risen”

D. “filled his heart with anger, filled his heart with unrest”

Key: B (“The first light of day shone into the room.”)

123. [short · inference · DOK 2] Siddhartha performs every ritual perfectly. What does this line show about him, and why does it matter for the plot? “his gestures of perfect decency, everyone’s love and joy, he still lacked all joy in his heart” (The Son of the Brahmin, paragraph 7)

Sample answer: Siddhartha’s outward life is flawless, but inside he is empty. The evidence is “his gestures of perfect decency, everyone’s love and joy, he still lacked all joy in his heart” (The Son of the Brahmin, paragraph 7). The word “still” sets all his perfect gestures and all the love he receives against the one thing missing, and “all joy” makes the lack total. That matters for the plot because no change in his circumstances can fix an emptiness inside him, so he must leave home to search for himself.

124. [mc · analysis · DOK 3] At dawn Siddhartha again speaks of himself in the third person (paragraphs 44 and 46), as he did with Govinda in paragraph 17. What does the device do in the scene with his father?

A. It shows him speaking as the dutiful son while his will stays his own

B. It shows him so worn out by the sleepless night that he forgets who he is

C. It shows him mocking his father’s formal way of speaking

D. It shows him quietly giving up on his plan to leave home

Key: A (It shows him speaking as the dutiful son while his will stays his own)

125. [mc · analysis · DOK 3] Through paragraphs 29-32 the narration follows the father as he returns hour after hour to the window. Whose point of view governs these paragraphs, and what does the choice withhold?

A. Siddhartha’s; it withholds the choice his father finally makes

B. An outside observer’s; it reports neither man’s feelings

C. The father’s; it withholds how many hours have passed

D. The father’s; it withholds what Siddhartha feels all night

Key: D (The father’s; it withholds what Siddhartha feels all night)

126. [short · analysis · DOK 3] Paragraph 9 says the wisdom of the verses was collected “pure as honey”. Explain how the simile both honours the Brahmins’ learning and marks its limit, using the end of the same paragraph.

Sample answer: The simile honours the learning: honey is pure, sweet and the labour of “innumerable generations”, so the verses are a real treasure (The Son of the Brahmin, paragraph 9). But honey is a store, gathered by others and kept; it can be eaten, not grown. The paragraph ends with the image it lacks, “the pristine source in one’s own self” (paragraph 9), water that springs up rather than food that is handed on. The father must “drink from holy sources” again and again because the stored wisdom never becomes a spring in him. The simile praises the tradition precisely as a collection, which is its limit.

127. [short · analysis · DOK 3] Hesse never states why the father yields; he shows it. Which physical detail decides the father, and why show rather than tell?

Sample answer: At first light the father sees that Siddhartha “was trembling softly in his knees” but that in his face “he saw no trembling" (The Son of the Brahmin, paragraph 47). The contrast proves that the body is failing while the will holds, and the father understands that his son "had already left him." Showing the detail lets the reader reach the father's conclusion with him, so the surrender feels earned rather than announced.

128. [match · analysis · DOK 3] Match each religious practice or authority (1-4) to the role it plays in Siddhartha's doubt (A-D). Use each letter once.

    1. The daily ablutions
    2. Prajapati
    3. The Upanishads of Samaveda
    4. The Om verse under the banyan tree

    A. A cleansing that must be repeated, so is never complete
    B. Meditation sent toward the Brahman like an arrow
    C. A creator god who may himself be a creation
    D. True words that no one he knows has lived

    Key: 1-A, 2-C, 3-D, 4-B

129. [short · analysis · DOK 3] The father stays silent until the night sky has visibly turned in the small window (paragraph 24). How does Hesse use the passing of time in the night scene?

    Sample answer: Hesse measures the standoff in cosmic and clock time: the father is silent until "the stars in the small window wandered and changed their relative positions" (The Son of the Brahmin, paragraph 24), and then "he came back after an hour, he came back after two hours" (paragraph 31), until the night's last hour. The slow, repeated count makes the reader feel the length of the son's ordeal and the father's mounting unrest. Time becomes the real opponent, and Siddhartha's will outlasts it.

130. [short · synthesis · DOK 4] In paragraph 8 the wisest ones define the self only by what it is not: not "flesh and bone," not thought, not consciousness. Can a self defined only by negation be found by any teaching? Argue whether Siddhartha's question is answerable as he poses it, and say what kind of answer the chapter invites.

    Sample answer: As posed, the question cannot be answered by teaching. Siddhartha asks "where, where" the self is (The Son of the Brahmin, paragraph 8), a question of place, but the only description he has is a list of negatives: it "was not flesh and bone, it was neither thought nor consciousness" (paragraph 8). Every object a teacher can point to, a rite, a verse, a thought, is excluded by definition, which is why "nobody showed this way, nobody knew it." The chapter quietly changes the question from where to how: "there was another way, which was worthwhile looking for?" (paragraph 8), and paragraph 9 asks for someone who lives the knowledge "into every step of the way." So the chapter invites an answer that is a way of living rather than a location or a doctrine. The objection is paragraph 1, where he "already knew to feel Atman"; but that feeling is momentary, and it does not tell him where the self dwells in ordinary waking life.

131. [short · synthesis · DOK 4] A reader argues that Siddhartha's quarrel is not with Brahmin learning but with the gap between knowing and living (paragraph 9). If that is right, is leaving for the Samanas a sound answer to his problem? Argue, and say what the chapter leaves unresolved.

    Sample answer: The reader is right that paragraph 9 grants the books their wisdom and asks only for someone who can bring Atman "into the life, into every step of the way, into word and deed?" (The Son of the Brahmin, paragraph 9). On that reading the Samanas are a logical choice: they are the one group in the chapter who live their creed in their bodies, with "merciless self-denial" (paragraph 16). Yet the chapter hints at a mismatch. His question is about carrying the self into ordinary waking life, while the Samanas are "strangers and enemies to the world" (paragraph 16); they live a doctrine by leaving life, not by entering it. So the choice is sound as a refusal of mere knowing but doubtful as an answer, and the chapter leaves open whether any teacher can show the way, since "among all of them there was no one" who had reached it (paragraph 11).

132. [mc · synthesis · DOK 4] If the gods are "subject to time," what follows for Siddhartha?

A. The gods must be feared more

B. All worship should simply end

C. Only the Atman deserves worship

D. Prajapati must be the Atman

Key: C (Only the Atman deserves worship)

133. [mc · synthesis · DOK 4] Which tension most shapes his search in this chapter?

A. He loves his father yet scorns all Brahmins

B. He wants renown yet claims to be humble

C. He seeks the self within by leaving outward

D. He doubts the gods yet still fears them

Key: C (He seeks the self within by leaving outward)

134. [mc · synthesis · DOK 4] The father's "Not proper it is for a Brahmin to speak harsh and angry words" shows…

A. Indifference to his son's plan

B. Decorum restraining real anger

C. Fear of his son's temper

D. Approval disguised as anger

Key: B (Decorum restraining real anger)

135. [short · synthesis · DOK 4] Trace the thirst motif through the chapter. How does it change our view of Siddhartha's father?

Sample answer: Thirst first names Siddhartha's own unrest: the ablutions "did not heal the spirit's thirst" (The Son of the Brahmin, paragraph 8). He then turns the word on his father, asking whether he was "not also just a searching man, a thirsty man?" (paragraph 9) who must "drink from holy sources" again and again. The motif turns the admired scholar into a fellow seeker, so the son's search becomes the father's unspoken one. A competing reading hears only youthful arrogance in this judgment, yet the father's own request to be taught bliss supports the son.

Rigor version	Items (in order)	Mix
HS Sophomore	1, 2, 3, 4, 5, 6, 7, 8, 9, 10, 11, 12, 13, 14, 15	recall 11, inference 2, analysis 1, synthesis 1
HS Junior	16, 17, 18, 19, 20, 21, 22, 23, 24, 25, 26, 27, 28, 29, 30	recall 11, inference 2, analysis 2, synthesis 0
HS Senior	31, 32, 33, 34, 35, 36, 37, 38, 39, 40, 41, 42, 43, 44, 45	recall 9, inference 3, analysis 2, synthesis 1
AP	46, 47, 48, 49, 50, 51, 52, 53, 54, 55, 56, 57, 58, 59, 60	recall 2, inference 8, analysis 2, synthesis 3
College Freshman	61, 62, 63, 64, 65, 66, 67, 68, 69, 70, 71, 72, 73, 74, 75	recall 1, inference 5, analysis 6, synthesis 3
College Sophomore	76, 77, 78, 79, 80, 81, 82, 83, 84, 85, 86, 87, 88, 89, 90	recall 1, inference 2, analysis 11, synthesis 1

College Junior	91, 92, 93, 94, 95, 96, 97, 98, 99, 100, 101, 102, 103, 104, 105	recall 1, inference 2, analysis 10, synthesis 2
College Senior	106, 107, 108, 109, 110, 111, 112, 113, 114, 115, 116, 117, 118, 119, 120	recall 1, inference 4, analysis 5, synthesis 5
Graduate / PhD	121, 122, 123, 124, 125, 126, 127, 128, 129, 130, 131, 132, 133, 134, 135	recall 1, inference 2, analysis 6, synthesis 6

Writing prompts (eleven rigor levels)

HS Sophomore (450 words; Dual Credit (Indiana College Core): ICC-WC-1.1, ICC-WC-1.3, ICC-WC-1.4, ICC-WC-1.5): Analyze how The Son of the Brahmin develops the idea of restlessness despite privilege. Make a precise claim, support it with at least three pieces of textual evidence, and explain how the author's use of characterization and setting shapes that idea. Address one possible counterclaim. (You are reading the English translation by Gunther Olesch, Anke Dreher, Amy Coulter, Stefan Langer and Semyon Chaichenets, so word-choice evidence is the translators' English.)

HS Junior (550 words; Dual Credit (Indiana College Core): ICC-WC-1.1, ICC-WC-1.3, ICC-WC-1.4, ICC-WC-1.5): Analyze how the structure of The Son of the Brahmin (where it begins, turns and ends) and its characterization shape the reader's understanding of restlessness despite privilege. Identify one place where the text leaves matters uncertain and explain how that uncertainty adds to its meaning.

HS Senior (600 words; Dual Credit (Indiana College Core): ICC-WC-1.1, ICC-WC-1.3, ICC-WC-1.4, ICC-WC-1.5): Two readers disagree about what The Son of the Brahmin suggests about restlessness despite privilege. Lay out two plausible interpretations, weigh the evidence for each (including the chapter's characterization and setting), and argue for the stronger one in a sustained, well-organized essay.

AP (650 words; Dual Credit (Indiana College Core): ICC-WC-1.1, ICC-WC-1.3, ICC-WC-1.4, ICC-WC-1.5): Write a literary argument in which you analyze how Hermann Hesse uses characterization in The Son of the Brahmin to complicate the reader's understanding of restlessness despite privilege. Develop a defensible thesis, select evidence purposefully, and explain how specific choices of diction and syntax create meaning.

College Freshman (1000 words; Dual Credit (Indiana College Core): ICC-WC-1.3, ICC-WC-1.5, ICC-WC-1.1): Situate The Son of the Brahmin within its historical and literary context and argue how the chapter's treatment of restlessness despite privilege responds to that context. Engage with at least one secondary perspective (a critic, historian or the author's own statements), integrate quotations smoothly, and cite in APA style.

College Sophomore (1250 words; Dual Credit (Indiana College Core): ICC-WC-1.1, ICC-WC-1.3, ICC-WC-1.4, ICC-WC-1.5): Read The Son of the Brahmin alongside the conventions of its genre and period. Argue how the chapter's handling of restlessness despite privilege follows or bends those conventions, using the characterization as evidence, and test your reading against one published critic. Document two secondary sources in APA.

College Junior (1500 words; Dual Credit (Indiana College Core): ICC-WC-1.1, ICC-WC-1.3, ICC-WC-1.4, ICC-WC-1.5): Apply a named critical approach (for example formalist, historicist, feminist, psychoanalytic or ecocritical) to The Son of the Brahmin and its treatment of restlessness despite privilege. State your method, show what it reveals in the chapter's characterization and setting, and identify where the text resists it.

College Senior (2000 words; Dual Credit (Indiana College Core): ICC-WC-1.1, ICC-WC-1.3, ICC-WC-1.4, ICC-WC-1.5): Develop a research argument that reads The Son of the Brahmin as evidence for a larger claim about restlessness despite privilege in Siddhartha. Connect close reading of the chapter to the whole novel, engage at least four scholarly sources, and state precisely where your reading departs from theirs (Chicago style).

Graduate / PhD (2500 words; Dual Credit (Indiana College Core): ICC-WC-1.1, ICC-WC-1.3, ICC-WC-1.4, ICC-WC-1.5): Develop an original argument that reads The Son of the Brahmin as a hinge in the novel's larger treatment of restlessness despite privilege. Position your reading within a named critical conversation (for example formalist, historicist, psychoanalytic, feminist or postcolonial approaches), account for the textual history where relevant, and articulate the stakes of your intervention for scholarship on Siddhartha.

SAT-style questions

1. not a vain, vacuous speaker; not a mean, deceitful priest

   As used in the text, what does the word “vacuous” most nearly mean?

   A. taking part in; sharing

   B. having or showing no mercy

   C. empty of thought or meaning

   D. a prayer calling on a god for help

2. After the usual time of the exercise in meditation had passed, Govinda rose. The evening had come, it was time to perform the evening's ablution. He called Siddhartha's name. Siddhartha did not answer. Siddhartha sat there lost in thought, his eyes were rigidly focused towards a very distant target, the tip of his tongue was protruding a little between the teeth, he seemed not to breathe. Thus sat he, wrapped up in contemplation, thinking Om, his soul sent after the Brahman as an arrow.

   Which choice best states a central concern of “The Son of the Brahmin”?

   A. Wisdom cannot be taught

   B. Learning from the river

   C. Detachment among the childlike people

   D. Restlessness despite privilege

SAT key: 1. C (empty of thought or meaning); 2. D (Restlessness despite privilege)

Lesson 3: With the Samanas

Focus: self-denial as a path

Objective: Students will analyze how theme develops in "With the Samanas" by writing a claim-evidence-reasoning paragraph that cites at least 2 quotations from the section, and will score at least 80% on the section quiz.

Standards: Dual Credit (Indiana College Core): ICC-WC-1.1, ICC-WC-1.3, ICC-WC-1.4, ICC-WC-1.5

Content note (prostitution (mentioned), alcohol or drugs (mentioned)): Among the worldly sights Siddhartha rejects are "whores offering themselves" (Hesse, 1922/2015, With the Samanas, para. 2), and he speaks of "In every tavern of that part of a town where the whorehouses are, my friend, among carters and gamblers I could have learned it." (Hesse, 1922/2015, With the Samanas, para. 11). These are dated, derogatory words for sex workers and brothels (places where sex is sold); today say "sex workers" or "brothel." They show his contempt for city life. The chapter also shows ascetic self-punishment, framed as religious practice that the novel judges a dead end: "It is fleeing from the self, it is a short escape of the agony of being a self, it is a short numbing of the senses against the pain and the pointlessness of life." (Hesse, 1922/2015, With the Samanas, para. 13)
Student preview: This chapter mentions prostitution in passing.
Suggested language: "What does this language show about the speaker?"

Teacher only · spoilers

With the Samanas, Siddhartha learns fasting, enduring pain, and meditations that let his self pass into animals and objects. Yet after three years he concludes these are only escapes from the self, not true release. When rumors spread of Gotama, the Buddha, he and Govinda leave; Siddhartha masters the old Samana with his gaze before departing.

Background: Asceticism—strict self-denial—was a widespread spiritual practice in ancient India.

Significance: Siddhartha discovers that discipline alone can become another form of illusion, a key turn in his quest.

Lesson plan and lecture script (90 minutes)

0–8 min · Bell-ringer · You do (8 min)
Students write to the bell-ringer, then pair-share.
Siddhartha calls the Samanas' practices a 'brief numbing.' Do you agree? Write for five minutes. Starters: I think... because... / This connects to teaching versus experience because.... Content note before we start: This chapter mentions prostitution in passing.
Prompt: Siddhartha calls the Samanas' practices a 'brief numbing.' Do you agree?
Sentence starters: I think… because… · This connects to teaching versus experience because…
Strong response: A strong response takes a position and anticipates this: Siddhartha decides that the Samanas' path is only a way of escaping the self for a while, like a drunkard's escape.

8–18 min · Vocabulary with etymology notes · We do (10 min)
Five key words in context, with verified word histories.
Today's words: numbing — a dulling of feeling or pain; nirvana — in Buddhism and Hinduism, release from the cycle of rebirth and suffering; festering — infected and full of pus; cowered — crouch or curl up; thirsted — longed for something strongly. “nirvana”: From Sanskrit nirvana "extinction," literally "a blowing out," from nir- "out" + va- "to blow."
Words: numbing: a dulling of feeling or pain · nirvana: in Buddhism and Hinduism, release from the cycle of rebirth and suffering · festering: infected and full of pus · cowered: crouch or curl up · thirsted: longed for something strongly

18–28 min · Background and context · I do (10 min)
Mini-lecture (read or adapt the script).
Asceticism—strict self-denial—was a widespread spiritual practice in ancient India. Siddhartha discovers that discipline alone can become another form of illusion, a key turn in his quest. Characterization: With the Samanas, Siddhartha practises fasting and meditation so hard that he can leave his body and enter animals' lives, but always returns to himself. Structure: Three years pass in a few pages; the chapter turns when rumours of Gotama arrive. Imagery: The heron, the dead jackal: Siddhartha "becomes" animals, vivid and strange. Watch for the river: The river teaches unity, simultaneity and listening; it returns in every stage of Siddhartha's life. In this chapter: “stood there in the rainy season, from his hair the water was dripping over freezing shoulders, over freezing hips and legs, and” (With the Samanas, paragraph 4).

28–40 min · I do: modeled close reading · I do (12 min)
Model the close reading of the anchor quotation using the written think-aloud below.
First, meaning. I read “to become empty, empty of thirst, empty of wishing, empty of dreams, empty of joy and sorrow” slowly and put it in my own words: He wants to empty himself of thirst, wishes, dreams, joy and sorrow. Next, craft. I notice the repetition of "empty," as if he is chanting toward nothing. The strongest word is “empty”: it is the goal: to remove the self. Then, effect. What does Siddhartha want from the Samanas' practices? My answer: Siddhartha wants the Samanas' practices to free him from the self, emptying himself through hunger and denial; the story will show this path is not enough to bring him peace.

> to become empty, empty of thirst, empty of wishing, empty of dreams, empty of joy and sorrow (With the Samanas, paragraph 3)

Think-aloud: First, meaning. I read “to become empty, empty of thirst, empty of wishing, empty of dreams, empty of joy and sorrow” slowly and put it in my own words: He wants to empty himself of thirst, wishes, dreams, joy and sorrow. Next, craft. I notice the repetition of "empty," as if he is chanting toward nothing. The strongest word is “empty”: it is the goal: to remove the self. Then, effect. What does Siddhartha want from the Samanas' practices? My answer: Siddhartha wants the Samanas' practices to free him from the self, emptying himself through hunger and denial; the story will show this path is not enough to bring him peace.

40–55 min · We do: guided annotation · We do (15 min)
Guided analysis of a second quotation; expected answers given.
Ask: What words in this line stand out, and what do they suggest? Expected: The repeated "empty" shows the Samanas aim at nothing; Siddhartha later sees that emptiness is not knowledge. This links to teaching versus experience. Ask: How does this line connect to teaching versus experience? Expected: Siddhartha decides that the Samanas' path is only a way of escaping the self for a while, like a drunkard's escape. (His critique: their escape is no different from a drunkard's.)

> What I've learned, being among the Samanas, up to this day, this, O Govinda, I could have learned more quickly and by simpler means (With the Samanas, paragraph 11)

Ask: What words in this line stand out, and what do they suggest?
Expected answer: The repeated "empty" shows the Samanas aim at nothing; Siddhartha later sees that emptiness is not knowledge. This links to teaching versus experience.
Ask: How does this line connect to teaching versus experience?
Expected answer: Siddhartha decides that the Samanas' path is only a way of escaping the self for a while, like a drunkard's escape. (His critique: their escape is no different from a drunkard's.)

55–70 min · You do: independent annotation · You do (15 min)
Independent annotation and a claim-evidence-reasoning paragraph (exemplar given).
Annotate the chapter for characterization, structure (three marks with a margin note each), then write one claim-evidence-reasoning paragraph: what does this chapter suggest about self-denial as a path? Then start your writing prompt at your assigned level (HS Sophomore: Analyze how With the Samanas develops the idea of self-denial as a path. Make a precise claim, support it with at least three pieces of textual evidence, and explain how the author's use of theme and characterization shapes that idea. Address one possible counterclaim. (You are reading the English translation by Gunther Olesch, Anke Dreher, Amy Coulter, Stefan Langer and Semyon Chaichenets, so word-choice evidence is the translators' English.)) Exemplar: Siddhartha rejects the Samanas because their techniques escape the self rather than understanding it. When the text says "What I've learned, being among the Samanas, up to this day, this, O Govinda, I could have learned more quickly and by simpler means" (With the Samanas, paragraph 11), it shows this directly. He says what he learned "I could have learned more quickly and by simpler means," because meditation, like drink, only provides a temporary escape.
Task: Annotate the chapter for characterization, structure (three marks with a margin note each), then write one claim-evidence-reasoning paragraph: what does this chapter suggest about self-denial as a path? Then start your writing prompt at your assigned level (HS Sophomore: Analyze how With the Samanas develops the idea of self-denial as a path. Make a precise claim, support it with at least three pieces of textual evidence, and explain how the author's use of theme and characterization shapes that idea. Address one possible counterclaim. (You are reading the English translation by Gunther Olesch, Anke Dreher, Amy Coulter, Stefan Langer and Semyon Chaichenets, so word-choice evidence is the translators' English.))
Exemplar: Siddhartha rejects the Samanas because their techniques escape the self rather than understanding it. When the text says "What I've learned, being among the Samanas, up to this day, this, O Govinda, I could have learned more quickly and by simpler means" (With the Samanas, paragraph 11), it shows this directly. He says what he learned "I could have learned more quickly and by simpler means," because meditation, like drink, only provides a temporary escape.

70–80 min · Discussion · We do (10 min)
Structured discussion from the 30 tiered questions, with facilitation notes.
Anchor question: Siddhartha calls the Samanas' practices a 'brief numbing.' Do you agree? Ask: is the Samanas' path really like a drunkard's? Where does the comparison fail?
Anchor question: Siddhartha calls the Samanas' practices a 'brief numbing.' Do you agree?
Facilitation: Ask: is the Samanas' path really like a drunkard's? Where does the comparison fail?

80–87 min · Exit ticket / chapter quiz · You do (7 min)
Chapter quiz in the app and an exit ticket (answer given).
Chapter quiz in the app, then: In one sentence, what does this chapter suggest about self-denial as a path? Support it with one short quotation. Model answer: Siddhartha rejects the Samanas because their techniques escape the self rather than understanding it. ("What I've learned, being among the Samanas, up to this day, this, O Govinda, I could have learned more quickly and by simpler means", With the Samanas, paragraph 11). Accept any defensible claim backed by a quotation from the chapter; the answer key for the quiz is in the Quiz section.
Exit ticket: In one sentence, what does this chapter suggest about self-denial as a path? Support it with one short quotation.
Answer: Model answer: Siddhartha rejects the Samanas because their techniques escape the self rather than understanding it. ("What I've learned, being among the Samanas, up to this day, this, O Govinda, I could have learned more quickly and by simpler means", With the Samanas, paragraph 11). Accept any defensible claim backed by a quotation from the chapter; the answer key for the quiz is in the Quiz section.

87–90 min · Closure · I do (3 min)
Summarize the lesson and preview the next reading.
Today we saw how characterization shapes self-denial as a path. Key takeaway: Siddhartha decides that the Samanas' path is only a way of escaping the self for a while, like a drunkard's escape.

Total: 90 minutes.

60-minute version of this lesson

Same script and content as above, with these timings (60 minutes).

Clock	Segment	Minutes	What to keep
0–5	Bell-ringer	5	Students write to the bell-ringer, then pair-share.
5–10	Vocabulary with etymology notes	5	Five key words in context, with verified word histories.
10–16	Background and context	6	Mini-lecture (read or adapt the script).
16–24	I do: modeled close reading	8	Model the close reading of the anchor quotation using the written think-aloud below.
24–34	We do: guided annotation	10	Guided analysis of a second quotation; expected answers given.
34–44	You do: independent annotation	10	Independent annotation and a claim-evidence-reasoning paragraph (exemplar given).

44–54	Discussion	10	Structured discussion from the 30 tiered questions, with facilitation notes.
54–58	Exit ticket / chapter quiz	4	Chapter quiz in the app and an exit ticket (answer given).
58–60	Closure	2	Summarize the lesson and preview the next reading.

Teacher analysis (spoilers)

Literary elements

- Characterization: With the Samanas, Siddhartha practises fasting and meditation so hard that he can leave his body and enter animals' lives, but always returns to himself.
- Structure: Three years pass in a few pages; the chapter turns when rumours of Gotama arrive.
- Imagery: The heron, the dead jackal: Siddhartha "becomes" animals, vivid and strange.

Themes and how they develop

- teaching versus experience: Siddhartha decides that the Samanas' path is only a way of escaping the self for a while, like a drunkard's escape.

Symbols and motifs

- the river: The river teaches unity, simultaneity and listening; it returns in every stage of Siddhartha's life. In this chapter: “stood there in the rainy season, from his hair the water was dripping over freezing shoulders, over freezing hips and legs, and” (With the Samanas, paragraph 4).
- teachers and teachings: Siddhartha learns from many teachers but concludes that wisdom cannot be taught in words. In this chapter: “Siddhartha sat upright and learned to breathe sparingly, learned to get along with only few breaths” (With the Samanas, paragraph 5).

Key quotations (checked against the reading text)

- “to become empty, empty of thirst, empty of wishing, empty of dreams, empty of joy and sorrow” (With the Samanas, paragraph 3) The goal of asceticism, stated in a list built on repetition.
- “A heron flew over the bamboo forest” (With the Samanas, paragraph 6) The start of the passage where he enters the animal's life.
- “What I’ve learned, being among the Samanas, up to this day, this, O Govinda, I could have learned more quickly and by simpler means” (With the Samanas, paragraph 11) His critique: their escape is no different from a drunkard's.

Model claim-evidence-reasoning

Claim: Siddhartha rejects the Samanas because their techniques escape the self rather than understanding it.
Evidence: “What I’ve learned, being among the Samanas, up to this day, this, O Govinda, I could have learned more quickly and by simpler means” (With the Samanas, paragraph 11)
Reasoning: He says what he learned "I could have learned more quickly and by simpler means," because meditation, like drink, only provides a temporary escape.

Passages referenced in this lesson (full text)

Siddhartha had started to nurse discontent in himself, he had started to feel that the love of his father and the love of his mother, and also the love of his friend, Govinda, would not bring him joy for ever and ever, would not nurse him, feed him, satisfy him. He had started to suspect that his venerable father and his other teachers, that the wise Brahmins had already revealed to him the most and best of their wisdom, that they had already filled his expecting vessel with their richness, and the vessel was not full, the spirit was not content, the soul was not calm, the heart was not satisfied. The ablutions were good, but they were water, they did not wash off the sin, they did not heal the spirit's thirst, they did not relieve the fear in his heart. The sacrifices and the invocation of the gods were excellent —but was that all? Did the sacrifices give a happy fortune? And what about the gods? Was it really Prajapati who had created the world? Was it not the Atman, He, the only one, the singular one? Were the gods not creations, created like me and you, subject to time, mortal? Was it therefore good, was it right, was it meaningful and the highest occupation to make offerings to the gods? For whom else were offerings to be made, who else was to be worshipped but Him, the only one, the Atman? And where was Atman to be found, where did He reside, where did his eternal heart beat, where else but in one's own self, in its innermost part, in its indestructible part, which everyone had in himself? But where, where was this self, this innermost part, this ultimate part? It was not flesh and bone, it was neither thought nor consciousness, thus the wisest ones taught. So, where, where was it? To reach this place, the self, myself, the Atman, there was another way, which was worthwhile looking for? Alas, and nobody showed this way, nobody knew it, not the father, and not the teachers and wise men, not the holy sacrificial songs! They knew everything, the Brahmins and their holy books, they knew everything, they had taken care of everything and of more than everything, the creation of the world, the origin of speech, of food, of inhaling, of exhaling, the arrangement of the senses, the acts of the gods, they knew infinitely much—but was it valuable to know all of this, not knowing that one and only thing, the most important thing, the solely important thing? (The Son of the Brahmin, paragraph 8)

Surely, many verses of the holy books, particularly in the Upanishades of Samaveda, spoke of this innermost and ultimate thing, wonderful verses. "Your soul is the whole world" was written there, and it was written that man in his sleep, in his deep sleep, would meet with his innermost part and would reside in the Atman. Marvellous wisdom was in these verses, all knowledge of the wisest ones had been collected here in magic words, pure as honey collected by bees. No, not to be looked down upon was the tremendous amount of enlightenment which lay here collected and preserved by innumerable generations of wise Brahmins.—But where were the Brahmins, where the priests, where the wise men or penitents, who had succeeded in not just knowing this deepest of all knowledge but also to live it? Where was the knowledgeable one who wove his spell to bring his familiarity with the Atman out of the sleep into the state of being awake, into the life, into every step of the way, into word and deed? Siddhartha knew many venerable Brahmins, chiefly his father, the pure one, the scholar, the most venerable one. His father was to be admired, quiet and noble were his manners, pure his life, wise his words, delicate and noble thoughts lived behind its brow—but even he, who knew so much, did he live in blissfulness, did he have peace, was he not also just a searching man, a thirsty man? Did he not, again and again, have to drink from holy sources, as a thirsty man, from the offerings, from the books, from the disputes of the Brahmins? Why did he, the irreproachable one, have to wash off sins every day, strive for a cleansing every day, over and over every day? Was not Atman in him, did not the pristine source spring from his heart? It had to be found, the pristine source in one's own self, it had to be possessed! Everything else was searching, was a detour, was getting lost. (The Son of the Brahmin, paragraph 9)

The Father touched Siddhartha's shoulder. (The Son of the Brahmin, paragraph 47)

As he slowly left on stiff legs in the first light of day the still quiet town, a shadow rose near the last hut, who had crouched there, and joined the pilgrim—Govinda. (The Son of the Brahmin, paragraph 50)

In the evening of this day they caught up with the ascetics, the skinny Samanas, and offered them their companionship and—obedience. They were accepted. (With the Samanas, paragraph 1)

Siddhartha gave his garments to a poor Brahmin in the street. He wore nothing more than the loincloth and the earth-coloured, unsown cloak. He ate only once a day, and never something cooked. He fasted for fifteen days. He fasted for twenty-eight days. The flesh waned from his thighs and cheeks. Feverish dreams flickered from his enlarged eyes, long nails grew slowly on his parched fingers and a dry, shaggy beard grew on his chin. His glance turned to ice when he encountered women; his mouth twitched with contempt when he walked through a city of nicely dressed people. He saw merchants trading, princes hunting, mourners wailing for their dead, whores offering themselves, physicians trying to help the sick, priests determining the most suitable day for seeding, lovers loving, mothers nursing their children—and all of this was not worthy of one look from his eye, it all lied, it all stank, it all stank of lies, it all pretended to be meaningful and joyful and beautiful, and it all was just concealed putrefaction. The world tasted bitter. Life was torture. (With the Samanas, paragraph 2)

A goal stood before Siddhartha, a single goal: to become empty, empty of thirst, empty of wishing, empty of dreams, empty of joy and sorrow. Dead to himself, not to be a self any more, to find tranquility with an emptied heart, to be open to miracles in unselfish thoughts, that was his goal. Once all of my self was overcome and had died, once every desire and every urge was silent in the heart, then the ultimate part of me had to awake, the innermost of my being, which is no longer my self, the great secret. (With the Samanas, paragraph 3)

Silently, Siddhartha exposed himself to burning rays of the sun directly above, glowing with pain, glowing with thirst, and stood there, until he neither felt any pain nor thirst any more. Silently, he stood there in the rainy season, from his hair the water was dripping over freezing shoulders, over freezing hips and legs, and the penitent stood there, until he could not feel the cold in his shoulders and legs any more, until they were silent, until they were quiet. Silently, he cowered in the thorny bushes, blood dripped from the burning skin, from festering wounds dripped pus, and Siddhartha stayed rigidly, stayed motionless, until no blood flowed any more, until nothing stung any more, until nothing burned any more. (With the Samanas, paragraph 4)

Siddhartha sat upright and learned to breathe sparingly, learned to get along with only few breaths, learned to stop breathing. He learned, beginning with the breath, to calm the beat of his heart, learned to reduce the beats of his heart, until they were only a few and almost none. (With the Samanas, paragraph 5)

Instructed by the oldest of the Samanas, Siddhartha practised self-denial, practised meditation, according to the Samana rules. A heron flew over the bamboo forest—and Siddhartha accepted the heron into his soul, flew over forest and mountains, was a heron, ate fish, felt the pangs of a heron's hunger, spoke the heron's croak, died a heron's death. A dead jackal was lying on the sandy bank, and Siddhartha's soul slipped inside the body, was the dead jackal, lay on the banks, got bloated, stank, decayed, was dismembered by hyenas, was skinned by vultures, turned into a skeleton, turned to dust, was blown across the fields. And Siddhartha's soul returned, had died, had decayed, was scattered as dust, had tasted the gloomy intoxication of the cycle, awaited in new thirst like a hunter in the gap, where he could escape from the cycle, where the end of the causes, where an eternity without suffering began. He killed his senses, he killed his memory, he slipped out of his self into thousands of other forms, was an animal, was carrion, was stone, was wood, was water, and awoke every time to find his old self again, sun or moon shone, was his self again, turned round in the cycle, felt thirst, overcame the thirst, felt new thirst. (With the Samanas, paragraph 6)

Siddhartha learned a lot when he was with the Samanas, many ways leading away from the self he learned to go. He went the way of self-denial by means of pain, through voluntarily suffering and overcoming pain, hunger, thirst, tiredness. He went the way of self-denial by means of meditation, through imagining the mind to be void of all conceptions. These and other ways he learned to go, a thousand times he left his self, for hours and days he remained in the non-self. But though the ways led away from the self, their end nevertheless always led back to the self. Though Siddhartha fled from the self a thousand times, stayed in nothingness, stayed in the animal, in the stone, the return was inevitable, inescapable was the hour, when he found himself back in the sunshine or in the moonlight, in the shade or in the rain, and was once again his self and Siddhartha, and again felt the agony of the cycle which had been forced upon him. (With the Samanas, paragraph 7)

By his side lived Govinda, his shadow, walked the same paths, undertook the same efforts. They rarely spoke to one another, than the service and the exercises required. Occasionally the two of them went through the villages, to beg for food for themselves and their teachers. (With the Samanas, paragraph 8)

"How do you think, Govinda," Siddhartha spoke one day while begging this way, "how do you think did we progress? Did we reach any goals?" (With the Samanas, paragraph 9)

Govinda answered: "We have learned, and we'll continue learning. You'll be a great Samana, Siddhartha. Quickly, you've learned every exercise, often the old Samanas have admired you. One day, you'll be a holy man, O Siddhartha." (With the Samanas, paragraph 10)

Quoth Siddhartha: "I can't help but feel that it is not like this, my friend. What I've learned, being among the Samanas, up to this day, this, O Govinda, I could have learned more quickly and by simpler means. In every tavern of that part of a town where the whorehouses are, my friend, among carters and gamblers I could have learned it." (With the Samanas, paragraph 11)

Quoth Govinda: "Siddhartha is putting me on. How could you have learned meditation, holding your breath, insensitivity against hunger and pain there among these wretched people?" (With the Samanas, paragraph 12)

And Siddhartha said quietly, as if he was talking to himself: "What is meditation? What is leaving one's body? What is fasting? What is holding one's breath? It is fleeing from the self, it is a short escape of the agony of being a self, it is a short numbing of the senses against the pain and the pointlessness of life. The same escape, the same short numbing is what the driver of an oxcart finds in the inn, drinking a few bowls of rice wine or fermented coconut milk. Then he won't feel his self any more, then he won't feel the pains of life any more, then he finds a short numbing of the senses. When he falls asleep over his bowl of rice wine, he'll find the same what Siddhartha and Govinda find when they escape their bodies through long exercises, staying in the non-self. This is how it is, O Govinda." (With the Samanas, paragraph 13)

Quoth Govinda: "You say so, O friend, and yet you know that Siddhartha is no driver of an oxcart and a Samana is no drunkard. It's true that a drinker numbs his senses, it's true that he briefly escapes and rests, but he'll return from the delusion, finds everything to be unchanged, has not become wiser, has gathered no enlightenment—has not risen several steps." (With the Samanas, paragraph 14)

And Siddhartha spoke with a smile: "I do not know, I've never been a drunkard. But that I, Siddhartha, find only a short numbing of the senses in my exercises and meditations and that I am just as far removed from wisdom, from salvation, as a child in the mother's womb, this I know, O Govinda, this I know." (With the Samanas, paragraph 15)

And once again, another time, when Siddhartha left the forest together with Govinda, to beg for some food in the village for their brothers and teachers, Siddhartha began to speak and said: "What now, O Govinda, might we be on the right path? Might we get closer to enlightenment? Might we get closer to salvation? Or do we perhaps live in a circle—we, who have thought we were escaping the cycle?" (With the Samanas, paragraph 16)

Quoth Govinda: "We have learned a lot, Siddhartha, there is still much to learn. We are not going around in circles, we are moving up, the circle is a spiral, we have already ascended many a level." (With the Samanas, paragraph 17)

Siddhartha answered: "How old, would you think, is our oldest Samana, our venerable teacher?" (With the Samanas, paragraph 18)

And Siddhartha: "He has lived for sixty years and has not reached the nirvana. He'll turn seventy and eighty, and you and me, we will grow just as old and will do our exercises, and will fast, and will meditate. But we will not reach the nirvana, he won't and we won't. O Govinda, I believe out of all the Samanas out there, perhaps not a single one, not a single one, will reach the nirvana. We find comfort, we find numbness, we learn feats, to deceive others. But the most important thing, the path of paths, we will not find." (With the Samanas, paragraph 20)

But Siddhartha said in a voice which contained just as much sadness as mockery, with a quiet, a slightly sad, a slightly mocking voice: "Soon, Govinda, your friend will leave the path of the Samanas, he has walked along your side for so long. I'm suffering of thirst, O Govinda, and on this long path of a Samana, my thirst has remained as strong as ever. I always thirsted for knowledge, I have always been full of questions. I have asked the Brahmins, year after year, and I have asked the holy Vedas, year after year, and I have asked the devoted Samanas, year after year. Perhaps, O Govinda, it had been just as well, had been just as smart and just as profitable, if I had asked the hornbill-bird or the chimpanzee. It took me a long time and am not finished learning this yet, O Govinda: that there is nothing to be learned! There is indeed no such thing, so I believe, as what we refer to as 'learning.' There is, O my friend, just one knowledge, this is everywhere, this is Atman, this is within me and within you and within every creature. And so I'm starting to believe that this knowledge has no worser enemy than the desire to know it, than learning." (With the Samanas, paragraph 22)

At this, Govinda stopped on the path, rose his hands, and spoke: "If you, Siddhartha, only would not bother your friend with this kind of talk! Truly, your words stir up fear in my heart. And just consider: what would become of the sanctity of prayer, what of the venerability of the Brahmins' caste, what of the holiness of the Samanas, if it was as you say, if there was no learning? What, O Siddhartha, what would then become of all of this what is holy, what is precious, what is venerable on earth?" (With the Samanas, paragraph 23)

But Siddhartha remained silent. He thought about the words which Govinda had said to him and thought the words through to their end. (With the Samanas, paragraph 25)

At one time, when the two young men had lived among the Samanas for about three years and had shared their exercises, some news, a rumour, a myth reached them after being retold many times: A man had appeared, Gotama by name, the exalted one, the Buddha, he had overcome the suffering of the world in himself and had halted the cycle of rebirths. He was said to wander through the land, teaching, surrounded by disciples, without possession, without home, without a wife, in the yellow cloak of an ascetic, but with a cheerful brow, a man of bliss, and Brahmins and princes would bow down before him and would become his students. (With the Samanas, paragraph 27)

This myth, this rumour, this legend resounded, its fragrants rose up, here and there; in the towns, the Brahmins spoke of it and in the forest, the Samanas; again and again, the name of Gotama, the Buddha reached the ears of the young men, with good and with bad talk, with praise and with defamation. (With the Samanas, paragraph 28)

It was as if the plague had broken out in a country and news had been spreading around that in one or another place there was a man, a wise man, a knowledgeable one, whose word and breath was enough to heal everyone who had been infected with the pestilence, and as such news would go through the land and everyone would talk about it, many would believe, many would doubt, but many would get on their way as soon as possible, to seek the wise man, the helper, just like this this myth ran through the land, that fragrant myth of Gotama, the Buddha, the wise man of the family of Sakya. He possessed, so the believers said, the highest enlightenment, he remembered his previous lives, he had reached the nirvana and never returned into the cycle, was never again submerged in the murky river of physical forms. Many wonderful and unbelievable things were reported of him, he had performed miracles, had overcome the devil, had spoken to the gods. But his enemies and disbelievers said, this Gotama was a vain seducer, he would spent his days in luxury, scorned the offerings, was without learning, and knew neither exercises nor self-castigation. (With the Samanas, paragraph 29)

The myth of Buddha sounded sweet. The scent of magic flowed from these reports. After all, the world was sick, life was hard to bear—and behold, here a source seemed to spring forth, here a messenger seemed to call out, comforting, mild, full of noble promises. Everywhere where the rumour of Buddha was heard, everywhere in the lands of India, the young men listened up, felt a longing, felt hope, and among the Brahmins' sons of the towns and villages every pilgrim and stranger was welcome, when he brought news of him, the exalted one, the Sakyamuni. (With the Samanas, paragraph 30)

The myth had also reached the Samanas in the forest, and also Siddhartha, and also Govinda, slowly, drop by drop, every drop laden with hope, every drop laden with doubt. They rarely talked about it, because the oldest one of the Samanas did not like this myth. He had heard that this alleged Buddha used to be an ascetic before and had lived in the forest, but had then turned back to luxury and worldly pleasures, and he had no high opinion of this Gotama. (With the Samanas, paragraph 31)

"O Siddhartha," Govinda spoke one day to his friend. "Today, I was in the village, and a Brahmin invited me into his house, and in his house, there was the son of a Brahmin from Magadha, who has seen the Buddha with his own eyes and has heard him teach. Verily, this made my chest ache when I breathed, and thought to myself: If only I would too, if only we both would too, Siddhartha and me, live to see the hour when we will hear the teachings from the mouth of this perfected man! Speak, friend, wouldn't we want to go there too and listen to the teachings from the Buddha's mouth?" (With the Samanas, paragraph 32)

Quoth Siddhartha: "Always, O Govinda, I had thought, Govinda would stay with the Samanas, always I had believed his goal was to live to be sixty and seventy years of age and to keep on practising those feats and exercises, which are becoming a Samana. But behold, I had not known Govinda well enough, I knew little of his heart. So now you, my faithful friend, want to take a new path and go there, where the Buddha spreads his teachings." (With the Samanas, paragraph 33)

Quoth Govinda: "You're mocking me. Mock me if you like, Siddhartha! But have you not also developed a desire, an eagerness, to hear these teachings? And have you not at one time said to me, you would not walk the path of the Samanas for much longer?" (With the Samanas, paragraph 34)

At this, Siddhartha laughed in his very own manner, in which his voice assumed a touch of sadness and a touch of mockery, and said: "Well, Govinda, you've spoken well, you've remembered correctly. If you only remembered the other thing as well, you've heard from me, which is that I have grown distrustful and tired against teachings and learning, and that my faith in words, which are brought to us by teachers, is small. But let's do it, my dear, I am willing to listen to these teachings—though in my heart I believe that we've already tasted the best fruit of these teachings." (With the Samanas, paragraph 35)

Quoth Govinda: "Your willingness delights my heart. But tell me, how should this be possible? How should the Gotama's teachings, even before we have heard them, have already revealed their best fruit to us?" (With the Samanas, paragraph 36)

Quoth Siddhartha: "Let us eat this fruit and wait for the rest, O Govinda! But this fruit, which we already now received thanks to the Gotama, consisted in him calling us away from the Samanas! Whether he has also other and better things to give us, O friend, let us await with calm hearts." (With the Samanas, paragraph 37)

On this very same day, Siddhartha informed the oldest one of the Samanas of his decision, that he wanted to leave him. He informed the oldest one with all the courtesy and modesty becoming to a younger one and a student. But the Samana became angry, because the two young men wanted to leave him, and talked loudly and used crude swear words. (With the Samanas, paragraph 38)

Govinda was startled and became embarrassed. But Siddhartha put his mouth close to Govinda's ear and whispered to him: "Now, I want to show the old man that I've learned something from him." (With the Samanas, paragraph 39)

Positioning himself closely in front of the Samana, with a concentrated soul, he captured the old man's glance with his glances, deprived him of his power, made him mute, took away his free will, subdued him under his own will, commanded him, to do silently, whatever he demanded him to do. The old man became mute, his eyes became motionless, his will was paralysed, his arms were hanging down; without power, he had fallen victim to Siddhartha's spell. But Siddhartha's thoughts brought the Samana under their control, he had to carry out what they commanded. And thus, the old man made several bows, performed gestures of blessing, spoke stammeringly a godly wish for a good journey. And the young men returned the bows with thanks, returned the wish, went on their way with salutations. (With the Samanas, paragraph 40)

On the way, Govinda said: "O Siddhartha, you have learned more from the Samanas than I knew. It is hard, it is very hard to cast a spell on an old Samana. Truly, if you had stayed there, you would soon have learned to walk on water." (With the Samanas, paragraph 41)

"I do not seek to walk on water," said Siddhartha. "Let old Samanas be content with such feats!" (With the Samanas, paragraph 42)

Vocabulary with etymology notes

Word	Definition (in this sentence)	In context	Word history
numbing (noun)	a dulling of feeling or pain	It is fleeing from the self, it is a short escape of the agony of being a self, it is a short numbing of the senses against the pain and the pointlessness of life.
nirvana (noun)	in Buddhism and Hinduism, release from the cycle of rebirth and suffering	And Siddhartha: "He has lived for sixty years and has not reached the nirvana.	"nirvana": From Sanskrit nirvana "extinction," literally "a blowing out," from nir- "out" + va- "to blow." (Online Etymology Dictionary (hand-checked note), https://www.etymonline.com/word/nirvana)
festering (adjective)	infected and full of pus	Silently, he cowered in the thorny bushes, blood dripped from the burning skin, from festering wounds dripped pus, and Siddhartha stayed rigidly, stayed motionless, until no blood flowed any more, until nothing stung any more, until nothing burned any more.

cowered (verb)	crouched or shrank down in fear or pain	Silently, he cowered in the thorny bushes, blood dripped from the burning skin, from festering wounds dripped pus, and Siddhartha stayed rigidly, stayed motionless, until no blood flowed any more, until nothing stung any more, until nothing burned any more.
thirsted (verb)	longed for something strongly	I always thirsted for knowledge, I have always been full of questions.
mumbled (verb)	said something quietly and unclearly	And Govinda mumbled a verse to himself, a verse from an Upanishad:
meditate (verb)	to quiet and focus the mind as a spiritual practice	He'll turn seventy and eighty, and you and me, we will grow just as old and will do our exercises, and will fast, and will meditate.
teachings (noun)	ideas or principles taught by someone	Verily, this made my chest ache when I breathed, and thought to myself: If only I would too, if only we both would too, Siddhartha and me, live to see the hour when we will hear the teachings from the mouth of this perfected man!	"teachings": Origin of "teaching": an English formation from teach + -ing. (Liber et Libri origin note, https://en.wiktionary.org/wiki/teaching#Etymology)
scorned (verb)	looked down on with contempt	But his enemies and disbelievers said, this Gotama was a vain seducer, he would spent his days in luxury, scorned the offerings, was without learning, and knew neither exercises nor self-castigation.
embarrassed (verb)	feeling awkward and ashamed	Govinda was startled and became embarrassed.

Discussion questions

1. Siddhartha calls the Samanas' practices a 'brief numbing.' Do you agree?
2. Where does theme appear in this chapter, and what effect does it have? Point to one passage.
3. How does this chapter connect to the book's larger concern with experience versus teaching?

Tiered discussion questions (30: recall, inferential, evaluative)

Wait time after every question (3 s for DOK 1, 5 s for DOK 2, 8 to 10 s for DOK 3 and 4); think-pair-share on DOK 3 and 4; answer each response with a follow-up probe; close with student-generated questions. Focus sets by rigor level: HS Sophomore:

1, 2, 3, 4, 13, 14, 15, 16, 17, 23, 24, 25; HS Junior: 1, 2, 3, 14, 15, 16, 17, 18, 24, 25, 26, 27; HS Senior: 1, 2, 3, 15, 16, 17, 18, 25, 26, 27, 28, 29; AP: 1, 2, 16, 17, 18, 19, 20, 26, 27, 28, 29, 30; College Freshman: 1, 2, 17, 18, 19, 20, 21, 22, 27, 28, 29, 30; College Sophomore: 1, 2, 11, 18, 19, 20, 21, 22, 23, 28, 29, 30; College Junior: 1, 11, 12, 19, 20, 21, 22, 23, 24, 25, 29, 30; College Senior: 1, 11, 12, 13, 20, 21, 22, 23, 24, 25, 26, 30; Graduate / PhD: 1, 11, 12, 13, 21, 22, 23, 24, 25, 26, 27, 28

Literal / recall

1. What do the Samanas practice? [DOK 1 · Cold call with support: call on a student by name, offering a sentence starter or rephrasing if needed · wait 3 s · Dual Credit (Indiana College Core): ICC-WC-1.1, ICC-WC-1.3, ICC-WC-1.4, ICC-WC-1.5] Look for: Fasting and self-denial

   Answer guidance: Fasting, enduring heat, cold and pain, and self-denial meant to empty the self. The goal is stated in "A goal stood before Siddhartha, a single goal: to become empty, empty of thirst, empty of wishing, empty of dreams" (With the Samanas, paragraph 3).
2. What can Siddhartha do in meditation? [DOK 1 · Turn and Talk: students discuss briefly with a neighbor before answering · wait 3 s · Dual Credit (Indiana College Core): ICC-WC-1.1, ICC-WC-1.3, ICC-WC-1.4, ICC-WC-1.5] Look for: Let his self pass into animals and things

   Answer guidance: He can leave his self and pass into other creatures and things. The line is "A heron flew over the bamboo forest—and Siddhartha accepted the heron into his soul" (With the Samanas, paragraph 6).
3. What does he conclude about these practices? [DOK 1 · Cold call with support: call on a student by name, offering a sentence starter or rephrasing if needed · wait 3 s · Dual Credit (Indiana College Core): ICC-WC-1.1, ICC-WC-1.3, ICC-WC-1.4, ICC-WC-1.5] Look for: They are only temporary escapes from the self

   Answer guidance: That they are only short escapes from the self, no better than a drunkard's: "What is meditation? What is leaving one's body?" (With the Samanas, paragraph 13) and his answer in paragraph 15 that he finds such escapes in himself as the drunkard does in wine.
4. Who is rumored to have attained enlightenment? [DOK 1 · Turn and Talk: students discuss briefly with a neighbor before answering · wait 3 s · Dual Credit (Indiana College Core): ICC-WC-1.1, ICC-WC-1.3, ICC-WC-1.4, ICC-WC-1.5] Look for: Gotama, the Buddha

   Answer guidance: Gotama, the Buddha. The rumour is introduced in With the Samanas, paragraph 28 and grows in paragraphs 29–32 ("The myth of Buddha sounded sweet," paragraph 31).
5. How does Siddhartha respond to the old Samana's anger? [DOK 1 · Cold call with support: call on a student by name, offering a sentence starter or rephrasing if needed · wait 3 s · Dual Credit (Indiana College Core): ICC-WC-1.1, ICC-WC-1.3, ICC-WC-1.4, ICC-WC-1.5] Look for: He silences him with his gaze

   Answer guidance: He fixes the old man with his gaze until the Samana falls silent and blesses their leaving: "Positioning himself closely in front of the Samana, with a concentrated soul, he captured the old man's glance" (With the Samanas, paragraph 41).
6. Retell the three most important events of "With the Samanas" in order, in one sentence each. [DOK 1 · Turn and Talk: students discuss briefly with a neighbor before answering · wait 3 s · Dual Credit (Indiana College Core): ICC-WC-1.1, ICC-WC-1.3, ICC-WC-1.4, ICC-WC-1.5] Look for: With the Samanas, Siddhartha learns fasting, enduring pain, and meditations that let his self pass into animals and objects. Yet after three years he concludes these are only escapes from the self, not true release. When rumors spread of Gotama, the Buddha, he and Govinda leave; Siddhartha masters the old Samana with his gaze before departing.

   Answer guidance: Siddhartha and Govinda join the Samanas and learn self-denial (With the Samanas, paragraphs 1–7); Siddhartha concludes these are only escapes (paragraphs 11–15, 20); news of Gotama arrives and they leave, Siddhartha overpowering the oldest Samana with his gaze (paragraphs 28, 39–41).

7. Which characters appear or are mentioned in "With the Samanas"? Name two and one thing each says or does. [DOK 1 · Cold call with support: call on a student by name, offering a sentence starter or rephrasing if needed · wait 3 s · Dual Credit (Indiana College Core): ICC-WC-1.1, ICC-WC-1.3, ICC-WC-1.4, ICC-WC-1.5] Look for: Names and actions taken from the chapter; check against the teacher summary.
   Answer guidance: Two of: Govinda, who defends the Samanas' progress ("We have learned, and we'll continue learning." (With the Samanas, paragraph 10)); the oldest Samana, who is angry at their leaving (paragraph 39); the absent Gotama, known only by rumour (paragraph 28).
8. Where and when does "With the Samanas" take place? Point to the line that tells you. [DOK 1 · Turn and Talk: students discuss briefly with a neighbor before answering · wait 3 s · Dual Credit (Indiana College Core): ICC-WC-1.1, ICC-WC-1.3, ICC-WC-1.4, ICC-WC-1.5] Look for: A place/time detail quoted from the chapter.
   Answer guidance: In the forest with the Samanas, over about three years. Time: "when the two young men had lived among the Samanas for about three years" (With the Samanas, paragraph 28); place: they beg in the villages from the forest (paragraph 9).
9. Reread: "How could you have learned meditation, holding your breath, insensitivity against hunger and pain there among these wretched people?" What does "insensitivity" mean here, and what is literally happening in this line? [DOK 1 · Turn and Talk: students discuss briefly with a neighbor before answering · wait 3 s · Dual Credit (Indiana College Core): ICC-WC-1.1, ICC-WC-1.3, ICC-WC-1.4, ICC-WC-1.5] Look for: insensitivity: lack of feeling; not being affected by something.
   Answer guidance: "Insensitivity" here means: lack of feeling; not being affected by something. In With the Samanas, paragraph 12, Govinda protests that the Samana skills, such as not feeling hunger and pain, could never be learned among drinkers and gamblers.
10. Reread: "And the young men returned the bows with thanks, returned the wish, went on their way with salutations." What does "salutations" mean here, and what is literally happening in this line? [DOK 1 · Turn and Talk: students discuss briefly with a neighbor before answering · wait 3 s · Dual Credit (Indiana College Core): ICC-WC-1.1, ICC-WC-1.3, ICC-WC-1.4, ICC-WC-1.5] Look for: salutations: greetings; polite words or gestures of greeting.
    Answer guidance: "Salutations" here means: greetings; polite words or gestures of greeting. In With the Samanas, paragraph 41, after the old Samana blesses them, the two friends bow, thank him and leave with polite greetings.

Inferential / analytical

1. What does "With the Samanas" suggest about self-denial as a path? State the inference and the line that supports it. [DOK 2 · Think-Pair-Share: students think alone, discuss with a partner, then share with the class · wait 5 s · Dual Credit (Indiana College Core): ICC-WC-1.1, ICC-WC-1.3, ICC-WC-1.4, ICC-WC-1.5] Look for: A stated inference (for example, that self-denial can become another way of not finding the self) backed by one located line, such as the one in With the Samanas, paragraph 7.
   Answer guidance: The chapter suggests self-denial can become another way of not finding the self. Support: "Siddhartha learned a lot when he was with the Samanas, many ways leading away from the self he learned to go." (With the Samanas, paragraph 7) "away from the self" is the key phrase.
2. Find one example of theme in this chapter. What does it reveal that a plain statement would not? [DOK 2 · Follow-up: ask a probing question that builds on the previous answer · wait 5 s · Dual Credit (Indiana College Core): ICC-WC-1.1, ICC-WC-1.3, ICC-WC-1.4, ICC-WC-1.5] Look for: Look for statements or moments that connect to the book's big ideas.

Answer guidance: The theme that discipline escapes rather than finds the self comes through his comparison with the drunkard (With the Samanas, paragraph 15): a plain statement would not show how close his practice is to what he despises.

3. How does the characterization in this chapter shape what we understand about self-denial as a path? [DOK 3 · Think-Pair-Share: students think alone, discuss with a partner, then share with the class · wait 8 s · Dual Credit (Indiana College Core): ICC-WC-1.1, ICC-WC-1.3, ICC-WC-1.4, ICC-WC-1.5] Look for: Look for what characters say, do and think, and how others react to them.

   Answer guidance: Govinda's steady faith ("We are not going around in circles, we are moving up, the circle is a spiral" (With the Samanas, paragraph 17)) sets off Siddhartha's doubt and shows that the path's value depends on the seeker, not the rules.

4. In the passage that begins "Many wonderful and unbelievable things were reported of him, he had performed miracles, had overcome the devil, had spoken to the gods.", why might Hesse have chosen these particular words? Pick two and explain their connotations. [DOK 2 · Follow-up: ask a probing question that builds on the previous answer · wait 5 s · Dual Credit (Indiana College Core): ICC-WC-1.1, ICC-WC-1.3, ICC-WC-1.4, ICC-WC-1.5] Look for: Diction analysis of two words in the anchor passage.

   Answer guidance: In With the Samanas, paragraph 30, "unbelievable" quietly questions the stories even as it repeats them, and "reported" marks them as rumour, not seen fact; the words let the reader feel both the wonder and the doubt that surround the Buddha.

5. What causes the main turn in "With the Samanas", and what effect is it likely to have on what follows? [DOK 2 · Follow-up: ask a probing question that builds on the previous answer · wait 5 s · Dual Credit (Indiana College Core): ICC-WC-1.1, ICC-WC-1.3, ICC-WC-1.4, ICC-WC-1.5] Look for: With the Samanas, Siddhartha learns fasting, enduring pain, and meditations that let his self pass into animals and objects. Yet after three years he concludes these are only escapes from the self, not true release. When rumors spread of Gotama, the Buddha, he and Govinda leave; Siddhartha masters…

   Answer guidance: The turn is his conclusion that the Samanas' way leads nowhere (paragraphs 20–22), brought to a head by the Buddha rumour (paragraph 28). Effect: he and Govinda leave to hear Gotama in the next chapter.

6. How does "With the Samanas" build on "The Son of the Brahmin"? Name one link of cause and effect. [DOK 3 · Think-Pair-Share: students think alone, discuss with a partner, then share with the class · wait 8 s · Dual Credit (Indiana College Core): ICC-WC-1.1, ICC-WC-1.3, ICC-WC-1.4, ICC-WC-1.5] Look for: A causal or structural link between this and the previous chapter.

   Answer guidance: Cause and effect: the discontent of "The Son of the Brahmin" (paragraph 8) sends him to the Samanas, whose path he now finds empty too, so the search moves on again. Link line: "Siddhartha gave his garments to a poor Brahmin in the street." (With the Samanas, paragraph 2)

7. What can we infer about a character's motives from what they say and do here, as opposed to what they claim? [DOK 3 · Follow-up: ask a probing question that builds on the previous answer · wait 8 s · Dual Credit (Indiana College Core): ICC-WC-1.1, ICC-WC-1.3, ICC-WC-1.4, ICC-WC-1.5] Look for: An inference about motive supported by a quoted line.

   Answer guidance: Siddhartha claims to want learning, but his mockery of the oldest Samana (paragraph 20) shows he already wants out; Govinda claims progress but is moved by loyalty and hope ("Your willingness delights my heart." (With the Samanas, paragraph 37)).

8. The bell-ringer asked: “Siddhartha calls the Samanas' practices a 'brief numbing.' Do you agree?” Now that we have read closely, how would you revise your first answer, and which line changed your mind? [DOK 2 · Think-Pair-Share: students think alone, discuss with a partner, then share with the class · wait 5 s · Dual Credit (Indiana College Core): ICC-WC-1.1, ICC-WC-1.3, ICC-WC-1.4, ICC-WC-1.5] Look for: A revised answer anchored in the text.
   Answer guidance: A revised answer should use his own words, “a short numbing of the senses” (With the Samanas, paragraph 13), and test them against paragraph 6, where his escapes into heron and jackal always end: he “awoke every time to find his old self again.”
9. Where does imagery appear, and how does it connect this chapter to the larger concern with experience versus teaching? [DOK 3 · Follow-up: ask a probing question that builds on the previous answer · wait 8 s · Dual Credit (Indiana College Core): ICC-WC-1.1, ICC-WC-1.3, ICC-WC-1.4, ICC-WC-1.5] Look for: Look for sensory details (sight, sound, cold, light) and what mood they create.
   Answer guidance: The heron and the decaying jackal (With the Samanas, paragraph 6) are vivid sensory images of leaving the self; they connect to the larger concern because they are experiences given by a teacher’s method, and each ends where it began.
10. Background: Asceticism—strict self-denial—was a widespread spiritual practice in ancient India. How does knowing this change the way you read one moment in the chapter? [DOK 3 · Think-Pair-Share: students think alone, discuss with a partner, then share with the class · wait 8 s · Dual Credit (Indiana College Core): ICC-WC-1.1, ICC-WC-1.3, ICC-WC-1.4, ICC-WC-1.5] Look for: A specific moment reread in light of the context.
    Answer guidance: Knowing asceticism was common and respected shows that Siddhartha’s doubt is radical: he questions a whole culture’s path, not a fad, as when he says the oldest Samana has not reached nirvana in sixty years (With the Samanas, paragraph 20).

Evaluative / synthesis / creative

1. A critic might argue: “Siddhartha discovers that discipline alone can become another form of illusion, a key turn in his quest.” How far do you agree? Take a stand and defend it with two lines from the chapter. [DOK 3 · Four Corners: students move to the corner that matches their position and explain why · wait 8 s · ICC-WC-1.5] Look for: A defended position with evidence and one counterpoint.
   Answer guidance: Agree: paragraph 7 says the ways he learned lead “away from the self” and paragraph 6 shows every escape returning to the old self. A counterpoint from the text is Govinda’s spiral (With the Samanas, paragraph 17), the view that slow progress is still progress.
2. Which character in this chapter acts most wisely, and which least? Judge them by a standard you name. [DOK 3 · Think-Pair-Share: students think alone, discuss with a partner, then share with the class · wait 8 s · ICC-WC-1.5] Look for: An evaluation using an explicit criterion and evidence.
   Answer guidance: Siddhartha acts most wisely if the standard is honesty about results (paragraph 20); the oldest Samana least, because he reacts with anger, not reasons (paragraph 39). Some will judge Govinda wisest for humility (paragraph 21).
3. Rewrite one moment of “With the Samanas” from the point of view of a different character. What does the new angle reveal or hide about self-denial as a path? [DOK 4 · Think-Pair-Share: students think alone, discuss with a partner, then share with the class · wait 8 s · Dual Credit (Indiana College Core): ICC-WC-1.1, ICC-WC-1.3, ICC-WC-1.4, ICC-WC-1.5] Look for: A rewrite that keeps the chapter’s events accurate, speaks in the chosen character’s voice, and ends with a sentence on what the new angle shows or hides.
   Answer guidance: Govinda’s view of the parting from the old Samana (With the Samanas, paragraphs 39–41) is a good choice: from his angle the gaze looks like magic (paragraph 42), which hides Siddhartha's own doubts.

4. Write three questions of your own about "With the Samanas": one recall, one "why/how", and one "should/what if". Trade with a partner and answer theirs. [DOK 3 · Student-generated: students write and pose their own questions · wait 8 s · Dual Credit (Indiana College Core): ICC-WC-1.1, ICC-WC-1.3, ICC-WC-1.4, ICC-WC-1.5] Look for: Three questions at three levels, each answerable from the chapter, traded and answered with a line.
   Answer guidance: Example set: recall, 'How long do they stay with the Samanas?' (about three years, paragraph 28); why/how, 'Why does Siddhartha doubt the Samanas?' (paragraph 20); what if, 'Should Govinda have stayed?'
5. Connect this chapter to the unity of all things: is the link strong or weak so far? What would Hesse need to show next to strengthen it? [DOK 4 · Socratic circle: an inner circle discusses while the outer circle listens and takes notes, then they switch · wait 8 s · ICC-WC-1.5] Look for: A judgment of thematic development across the work.
   Answer guidance: Only a hint so far: in meditation he becomes heron, jackal, stone and water (With the Samanas, paragraph 6), a first taste of oneness that is still escape, not insight. Hesse would need to show oneness found without leaving the self.
6. Is the theme in this chapter effective, or does it feel heavy-handed? Evaluate it as a reader would in a review. [DOK 3 · Four Corners: students move to the corner that matches their position and explain why · wait 8 s · ICC-WC-1.5] Look for: An evaluative judgment with criteria and evidence.
   Answer guidance: Effective because the theme is argued in dialogue (paragraphs 9–15, 17–23), not announced; it can feel heavy where Siddhartha's conclusions are stated outright, as in paragraph 15.
7. Compare how "With the Samanas" treats self-denial as a path with how another text, film or event you know treats a similar idea. What does Siddhartha see that the other misses? [DOK 4 · Socratic circle: an inner circle discusses while the outer circle listens and takes notes, then they switch · wait 8 s · ICC-WC-1.5] Look for: A cross-text synthesis.
   Answer guidance: A comparison should name a parallel discipline (extreme training or diet, a strict program) and quote paragraph 7's "away from the self" to show Siddhartha's particular objection: the discipline works, but it is escape.
8. Predict what "Gotama" will bring, using two clues from this chapter. After reading, evaluate your prediction. [DOK 3 · Think-Pair-Share: students think alone, discuss with a partner, then share with the class · wait 8 s · Dual Credit (Indiana College Core): ICC-WC-1.1, ICC-WC-1.3, ICC-WC-1.4, ICC-WC-1.5] Look for: A prediction or judgment justified with textual clues.
   Answer guidance: Clues: the Buddha rumour ("The myth of Buddha sounded sweet." (With the Samanas, paragraph 31)) and Siddhartha's doubt that any teaching can give what he seeks (paragraph 22). Prediction: they meet Gotama, and Siddhartha may again stand apart.
9. Design a one-paragraph modern adaptation of this chapter (setting, characters, conflict). What must stay the same for it to still be about self-denial as a path? [DOK 4 · Think-Pair-Share: students think alone, discuss with a partner, then share with the class · wait 8 s · Dual Credit (Indiana College Core): ICC-WC-1.1, ICC-WC-1.3, ICC-WC-1.4, ICC-WC-1.5] Look for: A modern setting, characters and conflict that keep the chapter's core idea, with the one element that must not change named.
   Answer guidance: A modern version keeps a seeker who masters a hard discipline and finds it leaves the self unchanged. What must stay is the moment of honest doubt, as in paragraph 20.
10. What question would you most like to ask Hermann Hesse about this chapter, and what answer do you think the text itself gives? [DOK 4 · Student-generated: students write and pose their own questions · wait 8 s · Dual Credit (Indiana College Core): ICC-WC-1.1, ICC-WC-1.3, ICC-WC-1.4, ICC-WC-1.5] Look for: A student-generated question answered from evidence.

Answer guidance: Example: 'Did Siddhartha waste three years?' The text answers no and yes: he learned real skills (With the Samanas, paragraph 42) but found them "leading away from the self" (paragraph 7).

Annotation focus

- Theme: look for statements or moments that connect to the book's big ideas (anchor passage in the We do segment)
- Also notice Characterization: what characters say, do and think, and how others react to them
- Also notice Imagery: sensory details (sight, sound, cold, light) and what mood they create

Chapter quiz: item bank (all eleven rigor versions)

1. [mc · recall · DOK 1] How often does Siddhartha eat while he lives with the Samanas?

   A. Rice and fresh fruit three times each day

   B. Only what Govinda cooks for him

   C. Only once a day, never anything cooked

   D. Nothing but milk and honey

   Key: C (Only once a day, never anything cooked)

2. [fill · recall · DOK 1] Fill in the blank with the vocabulary word that fits: "He'll turn seventy and eighty, and you and me, we will grow just as old and will do our exercises, and will fast, and will _____." Word bank: feast, meditate, gamble, trade

   Key: meditate

3. [mc · recall · DOK 1] Which word completes this sentence from With the Samanas, paragraph 32? "The myth had also _____ the Samanas in the forest, and also Siddhartha, and also Govinda, slowly, drop by drop, every drop laden with hope, every drop laden with doubt."

   A. forgotten

   B. avoided

   C. reached

   D. frightened

   Key: C (reached)

4. [mc · recall · DOK 1] In the line "It is fleeing from the self, it is a short escape of the agony of being a self, it is a short numbing of the senses against the pain and the pointlessness of life.", what does "numbing" most nearly mean?

   A. a boat that carries people across water

   B. chickens, ducks and similar birds raised for food

   C. tricks; false appearances

   D. a temporary loss of sensation

   Key: D (a temporary loss of sensation)

5. [mc · recall · DOK 1] According to paragraph 2, what is the longest Siddhartha fasts?

   A. Twenty-eight days

B. Three days

C. One hundred days

D. A single day

Key: A (Twenty-eight days)

6. [fill · recall · DOK 1] Complete the quotation from With the Samanas, paragraph 1: "In the evening of this day they caught up with the ascetics, the skinny Samanas, and offered them their _____ and—obedience." Word bank: money, companionship, scorn, weapons

   Key: companionship

7. [fill · recall · DOK 1] Fill in the blank with the vocabulary word that fits: "And Govinda _____ a verse to himself, a verse from an Upanishad:" Word bank: shouted, forgot, tore, mumbled

   Key: mumbled

8. [mc · recall · DOK 1] Where does Siddhartha say he could have learned the Samanas' arts more quickly?

   A. In the taverns, among carters and gamblers

   B. In his father's house, from the holy books

   C. In the city, from the merchants

   D. In the temple, from the priests

   Key: A (In the taverns, among carters and gamblers)

9. [fill · recall · DOK 1] Complete the quotation from With the Samanas, paragraph 5: "learned to _____ the beats of his heart, until they were only a few and almost none." Word bank: reduce, paint, bake, knit

   Key: reduce

10. [mc · recall · DOK 1] Which word completes this sentence from With the Samanas, paragraph 15? "But that I, Siddhartha, find only a short numbing of the senses in my exercises and _____ and that I am just as far removed from wisdom, from salvation, as a child in the mother's womb, this I know, O Govinda, this I know."

    A. feasts

    B. meditations

    C. riches

    D. games

    Key: B (meditations)

11. [mc · recall · DOK 1] In the line "the return was inevitable, inescapable was the hour, when he found himself back in the sunshine or in the moonlight", what does "inescapable" most nearly mean?

    A. easy to forget

    B. pleasant to wait for

    C. hidden from sight

    D. impossible to avoid

    Key: D (impossible to avoid)

12. [fill · recall · DOK 1] Fill in the blank with the vocabulary word that fits: "Verily, this made my chest ache when I breathed, and thought to myself: If only I would too, if only we both would too, Siddhartha and me, live to see the hour when we will hear the _____ from the mouth of this perfected man!" Word bank: insults, teachings, lies, threats

    Key: teachings

13. [short · inference · DOK 2] What can you infer from this line? “his mouth twitched with contempt when he walked through a city of nicely dressed people” (With the Samanas, paragraph 2) Answer in two or three sentences with one detail.
    Sample answer: As a Samana, Siddhartha has grown cold and scornful toward ordinary life. The evidence is “his mouth twitched with contempt when he walked through a city of nicely dressed people” (With the Samanas, paragraph 2). The twitching mouth and the word “contempt” show that his self-denial has turned into judgment of others.
14. [short · inference · DOK 2] What can you infer from this line? “A dead jackal was lying on the sandy bank” (With the Samanas, paragraph 6) Answer in two or three sentences with one detail.
    Sample answer: The jackal shows Siddhartha’s Samana practice of leaving his self: his soul slips into the carcass and lives through its decay. The detail shows how the Samanas try to escape the self by becoming other things, an escape that later proves only temporary. The evidence is “A dead jackal was lying on the sandy bank” (With the Samanas, paragraph 6).
15. [short · analysis · DOK 3] Claim: Siddhartha rejects the Samanas because their techniques escape the self rather than understanding it. Explain how this evidence supports the claim: “What I’ve learned, being among the Samanas, up to this day, this, O Govinda, I could have learned more quickly and by simpler means” (With the Samanas, paragraph 11).
    Sample answer: He says what he learned "I could have learned more quickly and by simpler means," because meditation, like drink, only provides a temporary escape. The evidence is “What I’ve learned, being among the Samanas, up to this day, this, O Govinda, I could have learned more quickly and by simpler means” (With the Samanas, paragraph 11), which shows his critique: their escape is no different from a drunkard's.
16. [mc · recall · DOK 1] In the line “We find comfort, we find numbness, we learn feats, to deceive others.”, what does “feats” most nearly mean?
    A. debts owed to others
    B. acts of great skill
    C. long prayers
    D. short journeys

    Key: B (acts of great skill)
17. [mc · recall · DOK 1] What does Siddhartha predict about the oldest Samana and the final goal of the Samanas’ striving?
    A. He will never reach it, however old he grows
    B. He will reach it within a year
    C. He has already reached it in secret
    D. He will reach it if Siddhartha stays to help

    Key: A (He will never reach it, however old he grows)
18. [fill · recall · DOK 1] Fill in the blank with the vocabulary word that fits: “But we will not reach the _____, he won’t and we won’t.” Word bank: market, nirvana, harbour, palace
    Key: nirvana
19. [fill · recall · DOK 1] Complete the quotation from With the Samanas, paragraph 5: “Siddhartha sat upright and learned to breathe _____, learned to get along with only few breaths” Word bank: wastefully, greedily, loudly, sparingly
    Key: sparingly
20. [fill · recall · DOK 1] Complete the quotation from With the Samanas, paragraph 22: “I have asked the Brahmins, year after year, and I have asked the holy Vedas, year after year, and I have asked the _____ Samanas, year after year." Word bank: baked, knitted, devoted, sneezed

Key: devoted

21. [mc · recall · DOK 1] Which word completes this sentence from With the Samanas, paragraph 41? "The old man became mute, his eyes became motionless, his will was _____, his arms were hanging down"

    A. strengthened

    B. doubled

    C. awakened

    D. paralysed

    Key: D (paralysed)

22. [mc · recall · DOK 1] In the line "Silently, he cowered in the thorny bushes, blood dripped from the burning skin", what does "cowered" most nearly mean?

    A. sang out loudly

    B. ran away quickly

    C. crouched down low

    D. stood up proudly

    Key: C (crouched down low)

23. [fill · recall · DOK 1] Complete the quotation from With the Samanas, paragraph 14: "You say so, O friend, and yet you know that Siddhartha is no driver of an oxcart and a Samana is no _____." Word bank: drunkard, river, mountain, tree

    Key: drunkard

24. [mc · recall · DOK 1] According to the reports, what had Gotama done?

    A. Ruled a great and wealthy kingdom in the north

    B. Written down the holy books of the Brahmins

    C. Lived for many years as a merchant in the city

    D. Performed miracles and overcome the devil

    Key: D (Performed miracles and overcome the devil)

25. [mc · recall · DOK 1] Which word completes this sentence from With the Samanas, paragraph 23? "what is holy, what is _____, what is venerable on earth?"

    A. rusty

    B. precious

    C. muddy

    D. splintered

    Key: B (precious)

26. [mc · recall · DOK 1] Where do the Samanas live?

    A. In the forest

    B. In the palace of a king

    C. In the merchant quarter of a city

    D. On boats along the river

    Key: A (In the forest)

27. [short · inference · DOK 2] What can you infer from this line? “Life was torture.” (With the Samanas, paragraph 2) Answer in two or three sentences with one detail.

    Sample answer: Siddhartha’s years of fasting have left him bitter and contemptuous instead of calm. The evidence is “Life was torture.” (With the Samanas, paragraph 2). The blunt three-word sentence, coming after he has scorned everyone he sees, shows that self-denial has turned into a hatred of life itself, a sign that this path cannot bring him peace.

28. [short · analysis · DOK 3] Claim: Siddhartha leaves the Samanas because their methods only numb the self for a while. Explain how this evidence supports the claim: “Silently, Siddhartha exposed himself to burning rays of the sun directly above, glowing with pain, glowing with thirst, and stood there, until he neither felt any pain nor thirst any more.” (With the Samanas, paragraph 4)

    Sample answer: The evidence supports the claim because the exercise works only by numbing: “Silently, Siddhartha exposed himself to burning rays of the sun directly above, glowing with pain, glowing with thirst, and stood there, until he neither felt any pain nor thirst any more.” (With the Samanas, paragraph 4). He stands in the sun “until he neither felt any pain nor thirst any more,” so the self is not overcome but only silenced for a while, which is why he later calls such exercises a flight from the self.

29. [mc · analysis · DOK 3] Which literary element does this describe in “With the Samanas”? With the Samanas, Siddhartha practises fasting and meditation so hard that he can leave his body and enter animals' lives, but always returns to himself.

    A. Theme

    B. Setting

    C. Hyperbole

    D. Characterization

    Key: D (Characterization)

30. [short · analysis · DOK 3] What does this line show about the Samana life, and how does its structure express it? “Feverish dreams flickered from his enlarged eyes, long nails grew slowly on his parched fingers and a dry, shaggy beard grew on his chin.” (With the Samanas, paragraph 2)

    Sample answer: The line shows that the Samana life is wasting Siddhartha’s body: “Feverish dreams flickered from his enlarged eyes, long nails grew slowly on his parched fingers and a dry, shaggy beard grew on his chin.” (With the Samanas, paragraph 2). The sentence is a list of slow changes, “flickered,” “grew slowly,” “grew,” so his neglect of the body seems to happen by itself, one detail after another.

31. [fill · recall · DOK 1] Complete the quotation from With the Samanas, paragraph 23: “And just consider: what would become of the sanctity of prayer, what of the _____ of the Brahmins’ caste, what of the holiness of the Samanas, if it was as you say, if there was no learning?” Word bank: poverty, venerability, shame, foolishness

    Key: venerability

32. [mc · recall · DOK 1] Where does Govinda meet someone who has seen the Buddha?

    A. At the river while bathing at dawn

    B. From the oldest Samana in the forest

    C. From a merchant on the road

    D. In a Brahmin’s house in the village

    Key: D (In a Brahmin’s house in the village)

33. [mc · recall · DOK 1] What does Siddhartha wear while he lives as a Samana?

    A. A Brahmin’s white robe

    B. Only a loincloth and an earth-coloured, unsown cloak

C. A merchant's fine silk garments

D. The yellow robe of Gotama's monks

Key: B (Only a loincloth and an earth-coloured, unsown cloak)

34. [fill · recall · DOK 1] Fill in the blank with the vocabulary word that fits: "But his enemies and disbelievers said, this Gotama was a vain seducer, he would spent his days in luxury, _____ the offerings" Word bank: honoured, counted, scorned, carried

    Key: scorned

35. [mc · recall · DOK 1] How does Siddhartha tell the oldest Samana that he and Govinda are leaving?

    A. With courtesy and modesty, as a student

    B. With anger, loud complaints and harsh words

    C. By leaving a letter for him in the night

    D. By sending Govinda alone to speak for him

    Key: A (With courtesy and modesty, as a student)

36. [fill · recall · DOK 1] Complete the quotation from With the Samanas, paragraph 36: "in which his voice assumed a touch of sadness and a touch of _____" Word bank: mockery, sawdust, gravel, plaster

    Key: mockery

37. [fill · recall · DOK 1] Complete the quotation from With the Samanas, paragraph 2: "The world tasted bitter. Life was _____." Word bank: torture, sugar, honey, candy

    Key: torture

38. [mc · recall · DOK 1] Which word completes this sentence from With the Samanas, paragraph 42? "It is hard, it is very hard to cast a _____ on an old Samana."

    A. bread

    B. spell

    C. door

    D. song

    Key: B (spell)

39. [mc · recall · DOK 1] In the line "spoke stammeringly a godly wish for a good journey", what does "stammeringly" most nearly mean?

    A. with smooth and easy speech

    B. with loud and angry speech

    C. with halting speech

    D. with quiet and sweet speech

    Key: C (with halting speech)

40. [fill · recall · DOK 1] Fill in the blank with the word that fits: "Occasionally the two of them went through the villages, to _____ for food for themselves and their teachers." Word bank: beg, sleep, dance, swim

    Key: beg

41. [short · inference · DOK 2] What can you infer from this line? "But the Samana became angry, because the two young men wanted to leave him, and talked loudly and used crude swear words." (With the Samanas, paragraph 39) Answer in two or three sentences with one detail.

    Sample answer: The oldest Samana has not overcome the very passions his discipline is meant to kill. The evidence is "But the Samana became angry, because the two young men wanted to leave him, and talked loudly and used crude swear words."

(With the Samanas, paragraph 39). After sixty years of self-denial he still flies into a rage and curses like an ordinary man, which confirms Siddhartha's judgment that the Samanas' path does not lead to peace.

42. [mc · analysis · DOK 3] Which literary element does this describe in "With the Samanas"? Three years pass in a few pages; the chapter turns when rumours of Gotama arrive.

    A. Structure

    B. Symbolism

    C. Point of view

    D. Personification

    Key: A (Structure)

43. [short · analysis · DOK 3] Claim: Siddhartha doubts the Samanas because even their wisest teacher has not reached the goal. Explain how this evidence supports the claim: "He has lived for sixty years and has not reached the nirvana." (With the Samanas, paragraph 20)

    Sample answer: The evidence supports the claim because the oldest Samana is living proof that the method fails: "He has lived for sixty years and has not reached the nirvana." (With the Samanas, paragraph 20). The plain number "sixty" measures how long the teacher has tried, and "has not reached" sets that whole life against its failure. If the best of them has not arrived, Siddhartha reasons, no amount of practice will carry him there either.

44. [short · analysis · DOK 3] What does Siddhartha learn about his escapes from the self, and how does the sentence's structure express it? "But though the ways led away from the self, their end nevertheless always led back to the self." (With the Samanas, paragraph 7)

    Sample answer: Siddhartha learns that every road away from the self brings him back to it. The evidence is "But though the ways led away from the self, their end nevertheless always led back to the self." (With the Samanas, paragraph 7). The sentence itself turns in a circle: it begins with "away from the self" and ends with "back to the self," so its shape mirrors the cycle he cannot escape.

45. [short · synthesis · DOK 4] Close reading: how do the diction and syntax of "A heron flew over the bamboo forest" (With the Samanas, paragraph 6) shape its meaning? Consider a second, competing reading.

    Sample answer: The sentence is short, plain and declarative, as light and passing as the bird: "A heron flew over the bamboo forest" (With the Samanas, paragraph 6). It opens the exercise in which Siddhartha takes the heron into his soul and lives as it, one of many ways the Samanas try to leave the self. A competing reading sees a real union with nature here, a moment in which the self truly dissolves. But the escape does not last, and he later judges the whole method harshly: "I could have learned more quickly and by simpler means" (With the Samanas, paragraph 11). The plain syntax fits a flight that is brief and ends where it began.

46. [fill · recall · DOK 1] Fill in the blank with the vocabulary word that fits: "I always _____ for knowledge, I have always been full of questions." Word bank: thirsted, paid, waited, worked

    Key: thirsted

47. [fill · recall · DOK 1] Fill in the blank with the vocabulary word that fits: "Govinda was startled and became _____." Word bank: rewarded, embarrassed, married, enriched

    Key: embarrassed

48. [mc · inference · DOK 2] What does this passage most clearly show? "He who ponderingly, of a purified spirit, loses himself in the meditation of Atman— Unexpressable by words is his blissfulness of his heart." (With the Samanas, paragraph 25)

    A. Govinda agrees that words cannot teach anything

    B. Govinda mocks Siddhartha with a children's rhyme

C. Govinda answers doubt by holding to holy words

D. Govinda asks the oldest Samana for advice

Key: C (Govinda answers doubt by holding to holy words)

49. [short · inference · DOK 2] Why does Siddhartha decide the Samanas' practice is only an escape? Use this line. “It is fleeing from the self, it is a short escape of the agony of being a self, it is a short numbing of the senses against the pain and the pointlessness of life.” (With the Samanas, paragraph 13)

Sample answer: He sees that meditation and fasting do not end the self, they only pause it: “It is fleeing from the self, it is a short escape of the agony of being a self, it is a short numbing of the senses against the pain and the pointlessness of life.” (With the Samanas, paragraph 13). The words "short escape" and "short numbing" stress that the relief is temporary, which is why he compares it to a drinker's escape and decides to leave.

50. [mc · inference · DOK 2] What does the oldest Samana’s age prove to Siddhartha?

A. Ascetics live unusually long lives

B. Patience is slowly rewarded with deep wisdom

C. The old man must be close to nirvana

D. Decades of practice have not reached nirvana

Key: D (Decades of practice have not reached nirvana)

51. [tf · inference · DOK 2] True or false: Once Siddhartha masters the exercises, his escapes into the non-self last for good.

Key: False (However often he leaves the self, “the return was inevitable.”)

52. [mc · inference · DOK 2] Why does the oldest Samana dislike the Buddha rumour?

A. He heard Gotama went back to luxury

B. He has met Gotama and disliked him

C. He thinks Gotama is a Brahmin spy

D. He fears plague carried by pilgrims

Key: A (He heard Gotama went back to luxury)

53. [tf · inference · DOK 2] True or false: Govinda fears Siddhartha’s doubts because they would leave nothing holy standing.

Key: True (He asks what would become of “all of this what is holy” if there were no learning.)

54. [tf · inference · DOK 2] True or false: Siddhartha leaves the Samanas because he has failed to master their exercises.

Key: False (Govinda reminds him that he learned every exercise quickly and the old Samanas admired him.)

55. [short · analysis · DOK 3] Claim: Siddhartha comes to see learning itself as an obstacle to the knowledge he seeks. Explain how this evidence supports the claim: “Perhaps, O Govinda, it had been just as well, had been just as smart and just as profitable, if I had asked the hornbill-bird or the chimpanzee.” (With the Samanas, paragraph 22)

Sample answer: The evidence supports the claim because Siddhartha treats all his years of asking as no better than asking animals: “Perhaps, O Govinda, it had been just as well, had been just as smart and just as profitable, if I had asked the hornbill-bird or the chimpanzee.” (With the Samanas, paragraph 22). Setting the Brahmins, Vedas and Samanas beside “the hornbill-bird or the chimpanzee” mocks learning itself, so that the search through teachers now looks like a detour from knowledge rather than a road to it.

56. [mc · analysis · DOK 3] Which literary element does this describe in "With the Samanas"? Siddhartha's eye turns to ice when he meets women, and his mouth twitches with contempt at well-dressed townspeople.

    A. Setting

    B. Characterization

    C. Alliteration

    D. Figurative language

    Key: B (Characterization)

57. [short · analysis · DOK 3] What does Govinda believe about their progress, and how does the image express it? "We are not going around in circles, we are moving up, the circle is a spiral, we have already ascended many a level." (With the Samanas, paragraph 17)

    Sample answer: Govinda believes that their years of practice are carrying them steadily upward. The evidence is "We are not going around in circles, we are moving up, the circle is a spiral, we have already ascended many a level." (With the Samanas, paragraph 17). He answers Siddhartha's fear of going in circles by reshaping the image into a "spiral," and the climbing words "moving up" and "ascended" express his patient faith in gradual progress, the opposite of Siddhartha's impatience.

58. [short · analysis · DOK 3] What does this question show about Siddhartha's doubts? "Yes, he thought, standing there with his head low, what would remain of all that which seemed to us to be holy?" (With the Samanas, paragraph 27) Consider a second, competing reading.

    Sample answer: Siddhartha begins to doubt that anything the Samanas hold holy will survive close thought. The evidence is "Yes, he thought, standing there with his head low, what would remain of all that which seemed to us to be holy?" (With the Samanas, paragraph 27). The phrase "seemed to us" shows that he now treats holiness as an appearance, and the lowered head suggests the weight of following Govinda's words "through to their end." A competing reading hears only despair, as if he were giving up on holiness. But he asks the question to test it, not to mock it, so his doubt is honest thinking that leaves him searching rather than lost.

59. [short · synthesis · DOK 4] Close reading: how do the diction and syntax of "to become empty, empty of thirst, empty of wishing, empty of dreams, empty of joy and sorrow" (With the Samanas, paragraph 3) shape its meaning? Consider a second, competing reading.

    Sample answer: The anaphora "empty of thirst, empty of wishing, empty of dreams, empty of joy and sorrow" (With the Samanas, paragraph 3) hollows the sentence out item by item, so the goal sounds like erasure rather than fulfilment. Because "joy" sits in the same list as "thirst," the method throws out the good with the bad. A competing reading treats the list as a sincere and beautiful statement of spiritual purity. But Siddhartha's own verdict on these years undercuts it: "I could have learned more quickly and by simpler means" (With the Samanas, paragraph 11). The emptiness he wins is only a temporary escape, which the repetitive, draining syntax already suggests.

60. [short · synthesis · DOK 4] Synthesis: trace how teaching versus experience develops from The Son of the Brahmin to With the Samanas. Use one quotation from each.

    Sample answer: In The Son of the Brahmin, wisdom comes as teaching: "Marvellous wisdom was in these verses, all knowledge of the wisest ones had been collected here in magic words" (The Son of the Brahmin, paragraph 9). The words "collected" and "magic words" present knowledge handed down rather than lived, and it has not given him the Atman. In With the Samanas he tests teaching against experience: "What I've learned, being among the Samanas, up to this day, this, O Govinda, I could have learned more quickly and by simpler means" (With the Samanas, paragraph 11). The comparison "more quickly" and "by simpler means" judges a method by what it actually yields. A competing reading treats the Samana years as pure experience, not teaching; but their exercises are themselves a method passed from teacher to pupil, so neither path gives him the self.

61. [fill · recall · DOK 1 · Dual Credit (Indiana College Core): ICC-WC-1.5] Complete the quotation from With the Samanas, paragraph 30: "It was as if the _____ had broken out in a country and news had been spreading around that in one or another place there was a man, a wise man, a knowledgeable one, whose word and breath was enough to heal everyone" Word bank: festival, plague, harvest, market

    Key: plague

62. [tf · inference · DOK 2 · Dual Credit (Indiana College Core): ICC-WC-1.5] True or false: Govinda believes that a Samana and a drunkard gain the same thing from escaping the self.

    Key: False (Govinda insists that "a Samana is no drunkard"; the drinker returns no wiser.)

63. [tf · inference · DOK 2 · Dual Credit (Indiana College Core): ICC-WC-1.5] True or false: The oldest Samana disapproves of the rumours about Gotama.

    Key: True (He "did not like this myth" and had heard that Gotama turned back to luxury.)

64. [match · inference · DOK 2 · Dual Credit (Indiana College Core): ICC-WC-1.5] Match each practice (1-4) to the result the chapter describes (A-D). Use each letter once.

    1. Standing under the noon sun
    2. Standing in the rainy season
    3. Learning to breathe sparingly
    4. Taking the heron into his soul

    A. "until they were only a few and almost none"
    B. "until he neither felt any pain nor thirst any more"
    C. "until he could not feel the cold in his shoulders and legs any more"
    D. "felt the pangs of a heron's hunger"

    Key: 1-B, 2-C, 3-A, 4-D

65. [tf · inference · DOK 2 · Dual Credit (Indiana College Core): ICC-WC-1.5] True or false: Siddhartha agrees to hear Gotama while doubting that any teacher's words can save him.

    Key: True (He says his "faith in words, which are brought to us by teachers, is small," yet he is "willing to listen to these teachings.")

66. [short · analysis · DOK 3 · Dual Credit (Indiana College Core): ICC-WC-1.5] Paragraph 7 says the ways that led away from the self "always led back" to it. Explain how this sentence supports Siddhartha's complaint in paragraph 15 that his exercises give him "a short numbing" and nothing more.

    Sample answer: The sentence gives the reason the numbing is short. The exercises do work for a time: "a thousand times he left his self, for hours and days he remained in the non-self" (With the Samanas, paragraph 7). But "their end nevertheless always led back to the self" (paragraph 7), and the return is "inevitable." So what the exercises deliver is an interval, not a change. That is exactly Siddhartha's complaint in paragraph 15: he finds "only a short numbing of the senses" and is "just as far removed from wisdom" as before. Paragraph 7 is the narrator's evidence; paragraph 15 is Siddhartha drawing the conclusion from it.

67. [mc · analysis · DOK 3 · Dual Credit (Indiana College Core): ICC-WC-1.5] Which literary element does this describe in "With the Samanas"? The rumour of Gotama spreads like news of a healer during an epidemic.

    A. Setting
    B. Simile
    C. Dialogue
    D. Irony

Key: B (Simile)

68. [short · analysis · DOK 3 · Dual Credit (Indiana College Core): ICC-WC-1.5] Paragraph 3 states the goal as being "Dead to himself," and then hopes that his ultimate part "had to awake." Explain the tension between dying to the self and waking the innermost self, and show how paragraph 7 tests it.

    Sample answer: The goal asks the self to die so that something deeper can wake. Siddhartha wants to be "Dead to himself, not to be a self any more" (With the Samanas, paragraph 3), yet the same paragraph promises that then "the ultimate part of me had to awake, the innermost of my being, which is no longer my self." The plan depends on a split between an ordinary self to be killed and an innermost self to be found. Paragraph 7 tests the split and it fails: the ways lead away from the self, but "their end nevertheless always led back to the self," and he "was once again his self and Siddhartha." What returns is the ordinary self, not the innermost one, so the dying never reaches the waking.

69. [mc · analysis · DOK 3 · Dual Credit (Indiana College Core): ICC-WC-1.5] Siddhartha's spell on the old Samana mainly shows…

    A. Mastery of feats he no longer values
    B. A wish to become a Samana teacher
    C. Revenge for the old man's crude insults
    D. Fear of the old man's sudden anger

    Key: A (Mastery of feats he no longer values)

70. [mc · analysis · DOK 3 · Dual Credit (Indiana College Core): ICC-WC-1.5] Ironically, before they have heard a word of his teaching, the "best fruit" Gotama has already given them is…

    A. Hope of ending the cycle of rebirth
    B. A cure for the sickness of the world
    C. Calling them away from their life in the forest
    D. Freedom from hunger, thirst and pain

    Key: C (Calling them away from their life in the forest)

71. [mc · analysis · DOK 3 · Dual Credit (Indiana College Core): ICC-WC-1.5] Govinda's "the circle is a spiral" answers which fear?

    A. That the Buddha's path is false
    B. That their old teachers will expel them both
    C. That their practice only circles back
    D. That nirvana is only for Brahmins

    Key: C (That their practice only circles back)

72. [mc · analysis · DOK 3 · Dual Credit (Indiana College Core): ICC-WC-1.5] The oxcart-driver comparison suggests meditation is…

    A. A sin equal to drunkenness
    B. A brief numbing, like drink
    C. Pleasant but harmful to the body
    D. A skill best learned in taverns

    Key: B (A brief numbing, like drink)

73. [short · synthesis · DOK 4 · Dual Credit (Indiana College Core): ICC-WC-1.5] Close reading: how do the diction and syntax of "The old man became mute, his eyes became motionless, his will was paralysed, his arms were hanging down" (With the Samanas, paragraph 41) shape its meaning? Consider a second, competing reading.

Sample answer: The sentence strips the old Samana of power one part at a time: "The old man became mute, his eyes became motionless, his will was paralysed, his arms were hanging down" (With the Samanas, paragraph 41). The list moves from voice to eyes to will to arms, each clause shorter and flatter, so the teacher seems to shut down piece by piece, and "paralysed" makes Siddhartha's spell almost violent. A competing reading takes the scene as proof that Siddhartha has mastered the Samanas' path. But he uses the feat only to leave, and soon after scorns such "feats" as tricks, so the diction shows a power he no longer values rather than a goal achieved.

74. [short · synthesis · DOK 4 · Dual Credit (Indiana College Core): ICC-WC-1.5] In The Son of the Brahmin, paragraph 9, Siddhartha looks for a wise man who brings his knowledge "into word and deed." In With the Samanas, paragraph 20, he says the oldest Samana has lived "sixty years" without reaching nirvana. Compare the two complaints: is this the same judgment applied to a new teacher?

Sample answer: It is the same judgment, applied with harsher evidence. In The Son of the Brahmin he admires the Brahmins' knowledge but asks where the man is who can bring it "into every step of the way, into word and deed?" (The Son of the Brahmin, paragraph 9); the test is whether a teacher lives what he knows. With the Samanas he applies the same test to a teacher of practice instead of learning, and the answer is worse: "He has lived for sixty years and has not reached the nirvana" (With the Samanas, paragraph 20). The father was a "thirsty man"; the oldest Samana is sixty years of thirst. What changes is the scope: in the first chapter he faults one tradition, while in the second he concludes that "perhaps not a single one" of the Samanas will reach the goal, which leads him toward doubting teachers as such.

75. [short · synthesis · DOK 4 · Dual Credit (Indiana College Core): ICC-WC-1.5] Paragraph 2 closes with two short sentences, "tasted bitter" and "Life was torture," after a long list that begins with "merchants trading." How do the diction and the sudden short sentences shape the meaning of his ascetic view? Consider a second, competing reading.

Sample answer: The long list and the two short sentences show the ascetic view as a verdict passed on the whole world at once. The list runs through every kind of life, "merchants trading, princes hunting, mourners wailing for their dead" and on to "mothers nursing their children" (With the Samanas, paragraph 2), and then judges it all in a rush of repetition: "it all lied, it all stank, it all stank of lies." After that flood, "The world tasted bitter. Life was torture." The short sentences sound final, like a sentence pronounced. The diction is of taste and smell, so the judgment is bodily, not reasoned. A competing reading takes the passage as the narrator's own view of the world. But the list includes healers and nursing mothers, which makes the verdict sound excessive, and the chapter goes on to show the view failing; the bitterness belongs to Siddhartha's stage, not to the book.

76. [fill · recall · DOK 1] Complete the quotation from With the Samanas, paragraph 31: "The myth of Buddha sounded sweet. The scent of _____ flowed from these reports." Word bank: smoke, magic, danger, money

Key: magic

77. [mc · inference · DOK 2] What does this passage most clearly show? "What I've learned, being among the Samanas, up to this day, this, O Govinda, I could have learned more quickly and by simpler means" (With the Samanas, paragraph 11)

A. His praise for the oldest Samana's wisdom and his long years of discipline.

B. His wish to stay with the Samanas for life.

C. His plan to become a teacher of fasting.

D. His critique: Samana exercises teach nothing a tavern could not.

Key: D (His critique: Samana exercises teach nothing a tavern could not.)

78. [mc · analysis · DOK 3] Paragraph 6 lists his lives as heron, jackal, "was stone," wood and water, and ends each journey with "his old self again". What does the shape of this list suggest?

    A. It turns each escape into a loop that ends where it began

    B. It shows his powers growing with every new form that he enters

    C. It hints that he prefers animal life to human company

    D. It marks the order in which the Samana rules are learned

    Key: A (It turns each escape into a loop that ends where it began)

79. [mc · analysis · DOK 3] The dead jackal's decay to dust mirrors…

    A. The cycle he seeks to escape

    B. The Samanas' cruelty to animals

    C. Govinda's loyalty

    D. The beauty of the forest

    Key: A (The cycle he seeks to escape)

80. [mc · analysis · DOK 3] Siddhartha's voice of sadness and mockery signals…

    A. Open contempt for Govinda as a person

    B. Disillusion turned ironic about the path

    C. Joy at leaving that he disguises as grief

    D. Fear of the oldest Samana

    Key: B (Disillusion turned ironic about the path)

81. [mc · analysis · DOK 3] The list of merchants, lovers and mothers in the town serves to show…

    A. His longing for ordinary pleasures

    B. The town's poverty and disease

    C. His contempt for all worldly life

    D. The Samanas' charity work

    Key: C (His contempt for all worldly life)

82. [mc · analysis · DOK 3] The plague simile casts Gotama as…

    A. A disease spreading through India

    B. A healer a sick world seeks

    C. A rumour no one believes

    D. A rival to the old Samana

    Key: B (A healer a sick world seeks)

83. [mc · analysis · DOK 3] The repeated "empty of" in his goal stresses…

    A. The hunger caused by long fasting

    B. The emptiness of Govinda's faith

    C. The total self-erasure he seeks

    D. The barren forest around them

    Key: C (The total self-erasure he seeks)

84. [short · analysis · DOK 3] Siddhartha says he could have learned the Samanas' arts "among carters and gamblers." What point does this provocation make?

Sample answer: He means that the exercises give the same thing as drink: “a short numbing of the senses” (With the Samanas, paragraph 13). By setting holy men beside carters and gamblers, he strips the practices of their prestige and judges them only by results. Since both end with a return to the unchanged self, he concludes that the long discipline has not brought him closer to wisdom.

85. [match · analysis · DOK 3] Match each image (1-4) to the idea it carries in the chapter (A-D). Use each letter once.

    1. “like a hunter in the gap” (paragraph 6)
    2. “the circle is a spiral” (paragraph 17)
    3. “as a child in the mother’s womb” (paragraph 15)
    4. “the hornbill-bird or the chimpanzee” (paragraph 22)

    A. Hope that practice rises instead of repeating
    B. Being no nearer to wisdom than at the start
    C. Waiting for a way out of the cycle
    D. Teachers no wiser than animals

    Key: 1-C, 2-A, 3-B, 4-D

86. [mc · analysis · DOK 3] Siddhartha now calls the Samanas’ exercises “fleeing from the self.” Which earlier goal does this judgment overturn?

    A. To win the oldest Samana’s lasting respect
    B. To prove Govinda wrong about all learning
    C. To become empty and dead to himself
    D. To return home one day as a holy man

    Key: C (To become empty and dead to himself)

87. [short · synthesis · DOK 3] Compare the goal in paragraph 3, calm with “an emptied heart,” with the “expecting vessel” of The Son of the Brahmin, paragraph 8. Has Siddhartha changed his idea of the self, or only reversed the method? Use both passages.

    Sample answer: He has reversed the method but kept the idea. In The Son of the Brahmin the teachers “had already filled his expecting vessel with their richness, and the vessel was not full” (The Son of the Brahmin, paragraph 8): the self is a container, and the hope is that the right content will fill it. With the Samanas the hope is the opposite, “to find tranquility with an emptied heart” (With the Samanas, paragraph 3): empty the container and the “innermost of my being” will appear. Both pictures treat the true self as something hidden inside that the right procedure, filling or emptying, will reach. So the change is one of technique, and the chapter shows that this technique fails too, since “their end nevertheless always led back to the self” (paragraph 7). A reader could argue that emptying is a real change, because it gives up on teachers; but the Samanas are teachers too, with their own “rules.”

88. [short · synthesis · DOK 4] Evaluate this reading: Siddhartha leaves the Samanas for the same reason he left his father. Test it against The Son of the Brahmin, paragraph 9 (his father as “a thirsty man”) and With the Samanas, paragraph 20 (“we find numbness”), and say where the parallel breaks down.

    Sample answer: The reading is right about the reason and wrong about the conclusion he draws. In both chapters the reason is that the guide has not reached the goal: his father, for all his learning, is “just a searching man, a thirsty man?” (The Son of the Brahmin, paragraph 9), and the Samanas, after sixty years, “find comfort, we find numbness, we learn feats” (With the Samanas, paragraph 20). But the parallel breaks in two places. First, the conclusion is larger: leaving his father, he trusts another path; leaving the Samanas, he doubts learning itself, “that there is nothing to be learned!” (paragraph 22). Second, the manner is opposite: he leaves his father by standing all night for permission and goes “to do as his father had said" (The Son of the Brahmin, paragraph 50), but he leaves the oldest Samana by taking away "his free will" (With the Samanas, paragraph 41). The same reason produces a harder break.

89. [short · synthesis · DOK 4] Paragraph 6 ends with "felt new thirst", and paragraph 16 asks whether they "live in a circle" while believing they escape the cycle. Analyze how the diction of paragraph 6 prepares the question in paragraph 16, and evaluate Govinda's answer in paragraph 17 that their circle is "a spiral".
Sample answer: Paragraph 6 builds the circle into its sentences before Siddhartha names it. The journeys end as he "awoke every time to find his old self again," "turned round in the cycle," and the last clause turns full circle in three verbs: "felt thirst, overcame the thirst, felt new thirst" (With the Samanas, paragraph 6). The word "cycle" here is the round of rebirth the Samanas hope to escape, and paragraph 16 turns it on them: "do we perhaps live in a circle—we, who have thought we were escaping the cycle?" (paragraph 16). Govinda's answer, "the circle is a spiral, we have already ascended many a level" (paragraph 17), is a real reply, because a spiral returns to the same point at a higher level. But it needs evidence of the rise, and Siddhartha supplies the opposite at once: the oldest Samana "has lived for sixty years and has not reached the nirvana" (paragraph 20). The diction of paragraph 6 has already shown a circle with no ascent.

90. [short · synthesis · DOK 4] Paragraph 13 is a chain of four questions, from "What is meditation?" to breath-holding, answered by a sentence that begins "It is fleeing." Analyze how the syntax builds his argument, and evaluate a competing reading that hears the passage as despair rather than argument.
Sample answer: The syntax builds an argument by reduction: many names, one answer. Four questions name the Samanas' disciplines one by one, "What is meditation? What is leaving one's body? What is fasting? What is holding one's breath?" (With the Samanas, paragraph 13), and a single answer collapses them: "It is fleeing from the self." The answer is then restated three times with growing precision, ending in "a short numbing of the senses against the pain and the pointlessness of life," and the comparison with the oxcart driver follows as evidence. That is the shape of a case. The despair reading is real: he speaks "quietly, as if he was talking to himself," and "pointlessness of life" is bleak. But despair would not make the careful parallel with the drinker or close on "This is how it is, O Govinda." The best reading is an argument spoken in a sad voice; the sadness is in the delivery, the logic in the syntax.

91. [fill · recall · DOK 1] Complete the quotation from With the Samanas, paragraph 8: "They rarely spoke to one another, than the service and the _____ required." Word bank: feasts, markets, games, exercises
Key: exercises

92. [mc · inference · DOK 2] Which choice best states how Siddhartha's view of learning changes in "With the Samanas"?

A. From doubt of teachers to trust in the oldest Samana
B. From trust in disciplined practice to doubt that anything can be learned
C. From love of Govinda to contempt for his weak faith
D. From hope in the Buddha to scorn for every rumour

Key: B (From trust in disciplined practice to doubt that anything can be learned)

93. [mc · analysis · DOK 3] Govinda first takes Siddhartha's claim about the taverns as a joke (paragraph 12). What does this reply show about Govinda?

A. He has simply misheard what Siddhartha said about the carters
B. He agrees in private but will not say so to his friend
C. He thinks Siddhartha wants to visit the taverns himself
D. He cannot take seriously a claim that would void his effort

Key: D (He cannot take seriously a claim that would void his effort)

94. [short · analysis · DOK 3] Explain Siddhartha's paradox that knowledge of Atman has "no worser enemy than the desire to know it".

    Sample answer: For Siddhartha there is "just one knowledge," Atman, which is already "within me and within you and within every creature" (With the Samanas, paragraph 22). Wanting to know it treats it as something outside to be acquired, and that striving keeps the seeker looking away from what is already present. So the more eagerly one studies, the farther one gets from the knowledge itself.

95. [mc · analysis · DOK 3] Govinda says the Samana differs from the drinker because the Samana…

    A. Returns wiser, having risen

    B. Loses the self for good

    C. Suffers more than the drinker

    D. Is protected by the gods

    Key: A (Returns wiser, having risen)

96. [mc · analysis · DOK 3] "I do not know, I've never been a drunkard" is best read as…

    A. A full retreat from his claim

    B. A wry concession that keeps his point

    C. An insult aimed squarely at Govinda himself

    D. An admission he has drunk rice wine

    Key: B (A wry concession that keeps his point)

97. [mc · analysis · DOK 3] Siddhartha's claim that Govinda would stay with the Samanas until sixty is…

    A. Real anger at Govinda's disloyalty

    B. Sincere regret at losing his oldest friend

    C. Gentle mockery of Govinda's new eagerness

    D. Fear of what the Buddha will teach

    Key: C (Gentle mockery of Govinda's new eagerness)

98. [short · analysis · DOK 3] What does the dead-jackal passage add that the heron passage does not?

    Sample answer: The heron passage is a flight of life: he "flew over forest and mountains" and shares the bird's hunger. The jackal passage follows a body through death and decay until it is "blown across the fields" (With the Samanas, paragraph 6). Together they show him entering the whole cycle of life and death, yet he always awakes "to find his old self again," so even total self-loss is temporary.

99. [match · analysis · DOK 3] Match each quotation (1-4) to the stage of Siddhartha's view of the Samanas that it marks (A-D). Use each letter once.

    1. "A goal stood before Siddhartha, a single goal" (paragraph 3)
    2. "I could have learned more quickly and by simpler means" (paragraph 11)
    3. "there is nothing to be learned!" (paragraph 22)
    4. "Let old Samanas be content with such feats!" (paragraph 43)

    A. Doubt that the practice is worth the effort

    B. Rejection of learning itself

    C. Contempt for powers without wisdom

    D. Early hope in self-denial

    Key: 1-D, 2-A, 3-B, 4-C

100. [mc · analysis · DOK 3] Why does the chapter report both praise and slander of Gotama?

    A. To show that the Samanas cannot be trusted

    B. To keep his worth uncertain until he is finally met

    C. To prove that the rumours are mostly false

    D. To mock the Brahmins who repeat such gossip

    Key: B (To keep his worth uncertain until he is finally met)

101. [short · analysis · DOK 3] Why do Siddhartha's doubts about learning frighten Govinda so much? Quote him.

    Sample answer: If there is no learning, Govinda asks, what would become of "the sanctity of prayer" and "the holiness of the Samanas" (With the Samanas, paragraph 23)? For him, learning holds up the whole sacred order, so Siddhartha's doubt threatens everything he lives by. He answers not with an argument but with a verse, which shows that he relies on faith where Siddhartha relies on his own experience.

102. [short · synthesis · DOK 4] In paragraph 7 every way out of the self ends by leading "back to the self." Is this return a failure of the Samanas' method, or evidence of something the method cannot see? Argue one reading and answer the other.

    Sample answer: Read as failure, the return is the method breaking down: Siddhartha goes into "the animal, in the stone," but "the return was inevitable" and he again feels "the agony of the cycle" (With the Samanas, paragraph 7). The goal was to stay "Dead to himself" (paragraph 3), and he never can. But the stronger reading treats the return as evidence. The self that keeps coming back "in the sunshine or in the moonlight" is the one thing the method treats as an enemy, and its persistence suggests that it is not an error to be escaped but the thing he has to understand. The narrator calls the cycle "forced upon him," which supports the first reading; the chapter's later doubts about all teaching, and his choice to leave, support the second.

103. [short · synthesis · DOK 4] Paragraph 4 repeats "Silently" and builds each sentence toward an "until" clause. What do the "until" clauses suggest the practices aim at, and how does Siddhartha's later judgment in paragraph 13 recast that aim?

    Sample answer: Each sentence of paragraph 4 runs toward the moment feeling stops: he stands in the sun "until he neither felt any pain nor thirst any more," in the rain until his limbs "were silent," in the thorns "until nothing stung any more" (With the Samanas, paragraph 4). The goal written into the syntax is absence, not insight; "Silently" at the head of each sentence makes the whole discipline a practice of muting. In paragraph 13 Siddhartha names that aim for what it is: "a short numbing of the senses against the pain and the pointlessness of life," the same thing a carter finds in rice wine. The grammar of paragraph 4 already showed what the exercises achieve, an end point where nothing is felt, and paragraph 13 adds that the end point does not last.

104. [mc · synthesis · DOK 4] In The Son of the Brahmin, Siddhartha's complaint is that no teacher lives what he knows; among the Samanas he lives a discipline completely. What does With the Samanas add to his earlier complaint?

    A. That his complaint was really a judgment on Govinda's weaker faith

    B. That the Brahmin rituals were right and he should go home

    C. That a discipline fails when the teacher who sets it grows old

    D. That even a teaching lived in full can leave the self untouched

    Key: D (That even a teaching lived in full can leave the self untouched)

105. [short · synthesis · DOK 4] Does Siddhartha's spell on the old Samana contradict what he has said about the Samanas' feats? Argue one side and answer the other.

    Sample answer: It looks like a contradiction: he has called their skills mere escape, yet he uses one to win a respectful farewell, saying, "Now, I want to show the old man that I've learned something from him" (With the Samanas, paragraph 40). But the scene supports his argument, because he masters the feat and still dismisses it: "Let old Samanas be content with such feats!" (paragraph 43). The spell proves that the skills are real and that real skill is not wisdom. A reader may still find the act proud, since it bends another man's will, and Hesse lets that pride stand as a sign of how far Siddhartha is from peace.

106. [fill · recall · DOK 1] Fill in the blank with the word that fits: "He had heard that this _____ Buddha used to be an ascetic before and had lived in the forest, but had then turned back to luxury and worldly pleasures."
Word bank: alleged, wooden, frozen, painted
Key: alleged

107. [mc · inference · DOK 2] What does this passage most clearly show? "to become empty, empty of thirst, empty of wishing, empty of dreams, empty of joy and sorrow" (With the Samanas, paragraph 3)
A. His goal is to empty himself of every desire and feeling.
B. His longing for the wealth and comfort he gave up when he left home.
C. His wish to return home to his father.
D. His longing to hear the Buddha preach.
Key: A (His goal is to empty himself of every desire and feeling.)

108. [mc · inference · DOK 2] Which choice best states how "With the Samanas" ends?
A. Siddhartha bends the old Samana to his will and leaves with Govinda
B. Siddhartha becomes the leader of the Samanas
C. Govinda leaves alone while Siddhartha stays in the forest
D. The Samanas drive both young men away in anger
Key: A (Siddhartha bends the old Samana to his will and leaves with Govinda)

109. [mc · inference · DOK 2] What does this passage most clearly show? "Though Siddhartha fled from the self a thousand times, stayed in nothingness, stayed in the animal, in the stone, the return was inevitable" (With the Samanas, paragraph 7)
A. He has learned to turn into animals at will.
B. He prefers the life of animals to human life.
C. However often he leaves himself, he must come back.
D. He has finally escaped the self for good.
Key: C (However often he leaves himself, he must come back.)

110. [mc · analysis · DOK 3] Paragraph 3 moves from the third person ("A goal stood before") to the first ("all of my self"). What does the shift into the first person do?
A. It shows that Govinda is the one now speaking
B. It marks the moment when he turns away from the Samanas' goal
C. It quotes a Samana rule that he has learned by heart
D. It lets us hear the goal as his own vow, not a report
Key: D (It lets us hear the goal as his own vow, not a report)

111. [match · analysis · DOK 3] Match each line (1-4) to the view of the Samanas' practice it expresses (A-D). Use each letter once.
1. Govinda: "We have learned, and we'll continue learning." (paragraph 10)

2. Siddhartha: “We find comfort, we find numbness, we learn feats, to deceive others.” (paragraph 20)
3. Govinda: “a Samana is no drunkard” (paragraph 14)
4. Siddhartha: “a short numbing of the senses” (paragraph 13)

A. Practice as a show put on for onlookers
B. Discipline is not mere escape
C. Exercise and drink give the same relief
D. Faith in steady progress

Key: 1-D, 2-A, 3-B, 4-C

112. [short · synthesis · DOK 3] Siddhartha compares the Samanas’ meditation to the carter’s rice wine (paragraph 13). Govinda answers that the two are not alike. Who has the stronger case? Argue one side and answer the other.

Sample answer: Govinda’s reply is an argument from results, and the chapter’s evidence answers it. Siddhartha calls the exercises “a short numbing of the senses against the pain and the pointlessness of life” (With the Samanas, paragraph 13), the same thing the oxcart driver finds in rice wine. Govinda grants the numbing but denies that the outcome is the same: the drinker will “return from the delusion, finds everything to be unchanged, has not become wiser, has gathered no enlightenment—has not risen several steps” (paragraph 14), which implies that the Samana does rise. That is the right test, a lasting gain, and Siddhartha answers it on Govinda’s own terms. He says that he is “just as far removed from wisdom, from salvation, as a child in the mother’s womb” (paragraph 15), and when Govinda insists that “we have already ascended many a level” (paragraph 17), Siddhartha points to their teacher: “He has lived for sixty years and has not reached the nirvana” (paragraph 20). If sixty years of exercises leave the oldest Samana short of the goal, the rise Govinda claims has not appeared. Siddhartha has the stronger case on the evidence; Govinda’s reply holds only if one trusts a gain that no one around them shows.

113. [short · synthesis · DOK 4] Thirst runs from The Son of the Brahmin (“the spirit’s thirst”, paragraph 8) into With the Samanas (“my thirst has remained as strong as ever”, paragraph 22). Does the Samanas’ training change what Siddhartha thirsts for, or show that the thirst cannot be trained away? Use a passage from each chapter.

Sample answer: The training does not change the object of the thirst; it shows that the thirst outlasts every method. At home the ablutions “did not heal the spirit’s thirst” (The Son of the Brahmin, paragraph 8), and the thirst was for the self, the Atman “in one’s own self.” Among the Samanas the goal is to become “empty of thirst” (With the Samanas, paragraph 3), and he can master bodily thirst in the sun “until he neither felt any pain nor thirst any more” (paragraph 4). Yet he “felt thirst, overcame the thirst, felt new thirst” (paragraph 6), and in paragraph 22 he says his thirst has “remained as strong as ever.” The Samanas can silence the body’s thirst, but not the spirit’s, which is still the old thirst for the self. That is why the chapter ends with him leaving again.

114. [mc · synthesis · DOK 4] Across the chapter, the Samanas’ path fails because it…

A. Is too gentle on the body
B. Lacks a wise enough teacher
C. Neglects the gods and their offerings
D. Flees the self instead of knowing it

Key: D (Flees the self instead of knowing it)

115. [mc · synthesis · DOK 4] The chapter receives the Buddha rumour with…

A. Belief that ends in conversion
B. Hope and doubt in equal measure

C. Scorn shared by everyone

D. Fear of the plague it is said to bring

Key: B (Hope and doubt in equal measure)

116. [mc · synthesis · DOK 4] What is the irony in how his three years with the Samanas end?

A. Failure to learn their exercises

B. Mastery that proves its own emptiness

C. Expulsion by the old Samana for disobedience

D. A return to the Brahmins' rites

Key: B (Mastery that proves its own emptiness)

117. [short · synthesis · DOK 4] What role does Govinda play in this chapter? Support your answer with two passages.

Sample answer: Govinda voices the faith that Siddhartha questions. He insists, "We are not going around in circles, we are moving up" (With the Samanas, paragraph 17), and when doubt goes too far he fears for everything holy "if there was no learning" (paragraph 23). As a foil, he makes Siddhartha's restlessness visible by contrast. His eagerness to hear Gotama finally moves both friends on, so the believer, not the doubter, starts the next stage.

118. [mc · synthesis · DOK 4] A cycle "forced upon him" frames the self as…

A. A gift he is wasting

B. A burden effort cannot shed

C. An illusion already dispelled

D. A punishment for sin

Key: B (A burden effort cannot shed)

119. [short · synthesis · DOK 4] Siddhartha claims "there is nothing to be learned," yet says it took him "a long time" to learn this. Is his position self-defeating?

Sample answer: On its face it is: he admits, "It took me a long time and am not finished learning this yet" (With the Samanas, paragraph 22), so his rejection of learning is itself something learned. But he separates two kinds of knowing: there is "just one knowledge," Atman, which is everywhere and cannot be taught, while learning means collecting doctrines. Read this way, he has learned the limits of learning, not a doctrine. The tension remains, and it explains why he still agrees to hear Gotama.

120. [short · synthesis · DOK 4] Siddhartha predicts that perhaps not one Samana will ever reach the final goal. What evidence leads him there, and is the leap justified?

Sample answer: His first evidence is the oldest Samana: "He has lived for sixty years and has not reached the nirvana" (With the Samanas, paragraph 20). From one teacher he generalizes to all Samanas, which is a leap. But he also draws on his own experience that every escape ends in a return to the self, so the conclusion rests on more than one case. The leap is bold but not baseless, and Govinda's shocked reply shows how deeply it challenges their world.

121. [fill · recall · DOK 1] Fill in the blank with the word that fits: "By his side lived Govinda, his shadow, walked the same paths, undertook the same _____." Word bank: efforts, kettles, pebbles, ladders

Key: efforts

122. [short · inference · DOK 2] What can you infer from this line? "I do not seek to walk on water," said Siddhartha. (With the Samanas, paragraph 43) Answer in two or three sentences with one detail.

Sample answer: Siddhartha has no interest in the miraculous powers that impress Govinda; he wants inner truth, not feats. The evidence is "I do not seek to walk on water," said Siddhartha. (With the Samanas, paragraph 43). Even after he has just cast a spell on the old Samana, he dismisses such marvels as tricks for old men to be content with, which shows that he now sees the Samanas' achievements as empty display rather than wisdom.

123. [mc · inference · DOK 2] What does this passage most clearly show? "He saw merchants trading, princes hunting, mourners wailing for their dead, whores offering themselves, physicians trying to help the sick" (With the Samanas, paragraph 2)

    A. He looks down on all of ordinary human life.

    B. He wishes to become a merchant or a prince.

    C. He pities the mourners and wants to help them.

    D. He is studying the trades to choose his own.

    Key: A (He looks down on all of ordinary human life.)

124. [mc · analysis · DOK 3] Under Siddhartha's spell the old Samana bows, blesses the two young men and wishes them "a good journey" (paragraph 41). What is ironic about the blessing?

    A. A man who cursed their leaving is made to bless it against his will

    B. A man who resented their leaving had secretly hoped they would go

    C. A man who taught them his rules shows those rules still bind them

    D. A man who feared their leaving finds some relief in blessing the journey

    Key: A (A man who cursed their leaving is made to bless it against his will)

125. [short · analysis · DOK 3] Explain the plague simile in paragraph 30, and why the narrator calls the rumour a "fragrant myth."

    Sample answer: The rumour spreads "as if the plague had broken out in a country" and a healer had been found (With the Samanas, paragraph 30): the world is the patient and Gotama the cure. Calling it a "fragrant myth" stresses its sweetness and pull while hinting that a scent is not yet substance. The simile explains why so many set out at once, and why Siddhartha, too, is drawn despite his doubts.

126. [match · analysis · DOK 3] Match each phrase (1-4) to the view of the world it expresses (A-D). Use each letter once.

    1. "it all stank of lies" (paragraph 2)
    2. "the world was sick, life was hard to bear" (paragraph 31)
    3. "a vain seducer" (paragraph 30)
    4. "the path of paths" (paragraph 20)

    A. The disbelievers' case against Gotama

    B. The longing that gives the rumour its power

    C. Siddhartha's ascetic contempt for ordinary life

    D. The one thing no practice has found

    Key: 1-C, 2-B, 3-A, 4-D

127. [short · synthesis · DOK 4] Siddhartha says he might as well have put his questions to a "hornbill-bird" (paragraph 22), in a voice the narrator calls equally sad and mocking. Is the joke a serious argument? Weigh what it claims against the tone in which it is spoken.

    Sample answer: The joke carries a serious claim. Putting the Brahmins, "the holy Vedas" and "the devoted Samanas" beside "the hornbill-bird or the chimpanzee" (With the Samanas, paragraph 22) says that years of asking produced no more knowledge of the self than asking animals would, which prepares his conclusion "that there is nothing to be learned." But the narrator frames the speech as "a voice which contained just as much sadness as mockery" (paragraph 22), so the mockery is turned on himself too: he is the one who asked "year after year." The exaggeration is a way to say something painful without self-pity. It is serious as a verdict on learning and sad as a confession of wasted years, and the tone keeps Govinda, and the reader, from hearing it as mere contempt.

128. [short · synthesis · DOK 4] Siddhartha leaves his father and the Samanas in very different ways: he waits all night for his father's consent, but he compels the old Samana with a spell. Does the difference show growth or loss? Argue from both scenes and answer the other reading.

Sample answer: The difference reads more as loss than growth. At home he refuses to leave without consent and stands until the father sees that "he had already left him" (The Son of the Brahmin, paragraph 47); his will wins, but by patience, and the blessing is given freely. With the Samanas he "took away his free will, subdued him under his own will" (With the Samanas, paragraph 41) and takes the blessing by force, after whispering that he wants "to show the old man that I've learned something from him" (paragraph 40). The man who once waited now commands. The growth reading has a point: the old Samana is angry and abusive, so Siddhartha protects Govinda and leaves with courtesy, and he dismisses the feat at once ("Let old Samanas be content with such feats!", paragraph 43). But the dismissal comes after he has used it. Both scenes show a will that will not bend, and the second shows what it can do to another person.

129. [mc · synthesis · DOK 4] What undercuts his claim that there is nothing to be learned?

A. He had not asked the Vedas
B. Govinda refutes it outright
C. He learned it over a long time
D. He stays with the old Samana

Key: C (He learned it over a long time)

130. [mc · synthesis · DOK 4] The oxcart-driver comparison collapses which distinction?

A. Rich seekers versus poor and humble ones
B. Brahmins versus Samanas
C. Spiritual discipline versus mere escape
D. The body versus the memory

Key: C (Spiritual discipline versus mere escape)

131. [mc · synthesis · DOK 4] The chapter treats the Samanas' powers as…

A. Illusions with no real effect on anyone
B. Real, but beside the spiritual point
C. The true goal of all practice
D. Proof of nearness to nirvana

Key: B (Real, but beside the spiritual point)

132. [mc · synthesis · DOK 4] His distrust of teachers is complicated by…

A. His loyalty to his father
B. His agreeing to hear Gotama
C. His love for the old Samana
D. His refusal to beg

Key: B (His agreeing to hear Gotama)

133. [mc · synthesis · DOK 4] By the chapter's end, Gotama's worth is…

A. Proven beyond doubt by his many miracles

B. Known only by conflicting report

C. Disproven by his luxury

D. Settled by the old Samana

Key: B (Known only by conflicting report)

134. [short · synthesis · DOK 4] Evaluate this claim: among the Samanas, Siddhartha learns nothing. Use the chapter to qualify it.

Sample answer: The claim captures Siddhartha's own verdict: he says he is as far from wisdom "as a child in the mother's womb" (With the Samanas, paragraph 15). But it overstates the case. He learns fasting, breathing and even the power to subdue the old Samana, and above all he learns that escape from the self always ends in return, a lesson that shapes his choice to leave and his distrust of teachers. The better claim is that he learns no doctrine that saves, but learns by experience what does not.

135. [mc · synthesis · DOK 4] Leaving, Siddhartha says, "Let old Samanas be content with such feats!" (With the Samanas, paragraph 43). What does the remark show?

A. He plans to return and lead the Samanas one day

B. He is ashamed that Govinda saw him lose his temper

C. He believes the feats will help him with Gotama

D. He scorns the very powers he has just used on the old man

Key: D (He scorns the very powers he has just used on the old man)

Rigor version	Items (in order)	Mix
HS Sophomore	1, 2, 3, 4, 5, 6, 7, 8, 9, 10, 11, 12, 13, 14, 15	recall 12, inference 2, analysis 1, synthesis 0
HS Junior	16, 17, 18, 19, 20, 21, 22, 23, 24, 25, 26, 27, 28, 29, 30	recall 11, inference 1, analysis 3, synthesis 0
HS Senior	31, 32, 33, 34, 35, 36, 37, 38, 39, 40, 41, 42, 43, 44, 45	recall 10, inference 1, analysis 3, synthesis 1
AP	46, 47, 48, 49, 50, 51, 52, 53, 54, 55, 56, 57, 58, 59, 60	recall 2, inference 7, analysis 4, synthesis 2
College Freshman	61, 62, 63, 64, 65, 66, 67, 68, 69, 70, 71, 72, 73, 74, 75	recall 1, inference 4, analysis 7, synthesis 3
College Sophomore	76, 77, 78, 79, 80, 81, 82, 83, 84, 85, 86, 87, 88, 89, 90	recall 1, inference 1, analysis 9, synthesis 4
College Junior	91, 92, 93, 94, 95, 96, 97, 98, 99, 100, 101, 102, 103, 104, 105	recall 1, inference 1, analysis 9, synthesis 4
College Senior	106, 107, 108, 109, 110, 111, 112, 113, 114, 115, 116, 117, 118, 119, 120	recall 1, inference 3, analysis 2, synthesis 9
Graduate / PhD	121, 122, 123, 124, 125, 126, 127, 128, 129, 130, 131, 132, 133, 134, 135	recall 1, inference 2, analysis 3, synthesis 9

Writing prompts (eleven rigor levels)

HS Sophomore (450 words; Dual Credit (Indiana College Core): ICC-WC-1.1, ICC-WC-1.3, ICC-WC-1.4, ICC-WC-1.5): Analyze how With the Samanas develops the idea of self-denial as a path. Make a precise claim, support it with at least three pieces of textual evidence, and explain how the author's use of theme and characterization shapes that idea. Address one possible counterclaim. (You are reading the English translation by Gunther Olesch, Anke Dreher, Amy Coulter, Stefan Langer and Semyon Chaichenets, so word-choice evidence is the translators' English.)

HS Junior (550 words; Dual Credit (Indiana College Core): ICC-WC-1.1, ICC-WC-1.3, ICC-WC-1.4, ICC-WC-1.5): Analyze how the structure of With the Samanas (where it begins, turns and ends) and its theme shape the reader's understanding of self-denial as a path. Identify one place where the text leaves matters uncertain and explain how that uncertainty adds to its meaning.

HS Senior (600 words; Dual Credit (Indiana College Core): ICC-WC-1.1, ICC-WC-1.3, ICC-WC-1.4, ICC-WC-1.5): Two readers disagree about what With the Samanas suggests about self-denial as a path. Lay out two plausible interpretations, weigh the evidence for each (including the chapter's theme and characterization), and argue for the stronger one in a sustained, well-organized essay.

AP (650 words; Dual Credit (Indiana College Core): ICC-WC-1.1, ICC-WC-1.3, ICC-WC-1.4, ICC-WC-1.5): Write a literary argument in which you analyze how Hermann Hesse uses theme in With the Samanas to complicate the reader's understanding of self-denial as a path. Develop a defensible thesis, select evidence purposefully, and explain how specific choices of diction and syntax create meaning.

College Freshman (1000 words; Dual Credit (Indiana College Core): ICC-WC-1.3, ICC-WC-1.5, ICC-WC-1.1): Situate With the Samanas within its historical and literary context and argue how the chapter's treatment of self-denial as a path responds to that context. Engage with at least one secondary perspective (a critic, historian or the author's own statements), integrate quotations smoothly, and cite in APA style.

College Sophomore (1250 words; Dual Credit (Indiana College Core): ICC-WC-1.1, ICC-WC-1.3, ICC-WC-1.4, ICC-WC-1.5): Read With the Samanas alongside the conventions of its genre and period. Argue how the chapter's handling of self-denial as a path follows or bends those conventions, using the theme as evidence, and test your reading against one published critic. Document two secondary sources in APA.

College Junior (1500 words; Dual Credit (Indiana College Core): ICC-WC-1.1, ICC-WC-1.3, ICC-WC-1.4, ICC-WC-1.5): Apply a named critical approach (for example formalist, historicist, feminist, psychoanalytic or ecocritical) to With the Samanas and its treatment of self-denial as a path. State your method, show what it reveals in the chapter's theme and characterization, and identify where the text resists it.

College Senior (2000 words; Dual Credit (Indiana College Core): ICC-WC-1.1, ICC-WC-1.3, ICC-WC-1.4, ICC-WC-1.5): Develop a research argument that reads With the Samanas as evidence for a larger claim about self-denial as a path in Siddhartha. Connect close reading of the chapter to the whole novel, engage at least four scholarly sources, and state precisely where your reading departs from theirs (Chicago style).

Graduate / PhD (2500 words; Dual Credit (Indiana College Core): ICC-WC-1.1, ICC-WC-1.3, ICC-WC-1.4, ICC-WC-1.5): Develop an original argument that reads With the Samanas as a hinge in the novel's larger treatment of self-denial as a path. Position your reading within a named critical conversation (for example formalist, historicist, psychoanalytic, feminist or postcolonial approaches), account for the textual history where relevant, and articulate the stakes of your intervention for scholarship on Siddhartha.

SAT-style questions

1. Silently, he cowered in the thorny bushes, blood dripped from the burning skin, from festering wounds dripped pus, and Siddhartha stayed rigidly, stayed motionless, until no blood flowed any more, until nothing stung any more, until nothing burned any more.

   As used in the text, what does the word "festering" most nearly mean?

   A. infected and full of pus

   B. cause to be embarrassed; cause to feel self-conscious

   C. look down on with disdain

   D. ideas or principles taught by someone

2. Silently, Siddhartha exposed himself to burning rays of the sun directly above, glowing with pain, glowing with thirst, and stood there, until he neither felt any pain nor thirst any more. Silently, he stood there in the rainy season, from his hair the water was dripping over freezing shoulders, over freezing hips and legs, and the penitent stood there, until he could not feel the cold in his shoulders and legs any more, until they were silent, until they were quiet. Silently, he cowered in the thorny bushes, blood dripped from the burning skin, from festering wounds dripped pus, and Siddhartha stayed rigidly, stayed motionless, until no blood flowed any more, until nothing stung any more, until nothing burned any more.

   Which choice best states a central concern of "With the Samanas"?

   A. Restlessness despite privilege

   B. Self-denial as a path

   C. Entering the city and learning love

   D. Wisdom cannot be taught

SAT key: 1. A (infected and full of pus); 2. B (Self-denial as a path)

Lesson 4: Gotama

Focus: the teacher and the teaching

Objective: Students will analyze how characterization develops in "Gotama" by writing a claim-evidence-reasoning paragraph that cites at least 2 quotations from the section, and will score at least 80% on the section quiz.

Standards: Dual Credit (Indiana College Core): ICC-WC-1.1, ICC-WC-1.3, ICC-WC-1.4, ICC-WC-1.5

Content note (religious representation): Teacher note on the portrait of Gotama: Hesse's Gotama is a European novelist's fictional portrait of the Buddha, not a historical record. The hero, Siddhartha, shares the historical Buddha's personal name (Siddhartha Gautama) but is a different, invented character; in the novel the two meet as separate people. The book is not a guide to Buddhist or Hindu teaching or practice, and Siddhartha's rejection of teachings ("nobody will obtain salvation by means of teachings!" (Hesse, 1922/2015, Gotama, para. 37)) is the character's view, not a verdict of Buddhism or Hinduism (Hesse, 1922/2001a; Müller, 1881/1999).
Student preview: This chapter shows a novelist's imagined portrait of the Buddha.
Suggested language: "How is Hesse's Gotama different from the Buddha of history, and why does that matter?"

Teacher only · spoilers

In the grove of Jetavana, Siddhartha and Govinda hear Gotama teach. Govinda joins the Buddha's followers. Siddhartha deeply admires Gotama but explains to him that enlightenment cannot be taught in words; each person must find it alone. Gotama warns him gently against too much cleverness, and Siddhartha leaves, feeling Gotama has taken his friend but given him himself.

Background: Gotama is Siddhartha Gautama, the historical Buddha; Hesse deliberately gives his hero the Buddha's own name.

Significance: The parting of friends dramatizes the novel's thesis that wisdom must be lived, not adopted.

Lesson plan and lecture script (90 minutes)

0–8 min · Bell-ringer · You do (8 min)
Students write to the bell-ringer, then pair-share.
Why does Siddhartha refuse to follow even a teacher he admires? Write for five minutes. Starters: I think... because... / This connects to teaching versus experience because....
Prompt: Why does Siddhartha refuse to follow even a teacher he admires?
Sentence starters: I think… because… · This connects to teaching versus experience because…
Strong response: A strong response takes a position and anticipates this: Siddhartha argues the Buddha found enlightenment through his own experience, not through any teaching, so teaching cannot transmit it.

8–18 min · Vocabulary with etymology notes · We do (10 min)
Five key words in context, with verified word histories.
Today's words: novices — beginners in a religious order; discard — to reject; to throw away; enticed — tempted; attracted; venerated — regard with feelings of respect and reverence; consider hallowed or exalted or be in awe of; exhaled — expel air. “novices”: Origin of “novice”: Anglo-Norman novice; earlier Latin novīcius. “discard”: dis- "away" + card (playing card): originally "to throw a card out of one's hand," then "to cast off." “venerated”: From Latin venerari "to revere, worship," related to venus "love, desire." “exhaled”: Origin of “exhale”: Middle French exhaler; earlier Latin exhalare.
Words: novices: beginners in a religious order · discard: to reject; to throw away · enticed: tempted; attracted · venerated: regard with feelings of respect and reverence; consider hallowed or exalted or be in awe of · exhaled: expel air

18–28 min · Background and context · I do (10 min)
Mini-lecture (read or adapt the script).
Gotama is Siddhartha Gautama, the historical Buddha; Hesse deliberately gives his hero the Buddha's own name. The parting of friends dramatizes the novel's thesis that wisdom must be lived, not adopted. Characterization: Gotama, the Buddha, is shown through his calm walk and smile; Siddhartha reveres him at once. Dialogue: Siddhartha's conversation with Gotama: he praises the teaching, then explains why he cannot follow it. Conflict: Govinda joins the Buddha; the friends separate. Watch for teachers and teachings: Siddhartha learns from many teachers but concludes that wisdom cannot be taught in words. In this chapter: “to see him, the perfected one, and to hear the teachings from his mouth” (Gotama, paragraph 3).

28–40 min · I do: modeled close reading · I do (12 min)
Model the close reading of the anchor quotation using the written think-aloud below.
First, meaning. I read “You’ve heard the teachings, O son of a Brahmin, and good for you that you’ve thought about it thus deeply” slowly and put it in my own words: The Buddha tells Siddhartha it is good that he has thought deeply about the teachings. Next, craft. I notice the Buddha's gentle, respectful tone, calling him "O son of a Brahmin." The strongest word is “deeply”: it shows Gotama respects Siddhartha's independent mind. Then, effect. Why does Gotama praise Siddhartha's thinking? My answer: Gotama praises Siddhartha's thinking as clever, but warns against too much cleverness; the Buddha accepts that Siddhartha must find his own way, and the scene shows respect between them.

> You’ve heard the teachings, O son of a Brahmin, and good for you that you’ve thought about it thus deeply
> (Gotama, paragraph 36)

Think-aloud: First, meaning. I read “You’ve heard the teachings, O son of a Brahmin, and good for you that you’ve thought about it thus deeply” slowly and put it in my own words: The Buddha tells Siddhartha it is good that he has thought deeply about the teachings. Next, craft. I notice the Buddha's gentle, respectful tone, calling him "O son of a Brahmin." The strongest word is “deeply”: it shows Gotama respects Siddhartha's independent mind. Then, effect. Why does Gotama praise Siddhartha's thinking? My answer: Gotama praises Siddhartha's thinking as clever, but warns against too much cleverness; the Buddha accepts that Siddhartha must find his own way, and the scene shows respect between them.

40–55 min · We do: guided annotation · We do (15 min)
Guided analysis of a second quotation; expected answers given.
Ask: What words in this line stand out, and what do they suggest? Expected: Siddhartha's love for Gotama makes his rejection more surprising and serious. The Buddha's warning shows he sees Siddhartha's danger: pride in his own cleverness. Ask: How does this line connect to teaching versus experience? Expected: Siddhartha argues the Buddha found enlightenment through his own experience, not through any teaching, so teaching cannot transmit it. (The depth of his respect before his refusal.)

> Never before had Siddhartha venerated a person so much, never before had he loved a person as much as this one (Gotama, paragraph 15)

Ask: What words in this line stand out, and what do they suggest?
Expected answer: Siddhartha's love for Gotama makes his rejection more surprising and serious. The Buddha's warning shows he sees Siddhartha's danger: pride in his own cleverness.
Ask: How does this line connect to teaching versus experience?
Expected answer: Siddhartha argues the Buddha found enlightenment through his own experience, not through any teaching, so teaching cannot transmit it. (The depth of his respect before his refusal.)

55–70 min · You do: independent annotation · You do (15 min)
Independent annotation and a claim-evidence-reasoning paragraph (exemplar given).
Annotate the chapter for characterization, dialogue (three marks with a margin note each), then write one claim-evidence-reasoning paragraph: what does this chapter suggest about the teacher and the teaching? Then start your writing prompt at your assigned level (HS Sophomore: Analyze how Gotama develops the idea of the teacher and the teaching. Make a precise claim, support it with at least three pieces of textual evidence, and explain how the author's use of characterization and theme shapes that idea. Address one possible counterclaim. (You are reading the English translation by Gunther Olesch, Anke Dreher, Amy Coulter, Stefan Langer and Semyon Chaichenets, so word-choice evidence is the translators' English.)) Exemplar: Siddhartha leaves the Buddha out of respect for the Buddha's own example. When the text says "Never before had Siddhartha venerated a person so much, never before had he loved a person as much as this one" (Gotama, paragraph 15), it shows this directly. Although he says he had never "venerated a person so much," he argues the Buddha reached enlightenment by his own search, so following any teaching, even this one, would betray that example.
Task: Annotate the chapter for characterization, dialogue (three marks with a margin note each), then write one claim-evidence-reasoning paragraph: what does this chapter suggest about the teacher and the teaching? Then start your writing prompt at your assigned level (HS Sophomore: Analyze how Gotama develops the idea of the teacher and the teaching. Make a precise claim, support it with at least three pieces of textual evidence, and explain how the author's use of characterization and theme shapes that idea. Address one possible counterclaim. (You are reading the English translation by Gunther Olesch, Anke Dreher, Amy Coulter, Stefan Langer and Semyon Chaichenets, so word-choice evidence is the translators' English.))
Exemplar: Siddhartha leaves the Buddha out of respect for the Buddha's own example. When the text says "Never before had Siddhartha venerated a person so much, never before had he loved a person as much as this one" (Gotama, paragraph 15), it shows this directly. Although he says he had never "venerated a person so much," he argues the Buddha reached enlightenment by his own search, so following any teaching, even this one, would betray that example.

70–80 min · Discussion · We do (10 min)
Structured discussion from the 30 tiered questions, with facilitation notes.
Anchor question: Why does Siddhartha refuse to follow even a teacher he admires? Ask: is Siddhartha right that enlightenment can't be taught? What about this class?
Anchor question: Why does Siddhartha refuse to follow even a teacher he admires?
Facilitation: Ask: is Siddhartha right that enlightenment can't be taught? What about this class?

80–87 min · Exit ticket / chapter quiz · You do (7 min)
Chapter quiz in the app and an exit ticket (answer given).
Chapter quiz in the app, then: In one sentence, what does this chapter suggest about the teacher and the teaching? Support it with one short quotation. Model answer: Siddhartha leaves the Buddha out of respect for the Buddha's own example. ("Never before had Siddhartha venerated a person so much, never before had he loved a person as much as this one", Gotama, paragraph 15). Accept any defensible claim backed by a quotation from the chapter; the answer key for the quiz is in the Quiz section.
Exit ticket: In one sentence, what does this chapter suggest about the teacher and the teaching? Support it with one short quotation.
Answer: Model answer: Siddhartha leaves the Buddha out of respect for the Buddha's own example. ("Never before had Siddhartha venerated a person so much, never before had he loved a person as much as this one", Gotama, paragraph 15). Accept any defensible claim backed by a quotation from the chapter; the answer key for the quiz is in the Quiz section.

87–90 min · Closure · I do (3 min)
Summarize the lesson and preview the next reading.
Today we saw how characterization shapes the teacher and the teaching. Key takeaway: Siddhartha argues the Buddha found enlightenment through his own experience, not through any teaching, so teaching cannot transmit it.

Total: 90 minutes.

60-minute version of this lesson

Same script and content as above, with these timings (60 minutes).

Clock	Segment	Minutes	What to keep
0–5	Bell-ringer	5	Students write to the bell-ringer, then pair-share.
5–10	Vocabulary with etymology notes	5	Five key words in context, with verified word histories.
10–16	Background and context	6	Mini-lecture (read or adapt the script).
16–24	I do: modeled close reading	8	Model the close reading of the anchor quotation using the written think-aloud below.
24–34	We do: guided annotation	10	Guided analysis of a second quotation; expected answers given.
34–44	You do: independent annotation	10	Independent annotation and a claim-evidence-reasoning paragraph (exemplar given).

44–54	Discussion	10	Structured discussion from the 30 tiered questions, with facilitation notes.
54–58	Exit ticket / chapter quiz	4	Chapter quiz in the app and an exit ticket (answer given).
58–60	Closure	2	Summarize the lesson and preview the next reading.

Teacher analysis (spoilers)

Literary elements

- Characterization: Gotama, the Buddha, is shown through his calm walk and smile; Siddhartha reveres him at once.
- Dialogue: Siddhartha's conversation with Gotama: he praises the teaching, then explains why he cannot follow it.
- Conflict: Govinda joins the Buddha; the friends separate.

Themes and how they develop

- teaching versus experience: Siddhartha argues the Buddha found enlightenment through his own experience, not through any teaching, so teaching cannot transmit it.

Symbols and motifs

- teachers and teachings: Siddhartha learns from many teachers but concludes that wisdom cannot be taught in words. In this chapter: “to see him, the perfected one, and to hear the teachings from his mouth” (Gotama, paragraph 3).
- the smile: The serene smile of Gotama marks enlightenment. In this chapter: “calm face was neither happy nor sad, it seemed to smile quietly and inwardly. With a hidden smile, quiet, calm, somewhat resembling” (Gotama, paragraph 12).

Key quotations (checked against the reading text)

- “Never before had Siddhartha venerated a person so much, never before had he loved a person as much as this one” (Gotama, paragraph 15) The depth of his respect before his refusal.
- “You’ve heard the teachings, O son of a Brahmin, and good for you that you’ve thought about it thus deeply” (Gotama, paragraph 36) The Buddha's gracious response.
- “Be aware of too much wisdom” (Gotama, paragraph 42) Gotama's warning.

Model claim-evidence-reasoning

Claim: Siddhartha leaves the Buddha out of respect for the Buddha's own example.
Evidence: “Never before had Siddhartha venerated a person so much, never before had he loved a person as much as this one” (Gotama, paragraph 15)
Reasoning: Although he says he had never "venerated a person so much," he argues the Buddha reached enlightenment by his own search, so following any teaching, even this one, would betray that example.

Passages referenced in this lesson (full text)

Siddhartha had started to nurse discontent in himself, he had started to feel that the love of his father and the love of his mother, and also the love of his friend, Govinda, would not bring him joy for ever and ever, would not nurse him, feed him, satisfy him. He had started to suspect that his venerable father and his other teachers, that the wise Brahmins had already revealed to him the most and best of their wisdom, that they had already filled his expecting vessel with their richness, and the vessel was not full, the spirit was not content, the soul was not calm, the heart was not satisfied. The ablutions were good, but they were water, they did not wash off the sin, they did not heal the spirit's thirst, they did not relieve the fear in his heart. The sacrifices and the invocation of the gods were excellent —but was that all? Did the sacrifices give a happy fortune? And what about the gods? Was it really Prajapati who had created the world? Was it not the Atman, He, the only one, the singular one? Were the gods not creations, created like me and you, subject to time, mortal? Was it therefore good, was it right, was it meaningful and the highest occupation to make offerings to the gods? For whom else were offerings to be made, who else was to be worshipped but Him, the only one, the Atman? And where was Atman to be found, where did He reside, where did his eternal heart beat, where else but in one's own self, in its innermost part, in its indestructible part, which everyone had in himself? But where, where was this self, this innermost part, this ultimate part? It was not flesh and bone, it was neither thought nor consciousness, thus the wisest ones taught. So, where, where was it? To reach this place, the self, myself, the Atman, there was another way, which was worthwhile looking for? Alas, and nobody showed this way, nobody knew it, not the father, and not the teachers and wise men, not the holy sacrificial songs! They knew everything, the Brahmins and their holy books, they knew everything, they had taken care of everything and of more than everything, the creation of the world, the origin of speech, of food, of inhaling, of exhaling, the arrangement of the senses, the acts of the gods, they knew infinitely much—but was it valuable to know all of this, not knowing that one and only thing, the most important thing, the solely important thing? (The Son of the Brahmin, paragraph 8)

The Father touched Siddhartha's shoulder. (The Son of the Brahmin, paragraph 47)

"You will," he spoke, "go into the forest and be a Samana. When you'll have found blissfulness in the forest, then come back and teach me to be blissful. If you'll find disappointment, then return and let us once again make offerings to the gods together. Go now and kiss your mother, tell her where you are going to. But for me it is time to go to the river and to perform the first ablution." (The Son of the Brahmin, paragraph 48)

He took his hand from the shoulder of his son and went outside. Siddhartha wavered to the side, as he tried to walk. He put his limbs back under control, bowed to his father, and went to his mother to do as his father had said. (The Son of the Brahmin, paragraph 49)

By his side lived Govinda, his shadow, walked the same paths, undertook the same efforts. They rarely spoke to one another, than the service and the exercises required. Occasionally the two of them went through the villages, to beg for food for themselves and their teachers. (With the Samanas, paragraph 8)

Quoth Siddhartha: "I can't help but feel that it is not like this, my friend. What I've learned, being among the Samanas, up to this day, this, O Govinda, I could have learned more quickly and by simpler means. In every tavern of that part of a town where the whorehouses are, my friend, among carters and gamblers I could have learned it." (With the Samanas, paragraph 11)

And Siddhartha said quietly, as if he was talking to himself: "What is meditation? What is leaving one's body? What is fasting? What is holding one's breath? It is fleeing from the self, it is a short escape of the agony of being a self, it is a short numbing of the senses against the pain and the pointlessness of life. The same escape, the same short numbing is what the driver of an oxcart finds in the inn, drinking a few bowls of rice wine or fermented coconut milk. Then he won't feel his self any more, then he won't feel the pains of life any more, then he finds a short numbing of the senses. When he falls asleep over his bowl of rice wine, he'll find the same what Siddhartha and Govinda find when they escape their bodies through long exercises, staying in the non-self. This is how it is, O Govinda." (With the Samanas, paragraph 13)

And Siddhartha: "He has lived for sixty years and has not reached the nirvana. He'll turn seventy and eighty, and you and me, we will grow just as old and will do our exercises, and will fast, and will meditate. But we will not reach the nirvana, he won't and we won't. O Govinda, I believe out of all the Samanas out there, perhaps not a single one, not a single one, will reach the nirvana. We find comfort, we find numbness, we learn feats, to deceive others. But the most important thing, the path of paths, we will not find." (With the Samanas, paragraph 20)

Quoth Govinda: "Your willingness delights my heart. But tell me, how should this be possible? How should the Gotama's teachings, even before we have heard them, have already revealed their best fruit to us?" (With the Samanas, paragraph 36)

On the way, Govinda said: "O Siddhartha, you have learned more from the Samanas than I knew. It is hard, it is very hard to cast a spell on an old Samana. Truly, if you had stayed there, you would soon have learned to walk on water." (With the Samanas, paragraph 41)

In the town of Savathi, every child knew the name of the exalted Buddha, and every house was prepared to fill the alms-dish of Gotama's disciples, the silently begging ones. Near the town was Gotama's favourite place to stay, the grove of Jetavana, which the rich merchant Anathapindika, an obedient worshipper of the exalted one, had given him and his people for a gift. (Gotama, paragraph 1)

All tales and answers, which the two young ascetics had received in their search for Gotama's abode, had pointed them towards this area. And arriving at Savathi, in the very first house, before the door of which they stopped to beg, food has been offered to them, and they accepted the food, and Siddhartha asked the woman, who handed them the food: (Gotama, paragraph 2)

"We would like to know, O charitable one, where the Buddha dwells, the most venerable one, for we are two Samanas from the forest and have come, to see him, the perfected one, and to hear the teachings from his mouth." (Gotama, paragraph 3)

Quoth the woman: "Here, you have truly come to the right place, you Samanas from the forest. You should know, in Jetavana, in the garden of Anathapindika is where the exalted one dwells. There you pilgrims shall spent the night, for there is enough space for the innumerable, who flock here, to hear the teachings from his mouth." (Gotama, paragraph 4)

Quoth the woman: "Many times I have seen him, the exalted one. On many days, I have seen him, walking through the alleys in silence, wearing his yellow cloak, presenting his alms-dish in silence at the doors of the houses, leaving with a filled dish." (Gotama, paragraph 6)

Delightedly, Govinda listened and wanted to ask and hear much more. But Siddhartha urged him to walk on. They thanked and left and hardly had to ask for directions, for rather many pilgrims and monks as well from Gotama's community were on their way to the Jetavana. And since they reached it at night, there were constant arrivals, shouts, and talk of those who sought shelter and got it. The two Samanas, accustomed to life in the forest, found quickly and without making any noise a place to stay and rested there until the morning. (Gotama, paragraph 7)

At sunrise, they saw with astonishment what a large crowd of believers and curious people had spent the night here. On all paths of the marvellous grove, monks walked in yellow robes, under the trees they sat here and there, in deep contemplation—or in a conversation about spiritual matters, the shady gardens looked like a city, full of people, bustling like bees. The majority of the monks went out with their alms-dish, to collect food in town for their lunch, the only meal of the day. The Buddha himself, the enlightened one, was also in the habit of taking this walk to beg in the morning. (Gotama, paragraph 8)

Siddhartha saw him, and he instantly recognised him, as if a god had pointed him out to him. He saw him, a simple man in a yellow robe, bearing the alms-dish in his hand, walking silently. (Gotama, paragraph 9)

"Look here!" Siddhartha said quietly to Govinda. "This one is the Buddha." (Gotama, paragraph 10)

Attentively, Govinda looked at the monk in the yellow robe, who seemed to be in no way different from the hundreds of other monks. And soon, Govinda also realized: This is the one. And they followed him and observed him. (Gotama, paragraph 11)

The Buddha went on his way, modestly and deep in his thoughts, his calm face was neither happy nor sad, it seemed to smile quietly and inwardly. With a hidden smile, quiet, calm, somewhat resembling a healthy child, the Buddha walked, wore the robe and placed his feet just as all of his monks did, according to a precise rule. But his face and his walk, his quietly lowered glance, his quietly dangling hand and even every finger of his quietly dangling hand expressed peace, expressed perfection, did not search, did not imitate, breathed softly in an unwithering calm, in an unwithering light, an untouchable peace. (Gotama, paragraph 12)

Thus Gotama walked towards the town, to collect alms, and the two Samanas recognised him solely by the perfection of his calm, by the quietness of his appearance, in which there was no searching, no desire, no imitation, no effort to be seen, only light and peace. (Gotama, paragraph 13)

"Today, we'll hear the teachings from his mouth," said Govinda. (Gotama, paragraph 14)

Siddhartha did not answer. He felt little curiosity for the teachings, he did not believe that they would teach him anything new, but he had, just as Govinda had, heard the contents of this Buddha's teachings again and again, though these reports only represented second- or third-hand information. But attentively he looked at Gotama's head, his shoulders, his feet, his quietly dangling hand, and it seemed to him as if every joint of every finger of this hand was of these teachings, spoke of, breathed of, exhaled the fragrant of, glistened of truth. This man, this Buddha was truthful down to the gesture of his last finger. This man was holy. Never before had Siddhartha venerated a person so much, never before had he loved a person as much as this one. (Gotama, paragraph 15)

They both followed the Buddha until they reached the town and then returned in silence, for they themselves intended to abstain on this day. They saw Gotama returning—what he ate could not even have satisfied a bird's appetite, and they saw him retiring into the shade of the mango trees. (Gotama, paragraph 16)

But in the evening, when the heat cooled down and everyone in the camp started to bustle about and gathered around, they heard the Buddha teaching. They heard his voice, and it was also perfected, was of perfect calmness, was full of peace. Gotama taught the teachings of suffering, of the origin of suffering, of the way to relieve suffering. Calmly and clearly his quiet speech flowed on. Suffering was life, full of suffering was the world, but salvation from suffering had been found: salvation was obtained by him who would walk the path of the Buddha. With a soft, yet firm voice the exalted one spoke, taught the four main doctrines, taught the eightfold path, patiently he went the usual path of the teachings, of the examples, of the repetitions, brightly and quietly his voice hovered over the listeners, like a light, like a starry sky. (Gotama, paragraph 17)

When the Buddha—night had already fallen—ended his speech, many a pilgrim stepped forward and asked to be accepted into the community, sought refuge in the teachings. And Gotama accepted them by speaking: "You have heard the teachings well, it has come to you well. Thus join us and walk in holiness, to put an end to all suffering." (Gotama, paragraph 18)

Behold, then Govinda, the shy one, also stepped forward and spoke: "I also take my refuge in the exalted one and his teachings," and he asked to be accepted into the community of his disciples and was accepted. (Gotama, paragraph 19)

Right afterwards, when the Buddha had retired for the night, Govinda turned to Siddhartha and spoke eagerly: "Siddhartha, it is not my place to scold you. We have both heard the exalted one, we have both perceived the teachings. Govinda has heard the teachings, he has taken refuge in it. But you, my honoured friend, don't you also want to walk the path of salvation? Would you want to hesitate, do you want to wait any longer?" (Gotama, paragraph 20)

Siddhartha awakened as if he had been asleep, when he heard Govinda's words. For a long time, he looked into Govinda's face. Then he spoke quietly, in a voice without mockery: "Govinda, my friend, now you have taken this step, now you have chosen this path. Always, O Govinda, you've been my friend, you've always walked one step behind me. Often I have thought: Won't Govinda for once also take a step by himself, without me, out of his own soul? Behold, now you've turned into a man and are choosing your path for yourself. I wish that you would go it up to its end, O my friend, that you shall find salvation!" (Gotama, paragraph 21)

Govinda, not completely understanding it yet, repeated his question in an impatient tone: "Speak up, I beg you, my dear! Tell me, since it could not be any other way, that you also, my learned friend, will take your refuge with the exalted Buddha!" (Gotama, paragraph 22)

Siddhartha placed his hand on Govinda's shoulder: "You failed to hear my good wish for you, O Govinda. I'm repeating it: I wish that you would go this path up to its end, that you shall find salvation!" (Gotama, paragraph 23)

In this moment, Govinda realized that his friend had left him, and he started to weep. (Gotama, paragraph 24)

"Siddhartha!" he exclaimed lamentingly. (Gotama, paragraph 25)

Siddhartha kindly spoke to him: "Don't forget, Govinda, that you are now one of the Samanas of the Buddha! You have renounced your home and your parents, renounced your birth and possessions, renounced your free will, renounced all friendship. This is what the teachings require, this is what the exalted one wants. This is what you wanted for yourself. Tomorrow, O Govinda, I'll leave you." (Gotama, paragraph 26)

For a long time, the friends continued walking in the grove; for a long time, they lay there and found no sleep. And over and over again, Govinda urged his friend, he should tell him why he would not want to seek refuge in Gotama's teachings, what fault he would find in these teachings. But Siddhartha turned him away every time and said: "Be content, Govinda! Very good are the teachings of the exalted one, how could I find a fault in them?" (Gotama, paragraph 27)

Very early in the morning, a follower of Buddha, one of his oldest monks, went through the garden and called all those to him who had as novices taken their refuge in the teachings, to dress them up in the yellow robe and to instruct them in the first teachings and duties of their position. Then Govinda broke loose, embraced once again his childhood friend and left with the novices. (Gotama, paragraph 28)

Then he happened to meet Gotama, the exalted one, and when he greeted him with respect and the Buddha's glance was so full of kindness and calm, the young man summoned his courage and asked the venerable one for the permission to talk to him. Silently the exalted one nodded his approval. (Gotama, paragraph 30)

Quoth Siddhartha: "Yesterday, O exalted one, I had been privileged to hear your wondrous teachings. Together with my friend, I had come from afar, to hear your teachings. And now my friend is going to stay with your people, he has taken his refuge with you. But I will again start on my pilgrimage." (Gotama, paragraph 31)

"As you please," the venerable one spoke politely. (Gotama, paragraph 32)

"Too bold is my speech," Siddhartha continued, "but I do not want to leave the exalted one without having honestly told him my thoughts. Does it please the venerable one to listen to me for one moment longer?" (Gotama, paragraph 33)

Silently, the Buddha nodded his approval. (Gotama, paragraph 34)

Quoth Siddhartha: "One thing, O most venerable one, I have admired in your teachings most of all. Everything in your teachings is perfectly clear, is proven; you are presenting the world as a perfect chain, a chain which is never and nowhere broken, an eternal chain the links of which are causes and effects. Never before has this been seen so clearly; never before has this been presented so irrefutably; truly, the heart of every Brahmin has to beat stronger with love, once he has seen the world through your teachings perfectly connected, without gaps, clear as a crystal, not depending on chance, not depending on gods. Whether it may be good or bad, whether living according to it would be suffering or joy, I do not wish to discuss, possibly this is not essential—but the uniformity of the world, that everything which happens is connected, that the great and the small things are all encompassed by the same forces of time, by the same law of causes, of coming into being and of dying, this is what shines brightly out of your exalted teachings, O perfected one. But according to your very own teachings, this unity and necessary sequence of all things is nevertheless broken in one place, through a small gap, this world of unity is invaded by something alien, something new, something which had not been there before, and which cannot be demonstrated and cannot be proven: these are your teachings of overcoming the world, of salvation. But with this small gap, with this small breach, the entire eternal and uniform law of the world is breaking apart again and becomes void. Please forgive me for expressing this objection." (Gotama, paragraph 35)

Quietly, Gotama had listened to him, unmoved. Now he spoke, the perfected one, with his kind, with his polite and clear voice: "You've heard the teachings, O son of a Brahmin, and good for you that you've thought about it thus deeply. You've found a gap in it, an error. You should think about this further. But be warned, O seeker of knowledge, of the thicket of opinions and of arguing about words. There is nothing to opinions, they may be beautiful or ugly, smart or foolish, everyone can support them or discard them. But the teachings, you've heard from me, are no opinion, and their goal is not to explain the world to those who seek knowledge. They have a different goal; their goal is salvation from suffering. This is what Gotama teaches, nothing else." (Gotama, paragraph 36)

"I wish that you, O exalted one, would not be angry with me," said the young man. "I have not spoken to you like this to argue with you, to argue about words. You are truly right, there is little to opinions. But let me say this one more thing: I have not doubted in you for a single moment. I have not doubted for a single moment that you are Buddha, that you have reached the goal, the highest goal towards which so many thousands of Brahmins and sons of Brahmins are on their way. You have found salvation from death. It has come to you in the course of your own search, on your own path, through thoughts, through meditation, through realizations, through enlightenment. It has not come to you by means of teachings! And—thus is my thought, O exalted one—nobody will obtain salvation by means of teachings! You will not be able to convey and say to anybody, O venerable one, in words and through teachings what has happened to you in the hour of enlightenment! The teachings of the enlightened Buddha contain much, it teaches many to live righteously, to avoid evil. But there is one thing which these so clear, these so venerable teachings do not contain: they do not contain the mystery of what the exalted one has experienced for himself, he alone among hundreds of thousands. This is what I have thought and realized, when I have heard the teachings. This is why I am continuing my travels—not to seek other, better teachings, for I know there are none, but to depart from all teachings and all teachers and to reach my goal by myself or to die. But often, I'll think of this day, O exalted one, and of this hour, when my eyes beheld a holy man." (Gotama, paragraph 37)

The Buddha's eyes quietly looked to the ground; quietly, in perfect equanimity his inscrutable face was smiling. (Gotama, paragraph 38)

"I wish," the venerable one spoke slowly, "that your thoughts shall not be in error, that you shall reach the goal! But tell me: Have you seen the multitude of my Samanas, my many brothers, who have taken refuge in the teachings? And do you believe, O stranger, O Samana, do you believe that it would be better for them all to abandon the teachings and to return into the life of the world and of desires?" (Gotama, paragraph 39)

"Far is such a thought from my mind," exclaimed Siddhartha. "I wish that they shall all stay with the teachings, that they shall reach their goal! It is not my place to judge another person's life. Only for myself, for myself alone, I must decide, I must choose, I must refuse. Salvation from the self is what we Samanas search for, O exalted one. If I merely were one of your disciples, O venerable one, I'd fear that it might happen to me that only seemingly, only deceptively my self would be calm and be redeemed, but that in truth it would live on and grow, for then I had replaced my self with the teachings, my duty to follow you, my love for you, and the community of the monks!" (Gotama, paragraph 40)

With half of a smile, with an unwavering openness and kindness, Gotama looked into the stranger's eyes and bid him to leave with a hardly noticeable gesture. (Gotama, paragraph 41)

"You are wise, O Samana," the venerable one spoke. "You know how to talk wisely, my friend. Be aware of too much wisdom!" (Gotama, paragraph 42)

The Buddha turned away, and his glance and half of a smile remained forever etched in Siddhartha's memory. (Gotama, paragraph 43)

I have never before seen a person glance and smile, sit and walk this way, he thought; truly, I wish to be able to glance and smile, sit and walk this way, too, thus free, thus venerable, thus concealed, thus open, thus childlike and mysterious. Truly, only a person who has succeeded in reaching the innermost part of his self would glance and walk this way. Well so, I also will seek to reach the innermost part of my self. (Gotama, paragraph 44)

I saw a man, Siddhartha thought, a single man, before whom I would have to lower my glance. I do not want to lower my glance before any other, not before any other. No teachings will entice me any more, since this man's teachings have not enticed me. (Gotama, paragraph 45)

I am deprived by the Buddha, thought Siddhartha, I am deprived, and even more he has given to me. He has deprived me of my friend, the one who had believed in me and now believes in him, who had been my shadow and is now Gotama's shadow. But he has given me Siddhartha, myself. (Gotama, paragraph 46)

Vocabulary with etymology notes

Word	Definition (in this sentence)	In context	Word history
novices (noun)	beginners in a religious order	Then Govinda broke loose, embraced once again his childhood friend and left with the novices.	"novices": Origin of "novice": Anglo-Norman novice; earlier Latin novīcius. (Liber et Libri origin note, https://en.wiktionary.org/wiki/novice#Etymology)
discard (verb)	to reject; to throw away	There is nothing to opinions, they may be beautiful or ugly, smart or foolish,	"discard": dis- "away" + card (playing card): originally "to throw a card out of one's hand," then "to cast off." (Online Etymology

		everyone can support them or discard them.	Dictionary (hand-checked note), https://www.etymonline.com/word/discard)
enticed (verb)	tempted; attracted	No teachings will entice me any more, since this man's teachings have not enticed me.
venerated (verb)	honoured with deep respect and awe	Never before had Siddhartha venerated a person so much, never before had he loved a person as much as this one.	"venerated": From Latin venerari "to revere, worship," related to venus "love, desire." (Online Etymology Dictionary (hand-checked note), https://www.etymonline.com/word/venerate)
exhaled (verb)	breathed out	But attentively he looked at Gotama's head, his shoulders, his feet, his quietly dangling hand, and it seemed to him as if every joint of every finger of this hand was of these teachings, spoke of, breathed of, exhaled the fragrant of, glistened of truth.	"exhaled": Origin of "exhale": Middle French exhaler; earlier Latin exhalare. (Liber et Libri origin note, https://en.wiktionary.org/wiki/exhale#Etymology)
glistened (verb)	shone with a wet-looking sparkle	But attentively he looked at Gotama's head, his shoulders, his feet, his quietly dangling hand, and it seemed to him as if every joint of every finger of this hand was of these teachings, spoke of, breathed of, exhaled the fragrant of, glistened of truth.	"glistened": From Old English glisnian "to gleam," a Germanic word related to glitter and gleam. (Online Etymology Dictionary (hand-checked note), https://www.etymonline.com/word/glisten)
openness (noun)	frankness; honesty	With half of a smile, with an unwavering openness and kindness, Gotama looked into the stranger's eyes and bid him to leave with a hardly noticeable gesture.	"openness": Origin: an English formation from open + -ness. (Liber et Libri origin note, https://en.wiktionary.org/wiki/openness#Etymology)
equanimity (noun)	steadiness of mind under stress	The Buddha's eyes quietly looked to the ground; quietly, in perfect equanimity his inscrutable face was smiling.	"equanimity": Origin: French équanimité; earlier Latin aequanimitās ("calmness"). (Liber et Libri origin note, https://en.wiktionary.org/wiki/equanimity#Etymology)
dangling (verb)	hanging loosely	But attentively he looked at Gotama's head, his shoulders, his feet, his quietly dangling hand, and it seemed to him as if every joint of every finger of this hand was of these teachings, spoke of, breathed of, exhaled the fragrant of, glistened of truth.
politely (adverb)		"As you please," the venerable one spoke politely.

	in a courteous, respectful way

Discussion questions

1. Why does Siddhartha refuse to follow even a teacher he admires?
2. Where does characterization appear in this chapter, and what effect does it have? Point to one passage.
3. How does this chapter connect to the book's larger concern with the unity of all things?

Tiered discussion questions (30: recall, inferential, evaluative)

Wait time after every question (3 s for DOK 1, 5 s for DOK 2, 8 to 10 s for DOK 3 and 4); think-pair-share on DOK 3 and 4; answer each response with a follow-up probe; close with student-generated questions. Focus sets by rigor level: HS Sophomore: 1, 2, 3, 4, 13, 14, 15, 16, 17, 23, 24, 25; HS Junior: 1, 2, 3, 14, 15, 16, 17, 18, 24, 25, 26, 27; HS Senior: 1, 2, 3, 15, 16, 17, 18, 25, 26, 27, 28, 29; AP: 1, 2, 16, 17, 18, 19, 20, 26, 27, 28, 29, 30; College Freshman: 1, 2, 17, 18, 19, 20, 21, 22, 27, 28, 29, 30; College Sophomore: 1, 2, 11, 18, 19, 20, 21, 22, 23, 28, 29, 30; College Junior: 1, 11, 12, 19, 20, 21, 22, 23, 24, 25, 29, 30; College Senior: 1, 11, 12, 13, 20, 21, 22, 23, 24, 25, 26, 30; Graduate / PhD: 1, 11, 12, 13, 21, 22, 23, 24, 25, 26, 27, 28

Literal / recall

1. Where do they hear Gotama teach? [DOK 1 · Cold call with support: call on a student by name, offering a sentence starter or rephrasing if needed · wait 3 s · Dual Credit (Indiana College Core): ICC-WC-1.1, ICC-WC-1.3, ICC-WC-1.4, ICC-WC-1.5] Look for: In the grove of Jetavana
   Answer guidance: In the grove of Jetavana near the town of Savathi, where the woman tells them the Buddha stays (Gotama, paragraph 4); the town is named in “In the town of Savathi, every child knew the name of the exalted Buddha” (Gotama, paragraph 1).
2. What does Govinda decide? [DOK 1 · Turn and Talk: students discuss briefly with a neighbor before answering · wait 3 s · Dual Credit (Indiana College Core): ICC-WC-1.1, ICC-WC-1.3, ICC-WC-1.4, ICC-WC-1.5] Look for: To join Gotama's followers
   Answer guidance: Govinda takes his refuge in the Buddha and joins his monks: “I also take my refuge in the exalted one and his teachings” (Gotama, paragraph 19).
3. What does Siddhartha tell Gotama? [DOK 1 · Cold call with support: call on a student by name, offering a sentence starter or rephrasing if needed · wait 3 s · Dual Credit (Indiana College Core): ICC-WC-1.1, ICC-WC-1.3, ICC-WC-1.4, ICC-WC-1.5] Look for: Enlightenment cannot be taught in words
   Answer guidance: That the Buddha’s own enlightenment did not come from teachings and cannot be passed on in words. He says it to Gotama in Gotama, paragraph 37: “It has not come to you by means of teachings!” (Gotama, paragraph 37)
4. What does Gotama warn Siddhartha about? [DOK 1 · Turn and Talk: students discuss briefly with a neighbor before answering · wait 3 s · Dual Credit (Indiana College Core): ICC-WC-1.1, ICC-WC-1.3, ICC-WC-1.4, ICC-WC-1.5] Look for: Being too clever
   Answer guidance: About too much cleverness: “Be aware of too much wisdom!” (Gotama, paragraph 42) (said with kindness, after praising him as wise).
5. How do the two Samanas find a place to sleep at the crowded Jetavana? [DOK 1 · Cold call with support: call on a student by name, offering a sentence starter or rephrasing if needed · wait 3 s · Dual Credit (Indiana College Core): ICC-WC-1.1, ICC-WC-1.3, ICC-WC-1.4, ICC-WC-1.5] Look for: Quickly and without any noise, as people used to the forest

Answer guidance: Being "accustomed to life in the forest," they "found quickly and without making any noise a place to stay and rested there until the morning" (Gotama, paragraph 7).

6. Retell the three most important events of "Gotama" in order, in one sentence each. [DOK 1 · Turn and Talk: students discuss briefly with a neighbor before answering · wait 3 s · Dual Credit (Indiana College Core): ICC-WC-1.1, ICC-WC-1.3, ICC-WC-1.4, ICC-WC-1.5] Look for: In the grove of Jetavana, Siddhartha and Govinda hear Gotama teach. Govinda joins the Buddha's followers. Siddhartha deeply admires Gotama but explains to him that enlightenment cannot be taught in words; each person must find it alone. Gotama warns him gently against too much cleverness, and Siddhartha leaves, feeling Gotama has taken his friend but given him himself.
   Answer guidance: They find Gotama and hear him teach (Gotama, paragraphs 8–17); Govinda joins the monks and the friends part (paragraphs 19–24); Siddhartha tells the Buddha why he must go his own way and leaves (paragraphs 30–46).
7. Which characters appear or are mentioned in "Gotama"? Name two and one thing each says or does. [DOK 1 · Cold call with support: call on a student by name, offering a sentence starter or rephrasing if needed · wait 3 s · Dual Credit (Indiana College Core): ICC-WC-1.1, ICC-WC-1.3, ICC-WC-1.4, ICC-WC-1.5] Look for: Names and actions taken from the chapter; check against the teacher summary.
   Answer guidance: Two of: Gotama, who answers Siddhartha's objection calmly (paragraph 36); Govinda, who takes refuge and weeps when he sees his friend will not (paragraphs 19, 24); the woman who directs them to Jetavana (paragraph 4).
8. Where and when does "Gotama" take place? Point to the line that tells you. [DOK 1 · Turn and Talk: students discuss briefly with a neighbor before answering · wait 3 s · Dual Credit (Indiana College Core): ICC-WC-1.1, ICC-WC-1.3, ICC-WC-1.4, ICC-WC-1.5] Look for: A place/time detail quoted from the chapter.
   Answer guidance: In the town of Savathi and the grove of Jetavana, over one evening, night and morning. Time markers: "At sunrise, they saw with astonishment what a large crowd of believers and curious people had spent the night" (Gotama, paragraph 8)… and "Very early in the morning" (Gotama, paragraph 28).
9. Reread: "Quoth Siddhartha: 'Yesterday, O exalted one, I had been privileged to hear your wondrous teachings.'" What does "privileged" mean here, and what is literally happening in this line? [DOK 1 · Turn and Talk: students discuss briefly with a neighbor before answering · wait 3 s · Dual Credit (Indiana College Core): ICC-WC-1.1, ICC-WC-1.3, ICC-WC-1.4, ICC-WC-1.5] Look for: privileged: given a special honour or chance.
   Answer guidance: "Privileged" here means: given a special honour or chance. In Gotama, paragraph 31, Siddhartha opens his talk with Gotama by saying it was an honour to hear his teaching the day before.
10. Reread: "he exclaimed lamentingly." What does "lamentingly" mean here, and what is literally happening in this line? [DOK 1 · Turn and Talk: students discuss briefly with a neighbor before answering · wait 3 s · Dual Credit (Indiana College Core): ICC-WC-1.1, ICC-WC-1.3, ICC-WC-1.4, ICC-WC-1.5] Look for: lamentingly: in a grieving, complaining way.
    Answer guidance: "Lamentingly" here means: in a grieving, complaining way. In Gotama, paragraph 25, Govinda cries out in sorrow because Siddhartha will not join the Buddha's monks with him.

Inferential / analytical

1. What does "Gotama" suggest about the teacher and the teaching? State the inference and the line that supports it. [DOK 2 · Think-Pair-Share: students think alone, discuss with a partner, then share with the class · wait 5 s · Dual Credit (Indiana College Core): ICC-WC-1.1, ICC-WC-1.3, ICC-WC-1.4, ICC-WC-1.5] Look for: A stated inference (for example, that admiring a teacher is not the same as following him) backed by one located line, such as the one in

Gotama, paragraph 44.

Answer guidance: The chapter suggests that admiring a teacher is not the same as following him. Support: “I have never before seen a person glance and smile, sit and walk this way, he thought” (Gotama, paragraph 44), yet he still leaves: what moves him is Gotama’s person, not the doctrine.

2. Find one example of characterization in this chapter. What does it reveal that a plain statement would not? [DOK 2 · Follow-up: ask a probing question that builds on the previous answer · wait 5 s · Dual Credit (Indiana College Core): ICC-WC-1.1, ICC-WC-1.3, ICC-WC-1.4, ICC-WC-1.5] Look for: Look for what characters say, do and think, and how others react to them.

   Answer guidance: The Buddha is characterized by his walk and hand, not by praise: “The Buddha went on his way, modestly and deep in his thoughts, his calm face was neither happy nor sad” (Gotama, paragraph 12). It shows peace as something visible, which is exactly what Siddhartha wants to reach himself.

3. How does the theme in this chapter shape what we understand about the teacher and the teaching? [DOK 3 · Think-Pair-Share: students think alone, discuss with a partner, then share with the class · wait 8 s · Dual Credit (Indiana College Core): ICC-WC-1.1, ICC-WC-1.3, ICC-WC-1.4, ICC-WC-1.5] Look for: Look for statements or moments that connect to the book's big ideas.

   Answer guidance: The theme that wisdom cannot be handed over shapes the parting: Siddhartha honours the teaching (paragraph 35) but refuses it for himself, “I wish that they shall all stay with the teachings” (Gotama, paragraph 40)… while he goes alone.

4. In the passage that begins “The Buddha went on his way, modestly and deep in his thoughts, his calm face was neither happy nor sad, it seemed to smile quietly and inwardly.”, why might Hesse have chosen these particular words? Pick two and explain their connotations. [DOK 2 · Follow-up: ask a probing question that builds on the previous answer · wait 5 s · Dual Credit (Indiana College Core): ICC-WC-1.1, ICC-WC-1.3, ICC-WC-1.4, ICC-WC-1.5] Look for: Diction analysis of two words in the anchor passage.

   Answer guidance: In Gotama, paragraph 12, “modestly” and “calm” make holiness quiet and ordinary; the phrase “neither happy nor sad” shows a peace beyond moods.

5. What causes the main turn in “Gotama”, and what effect is it likely to have on what follows? [DOK 2 · Follow-up: ask a probing question that builds on the previous answer · wait 5 s · Dual Credit (Indiana College Core): ICC-WC-1.1, ICC-WC-1.3, ICC-WC-1.4, ICC-WC-1.5] Look for: In the grove of Jetavana, Siddhartha and Govinda hear Gotama teach. Govinda joins the Buddha's followers. Siddhartha deeply admires Gotama but explains to him that enlightenment cannot be taught in words; each person must find it alone. Gotama warns him gently against too much cleverness, and…

   Answer guidance: The turn is Govinda joining the Buddha (paragraph 19), which forces Siddhartha to name his own choice (paragraphs 21–23). Effect: he is alone for the first time, which leads to the awakening in the next chapter.

6. How does “Gotama” build on “With the Samanas”? Name one link of cause and effect. [DOK 3 · Think-Pair-Share: students think alone, discuss with a partner, then share with the class · wait 8 s · Dual Credit (Indiana College Core): ICC-WC-1.1, ICC-WC-1.3, ICC-WC-1.4, ICC-WC-1.5] Look for: A causal or structural link between this and the previous chapter.

   Answer guidance: Cause and effect: the rumour of the Buddha in “With the Samanas” (paragraph 28) brings them to Jetavana; the doubt about all teaching that grew among the Samanas now makes Siddhartha refuse even the best teacher (paragraph 37).

7. What can we infer about a character's motives from what they say and do here, as opposed to what they claim? [DOK 3 · Follow-up: ask a probing question that builds on the previous answer · wait 8 s · Dual Credit (Indiana College Core): ICC-WC-1.1, ICC-WC-1.3, ICC-WC-1.4, ICC-WC-1.5] Look for: An inference about motive supported by a quoted line.
   Answer guidance: Siddhartha says he leaves to find his own way, but his words also show pride; the Buddha senses it ("Be aware of too much wisdom!" (Gotama, paragraph 42)). Govinda claims conviction, but his tears in paragraph 24 show how much he depended on his friend.
8. The bell-ringer asked: "Why does Siddhartha refuse to follow even a teacher he admires?" Now that we have read closely, how would you revise your first answer, and which line changed your mind? [DOK 2 · Think-Pair-Share: students think alone, discuss with a partner, then share with the class · wait 5 s · Dual Credit (Indiana College Core): ICC-WC-1.1, ICC-WC-1.3, ICC-WC-1.4, ICC-WC-1.5] Look for: A revised answer anchored in the text.
   Answer guidance: A revised answer should go beyond 'he is stubborn' to his stated reason: salvation was not reached by the Buddha through teachings (Gotama, paragraph 37), so following teachings would repeat the Samanas' mistake.
9. Where does conflict appear, and how does it connect this chapter to the larger concern with the unity of all things? [DOK 3 · Follow-up: ask a probing question that builds on the previous answer · wait 8 s · Dual Credit (Indiana College Core): ICC-WC-1.1, ICC-WC-1.3, ICC-WC-1.4, ICC-WC-1.5] Look for: Look for the forces, people or desires pulling against each other.
   Answer guidance: The central conflict is Siddhartha's respectful argument with Gotama (Gotama, paragraphs 35–37): the teaching describes the world as one unbroken chain, yet it breaks that unity by teaching overcoming it. That contradiction ties the chapter to the oneness he is seeking.
10. Background: Gotama is Siddhartha Gautama, the historical Buddha; Hesse deliberately gives his hero the Buddha's own name. How does knowing this change the way you read one moment in the chapter? [DOK 3 · Think-Pair-Share: students think alone, discuss with a partner, then share with the class · wait 8 s · Dual Credit (Indiana College Core): ICC-WC-1.1, ICC-WC-1.3, ICC-WC-1.4, ICC-WC-1.5] Look for: A specific moment reread in light of the context.
    Answer guidance: Knowing that Gotama is the historical Buddha, and that the hero shares his name, makes the meeting a meeting with a double: Siddhartha must find for himself what the Buddha found, as he says in paragraph 37.

Evaluative / synthesis / creative

1. A critic might argue: "The parting of friends dramatizes the novel's thesis that wisdom must be lived, not adopted." How far do you agree? Take a stand and defend it with two lines from the chapter. [DOK 3 · Four Corners: students move to the corner that matches their position and explain why · wait 8 s · ICC-WC-1.5] Look for: A defended position with evidence and one counterpoint.
   Answer guidance: Agree: Govinda adopts a teaching (Gotama, paragraph 19) while Siddhartha leaves to live his way (paragraph 40). A text-based counterpoint: Siddhartha admits the teaching helps many ("it teaches many to live righteously, to avoid evil" (Gotama, paragraph 37)), so adopting it is not foolish for everyone.
2. Which character in this chapter acts most wisely, and which least? Judge them by a standard you name. [DOK 3 · Think-Pair-Share: students think alone, discuss with a partner, then share with the class · wait 8 s · ICC-WC-1.5] Look for: An evaluation using an explicit criterion and evidence.
   Answer guidance: With humility as the standard, the Buddha is wisest: he answers without anger and wishes Siddhartha well (paragraphs 36, 39); Siddhartha, for all his insight, is closest to the pride Gotama warns about (paragraph 42). Other standards can reverse this.

3. Rewrite one moment of "Gotama" from the point of view of a different character. What does the new angle reveal or hide about the teacher and the teaching? [DOK 4 · Think-Pair-Share: students think alone, discuss with a partner, then share with the class · wait 8 s · Dual Credit (Indiana College Core): ICC-WC-1.1, ICC-WC-1.3, ICC-WC-1.4, ICC-WC-1.5] Look for: A rewrite that keeps the chapter's events accurate, speaks in the chosen character's voice, and ends with a sentence on what the new angle shows or hides.

   Answer guidance: Govinda's night after taking refuge (Gotama, paragraphs 24–27) works well: his view shows grief and loyalty but hides why Siddhartha will not join.

4. Write three questions of your own about "Gotama": one recall, one "why/how", and one "should/what if". Trade with a partner and answer theirs. [DOK 3 · Student-generated: students write and pose their own questions · wait 8 s · Dual Credit (Indiana College Core): ICC-WC-1.1, ICC-WC-1.3, ICC-WC-1.4, ICC-WC-1.5] Look for: Three questions at three levels, each answerable from the chapter, traded and answered with a line.

   Answer guidance: Example set: recall, 'Where does Gotama teach?' (Jetavana, paragraph 4); why/how, 'Why does Siddhartha not join?' (paragraph 37); what if, 'Should Govinda have followed Siddhartha instead?'

5. Connect this chapter to teaching versus experience: is the link strong or weak so far? What would Hesse need to show next to strengthen it? [DOK 4 · Socratic circle: an inner circle discusses while the outer circle listens and takes notes, then they switch · wait 8 s · ICC-WC-1.5] Look for: A judgment of thematic development across the work.

   Answer guidance: Strong: the chapter states the problem directly in Gotama, paragraph 37 (salvation does not come by teachings). Hesse now needs to show what experience teaches, which begins in "Awakening."

6. Is the characterization in this chapter effective, or does it feel heavy-handed? Evaluate it as a reader would in a review. [DOK 3 · Four Corners: students move to the corner that matches their position and explain why · wait 8 s · ICC-WC-1.5] Look for: An evaluative judgment with criteria and evidence.

   Answer guidance: Effective: Gotama is shown through gesture, smile and walk (paragraphs 12, 43), and Govinda's grief is shown in tears (paragraph 24). A reviewer might find Siddhartha's speech to the Buddha long and lecture-like (paragraphs 35–37).

7. Compare how "Gotama" treats the teacher and the teaching with how another text, film or event you know treats a similar idea. What does Siddhartha see that the other misses? [DOK 4 · Socratic circle: an inner circle discusses while the outer circle listens and takes notes, then they switch · wait 8 s · ICC-WC-1.5] Look for: A cross-text synthesis.

   Answer guidance: A comparison should name a student leaving a respected teacher or tradition and quote Siddhartha's reason (paragraph 37); in this chapter the teacher is not wrong, which makes the parting harder than a simple rebellion.

8. Predict what "Awakening" will bring, using two clues from this chapter. After reading, evaluate your prediction. [DOK 3 · Think-Pair-Share: students think alone, discuss with a partner, then share with the class · wait 8 s · Dual Credit (Indiana College Core): ICC-WC-1.1, ICC-WC-1.3, ICC-WC-1.4, ICC-WC-1.5] Look for: A prediction or judgment justified with textual clues.

   Answer guidance: Clues: Siddhartha has lost Govinda and refused all teachers ("He has deprived me of my friend" (Gotama, paragraph 46)), and he resolves to go his own way (paragraph 45). Prediction: alone, he will begin to look at himself and the world directly.

9. Design a one-paragraph modern adaptation of this chapter (setting, characters, conflict). What must stay the same for it to still be about the teacher and the teaching? [DOK 4 · Think-Pair-Share: students think alone, discuss with a partner, then share with the class · wait 8 s · Dual Credit (Indiana College Core): ICC-WC-1.1, ICC-WC-1.3, ICC-WC-1.4, ICC-WC-1.5] Look for: A modern setting, characters and conflict that keep the chapter's core idea, with the one element that must not change named.
   Answer guidance: A modern version keeps a student who meets a great mentor and friend, sees the friend join, and leaves to learn alone. What must stay is the reason in paragraph 37: what the mentor knows was not learned from a mentor.
10. What question would you most like to ask Hermann Hesse about this chapter, and what answer do you think the text itself gives? [DOK 4 · Student-generated: students write and pose their own questions · wait 8 s · Dual Credit (Indiana College Core): ICC-WC-1.1, ICC-WC-1.3, ICC-WC-1.4, ICC-WC-1.5] Look for: A student-generated question answered from evidence.
    Answer guidance: Example: 'Is Siddhartha right to refuse the Buddha?' The text gives both sides: he admires Gotama more than anyone (paragraph 44) but says no teaching can carry the experience (paragraph 37).

Annotation focus

- Characterization: look for what characters say, do and think, and how others react to them (anchor passage in the We do segment)
- Also notice Theme: statements or moments that connect to the book's big ideas
- Also notice Conflict: the forces, people or desires pulling against each other

Chapter quiz: item bank (all eleven rigor versions)

1. [mc · recall · DOK 1] Who tells the two Samanas where the Buddha is staying?
   A. A woman who gives them food in Savathi
   B. A monk at the gate of the grove
   C. A merchant on the long road to the town
   D. A child playing beside the river

   Key: A (A woman who gives them food in Savathi)
2. [fill · recall · DOK 1] Complete the quotation from Gotama, paragraph 36: "You've heard the _____, O son of a Brahmin, and good for you that you've thought about it thus deeply"
   Key: teachings
3. [mc · recall · DOK 1] In the line "Then Govinda broke loose, embraced once again his childhood friend and left with the novices.", what does "novices" most nearly mean?
   A. people who give up comforts for spiritual reasons
   B. understandings; realizations
   C. beginners in a religious order
   D. the quality of being united into one

   Key: C (beginners in a religious order)

4. [mc · recall · DOK 1] Which word completes this sentence from Gotama, paragraph 11? "Attentively, Govinda looked at the monk in the yellow robe, who seemed to be in no way _____ from the hundreds of other monks."

   A. hungry
   B. absent
   C. missing
   D. different

   Key: D (different)

5. [mc · recall · DOK 1] According to the woman, in whose garden does the Buddha dwell?

   A. The king's
   B. Anathapindika's
   C. The Brahmins'
   D. Govinda's father's

   Key: B (Anathapindika's)

6. [fill · recall · DOK 1] Fill in the blank with the vocabulary word that fits: "But in the evening, when the heat cooled down and everyone in the camp started to _____ about and gathered around, they heard the Buddha teaching." Word bank: bustle, sneeze, knit, paint

   Key: bustle

7. [mc · recall · DOK 1] In the line "There is nothing to opinions, they may be beautiful or ugly, smart or foolish, everyone can support them or discard them.", what does "discard" most nearly mean?

   A. to forget a habit or way of thinking
   B. to return (a feeling)
   C. to cut apart in order to examine closely
   D. to reject; to throw away

   Key: D (to reject; to throw away)

8. [fill · recall · DOK 1] Complete the quotation from Gotama, paragraph 17: "They heard his voice, and it was also perfected, was of perfect calmness, was full of _____." Word bank: peace, anger, fear, doubt

   Key: peace

9. [fill · recall · DOK 1] Fill in the blank with the vocabulary word that fits: Gotama's whole body seemed to speak his truth: "…spoke of, breathed of, _____ the fragrant of, glistened of truth." Word bank: shouted, exhaled, argued, denied

   Key: exhaled

10. [mc · recall · DOK 1] Which word completes this sentence from Gotama, paragraph 4? "There you pilgrims shall spent the night, for there is enough space for the _____, who flock here, …"

    A. uninterested
    B. innumerable
    C. solitary
    D. departed

    Key: B (innumerable)

11. [mc · inference · DOK 2] Which choice best states how "Gotama" ends?

    A. Siddhartha and Govinda both take the vows

    B. Govinda leaves the order to follow his friend

    C. Gotama asks Siddhartha to stay and teach

    D. Siddhartha leaves alone to learn from himself

    Key: D (Siddhartha leaves alone to learn from himself)

12. [short · inference · DOK 2] What does Siddhartha grant the Buddha's teaching before he objects? Use this line. "… it teaches many to live righteously, to avoid evil." (Gotama, paragraph 37)

    Sample answer: Before he objects, Siddhartha grants that the teaching is good: "… it teaches many to live righteously, to avoid evil." (Gotama, paragraph 37). He admits it helps "many" to live rightly, so his refusal is not a judgment that the teaching is false, only that it cannot give him what Gotama himself found.

13. [mc · analysis · DOK 3] Which literary element does this describe in "Gotama"? In his talk with Gotama, Siddhartha's polite praise and firm refusal show both his respect and his independence.

    A. Personification

    B. Characterization

    C. Hyperbole

    D. Alliteration

    Key: B (Characterization)

14. [short · synthesis · DOK 4] Close reading: how do the diction and syntax of "Never before had Siddhartha venerated a person so much, never before had he loved a person as much as this one" (Gotama, paragraph 15) shape its meaning? Consider a second, competing reading.

    Sample answer: The doubled "never before" builds a parallel climax that ranks Gotama above every teacher Siddhartha has known: "Never before had Siddhartha venerated a person so much, never before had he loved a person as much as this one" (Gotama, paragraph 15). A competing reading says such love means he should, and nearly will, become a disciple like Govinda. But he still leaves, insisting that "nobody will obtain salvation by means of teachings!" (Gotama, paragraph 37). His love is for the man and his example, not for the doctrine, so the hymn-like syntax makes the refusal costlier rather than weaker.

15. [short · synthesis · DOK 4] Close reading: how do the diction and syntax of "But be warned, O seeker of knowledge, of the thicket of opinions and of arguing about words" (Gotama, paragraph 36) shape its meaning? Consider a second, competing reading.

    Sample answer: Gotama answers the young man's objection with a courteous warning: the formal address "O seeker of knowledge" in "But be warned, O seeker of knowledge, of the thicket of opinions and of arguing about words" (Gotama, paragraph 36) honours Siddhartha's search even as the image of a "thicket" turns argument into a place where seekers get lost. A competing reading hears condescension, since calling him a seeker of knowledge can sound like a gentle put-down of a clever youth. But Gotama goes on to engage the objection seriously, explaining that his goal "is salvation from suffering" (Gotama, paragraph 36). The courtesy is the frame for a real answer, not a way of avoiding one.

16. [fill · recall · DOK 1] Fill in the blank with the vocabulary word that fits: "Very early in the morning, a follower of Buddha, one of his oldest monks, went through the garden and called all those to him who had as _____ taken their refuge in the teachings" Word bank: merchants, novices, soldiers, strangers

    Key: novices

17. [mc · recall · DOK 1] Which word completes this sentence from Gotama, paragraph 22? "Govinda, not completely understanding it yet, _____ his question in an impatient tone:"

    A. repeated

    B. sneezed

    C. manufactured

    D. knitted

    Key: A (repeated)

18. [fill · recall · DOK 1] Complete the quotation from Gotama, paragraph 1: "In the town of Savathi, every child knew the name of the exalted Buddha, and every house was prepared to fill the alms-dish of Gotama's _____, the silently begging ones." Word bank: disciples, servants, soldiers, merchants

    Key: disciples

19. [fill · recall · DOK 1] Complete the quotation from Gotama, paragraph 2: "All tales and answers, which the two young ascetics had received in their search for Gotama's _____, had pointed them towards this area."

    Key: abode

20. [fill · recall · DOK 1] Complete the quotation from Gotama, paragraph 35: "never before has this been presented so _____;" Word bank: irrefutably, hungrily, sweetly, politely

    Key: irrefutably

21. [mc · recall · DOK 1] What does Siddhartha call his own speech when he first addresses the Buddha?

    A. Too long

    B. Too foolish

    C. Too bold

    D. Too humble

    Key: C (Too bold)

22. [mc · recall · DOK 1] Which word completes this sentence from Gotama, paragraph 20? "We have both heard the exalted one, we have both _____ the teachings."

    A. forgotten

    B. missed

    C. sold

    D. perceived

    Key: D (perceived)

23. [mc · recall · DOK 1] Ironically, who asks first to join Gotama's community, though he has always followed his friend?

    A. Siddhartha

    B. Govinda

    C. Anathapindika

    D. The oldest Samana

    Key: B (Govinda)

24. [mc · recall · DOK 1] In the line "Many times I have seen him, the exalted one", what does "exalted" most nearly mean?

    A. lost; wandering

B. angry; fierce

C. honoured; raised high

D. young; untried

Key: C (honoured; raised high)

25. [mc · recall · DOK 1] Which word completes this sentence from Gotama, paragraph 16? “They saw Gotama returning—what he ate could not even have satisfied a bird’s _____”

A. feathers

B. song

C. nest

D. appetite

Key: D (appetite)

26. [mc · inference · DOK 2] How do the monks in the grove spend their time under the trees?

A. Selling flowers and food to the pilgrims

B. Sleeping through the hot day

C. In deep contemplation or spiritual talk

D. Building new huts for the crowd

Key: C (In deep contemplation or spiritual talk)

27. [short · inference · DOK 3] State Siddhartha's main objection to following the Buddha, using this line. “nobody will obtain salvation by means of teachings!” (Gotama, paragraph 37) Answer by connecting it to one earlier chapter: quote a second passage and explain how the two passages together develop the idea.

Sample answer: He argues that the Buddha reached enlightenment by his own experience, so “nobody will obtain salvation by means of teachings!” (Gotama, paragraph 37). The exclamation shows conviction: even a perfect teaching cannot carry the experience itself, so Siddhartha must find it alone. He had already learned this among the Samanas, whose oldest member “has lived for sixty years and has not reached the nirvana” (With the Samanas, paragraph 20). Together the passages show his objection growing out of experience: no teacher, however great, has given anyone the self he seeks.

28. [mc · analysis · DOK 3] Which literary element does this describe in “Gotama”? Gotama, the Buddha, is shown through his calm walk and smile; Siddhartha reveres him at once.

A. Imagery

B. Characterization

C. Alliteration

D. Symbolism

Key: B (Characterization)

29. [short · analysis · DOK 3] How does Hesse show Gotama's holiness without a speech? Use this line. “This man, this Buddha was truthful down to the gesture of his last finger.” (Gotama, paragraph 15)

Sample answer: Through his body and manner: “This man, this Buddha was truthful down to the gesture of his last finger.” (Gotama, paragraph 15). "Down to the gesture of his last finger" shows his truth is lived in every small movement, not just taught in words, which prepares Siddhartha's argument that the Buddha's experience cannot be passed on.

30. [short · synthesis · DOK 4] Close reading: how do the diction and syntax of “I saw a man, Siddhartha thought, a single man, before whom I would have to lower my glance.” (Gotama, paragraph 45) shape its meaning? Consider a second, competing reading.

Sample answer: The sentence narrows the whole world down to one person: “I saw a man, Siddhartha thought, a single man, before whom I would have to lower my glance." (Gotama, paragraph 45). The repetition "a man … a single man" isolates Gotama as unique, and "lower my glance" is a gesture of reverence that Siddhartha will grant to no one else. A competing reading hears pride, as if he means that no other person deserves his respect. But the sentence is built around submission, not superiority: having once bowed his eyes to the Buddha, he refuses to follow lesser teachers, so his independence grows out of reverence rather than arrogance.

31. [mc · recall · DOK 1] When Siddhartha first sees the Buddha, what is the Buddha carrying?

    A. A staff of bamboo

    B. His alms-dish

    C. A holy book

    D. A string of beads

    Key: B (His alms-dish)

32. [fill · recall · DOK 1] Complete the quotation from Gotama, paragraph 15: "Never before had Siddhartha _____ a person so much, never before had he loved a person as much as this one"

    Key: venerated

33. [fill · recall · DOK 1] Fill in the blank with the vocabulary word that fits: "With half of a smile, with an unwavering _____ and kindness, Gotama looked into the stranger's eyes and bid him to leave with a hardly noticeable gesture." Word bank: anger, openness, coldness, suspicion

    Key: openness

34. [mc · recall · DOK 1] Which word completes this sentence from Gotama, paragraph 8? "the shady gardens looked like a city, full of people, bustling like _____."

    A. stones

    B. ghosts

    C. statues

    D. bees

    Key: D (bees)

35. [mc · recall · DOK 1] Which word completes this sentence from Gotama, paragraph 43? "The Buddha turned away, and his glance and half of a smile remained forever _____ in Siddhartha's memory."

    A. lost

    B. etched

    C. buried

    D. hidden

    Key: B (etched)

36. [fill · recall · DOK 1] Complete the quotation from Gotama, paragraph 46: "He has deprived me of my _____, the one who had believed in me and now believes in him"

    Key: friend

37. [fill · recall · DOK 1] Complete the quotation from Gotama, paragraph 30: "Silently the exalted one _____ his approval." Word bank: swam, baked, knitted, nodded

    Key: nodded

38. [fill · recall · DOK 1] Complete the quotation from Gotama, paragraph 6: "On many days, I have seen him, walking through the alleys in silence, wearing his yellow _____" Word bank: crown, cloak, armour, jewels

    Key: cloak

39. [fill · recall · DOK 1] Complete the quotation from Gotama, paragraph 37: “You are truly right, there is little to _____.” Word bank: rivers, candles, opinions, horses

    Key: opinions

40. [mc · recall · DOK 1] Why does Siddhartha say he will not look for other teachers after leaving Gotama?

    A. He plans to return to the Samanas

    B. He has promised Govinda to wait for him

    C. He believes no better teachings exist

    D. He wants to found a school of his own

    Key: C (He believes no better teachings exist)

41. [mc · inference · DOK 2] What gap does Siddhartha find in Gotama’s teachings?

    A. The teachings say nothing at all about suffering

    B. The teachings forbid monks to beg for food

    C. The teaching of salvation breaks the unbroken chain of causes

    D. The teachings demand far too much fasting

    Key: C (The teaching of salvation breaks the unbroken chain of causes)

42. [short · inference · DOK 3] What does Siddhartha mean when he says the Buddha has given him himself? Use this line. “But he has given me Siddhartha, myself.” (Gotama, paragraph 46) Answer by connecting it to one earlier chapter: quote a second passage and explain how the two passages together develop the idea.

    Sample answer: Siddhartha means that by losing Govinda and refusing every teacher he is thrown back on his own self, the very thing he set out to find. The evidence is “But he has given me Siddhartha, myself.” (Gotama, paragraph 46). The question that drove him from home was “But where, where was this self, this innermost part, this ultimate part?” (The Son of the Brahmin, paragraph 8). Together the passages show the search turning inward: the self he once looked for in rituals and teachers is now given to him only when he stands alone.

43. [mc · analysis · DOK 3] Which literary element does this describe in “Gotama”? The Buddha’s face, his lowered glance and even every finger of his quietly hanging hand seem to express peace.

    A. Imagery

    B. Dialogue

    C. Plot

    D. Point of view

    Key: A (Imagery)

44. [short · analysis · DOK 3] How does Hesse show the Buddha’s peace through the way he walks? Use this line. “With a hidden smile, quiet, calm, somewhat resembling a healthy child, the Buddha walked” (Gotama, paragraph 12)

    Sample answer: Hesse shows the Buddha’s peace through ordinary movement rather than speech. The evidence is “With a hidden smile, quiet, calm, somewhat resembling a healthy child, the Buddha walked” (Gotama, paragraph 12). The list “quiet, calm” slows the sentence to his pace, and the comparison to “a healthy child” suggests a simple, natural ease, so his holiness is visible in the way he walks before he says a single word.

45. [short · synthesis · DOK 4] Synthesis: trace how teaching versus experience develops from With the Samanas to Gotama. Use one quotation from each.

    Sample answer: Doubt about method grows into a refusal of all teaching. In With the Samanas he judges his years of discipline: “I could have learned more quickly and by simpler means” (With the Samanas, paragraph 11). In Gotama he extends that doubt even to the best teacher: "nobody will obtain salvation by means of teachings!" (Gotama, paragraph 37). What began as distrust of one method becomes a conviction that the decisive step must be experienced, not taught.

46. [fill · recall · DOK 1] Fill in the blank with the word that fits: "But with this small gap, with this small _____, the entire eternal and uniform law of the world is breaking apart again" Word bank: breach, garden, feast, song
    Key: breach

47. [fill · recall · DOK 1] Fill in the blank with the word that fits: "For a long time, the friends continued walking in the grove; for a long time, they lay there and found no _____." Word bank: sleep, food, path, teacher
    Key: sleep

48. [mc · inference · DOK 2] What does this passage most clearly show? "You've heard the teachings, O son of a Brahmin, and good for you that you've thought about it thus deeply" (Gotama, paragraph 36)
    A. Gotama meets the challenge with courtesy.
    B. Gotama's anger at being challenged.
    C. Gotama's offer to make him a monk.
    D. Gotama's admission that his teaching is false.

    Key: A (Gotama meets the challenge with courtesy.)

49. [mc · inference · DOK 2] What does this passage most clearly show? "Never before had Siddhartha venerated a person so much, never before had he loved a person as much as this one" (Gotama, paragraph 15)
    A. Doubt that will make him join the monks
    B. Reverence that will make his later refusal striking
    C. Envy of Govinda's new place among the Buddha's monks
    D. Contempt that makes him leave the grove

    Key: B (Reverence that will make his later refusal striking)

50. [short · inference · DOK 2] Why does Siddhartha refuse to join the monks? Use this line. "Only for myself, for myself alone, I must decide, I must choose, I must refuse." (Gotama, paragraph 40)
    Sample answer: Siddhartha refuses because the decision about his path can only be his own, not a teacher's. The evidence is "Only for myself, for myself alone, I must decide, I must choose, I must refuse." (Gotama, paragraph 40). The repeated "for myself" and the three verbs "decide," "choose," "refuse" show that he is not rejecting Gotama's truth but claiming responsibility for his own search, which is why he can wish the monks well and still leave.

51. [mc · inference · DOK 2] What does the Buddha's face show while Siddhartha states his objection?
    A. Flashing anger
    B. Open amusement
    C. Calm equanimity
    D. Bitter, open contempt

    Key: C (Calm equanimity)

52. [tf · inference · DOK 2] True or false: Siddhartha doubts that Gotama has truly reached enlightenment.
    Key: False (He says, "I have not doubted for a single moment that you are Buddha.")

53. [tf · inference · DOK 2] True or false: Govinda weeps when he understands that his friend will not walk the same path as he does.
    Key: True (He weeps when he realizes "that his friend had left him.")

54. [tf · inference · DOK 2] True or false: Govinda recognizes the Buddha before Siddhartha does.
    Key: False (Siddhartha "instantly recognised him"; only "soon" after did Govinda realize it.)

55. [mc · analysis · DOK 3] Which literary element does this describe in “Gotama”? The narrator calls Gotama by a series of solemn titles: the exalted one, the perfected one, the venerable one.

    A. Setting

    B. Plot

    C. Diction

    D. Foreshadowing

    Key: C (Diction)

56. [mc · analysis · DOK 3] Which literary element does this describe in “Gotama”? A narrator outside the story reports what Siddhartha privately thinks as he watches the Buddha walk away.

    A. Imagery

    B. Alliteration

    C. Personification

    D. Point of view

    Key: D (Point of view)

57. [short · analysis · DOK 3] How does Hesse show the effect of the Buddha’s voice on his listeners? Use this line. “brightly and quietly his voice hovered over the listeners, like a light, like a starry sky” (Gotama, paragraph 17)

    Sample answer: Hesse makes the Buddha’s voice seem to fill the space above his listeners like light. The evidence is “brightly and quietly his voice hovered over the listeners, like a light, like a starry sky” (Gotama, paragraph 17). The paired similes “like a light, like a starry sky” make the sound something seen rather than heard, and “hovered” suggests calm and gentle authority, so the teaching seems to shelter the crowd rather than argue with it.

58. [short · analysis · DOK 3] Analyze the word choice in “Be aware of too much wisdom” (Gotama, paragraph 42). Pick two words and explain what they suggest.

    Sample answer: Gotama warns Siddhartha that his cleverness may itself be a danger. The evidence is “Be aware of too much wisdom” (Gotama, paragraph 42). The words "aware" and "too much" turn wisdom itself into a danger: Gotama cautions that cleverness can become a trap. He sees that Siddhartha's sharp mind may keep him from the experience he is seeking.

59. [match · analysis · DOK 3] Match each detail of Gotama’s appearance (1-4) to what it shows (A-D). Use each letter once.

    1. “his quietly dangling hand” (paragraph 12)
    2. “placed his feet just as all of his monks did” (paragraph 12)
    3. “could not even have satisfied a bird’s appetite” (paragraph 16)
    4. “bearing the alms-dish in his hand” (paragraph 9)

    A. Humility, with no wish to stand out

    B. Freedom from bodily desire

    C. A beggar’s simplicity, though he is the Buddha

    D. Peace present even in the smallest gesture

    Key: 1-D, 2-A, 3-B, 4-C

60. [short · synthesis · DOK 4] Synthesis: trace how Govinda’s dependence on Siddhartha develops from With the Samanas to Gotama. Use one quotation from each.

    Sample answer: Govinda moves from being Siddhartha’s shadow to choosing a path of his own. In With the Samanas he simply mirrors his friend: “By his side lived Govinda, his shadow, walked the same paths, undertook the same efforts.”

(With the Samanas, paragraph 8). In Gotama he steps forward first, and Siddhartha greets the change: "Behold, now you've turned into a man and are choosing your path for yourself." (Gotama, paragraph 21). The word "shadow" gives way to "a man," but the irony is that Govinda becomes himself only by taking a new master, so he trades one shadow for another while Siddhartha goes on alone.

61. [fill · recall · DOK 1 · Dual Credit (Indiana College Core): ICC-WC-1.5] Complete the quotation from Gotama, paragraph 36: "Quietly, Gotama had listened to him, _____." Word bank: uncooked, unwritten, unmoved, unsalted
Key: unmoved

62. [mc · inference · DOK 2 · Dual Credit (Indiana College Core): ICC-WC-1.5] What does Siddhartha remind Govinda that the Buddha's teachings require of a monk?

A. Giving all of his money to the poor of Savathi
B. Renouncing home, possessions, free will and friendship
C. Fasting for twenty-eight days at a time
D. Learning every verse of the Vedas by heart

Key: B (Renouncing home, possessions, free will and friendship)

63. [mc · inference · DOK 2 · Dual Credit (Indiana College Core): ICC-WC-1.5] What does this passage most clearly show? "Siddhartha saw him, and he instantly recognised him, as if a god had pointed him out to him." (Gotama, paragraph 9)

A. Siddhartha has met the Buddha before in the forest.
B. A god speaks to Siddhartha in the grove.
C. The Buddha's holiness is plain to him at once.
D. Govinda points the Buddha out to him first.

Key: C (The Buddha's holiness is plain to him at once.)

64. [mc · inference · DOK 2 · Dual Credit (Indiana College Core): ICC-WC-1.5] What does this passage most clearly show? "Be content, Govinda! Very good are the teachings of the exalted one, how could I find a fault in them?" (Gotama, paragraph 27)

A. He will not let his doubts shake Govinda's new faith.
B. He has decided to join the monks after all.
C. He thinks the teachings are full of faults.
D. He is angry with Govinda for leaving him.

Key: A (He will not let his doubts shake Govinda's new faith.)

65. [short · inference · DOK 2 · Dual Credit (Indiana College Core): ICC-WC-1.5] What does Siddhartha fear would happen to him as a disciple? Use this line. "for then I had replaced my self with the teachings, my duty to follow you, my love for you, and the community of the monks!" (Gotama, paragraph 40)
Sample answer: Siddhartha fears that discipleship would only hide his self, not overcome it. The evidence is "for then I had replaced my self with the teachings, my duty to follow you, my love for you, and the community of the monks!" (Gotama, paragraph 40). The word "replaced" is the key: the teachings, the duty and even his love for Gotama would become a new self to cling to, so he would only seem calm while his real self lived on underneath.

66. [tf · inference · DOK 2 · Dual Credit (Indiana College Core): ICC-WC-1.5] True or false: Siddhartha leaves Gotama even though he believes that no better teaching exists.
Key: True (He leaves "not to seek other, better teachings, for I know there are none.")

67. [mc · analysis · DOK 3 · Dual Credit (Indiana College Core): ICC-WC-1.5] Paragraph 11 says the Buddha looked "in no way different" from hundreds of other monks, yet paragraph 13 says the two Samanas knew him by "his calm" alone. What does this pairing suggest about holiness in the chapter?

    A. It depends on the yellow robe that the monks all wear

    B. It is a rumour the pilgrims spread among themselves

    C. It is a reward for those who keep the precise rule

    D. It lies in how he is, not in an outward mark of rank

    Key: D (It lies in how he is, not in an outward mark of rank)

68. [short · analysis · DOK 3 · Dual Credit (Indiana College Core): ICC-WC-1.5] Gotama dismisses Siddhartha with a "hardly noticeable" gesture (paragraph 41), and his look and "half of a smile" stay in Siddhartha's memory for ever (paragraph 43). Explain how these small physical details answer Siddhartha's long argument in paragraph 37.

    Sample answer: They answer it in the only way Siddhartha's argument allows. In paragraph 37 he says that what happened to the Buddha "in the hour of enlightenment" cannot be passed on "in words and through teachings" (Gotama, paragraph 37). Gotama does not argue the point. He ends the conversation "with a hardly noticeable gesture" (paragraph 41), and what Siddhartha keeps is not a reply but an image: "his glance and half of a smile remained forever etched in Siddhartha's memory" (paragraph 43). The details show something being conveyed without words, which both confirms Siddhartha's claim and quietly complicates it, since he has learned something from this teacher after all, as paragraph 44 admits.

69. [mc · analysis · DOK 3 · Dual Credit (Indiana College Core): ICC-WC-1.5] Before the debate, the Buddha answers Siddhartha with a polite three-word assent (paragraph 32) and with silent nods (paragraphs 30 and 34). What does this restraint establish for the dialogue that follows?

    A. It shows a teacher reluctant to hear any young man's objection

    B. It shows a teacher at rest, letting the seeker set the terms

    C. It shows a teacher testing whether the young man is rude

    D. It shows a teacher unable to speak freely before his monks

    Key: B (It shows a teacher at rest, letting the seeker set the terms)

70. [match · analysis · DOK 3 · Dual Credit (Indiana College Core): ICC-WC-1.5] Paragraphs 12-15 show the Buddha's holiness through his body. Match each detail (1-4) to what it shows (A-D). Use each letter once.

    1. "his calm face was neither happy nor sad" (paragraph 12)
    2. "according to a precise rule" (paragraph 12)
    3. "no effort to be seen" (paragraph 13)
    4. "the gesture of his last finger" (paragraph 15)

    A. Outward sameness with every other monk

    B. A peace beyond ordinary moods

    C. Holiness that does not perform for others

    D. Truth carried into the smallest movement

    Key: 1-B, 2-A, 3-C, 4-D

71. [mc · analysis · DOK 3 · Dual Credit (Indiana College Core): ICC-WC-1.5] "I wish that you would go this path up to its end" is…

    A. A farewell blessing, not a choice for himself

    B. A hint that he too will join the order by morning

C. A quiet rebuke of Govinda's choice

D. A promise to follow Govinda later

Key: A (A farewell blessing, not a choice for himself)

72. [mc · analysis · DOK 3 · Dual Credit (Indiana College Core): ICC-WC-1.5] Gotama answers the "gap" objection by saying his teaching aims at…

A. A perfect chain without any gaps

B. Winning over the learned Brahmins of the towns

C. Salvation from suffering, not explanation

D. Proving that the gods exist

Key: C (Salvation from suffering, not explanation)

73. [short · analysis · DOK 3 · Dual Credit (Indiana College Core): ICC-WC-1.5] Why does Siddhartha refuse to tell Govinda his objection to the teaching?

Sample answer: Siddhartha wants Govinda's first independent choice to stand. He has long hoped Govinda would "take a step by himself, without me, out of his own soul?" (Gotama, paragraph 21), so arguing against the teaching now would pull his friend back into his shadow. He therefore praises it, "Very good are the teachings of the exalted one" (paragraph 27), and keeps his doubts for Gotama himself.

74. [mc · analysis · DOK 3 · Dual Credit (Indiana College Core): ICC-WC-1.5] Gotama's reply "As you please" to Siddhartha's leaving mainly shows that he…

A. Does not try to hold any seeker

B. Is quietly offended by Siddhartha's choice

C. Has not really been listening to him

D. Expects Siddhartha to return to him soon

Key: A (Does not try to hold any seeker)

75. [short · synthesis · DOK 4 · Dual Credit (Indiana College Core): ICC-WC-1.5] Compare Siddhartha's two leave-takings: from the oldest Samana by a spell (With the Samanas, paragraph 41) and from Gotama after an honest objection (Gotama, paragraphs 33-37). What does the difference show about what he has learned? Use one quotation from each chapter.

Sample answer: The difference shows that he has stopped trying to win. Leaving the Samanas, he answers the old man's anger by showing his power: he "took away his free will, subdued him under his own will" (With the Samanas, paragraph 41), and the blessing is forced. Leaving Gotama, he asks permission to speak, calls his own speech "Too bold" (Gotama, paragraph 33) and closes with reverence, "when my eyes beheld a holy man" (paragraph 37). With the Samanas he proved he had learned their feats; with Gotama he refuses the teaching while honouring the teacher. He has learned that his quarrel is with teachings, not with persons, which is why he can say of Gotama's monks, "It is not my place to judge another person's life" (paragraph 40).

76. [fill · recall · DOK 1] Fill in the blank with the vocabulary word that fits: "There is nothing to opinions, they may be beautiful or ugly, smart or foolish, everyone can support them or _____ them." Word bank: sell, paint, discard, carry

Key: discard

77. [mc · inference · DOK 2] By what do the two Samanas recognise the Buddha as he passes?

A. The perfection of his calm

B. His golden robe and crown

C. The guards who walk around him

D. His loud and ringing voice

Key: A (The perfection of his calm)

78. [short · inference · DOK 2] What does Siddhartha admire in Gotama's teachings before he raises his objection? Use this line. "you are presenting the world as a perfect chain, a chain which is never and nowhere broken" (Gotama, paragraph 35)

Sample answer: Siddhartha admires the teaching's complete, unbroken logic. The evidence is "you are presenting the world as a perfect chain, a chain which is never and nowhere broken" (Gotama, paragraph 35). The image of a "perfect chain" of causes and effects praises the teaching's clarity, but it also sets up his objection: if the chain is truly "never and nowhere broken," then a teaching of escape from it creates the very gap he goes on to name.

79. [short · analysis · DOK 3] Hesse says Gotama's hand "glistened of truth," while Siddhartha "felt little curiosity for the teachings." Explain how this split between the man and the doctrine sets up Siddhartha's refusal. Quote one detail.

Sample answer: Siddhartha expects nothing new from the doctrine, which he has heard "again and again" at second or third hand, yet he finds truth in Gotama's body, down to a hand that "glistened of truth" (Gotama, paragraph 15). The split places truth in the man's lived example rather than in his words. That is the ground of his later refusal: Gotama's salvation came "through enlightenment," not through teachings, so Siddhartha can revere the man and still decline the doctrine (paragraph 37).

80. [mc · analysis · DOK 3] Gotama's reply in paragraph 36 grants that Siddhartha has found "a gap," an error, yet says the teachings' aim is "not to explain" the world to seekers of knowledge. How does this reply change the ground of the dialogue?

A. It admits the error and offers to revise the teachings

B. It accuses Siddhartha of arguing in bad faith to win

C. It moves the question from consistency to its purpose

D. It asks Siddhartha to stay and study the gap with him

Key: C (It moves the question from consistency to its purpose)

81. [mc · analysis · DOK 3] Paragraph 44 describes the Buddha's manner as free, "thus concealed," venerable, "thus open," childlike and mysterious. What does the pairing of opposites in this list do?

A. It shows Siddhartha unsure whether he can trust the Buddha

B. It shows the Buddha hiding his doubts behind a smile

C. It shows the monks seeing him differently from Siddhartha

D. It shows a holiness that no ordinary category can hold

Key: D (It shows a holiness that no ordinary category can hold)

82. [mc · analysis · DOK 3] Siddhartha reminds Govinda that, as a monk, he has renounced "all friendship." Why does he say this to his oldest friend?

A. To punish Govinda for joining the order without him

B. To make Govinda face the full cost of his new vow

C. To persuade Govinda to break the vow and leave with him

D. To show that he himself no longer needs any friends

Key: B (To make Govinda face the full cost of his new vow)

83. [mc · analysis · DOK 3] Gotama's description in the grove stresses…

    A. Truth shown in gesture, not words

    B. Royal birth shown in his bearing

    C. A robe set apart from his monks' robes

    D. Miracles worked in the street

    Key: A (Truth shown in gesture, not words)

84. [mc · analysis · DOK 3] Where do most of the monks in the grove go each morning?

    A. Down to the river to wash themselves before prayer

    B. Deep into the forest to meditate there alone

    C. Into town with their alms-dish to collect food

    D. To the gate of the grove to greet new pilgrims

    Key: C (Into town with their alms-dish to collect food)

85. [short · analysis · DOK 3] Why does Govinda weep when Siddhartha repeats his good wish (Gotama, paragraphs 23-24)? Answer in two or three sentences, quoting the text.

    Sample answer: Govinda weeps because the repeated wish tells him, without a refusal ever being spoken, that Siddhartha will not join him. Siddhartha says again, "I wish that you would go this path up to its end, that you shall find salvation!" (Gotama, paragraph 23), and only then "Govinda realized that his friend had left him, and he started to weep" (paragraph 24). A blessing for the road is also a farewell, so the kind words mark the end of a lifetime of walking together.

86. [match · analysis · DOK 3] Match each phrase from Siddhartha's objection (1-4) to its role in his argument (A-D). Use each letter once.

    1. "a perfect chain" (paragraph 35)
    2. "a small gap" (paragraph 35)
    3. "cannot be demonstrated and cannot be proven" (paragraph 35)
    4. "Please forgive me for expressing this objection." (paragraph 35)

    A. Courtesy that softens the challenge

    B. Praise of the teaching's unity

    C. The point where that unity breaks

    D. Why the break matters to a careful thinker

    Key: 1-B, 2-C, 3-D, 4-A

87. [mc · analysis · DOK 3] Why does Govinda speak of himself in the third person ("Govinda has heard the teachings")?

    A. To hide his own lingering doubts from Siddhartha

    B. To sound humble before his honoured friend

    C. To show that he is still unsure of himself

    D. To announce his choice as a settled, final fact

    Key: D (To announce his choice as a settled, final fact)

88. [short · synthesis · DOK 3] Siddhartha tells Gotama that salvation did not come to Gotama by "means of teachings" (paragraph 37), yet in paragraph 44 he resolves to "glance and smile," to sit and to walk as the Buddha does. Is he now imitating a teacher after all? Argue, using paragraphs 37, 44 and 45.

    Sample answer: He is following an example, not a teaching, and the chapter keeps the two apart. In paragraph 37 his claim is about doctrine: salvation "has not come to you by means of teachings!" (Gotama, paragraph 37), and he goes on to say he will "depart from all teachings and all teachers." In paragraph 44 he wants to "glance and smile, sit and walk this way, too" (paragraph 44), which sounds like imitation. But the next sentence gives the reason: "only a person who has succeeded in reaching the innermost part of his self would glance and walk this way," so he resolves to reach "the innermost part of my self," not to copy the walk. Paragraph 45 confirms the line he draws: "No teachings will entice me any more, since this man's teachings have not enticed me." The objection still has force, since the Buddha is plainly a model; Siddhartha has rejected the teacher's words, not the teacher's example.

89. [short · synthesis · DOK 4] In With the Samanas, paragraph 36, Siddhartha says his "faith in words" from teachers is small. In Gotama, paragraph 45, he says teachings "will entice me" no longer. Has his distrust of teaching grown, or changed in kind? Evaluate two readings and use both passages.
Sample answer: It has changed in kind. In With the Samanas the distrust is a weariness: he has "grown distrustful and tired against teachings and learning," and his "faith in words, which are brought to us by teachers, is small" (With the Samanas, paragraph 36). Small is not none; he still agrees to hear Gotama, hoping for "other and better things" (paragraph 38). In Gotama the distrust has become a principle with a reason: what the Buddha experienced cannot be conveyed "in words and through teachings" (Gotama, paragraph 37), so "No teachings will entice me any more, since this man's teachings have not enticed me" (paragraph 45). One reading says the distrust merely grew, from small to total. The better reading notes the change of ground: before, teachers had failed him; now, even the best teaching must fail, because the goal cannot be taught. The test case is decisive: he finds no fault in the teaching (paragraph 27) and still leaves.

90. [short · synthesis · DOK 4] Close reading: how do the diction and syntax of "The Buddha's eyes quietly looked to the ground; quietly, in perfect equanimity his inscrutable face was smiling." (Gotama, paragraph 38) shape its meaning? Consider a second, competing reading.
Sample answer: The doubled adverb makes the Buddha's silence the real answer to Siddhartha's argument: "The Buddha's eyes quietly looked to the ground; quietly, in perfect equanimity his inscrutable face was smiling." (Gotama, paragraph 38). "Quietly" opens both halves of the sentence, the semicolon holds a pause, and "inscrutable" tells us his calm cannot be read or argued with. A competing reading sees the lowered eyes as hurt or disapproval at the young man's boldness. But "perfect equanimity" rules that out: the smile shows a peace that words cannot disturb, which is exactly the experience Siddhartha says teachings cannot pass on.

91. [fill · recall · DOK 1] Fill in the blank with the word that fits: "Then Govinda broke loose, _____ once again his childhood friend and left with the novices." Word bank: embraced, painted, swallowed, hammered
Key: embraced

92. [mc · inference · DOK 2] Which detail first shows the friends how large the Buddha's following is?
A. The king himself waits at the gate
B. A crowd has spent the night in the grove
C. Gold is heaped at the Buddha's feet
D. Soldiers have closed the road to Savathi

Key: B (A crowd has spent the night in the grove)

93. [short · inference · DOK 2] How does Gotama answer Siddhartha's objection? Use this line. "They have a different goal; their goal is salvation from suffering." (Gotama, paragraph 36)
Sample answer: Gotama calmly sidesteps the argument by saying his teachings were never meant to explain the world. The evidence is "They have a different goal; their goal is salvation from suffering." (Gotama, paragraph 36). By repeating "goal," he shifts the question from logic to purpose: a gap in the explanation does not matter if the teaching frees people from suffering, and his calm refusal to argue shows the peace he has reached.

94. [mc · analysis · DOK 3] How does Siddhartha describe Govinda's place beside him over the years?

    A. Always leading the way ahead of him

    B. Always far away, in another town

    C. Always arguing with him about the gods

    D. Always one step behind him

    Key: D (Always one step behind him)

95. [mc · analysis · DOK 3] Gotama's voice hovers over the listeners "like a light, like a starry sky" (paragraph 17). What do these similes stress about the teaching as Siddhartha hears it?

    A. Its calm clarity more than any new content it brings

    B. Its harshness toward listeners who still doubt it

    C. Its strangeness to ears that the Brahmins had trained

    D. Its speed, which leaves many pilgrims unable to follow

    Key: A (Its calm clarity more than any new content it brings)

96. [mc · analysis · DOK 3] Gotama "placed his feet just as all of his monks did." Why does Hesse stress that the Buddha walks like his monks?

    A. His holiness shows in not setting himself apart

    B. He hides among the monks to escape the crowds

    C. His monks have made themselves exact copies of him

    D. Seekers must prove they can recognize him unaided

    Key: A (His holiness shows in not setting himself apart)

97. [short · analysis · DOK 3] Gotama addresses Siddhartha as "son of a Brahmin" (paragraph 36), "O stranger, O Samana" (paragraph 39) and finally "my friend" (paragraph 42). What does the change of address suggest about how Gotama sees him, and how should we read the last one?

    Sample answer: The forms of address track the conversation. "O son of a Brahmin" (Gotama, paragraph 36) names his birth and training, fitting for a young man who has just argued like a Brahmin about causes. "O stranger, O Samana" (paragraph 39) comes when Siddhartha has said he will not join, so Gotama names him as an outsider and a wandering ascetic, which is exactly what he has chosen to remain. The last, "my friend" (paragraph 42), arrives with the warning "Be aware of too much wisdom," so it is warm but not flattering: Gotama treats him as an equal seeker while cautioning him. The sequence moves from his origin to his choice to a bond that does not depend on discipleship.

98. [mc · analysis · DOK 3] Siddhartha's objection targets…

    A. The claim that life is suffering

    B. The Buddha's personal holiness

    C. A break in the chain of causes

    D. The rules for monks

    Key: C (A break in the chain of causes)

99. [mc · analysis · DOK 3] Govinda asks Siddhartha, "Would you want to hesitate, do you want to wait any longer?" (Gotama, paragraph 20). What does the question reveal about Govinda?

    A. He doubts the Buddha's teaching himself

    B. He still wants his friend beside him on the new path

    C. He wants Siddhartha to leave the grove alone at once

D. He is angry that Siddhartha spoke to Gotama first

Key: B (He still wants his friend beside him on the new path)

100. [short · analysis · DOK 3] Why does Siddhartha refuse to judge the monks who stay with Gotama? Use this line. "It is not my place to judge another person's life." (Gotama, paragraph 40)

Sample answer: Siddhartha refuses to judge the monks because his quarrel is not with them or with the teaching but with the idea of reaching peace through any teaching at all. He says, "It is not my place to judge another person's life" (Gotama, paragraph 40): each person, Govinda included, must choose his own way, and he claims only the right to choose his own.

101. [match · analysis · DOK 3] Match each line (1-4) to what it reveals about its speaker (A-D). Use each letter once.

1. Siddhartha: "Only for myself, for myself alone, I must decide" (paragraph 40)
2. Gotama: "As you please" (paragraph 32)
3. Govinda: "I also take my refuge in the exalted one and his teachings" (paragraph 19)
4. Siddhartha: "Be content, Govinda!" (paragraph 27)

A. A choice that binds only himself

B. A first choice made without his friend

C. Refusal to sway his friend's decision

D. Freedom from any wish to hold a follower

Key: 1-A, 2-D, 3-B, 4-C

102. [short · synthesis · DOK 4] Siddhartha has "never before" loved a person "as much as this one" (Gotama, paragraph 15), yet he refuses to follow Gotama. Is the refusal a betrayal of that love or a way of honouring it? Argue from paragraph 15 and one later passage.

Sample answer: It is better read as honouring it. What Siddhartha loves in paragraph 15 is not a doctrine but a man who is "truthful down to the gesture of his last finger" (Gotama, paragraph 15), someone whose peace was reached on his own path. To follow that example faithfully is to seek as Gotama sought, so Siddhartha leaves "to depart from all teachings and all teachers and to reach my goal by myself or to die" (paragraph 37). The refusal looks like betrayal only if love must mean discipleship, and Siddhartha fears that discipleship would put "my love for you" in the place of his self (paragraph 40). His refusal keeps the love and will not let it harden into another teaching.

103. [short · synthesis · DOK 4] Gotama accepts each new monk with the words "You have heard the teachings well, it has come to you well" (Gotama, paragraph 18). Has Govinda heard the teachings well, or has he only followed? Argue one reading with evidence from paragraphs 18-24 and answer the other.

Sample answer: Govinda has heard well, though following is part of how he hears. He steps forward on his own, before Siddhartha has said a word: "I also take my refuge in the exalted one and his teachings" (Gotama, paragraph 19), and Gotama's formula, "You have heard the teachings well, it has come to you well" (paragraph 18), applies to him as to every pilgrim. The other reading points to his eager question, "don't you also want to walk the path of salvation?" (paragraph 20), as if the choice still needed his friend's company. But when the answer is no, he does not turn back; he weeps (paragraph 24) and stays. The hearing is real, and what he follows now is a teaching he has chosen, not a friend.

104. [short · synthesis · DOK 4] In paragraph 26 Siddhartha speaks "kindly" while listing everything Govinda has "renounced"; in paragraph 28 Govinda "broke loose" to join the Buddha's new monks. Is Siddhartha's speech an act of kindness or of distancing? Argue one reading and answer the other.

Sample answer: It is kindness that works by distancing. Siddhartha "kindly spoke to him" (Gotama, paragraph 26), but the content is a list of losses that runs from "renounced your home and your parents" to "renounced all friendship" and ends "Tomorrow, O Govinda, I'll leave you." The kindness lies in making Govinda face the full cost of the vow now, so that he does not join while still leaning on his friend; it completes Siddhartha's wish that Govinda would take "a step by himself, without me" (paragraph 21). The distancing reading is strong: the last item on the list turns the vow into a reason to part, and Govinda has already wept at losing him (paragraph 24). Yet paragraph 28 shows the speech working as intended: Govinda "broke loose," embraced his friend and went with the novices. The speech is distancing in effect and kind in purpose.

105. [short · synthesis · DOK 4] Gotama warns against "the thicket of opinions." Does Siddhartha's reply escape that thicket, or enter it?

Sample answer: Siddhartha says he has not spoken "to argue about words" (Gotama, paragraph 37), and his reply does shift ground: he no longer disputes the logic but points to experience, since Gotama's salvation "has not come to you by means of teachings!" That is a claim about how truth is reached, not another opinion about the world. Yet it is still an argument made of words, and Gotama's parting "Be aware of too much wisdom!" suggests he hears cleverness in it. The best reading is that Siddhartha leaves the debate about the teaching but not yet the pride of debating.

106. [fill · recall · DOK 1] Complete the quotation from Gotama, paragraph 17: "brightly and quietly his voice hovered over the listeners, like a light, like a starry _____." Word bank: cave, well, sky, room

Key: sky

107. [mc · inference · DOK 2] What does Gotama teach in his evening sermon, as the narrator sums it up?

A. The teachings of suffering, its origin and its relief
B. The ranks and duties of the Brahmin caste
C. The rules for fasting and holding the breath for long
D. The names and deeds of the old gods

Key: A (The teachings of suffering, its origin and its relief)

108. [mc · inference · DOK 2] What does this passage most clearly show? "It is not my place to judge another person's life." (Gotama, paragraph 40)

A. He refuses the path for himself alone, not for others.
B. He thinks the monks are foolish to stay.
C. He wants Gotama to judge him instead.
D. He is still unsure whether he will leave.

Key: A (He refuses the path for himself alone, not for others.)

109. [short · inference · DOK 2] How does Siddhartha view Govinda's decision to join the monks? Use this line. "Behold, now you've turned into a man and are choosing your path for yourself." (Gotama, paragraph 21)

Sample answer: Siddhartha welcomes the decision as Govinda's first truly independent step. The evidence is "Behold, now you've turned into a man and are choosing your path for yourself." (Gotama, paragraph 21). "Turned into a man" suggests that Govinda has grown up by choosing without him, and "for yourself" praises the independence Siddhartha had long hoped for, even though it means losing his closest friend.

110. [short · analysis · DOK 3] After the objection Gotama's face is "inscrutable" (paragraph 38), although in paragraph 15 every finger seemed to show truth. Why does the narrator, who read Gotama so easily, now find him unreadable?

Sample answer: In paragraph 15 Siddhartha reads Gotama's body as a text in which every joint "glistened of truth" (Gotama, paragraph 15); the narrator shares his confident reading. After the objection the narration stops interpreting: "in perfect equanimity his inscrutable face was smiling" (paragraph 38). The change marks a limit. Siddhartha can see that Gotama has peace, but he cannot see into how it was reached, which is exactly the "mystery" he says no teaching contains (paragraph 37). The word also keeps Gotama free of Siddhartha's judgment: the Buddha is neither offended nor persuaded, and the young man's cleverness has nothing to grip.

111. [mc · analysis · DOK 3] Siddhartha assures Gotama that he has not spoken "to argue" with him, nor to quarrel over "words" (paragraph 37). These are Gotama's own words from paragraph 36. Why does Siddhartha repeat them?

A. He admits that his objection was a mere quarrel over words
B. He mocks the Buddha by repeating his phrase back at him
C. He asks Gotama to repeat the warning to all the monks
D. He grants the point, then shifts from logic to experience

Key: D (He grants the point, then shifts from logic to experience)

112. [mc · analysis · DOK 3] Gotama bids him leave "with a hardly noticeable gesture" (paragraph 41). How does this gesture fit the way the chapter has drawn Gotama?

A. It shows an impatience he hid behind polite words
B. Its smallness fits a holiness shown in manner, not display
C. It warns the monks that the young man is dangerous
D. It shows that he has quietly stopped listening to the argument

Key: B (Its smallness fits a holiness shown in manner, not display)

113. [match · analysis · DOK 3] Match each of Siddhartha's statements to Gotama (1-4) to its purpose in his speech (A-D). Use each letter once.

1. "Too bold is my speech" (paragraph 33)
2. "I have not doubted in you for a single moment" (paragraph 37)
3. "nobody will obtain salvation by means of teachings!" (paragraph 37)
4. "when my eyes beheld a holy man" (paragraph 37)

A. Asking leave to speak frankly
B. Closing with reverence
C. Affirming the man before rejecting the method
D. Stating the claim that decides his course

Key: 1-A, 2-C, 3-D, 4-B

114. [short · synthesis · DOK 4] Before Gotama speaks, Siddhartha already "did not believe that they would teach him anything new" (Gotama, paragraph 15). Is his later objection (paragraphs 35-37) a conclusion he reaches by listening, or a premise he brought with him? Argue one side and answer the other.

Sample answer: The stronger case is that it is a premise. Siddhartha arrives having "grown distrustful and tired against teachings" (With the Samanas, paragraph 36), and in the grove he "felt little curiosity for the teachings" (Gotama, paragraph 15) before hearing a word. His argument about a gap in the chain of causes falls away once Gotama answers it, and what remains is the older conviction that "nobody will obtain salvation by means of teachings" (paragraph 37). Yet the other side has force: he does listen, he concedes "You are truly right, there is little to opinions" (paragraph 37), and the sight of a man who reached the goal alone gives his distrust new evidence. So the objection is a premise that the meeting confirms rather than creates.

115. [mc · synthesis · DOK 4] Siddhartha knows the Buddha "instantly," while to Govinda the monk at first looks no different from hundreds of others. What does this contrast prepare?

A. Govinda's later doubt about entering the Buddha's order

B. His later wish to join the monks as a disciple himself

C. Gotama's later warning against too much cleverness

D. His later claim that truth is seen in a life, not taught

Key: D (His later claim that truth is seen in a life, not taught)

116. [short · synthesis · DOK 4] In With the Samanas Siddhartha predicts that "perhaps not a single one" of the Samanas will reach nirvana (paragraph 20); in Gotama he says Gotama has "reached the goal" (paragraph 37). Does meeting Gotama refute his earlier pessimism or confirm it? Argue, using both passages.

Sample answer: It does both, and the way it does both is the point. It refutes the claim that no one reaches the goal: Siddhartha has "not doubted for a single moment" that Gotama has "reached the goal" (Gotama, paragraph 37). But it confirms the reason behind his pessimism. In With the Samanas he doubted the Samanas because their exercises give only "a short numbing of the senses" (With the Samanas, paragraph 13) and "we learn feats, to deceive others" (paragraph 20); in Gotama he says the Buddha's salvation came "through enlightenment" and "has not come to you by means of teachings" (Gotama, paragraph 37). So the prediction was wrong about people but right about methods: someone can reach the goal, but no one reaches it by following a path set by others.

117. [mc · synthesis · DOK 4] According to Siddhartha, what has Govinda renounced by taking refuge with the Buddha?

A. Only his fine clothes, his shoes and his money

B. His faith in all the old gods of his father

C. Nothing at all, since the Buddha asks for nothing

D. His home, parents, free will and all friendship

Key: D (His home, parents, free will and all friendship)

118. [mc · synthesis · DOK 4] Praising the teaching, then objecting, shows…

A. Admiration that is secretly mockery

B. Reverence alongside refusal

C. Conversion delayed by pride

D. Contempt politely disguised

Key: B (Reverence alongside refusal)

119. [short · synthesis · DOK 4] Gotama asks whether all his monks should abandon the teaching. How does Siddhartha's answer limit his own argument?

Sample answer: Siddhartha answers that he wishes them all to "stay with the teachings" and that "It is not my place to judge another person's life" (Gotama, paragraph 40). His claim that no one is saved by teachings becomes a rule for himself alone: "Only for myself, for myself alone, I must decide." This narrows a universal argument to a personal calling, which makes it humbler but leaves open whether it binds anyone else.

120. [short · synthesis · DOK 4] Why does Gotama's glance and smile, not his teaching, have the last word in the chapter?

Sample answer: After the debate, "his glance and half of a smile remained forever etched in Siddhartha's memory" (Gotama, paragraph 43). Siddhartha resolves to glance and walk that way himself, because only someone who reached "the innermost part of his self" could do so (paragraph 44). The ending confirms his argument: what he takes from Gotama is not doctrine but living proof of an experience he must find on his own.

121. [fill · recall · DOK 1] Fill in the blank with the word that fits: "And since they reached it at night, there were constant arrivals, shouts, and talk of those who sought _____ and got it." Word bank: shelter, silence, poverty, sorrow

Key: shelter

122. [mc · inference · DOK 2] What does this passage most clearly show? “With half of a smile, with an unwavering openness and kindness, Gotama looked into the stranger’s eyes and bid him to leave with a hardly noticeable gesture.” (Gotama, paragraph 41)

A. Gotama lets him go without resentment.

B. Gotama is offended and sends him away.

C. Gotama hopes he will return the next day.

D. Gotama has not understood his objection.

Key: A (Gotama lets him go without resentment.)

123. [short · inference · DOK 2] What does Siddhartha resolve after watching the Buddha walk away? Use this line. “Well so, I also will seek to reach the innermost part of my self.” (Gotama, paragraph 44)

Sample answer: Siddhartha resolves to reach by himself what he sees in the Buddha, rather than to follow him. The evidence is “Well so, I also will seek to reach the innermost part of my self.” (Gotama, paragraph 44). The word “also” puts him on the same road as Gotama, not behind him as a disciple, and “innermost part of my self” names the goal he has sought since boyhood, now to be reached through his own experience.

124. [match · analysis · DOK 3] Match each renunciation Siddhartha names for Govinda (1-4) to what it costs him (A-D). Use each letter once.

1. “renounced your home and your parents” (paragraph 26)
2. “renounced your birth and possessions” (paragraph 26)
3. “renounced your free will” (paragraph 26)
4. “renounced all friendship” (paragraph 26)

A. Obedience to the order’s rule

B. The family that raised him

C. His bond with Siddhartha himself

D. His caste rank and property

Key: 1-B, 2-D, 3-A, 4-C

125. [mc · synthesis · DOK 4] Right after lowering his glance before Gotama, Siddhartha resolves not to lower it “before any other” (paragraph 45). What does the resolution reveal?

A. Reverence for one man becoming a vow of independence from all

B. Shame that he had been too proud to bow down before the Buddha

C. Fear that a later teacher might deceive him as others did

D. Regret that he did not join Govinda among the new monks

Key: A (Reverence for one man becoming a vow of independence from all)

126. [mc · synthesis · DOK 4] Siddhartha’s speech in paragraph 37 closes not on his argument but on “when my eyes beheld a holy man.” Why does Hesse end the speech with this line?

A. It apologizes for an argument that he now thinks was mistaken

B. It flatters Gotama by praising his holy outward bearing

C. It rests his case on what he saw, not on what he was taught

D. It shows that he will come back to hear the sermon again

Key: C (It rests his case on what he saw, not on what he was taught)

127. [short · synthesis · DOK 4] Gotama says his teachings "are no opinion" and have "a different goal" (paragraph 36); Siddhartha says they do not contain "the mystery" of Gotama's own experience (paragraph 37). Do the two men truly disagree, or do they talk past each other? Argue one view and answer the other.

Sample answer: They largely talk past each other. Gotama answers the logical objection by changing the question: his teaching does not aim "to explain the world to those who seek knowledge"; "their goal is salvation from suffering" (Gotama, paragraph 36). Siddhartha accepts that ("You are truly right, there is little to opinions", paragraph 37) and makes a different claim, that a teaching cannot hand over "what has happened to you in the hour of enlightenment." Gotama never denies this. The case for a real disagreement lies in what follows: Gotama asks whether his monks should "abandon the teachings" (paragraph 39), implying that the path does lead to the goal, while Siddhartha holds that "nobody will obtain salvation by means of teachings" (paragraph 37). They agree on what a teaching is not, and disagree on whether it can still be a road.

128. [short · synthesis · DOK 4] Hesse reports that Gotama "taught the four main doctrines" in a single sentence of summary (Gotama, paragraph 17), but renders the man himself in close physical detail (paragraph 15). How does this narrative choice anticipate Siddhartha's argument against teachings in paragraph 37? Name one limit of the strategy.

Sample answer: The narration enacts the argument before Siddhartha makes it. The doctrine reaches us as a summary of "the four main doctrines" and "the eightfold path" (Gotama, paragraph 17), while the prose slows over Gotama's head, feet and hand until it "glistened of truth" (paragraph 15). Readers, like Siddhartha, meet truth as a presence they can see rather than a doctrine they can repeat, which prepares his claim that what happened to Gotama cannot be conveyed "in words and through teachings" (paragraph 37). The limit is that the novel is itself made of words: Hesse can only point at a wordless experience with more description, so the reader must take the holiness on the narrator's authority, much as Govinda takes it on Gotama's.

129. [mc · synthesis · DOK 4] Siddhartha wishes to walk "thus concealed, thus open, thus childlike and mysterious." What do these paired opposites suggest about the goal he now sets himself?

A. A manner of walking he can learn by close imitation

B. A portrait of the monks rather than of Gotama himself

C. A state no one can reach, so his search must fail

D. A wholeness holding opposites that no rule can teach

Key: D (A wholeness holding opposites that no rule can teach)

130. [short · synthesis · DOK 4] Compare how Siddhartha leaves his father (The Son of the Brahmin, paragraphs 47-49) with how he leaves Gotama (Gotama, paragraphs 32-44). In each scene, who lets whom go, and what does Gotama's "As you please" share with the father's consent?

Sample answer: In both scenes the elder lets the younger go once he sees the choice is already made. The father yields when he realizes that his son "had already left him" (The Son of the Brahmin, paragraph 47) and sends him off: "go into the forest and be a Samana" (paragraph 49). Gotama answers the announcement of departure with "As you please" (Gotama, paragraph 32) and ends the talk "with a hardly noticeable gesture" (paragraph 41). What they share is a refusal to hold him. The differences are as telling: the father consents after a night of struggle and asks to be taught, while Gotama needs no struggle and asks for nothing, which is the calm Siddhartha then wants for himself (paragraph 44). The two partings frame the first four chapters: one teacher lets him go in pain, the other in peace.

131. [mc · synthesis · DOK 4] Siddhartha turns Gotama's life against his teaching by arguing that…

A. Gotama himself did not reach it through teachings

B. Gotama's teaching contradicts the holy Vedas outright

C. Gotama lives in hidden luxury

D. Gotama's own monks misread him

Key: A (Gotama himself did not reach it through teachings)

132. [mc · synthesis · DOK 4] Gotama's question about his many monks tests whether…

A. Siddhartha secretly envies the many monks

B. Siddhartha's rule should apply to everyone

C. The monks are already enlightened

D. Govinda ought to leave the order

Key: B (Siddhartha's rule should apply to everyone)

133. [mc · synthesis · DOK 4] Govinda tells Siddhartha, "it is not my place to scold you" (paragraph 20), and Siddhartha later tells Gotama, "It is not my place to judge another person's life" (paragraph 40). What does the echo suggest?

A. Siddhartha is quietly mocking Govinda's words

B. Each friend grants the other the right to choose his path

C. Both are repeating a rule of the Buddha's order

D. Govinda has learned his manners from Siddhartha

Key: B (Each friend grants the other the right to choose his path)

134. [short · synthesis · DOK 4] Evaluate this claim: the gap Siddhartha finds in the chain of causes is the real reason he leaves Gotama.

Sample answer: The claim mistakes his opening argument for his motive. He points to a break in "the entire eternal and uniform law of the world" (Gotama, paragraph 35), but when Gotama answers that the teaching aims at "salvation from suffering" (paragraph 36), Siddhartha concedes and gives a different reason: salvation "has not come to you by means of teachings!" (paragraph 37). The gap shows his intellect at work, while the real reason is his conviction that enlightenment must be lived alone. The claim is therefore only partly right, since the gap is a symptom of his distrust of doctrine, not its cause.

135. [mc · synthesis · DOK 4] Both friends make a decisive choice in this chapter. What does the parallel suggest?

A. Only Govinda chooses freely; Siddhartha is driven away by his doubts

B. Each friend makes a choice that is truly his own, though they part ways

C. Siddhartha's choice is the wise one, while Govinda's is a quiet failure

D. Both show that a great teacher, once found, must be followed to the end

Key: B (Each friend makes a choice that is truly his own, though they part ways)

Rigor version	Items (in order)	Mix
HS Sophomore	1, 2, 3, 4, 5, 6, 7, 8, 9, 10, 11, 12, 13, 14, 15	recall 10, inference 2, analysis 1, synthesis 2
HS Junior	16, 17, 18, 19, 20, 21, 22, 23, 24, 25, 26, 27, 28, 29, 30	recall 10, inference 2, analysis 2, synthesis 1
HS Senior	31, 32, 33, 34, 35, 36, 37, 38, 39, 40, 41, 42, 43, 44, 45	recall 10, inference 2, analysis 2, synthesis 1
AP	46, 47, 48, 49, 50, 51, 52, 53, 54, 55, 56, 57, 58, 59, 60	recall 2, inference 7, analysis 5, synthesis 1

College Freshman	61, 62, 63, 64, 65, 66, 67, 68, 69, 70, 71, 72, 73, 74, 75	recall 1, inference 5, analysis 8, synthesis 1
College Sophomore	76, 77, 78, 79, 80, 81, 82, 83, 84, 85, 86, 87, 88, 89, 90	recall 1, inference 2, analysis 9, synthesis 3
College Junior	91, 92, 93, 94, 95, 96, 97, 98, 99, 100, 101, 102, 103, 104, 105	recall 1, inference 2, analysis 8, synthesis 4
College Senior	106, 107, 108, 109, 110, 111, 112, 113, 114, 115, 116, 117, 118, 119, 120	recall 1, inference 3, analysis 4, synthesis 7
Graduate / PhD	121, 122, 123, 124, 125, 126, 127, 128, 129, 130, 131, 132, 133, 134, 135	recall 1, inference 2, analysis 1, synthesis 11

Writing prompts (eleven rigor levels)

HS Sophomore (450 words; Dual Credit (Indiana College Core): ICC-WC-1.1, ICC-WC-1.3, ICC-WC-1.4, ICC-WC-1.5): Analyze how Gotama develops the idea of the teacher and the teaching. Make a precise claim, support it with at least three pieces of textual evidence, and explain how the author's use of characterization and theme shapes that idea. Address one possible counterclaim. (You are reading the English translation by Gunther Olesch, Anke Dreher, Amy Coulter, Stefan Langer and Semyon Chaichenets, so word-choice evidence is the translators' English.)

HS Junior (550 words; Dual Credit (Indiana College Core): ICC-WC-1.1, ICC-WC-1.3, ICC-WC-1.4, ICC-WC-1.5): Analyze how the structure of Gotama (where it begins, turns and ends) and its characterization shape the reader's understanding of the teacher and the teaching. Identify one place where the text leaves matters uncertain and explain how that uncertainty adds to its meaning.

HS Senior (600 words; Dual Credit (Indiana College Core): ICC-WC-1.1, ICC-WC-1.3, ICC-WC-1.4, ICC-WC-1.5): Two readers disagree about what Gotama suggests about the teacher and the teaching. Lay out two plausible interpretations, weigh the evidence for each (including the chapter's characterization and theme), and argue for the stronger one in a sustained, well-organized essay.

AP (650 words; Dual Credit (Indiana College Core): ICC-WC-1.1, ICC-WC-1.3, ICC-WC-1.4, ICC-WC-1.5): Write a literary argument in which you analyze how Hermann Hesse uses characterization in Gotama to complicate the reader's understanding of the teacher and the teaching. Develop a defensible thesis, select evidence purposefully, and explain how specific choices of diction and syntax create meaning.

College Freshman (1000 words; Dual Credit (Indiana College Core): ICC-WC-1.3, ICC-WC-1.5, ICC-WC-1.1): Situate Gotama within its historical and literary context and argue how the chapter's treatment of the teacher and the teaching responds to that context. Engage with at least one secondary perspective (a critic, historian or the author's own statements), integrate quotations smoothly, and cite in APA style.

College Sophomore (1250 words; Dual Credit (Indiana College Core): ICC-WC-1.1, ICC-WC-1.3, ICC-WC-1.4, ICC-WC-1.5): Read Gotama alongside the conventions of its genre and period. Argue how the chapter's handling of the teacher and the teaching follows or bends those conventions, using the characterization as evidence, and test your reading against one published critic. Document two secondary sources in APA.

College Junior (1500 words; Dual Credit (Indiana College Core): ICC-WC-1.1, ICC-WC-1.3, ICC-WC-1.4, ICC-WC-1.5): Apply a named critical approach (for example formalist, historicist, feminist, psychoanalytic or ecocritical) to Gotama and its treatment of the teacher and the teaching. State your method, show what it reveals in the chapter's characterization and theme, and identify where the text resists it.

College Senior (2000 words; Dual Credit (Indiana College Core): ICC-WC-1.1, ICC-WC-1.3, ICC-WC-1.4, ICC-WC-1.5): Develop a research argument that reads Gotama as evidence for a larger claim about the teacher and the teaching in Siddhartha. Connect close reading of the chapter to the whole novel, engage at least four scholarly sources, and state precisely where your reading departs from theirs (Chicago style).

Graduate / PhD (2500 words; Dual Credit (Indiana College Core): ICC-WC-1.1, ICC-WC-1.3, ICC-WC-1.4, ICC-WC-1.5): Develop an original argument that reads Gotama as a hinge in the novel's larger treatment of the teacher and the teaching. Position your reading within a named critical conversation (for example formalist, historicist, psychoanalytic, feminist or postcolonial approaches), account for the textual history where relevant, and articulate the stakes of your intervention for scholarship on Siddhartha.

SAT-style questions

1. No teachings will entice me any more, since this man's teachings have not enticed me.

   As used in the text, what does the word "enticed" most nearly mean?

   A. tempted; attracted

   B. hanging loosely

   C. in a courteous, respectful way

   D. steadiness of mind under stress

2. The Buddha went on his way, modestly and deep in his thoughts, his calm face was neither happy nor sad, it seemed to smile quietly and inwardly. With a hidden smile, quiet, calm, somewhat resembling a healthy child, the Buddha walked, wore the robe and placed his feet just as all of his monks did, according to a precise rule. But his face and his walk, his quietly lowered glance, his quietly dangling hand and even every finger of his quietly dangling hand expressed peace, expressed perfection, did not search, did not imitate, breathed softly in an unwithering calm, in an unwithering light, an untouchable peace.

   Which choice best states a central concern of "Gotama"?

   A. Hearing the many voices

   B. The teacher and the teaching

   C. Wisdom cannot be taught

   D. Learning from the river

SAT key: 1. A (tempted; attracted); 2. B (The teacher and the teaching)

Lesson 5: Awakening

Focus: awakening to the world

Objective: Students will analyze how imagery develops in "Awakening" by writing a claim-evidence-reasoning paragraph that cites at least 2 quotations from the section, and will score at least 80% on the section quiz.

Standards: Dual Credit (Indiana College Core): ICC-WC-1.1, ICC-WC-1.3, ICC-WC-1.4, ICC-WC-1.5

Teacher only · spoilers

Walking away, Siddhartha realizes he has always fled from himself and resolves to learn from himself. Suddenly the world appears new and beautiful—colors, rivers, forests—no longer illusion but reality to be experienced. He feels a chill of loneliness: he is no longer a Brahmin or a Samana, but he will not go home.

Background: In Hindu thought, Maya is the veil of illusion over the world; Siddhartha turns away from seeing the world as Maya.

Significance: This epiphany marks the end of Part One and turns him toward sensory life.

Lesson plan and lecture script (90 minutes)

0–8 min · Bell-ringer · You do (8 min)
Students write to the bell-ringer, then pair-share.
What changes in how Siddhartha sees the world in this chapter? Write for five minutes. Starters: I think... because... / This connects to the search for the self because....
Prompt: What changes in how Siddhartha sees the world in this chapter?
Sentence starters: I think… because… · This connects to the search for the self because…
Strong response: A strong response takes a position and anticipates this: Siddhartha realizes he never knew himself because "I was afraid of myself, I was fleeing from myself," and resolves to "learn from myself."

8–18 min · Vocabulary with etymology notes · We do (10 min)
Five key words in context, with verified word histories.
Today's words: dissect — to cut apart in order to examine closely; inhaled — breathed in; deceptions — tricks; false appearances; strides — a step in walking or running; symbols — an arbitrary sign (written or printed) that has acquired a conventional significance. "dissect": Origin: Latin dissectus. "inhaled": Origin of "inhale": Latin inhalare. "deceptions": Origin of "deception": Old French decepcion.
Words: dissect: to cut apart in order to examine closely · inhaled: breathed in · deceptions: tricks; false appearances · strides: a step in walking or running · symbols: an arbitrary sign (written or printed) that has acquired a conventional significance

18–28 min · Background and context · I do (10 min)

Mini-lecture (read or adapt the script).

In Hindu thought, Maya is the veil of illusion over the world; Siddhartha turns away from seeing the world as Maya. This epiphany marks the end of Part One and turns him toward sensory life. Structure: The chapter is one walk and one long meditation: each time Siddhartha stops on the path, a new realization comes. Hesse marks the turns physically: "Siddhartha stopped once again, suddenly, as if there was a snake lying in front of him on the path" (Awakening, para. 9). Imagery: After the awakening the world floods in as colour ("Here was blue, here was yellow, here was green"), no longer "the veil of Maya." The sensory lists are the meaning: the visible world is now worth reading. Figurative language: Two key images: the self shed "as a snake is left by its old skin," and the "book of the world," whose letters he had scorned. Then the cold of being "alone like a star in the sky." Watch for the snake: twice the snake appears, first as shed skin (renewal), then as an obstacle on the path (the sudden shock of loneliness).

28–40 min · I do: modeled close reading · I do (12 min)

Model the close reading of the anchor quotation using the written think-aloud below.

First, meaning. I read "I was afraid of myself, I was fleeing from myself" slowly and put it in my own words: Leaving the Buddha's grove, Siddhartha realizes he was afraid of himself and was fleeing from himself. Next, craft. I notice the repeated "myself" at the end of both clauses, which turns the sentence back on the speaker. The strongest word is "fleeing": it reframes his search as running away rather than seeking. Then, effect. What does Siddhartha realize about why he left every teacher? My answer: Siddhartha realizes he left every teacher because he was fleeing from his own self, which he never understood; he resolves to learn from himself, which is his awakening and turning point.

> I was afraid of myself, I was fleeing from myself (Awakening, paragraph 4)

Think-aloud: First, meaning. I read "I was afraid of myself, I was fleeing from myself" slowly and put it in my own words: Leaving the Buddha's grove, Siddhartha realizes he was afraid of himself and was fleeing from himself. Next, craft. I notice the repeated "myself" at the end of both clauses, which turns the sentence back on the speaker. The strongest word is "fleeing": it reframes his search as running away rather than seeking. Then, effect. What does Siddhartha realize about why he left every teacher? My answer: Siddhartha realizes he left every teacher because he was fleeing from his own self, which he never understood; he resolves to learn from himself, which is his awakening and turning point.

40–55 min · We do: guided annotation · We do (15 min)
Guided analysis of a second quotation; expected answers given.
Ask: What words in this line stand out, and what do they suggest? Expected: The inverted order ("Beautiful was the world") and the threefold repetition make the sentence sound like a prayer, so the ordinary world becomes holy. Expected link: the search for the self now runs through the world, not away from it. Ask: How does this line connect to the search for the self? Expected: Siddhartha realizes he never knew himself because "I was afraid of myself, I was fleeing from myself," and resolves to "learn from myself." (Inverted word order and repetition give the line the rhythm of a hymn: the world itself is now sacred.)

> Beautiful was the world, colourful was the world, strange and mysterious was the world (Awakening, paragraph 7)

Ask: What words in this line stand out, and what do they suggest?
Expected answer: The inverted order ("Beautiful was the world") and the threefold repetition make the sentence sound like a prayer, so the ordinary world becomes holy. Expected link: the search for the self now runs through the world, not away from it.
Ask: How does this line connect to the search for the self?
Expected answer: Siddhartha realizes he never knew himself because "I was afraid of myself, I was fleeing from myself," and resolves to "learn from myself." (Inverted word order and repetition give the line the rhythm of a hymn: the world itself is now sacred.)

55–70 min · You do: independent annotation · You do (15 min)

Independent annotation and a claim-evidence-reasoning paragraph (exemplar given).

Annotate the chapter for structure, imagery (three marks with a margin note each), then write one claim-evidence-reasoning paragraph: what does this chapter suggest about awakening to the world? Then start your writing prompt at your assigned level (HS Sophomore: Analyze how Awakening develops the idea of awakening to the world. Make a precise claim, support it with at least three pieces of textual evidence, and explain how the author's use of imagery and symbolism shapes that idea. Address one possible counterclaim. (You are reading the English translation by Gunther Olesch, Anke Dreher, Amy Coulter, Stefan Langer and Semyon Chaichenets, so word-choice evidence is the translators' English.)) Exemplar: Siddhartha's awakening is a decision to find meaning in himself and in the visible world rather than behind it, and it leaves him utterly alone. When the text says “I was afraid of myself, I was fleeing from myself” (Awakening, paragraph 4), it shows this directly. He realizes "I was afraid of myself, I was fleeing from myself," and now sees that "beautiful was the world, colourful was the world"; but in the same moment he stands "alone like a star in the sky," because he no longer belongs to any group.

Task: Annotate the chapter for structure, imagery (three marks with a margin note each), then write one claim-evidence-reasoning paragraph: what does this chapter suggest about awakening to the world? Then start your writing prompt at your assigned level (HS Sophomore: Analyze how Awakening develops the idea of awakening to the world. Make a precise claim, support it with at least three pieces of textual evidence, and explain how the author's use of imagery and symbolism shapes that idea. Address one possible counterclaim. (You are reading the English translation by Gunther Olesch, Anke Dreher, Amy Coulter, Stefan Langer and Semyon Chaichenets, so word-choice evidence is the translators' English.))

Exemplar: Siddhartha's awakening is a decision to find meaning in himself and in the visible world rather than behind it, and it leaves him utterly alone. When the text says “I was afraid of myself, I was fleeing from myself” (Awakening, paragraph 4), it shows this directly. He realizes "I was afraid of myself, I was fleeing from myself," and now sees that "beautiful was the world, colourful was the world"; but in the same moment he stands "alone like a star in the sky," because he no longer belongs to any group.

70–80 min · Discussion · We do (10 min)

Structured discussion from the 30 tiered questions, with facilitation notes.

Anchor question: What changes in how Siddhartha sees the world in this chapter? Ask students to find the two snake images and explain what each one marks. Push: is being "alone like a star" a victory or a loss? Accept both if argued from the cold/shiver passage.

Anchor question: What changes in how Siddhartha sees the world in this chapter?

Facilitation: Ask students to find the two snake images and explain what each one marks. · Push: is being "alone like a star" a victory or a loss? Accept both if argued from the cold/shiver passage.

80–87 min · Exit ticket / chapter quiz · You do (7 min)
Chapter quiz in the app and an exit ticket (answer given).
Chapter quiz in the app, then: In one sentence, what does this chapter suggest about awakening to the world? Support it with one short quotation. Model answer: Siddhartha's awakening is a decision to find meaning in himself and in the visible world rather than behind it, and it leaves him utterly alone. ("I was afraid of myself, I was fleeing from myself", Awakening, paragraph 4). Accept any defensible claim backed by a quotation from the chapter; the answer key for the quiz is in the Quiz section.
Exit ticket: In one sentence, what does this chapter suggest about awakening to the world? Support it with one short quotation.
Answer: Model answer: Siddhartha's awakening is a decision to find meaning in himself and in the visible world rather than behind it, and it leaves him utterly alone. ("I was afraid of myself, I was fleeing from myself", Awakening, paragraph 4). Accept any defensible claim backed by a quotation from the chapter; the answer key for the quiz is in the Quiz section.

87–90 min · Closure · I do (3 min)
Summarize the lesson and preview the next reading.
Today we saw how structure shapes awakening to the world. Key takeaway: Siddhartha realizes he never knew himself because "I was afraid of myself, I was fleeing from myself," and resolves to "learn from myself."

Total: 90 minutes.

60-minute version of this lesson

Same script and content as above, with these timings (60 minutes).

Clock	Segment	Minutes	What to keep
0–5	Bell-ringer	5	Students write to the bell-ringer, then pair-share.
5–10	Vocabulary with etymology notes	5	Five key words in context, with verified word histories.
10–16	Background and context	6	Mini-lecture (read or adapt the script).
16–24	I do: modeled close reading	8	Model the close reading of the anchor quotation using the written think-aloud below.
24–34	We do: guided annotation	10	Guided analysis of a second quotation; expected answers given.
34–44	You do: independent annotation	10	Independent annotation and a claim-evidence-reasoning paragraph (exemplar given).
44–54	Discussion	10	Structured discussion from the 30 tiered questions, with facilitation notes.
54–58	Exit ticket / chapter quiz	4	Chapter quiz in the app and an exit ticket (answer given).
58–60	Closure	2	Summarize the lesson and preview the next reading.

Teacher analysis (spoilers)

Literary elements

- Structure: The chapter is one walk and one long meditation: each time Siddhartha stops on the path, a new realization comes. Hesse marks the turns physically: “Siddhartha stopped once again, suddenly, as if there was a snake lying in front of him on the path” (Awakening, para. 9).
- Imagery: After the awakening the world floods in as colour ("Here was blue, here was yellow, here was green"), no longer "the veil of Maya." The sensory lists are the meaning: the visible world is now worth reading.
- Figurative language: Two key images: the self shed "as a snake is left by its old skin," and the "book of the world," whose letters he had scorned. Then the cold of being "alone like a star in the sky."

Themes and how they develop

- the search for the self: Siddhartha realizes he never knew himself because "I was afraid of myself, I was fleeing from myself," and resolves to "learn from myself."

Symbols and motifs

- the snake: twice the snake appears, first as shed skin (renewal), then as an obstacle on the path (the sudden shock of loneliness).

Key quotations (checked against the reading text)

- “I was afraid of myself, I was fleeing from myself” (Awakening, paragraph 4) The diagnosis of everything he has tried so far: every discipline was a flight from the self.
- “Beautiful was the world, colourful was the world, strange and mysterious was the world” (Awakening, paragraph 7) Inverted word order and repetition give the line the rhythm of a hymn: the world itself is now sacred.
- “when he stood alone like a star in the sky” (Awakening, paragraph 12) The cost of freedom: no caste, no teacher, no home. The simile is both beautiful and cold.

Model claim-evidence-reasoning

Claim: Siddhartha's awakening is a decision to find meaning in himself and in the visible world rather than behind it, and it leaves him utterly alone.
Evidence: “I was afraid of myself, I was fleeing from myself” (Awakening, paragraph 4)
Reasoning: He realizes "I was afraid of myself, I was fleeing from myself," and now sees that "beautiful was the world, colourful was the world"; but in the same moment he stands "alone like a star in the sky," because he no longer belongs to any group.

Passages referenced in this lesson (full text)

Siddhartha had started to nurse discontent in himself, he had started to feel that the love of his father and the love of his mother, and also the love of his friend, Govinda, would not bring him joy for ever and ever, would not nurse him, feed him, satisfy him. He had started to suspect that his venerable father and his other teachers, that the wise

Brahmins had already revealed to him the most and best of their wisdom, that they had already filled his expecting vessel with their richness, and the vessel was not full, the spirit was not content, the soul was not calm, the heart was not satisfied. The ablutions were good, but they were water, they did not wash off the sin, they did not heal the spirit's thirst, they did not relieve the fear in his heart. The sacrifices and the invocation of the gods were excellent —but was that all? Did the sacrifices give a happy fortune? And what about the gods? Was it really Prajapati who had created the world? Was it not the Atman, He, the only one, the singular one? Were the gods not creations, created like me and you, subject to time, mortal? Was it therefore good, was it right, was it meaningful and the highest occupation to make offerings to the gods? For whom else were offerings to be made, who else was to be worshipped but Him, the only one, the Atman? And where was Atman to be found, where did He reside, where did his eternal heart beat, where else but in one's own self, in its innermost part, in its indestructible part, which everyone had in himself? But where, where was this self, this innermost part, this ultimate part? It was not flesh and bone, it was neither thought nor consciousness, thus the wisest ones taught. So, where, where was it? To reach this place, the self, myself, the Atman, there was another way, which was worthwhile looking for? Alas, and nobody showed this way, nobody knew it, not the father, and not the teachers and wise men, not the holy sacrificial songs! They knew everything, the Brahmins and their holy books, they knew everything, they had taken care of everything and of more than everything, the creation of the world, the origin of speech, of food, of inhaling, of exhaling, the arrangement of the senses, the acts of the gods, they knew infinitely much—but was it valuable to know all of this, not knowing that one and only thing, the most important thing, the solely important thing? (The Son of the Brahmin, paragraph 8)

Surely, many verses of the holy books, particularly in the Upanishades of Samaveda, spoke of this innermost and ultimate thing, wonderful verses. "Your soul is the whole world" was written there, and it was written that man in his sleep, in his deep sleep, would meet with his innermost part and would reside in the Atman. Marvellous wisdom was in these verses, all knowledge of the wisest ones had been collected here in magic words, pure as honey collected by bees. No, not to be looked down upon was the tremendous amount of enlightenment which lay here collected and preserved by innumerable generations of wise Brahmins.—But where were the Brahmins, where the priests, where the wise men or penitents, who had succeeded in not just knowing this deepest of all knowledge but also to live it? Where was the knowledgeable one who wove his spell to bring his familiarity with the Atman out of the sleep into the state of being awake, into the life, into every step of the way, into word and deed? Siddhartha knew many venerable Brahmins, chiefly his father, the pure one, the scholar, the most venerable one. His father was to be admired, quiet and noble were his manners, pure his life, wise his words, delicate and noble thoughts lived behind its brow—but even he, who knew so much, did he live in blissfulness, did he have peace, was he not also just a searching man, a thirsty man? Did he not, again and again, have to drink from holy sources, as a thirsty man, from the offerings, from the books, from the disputes of the Brahmins? Why did he, the irreproachable one, have to wash off sins every day, strive for a cleansing every day, over and over every day? Was not Atman in him, did not the pristine source spring from his heart? It had to be found, the pristine source in one's own self, it had to be possessed! Everything else was searching, was a detour, was getting lost. (The Son of the Brahmin, paragraph 9)

The Father touched Siddhartha's shoulder. (The Son of the Brahmin, paragraph 47)

Siddhartha gave his garments to a poor Brahmin in the street. He wore nothing more than the loincloth and the earth-coloured, unsown cloak. He ate only once a day, and never something cooked. He fasted for fifteen days. He fasted for twenty-eight days. The flesh waned from his thighs and cheeks. Feverish dreams flickered from his enlarged eyes, long nails grew slowly on his parched fingers and a dry, shaggy beard grew on his chin. His glance turned to ice when he encountered women; his mouth twitched with contempt when he walked through a city of nicely dressed people. He saw merchants trading, princes hunting, mourners wailing for their dead, whores offering themselves, physicians trying to help the sick, priests determining the most suitable day for seeding, lovers loving, mothers nursing their children—and all of this was not worthy of one look from his eye, it all lied, it all stank, it all stank of lies, it all pretended to be meaningful and joyful and beautiful, and it all was just concealed putrefaction. The world tasted bitter. Life was torture. (With the Samanas, paragraph 2)

A goal stood before Siddhartha, a single goal: to become empty, empty of thirst, empty of wishing, empty of dreams, empty of joy and sorrow. Dead to himself, not to be a self any more, to find tranquility with an emptied heart, to be open to miracles in unselfish thoughts, that was his goal. Once all of my self was overcome and had died, once every desire and every urge was silent in the heart, then the ultimate part of me had to awake, the innermost of my being, which is no longer my self, the great secret. (With the Samanas, paragraph 3)

And Siddhartha: "He has lived for sixty years and has not reached the nirvana. He'll turn seventy and eighty, and you and me, we will grow just as old and will do our exercises, and will fast, and will meditate. But we will not reach the nirvana, he won't and we won't. O Govinda, I believe out of all the Samanas out there, perhaps not a single one, not a single one, will reach the nirvana. We find comfort, we find numbness, we learn feats, to deceive others. But the most important thing, the path of paths, we will not find." (With the Samanas, paragraph 20)

"I wish that you, O exalted one, would not be angry with me," said the young man. "I have not spoken to you like this to argue with you, to argue about words. You are truly right, there is little to opinions. But let me say this one more thing: I have not doubted in you for a single moment. I have not doubted for a single moment that you are Buddha, that you have reached the goal, the highest goal towards which so many thousands of Brahmins and sons of Brahmins are on their way. You have found salvation from death. It has come to you in the course of your own search, on your own path, through thoughts, through meditation, through realizations, through enlightenment. It has not come to you by means of teachings! And—thus is my thought, O exalted one—nobody will obtain salvation by means of teachings! You will not be able to convey and say to anybody, O venerable one, in words and through teachings what has happened to you in the hour of enlightenment! The teachings of the enlightened Buddha contain much, it teaches many to live righteously, to avoid evil. But there is one thing which these so clear, these so venerable teachings do not contain: they do not contain the mystery of what the exalted one has experienced for himself, he alone among hundreds of thousands. This is what I have thought and realized, when I have heard the teachings. This is why I am continuing my travels—not to seek other, better teachings, for I know there are none, but to depart from all teachings and all teachers and to reach my goal by myself or to die. But often, I'll think of this day, O exalted one, and of this hour, when my eyes beheld a holy man." (Gotama, paragraph 37)

I saw a man, Siddhartha thought, a single man, before whom I would have to lower my glance. I do not want to lower my glance before any other, not before any other. No teachings will entice me any more, since this man's teachings have not enticed me. (Gotama, paragraph 45)

When Siddhartha left the grove, where the Buddha, the perfected one, stayed behind, where Govinda stayed behind, then he felt that in this grove his past life also stayed behind and parted from him. He pondered about this sensation, which filled him completely, as he was slowly walking along. He pondered deeply, like diving into a deep water he let himself sink down to the ground of the sensation, down to the place where the causes lie, because to identify the causes, so it seemed to him, is the very essence of thinking, and by this alone sensations turn into realizations and are not lost, but become entities and start to emit like rays of light what is inside of them. (Awakening, paragraph 1)

Slowly walking along, Siddhartha pondered. He realized that he was no youth any more, but had turned into a man. He realized that one thing had left him, as a snake is left by its old skin, that one thing no longer existed in him, which had accompanied him throughout his youth and used to be a part of him: the wish to have teachers and to listen to teachings. He had also left the last teacher who had appeared on his path, even him, the highest and wisest teacher, the most holy one, Buddha, he had left him, had to part with him, was not able to accept his teachings. (Awakening, paragraph 2)

Slower, he walked along in his thoughts and asked himself: "But what is this, what you have sought to learn from teachings and from teachers, and what they, who have taught you much, were still unable to teach you?" And he found: "It was the self, the purpose and essence of which I sought to learn. It was the self, I wanted to free myself from, which I sought to overcome. But I was not able to overcome it, could only deceive it, could only flee from it, only hide from it. Truly, no thing in this world has kept my thoughts thus busy, as this my very own self, this mystery of me being alive, of me being one and being separated and isolated from all others, of me being Siddhartha! And there is no thing in this world I know less about than about me, about Siddhartha!" (Awakening, paragraph 3)

Having been pondering while slowly walking along, he now stopped as these thoughts caught hold of him, and right away another thought sprang forth from these, a new thought, which was: "That I know nothing about myself, that Siddhartha has remained thus alien and unknown to me, stems from one cause, a single cause: I was afraid of myself, I was fleeing from myself! I searched Atman, I searched Brahman, I was willing to dissect my self and peel off all of its layers, to find the core of all peels in its unknown interior, the Atman, life, the divine part, the ultimate part. But I have lost myself in the process." (Awakening, paragraph 4)

Siddhartha opened his eyes and looked around, a smile filled his face and a feeling of awakening from long dreams flowed through him from his head down to his toes. And it was not long before he walked again, walked quickly like a man who knows what he has got to do. (Awakening, paragraph 5)

"Oh," he thought, taking a deep breath, "now I would not let Siddhartha escape from me again! No longer, I want to begin my thoughts and my life with Atman and with the suffering of the world. I do not want to kill and dissect myself any longer, to find a secret behind the ruins. Neither Yoga-Veda shall teach me any more, nor Atharva-Veda, nor the ascetics, nor any kind of teachings. I want to learn from myself, want to be my student, want to get to know myself, the secret of Siddhartha." (Awakening, paragraph 6)

He looked around, as if he was seeing the world for the first time. Beautiful was the world, colourful was the world, strange and mysterious was the world! Here was blue, here was yellow, here was green, the sky and the river flowed, the forest and the mountains were rigid, all of it was beautiful, all of it was mysterious and magical, and in its midst was he, Siddhartha, the awakening one, on the path to himself. All of this, all this yellow and blue, river and forest, entered Siddhartha for the first time through the eyes, was no longer a spell of Mara, was no longer the veil of Maya, was no longer a pointless and coincidental diversity of mere appearances, despicable to the deeply thinking Brahmin, who scorns diversity, who seeks unity. Blue was blue, river was river, and if also in the blue and the river, in Siddhartha, the singular and divine lived hidden, so it was still that very divinity's way and purpose, to be here yellow, here blue, there sky, there forest, and here Siddhartha. The purpose and the essential properties were not somewhere behind the things, they were in them, in everything. (Awakening, paragraph 7)

"How deaf and stupid have I been!" he thought, walking swiftly along. "When someone reads a text, wants to discover its meaning, he will not scorn the symbols and letters and call them deceptions, coincidence, and worthless hull, but he will read them, he will study and love them, letter by letter. But I, who wanted to read the book of the world and the book of my own being, I have, for the sake of a meaning I had anticipated before I read, scorned the symbols and letters, I called the visible world a deception, called my eyes and my tongue coincidental and worthless forms without substance. No, this is over, I have awakened, I have indeed awakened and have not been born before this very day." (Awakening, paragraph 8)

In thinking these thoughts, Siddhartha stopped once again, suddenly, as if there was a snake lying in front of him on the path. (Awakening, paragraph 9)

Because suddenly, he had also become aware of this: He, who was indeed like someone who had just woken up or like a newborn baby, he had to start his life anew and start again at the very beginning. When he had left in this very morning from the grove Jetavana, the grove of that exalted one, already awakening, already on the path towards himself, he had every intention, regarded as natural and took for granted, that he, after years as an ascetic, would return to his home and his father. But now, only in this moment, when he stopped as if a snake was lying on his path, he also awoke to this realization: "But I am no longer the one I was, I am no ascetic any more, I am not a priest any more, I am no Brahmin any more. Whatever should I do at home and at my father's place? Study? Make offerings? Practise meditation? But all this is over, all of this is no longer alongside my path." (Awakening, paragraph 10)

Motionless, Siddhartha remained standing there, and for the time of one moment and breath, his heart felt cold, he felt a cold in his chest, as a small animal, a bird or a rabbit, would when seeing how alone he was. For many years, he had been without home and had felt nothing. Now, he felt it. Still, even in the deepest meditation, he had been his father's son, had been a Brahmin, of a high caste, a cleric. Now, he was nothing but Siddhartha, the awoken one, nothing else was left. Deeply, he inhaled, and for a moment, he felt cold and shivered. Nobody was thus alone as he was. There was no nobleman who did not belong to the noblemen, no worker that did not belong to the workers, and found refuge with them, shared their life, spoke their language. No Brahmin who would not be regarded as Brahmins and lived with them, no ascetic who would not find his refuge in the caste of the Samanas, and even the most forlorn hermit in the forest was not just one and alone, he was also surrounded by a place he belonged to, he also belonged to a caste, in which he was at home. Govinda had become a monk, and a thousand monks were his brothers, wore the same robe as he, believed in his faith, spoke his language. But he, Siddhartha, where did he belong to? With whom would he share his life? Whose language would he speak? (Awakening, paragraph 11)

Out of this moment, when the world melted away all around him, when he stood alone like a star in the sky, out of this moment of a cold and despair, Siddhartha emerged, more a self than before, more firmly concentrated. He felt: This had been the last tremor of the awakening, the last struggle of this birth. And it was not long until he walked again in long strides, started to proceed swiftly and impatiently, heading no longer for home, no longer to his father, no longer back. (Awakening, paragraph 12)

Vocabulary with etymology notes

Word	Definition (in this sentence)	In context	Word history
dissect (verb)	to cut apart in order to examine closely	I searched Atman, I searched Brahman, I was willing to dissect my self and peel off all of its layers, to find the core of all peels in its unknown interior, the Atman, life, the divine part, the ultimate part.	"dissect": Origin: Latin dissectus. (Liber et Libri origin note, https://en.wiktionary.org/wiki/dissect#Etymology)
inhaled (verb)	breathed in	Deeply, he inhaled, and for a moment, he felt cold and shivered.	"inhaled": Origin of "inhale": Latin inhalare. (Liber et Libri origin note, https://en.wiktionary.org/wiki/inhale#Etymology)

deceptions (noun)	tricks; false appearances	"When someone reads a text, wants to discover its meaning, he will not scorn the symbols and letters and call them deceptions, coincidence, and worthless hull, but he will read them, he will study and love them, letter by letter.	"deceptions": Origin of "deception": Old French decepcion. (Liber et Libri origin note, https://en.wiktionary.org/wiki/deception#Etymology)
strides (noun)	long steps in walking	And it was not long until he walked again in long strides, started to proceed swiftly and impatiently, heading no longer for home, no longer to his father, no longer back.
symbols (noun)	signs or marks that stand for something else	"When someone reads a text, wants to discover its meaning, he will not scorn the symbols and letters and call them deceptions, coincidence, and worthless hull, but he will read them, he will study and love them, letter by letter.
coincidence (noun)	a chance happening that only seems planned	"When someone reads a text, wants to discover its meaning, he will not scorn the symbols and letters and call them deceptions, coincidence, and worthless hull, but he will read them, he will study and love them, letter by letter.	"coincidence": Origin: Middle French coincidence. (Liber et Libri origin note, https://en.wiktionary.org/wiki/coincidence#Etymology) awakened (verb)	woke; became aware	No, this is over, I have awakened, I have indeed awakened and have not been born before this very day."	"awakened": Origin of "awaken": Old English awæcnan. (Liber et Libri origin note, https://en.wiktionary.org/wiki/awaken#Etymology)

Discussion questions

1. What changes in how Siddhartha sees the world in this chapter?
2. Where does imagery appear in this chapter, and what effect does it have? Point to one passage.
3. How does this chapter connect to the book's larger concern with the search for the self?

Tiered discussion questions (30: recall, inferential, evaluative)

Wait time after every question (3 s for DOK 1, 5 s for DOK 2, 8 to 10 s for DOK 3 and 4); think-pair-share on DOK 3 and 4; answer each response with a follow-up probe; close with student-generated questions. Focus sets by rigor level: HS Sophomore: 1, 2, 3, 4, 13, 14, 15, 16, 17, 23, 24, 25; HS Junior: 1, 2, 3, 14, 15, 16, 17, 18, 24, 25, 26, 27; HS Senior: 1, 2, 3, 15, 16, 17, 18, 25, 26, 27, 28, 29; AP: 1, 2, 16, 17, 18, 19, 20, 26, 27, 28, 29, 30; College Freshman: 1, 2, 17, 18, 19, 20, 21, 22, 27, 28, 29, 30; College Sophomore: 1, 2, 11, 18, 19, 20, 21, 22, 23, 28, 29, 30; College Junior: 1, 11, 12, 19, 20, 21, 22, 23, 24, 25, 29, 30; College Senior: 1, 11, 12, 13, 20, 21, 22, 23, 24, 25, 26, 30; Graduate / PhD: 1, 11, 12, 13, 21, 22, 23, 24, 25, 26, 27, 28

Literal / recall

1. What does Siddhartha resolve to learn from? [DOK 1 · Cold call with support: call on a student by name, offering a sentence starter or rephrasing if needed · wait 3 s · Dual Credit (Indiana College Core): ICC-WC-1.1, ICC-WC-1.3, ICC-WC-1.4, ICC-WC-1.5] Look for: Himself
   Answer guidance: From himself. He resolves: "I want to learn from myself" (Awakening, paragraph 6)… and to be his own student (paragraph 6).
2. Who, Siddhartha thinks, is as alone as he is? [DOK 1 · Turn and Talk: students discuss briefly with a neighbor before answering · wait 3 s · Dual Credit (Indiana College Core): ICC-WC-1.1, ICC-WC-1.3, ICC-WC-1.4, ICC-WC-1.5] Look for: Nobody Answer guidance: "Nobody was thus alone as he was." (Awakening, paragraph 11) Every nobleman and every worker belongs to a group; he no longer belongs to any.
3. What does he feel after the awakening? [DOK 1 · Cold call with support: call on a student by name, offering a sentence starter or rephrasing if needed · wait 3 s · Dual Credit (Indiana College Core): ICC-WC-1.1, ICC-WC-1.3, ICC-WC-1.4, ICC-WC-1.5] Look for: First joy, then, at the low point, a cold loneliness
   Answer guidance: First joy and purpose ("a smile filled his face and a feeling of awakening from long dreams flowed through him" (Awakening, paragraph 5)); then, at the low point, a cold loneliness when he sees he has no home or caste ("his heart felt cold, he felt a cold in his chest" (Awakening, paragraph 11)). Accept both if students place them in order.
4. Does Siddhartha go home to his father? [DOK 1 · Turn and Talk: students discuss briefly with a neighbor before answering · wait 3 s · Dual Credit (Indiana College Core): ICC-WC-1.1, ICC-WC-1.3, ICC-WC-1.4, ICC-WC-1.5] Look for: No, he moves forward alone
   Answer guidance: No. He had meant to go home (paragraph 10), but realizes that life is over and moves forward alone: "Siddhartha emerged, more a self than before, more firmly concentrated" (Awakening, paragraph 12).
5. What idea does he reject here? [DOK 1 · Cold call with support: call on a student by name, offering a sentence starter or rephrasing if needed · wait 3 s · Dual Credit (Indiana College Core): ICC-WC-1.1, ICC-WC-1.3, ICC-WC-1.4, ICC-WC-1.5] Look for: Seeing the world as mere illusion
   Answer guidance: That the visible world is only illusion (Maya) to be seen through. He compares the world to a text whose letters must be read, not scorned: "he will not scorn the symbols and letters and call them deceptions, coincidence, and worthless hull" (Awakening, paragraph 8).
6. Retell the three most important events of "Awakening" in order, in one sentence each. [DOK 1 · Turn and Talk: students discuss briefly with a neighbor before answering · wait 3 s · Dual Credit (Indiana College Core): ICC-WC-1.1, ICC-WC-1.3, ICC-WC-1.4, ICC-WC-1.5] Look for: Walking away, Siddhartha realizes he has always fled from himself and resolves to learn from himself. Suddenly the world appears new and beautiful—colors, rivers, forests—no longer illusion but reality to be experienced. He feels a chill of loneliness: he is no longer a Brahmin or a Samana, but he will not go home.
   Answer guidance: He realizes he has fled from himself and resolves to learn from himself (Awakening, paragraphs 3–6); he sees the world as new and beautiful (paragraph 7); he feels the cold of being alone, then walks on more firmly himself (paragraphs 11–12).
7. Which characters appear or are mentioned in "Awakening"? Name two and one thing each says or does. [DOK 1 · Cold call with support: call on a student by name, offering a sentence starter or rephrasing if needed · wait 3 s · Dual Credit (Indiana College Core): ICC-WC-1.1, ICC-WC-1.3, ICC-WC-1.4, ICC-WC-1.5] Look for: Names and actions taken from the chapter; check against the teacher summary.
   Answer guidance: Siddhartha is the only one present. Absent figures: Gotama and Govinda, left behind in the grove ("where the Buddha, the perfected one, stayed behind, where Govinda stayed behind" (Awakening, paragraph 1)), and his father, to whom he no longer returns (paragraph 10).

8. Where and when does "Awakening" take place? Point to the line that tells you. [DOK 1 · Turn and Talk: students discuss briefly with a neighbor before answering · wait 3 s · Dual Credit (Indiana College Core): ICC-WC-1.1, ICC-WC-1.3, ICC-WC-1.4, ICC-WC-1.5] Look for: A place/time detail quoted from the chapter.
   Answer guidance: On the road away from the grove Jetavana, the same morning: "When he had left in this very morning from the grove Jetavana" (Awakening, paragraph 10).
9. Reread: "Slowly walking along, Siddhartha pondered." What does "pondered" mean here, and what is literally happening in this line? [DOK 1 · Turn and Talk: students discuss briefly with a neighbor before answering · wait 3 s · Dual Credit (Indiana College Core): ICC-WC-1.1, ICC-WC-1.3, ICC-WC-1.4, ICC-WC-1.5] Look for: pondered: thought about something carefully.
   Answer guidance: "Pondered" here means: thought about something carefully. In Awakening, paragraph 2, after leaving the grove, Siddhartha walks slowly and thinks over what has changed in him.
10. Reread: "Motionless, Siddhartha remained standing there, and for the time of one moment and breath, his heart felt cold" What does "motionless" mean here, and what is literally happening in this line? [DOK 1 · Turn and Talk: students discuss briefly with a neighbor before answering · wait 3 s · Dual Credit (Indiana College Core): ICC-WC-1.1, ICC-WC-1.3, ICC-WC-1.4, ICC-WC-1.5] Look for: motionless: not moving; completely still.
    Answer guidance: "Motionless" here means: not moving; completely still. In Awakening, paragraph 11, Siddhartha stands still as he suddenly feels how alone he is.

Inferential / analytical

1. What does "Awakening" suggest about awakening to the world? State the inference and the line that supports it. [DOK 2 · Think-Pair-Share: students think alone, discuss with a partner, then share with the class · wait 5 s · Dual Credit (Indiana College Core): ICC-WC-1.1, ICC-WC-1.3, ICC-WC-1.4, ICC-WC-1.5] Look for: A stated inference (for example, that awakening means looking at the world instead of through it) backed by one located line, such as the one in Awakening, paragraph 7.
   Answer guidance: The chapter suggests awakening means looking at the world instead of through it. Support: "Beautiful was the world, colourful was the world, strange and mysterious was the world!" (Awakening, paragraph 7)
2. Find one example of imagery in this chapter. What does it reveal that a plain statement would not? [DOK 2 · Follow-up: ask a probing question that builds on the previous answer · wait 5 s · Dual Credit (Indiana College Core): ICC-WC-1.1, ICC-WC-1.3, ICC-WC-1.4, ICC-WC-1.5] Look for: Look for sensory details (sight, sound, cold, light) and what mood they create.
   Answer guidance: The colours of paragraph 7 ("Here was blue, here was yellow, here was green" (Awakening, paragraph 7)) show, not tell, that the world now matters to him as itself, not as a sign of something hidden.
3. How does the symbolism in this chapter shape what we understand about awakening to the world? [DOK 3 · Think-Pair-Share: students think alone, discuss with a partner, then share with the class · wait 8 s · Dual Credit (Indiana College Core): ICC-WC-1.1, ICC-WC-1.3, ICC-WC-1.4, ICC-WC-1.5] Look for: Look for objects, places or actions that stand for larger ideas.
   Answer guidance: The snake skin ("as a snake is left by its old skin" (Awakening, paragraph 2)) stands for his old wish for teachers, shed like something outgrown; the star alone in the sky (paragraph 12) stands for his new, lonely selfhood.

4. In the passage that begins “Having been pondering while slowly walking along, he now stopped as these thoughts caught hold of him, and right away another thought sprang forth from these, a new thought, which…”, why might Hesse have chosen these particular words? Pick two and explain their connotations. [DOK 2 · Follow-up: ask a probing question that builds on the previous answer · wait 5 s · Dual Credit (Indiana College Core): ICC-WC-1.1, ICC-WC-1.3, ICC-WC-1.4, ICC-WC-1.5] Look for: Diction analysis of two words in the anchor passage.
   Answer guidance: In Awakening, paragraph 4, “sprang forth” makes the thought sudden and alive, and “caught hold of him” makes him the one seized; the words stage the awakening as something that happens to him.
5. What causes the main turn in “Awakening”, and what effect is it likely to have on what follows? [DOK 2 · Follow-up: ask a probing question that builds on the previous answer · wait 5 s · Dual Credit (Indiana College Core): ICC-WC-1.1, ICC-WC-1.3, ICC-WC-1.4, ICC-WC-1.5] Look for: Walking away, Siddhartha realizes he has always fled from himself and resolves to learn from himself. Suddenly the world appears new and beautiful—colors, rivers, forests—no longer illusion but reality to be experienced. He feels a chill of loneliness: he is no longer a Brahmin or a Samana, but he…
   Answer guidance: The cause is his insight that he has been afraid of and fleeing from himself (“I was afraid of myself, I was fleeing from myself!” (Awakening, paragraph 4)). Effect: he will stop seeking teachers and begin to live in the world.
6. How does “Awakening” build on “Gotama”? Name one link of cause and effect. [DOK 3 · Think-Pair-Share: students think alone, discuss with a partner, then share with the class · wait 8 s · Dual Credit (Indiana College Core): ICC-WC-1.1, ICC-WC-1.3, ICC-WC-1.4, ICC-WC-1.5] Look for: A causal or structural link between this and the previous chapter.
   Answer guidance: Cause and effect: leaving Gotama and Govinda in “Gotama” leaves him alone (Awakening, paragraph 1), and that solitude is what makes the awakening possible.
7. What can we infer about a character's motives from what they say and do here, as opposed to what they claim? [DOK 3 · Follow-up: ask a probing question that builds on the previous answer · wait 8 s · Dual Credit (Indiana College Core): ICC-WC-1.1, ICC-WC-1.3, ICC-WC-1.4, ICC-WC-1.5] Look for: An inference about motive supported by a quoted line.
   Answer guidance: The only motives are Siddhartha’s own. He claims to want to learn from himself (paragraph 6), but his plan to go home (paragraph 10) shows he still leans on his old life until the cold of paragraph 11 ends it.
8. The bell-ringer asked: “What changes in how Siddhartha sees the world in this chapter?” Now that we have read closely, how would you revise your first answer, and which line changed your mind? [DOK 2 · Think-Pair-Share: students think alone, discuss with a partner, then share with the class · wait 5 s · Dual Credit (Indiana College Core): ICC-WC-1.1, ICC-WC-1.3, ICC-WC-1.4, ICC-WC-1.5] Look for: A revised answer anchored in the text.
   Answer guidance: A revised answer should say he stops treating the world as illusion and starts reading it, as in paragraph 8’s book image, and cite “as if he was seeing the world for the first time” (Awakening, paragraph 7).
9. Where does theme appear, and how does it connect this chapter to the larger concern with the search for the self? [DOK 3 · Follow-up: ask a probing question that builds on the previous answer · wait 8 s · Dual Credit (Indiana College Core): ICC-WC-1.1, ICC-WC-1.3, ICC-WC-1.4, ICC-WC-1.5] Look for: Look for statements or moments that connect to the book's big ideas.
   Answer guidance: The theme of the search for self is stated directly: “It was the self, the purpose and essence of which I sought to learn." (Awakening, paragraph 3) The chapter connects it to the world: the self is now to be found by living, not by stripping things away.

10. Background: In Hindu thought, Maya is the veil of illusion over the world; Siddhartha turns away from seeing the world as Maya. How does knowing this change the way you read one moment in the chapter? [DOK 3 · Think-Pair-Share: students think alone, discuss with a partner, then share with the class · wait 8 s · Dual Credit (Indiana College Core): ICC-WC-1.1, ICC-WC-1.3, ICC-WC-1.4, ICC-WC-1.5] Look for: A specific moment reread in light of the context.

    Answer guidance: Knowing Maya means illusion shows how sharp the change is: in paragraph 8 he calls his old view the scorning of letters as "deceptions," and now he reads the world instead.

Evaluative / synthesis / creative

1. A critic might argue: "This epiphany marks the end of Part One and turns him toward sensory life." How far do you agree? Take a stand and defend it with two lines from the chapter. [DOK 3 · Four Corners: students move to the corner that matches their position and explain why · wait 8 s · ICC-WC-1.5] Look for: A defended position with evidence and one counterpoint.

    Answer guidance: Agree: paragraph 7 turns him to colours, sky and river, and paragraph 12 ends Part One's rootlessness. Counterpoint from the text: the chapter ends in cold and loneliness (paragraph 11), not yet sensory pleasure.

2. Which character in this chapter acts most wisely, and which least? Judge them by a standard you name. [DOK 3 · Think-Pair-Share: students think alone, discuss with a partner, then share with the class · wait 8 s · ICC-WC-1.5] Look for: An evaluation using an explicit criterion and evidence.

    Answer guidance: Siddhartha is the only one present, so students judge his choices: wisest when he admits he fled from himself (paragraph 4); least wise, perhaps, in his first plan to go home (paragraph 10).

3. Rewrite one moment of "Awakening" from the point of view of a different character. What does the new angle reveal or hide about awakening to the world? [DOK 4 · Think-Pair-Share: students think alone, discuss with a partner, then share with the class · wait 8 s · Dual Credit (Indiana College Core): ICC-WC-1.1, ICC-WC-1.3, ICC-WC-1.4, ICC-WC-1.5] Look for: A rewrite that keeps the chapter's events accurate, speaks in the chosen character's voice, and ends with a sentence on what the new angle shows or hides.

    Answer guidance: Govinda or the Buddha could narrate Siddhartha leaving the grove (Awakening, paragraph 1); from outside, the awakening is invisible, which shows how inward this chapter is.

4. Write three questions of your own about "Awakening": one recall, one "why/how", and one "should/what if". Trade with a partner and answer theirs. [DOK 3 · Student-generated: students write and pose their own questions · wait 8 s · Dual Credit (Indiana College Core): ICC-WC-1.1, ICC-WC-1.3, ICC-WC-1.4, ICC-WC-1.5] Look for: Three questions at three levels, each answerable from the chapter, traded and answered with a line.

    Answer guidance: Example set: recall, 'What does he decide to learn from?' (himself, paragraph 6); why/how, 'Why does he feel cold?' (paragraph 11); what if, 'Should he have gone home?'

5. Connect this chapter to love and attachment: is the link strong or weak so far? What would Hesse need to show next to strengthen it? [DOK 4 · Socratic circle: an inner circle discusses while the outer circle listens and takes notes, then they switch · wait 8 s · ICC-WC-1.5] Look for: A judgment of thematic development across the work.

    Answer guidance: Weak so far: the chapter has no love or attachment except the lost home (paragraph 11). Hesse would need to bring Siddhartha into a relationship, which the next chapter does.

6. Is the imagery in this chapter effective, or does it feel heavy-handed? Evaluate it as a reader would in a review. [DOK 3 · Four Corners: students move to the corner that matches their position and explain why · wait 8 s · ICC-

WC-1.5] Look for: An evaluative judgment with criteria and evidence.

Answer guidance: Effective in its plainness: the bare colour list in paragraph 7 sounds like wonder. Some readers will find the snake and star images (paragraphs 2, 12) stated a little too neatly.

7. Compare how "Awakening" treats awakening to the world with how another text, film or event you know treats a similar idea. What does Siddhartha see that the other misses? [DOK 4 · Socratic circle: an inner circle discusses while the outer circle listens and takes notes, then they switch · wait 8 s · ICC-WC-1.5] Look for: A cross-text synthesis.

   Answer guidance: A comparison should name a moment of sudden clarity in another story and quote this chapter's turning line, "I was afraid of myself, I was fleeing from myself!" (Awakening, paragraph 4)

8. Predict what "Kamala" will bring, using two clues from this chapter. After reading, evaluate your prediction. [DOK 3 · Think-Pair-Share: students think alone, discuss with a partner, then share with the class · wait 8 s · Dual Credit (Indiana College Core): ICC-WC-1.1, ICC-WC-1.3, ICC-WC-1.4, ICC-WC-1.5] Look for: A prediction or judgment justified with textual clues.

   Answer guidance: Clues: he turns toward the beauty of the world (Awakening, paragraph 7) and has no home or teacher left (paragraph 11). Prediction: he will look for experience in the world, perhaps in a city.

9. Design a one-paragraph modern adaptation of this chapter (setting, characters, conflict). What must stay the same for it to still be about awakening to the world? [DOK 4 · Think-Pair-Share: students think alone, discuss with a partner, then share with the class · wait 8 s · Dual Credit (Indiana College Core): ICC-WC-1.1, ICC-WC-1.3, ICC-WC-1.4, ICC-WC-1.5] Look for: A modern setting, characters and conflict that keep the chapter's core idea, with the one element that must not change named.

   Answer guidance: A modern version keeps someone who leaves every guide behind and suddenly sees ordinary life as worth living. What must stay is the realization in paragraph 4 that he was running from himself.

10. What question would you most like to ask Hermann Hesse about this chapter, and what answer do you think the text itself gives? [DOK 4 · Student-generated: students write and pose their own questions · wait 8 s · Dual Credit (Indiana College Core): ICC-WC-1.1, ICC-WC-1.3, ICC-WC-1.4, ICC-WC-1.5] Look for: A student-generated question answered from evidence.

    Answer guidance: Example: 'What did Siddhartha actually wake up from?' The text answers: from treating the world as illusion and his self as something to escape (Awakening, paragraphs 4 and 8).

Annotation focus

- Imagery: look for sensory details (sight, sound, cold, light) and what mood they create (anchor passage in the We do segment)
- Also notice Symbolism: objects, places or actions that stand for larger ideas
- Also notice Theme: statements or moments that connect to the book's big ideas

Chapter quiz: item bank (all eleven rigor versions)

1. [fill · recall · DOK 1] Complete the quotation from Awakening, paragraph 11: "he felt a cold in his chest, as a small animal, a bird or a _____, would when seeing how alone he was." Word bank: rabbit, kettle, candle, ladder Key: rabbit
2. [mc · recall · DOK 1] In paragraph 4, what feeling does Siddhartha say made him flee from himself?

   A. Pride in his learning

B. Boredom with the Vedas

C. Grief for his mother

D. Fear of himself

Key: D (Fear of himself)

3. [fill · recall · DOK 1] Complete the quotation from Awakening, paragraph 6: "I do not want to kill and _____ myself any longer, to find a secret behind the ruins." Word bank: praise, feed, honour, dissect

   Key: dissect

4. [mc · recall · DOK 1] In the line "And it was not long until he walked again in long strides, started to proceed swiftly and impatiently, heading no longer for home", what does "impatiently" most nearly mean?

   A. unable to wait calmly

   B. slowly and carefully

   C. sadly and wearily

   D. quietly and rather shyly

   Key: A (unable to wait calmly)

5. [mc · recall · DOK 1] How does the world appear to Siddhartha after his awakening?

   A. Grey and dull

   B. Frightening and dark

   C. Unreal, like a dream

   D. New and beautiful

   Key: D (New and beautiful)

6. [mc · recall · DOK 1] Which teachers does Siddhartha say will teach him no more?

   A. His father, his mother and his friend Govinda

   B. The merchants of the city

   C. Yoga-Veda, Atharva-Veda and the ascetics

   D. The Buddha's monks alone

   Key: C (Yoga-Veda, Atharva-Veda and the ascetics)

7. [mc · recall · DOK 1] In paragraph 3, what does Siddhartha say his teachers were unable to teach him?

   A. How to fast and wait

   B. The self he sought to learn about

   C. The verses of the Vedas

   D. How to read and write

   Key: B (The self he sought to learn about)

8. [mc · recall · DOK 1] In the line "to find the core of all peels in its unknown interior", what does "interior" most nearly mean?

   A. the inner part; the inside

   B. the outer covering

   C. a distant country

   D. a sudden loss

   Key: A (the inner part; the inside)

9. [mc · recall · DOK 1] In paragraph 6, with what does Siddhartha say he no longer wants to begin his thoughts and his life?

   A. With the teachings of Gotama

   B. With money and the life of the city

   C. With Atman and the suffering of the world

   D. With the Vedas and the offerings to the gods

   Key: C (With Atman and the suffering of the world)

10. [mc · inference · DOK 2] Which choice best states a central concern of "Awakening"?

    A. Seeing the visible world anew

    B. The teacher and the teaching

    C. The pain of a father's love

    D. Detachment among the childlike people

    Key: A (Seeing the visible world anew)

11. [mc · inference · DOK 2] Which of these passages comes earliest in Awakening?

    A. "He pondered about this sensation, which filled him completely, as he was slowly walking along."

    B. "When Siddhartha left the grove, where the Buddha, the perfected one, stayed behind, where Govinda stayed behind, then he felt that in this…"

    C. "He realized that one thing had left him, as a snake is left by its old skin, that one thing no longer existed in him, which had accompanied…"

    D. "He realized that he was no youth any more, but had turned into a man."

    Key: B ("When Siddhartha left the grove, where the Buddha, the perfected one, stayed behind, where Govinda stayed behind, then he felt that in this…")

12. [short · inference · DOK 2] What does Siddhartha realize has occupied him most? Use this line. "Truly, no thing in this world has kept my thoughts thus busy, as this my very own self, this mystery of me being alive, of me being one and being separated and isolated from all others, of me being Siddhartha!" (Awakening, paragraph 3)

    Sample answer: Siddhartha realizes that his own self has been the real subject of all his searching. The evidence is "Truly, no thing in this world has kept my thoughts thus busy, as this my very own self, this mystery of me being alive, of me being one and being separated and isolated from all others, of me being Siddhartha!" (Awakening, paragraph 3). Calling the self a "mystery" shows that he now wants to study it, not escape it.

13. [mc · analysis · DOK 3] Which literary element does this describe in "Awakening"? The chapter is one walk and one long meditation: each time Siddhartha stops on the path, a new realization comes. Hesse marks the turns physically ('Siddhartha stopped once again, suddenly, as if there was a snake lying in front of him on the path').

    A. Structure

    B. Allusion

    C. Alliteration

    D. Theme

    Key: A (Structure)

14. [short · analysis · DOK 3] Analyze the word choice in "There was no nobleman who did not belong to the noblemen, no worker that did not belong to the workers, and found refuge with them, shared their life, spoke their language." (Awakening, paragraph 11). Pick two words and explain what they suggest.

Sample answer: "There was no nobleman who did not belong to the noblemen, no worker that did not belong to the workers, and found refuge with them, shared their life, spoke their language." (Awakening, paragraph 11). "Belong" shows that everyone else has a group that holds them, which makes Siddhartha's new solitude sharper. "Refuge" suggests that such belonging is a shelter, the very shelter he has given up by leaving Brahmins, Samanas and Buddha alike.

15. [short · synthesis · DOK 4] Evaluate this claim about the chapter: "Siddhartha's awakening is a decision to find meaning in himself and in the visible world rather than behind it, and it leaves him utterly alone." Is it fully persuasive? Argue with evidence, including a passage that complicates it.

Sample answer: The claim is persuasive in part. "I was afraid of myself, I was fleeing from myself" (Awakening, paragraph 4) supports it: Siddhartha stops searching behind the world and turns to himself, and in the cold moment of paragraph 11 he feels that "Nobody was thus alone as he was." But "Siddhartha emerged, more a self than before, more firmly concentrated" (Awakening, paragraph 12) complicates it: the loneliness is a passing "last tremor of the awakening," and it leaves him stronger and moving forward rather than stranded. A fair verdict is that the claim is right about the decision but overstated about the cost; "utterly alone" describes one moment, not where the awakening leaves him.

16. [mc · recall · DOK 1] In paragraph 11, what question does Siddhartha ask himself about his new life?

A. Where he would find a new teacher

B. How he would earn his bread

C. With whom he would share his life

D. When he would see Govinda again

Key: C (With whom he would share his life)

17. [mc · recall · DOK 1] In the line "And it was not long until he walked again in long strides, started to proceed swiftly and impatiently", what does "strides" most nearly mean?

A. short rests along the road

B. long steps in walking

C. loud shouts of joy

D. heavy loads on the back

Key: B (long steps in walking)

18. [mc · recall · DOK 1] Where had Siddhartha first planned to go after leaving the grove?

A. Into the city to trade

B. Back to the Samanas

C. Back to Gotama's grove

D. Home to his father

Key: D (Home to his father)

19. [mc · recall · DOK 1] How does Siddhartha feel when he opens his eyes after his first realization?

A. As if he had lost his way in a forest

B. As if he were back in the Samanas' forest

C. As if he were sinking into a deep sleep

D. As if he were waking from long dreams

Key: D (As if he were waking from long dreams)

20. [fill · recall · DOK 1] Complete the quotation from Awakening, paragraph 3: “Truly, no thing in this world has kept my thoughts thus busy, as this my very own self, this _____ of me being alive” Word bank: kettle, ladder, pebble, mystery

    Key: mystery

21. [mc · recall · DOK 1] In the line “Deeply, he inhaled, and for a moment, he felt cold and shivered.”, what does “inhaled” most nearly mean?

    A. surrounded

    B. breathed in

    C. grew ripe; matured

    D. tempted; attracted

    Key: B (breathed in)

22. [fill · recall · DOK 1] Fill in the blank with the vocabulary word that fits: “I have indeed _____ and have not been born before this very day.” Word bank: awakened, slept, failed, forgotten

    Key: awakened

23. [fill · recall · DOK 1] Fill in the blank with the word that fits: “But now, only in this moment, when he stopped as if a snake was lying on his path, he also _____ to this realization:” Word bank: awoke, swam, sang, ate

    Key: awoke

24. [mc · inference · DOK 2] What does Siddhartha now see as the reason he knows nothing about himself?

    A. He spent too little time studying the Vedas

    B. He had no good teacher to guide him

    C. He was afraid of himself and fled from himself

    D. He was too busy begging to think

    Key: C (He was afraid of himself and fled from himself)

25. [mc · inference · DOK 2] Which of these passages comes last in Awakening?

    A. “Beautiful was the world, colourful was the world”

    B. “I was afraid of myself, I was fleeing from myself!”

    C. “Slowly walking along, Siddhartha pondered.”

    D. “heading no longer for home, no longer to his father, no longer back”

    Key: D (“heading no longer for home, no longer to his father, no longer back”)

26. [short · inference · DOK 2] What does Siddhartha realize he has outgrown? Use this line. “He realized that one thing had left him, as a snake is left by its old skin” (Awakening, paragraph 2)

    Sample answer: Siddhartha realizes he has outgrown his need for teachers. The evidence is “He realized that one thing had left him, as a snake is left by its old skin” (Awakening, paragraph 2). The snake simile shows the wish for teachings falling away naturally, like skin that no longer fits, so his change feels like growth into a man rather than a loss.

27. [mc · analysis · DOK 3] Which literary element does this describe in “Awakening”? After the awakening the world floods in as colour (‘Here was blue, here was yellow, here was green’), no longer ‘the veil of Maya.’

    A. Imagery

    B. Conflict

    C. Foreshadowing

    D. Plot

Key: A (Imagery)

28. [short · analysis · DOK 3] Analyze the word choice in "Blue was blue, river was river" (Awakening, paragraph 7). Pick two words and explain what they suggest.
    Sample answer: Siddhartha now accepts things simply as they are. The evidence is "Blue was blue, river was river" (Awakening, paragraph 7). Repeating "blue" and "river" on both sides of "was" refuses to turn them into symbols of something hidden: blue means only blue, and the river is only the river. The plain wording shows that the world no longer needs to be seen through to be true.

29. [mc · analysis · DOK 3] Which literary element does this describe in "Awakening"? Siddhartha's heart turns cold "as a small animal, a bird or a rabbit, would when seeing how alone he was."

    A. Simile
    B. Setting
    C. Plot
    D. Dialogue

    Key: A (Simile)

30. [short · synthesis · DOK 4] Close reading: how do the diction and syntax of "He had also left the last teacher who had appeared on his path, even him, the highest and wisest teacher, the most holy one, Buddha, he had left him, had to part with him, was not able to accept his teachings." (Awakening, paragraph 2) shape its meaning? Consider a second, competing reading.
    Sample answer: The sentence keeps adding titles, "the highest and wisest teacher, the most holy one, Buddha," in "He had also left the last teacher who had appeared on his path, even him, the highest and wisest teacher, the most holy one, Buddha, he had left him, had to part with him, was not able to accept his teachings." (Awakening, paragraph 2), and then repeats the leaving three times, "had left him, had to part with him, was not able to accept," so the greater the teacher grows, the heavier the parting becomes. A competing reading hears regret in the repetition, as if he doubts his choice; but "had to part" presents it as necessity, so the syntax shows a hard decision he still stands by.

31. [fill · recall · DOK 1] Complete the quotation from Awakening, paragraph 2: "He realized that one thing had left him, as a snake is left by its old _____" Word bank: nest, skin, eggs, hole
    Key: skin

32. [fill · recall · DOK 1] Fill in the blank with the word that fits: "of me being one and being separated and _____ from all others" Word bank: isolated, baked, knitted, sneezed
    Key: isolated

33. [mc · recall · DOK 1] In paragraph 4, how does the new thought come to Siddhartha?

    A. Slowly, after many long days of walking alone on the road
    B. In a dream during the night
    C. From a word Govinda had said
    D. It springs forth right away from his other thoughts

    Key: D (It springs forth right away from his other thoughts)

34. [mc · recall · DOK 1] Who is the last teacher Siddhartha has left, as paragraph 2 tells it?

    A. Gotama, the highest and wisest
    B. The oldest Samana of the forest
    C. His own father, the Brahmin
    D. Govinda, his friend

Key: A (Gotama, the highest and wisest)

35. [mc · recall · DOK 1] How does Siddhartha feel at the low point of Awakening, when the world melts away around him?

    A. Calm and full of joy

    B. Proud of his new freedom

    C. Angry at Govinda for leaving

    D. Cold and utterly alone

    Key: D (Cold and utterly alone)

36. [mc · recall · DOK 1] Which word completes this sentence from Awakening, paragraph 3? "But I was not able to overcome it, could only _____ it, could only flee from it, only hide from it."

    A. bake

    B. deceive

    C. knit

    D. sneeze

    Key: B (deceive)

37. [mc · recall · DOK 1] In paragraph 11, who does Siddhartha think is less alone than he is?

    A. Even the most forlorn hermit in the forest

    B. No one; all men are equally alone

    C. Govinda, now living among the Buddha's monks

    D. Only the Buddha in his grove

    Key: A (Even the most forlorn hermit in the forest)

38. [fill · recall · DOK 1] Complete the quotation from Awakening, paragraph 1: "He pondered deeply, like diving into a deep water he let himself _____ down to the ground of the sensation" Word bank: climb, sink, run, fly

    Key: sink

39. [mc · recall · DOK 1] In the line "to find the core of all peels in its unknown interior, the Atman, life, the divine part, the ultimate part", what does "ultimate" most nearly mean?

    A. first; earliest of all

    B. smallest; least

    C. hidden; secret

    D. final; most basic

    Key: D (final; most basic)

40. [mc · inference · DOK 2] Which of these thoughts does Siddhartha have first in Awakening?

    A. "How deaf and stupid have I been!"

    B. "Whatever should I do at home and at my father's place?"

    C. "But what is this, what you have sought to learn from teachings and from teachers"

    D. "Nobody was thus alone as he was."

    Key: C ("But what is this, what you have sought to learn from teachings and from teachers")

41. [mc · inference · DOK 2] What new view of the visible world does Siddhartha reach in this chapter?

    A. The world is only an illusion to see through

B. Only the Brahmins can see the world truly

C. Meaning is in things, not behind them

D. The world is evil and must be renounced

Key: C (Meaning is in things, not behind them)

42. [short · analysis · DOK 4] Analyze the word choice in "when he stood alone like a star in the sky" (Awakening, paragraph 12). Build a short argument from it: trace the idea across at least three chapters, this one and earlier ones, weigh one competing reading, and defend your position with evidence from each.
Sample answer: The simile joins beauty to cold: "when he stood alone like a star in the sky" (Awakening, paragraph 12). "Alone" stresses that he now has no caste, teacher or home, and "star" makes that solitude bright but distant. The idea runs through three chapters. At home he already stood apart, asking "But where, where was this self, this innermost part, this ultimate part?" (The Son of the Brahmin, paragraph 8), and among the Samanas he sought "to become empty, empty of thirst, empty of wishing, empty of dreams, empty of joy and sorrow" (With the Samanas, paragraph 3). A competing reading takes the star as pure triumph, the proud freedom of the awakened man. But each stage of his search has cut him off further from others, and the star, bright but cold, names the cost of that freedom as well as its glory.

43. [short · analysis · DOK 3] Claim: Siddhartha's awakening is a decision to find meaning in himself and in the visible world rather than behind it, and it leaves him utterly alone. Explain how this evidence supports the claim: "I was afraid of myself, I was fleeing from myself" (Awakening, paragraph 4).
Sample answer: The evidence supports the claim because it names why his old search failed: he fled the self instead of looking at it. "I was afraid of myself, I was fleeing from myself" (Awakening, paragraph 4) turns every discipline into a flight, so the cure is to stay with himself and with what he sees, and soon "Beautiful was the world, colourful was the world" (Awakening, paragraph 7). The same turn leaves him alone: he now stands "alone like a star in the sky" (Awakening, paragraph 12), because no teacher or caste is left to belong to.

44. [mc · analysis · DOK 3] Which literary element does this describe in "Awakening"? A narrator outside the story gives us Siddhartha's silent thoughts word for word as he talks to himself on the road.

A. Setting

B. Alliteration

C. Point of view

D. Personification

Key: C (Point of view)

45. [short · synthesis · DOK 4] Synthesis: trace how the search for the self develops from The Son of the Brahmin to Awakening. Use one quotation from each.
Sample answer: The search turns from a question into an answer about himself. In The Son of the Brahmin he asks, "But where, where was this self, this innermost part, this ultimate part?" (The Son of the Brahmin, paragraph 8). In Awakening he sees why he never found it: "I was afraid of myself, I was fleeing from myself" (Awakening, paragraph 4). The self he looked for everywhere else was the one thing he had been avoiding.

46. [fill · recall · DOK 1] Fill in the blank with the word that fits: "Still, even in the deepest meditation, he had been his father's son, had been a Brahmin, of a high _____, a cleric." Word bank: caste, mountain, tower, price
Key: caste

47. [fill · recall · DOK 1] Fill in the blank with the word that fits: "I have, for the sake of a meaning I had _____ before I read, scorned the symbols and letters" Word bank: anticipated, forgotten, stolen, painted
Key: anticipated

48. [short · inference · DOK 2] What can you infer from this line? “Beautiful was the world, colourful was the world, strange and mysterious was the world” (Awakening, paragraph 7) Answer in two or three sentences with one detail.

    Sample answer: Siddhartha now finds the visible world itself worth loving: he no longer looks through it for a hidden essence but delights in its beauty and colour. The evidence is “Beautiful was the world, colourful was the world, strange and mysterious was the world” (Awakening, paragraph 7). The words “strange and mysterious” show that the world has become a source of wonder in its own right, not a veil to see through.

49. [mc · inference · DOK 2] Which of these descriptions of Siddhartha’s walking comes earliest in Awakening?

    A. “as he was slowly walking along”

    B. “Slower, he walked along in his thoughts”

    C. “started to proceed swiftly and impatiently”

    D. “walked quickly like a man who knows what he has got to do”

    Key: A (“as he was slowly walking along”)

50. [mc · inference · DOK 2] Why does Siddhartha decide not to return to his father’s home?

    A. His father has forbidden him to return

    B. He is ashamed of having left the Samanas

    C. He wants to find Govinda first

    D. He is no longer the Brahmin he once was

    Key: D (He is no longer the Brahmin he once was)

51. [tf · inference · DOK 2] True or false: Siddhartha blames his teachers for how little he knows about himself.

    Key: False (He finds the cause in himself: “I was afraid of myself, I was fleeing from myself!”)

52. [mc · inference · DOK 2] Why does he stop as if a snake lay on the path?

    A. He sees a real snake ahead

    B. He regrets leaving Govinda

    C. He realizes he cannot go home

    D. He doubts his own awakening

    Key: C (He realizes he cannot go home)

53. [tf · inference · DOK 2] True or false: The world looks beautiful to Siddhartha because he no longer treats it as mere appearance.

    Key: True (It is “no longer a pointless and coincidental diversity of mere appearances.”)

54. [tf · inference · DOK 2] True or false: When he leaves the grove, Siddhartha at first takes it for granted that he will return to his father.

    Key: True (He had intended, “regarded as natural,” to return home after his years as an ascetic.)

55. [mc · analysis · DOK 3] Which literary element does this describe in “Awakening”? Siddhartha calls his old view of the world “the veil of Maya,” a term taken from Hindu teaching.

    A. Allusion

    B. Onomatopoeia

    C. Plot

    D. Setting

    Key: A (Allusion)

56. [mc · analysis · DOK 3] Which literary element does this describe in "Awakening"? As he walks, Siddhartha ponders "like diving into a deep water," letting himself sink to the ground of his feeling.

    A. Plot

    B. Dialogue

    C. Simile

    D. Setting

    Key: C (Simile)

57. [short · analysis · DOK 3] Claim: Siddhartha's awakening turns him from searching behind the world to looking at it. Explain how this evidence supports the claim: "The purpose and the essential properties were not somewhere behind the things, they were in them, in everything." (Awakening, paragraph 7)

    Sample answer: The evidence supports the claim because it moves meaning from a hidden place into the visible world: "The purpose and the essential properties were not somewhere behind the things, they were in them, in everything." (Awakening, paragraph 7). The contrast between "behind the things" and "in them" is the whole turn of the chapter: the Brahmin and the Samana looked past the world for truth, while the awakened Siddhartha finds it in the world itself, and "in everything" leaves nothing outside it.

58. [short · analysis · DOK 3] Analyze the word choice in "his heart felt cold, he felt a cold in his chest" (Awakening, paragraph 11). Pick two words and explain what they suggest.

    Sample answer: Siddhartha's loneliness strikes him as a physical shock. The evidence is "his heart felt cold, he felt a cold in his chest" (Awakening, paragraph 11). Repeating "cold" turns the feeling into a bodily chill, and "chest" places it where his heart is, so the reader feels the sudden emptiness of a man who belongs to no one. The plain, repeated words suggest how bare and frightening this moment is.

59. [short · synthesis · DOK 4] Evaluate this claim about the chapter: "Siddhartha's awakening means rejecting everything he learned as a Brahmin and a Samana." Is it fully persuasive? Argue with evidence, including a passage that complicates it.

    Sample answer: The claim is persuasive in part. "But I am no longer the one I was, I am no ascetic any more, I am not a priest any more, I am no Brahmin any more." (Awakening, paragraph 10) supports it: he names each old identity and casts it off. But "in Siddhartha, the singular and divine lived hidden" (Awakening, paragraph 7) complicates it: he still believes in the divine unity his Brahmin teachers spoke of, and only changes where he looks for it, in things rather than behind them. A fair verdict is that the claim overstates the break: he rejects the roles and methods, not the old search itself.

60. [short · synthesis · DOK 4] Synthesis: trace how Siddhartha's view of teachers develops from Gotama to Awakening. Use one quotation from each.

    Sample answer: Siddhartha moves from refusing one great teacher to outgrowing the need for any teacher at all. In Gotama he says: "No teachings will entice me any more, since this man's teachings have not enticed me." (Gotama, paragraph 45). In Awakening he finds that what has left him is "the wish to have teachers and to listen to teachings" (Awakening, paragraph 2). The first passage is a decision against teachings; the second shows the wish itself gone, shed like an old skin, so his independence has turned from a choice into who he is.

61. [fill · recall · DOK 1 · Dual Credit (Indiana College Core): ICC-WC-1.5] Fill in the blank with the word that fits: "I called the visible world a _____, called my eyes and my tongue coincidental and worthless forms without substance." Word bank: deception, kingdom, temple, garden

    Key: deception

62. [mc · inference · DOK 2 · Dual Credit (Indiana College Core): ICC-WC-1.5] What does the comparison with reading a text suggest about how Siddhartha should treat the world?

    A. He should look past its letters to a hidden meaning

    B. He should stop reading and trust only teachers

    C. He should study and love its surface, letter by letter

    D. He should treat its forms as worthless hulls

    Key: C (He should study and love its surface, letter by letter)

63. [short · inference · DOK 2 · Dual Credit (Indiana College Core): ICC-WC-1.5] What can you infer from this line? “walked quickly like a man who knows what he has got to do” (Awakening, paragraph 5) Answer in two or three sentences with one detail.

    Sample answer: Siddhartha’s doubts have given way to a clear sense of purpose. The evidence is “walked quickly like a man who knows what he has got to do” (Awakening, paragraph 5). After walking “slowly” while he pondered, he now walks “quickly,” and the simile shows that his new resolve to learn from himself has already changed how he moves.

64. [mc · inference · DOK 2 · Dual Credit (Indiana College Core): ICC-WC-1.5] What does this passage most clearly show? “when he stood alone like a star in the sky” (Awakening, paragraph 12)

    A. His pride at finally being free of Govinda and of every old tie.

    B. His joy at returning to his father's house.

    C. His plan to rejoin Gotama's monks in the grove.

    D. He is free now, but cut off from every bond.

    Key: D (He is free now, but cut off from every bond.)

65. [mc · inference · DOK 2 · Dual Credit (Indiana College Core): ICC-WC-1.5] Which of these images comes earliest in Awakening?

    A. “as a snake is left by its old skin”

    B. “as if there was a snake lying in front of him on the path”

    C. “like rays of light”

    D. “like a star in the sky”

    Key: C (“like rays of light”)

66. [tf · inference · DOK 2 · Dual Credit (Indiana College Core): ICC-WC-1.5] True or false: True or false: Siddhartha’s plan to go home to his father, which he had “regarded as natural” (Awakening, paragraph 10), shows that he had not yet grasped that his old life was over.

    Key: True (He had taken it for granted that he would “return to his home and his father” (paragraph 10).)

67. [short · analysis · DOK 3 · Dual Credit (Indiana College Core): ICC-WC-1.5] In paragraph 6 Siddhartha resolves to learn from himself and to “be my student.” Explain how this resolution answers the problem he names in paragraph 3, where he admits he can “know less about” himself than about anything.

    Sample answer: The resolution turns the problem into a programme. In paragraph 3 he admits that, for all his searching, “there is no thing in this world I know less about than about me, about Siddhartha!” (Awakening, paragraph 3), and paragraph 4 gives the cause: he was “fleeing from myself.” If ignorance of the self came from fleeing it, the cure is to stay and study it, which is what paragraph 6 proposes: “I want to learn from myself, want to be my student, want to get to know myself, the secret of Siddhartha.” He becomes teacher and student at once, so there is no one left to flee to; and the “secret” is no longer hidden behind the self but is Siddhartha himself.

68. [mc · analysis · DOK 3 · Dual Credit (Indiana College Core): ICC-WC-1.5] In paragraph 8 Siddhartha compares the world to a text whose "symbols and letters" he once scorned. What does the comparison say about how he used to approach the world?

    A. He read too slowly to grasp what the letters meant

    B. He trusted the letters but forgot the larger story

    C. He chose the wrong holy books to read and study

    D. He decided the meaning before he read the page

    Key: D (He decided the meaning before he read the page)

69. [mc · analysis · DOK 3 · Dual Credit (Indiana College Core): ICC-WC-1.5] Paragraph 1 compares his thinking to diving into "a deep water" to reach the spot where "the causes lie." How does this image frame the chapter's method?

    A. It warns that thinking too deeply will drown his new insight

    B. It recalls the river of his old ritual ablutions

    C. It casts thought as a descent below feeling to its cause

    D. It shows his fear of the river near his father's home

    Key: C (It casts thought as a descent below feeling to its cause)

70. [mc · analysis · DOK 3 · Dual Credit (Indiana College Core): ICC-WC-1.5] To what does paragraph 10 compare Siddhartha as he realises he must start his life anew?

    A. A tired old man at the end of the road

    B. One just woken up, or a newborn baby

    C. A king who has lost his whole kingdom

    D. A merchant counting his losses

    Key: B (One just woken up, or a newborn baby)

71. [mc · analysis · DOK 3 · Dual Credit (Indiana College Core): ICC-WC-1.5] His sudden cold loneliness comes from…

    A. Hunger after long fasting

    B. Govinda's anger at him

    C. The cold air of the evening river

    D. Belonging to no caste or group

    Key: D (Belonging to no caste or group)

72. [mc · analysis · DOK 3 · Dual Credit (Indiana College Core): ICC-WC-1.5] What comes of his moment of despair?

    A. He resolves to return home

    B. He goes to look for a new teacher

    C. He emerges more firmly himself

    D. He hurries back to Govinda

    Key: C (He emerges more firmly himself)

73. [short · analysis · DOK 3 · Dual Credit (Indiana College Core): ICC-WC-1.5] Why does Siddhartha now think his old search made him lose himself?

    Sample answer: He sought Atman by peeling away the self "to find the core of all peels," but he admits, "But I have lost myself in the process" (Awakening, paragraph 4). Treating the self as layers to discard made it an enemy to escape instead of a mystery to know. His new resolve, to "learn from myself," reverses the method.

74. [short · synthesis · DOK 4 · Dual Credit (Indiana College Core): ICC-WC-1.5] Evaluate this reading: the loneliness of paragraph 11 undoes the joy of paragraph 7. Use paragraph 12 to decide whether the chapter ends in loss or in gain.

    Sample answer: The reading is half right: paragraph 11 does break the joy, but paragraph 12 turns the loss into gain. Paragraph 7 is pure discovery, "Beautiful was the world, colourful was the world" (Awakening, paragraph 7). Paragraph 11 cancels the mood: "his heart felt cold," and "Nobody was thus alone as he was" (paragraph 11). So far the reading holds. But paragraph 12 calls the cold moment "the last tremor of the awakening, the last struggle of this birth" (paragraph 12): the loneliness is part of the awakening, not its undoing. He comes out of it "more a self than before, more firmly concentrated," and walks on "swiftly and impatiently." The chapter ends in gain bought by loss, and the loneliness is the price, not the refutation, of the joy.

75. [short · synthesis · DOK 4 · Dual Credit (Indiana College Core): ICC-WC-1.5] In The Son of the Brahmin, paragraph 8, Siddhartha asks "where, where" the self is; in Awakening, paragraph 4, he concludes that he has "lost myself" along the way. Trace how the search moves from the first sentence to the second, using one stop on the way (With the Samanas or Gotama).

    Sample answer: The search moves from looking for the self as a place to realizing that the looking was the loss. In The Son of the Brahmin the self is a location to be reached: "But where, where was this self, this innermost part, this ultimate part?" (The Son of the Brahmin, paragraph 8). With the Samanas he tries to reach it by emptying himself, "Dead to himself, not to be a self any more" (With the Samanas, paragraph 3), but the ways always lead back. In Awakening he sees what the methods had in common: he was willing "to dissect my self and peel off all of its layers" to find a core, "But I have lost myself in the process" (Awakening, paragraph 4). The question "where" assumed the self was hidden somewhere else; the answer is that it was the one doing the searching.

76. [fill · recall · DOK 1] Fill in the blank with the vocabulary word that fits: "And it was not long until he walked again in long _____, started to proceed swiftly and impatiently" Word bank: robes, strides, prayers, shadows

    Key: strides

77. [mc · inference · DOK 2] In paragraph 10 Siddhartha says he had taken his return home for granted. What does this show about his first plan?

    A. It was a promise he had made to his mother

    B. It was habit, never really chosen

    C. It was a test the Buddha had set him

    D. It was Govinda's idea, not his own

    Key: B (It was habit, never really chosen)

78. [mc · inference · DOK 2] What does this passage most clearly show? "Beautiful was the world, colourful was the world, strange and mysterious was the world" (Awakening, paragraph 7)

    A. A list that mocks the world as a mere illusion to be seen through and escaped.

    B. He finds the world holy and loves it as it is.

    C. Plain prose stating his plan to go home.

    D. A rhetorical question about the self.

    Key: B (He finds the world holy and loves it as it is.)

79. [mc · inference · DOK 2] What does this passage most clearly show? "For many years, he had been without home and had felt nothing. Now, he felt it." (Awakening, paragraph 11)

    A. He has just lost his home for the first time.

    B. He regrets giving away his garments as a Samana.

C. He feels joy at last after years of numbness.

D. Only now does he feel the loneliness he lived with for years.

Key: D (Only now does he feel the loneliness he lived with for years.)

80. [mc · inference · DOK 2] Which of these images comes last in Awakening?

A. “as a small animal, a bird or a rabbit”

B. “like a star in the sky”

C. “as if a snake was lying on his path”

D. “like a newborn baby”

Key: B (“like a star in the sky”)

81. [mc · analysis · DOK 3] Where is Siddhartha heading when he walks on at the end of Awakening?

A. Not home, and no longer to his father

B. Back to his father’s house to stay

C. To the Buddha’s grove to join Govinda

D. To the Samanas in the forest again

Key: A (Not home, and no longer to his father)

82. [mc · analysis · DOK 3] Paragraph 7 says that the purpose of things was not “behind the things” but “in everything.” Which earlier belief does this sentence most directly reverse?

A. The belief that his father’s rites could wash off sin

B. The belief that the world is a veil over what is real

C. The belief that Govinda must choose his path himself

D. The belief that the Buddha’s gap breaks the world’s law

Key: B (The belief that the world is a veil over what is real)

83. [match · analysis · DOK 3] Match each term in the reading analogy (1-4) to what it stands for (A-D). Use each letter once.

1. “the symbols and letters” (paragraph 8)
2. “the book of my own being” (paragraph 8)
3. “a meaning I had anticipated before I read” (paragraph 8)
4. “deceptions, coincidence, and worthless hull” (paragraph 8)

A. His former contempt for appearances

B. His own self

C. Doctrines brought to the world in advance

D. The visible world

Key: 1-D, 2-B, 3-C, 4-A

84. [mc · analysis · DOK 3] When Siddhartha says a true reader will not call the letters “deceptions, coincidence, and worthless hull” (Awakening, paragraph 8), what is he really rejecting?

A. The Brahmins’ habit of reading the Vedas far too slowly

B. His old habit of scorning the visible world as illusion

C. Govinda’s love of the Buddha’s sermons and teachings

D. The Samanas’ strict rule against reading any books

Key: B (His old habit of scorning the visible world as illusion)

85. [mc · analysis · DOK 3] The chapter says that even in deepest meditation he "had been his father's son" (paragraph 11). What does this admission show?

    A. That he still loved his father more than Govinda

    B. That his father had secretly guided all of his meditation

    C. That even his ascetic years kept his old caste identity

    D. That he has decided to return to his father

    Key: C (That even his ascetic years kept his old caste identity)

86. [mc · analysis · DOK 3] Diving to "the place where the causes lie" defines thinking as…

    A. Escaping from all sensations

    B. Recalling teachers' words

    C. Turning sensations into realizations

    D. Emptying the mind of all thought

    Key: C (Turning sensations into realizations)

87. [short · analysis · DOK 3] Why does Hesse compare Siddhartha to "a small animal, a bird or a rabbit" when he feels alone?

    Sample answer: The comparison shrinks the proud seeker to a small, exposed creature that suddenly sees "how alone he was" (Awakening, paragraph 11). Its cold fear is instinctive, which shows that his loneliness is felt in the body, not merely thought. The image also prepares paragraph 12, where he emerges "more a self than before," so the small animal's fear becomes the last pang of a birth.

88. [mc · analysis · DOK 3] Why does Siddhartha name Yoga-Veda, Atharva-Veda and the ascetics in one breath?

    A. To reject every outside teacher at once

    B. To rank the teachings he valued most

    C. To plan his studies for the coming years

    D. To mock the new teacher Govinda has chosen

    Key: A (To reject every outside teacher at once)

89. [short · synthesis · DOK 4] Two readings of Awakening: (a) the awakening is an act of thought, reached by finding causes (paragraph 1); (b) it is an act of perception, the eyes taking in the world "for the first time" (paragraph 7). Weigh both and argue which better explains paragraphs 4-8.

    Sample answer: Each reading explains half of the sequence, and the chapter's point is the move from one to the other. Reading (a) explains how the insight arrives: paragraph 1 makes it the method, identifying the causes is "the very essence of thinking," and paragraph 4 applies it, tracing his ignorance to "one cause, a single cause: I was afraid of myself" (Awakening, paragraph 4). Reading (b) explains what follows: he looks around "as if he was seeing the world for the first time" (paragraph 7), and the colours enter "through the eyes." Paragraph 8 joins the two in the image of reading a text: he had decided the meaning "before I read" and scorned "the symbols and letters." So thought produces the awakening, and the awakening is to perception. If one reading must win, (b) explains more of paragraphs 4-8, since the thinking ends in a decision to stop thinking past the visible world.

90. [short · synthesis · DOK 4] Awakening, paragraph 6 dismisses the Vedas, "the ascetics" and "any kind" of teaching. Evaluate whether Awakening completes a pattern begun in the earlier chapters or breaks it: is learning "from myself" one more teacher, or the end of teachers? Cite a specific paragraph from at least two earlier chapters.

Sample answer: It completes the pattern by breaking it. The earlier chapters repeat one move: he finds that a guide has not reached the goal and leaves. His father is "just a searching man, a thirsty man?" (The Son of the Brahmin, paragraph 9); the oldest Samana "has lived for sixty years and has not reached the nirvana" (With the Samanas, paragraph 20); even Gotama's path cannot be handed on "by means of teachings" (Gotama, paragraph 37). Paragraph 6 of Awakening lists those guides and dismisses them all at once, "nor the ascetics, nor any kind of teachings" (Awakening, paragraph 6). On one reading the self is simply the next teacher: "want to be my student." But this teacher cannot be left the way the others were, since he is the one leaving, and the subject is no longer a doctrine but "the secret of Siddhartha." The pattern of leaving ends because there is no one left to leave; that is why the chapter can close "no longer back" (paragraph 12).

91. [fill · recall · DOK 1] Fill in the blank with the word that fits: "if also in the blue and the river, in Siddhartha, the _____ and divine lived hidden" Word bank: singular, salted, wooden, borrowed

    Key: singular

92. [mc · inference · DOK 2] Why does Siddhartha feel more alone than even a hermit in the forest?

    A. He has lost his way in an unknown land

    B. He has taken a vow of silence in the forest

    C. He belongs to no caste or community at all

    D. He has been driven out by the Samanas

    Key: C (He belongs to no caste or community at all)

93. [mc · inference · DOK 2] Which of these statements about teaching comes first in Awakening?

    A. "what they, who have taught you much, were still unable to teach you"

    B. "Study? Make offerings? Practise meditation?"

    C. "Neither Yoga-Veda shall teach me any more, nor Atharva-Veda"

    D. "the highest and wisest teacher, the most holy one"

    Key: D ("the highest and wisest teacher, the most holy one")

94. [mc · inference · DOK 2] What does this passage most clearly show? "Here was blue, here was yellow, here was green, the sky and the river flowed" (Awakening, paragraph 7)

    A. He is dizzy and confused after his long fast.

    B. He sees the colours of the world as if for the first time.

    C. He is describing a painting in the Buddha's grove.

    D. He longs to return to the river of his childhood.

    Key: B (He sees the colours of the world as if for the first time.)

95. [short · analysis · DOK 3] Paragraph 11 ends with three questions that it never answers, the first about where he belongs. Why does Hesse end the paragraph on questions rather than a statement, and does paragraph 12 answer them?

    Sample answer: The three questions, "where did he belong to? With whom would he share his life? Whose language would he speak?" (Awakening, paragraph 11), leave Siddhartha, and the reader, inside the cold moment: every other figure in the paragraph has a group, a refuge and a language, and he alone ends in a question mark. A statement would close the loss; the questions keep it open. Paragraph 12 does not answer them. It answers a different question, who he is: he emerges "more a self than before," and the only direction given is negative, "no longer for home, no longer to his father, no longer back." Belonging, company and language are left for the rest of the novel.

96. [mc · analysis · DOK 3] Hesse slows Siddhartha as he thinks (“Slowly,” “Slower”) and speeds him up after an insight (“walked quickly”). What does the changing pace mark?

    A. His tiredness after his long years of fasting among the Samanas

    B. His fear of meeting Govinda again on the forest road

    C. His steps keeping time with his thoughts as he frees himself

    D. His hope of reaching his father’s house before night

    Key: C (His steps keeping time with his thoughts as he frees himself)

97. [short · analysis · DOK 3] Paragraph 7 sets “Blue was blue, river was river” against “the veil of Maya.” Explain how the plain, repetitive sentences carry the chapter’s new view of the world.

    Sample answer: Earlier the visible world was “the veil of Maya,” a “pointless and coincidental diversity of mere appearances” (Awakening, paragraph 7), something to see through. The new sentences refuse to see through anything. “Blue was blue, river was river” says each thing is itself and needs no meaning beyond it; the tautology is the point. The repetition also slows the reader down to look, the way Siddhartha now looks “as if he was seeing the world for the first time.” The grammar of the sentence matches the claim that ends the paragraph: the essence is “not somewhere behind the things,” but “in them.”

98. [mc · analysis · DOK 3] Siddhartha says he was willing “to dissect my self and peel off all of its layers” (paragraph 4). What does the peeling image imply about his old method?

    A. It treated the self as a husk to strip away for a hidden core

    B. It treated the self as a layer to keep while he studied the world

    C. It treated each layer as worth more than the hidden core

    D. It treated the self as a riddle that Gotama would solve for him

    Key: A (It treated the self as a husk to strip away for a hidden core)

99. [mc · analysis · DOK 3] His new path differs from the Samanas’ in that he…

    A. Seeks the self instead of fleeing it

    B. Rejects the self as illusion

    C. Still hunts for Atman behind things

    D. Returns to Brahmin ritual

    Key: A (Seeks the self instead of fleeing it)

100. [mc · analysis · DOK 3] His claim to “have not been born before this very day” presents awakening as…

    A. A birth that starts life anew

    B. A return to his childhood home

    C. A final escape from rebirth

    D. A reward for ascetic effort

    Key: A (A birth that starts life anew)

101. [match · analysis · DOK 3] Match each image (1-4) to the stage of awakening it marks (A-D). Use each letter once.

    1. “like diving into a deep water” (paragraph 1)
    2. “as a snake is left by its old skin” (paragraph 2)
    3. “like a star in the sky” (paragraph 12)

4. “the last tremor of the awakening” (paragraph 12)

A. Despair understood as part of a birth

B. Thinking down to the causes

C. Isolation that is also distinctness

D. Outgrowing the wish for teachers

Key: 1-B, 2-D, 3-C, 4-A

102. [short · analysis · DOK 3] Paragraph 7 says the divine is meant “to be here yellow, here blue.” How does this reverse the Brahmin view Siddhartha grew up with?

Sample answer: The Brahmin, the narrator says, “scorns diversity” and “seeks unity” behind appearances (Awakening, paragraph 7). Siddhartha now finds the divine inside the many things themselves: its “way and purpose” is to appear as yellow, blue, sky and forest. Meaning is “not somewhere behind the things”; it is in them, so looking at the world becomes a way to the sacred rather than a distraction from it.

103. [mc · analysis · DOK 3] Why does the realization that he cannot go home strike “as if there was a snake lying in front of him”?

A. He fears the wild animals that roam the forest road

B. An overlooked truth halts him like sudden danger

C. It is a sign that he should turn back to the grove

D. It recalls the tests of courage set by the Samanas

Key: B (An overlooked truth halts him like sudden danger)

104. [mc · synthesis · DOK 4] In The Son of the Brahmin the verses say a man meets his innermost part “in his deep sleep” (paragraph 9); Awakening says, “I have awakened” (paragraph 8). What does this reversal claim?

A. That sleep is a spell of Mara he must now resist

B. That the Upanishads were wrong in saying that Atman exists

C. That he must go home and sleep as a Brahmin again

D. That the self is met in waking sight, not withdrawal

Key: D (That the self is met in waking sight, not withdrawal)

105. [short · synthesis · DOK 4] Is Siddhartha’s awakening something he does or something that happens to him? Weigh his verbs of decision (“learn from myself”, paragraph 6) against the images of passivity in paragraphs 4-5, and reach a judgment.

Sample answer: The chapter presents it as something that happens to him and then becomes something he does. The insight arrives on its own: “these thoughts caught hold of him” and a new thought “sprang forth” (Awakening, paragraph 4); “a feeling of awakening from long dreams flowed through him” (paragraph 5). He is the place where it happens. Only afterwards does the grammar turn active: “now I would not let Siddhartha escape from me again,” “I want to learn from myself, want to be my student” (paragraph 6). The order matters. Had he decided to awaken, it would be one more method, like the Samanas’ exercises; instead the awakening is received, and the decision is what he makes of it. The later shock of the snake (paragraph 9) is passive again, which suggests that the will follows the awakening and never commands it.

106. [fill · recall · DOK 1] Fill in the blank with the word that fits: “Slower, he walked along in his _____ and asked himself:” Word bank: thoughts, kettles, ladders, pebbles

Key: thoughts

107. [mc · inference · DOK 2] Which loss does Siddhartha feel most sharply when he stops on the path?

A. The money he gave away in the forest

B. The respect of the oldest Samana

C. Belonging to a caste and a home

D. The teachings he heard from Gotama

Key: C (Belonging to a caste and a home)

108. [mc · inference · DOK 2] What does this passage most clearly show? “It was the self, I wanted to free myself from, which I sought to overcome.” (Awakening, paragraph 3)

A. He has finally overcome his self for good.

B. He blames the Samanas for teaching him wrongly.

C. He wants to free his father from his duties.

D. His old search tried to escape the self, not know it.

Key: D (His old search tried to escape the self, not know it.)

109. [mc · inference · DOK 2] Which of these descriptions of the world comes last in Awakening?

A. “when the world melted away all around him”

B. “Beautiful was the world, colourful was the world”

C. “the book of the world and the book of my own being”

D. “this mystery of me being alive”

Key: A (“when the world melted away all around him”)

110. [mc · inference · DOK 2] What does this passage most clearly show? “Siddhartha opened his eyes and looked around, a smile filled his face” (Awakening, paragraph 5)

A. He has woken from a night of heavy sleep.

B. His insight brings him relief and new joy.

C. He sees Govinda coming back to join him.

D. He laughs at the foolishness of the Buddha.

Key: B (His insight brings him relief and new joy.)

111. [match · analysis · DOK 3] Paragraphs 11-12 move from loss to emergence. Match each phrase (1-4) to what it shows (A-D). Use each letter once.

1. “his heart felt cold” (paragraph 11)
2. “he had been his father’s son” (paragraph 11)
3. “even the most forlorn hermit” (paragraph 11)
4. “more a self than before” (paragraph 12)

A. The gain that comes out of the loss

B. A birthright that outlasted his years as an ascetic

C. The limit case: no one but he is without a group

D. The shock of the moment, registered physically

Key: 1-D, 2-B, 3-C, 4-A

112. [mc · analysis · DOK 3] One thing left him "as a snake is left by its old skin" (paragraph 2); later he stops as if a snake lay "in front of him" (paragraph 9). How do the two snakes differ?

    A. Both warn him that the grove of the Buddha was really a trap

    B. The first marks a thing shed; the second, a danger ahead

    C. The first marks a danger escaped; the second, a skin to shed

    D. Both show his fear of going back to his old life in the forest

    Key: B (The first marks a thing shed; the second, a danger ahead)

113. [short · analysis · DOK 3] The chapter turns on two stops on the road (paragraphs 4 and 9). Compare what each stop brings, and explain why Hesse orders them this way.

    Sample answer: At the first stop "these thoughts caught hold of him" (Awakening, paragraph 4) and he finds the cause of his self-ignorance, "I was afraid of myself"; the stop ends in a smile and quick walking. At the second he stops "suddenly, as if there was a snake lying in front of him" (paragraph 9) and realizes he can no longer go home; it ends in cold and shivering. The first stop gives him himself; the second takes away everything else. The order makes the gain come before its price, so the reader, like Siddhartha, learns the cost of freedom only after having welcomed it, and the last paragraph can turn the cold into "the last tremor of the awakening" (paragraph 12).

114. [short · analysis · DOK 3] Why does Siddhartha call himself "deaf and stupid"?

    Sample answer: He has scorned the visible world as deception "for the sake of a meaning I had anticipated before I read" (Awakening, paragraph 8). Like a reader who despises the letters, he missed the text in front of him. The harsh self-judgment opens the way for him to study the world "letter by letter."

115. [short · synthesis · DOK 4] Paragraph 7 keeps a hedge: "if also in the blue and the river, in Siddhartha, the singular and divine lived hidden." Does Awakening abandon the Brahmin search for the One, or relocate it? Argue, and answer the other reading.

    Sample answer: It relocates it. The Brahmin search "scorns diversity" and "seeks unity" behind appearances (Awakening, paragraph 7); Siddhartha now says the divine's "way and purpose" is "to be here yellow, here blue," and that the essence is "not somewhere behind the things, they were in them." The One is still there, "the singular and divine," but it is found in the many rather than by looking past them. The abandonment reading points to his rejection of "Atman and with the suffering of the world" as a starting point (paragraph 6) and to the joy of pure colour, "Blue was blue." But the "if" clause keeps the divine in view; what he gives up is the method of stripping away, not the hope of unity.

116. [mc · synthesis · DOK 4] In The Son of the Brahmin, at dawn, "his eyes were fixed on a distant spot" (paragraph 47); in Awakening he "opened his eyes" and "looked around" (paragraph 5). What does the change in his gaze trace?

    A. From obeying his father to obeying the Buddha

    B. From fear of the world to contempt for its forms

    C. From fixing on a far goal to seeing what is near

    D. From restless doubt to settled faith in the Vedas

    Key: C (From fixing on a far goal to seeing what is near)

117. [mc · synthesis · DOK 4] The chapter reverses the Brahmin view of diversity, treating it as…

    A. A deception to see through

    B. Proof there is no divinity

    C. A distraction from unity

    D. The very form the divine takes

Key: D (The very form the divine takes)

118. [mc · synthesis · DOK 4] Leaving the grove also means leaving…

A. Only his friend Govinda

B. His reverence for the Buddha

C. His past life and its identities

D. His wish to reach the goal

Key: C (His past life and its identities)

119. [mc · synthesis · DOK 4] The closing "no longer back" marks a shift from…

A. Solitude to companionship

B. Wandering to a settled life among other men

C. Homecoming to open-ended forward motion

D. Hope to lasting despair

Key: C (Homecoming to open-ended forward motion)

120. [mc · synthesis · DOK 4] The chapter moves from a smile (paragraph 5) to cold despair (paragraph 11) to a firmer self (paragraph 12). What does this arc suggest?

A. His first joy was false and is now being corrected

B. His despair proves that leaving home was the wrong choice

C. Loneliness ends his search once and for all

D. A new self includes loss as part of its birth

Key: D (A new self includes loss as part of its birth)

121. [fill · recall · DOK 1] Complete the quotation from Awakening, paragraph 9: "In thinking these thoughts, Siddhartha stopped once again, suddenly, as if there was a _____ lying in front of him on the path." Word bank: coin, flower, snake, book

Key: snake

122. [mc · inference · DOK 2] Which of these passages about being alone comes first in Awakening?

A. "Nobody was thus alone as he was."

B. "when he stood alone like a star in the sky"

C. "of me being one and being separated and isolated from all others"

D. "even the most forlorn hermit in the forest was not just one and alone"

Key: C ("of me being one and being separated and isolated from all others")

123. [mc · inference · DOK 2] Paragraph 11 ends with three questions it never answers, the first asking where he belongs. What do the questions leave open?

A. Whether Govinda will ever return to him

B. Which teacher he should seek out next

C. Where a man with no caste or home now belongs

D. When he will next find food on the road

Key: C (Where a man with no caste or home now belongs)

124. [mc · inference · DOK 2] What does this passage most clearly show? "But I am no longer the one I was, I am no ascetic any more, I am not a priest any more, I am no Brahmin any more." (Awakening, paragraph 10)

A. He has been expelled from his caste.

B. He means to become a priest again soon.

C. He blames his father for what he has lost.

D. His old identities no longer fit him.

Key: D (His old identities no longer fit him.)

125. [mc · analysis · DOK 3] Paragraph 7 calls the old view "despicable to the deeply thinking Brahmin, who scorns diversity." What is the tone toward that Brahmin?

A. Openly respectful: he is still the model to follow

B. Bitterly angry: he is blamed for the lost years

C. Merely neutral: it reports a Brahmin belief

D. Quietly ironic: his depth kept him from seeing

Key: D (Quietly ironic: his depth kept him from seeing)

126. [match · analysis · DOK 3] Match each step of Siddhartha's reasoning in paragraphs 3-4 (1-4) to its role (A-D). Use each letter once.

1. "It was the self, the purpose and essence of which I sought to learn." (paragraph 3)
2. "there is no thing in this world I know less about than about me" (paragraph 3)
3. "I was afraid of myself, I was fleeing from myself!" (paragraph 4)
4. "But I have lost myself in the process." (paragraph 4)

A. Naming what he was looking for

B. Finding its cause

C. Stating the problem

D. Admitting what his method cost him

Key: 1-A, 2-C, 3-B, 4-D

127. [mc · synthesis · DOK 4] Paragraph 1 says that finding causes is "the very essence of thinking" and turns sensations into realizations. How does the rest of the chapter test this claim?

A. It fails from the start, since he can find no cause for what he feels at all

B. It works for the first insight; the second arrives suddenly, as a shock

C. It is proved as each step follows from the Vedas' teaching

D. It is dropped when he resolves to stop thinking of himself

Key: B (It works for the first insight; the second arrives suddenly, as a shock)

128. [short · synthesis · DOK 4] Siddhartha traces his old failure to "one cause, a single cause: I was afraid of myself" (paragraph 4). Is this diagnosis fair to the teachings he has just left? Argue, using one earlier chapter.

Sample answer: It is fair to the Samanas and less fair to Gotama. The Samanas' goal was literally to stop being a self, "Dead to himself, not to be a self any more" (With the Samanas, paragraph 3), and their ways led "away from the self" (paragraph 7); fleeing from the self describes their method exactly. Gotama is another case. Siddhartha himself said that Gotama found salvation "on your own path, through thoughts, through meditation" (Gotama, paragraph 37), which is not flight. What the diagnosis captures is Siddhartha's own use of every teaching: he sought "to find the core of all peels" (Awakening, paragraph 4) and treated each path as a way to get past himself. So the cause is his, as he says, and paragraph 4 is a confession more than a verdict on his teachers.

129. [short · synthesis · DOK 4] Some readers find the ending of Awakening triumphant; others call it a flight, since he leaves the cold moment in haste, "swiftly" and "impatiently" (paragraph 12). Weigh both readings and decide.

Sample answer: The ending is triumphant, but the flight reading catches something real. The triumph is in the text: he "emerged, more a self than before, more firmly concentrated" (Awakening, paragraph 12), and the narrator names the cold "the last tremor of the awakening, the last struggle of this birth." Yet the haste follows straight on the loneliness of paragraph 11, where he asks "where did he belong to?" and gets no answer; "swiftly and impatiently" sounds like a man moving so that the question cannot catch him. The sentence answers where he is not going, "no longer for home, no longer to his father, no longer back," not where he is going. So the triumph is real but negative: he has become a self by leaving, and the chapter leaves open what that self will belong to.

130. [short · synthesis · DOK 4] Close reading: how do the diction and syntax of "heading no longer for home, no longer to his father, no longer back" (Awakening, paragraph 12) shape its meaning? Consider a second, competing reading.

Sample answer: The phrase closes the chapter by shutting every road behind Siddhartha: "heading no longer for home, no longer to his father, no longer back" (Awakening, paragraph 12). The triple "no longer" works like three doors closing, and the list narrows from "home" to "father" to the bare word "back," so the sentence ends on the very direction he refuses. A competing reading hears loss, a young man cut off from love and family. But the phrase follows his emergence "more a self than before," and its rhythm drives forward like his long strides, so the refusals read as resolve rather than exile.

131. [match · synthesis · DOK 4] Match each line from an earlier chapter (1-4) to how Awakening treats it (A-D). Use each letter once.

1. "It had to be found, the pristine source in one's own self" (The Son of the Brahmin, paragraph 9)
2. "all of this was not worthy of one look from his eye" (With the Samanas, paragraph 2)
3. "Dead to himself, not to be a self any more" (With the Samanas, paragraph 3)
4. "No teachings will entice me any more" (Gotama, paragraph 45)

A. Kept, but the self is now to be studied, not dug out

B. Confirmed and widened to every teacher and book

C. Reversed: he now refuses to let himself escape

D. Reversed: the visible world is now worth reading

Key: 1-A, 2-D, 3-C, 4-B

132. [short · synthesis · DOK 4] Soon after resolving to learn from himself, what does Siddhartha meet, and why does the chapter need this moment?

Sample answer: Right after his joyful resolve he meets the loss of all belonging: "Nobody was thus alone as he was" (Awakening, paragraph 11). He is no longer a Brahmin, an ascetic or a disciple, and even "the most forlorn hermit" has a caste. The chapter needs this cold moment because freedom from every teacher also means freedom from every community; only by passing through it does he emerge "more a self than before."

133. [mc · synthesis · DOK 4] Paragraph 3 says, "Slower, he walked along in his thoughts and asked himself." What does the slower pace suggest?

A. He is tired and footsore from the long road out of the grove

B. He is turning inward to examine what he has just left behind

C. He is lost and cannot find his way

D. He is waiting for Govinda to catch up

Key: B (He is turning inward to examine what he has just left behind)

134. [mc · synthesis · DOK 4] When Siddhartha says he no longer wants to begin "with Atman and with the suffering of the world" (paragraph 6), what is he turning away from?

A. Starting from doctrine instead of from his own lived experience

B. His love for his father, his mother and the home he was raised in

C. The life of the senses he will meet in the city

D. His friendship with Govinda

Key: A (Starting from doctrine instead of from his own lived experience)

135. [mc · synthesis · DOK 4] In the first chapter Siddhartha asks, "But where, where was this self" (The Son of the Brahmin, paragraph 8). How does Awakening answer that question?

A. It finds the self by renouncing the senses, as the Samanas taught

B. It defers the question until he can return home to his father

C. It locates the self in his own life and senses, not behind them

D. It finds the self in the Atman hidden behind every appearance

Key: C (It locates the self in his own life and senses, not behind them)

Rigor version	Items (in order)	Mix
HS Sophomore	1, 2, 3, 4, 5, 6, 7, 8, 9, 10, 11, 12, 13, 14, 15	recall 9, inference 3, analysis 2, synthesis 1
HS Junior	16, 17, 18, 19, 20, 21, 22, 23, 24, 25, 26, 27, 28, 29, 30	recall 8, inference 3, analysis 3, synthesis 1
HS Senior	31, 32, 33, 34, 35, 36, 37, 38, 39, 40, 41, 42, 43, 44, 45	recall 9, inference 2, analysis 3, synthesis 1
AP	46, 47, 48, 49, 50, 51, 52, 53, 54, 55, 56, 57, 58, 59, 60	recall 2, inference 7, analysis 4, synthesis 2
College Freshman	61, 62, 63, 64, 65, 66, 67, 68, 69, 70, 71, 72, 73, 74, 75	recall 1, inference 5, analysis 7, synthesis 2
College Sophomore	76, 77, 78, 79, 80, 81, 82, 83, 84, 85, 86, 87, 88, 89, 90	recall 1, inference 4, analysis 8, synthesis 2
College Junior	91, 92, 93, 94, 95, 96, 97, 98, 99, 100, 101, 102, 103, 104, 105	recall 1, inference 3, analysis 9, synthesis 2
College Senior	106, 107, 108, 109, 110, 111, 112, 113, 114, 115, 116, 117, 118, 119, 120	recall 1, inference 4, analysis 4, synthesis 6
Graduate / PhD	121, 122, 123, 124, 125, 126, 127, 128, 129, 130, 131, 132, 133, 134, 135	recall 1, inference 3, analysis 2, synthesis 9

Writing prompts (eleven rigor levels)

HS Sophomore (450 words; Dual Credit (Indiana College Core): ICC-WC-1.1, ICC-WC-1.3, ICC-WC-1.4, ICC-WC-1.5): Analyze how Awakening develops the idea of awakening to the world. Make a precise claim, support it with at least three pieces of textual evidence, and explain how the author's use of imagery and symbolism shapes that idea. Address one possible counterclaim. (You are reading the English translation by Gunther Olesch, Anke Dreher, Amy Coulter, Stefan Langer and Semyon Chaichenets, so word-choice evidence is the translators' English.)

HS Junior (550 words; Dual Credit (Indiana College Core): ICC-WC-1.1, ICC-WC-1.3, ICC-WC-1.4, ICC-WC-1.5): Analyze how the structure of Awakening (where it begins, turns and ends) and its imagery shape the reader's understanding of awakening to the world. Identify one place where the text leaves matters uncertain and explain how that uncertainty adds to its meaning.

HS Senior (600 words; Dual Credit (Indiana College Core): ICC-WC-1.1, ICC-WC-1.3, ICC-WC-1.4, ICC-WC-1.5): Two readers disagree about what Awakening suggests about awakening to the world. Lay out two plausible interpretations, weigh the evidence for each (including the chapter's imagery and symbolism), and argue for the stronger one in a sustained, well-organized essay.

AP (650 words; Dual Credit (Indiana College Core): ICC-WC-1.1, ICC-WC-1.3, ICC-WC-1.4, ICC-WC-1.5): Write a literary argument in which you analyze how Hermann Hesse uses imagery in Awakening to complicate the reader's understanding of awakening to the world. Develop a defensible thesis, select evidence purposefully, and explain how specific choices of diction and syntax create meaning.

College Freshman (1000 words; Dual Credit (Indiana College Core): ICC-WC-1.3, ICC-WC-1.5, ICC-WC-1.1): Situate Awakening within its historical and literary context and argue how the chapter's treatment of awakening to the world responds to that context. Engage with at least one secondary perspective (a critic, historian or the author's own statements), integrate quotations smoothly, and cite in APA style.

College Sophomore (1250 words; Dual Credit (Indiana College Core): ICC-WC-1.1, ICC-WC-1.3, ICC-WC-1.4, ICC-WC-1.5): Read Awakening alongside the conventions of its genre and period. Argue how the chapter's handling of awakening to the world follows or bends those conventions, using the imagery as evidence, and test your reading against one published critic. Document two secondary sources in APA.

College Junior (1500 words; Dual Credit (Indiana College Core): ICC-WC-1.1, ICC-WC-1.3, ICC-WC-1.4, ICC-WC-1.5): Apply a named critical approach (for example formalist, historicist, feminist, psychoanalytic or ecocritical) to Awakening and its treatment of awakening to the world. State your method, show what it reveals in the chapter's imagery and symbolism, and identify where the text resists it.

College Senior (2000 words; Dual Credit (Indiana College Core): ICC-WC-1.1, ICC-WC-1.3, ICC-WC-1.4, ICC-WC-1.5): Develop a research argument that reads Awakening as evidence for a larger claim about awakening to the world in Siddhartha. Connect close reading of the chapter to the whole novel, engage at least four scholarly sources, and state precisely where your reading departs from theirs (Chicago style).

Graduate / PhD (2500 words; Dual Credit (Indiana College Core): ICC-WC-1.1, ICC-WC-1.3, ICC-WC-1.4, ICC-WC-1.5): Develop an original argument that reads Awakening as a hinge in the novel's larger treatment of awakening to the world. Position your reading within a named critical conversation (for example formalist, historicist, psychoanalytic, feminist or postcolonial approaches), account for the textual history where relevant, and articulate the stakes of your intervention for scholarship on Siddhartha.

SAT-style questions

1. "When someone reads a text, wants to discover its meaning, he will not scorn the symbols and letters and call them deceptions, coincidence, and worthless hull, but he will read them, he will study and love them, letter by letter.

   As used in the text, what does the word "scorn" most nearly mean?

   A. treat with contempt; look down on

   B. woke; became aware

   C. a chance happening that only seems planned

   D. signs or marks that stand for something else

2. Having been pondering while slowly walking along, he now stopped as these thoughts caught hold of him, and right away another thought sprang forth from these, a new thought, which was: "That I know nothing about myself, that Siddhartha has remained thus alien and unknown to me, stems from one cause, a single cause: I was afraid of myself, I was fleeing from myself! I searched Atman, I searched Brahman, I was willing to dissect my self and peel off all of its layers, to find the core of all peels in its unknown interior, the Atman, life, the divine part, the ultimate part. But I have lost myself in the process."

   Which choice best states a central concern of "Awakening"?

   A. Detachment among the childlike people

   B. The pain of a father's love

   C. Awakening to the world

   D. Self-denial as a path

SAT key: 1. A (treat with contempt; look down on); 2. C (Awakening to the world)

Lesson 6: Kamala

Focus: entering the city and learning love

Objective: Students will analyze how characterization develops in "Kamala" by writing a claim-evidence-reasoning paragraph that cites at least 2 quotations from the section, and will score at least 80% on the section quiz.

Standards: Dual Credit (Indiana College Core): ICC-WC-1.1, ICC-WC-1.3, ICC-WC-1.4, ICC-WC-1.5

Content note (sexual content, alcohol or drugs (mentioned)): Kamala is a courtesan in an ancient Indian city, and the novel treats love as an art she teaches. Sensual passages are frank but brief (Kamala, paras. 4, 13–14, 50). Draw out her point about consent: when Siddhartha jokes "He could force you, beautiful girl." (Hesse, 1922/2015, Kamala, para. 36) she answers "love can be obtained by begging, buying, receiving it as a gift, finding it in the street, but it cannot be stolen." (Hesse, 1922/2015, Kamala, para. 37)
Student preview: This chapter refers to a romantic and sexual relationship.
Suggested language: "What does Siddhartha want from Kamala, and what does he learn?"

Teacher only · spoilers

Siddhartha dreams of Govinda becoming a woman, crosses a river with a kind ferryman who predicts his return, and reaches a city where he sees the beautiful courtesan Kamala. She tells him he needs fine clothes, shoes and money; he learns quickly and, through her, gains a position with the merchant Kamaswami. Kamala becomes his teacher in love.

Background: Courtesans in ancient India could be educated, wealthy and respected.

Significance: The ferryman's prophecy and the river crossing foreshadow the novel's final setting.

Lesson plan and lecture script (90 minutes)

0–8 min · Bell-ringer · You do (8 min)
Students write to the bell-ringer, then pair-share.
Siddhartha says he can think, wait and fast. Why are these powerful skills? Write for five minutes. Starters: I think... because... / This connects to teaching versus experience because.... Content note before we start: This chapter refers to a romantic and sexual relationship.
Prompt: Siddhartha says he can think, wait and fast. Why are these powerful skills?
Sentence starters: I think… because… · This connects to teaching versus experience because…
Strong response: A strong response takes a position and anticipates this: after rejecting every spiritual teacher, Siddhartha chooses a teacher of the senses; he still learns, but now through experience.

8–18 min · Vocabulary with etymology notes · We do (10 min)
Five key words in context, with verified word histories.
Today's words: disembarking — getting off a boat; seashells — the shells of sea creatures; shimmered — shone with a soft, wavering light; pouches — small bags for carrying money or things; cistern — a tank for storing water.
“shimmered”: Origin of “shimmer”: Old English sċymrian.
Words: disembarking: getting off a boat · seashells: the shells of sea creatures · shimmered: shone with a soft, wavering light · pouches: small bags for carrying money or things · cistern: a tank for storing water

18–28 min · Background and context · I do (10 min)
Mini-lecture (read or adapt the script).
Courtesans in ancient India could be educated, wealthy and respected. The ferryman's prophecy and the river crossing foreshadow the novel's final setting. Characterization: Siddhartha enters the world: the ferryman carries him across for nothing; a young village woman offers herself and he declines; he sees the courtesan Kamala and decides she will be his teacher of love. Foreshadowing: The ferryman's parting words ("everything is coming back! You too, Samana, will come back") predict the whole second half of the novel. Dialogue: With Kamala, Siddhartha bargains like a merchant: he has nothing to offer but his three skills, "I can think. I can wait. I can fast." Watch for the river and the ferry: the river he crosses here separates the life of the spirit from the life of the city; he will cross it back.

28–40 min · I do: modeled close reading · I do (12 min)
Model the close reading of the anchor quotation using the written think-aloud below.
First, meaning. I read “I can think. I can wait. I can fast” slowly and put it in my own words: Siddhartha tells Kamala his only skills are that he can think, he can wait and he can fast. Next, craft. I notice three short sentences with the same pattern, "I can...," like a confident list of possessions. The strongest word is “fast”: going without food was a beggar's discipline, and he presents it as wealth. Then, effect. What does Siddhartha offer Kamala when he has no money? My answer: With no money, Siddhartha offers Kamala what he can do: think, wait and fast, the patience and self-control of a Samana; these inner powers win him Kamala and Kamaswami's business.

> I can think. I can wait. I can fast (Kamala, paragraph 42)

Think-aloud: First, meaning. I read “I can think. I can wait. I can fast” slowly and put it in my own words: Siddhartha tells Kamala his only skills are that he can think, he can wait and he can fast. Next, craft. I notice three short sentences with the same pattern, "I can...," like a confident list of possessions. The strongest word is “fast”: going without food was a beggar's discipline, and he presents it as wealth. Then, effect. What does Siddhartha offer Kamala when he has no money? My answer: With no money, Siddhartha offers Kamala what he can do: think, wait and fast, the patience and self-control of a Samana; these inner powers win him Kamala and Kamaswami's business.

40–55 min · We do: guided annotation · We do (15 min)
Guided analysis of a second quotation; expected answers given.
Ask: What words in this line stand out, and what do they suggest? Expected: "Everything is coming back" introduces the cycle (Sansara) and the river as teacher. Expected answer: the line foreshadows his return and connects the river to time and repetition. Ask: How does this line connect to teaching versus experience? Expected: After rejecting every spiritual teacher, Siddhartha chooses a teacher of the senses; he still learns, but now through experience. (the ferryman's prophecy; the river is already a teacher.)

> This too, I have learned from the river: everything is coming back (Kamala, paragraph 11)

Ask: What words in this line stand out, and what do they suggest?
Expected answer: "Everything is coming back" introduces the cycle (Sansara) and the river as teacher. Expected answer: the line foreshadows his return and connects the river to time and repetition.
Ask: How does this line connect to teaching versus experience?
Expected answer: After rejecting every spiritual teacher, Siddhartha chooses a teacher of the senses; he still learns, but now through experience. (the ferryman's prophecy; the river is already a teacher.)

55–70 min · You do: independent annotation · You do (15 min)
Independent annotation and a claim-evidence-reasoning paragraph (exemplar given).
Annotate the chapter for characterization, foreshadowing (three marks with a margin note each), then write one claim-evidence-reasoning paragraph: what does this chapter suggest about entering the city and learning love? Then start your writing prompt at your assigned level (HS Sophomore: Analyze how Kamala develops the idea of entering the city and learning love. Make a precise claim, support it with at least three pieces of textual evidence, and explain how the author's use of characterization and symbolism shapes that idea. Address one possible counterclaim. (You are reading the English translation by Gunther Olesch, Anke Dreher, Amy Coulter, Stefan Langer and Semyon Chaichenets, so word-choice evidence is the translators' English.)) Exemplar: The ferryman's words at the river foreshadow that Siddhartha's journey into the world is a detour that will lead back. When the text says “This too, I have learned from the river: everything is coming back” (Kamala, paragraph 11), it shows this directly. The ferryman says "This too, I have learned from the river: everything is coming back! You too, Samana, will come back," naming the river as his teacher and predicting Siddhartha's return long before it happens.
Task: Annotate the chapter for characterization, foreshadowing (three marks with a margin note each), then write one claim-evidence-reasoning paragraph: what does this chapter suggest about entering the city and learning love? Then start your writing prompt at your assigned level (HS Sophomore: Analyze how Kamala develops the idea of entering the city and learning love. Make a precise claim, support it with at least three pieces of textual evidence, and explain how the author's use of characterization and symbolism shapes that idea. Address one possible counterclaim. (You are reading the English translation by Gunther Olesch, Anke Dreher, Amy Coulter, Stefan Langer and Semyon Chaichenets, so word-choice evidence is the translators' English.))
Exemplar: The ferryman's words at the river foreshadow that Siddhartha's journey into the world is a detour that will lead back. When the text says “This too, I have learned from the river: everything is coming back” (Kamala, paragraph 11), it shows this directly. The ferryman says "This too, I have learned from the river: everything is coming back! You too, Samana, will come back," naming the river as his teacher and predicting Siddhartha's return long before it happens.

70–80 min · Discussion · We do (10 min)
Structured discussion from the 30 tiered questions, with facilitation notes.
Anchor question: Siddhartha says he can think, wait and fast. Why are these powerful skills? Ask: why does Siddhartha want Kamala as a teacher when he refused the Buddha? Is that consistent?
Anchor question: Siddhartha says he can think, wait and fast. Why are these powerful skills?
Facilitation: Ask: why does Siddhartha want Kamala as a teacher when he refused the Buddha? Is that consistent?

80–87 min · Exit ticket / chapter quiz · You do (7 min)
Chapter quiz in the app and an exit ticket (answer given).
Chapter quiz in the app, then: In one sentence, what does this chapter suggest about entering the city and learning love? Support it with one short quotation. Model answer: The ferryman's words at the river foreshadow that Siddhartha's journey into the world is a detour that will lead back. ("This too, I have learned from the river: everything is coming back", Kamala, paragraph 11). Accept any defensible claim backed by a quotation from the chapter; the answer key for the quiz is in the Quiz section.
Exit ticket: In one sentence, what does this chapter suggest about entering the city and learning love? Support it with one short quotation.
Answer: Model answer: The ferryman's words at the river foreshadow that Siddhartha's journey into the world is a detour that will lead back. ("This too, I have learned from the river: everything is coming back", Kamala, paragraph 11). Accept any defensible claim backed by a quotation from the chapter; the answer key for the quiz is in the Quiz section.

87–90 min · Closure · I do (3 min)
Summarize the lesson and preview the next reading.
Today we saw how characterization shapes entering the city and learning love. Key takeaway: after rejecting every spiritual teacher, Siddhartha chooses a teacher of the senses; he still learns, but now through experience.

Total: 90 minutes.

60-minute version of this lesson

Same script and content as above, with these timings (60 minutes).

Clock	Segment	Minutes	What to keep
0–5	Bell-ringer	5	Students write to the bell-ringer, then pair-share.
5–10	Vocabulary with etymology notes	5	Five key words in context, with verified word histories.
10–16	Background and context	6	Mini-lecture (read or adapt the script).
16–24	I do: modeled close reading	8	Model the close reading of the anchor quotation using the written think-aloud below.
24–34	We do: guided annotation	10	Guided analysis of a second quotation; expected answers given.
34–44	You do: independent annotation	10	Independent annotation and a claim-evidence-reasoning paragraph (exemplar given).

44–54	Discussion	10	Structured discussion from the 30 tiered questions, with facilitation notes.
54–58	Exit ticket / chapter quiz	4	Chapter quiz in the app and an exit ticket (answer given).
58–60	Closure	2	Summarize the lesson and preview the next reading.

Teacher analysis (spoilers)

Literary elements

- Characterization: Siddhartha enters the world: the ferryman carries him across for nothing; a young village woman offers herself and he declines; he sees the courtesan Kamala and decides she will be his teacher of love.
- Foreshadowing: The ferryman's parting words ("everything is coming back! You too, Samana, will come back") hint that the river is not done with him.
- Dialogue: With Kamala, Siddhartha bargains like a merchant: he has nothing to offer but his three skills, "I can think. I can wait. I can fast."

Themes and how they develop

- teaching versus experience: after rejecting every spiritual teacher, Siddhartha chooses a teacher of the senses; he still learns, but now through experience.

Symbols and motifs

- the river and the ferry: the river he crosses here separates the life of the spirit from the life of the city; he will cross it back.

Key quotations (checked against the reading text)

- “This too, I have learned from the river: everything is coming back” (Kamala, paragraph 11) The ferryman's prophecy; the river is already a teacher.
- “I can think. I can wait. I can fast” (Kamala, paragraph 42) Siddhartha's three skills: everything his ascetic life gave him, offered as currency in the city.
- “Commemorate me when you make offerings to the gods” (Kamala, paragraph 11) The ferryman asks no payment but friendship.

Model claim-evidence-reasoning

Claim: The ferryman's words at the river foreshadow that Siddhartha's journey into the world is a detour that will lead back.
Evidence: “This too, I have learned from the river: everything is coming back” (Kamala, paragraph 11)
Reasoning: The ferryman says "This too, I have learned from the river: everything is coming back! You too, Samana, will come back," naming the river as his teacher and predicting Siddhartha's return long before it happens.

Passages referenced in this lesson (full text)

But more than all the others he was loved by Govinda, his friend, the son of a Brahmin. He loved Siddhartha's eye and sweet voice, he loved his walk and the perfect decency of his movements, he loved everything Siddhartha did and said and what he loved most was his spirit, his transcendent, fiery thoughts, his ardent will, his high calling. Govinda knew: he would not become a common Brahmin, not a lazy official in charge of offerings; not a greedy merchant with magic spells; not a vain, vacuous speaker; not a mean, deceitful priest; and also not a decent, stupid sheep in the herd of the many. No, and he, Govinda, as well did not want to become one of those, not one of those tens of thousands of Brahmins. He wanted to follow Siddhartha, the beloved, the splendid. And in days to come, when Siddhartha would become a god, when he would join the glorious, then Govinda wanted to follow him as his friend, his companion, his servant, his spear-carrier, his shadow. (The Son of the Brahmin, paragraph 5)

He took his hand from the shoulder of his son and went outside. Siddhartha wavered to the side, as he tried to walk. He put his limbs back under control, bowed to his father, and went to his mother to do as his father had said. (The Son of the Brahmin, paragraph 49)

Siddhartha gave his garments to a poor Brahmin in the street. He wore nothing more than the loincloth and the earth-coloured, unsown cloak. He ate only once a day, and never something cooked. He fasted for fifteen days. He fasted for twenty-eight days. The flesh waned from his thighs and cheeks. Feverish dreams flickered from his enlarged eyes, long nails grew slowly on his parched fingers and a dry, shaggy beard grew on his chin. His glance turned to ice when he encountered women; his mouth twitched with contempt when he walked through a city of nicely dressed people. He saw merchants trading, princes hunting, mourners wailing for their dead, whores offering themselves, physicians trying to help the sick, priests determining the most suitable day for seeding, lovers loving, mothers nursing their children—and all of this was not worthy of one look from his eye, it all lied, it all stank, it all stank of lies, it all pretended to be meaningful and joyful and beautiful, and it all was just concealed putrefaction. The world tasted bitter. Life was torture. (With the Samanas, paragraph 2)

Silently, Siddhartha exposed himself to burning rays of the sun directly above, glowing with pain, glowing with thirst, and stood there, until he neither felt any pain nor thirst any more. Silently, he stood there in the rainy season, from his hair the water was dripping over freezing shoulders, over freezing hips and legs, and the penitent stood there, until he could not feel the cold in his shoulders and legs any more, until they were silent, until they were quiet. Silently, he cowered in the thorny bushes, blood dripped from the burning skin, from festering wounds dripped pus, and Siddhartha stayed rigidly, stayed motionless, until no blood flowed any more, until nothing stung any more, until nothing burned any more. (With the Samanas, paragraph 4)

Quoth Siddhartha: "Yesterday, O exalted one, I had been privileged to hear your wondrous teachings. Together with my friend, I had come from afar, to hear your teachings. And now my friend is going to stay with your people, he has taken his refuge with you. But I will again start on my pilgrimage." (Gotama, paragraph 31)

"I wish that you, O exalted one, would not be angry with me," said the young man. "I have not spoken to you like this to argue with you, to argue about words. You are truly right, there is little to opinions. But let me say this one more thing: I have not doubted in you for a single moment. I have not doubted for a single moment that you are Buddha, that you have reached the goal, the highest goal towards which so many thousands of Brahmins and sons of Brahmins are on their way. You have found salvation from death. It has come to you in the course of your own search, on your own path, through thoughts, through meditation, through realizations, through enlightenment. It has not come to you by means of teachings! And—thus is my thought, O exalted one—nobody will obtain salvation by means of teachings! You will not be able to convey and say to anybody, O venerable one, in words and through teachings what has happened to you in the hour of enlightenment! The teachings of the enlightened

Buddha contain much, it teaches many to live righteously, to avoid evil. But there is one thing which these so clear, these so venerable teachings do not contain: they do not contain the mystery of what the exalted one has experienced for himself, he alone among hundreds of thousands. This is what I have thought and realized, when I have heard the teachings. This is why I am continuing my travels—not to seek other, better teachings, for I know there are none, but to depart from all teachings and all teachers and to reach my goal by myself or to die. But often, I'll think of this day, O exalted one, and of this hour, when my eyes beheld a holy man." (Gotama, paragraph 37)

I saw a man, Siddhartha thought, a single man, before whom I would have to lower my glance. I do not want to lower my glance before any other, not before any other. No teachings will entice me any more, since this man's teachings have not enticed me. (Gotama, paragraph 45)

"Oh," he thought, taking a deep breath, "now I would not let Siddhartha escape from me again! No longer, I want to begin my thoughts and my life with Atman and with the suffering of the world. I do not want to kill and dissect myself any longer, to find a secret behind the ruins. Neither Yoga-Veda shall teach me any more, nor Atharva-Veda, nor the ascetics, nor any kind of teachings. I want to learn from myself, want to be my student, want to get to know myself, the secret of Siddhartha." (Awakening, paragraph 6)

He looked around, as if he was seeing the world for the first time. Beautiful was the world, colourful was the world, strange and mysterious was the world! Here was blue, here was yellow, here was green, the sky and the river flowed, the forest and the mountains were rigid, all of it was beautiful, all of it was mysterious and magical, and in its midst was he, Siddhartha, the awakening one, on the path to himself. All of this, all this yellow and blue, river and forest, entered Siddhartha for the first time through the eyes, was no longer a spell of Mara, was no longer the veil of Maya, was no longer a pointless and coincidental diversity of mere appearances, despicable to the deeply thinking Brahmin, who scorns diversity, who seeks unity. Blue was blue, river was river, and if also in the blue and the river, in Siddhartha, the singular and divine lived hidden, so it was still that very divinity's way and purpose, to be here yellow, here blue, there sky, there forest, and here Siddhartha. The purpose and the essential properties were not somewhere behind the things, they were in them, in everything. (Awakening, paragraph 7)

"How deaf and stupid have I been!" he thought, walking swiftly along. "When someone reads a text, wants to discover its meaning, he will not scorn the symbols and letters and call them deceptions, coincidence, and worthless hull, but he will read them, he will study and love them, letter by letter. But I, who wanted to read the book of the world and the book of my own being, I have, for the sake of a meaning I had anticipated before I read, scorned the symbols and letters, I called the visible world a deception, called my eyes and my tongue coincidental and worthless forms without substance. No, this is over, I have awakened, I have indeed awakened and have not been born before this very day." (Awakening, paragraph 8)

Motionless, Siddhartha remained standing there, and for the time of one moment and breath, his heart felt cold, he felt a cold in his chest, as a small animal, a bird or a rabbit, would when seeing how alone he was. For many years, he had been without home and had felt nothing. Now, he felt it. Still, even in the deepest meditation, he had been his father's son, had been a Brahmin, of a high caste, a cleric. Now, he was nothing but Siddhartha, the awoken one, nothing else was left. Deeply, he inhaled, and for a moment, he felt cold and shivered. Nobody was thus alone as he was. There was no nobleman who did not belong to the noblemen, no worker that did not belong to the workers, and found refuge with them, shared their life, spoke their language. No Brahmin who would not be regarded as Brahmins and lived with them, no ascetic who would not find his refuge in the caste of the Samanas, and even the most forlorn hermit in the forest was not just one and alone, he was also surrounded by a place he belonged to, he also belonged to a caste, in which he was at home. Govinda had become a monk, and a thousand monks were his brothers, wore the same robe as he, believed in his faith, spoke his language. But he, Siddhartha, where did he belong to? With whom would he share his life? Whose language would he speak? (Awakening, paragraph 11)

Out of this moment, when the world melted away all around him, when he stood alone like a star in the sky, out of this moment of a cold and despair, Siddhartha emerged, more a self than before, more firmly concentrated. He felt: This had been the last tremor of the awakening, the last struggle of this birth. And it was not long until he walked again in long strides, started to proceed swiftly and impatiently, heading no longer for home, no longer to his father, no longer back. (Awakening, paragraph 12)

Siddhartha learned something new on every step of his path, for the world was transformed, and his heart was enchanted. He saw the sun rising over the mountains with their forests and setting over the distant beach with its palm trees. At night, he saw the stars in the sky in their fixed positions and the crescent of the moon floating like a boat in the blue. He saw trees, stars, animals, clouds, rainbows, rocks, herbs, flowers, stream and river, the glistening dew in the bushes in the morning, distant high mountains which were blue and pale, birds sang and bees, wind silverishly blew through the rice field. All of this, a thousandfold and colourful, had always been there, the sun and the moon had always shone, always rivers had roared and bees had buzzed, but in former times all of this had been nothing more to Siddhartha than a fleeting, deceptive veil before his eyes, looked upon in distrust, destined to be penetrated and destroyed by thought, since it was not the essential existence, since this essence lay beyond, on the other side of, the visible. But now, his liberated eyes stayed on this side, he saw and became aware of the visible, sought to be at home in this world, did not search for the true essence, did not aim at a world beyond. Beautiful was this world, looking at it thus, without searching, thus simply, thus childlike. Beautiful were the moon and the stars, beautiful was the stream and the banks, the forest and the rocks, the goat and the gold-beetle, the flower and the butterfly. Beautiful and lovely it was, thus to walk through the world, thus childlike, thus awoken, thus open to what is near, thus without distrust. Differently the sun burnt the head, differently the shade of the forest cooled him down, differently the stream and the cistern, the pumpkin and the banana tasted. Short were the days, short the nights, every hour sped swiftly away like a sail on the sea, and under the sail was a ship full of treasures, full of joy. Siddhartha saw a group of apes moving through the high canopy of the forest, high in the branches, and heard their savage, greedy song. Siddhartha saw a male sheep following a female one and mating with her. In a lake of reeds, he saw the pike hungrily hunting for its dinner; propelling themselves away from it, in fear, wiggling and sparkling, the young fish jumped in droves out of the water; the scent of strength and passion came forcefully out of the hasty eddies of the water, which the pike stirred up, impetuously hunting. (Kamala, paragraph 1)

All of this had always existed, and he had not seen it; he had not been with it. Now he was with it, he was part of it. Light and shadow ran through his eyes, stars and moon ran through his heart. (Kamala, paragraph 2)

On the way, Siddhartha also remembered everything he had experienced in the Garden Jetavana, the teaching he had heard there, the divine Buddha, the farewell from Govinda, the conversation with the exalted one. Again he remembered his own words, he had spoken to the exalted one, every word, and with astonishment he became aware of the fact that there he had said things which he had not really known yet at this time. What he had said to Gotama: his, the Buddha's, treasure and secret was not the teachings, but the unexpressable and not teachable, which he had experienced in the hour of his enlightenment—it was nothing but this very thing which he had now gone to experience, what he now began to experience. Now, he had to experience his self. It is true that he had already known for a long time that his self was Atman, in its essence bearing the same eternal characteristics as Brahman. But he had never really found this self, because he had wanted to capture it in the net of thought. With the body definitely not being the self, and not the spectacle of the senses, so it also was not the thought, not the rational mind, not the learned wisdom, not the learned ability to draw conclusions and to develop previous thoughts in to new ones. No, this world of thought was also still on this side, and nothing could be achieved by killing the random self of the senses, if the random self of thoughts and learned knowledge was fattened on the other hand. Both, the thoughts as well as the senses, were pretty things, the ultimate meaning was hidden behind both of them, both had to be listened to, both had to be played with, both neither had to be scorned nor overestimated, from both the secret voices of the innermost truth had to be attentively perceived. He wanted to strive for nothing, except for what the voice commanded him to strive for, dwell on nothing, except where the voice would advise him to do so. Why had Gotama, at that time, in the hour of all hours, sat down under the bo tree, where the enlightenment hit him? He had heard a voice, a voice in his own heart, which had commanded him to seek rest under this tree, and he had neither preferred self-castigation, offerings, ablutions, nor prayer, neither food nor drink, neither sleep nor dream, he had obeyed the voice. To obey like this, not to an external command, only to the voice, to be ready like this, this was good, this was necessary, nothing else was necessary. (Kamala, paragraph 3)

In the night when he slept in the straw hut of a ferryman by the river, Siddhartha had a dream: Govinda was standing in front of him, dressed in the yellow robe of an ascetic. Govinda looked sad, and sadly he asked: Why have you forsaken me? At this, he embraced Govinda, wrapped his arms around him, and as he was pulling him close to his chest and kissed him, it was not Govinda any more, but a woman, and a full breast popped out of the woman's dress, at which Siddhartha lay and drank, sweetly and strongly tasted the milk from this breast. It tasted of woman and man, of sun and forest, of animal and flower, of every fruit, of every joyful desire. It intoxicated him and rendered him unconscious.—When Siddhartha woke up, the pale river shimmered through the door of the hut, and in the forest, a dark call of an owl resounded deeply and pleasantly. (Kamala, paragraph 4)

When the day began, Siddhartha asked his host, the ferryman, to get him across the river. The ferryman got him across the river on his bamboo raft, the wide water shimmered reddishly in the light of the morning. (Kamala, paragraph 5)

"This is a beautiful river," he said to his companion. (Kamala, paragraph 6)

"Yes," said the ferryman, "a very beautiful river, I love it more than anything. Often I have listened to it, often I have looked into its eyes, and always I have learned from it. Much can be learned from a river." (Kamala, paragraph 7)

"I thank you, my benefactor," spoke Siddhartha, disembarking on the other side of the river. "I have no gift I could give you for your hospitality, my dear, and also no payment for your work. I am a man without a home, a son of a Brahmin and a Samana." (Kamala, paragraph 8)

"I did see it," spoke the ferryman, "and I haven't expected any payment from you and no gift which would be the custom for guests to bear. You will give me the gift another time." (Kamala, paragraph 9)

"Do you think so?" asked Siddhartha amusedly. (Kamala, paragraph 10)

"Surely. This too, I have learned from the river: everything is coming back! You too, Samana, will come back. Now farewell! Let your friendship be my reward. Commemorate me when you make offerings to the gods." (Kamala, paragraph 11)

Smiling, they parted. Smiling, Siddhartha was happy about the friendship and the kindness of the ferryman. "He is like Govinda," he thought with a smile, "all I meet on my path are like Govinda. All are thankful, though they are the ones who would have a right to receive thanks. All are submissive, all would like to be friends, like to obey, think little. Like children are all people." (Kamala, paragraph 12)

At about noon, he came through a village. In front of the mud cottages, children were rolling about in the street, were playing with pumpkinseeds and seashells, screamed and wrestled, but they all timidly fled from the unknown Samana. In the end of the village, the path led through a stream, and by the side of the stream, a young woman was kneeling and washing clothes. When Siddhartha greeted her, she lifted her head and looked up to him with a smile, so that he saw the white in her eyes glistening. He called out a blessing to her, as it is the custom among travellers, and asked how far he still had to go to reach the large city. Then she got up and came to him, beautifully her wet mouth was shimmering in her young face. She exchanged humorous banter with him, asked whether he had eaten already, and whether it was true that the Samanas slept alone in the forest at night and were not allowed to have any women with them. While talking, she put her left foot on his right one and made a movement as a woman does who would want to initiate that kind of sexual pleasure with a man, which the textbooks call "climbing a tree." Siddhartha felt his blood heating up, and since in this moment he had to think of his dream again, he bend slightly down to the woman and kissed with his lips the brown nipple of her breast. Looking up, he saw her face smiling full of lust and her eyes, with contracted pupils, begging with desire. (Kamala, paragraph 13)

Siddhartha also felt desire and felt the source of his sexuality moving; but since he had never touched a woman before, he hesitated for a moment, while his hands were already prepared to reach out for her. And in this moment he heard, shuddering with awe, the voice of his innermost self, and this voice said "No." Then, all charms disappeared from the young woman's smiling face, he no longer saw anything else but the damp glance of a female animal in heat. Politely, he petted her cheek, turned away from her and disappeared away from the disappointed woman with light steps into the bamboo wood. (Kamala, paragraph 14)

On this day, he reached the large city before the evening, and was happy, for he felt the need to be among people. For a long time, he had lived in the forests, and the straw hut of the ferryman, in which he had slept that night, had been the first roof for a long time he has had over his head. (Kamala, paragraph 15)

Before the city, in a beautifully fenced grove, the traveller came across a small group of servants, both male and female, carrying baskets. In their midst, carried by four servants in an ornamental sedan-chair, sat a woman, the mistress, on red pillows under a colourful canopy. Siddhartha stopped at the entrance to the pleasure-garden and watched the parade, saw the servants, the maids, the baskets, saw the sedan-chair and saw the lady in it. Under black hair, which towered high on her head, he saw a very fair, very delicate, very smart face, a bright red mouth like a freshly cracked fig, eyebrows which were well tended and painted in a high arch, smart and watchful dark eyes, a clear, tall neck rising from a green and golden garment, resting fair hands, long and thin, with wide golden bracelets over the wrists. (Kamala, paragraph 16)

Siddhartha saw how beautiful she was, and his heart rejoiced. He bowed deeply, when the sedan-chair came closer, and straightening up again, he looked at the fair, charming face, read for a moment in the smart eyes with the high arcs above, breathed in a slight fragrance he did not recognize. With a smile, the beautiful women nodded for a moment and disappeared into the grove, and then the servant as well. (Kamala, paragraph 17)

Thus I am entering this city, Siddhartha thought, with a charming omen. He instantly felt drawn into the grove, but he thought about it, and only now he became aware of how the servants and maids had looked at him at the entrance, how despicable, how distrustful, how rejecting. (Kamala, paragraph 18)

I am still a Samana, he thought, I am still an ascetic and beggar. I must not remain like this, I will not be able to enter the grove like this. And he laughed. (Kamala, paragraph 19)

The next person who came along this path he asked about the grove and for the name of the woman, and was told that this was the grove of Kamala, the famous courtesan, and that, aside from the grove, she owned a house in the city. (Kamala, paragraph 20)

Then, he entered the city. Now he had a goal. (Kamala, paragraph 21)

Pursuing his goal, he allowed the city to suck him in, drifted through the flow of the streets, stood still on the squares, rested on the stairs of stone by the river. When the evening came, he made friends with barber's assistant, whom he had seen working in the shade of an arch in a building, whom he found again praying in a temple of Vishnu, whom he told about stories of Vishnu and the Lakshmi. Among the boats by the river, he slept this night, and early in the morning, before the first customers came into his shop, he had the barber's assistant shave his beard and cut his hair, comb his hair and anoint it with fine oil. Then he went to take his bath in the river. (Kamala, paragraph 22)

When, late in the afternoon, beautiful Kamala approached her grove in her sedan-chair, Siddhartha was standing at the entrance, made a bow and received the courtesan's greeting. But that servant who walked at the very end of her train he motioned to him and asked him to inform his mistress that a young Brahmin would wish to talk to her. After a while the servant returned, asked Siddhartha to follow him, and conducted him without a word into a pavilion, where Kamala was lying on a couch, and left him alone with her. (Kamala, paragraph 23)

"Weren't you standing out there yesterday, greeting me?" asked Kamala. (Kamala, paragraph 24)

"It's true that I saw and greeted you yesterday." (Kamala, paragraph 25)

"But didn't you yesterday wear a beard, and long hair, and dust in your hair?" (Kamala, paragraph 26)

"You have observed well, you have seen everything. You have seen Siddhartha, the son of a Brahmin, who has left his home to become a Samana, and who has been a Samana for three years. But now, I have left that path and came into this city, and the first one I met, even before I had entered the city, was you. To say this, I have come to you, O Kamala! You are the first woman whom Siddhartha is not addressing with his eyes turned to the ground. Never again I want to turn my eyes to the ground, when I'm coming across a beautiful woman." (Kamala, paragraph 27)

Kamala smiled, played with her fan of peacocks' feathers, and asked: "And only to tell me this, Siddhartha has come to me?" (Kamala, paragraph 28)

"To tell you this and to thank you for being so beautiful. And if it doesn't displease you, Kamala, I would like to ask you to be my friend and teacher, for I know nothing yet of that art which you have mastered in the highest degree." (Kamala, paragraph 29)

At this, Kamala laughed aloud. (Kamala, paragraph 30)

Quoth Siddhartha: "Already I am starting to learn from you. Even yesterday, I was already learning. I have already taken off my beard, have combed my hair, have oil in my hair. There is little which is still missing in me, O excellent one: fine clothes, fine shoes, money in my pouch. You shall know, Siddhartha has set harder goals for himself than such trifles, and he has reached them. How shouldn't I reach that goal, which I have set for myself yesterday: to be your friend and to learn the joys of love from you! You'll see that I'll learn quickly, Kamala, I have already learned harder things than what you're supposed to teach me. And now let's get to it: You aren't satisfied with Siddhartha as he is, with oil in his hair, but without clothes, without shoes, without money?" (Kamala, paragraph 32)

Laughing, Kamala exclaimed: "No, my dear, he doesn't satisfy me yet. Clothes are what he must have, pretty clothes, and shoes, pretty shoes, and lots of money in his pouch, and gifts for Kamala. Do you know it now, Samana from the forest? Did you mark my words?" (Kamala, paragraph 33)

"Yes, I have marked your words," Siddhartha exclaimed. "How should I not mark words which are coming from such a mouth! Your mouth is like a freshly cracked fig, Kamala. My mouth is red and fresh as well, it will be a suitable match for yours, you'll see.—But tell me, beautiful Kamala, aren't you at all afraid of the Samana from the forest, who has come to learn how to make love?" (Kamala, paragraph 34)

"Oh, he's strong, the Samana, and he isn't afraid of anything. He could force you, beautiful girl. He could kidnap you. He could hurt you." (Kamala, paragraph 36)

"No, Samana, I am not afraid of that. Did any Samana or Brahmin ever fear that someone might come and grab him and steal his learning, and his religious devotion, and his depth of thought? No, for they are his very own, and he would only give away from those whatever he is willing to give and to whomever he is willing to give. Like this it is, precisely like this it is also with Kamala and with the pleasures of love. Beautiful and red is Kamala's mouth, but just try to kiss it against Kamala's will, and you will not obtain a single drop of sweetness from it, which knows how to give so many sweet things! You are learning easily, Siddhartha, thus you should also learn this: love can be obtained by begging, buying, receiving it as a gift, finding it in the street, but it cannot be stolen. In this, you have come up with the wrong path. No, it would be a pity, if a pretty young man like you would want to tackle it in such a wrong manner." (Kamala, paragraph 37)

Siddhartha bowed with a smile. "It would be a pity, Kamala, you are so right! It would be such a great pity. No, I shall not lose a single drop of sweetness from your mouth, nor you from mine! So it is settled: Siddhartha will return, once he'll have what he still lacks: clothes, shoes, money. But speak, lovely Kamala, couldn't you still give me one small piece of advice?" (Kamala, paragraph 38)

"Advice? Why not? Who wouldn't like to give advice to a poor, ignorant Samana, who is coming from the jackals of the forest?" (Kamala, paragraph 39)

"Dear Kamala, thus advise me where I should go to, that I'll find these three things most quickly?" (Kamala, paragraph 40)

"I can think. I can wait. I can fast." (Kamala, paragraph 42)

Kamala loudly clapped her hands, so that the golden bracelets clanged. (Kamala, paragraph 47)

"Very beautiful are your verses," exclaimed Kamala, "if I was rich, I would give you pieces of gold for them. But it will be difficult for you to earn thus much money with verses as you need. For you need a lot of money, if you want to be Kamala's friend." (Kamala, paragraph 50)

"The way you're able to kiss, Kamala!" stammered Siddhartha. (Kamala, paragraph 51)

"Certainly, I can do this. Many people can do that." (Kamala, paragraph 55)

"Most people can't. I also can't do it. It is very good that you're able to read and write, very good. You will also still find use for the magic spells." (Kamala, paragraph 56)

In this moment, a maid came running in and whispered a message into her mistress's ear. (Kamala, paragraph 57)

"There's a visitor for me," exclaimed Kamala. "Hurry and get yourself away, Siddhartha, nobody may see you in here, remember that! Tomorrow, I'll see you again." (Kamala, paragraph 58)

Suddenly, pride flared up in him. He was no Samana any more, it was no longer becoming to him to beg. He gave the rice cake to a dog and remained without food. (Kamala, paragraph 61)

"Simple is the life which people lead in this world here," thought Siddhartha. "It presents no difficulties. Everything was difficult, toilsome, and ultimately hopeless, when I was still a Samana. Now, everything is easy, easy like that lessons in kissing, which Kamala is giving me. I need clothes and money, nothing else; this a small, near goals, they won't make a person lose any sleep." (Kamala, paragraph 62)

He had already discovered Kamala's house in the city long before, there he turned up the following day. (Kamala, paragraph 63)

"Things are working out well," she called out to him. "They are expecting you at Kamaswami's, he is the richest merchant of the city. If he'll like you, he'll accept you into his service. Be smart, brown Samana. I had others tell him about you. Be polite towards him, he is very powerful. But don't be too modest! I do not want you to become his servant, you shall become his equal, or else I won't be satisfied with you. Kamaswami is starting to get old and lazy. If he'll like you, he'll entrust you with a lot." (Kamala, paragraph 64)

Siddhartha thanked her and laughed, and when she found out that he had not eaten anything yesterday and today, she sent for bread and fruits and treated him to it. (Kamala, paragraph 65)

Siddhartha said: "Yesterday, I told you I knew how to think, to wait, and to fast, but you thought this was of no use. But it is useful for many things, Kamala, you'll see. You'll see that the stupid Samanas are learning and able to do many pretty things in the forest, which the likes of you aren't capable of. The day before yesterday, I was still a shaggy beggar, as soon as yesterday I have kissed Kamala, and soon I'll be a merchant and have money and all those things you insist upon." (Kamala, paragraph 67)

"Well yes," she admitted. "But where would you be without me? What would you be, if Kamala wasn't helping you?" (Kamala, paragraph 68)

"Dear Kamala," said Siddhartha and straightened up to his full height, "when I came to you into your grove, I did the first step. It was my resolution to learn love from this most beautiful woman. From that moment on when I had made this resolution, I also knew that I would carry it out. I knew that you would help me, at your first glance at the entrance of the grove I already knew it." (Kamala, paragraph 69)

"But what if I hadn't been willing?" (Kamala, paragraph 70)

Kamala listened to him. She loved his voice, she loved the look from his eyes. (Kamala, paragraph 72)

"Perhaps it is so," she said quietly, "as you say, friend. But perhaps it is also like this: that Siddhartha is a handsome man, that his glance pleases the women, that therefore good fortune is coming towards him." (Kamala, paragraph 73)

With one kiss, Siddhartha bid his farewell. "I wish that it should be this way, my teacher; that my glance shall please you, that always good fortune shall come to me out of your direction!" (Kamala, paragraph 74)

Vocabulary with etymology notes

Word	Definition (in this sentence)	In context	Word history
disembarking (verb)	getting off a boat	"I thank you, my benefactor," spoke Siddhartha, disembarking on the other side of the river.
seashells (noun)	the shells of sea creatures	In front of the mud cottages, children were rolling about in the street, were playing with pumpkinseeds and seashells, screamed and wrestled, but they all timidly fled from the unknown Samana.

shimmered (verb)	shone with a soft, wavering light	It intoxicated him and rendered him unconscious. — When Siddhartha woke up, the pale river shimmered through the door of the hut, and in the forest, a dark call of an owl resounded deeply and pleasantly.	"shimmered": Origin of "shimmer": Old English sċymrian. (Liber et Libri origin note, https://en.wiktionary.org/wiki/shimmer#Etymology)
pouches (noun)	small bags for carrying money or things	Many young men come to me, and there are also sons of Brahmins among them, but they come in beautiful clothes, they come in fine shoes, they have perfume in their hair and money in their pouches.
cistern (noun)	a tank for storing water	Differently the sun burnt the head, differently the shade of the forest cooled him down, differently the stream and the cistern, the pumpkin and the banana tasted.
rainbows (noun)	arcs of coloured light in the sky, made by sunlight shining through rain	He saw trees, stars, animals, clouds, rainbows, rocks, herbs, flowers, stream and river, the glistening dew in the bushes in the morning, distant high mountains which were blue and pale, birds sang and bees, wind silverishly blew through the rice field.
clanged (verb)	made a loud ringing noise	Kamala loudly clapped her hands, so that the golden bracelets clanged.
jackals (noun)	wild dogs that hunt or scavenge	"Why should I be afraid of a Samana, a stupid Samana from the forest, who is coming from the jackals and doesn't even know yet what women are?"
peacocks (noun)	male peafowl, birds with large, colorful tail feathers	Kamala smiled, played with her fan of peacocks' feathers, and asked: "And only to tell me this, Siddhartha has come to me?"
courtesan (noun)	a woman paid to be the companion of wealthy men	When, late in the afternoon, beautiful Kamala approached her grove in her sedan-chair, Siddhartha was standing at the entrance, made a bow and received the courtesan's greeting.	"courtesan": Origin: Middle French courtisane, from Italian cortigiana (from corte, "court"); earlier Latin cohors. (Liber et Libri origin note, https://en.wiktionary.org/wiki/courtesan#Etymology)

Discussion questions

1. Siddhartha says he can think, wait and fast. Why are these powerful skills?

2. Where does characterization appear in this chapter, and what effect does it have? Point to one passage.
3. How does this chapter connect to the book's larger concern with love and attachment?

Tiered discussion questions (30: recall, inferential, evaluative)

Wait time after every question (3 s for DOK 1, 5 s for DOK 2, 8 to 10 s for DOK 3 and 4); think-pair-share on DOK 3 and 4; answer each response with a follow-up probe; close with student-generated questions. Focus sets by rigor level: HS Sophomore: 1, 2, 3, 4, 13, 14, 15, 16, 17, 23, 24, 25; HS Junior: 1, 2, 3, 14, 15, 16, 17, 18, 24, 25, 26, 27; HS Senior: 1, 2, 3, 15, 16, 17, 18, 25, 26, 27, 28, 29; AP: 1, 2, 16, 17, 18, 19, 20, 26, 27, 28, 29, 30; College Freshman: 1, 2, 17, 18, 19, 20, 21, 22, 27, 28, 29, 30; College Sophomore: 1, 2, 11, 18, 19, 20, 21, 22, 23, 28, 29, 30; College Junior: 1, 11, 12, 19, 20, 21, 22, 23, 24, 25, 29, 30; College Senior: 1, 11, 12, 13, 20, 21, 22, 23, 24, 25, 26, 30; Graduate / PhD: 1, 11, 12, 13, 21, 22, 23, 24, 25, 26, 27, 28

Literal / recall

1. Who ferries Siddhartha across the river? [DOK 1 · Cold call with support: call on a student by name, offering a sentence starter or rephrasing if needed · wait 3 s · Dual Credit (Indiana College Core): ICC-WC-1.1, ICC-WC-1.3, ICC-WC-1.4, ICC-WC-1.5] Look for: The ferryman
   Answer guidance: The ferryman in whose hut he slept. “When the day began, Siddhartha asked his host, the ferryman, to get him across the river.” (Kamala, paragraph 5)
2. Whom does the ferryman remind Siddhartha of as they part? [DOK 1 · Turn and Talk: students discuss briefly with a neighbor before answering · wait 3 s · Dual Credit (Indiana College Core): ICC-WC-1.1, ICC-WC-1.3, ICC-WC-1.4, ICC-WC-1.5] Look for: Govinda
   Answer guidance: “‘He is like Govinda,’ he thought with a smile” (Kamala, paragraph 12).
3. Where does Siddhartha go on the day after his first visit to Kamala? [DOK 1 · Cold call with support: call on a student by name, offering a sentence starter or rephrasing if needed · wait 3 s · Dual Credit (Indiana College Core): ICC-WC-1.1, ICC-WC-1.3, ICC-WC-1.4, ICC-WC-1.5] Look for: To Kamala’s house in the city
   Answer guidance: “He had already discovered Kamala’s house in the city long before, there he turned up the following day.” (Kamala, paragraph 64)
4. What three skills does Siddhartha name? [DOK 1 · Turn and Talk: students discuss briefly with a neighbor before answering · wait 3 s · Dual Credit (Indiana College Core): ICC-WC-1.1, ICC-WC-1.3, ICC-WC-1.4, ICC-WC-1.5] Look for: Thinking, waiting and fasting
   Answer guidance: Thinking, waiting and fasting: “I can think. I can wait. I can fast.” (Kamala, paragraph 42) (Kamala’s own list in paragraph 53 adds poetry; paragraph 42 is the line that answers the question.)
5. Who gives Siddhartha work? [DOK 1 · Cold call with support: call on a student by name, offering a sentence starter or rephrasing if needed · wait 3 s · Dual Credit (Indiana College Core): ICC-WC-1.1, ICC-WC-1.3, ICC-WC-1.4, ICC-WC-1.5] Look for: The merchant Kamaswami
   Answer guidance: Kamaswami, a rich merchant, through Kamala’s help: “They are expecting you at Kamaswami’s, he is the richest merchant of the city.” (Kamala, paragraph 65)
6. Retell the three most important events of “Kamala” in order, in one sentence each. [DOK 1 · Turn and Talk: students discuss briefly with a neighbor before answering · wait 3 s · Dual Credit (Indiana College Core): ICC-WC-1.1, ICC-WC-1.3, ICC-WC-1.4, ICC-WC-1.5] Look for: Siddhartha dreams of Govinda becoming a woman, crosses a river with a kind ferryman who predicts his return, and reaches a city where he sees the beautiful courtesan Kamala. She tells him he needs fine clothes, shoes and money; he learns quickly and, through her, gains a position with the merchant Kamaswami. Kamala becomes his teacher in love.
   Answer guidance: The ferryman carries him across and predicts his return (Kamala, paragraphs 5–11); he sees Kamala and asks her to teach him love (paragraphs 16–29); she sends him to the merchant Kamaswami (paragraph 65).

7. Which characters appear or are mentioned in "Kamala"? Name two and one thing each says or does. [DOK 1 · Cold call with support: call on a student by name, offering a sentence starter or rephrasing if needed · wait 3 s · Dual Credit (Indiana College Core): ICC-WC-1.1, ICC-WC-1.3, ICC-WC-1.4, ICC-WC-1.5] Look for: Names and actions taken from the chapter; check against the teacher summary.
   Answer guidance: Two of: the ferryman, who asks nothing but friendship ("Commemorate me when you make offerings to the gods" (Kamala, paragraph 11)); Kamala, who laughs and then advises him (paragraphs 30, 41); the young village woman he turns down (paragraph 14).
8. Where and when does "Kamala" take place? Point to the line that tells you. [DOK 1 · Turn and Talk: students discuss briefly with a neighbor before answering · wait 3 s · Dual Credit (Indiana College Core): ICC-WC-1.1, ICC-WC-1.3, ICC-WC-1.4, ICC-WC-1.5] Look for: A place/time detail quoted from the chapter.
   Answer guidance: By a river, a village and a large city, over a few days. "On this day, he reached the large city before the evening" (Kamala, paragraph 15).
9. Reread: "In their midst, carried by four servants in an ornamental sedan-chair, sat a woman, the mistress, on red pillows under a colourful canopy." What does "ornamental" mean here, and what is literally happening in this line? [DOK 1 · Turn and Talk: students discuss briefly with a neighbor before answering · wait 3 s · Dual Credit (Indiana College Core): ICC-WC-1.1, ICC-WC-1.3, ICC-WC-1.4, ICC-WC-1.5] Look for: ornamental: decorated; made to look beautiful.
   Answer guidance: "Ornamental" here means: decorated; made to look beautiful. In Kamala, paragraph 16, Siddhartha sees a rich woman carried past in a decorated chair, which is his first sight of Kamala.
10. Reread: "Who wouldn't like to give advice to a poor, ignorant Samana, who is coming from the jackals of the forest?" What does "ignorant" mean here, and what is literally happening in this line? [DOK 1 · Turn and Talk: students discuss briefly with a neighbor before answering · wait 3 s · Dual Credit (Indiana College Core): ICC-WC-1.1, ICC-WC-1.3, ICC-WC-1.4, ICC-WC-1.5] Look for: ignorant: lacking knowledge.
    Answer guidance: "Ignorant" here means: lacking knowledge. In Kamala, paragraph 39, Siddhartha jokingly calls himself a poor, untaught Samana from the forest as he asks Kamala to advise him.

Inferential / analytical

1. What does "Kamala" suggest about entering the city and learning love? State the inference and the line that supports it. [DOK 2 · Think-Pair-Share: students think alone, discuss with a partner, then share with the class · wait 5 s · Dual Credit (Indiana College Core): ICC-WC-1.1, ICC-WC-1.3, ICC-WC-1.4, ICC-WC-1.5] Look for: A stated inference (for example, that the city teaches through the senses what teachers could not) backed by one located line, such as the one in Kamala, paragraph 29.
   Answer guidance: The chapter suggests that the city teaches through the senses what teachers could not. Support: "I would like to ask you to be my friend and teacher, for I know nothing yet of that art which you have mastered in the highest degree" (Kamala, paragraph 29).
2. Find one example of characterization in this chapter. What does it reveal that a plain statement would not? [DOK 2 · Follow-up: ask a probing question that builds on the previous answer · wait 5 s · Dual Credit (Indiana College Core): ICC-WC-1.1, ICC-WC-1.3, ICC-WC-1.4, ICC-WC-1.5] Look for: Look for what characters say, do and think, and how others react to them.
   Answer guidance: Kamala is characterized by her laughter at his request ("At this, Kamala laughed aloud."

(Kamala, paragraph 30)): it shows, better than any statement, how absurd a ragged Samana looks in her world.

3. How does the symbolism in this chapter shape what we understand about entering the city and learning love? [DOK 3 · Think-Pair-Share: students think alone, discuss with a partner, then share with the class · wait 8 s · Dual Credit (Indiana College Core): ICC-WC-1.1, ICC-WC-1.3, ICC-WC-1.4, ICC-WC-1.5] Look for: Look for objects, places or actions that stand for larger ideas.

   Answer guidance: The river he crosses stands for the line between the spiritual life and the city; the ferryman's words make it a teacher (Kamala, paragraph 11). Kamala's grove and the clothes she demands (paragraph 33) stand for the world of the senses he is entering.

4. In the passage that begins "'I thank you, my benefactor,'", why might Hesse have chosen these particular words? Pick two and explain their connotations. [DOK 2 · Follow-up: ask a probing question that builds on the previous answer · wait 5 s · Dual Credit (Indiana College Core): ICC-WC-1.1, ICC-WC-1.3, ICC-WC-1.4, ICC-WC-1.5] Look for: Diction analysis of two words in the anchor passage.

   Answer guidance: In Kamala, paragraph 8, "benefactor" is formal and grateful, and "disembarking" makes the step onto the far bank a real arrival; together they mark a polite ascetic crossing into a new world with nothing to pay.

5. What causes the main turn in "Kamala", and what effect is it likely to have on what follows? [DOK 2 · Follow-up: ask a probing question that builds on the previous answer · wait 5 s · Dual Credit (Indiana College Core): ICC-WC-1.1, ICC-WC-1.3, ICC-WC-1.4, ICC-WC-1.5] Look for: Siddhartha dreams of Govinda becoming a woman, crosses a river with a kind ferryman who predicts his return, and reaches a city where he sees the beautiful courtesan Kamala. She tells him he needs fine clothes, shoes and money; he learns quickly and, through her, gains a position with…

   Answer guidance: The turn is seeing Kamala ("Siddhartha saw how beautiful she was, and his heart rejoiced." (Kamala, paragraph 17)). Effect: he decides to learn love and money, which leads him to Kamaswami and the life of the city.

6. How does "Kamala" build on "Awakening"? Name one link of cause and effect. [DOK 3 · Think-Pair-Share: students think alone, discuss with a partner, then share with the class · wait 8 s · Dual Credit (Indiana College Core): ICC-WC-1.1, ICC-WC-1.3, ICC-WC-1.4, ICC-WC-1.5] Look for: A causal or structural link between this and the previous chapter.

   Answer guidance: Cause and effect: "Awakening" turns him toward the beauty of the world; here he acts on it, "Siddhartha learned something new on every step of his path, for the world was transformed, and his heart was enchanted." (Kamala, paragraph 1)

7. What can we infer about a character's motives from what they say and do here, as opposed to what they claim? [DOK 3 · Follow-up: ask a probing question that builds on the previous answer · wait 8 s · Dual Credit (Indiana College Core): ICC-WC-1.1, ICC-WC-1.3, ICC-WC-1.4, ICC-WC-1.5] Look for: An inference about motive supported by a quoted line.

   Answer guidance: Siddhartha claims he simply wants a teacher, but his pride shows when he gives away his rice cake rather than beg ("Suddenly, pride flared up in him." (Kamala, paragraph 62)); Kamala claims to be practical, yet she helps him freely (Kamala, paragraph 67).

8. The bell-ringer asked: "Siddhartha says he can think, wait and fast. Why are these powerful skills?" Now that we have read closely, how would you revise your first answer, and which line changed your mind? [DOK 2 · Think-Pair-Share: students think alone, discuss with a partner, then share with the class · wait 5 s · Dual Credit (Indiana College Core): ICC-WC-1.1, ICC-WC-1.3, ICC-WC-1.4, ICC-WC-1.5] Look for: A revised answer anchored in the text.

Answer guidance: A revised answer should explain his own reason in Kamala, paragraph 68 onward: the skills let him wait for what he wants without being driven by need, which is why he can bargain with Kamala and later with Kamaswami.

9. Where does setting appear, and how does it connect this chapter to the larger concern with love and attachment? [DOK 3 · Follow-up: ask a probing question that builds on the previous answer · wait 8 s · Dual Credit (Indiana College Core): ICC-WC-1.1, ICC-WC-1.3, ICC-WC-1.4, ICC-WC-1.5] Look for: Look for where and when events happen and how place shapes action or feeling.
   Answer guidance: Setting carries the move from spirit to senses: the river crossing (Kamala, paragraph 5), the village woman by the stream (paragraph 14) and the grove (paragraph 16) are each a step toward attachment.
10. Background: Courtesans in ancient India could be educated, wealthy and respected. How does knowing this change the way you read one moment in the chapter? [DOK 3 · Think-Pair-Share: students think alone, discuss with a partner, then share with the class · wait 8 s · Dual Credit (Indiana College Core): ICC-WC-1.1, ICC-WC-1.3, ICC-WC-1.4, ICC-WC-1.5] Look for: A specific moment reread in light of the context.
    Answer guidance: Knowing courtesans could be educated and respected makes Kamala a real teacher, not a scandal: she bargains, advises and opens doors for him ("I'm opening one door after another for you." (Kamala, paragraph 67)).

Evaluative / synthesis / creative

1. A critic might argue: "The ferryman's prophecy and the river crossing foreshadow the novel's final setting." How far do you agree? Take a stand and defend it with two lines from the chapter. [DOK 3 · Four Corners: students move to the corner that matches their position and explain why · wait 8 s · ICC-WC-1.5] Look for: A defended position with evidence and one counterpoint.
   Answer guidance: Students can agree that the prophecy points to a return (Kamala, paragraph 11), but the chapter itself only promises "You too, Samana, will come back"; claims about the novel's ending go beyond this chapter. A text counterpoint: Siddhartha is amused and doubtful (paragraph 10).
2. Which character in this chapter acts most wisely, and which least? Judge them by a standard you name. [DOK 3 · Think-Pair-Share: students think alone, discuss with a partner, then share with the class · wait 8 s · ICC-WC-1.5] Look for: An evaluation using an explicit criterion and evidence.
   Answer guidance: With generosity as the standard, the ferryman acts most wisely (paragraph 9); Siddhartha least when pride makes him throw away food (paragraph 62). Students may instead praise Kamala's honesty (paragraph 41).
3. Rewrite one moment of "Kamala" from the point of view of a different character. What does the new angle reveal or hide about entering the city and learning love? [DOK 4 · Think-Pair-Share: students think alone, discuss with a partner, then share with the class · wait 8 s · ICC-WC-1.5] Look for: A rewrite that keeps the chapter's events accurate, speaks in the chosen character's voice, and ends with a sentence on what the new angle shows or hides.
   Answer guidance: Kamala's view of their first talk (Kamala, paragraphs 24–33) works well: it shows her amusement and curiosity and hides the seriousness of his search.
4. Write three questions of your own about "Kamala": one recall, one "why/how", and one "should/what if". Trade with a partner and answer theirs. [DOK 3 · Student-generated: students write and pose their own questions · wait 8 s · ICC-WC-1.5] Look for: Three questions at three levels, each answerable from the chapter, traded and answered with a line.
   Answer guidance: Example set: recall, 'Who carries him across the river?' (the ferryman, paragraph 5);

why/how, 'Why does Kamala help him?' (paragraphs 67–69); what if, 'Should he have taken the village woman's offer?'

5. Connect this chapter to the search for self-knowledge: is the link strong or weak so far? What would Hesse need to show next to strengthen it? [DOK 4 · Socratic circle: an inner circle discusses while the outer circle listens and takes notes, then they switch · wait 8 s · ICC-WC-1.5] Look for: A judgment of thematic development across the work.
   Answer guidance: Strong but indirect: he says his skills will help him reach any goal (Kamala, paragraph 72, the rock that sinks to the bottom), yet he is now learning from others again. Hesse would need to show what the senses teach him about himself.
6. Is the characterization in this chapter effective, or does it feel heavy-handed? Evaluate it as a reader would in a review. [DOK 3 · Four Corners: students move to the corner that matches their position and explain why · wait 8 s · ICC-WC-1.5] Look for: An evaluative judgment with criteria and evidence.
   Answer guidance: Effective: Kamala and Siddhartha are drawn through bargaining dialogue (paragraphs 24–57). Some readers will find the instant success heavy-handed (paragraphs 64–67).
7. Compare how "Kamala" treats entering the city and learning love with how another text, film or event you know treats a similar idea. What does Siddhartha see that the other misses? [DOK 4 · Socratic circle: an inner circle discusses while the outer circle listens and takes notes, then they switch · wait 8 s · ICC-WC-1.5] Look for: A cross-text synthesis.
   Answer guidance: A comparison should name a newcomer learning a world of money or romance and quote Siddhartha's request (paragraph 29); his twist is that he treats love as an art to be learned.
8. Predict what "With the Childlike People" will bring, using two clues from this chapter. After reading, evaluate your prediction. [DOK 3 · Think-Pair-Share: students think alone, discuss with a partner, then share with the class · wait 8 s · ICC-WC-1.5] Look for: A prediction or judgment justified with textual clues.
   Answer guidance: Clues: Kamala says he needs clothes, shoes and money (paragraph 33) and sends him to Kamaswami (paragraph 65). Prediction: he will become a merchant and a lover while trying to stay a Samana inside.
9. Design a one-paragraph modern adaptation of this chapter (setting, characters, conflict). What must stay the same for it to still be about entering the city and learning love? [DOK 4 · Think-Pair-Share: students think alone, discuss with a partner, then share with the class · wait 8 s · ICC-WC-1.5] Look for: A modern setting, characters and conflict that keep the chapter's core idea, with the one element that must not change named.
   Answer guidance: A modern version keeps a disciplined outsider entering a glamorous city and asking an expert to teach him. What must stay is the bargain of the three skills (paragraph 42).
10. What question would you most like to ask Hermann Hesse about this chapter, and what answer do you think the text itself gives? [DOK 4 · Student-generated: students write and pose their own questions · wait 8 s · ICC-WC-1.5] Look for: A student-generated question answered from evidence.
    Answer guidance: Example: 'Why does Siddhartha choose Kamala as a teacher after refusing the Buddha?' The text suggests he wants to learn by experience what words could not give (Kamala, paragraph 29).

Annotation focus

- Characterization: look for what characters say, do and think, and how others react to them (anchor passage in the We do segment)
- Also notice Symbolism: objects, places or actions that stand for larger ideas
- Also notice Setting: where and when events happen and how place shapes action or feeling

Chapter quiz: item bank (all eleven rigor versions)

1. [fill · recall · DOK 1] Complete the quotation from Kamala, paragraph 16: "Before the city, in a _____ fenced grove, the traveller came across a small group of servants, both male and female, carrying baskets." Word bank: beautifully, poorly, barely, badly

   Key: beautifully

2. [fill · recall · DOK 1] Complete the quotation from Kamala, paragraph 11: "This too, I have learned from the river: _____ is coming back"

   Key: everything

3. [mc · recall · DOK 1] Which word completes this sentence from Kamala, paragraph 18? "He instantly felt drawn into the grove, but he thought about it, and only now he became aware of how the servants and maids had looked at him at the entrance, how despicable, how _____, how rejecting."

   A. distrustful
   B. affectionate
   C. cheerful
   D. generous

   Key: A (distrustful)

4. [fill · recall · DOK 1] Complete the quotation from Kamala, paragraph 2: "All of this had always _____, and he had not seen it; he had not been with it." Word bank: vanished, perished, ended, existed

   Key: existed

5. [mc · recall · DOK 1] In the line "In front of the mud cottages, children were rolling about in the street, were playing with pumpkinseeds and seashells, screamed and wrestled, but they all timidly fled from the unknown Samana.", what does "seashells" most nearly mean?

   A. a dulling of feeling or pain
   B. the shells of sea creatures
   C. frankness; honesty
   D. someone who rows a boat

   Key: B (the shells of sea creatures)

6. [mc · recall · DOK 1] In the line "'I thank you, my benefactor,' spoke Siddhartha, disembarking on the other side of the river.", what does "disembarking" most nearly mean?

   A. getting off a boat
   B. washing or soaking in water
   C. showing clearly
   D. weighing down with a load

   Key: A (getting off a boat)

7. [mc · recall · DOK 1] Which word completes this sentence from Kamala, paragraph 3? "No, this world of thought was also still on this side, and nothing could be achieved by killing the random self of the senses, if the random self of thoughts and learned _____ was fattened on the other hand."

   A. hunger
   B. silence
   C. knowledge

D. obedience

Key: C (knowledge)

8. [mc · recall · DOK 1] What does the ferryman say he loves more than anything?

   A. His bamboo raft

   B. The river

   C. His straw hut

   D. The large city

   Key: B (The river)

9. [mc · recall · DOK 1] What does Siddhartha ask the young woman washing clothes at the stream?

   A. Whether she has seen Govinda

   B. How far it still is to the large city

   C. Where the Buddha is teaching now

   D. Whether he may sleep in her hut

   Key: B (How far it still is to the large city)

10. [mc · recall · DOK 1] What does Siddhartha call his first sight of Kamala as he nears the city?

    A. A warning from the gods

    B. A test of his vows

    C. A charming omen

    D. A bad sign for his journey

    Key: C (A charming omen)

11. [short · inference · DOK 2] What can you infer from this line? “So it is settled: Siddhartha will return, once he’ll have what he still lacks: clothes, shoes, money.” (Kamala, paragraph 38) Answer in two or three sentences with one detail.

    Sample answer: Siddhartha treats the things of the world as simple tools he can collect. The evidence is “So it is settled: Siddhartha will return, once he’ll have what he still lacks: clothes, shoes, money.” (Kamala, paragraph 38). The calm list “clothes, shoes, money” shows he expects to gain them as easily as he once gave them up.

12. [mc · inference · DOK 2] What does Siddhartha learn about the woman in the grove from the next person on the path?

    A. That she is a priestess of the grove

    B. That she is the wife of a rich king

    C. That she is a merchant’s widow

    D. That she is a famous courtesan

    Key: D (That she is a famous courtesan)

13. [short · inference · DOK 2] What does Siddhartha watch at the pleasure-garden, and what does it show about him? “Siddhartha stopped at the entrance to the pleasure-garden and watched the parade, saw the servants, the maids, the baskets, saw the sedan-chair and saw the lady in it.” (Kamala, paragraph 16)

    Sample answer: He stops to take in Kamala’s procession with open curiosity: “Siddhartha stopped at the entrance to the pleasure-garden and watched the parade, saw the servants, the maids, the baskets, saw the sedan-chair and saw the lady in it.” (Kamala, paragraph 16). The repeated “saw” shows a former Samana now looking eagerly at the world he once refused to see.

14. [mc · analysis · DOK 3] Which literary element does this describe in "Kamala"? Siddhartha enters the world: the ferryman carries him across for nothing; a young village woman offers herself and he declines; he sees the courtesan Kamala and decides she will be his teacher of love.

    A. Irony

    B. Characterization

    C. Symbolism

    D. Hyperbole

    Key: B (Characterization)

15. [short · synthesis · DOK 4] Synthesis: trace how teaching versus experience develops from Gotama to Kamala. Use one quotation from each.

    Sample answer: Siddhartha rejects doctrine but not learning. In Gotama he tells the Buddha that "nobody will obtain salvation by means of teachings!" (Gotama, paragraph 37). In Kamala he still chooses a teacher: "It was my resolution to learn love from this most beautiful woman" (Kamala, paragraph 70). That is the development: he moves from rejecting taught truth to learning through experience.

16. [mc · recall · DOK 1] Whom does Siddhartha see in his dream at the ferryman's hut?

    A. Govinda, who turns into a woman

    B. His father, who is weeping for him

    C. Gotama, who is teaching

    D. Kamala, who is singing to him

    Key: A (Govinda, who turns into a woman)

17. [mc · recall · DOK 1] What does Siddhartha remember on his way to the city?

    A. His mother's songs at home

    B. The Garden Jetavana and his farewell from Govinda

    C. The oldest Samana's anger

    D. The merchants of his father's town

    Key: B (The Garden Jetavana and his farewell from Govinda)

18. [mc · recall · DOK 1] Where does Siddhartha sleep on his first night in the city?

    A. In Kamala's pavilion

    B. At Kamaswami's house

    C. On the stone steps of the royal palace

    D. Among the boats by the river

    Key: D (Among the boats by the river)

19. [fill · recall · DOK 1] Complete the quotation from Kamala, paragraph 7: "Often I have listened to it, often I have looked into its eyes, and always I have _____ from it."

    Key: learned

20. [mc · recall · DOK 1] Which word completes this sentence from Kamala, paragraph 17? "Siddhartha saw how beautiful she was, and his heart _____."

    A. rejoiced

    B. sank

    C. hardened

D. broke

Key: A (rejoiced)

21. [fill · recall · DOK 1] Complete the quotation from Kamala, paragraph 11: "Commemorate me when you make _____ to the gods" Word bank: offerings, fences, rafts, journeys

    Key: offerings

22. [fill · recall · DOK 1] Complete the quotation from Kamala, paragraph 1: "At night, he saw the stars in the sky in their fixed positions and the crescent of the moon floating like a _____ in the blue." Word bank: lamp, boat, coin, bird

    Key: boat

23. [fill · recall · DOK 1] Complete the quotation from Kamala, paragraph 19: "I am still a Samana, he thought, I am still an ascetic and _____." Word bank: merchant, king, beggar, soldier

    Key: beggar

24. [mc · recall · DOK 1] In the line "Thus I am entering this city, Siddhartha thought, with a charming omen.", what does "omen" most nearly mean?

    A. a heavy debt to be paid

    B. a song sung at weddings

    C. a sign of what is to come

    D. a gift left for the gods

    Key: C (a sign of what is to come)

25. [mc · recall · DOK 1] In the line "Kamala loudly clapped her hands, so that the golden bracelets clanged.", what does "clanged" most nearly mean?

    A. rang with a loud metal sound

    B. fell to the floor

    C. shone brightly

    D. broke apart into many small pieces

    Key: A (rang with a loud metal sound)

26. [mc · inference · DOK 2] Why does Siddhartha give away the rice cake he was given at the inn?

    A. He is too full to eat any more that day

    B. He wants to feed a hungry child

    C. He fears the cake was poisoned by the innkeeper

    D. He is too proud to beg now that he is no Samana

    Key: D (He is too proud to beg now that he is no Samana)

27. [short · inference · DOK 3] What can you infer from this line? "You shall know, Siddhartha has set harder goals for himself than such trifles, and he has reached them." (Kamala, paragraph 32) Answer by connecting it to one earlier chapter: quote a second passage and explain how the two passages together develop the idea.

    Sample answer: Siddhartha is sure that his Samana discipline will win him whatever he wants. The evidence is "You shall know, Siddhartha has set harder goals for himself than such trifles, and he has reached them." (Kamala, paragraph 32). In With the Samanas the "harder goals" were real: "Silently, Siddhartha exposed himself to burning rays of the sun directly above, glowing with pain, glowing with thirst, and stood there, until he neither felt any pain nor thirst any more." (With the Samanas, paragraph 4). Together the passages show that the strength he built by enduring pain is the strength he now turns toward love and the city.

28. [short · inference · DOK 2] What does Siddhartha hope for as he stands at the inn door? Use this line. "Perhaps as soon as tomorrow, he thought, I will ask no one for food any more." (Kamala, paragraph 61)
    Sample answer: Siddhartha hopes to stop living as a beggar very soon. The evidence is "Perhaps as soon as tomorrow, he thought, I will ask no one for food any more." (Kamala, paragraph 61). He still begs out of habit, but the word "tomorrow" shows he expects his new life in the city to change him quickly.

29. [mc · analysis · DOK 3] Which literary element does this describe in "Kamala"? The ferryman's parting words (that Siddhartha, too, will one day return to the river) hint at events that may come later.

    A. Symbolism
    B. Conflict
    C. Foreshadowing
    D. Personification

    Key: C (Foreshadowing)

30. [mc · analysis · DOK 3] Which literary element does this describe in "Kamala"? Siddhartha tells Kamala her mouth is "like a freshly cracked fig."

    A. Setting
    B. Simile
    C. Plot
    D. Theme

    Key: B (Simile)

31. [fill · recall · DOK 1] Fill in the blank with the vocabulary word that fits: "Differently the sun burnt the head, differently the shade of the forest cooled him down, differently the stream and the _____, the pumpkin and the banana tasted." Word bank: basket, cistern, pillow, sandal
    Key: cistern

32. [fill · recall · DOK 1] Fill in the blank with the vocabulary word that fits: "Why should I be afraid of a Samana, a stupid Samana from the forest, who is coming from the _____ and doesn't even know yet what women are?" Word bank: jackals, palace, market, city
    Key: jackals

33. [fill · recall · DOK 1] Complete the quotation from Kamala, paragraph 62: "Suddenly, _____ flared up in him." Word bank: pride, patience, silence, sleep
    Key: pride

34. [fill · recall · DOK 1] Complete the quotation from Kamala, paragraph 5: "The ferryman got him across the river on his bamboo raft, the wide water shimmered reddishly in the light of the _____." Word bank: noon, morning, stars, moon
    Key: morning

35. [mc · recall · DOK 1] After hearing his poem, what does Kamala say she would give him if she were rich?

    A. A house in the city
    B. Pieces of gold
    C. A seat at her table
    D. A new robe and sandals

Key: B (Pieces of gold)

36. [mc · recall · DOK 1] In the line "'I thank you, my benefactor,' spoke Siddhartha, disembarking on the other side of the river.", what does "benefactor" most nearly mean?

    A. someone who owes him money

    B. someone who has helped him

    C. someone who rules over him

    D. someone who travels with him

    Key: B (someone who has helped him)

37. [mc · recall · DOK 1] What does the ferryman say he did not expect from Siddhartha for the crossing?

    A. Any payment or guest-gift

    B. A song from the Vedas

    C. A story of his travels

    D. Help with the oars

    Key: A (Any payment or guest-gift)

38. [mc · recall · DOK 1] What reward does the ferryman ask for?

    A. A single gold coin

    B. A poem in his honour

    C. Help with building a raft

    D. Siddhartha's friendship

    Key: D (Siddhartha's friendship)

39. [mc · recall · DOK 1] What does Kamala have her maid give Siddhartha before he is led out of the grove?

    A. A golden bracelet

    B. A bag of coins for his journey

    C. A fan of feathers

    D. White upper garments

    Key: D (White upper garments)

40. [mc · inference · DOK 2] What does Siddhartha's dream of Govinda turning into a woman suggest?

    A. He fears that Govinda is in danger

    B. He wishes to return home to his father and the Brahmins

    C. He no longer remembers Govinda

    D. His longing is shifting from the spirit to the senses

    Key: D (His longing is shifting from the spirit to the senses)

41. [short · inference · DOK 2] What has Siddhartha already done to his appearance, and what does that show about his past? "I have already taken off my beard, have combed my hair, have oil in my hair." (Kamala, paragraph 32)

    Sample answer: He has already made himself ready for the city: "I have already taken off my beard, have combed my hair, have oil in my hair." (Kamala, paragraph 32). Shaving and oiling his hair undo the wild Samana look of his past, showing how quickly he can change his outer life once he has chosen a goal.

42. [short · inference · DOK 2] What does Siddhartha think of the people he meets on his path? Use this line. "Like children are all people." (Kamala, paragraph 12)

Sample answer: Siddhartha feels superior to the people he meets and sees them as simple. The evidence is "Like children are all people." (Kamala, paragraph 12). Calling grown people children shows a quiet pride: he thinks they obey and think little, while he, the Samana, thinks for himself.

43. [mc · analysis · DOK 3] Which literary element does this describe in "Kamala"? Siddhartha, who fasted for years as a Samana, now gives away his only food to a dog out of wounded vanity.

    A. Setting
    B. Irony
    C. Onomatopoeia
    D. Alliteration

    Key: B (Irony)

44. [mc · analysis · DOK 3] Which literary element does this describe in "Kamala"? Siddhartha says he passes through the things of the world as a rock falls through water.

    A. Plot
    B. Setting
    C. Simile
    D. Theme

    Key: C (Simile)

45. [short · synthesis · DOK 4] Synthesis: trace how Siddhartha's view of the visible world develops from Awakening to Kamala. Use one quotation from each.

    Sample answer: Siddhartha moves from seeing the world as beautiful to living inside it. In Awakening he looks around and finds: "Beautiful was the world, colourful was the world, strange and mysterious was the world!" (Awakening, paragraph 7). In Kamala he goes further: "Now he was with it, he was part of it." (Kamala, paragraph 2). The first passage is still the view of an onlooker who has just opened his eyes; the second makes him a participant, which prepares his plunge into the city.

46. [fill · recall · DOK 1] Fill in the blank with the word that fits: "Siddhartha saw a group of apes moving through the high canopy of the forest, high in the branches, and heard their savage, greedy _____." Word bank: song, prayer, silence, sermon

    Key: song

47. [fill · recall · DOK 1] Complete the quotation from Kamala, paragraph 1: "the forest and the rocks, the goat and the gold-_____, the flower and the butterfly." Word bank: beetle, fish, coin, ring

    Key: beetle

48. [mc · recall · DOK 1] Which word completes this sentence from Kamala, paragraph 63? "Everything was difficult, toilsome, and ultimately _____, when I was still a Samana."

    A. joyful
    B. easy
    C. hopeless
    D. cheerful

    Key: C (hopeless)

49. [fill · recall · DOK 1] Complete the quotation from Kamala, paragraph 1: "In a lake of _____, he saw the pike hungrily hunting for its dinner;" Word bank: kettles, reeds, ladders, pebbles

    Key: reeds

50. [mc · recall · DOK 1] Which word completes this sentence from Kamala, paragraph 1? “propelling themselves away from it, in fear, wiggling and sparkling, the young fish jumped in _____ out of the water;”

    A. droves

    B. kettles

    C. ladders

    D. pebbles

    Key: A (droves)

51. [fill · recall · DOK 1] Complete the quotation from Kamala, paragraph 2: “Light and shadow ran through his eyes, stars and moon ran through his _____.” Word bank: hands, feet, heart, house

    Key: heart

52. [mc · inference · DOK 2] What does this passage most clearly show? “Commemorate me when you make offerings to the gods” (Kamala, paragraph 11)

    A. The ferryman demands double the usual fare.

    B. Siddhartha pays with his last coin.

    C. The ferryman refuses to carry a penniless Samana across the river.

    D. He asks to be remembered in prayer instead of being paid.

    Key: D (He asks to be remembered in prayer instead of being paid.)

53. [mc · recall · DOK 1] What does the chapter say Siddhartha had long known about his self?

    A. It was a passing dream of the senses

    B. It was Atman, sharing the eternal nature of Brahman

    C. It belonged to his father’s caste

    D. It would die with his body

    Key: B (It was Atman, sharing the eternal nature of Brahman)

54. [short · inference · DOK 2] How do Kamala’s servants look at Siddhartha, and what does he learn from it? Use this line. “how despicable, how distrustful, how rejecting” (Kamala, paragraph 18)

    Sample answer: The servants look down on Siddhartha because he still looks like a beggar, and he learns that he must change his appearance. The evidence is “how despicable, how distrustful, how rejecting” (Kamala, paragraph 18). The three harsh words show their scorn, and this is what makes him decide he cannot enter the grove as a Samana.

55. [mc · analysis · DOK 3] Which literary element does this describe in “Kamala”? Kamala’s fenced grove, with its servants and sedan-chair, stands for the rich, closed world Siddhartha wants to enter.

    A. Onomatopoeia

    B. Alliteration

    C. Plot

    D. Symbolism

    Key: D (Symbolism)

56. [short · analysis · DOK 3] Claim: Siddhartha enters the world sure that his Samana discipline will carry him straight to his goal. Explain how this evidence supports the claim: “Look, Kamala: When you throw a rock into the water, it will speed on the fastest course to the bottom of the water.” (Kamala, paragraph 72).

    Sample answer: The evidence supports the claim because Siddhartha compares himself to a falling rock: “Look, Kamala: When you throw a rock into the water, it will speed on the fastest course to the bottom of the water.” (Kamala, paragraph 72). The rock goes straight down by "the fastest course," just as he expects his Samana patience to carry him straight to Kamala and success, without being thrown off course by the city.

57. [mc · analysis · DOK 3] Which literary element does this describe in "Kamala"? A young woman washing clothes at a stream invites him to love; he turns away, but the scene hints at the desire he will soon follow in the city.

    A. Symbolism

    B. Foreshadowing

    C. Conflict

    D. Personification

    Key: B (Foreshadowing)

58. [short · synthesis · DOK 4] Synthesis: trace how Siddhartha's bond with Govinda develops from Awakening to Kamala. Use one quotation from each.

    Sample answer: Govinda moves from a friend Siddhartha envies to a voice of conscience in his dreams. In Awakening Siddhartha sees that "Govinda had become a monk, and a thousand monks were his brothers" (Awakening, paragraph 11), a belonging he lacks. In Kamala, Govinda returns in a dream: "Govinda looked sad, and sadly he asked: Why have you forsaken me?" (Kamala, paragraph 4). The first passage measures Siddhartha's loneliness against his friend; the second turns the friend into a reproach, and the dream's change of Govinda into a woman shows the bond giving way to desire.

59. [short · synthesis · DOK 4] Close reading: how do the diction and syntax of "I can think. I can wait. I can fast." (Kamala, paragraph 42) shape its meaning? Consider a second, competing reading.

    Sample answer: Three short parallel sentences turn his Samana training into an inventory: "I can think. I can wait. I can fast." (Kamala, paragraph 42). The clipped syntax sounds like a price list, so ascetic virtues become currency to spend in the city. A competing reading hears plain arrogance, the boast of a proud young man. But he speaks calmly, not boastfully, and the three skills are the real fruit of his years in the forest, so the line names true strengths that the city will now test.

60. [short · synthesis · DOK 4] Evaluate this claim about the chapter: "The ferryman's words at the river foreshadow that Siddhartha's journey into the world is a detour that will lead back." Is it fully persuasive? Argue with evidence, including a passage that complicates it.

    Sample answer: The claim is persuasive in part. "This too, I have learned from the river: everything is coming back" (Kamala, paragraph 11) supports it: the ferryman names the river as his teacher and predicts Siddhartha's return long before it happens. But "It was my resolution to learn love from this most beautiful woman" (Kamala, paragraph 70) complicates it: Siddhartha enters the city on purpose, with a clear aim, so from his side the journey is a chosen apprenticeship, not a wrong turn. A fair verdict is that the claim holds as foreshadowing of the plot but misses the chapter's own view, in which the city is a lesson Siddhartha means to learn rather than a detour.

61. [fill · recall · DOK 1 · Dual Credit (Indiana College Core): ICC-WC-1.5] Fill in the blank with the vocabulary word that fits: "the scent of strength and passion came forcefully out of the hasty _____ of the water" Word bank: kettles, eddies, ladders, pebbles

    Key: eddies

62. [mc · recall · DOK 1 · Dual Credit (Indiana College Core): ICC-WC-1.5] In the line "Many young men come to me, and there are also sons of Brahmins among them, but they come in beautiful clothes, they come in fine shoes, they have perfume in their hair and money in their pouches.", what does "pouches" most nearly mean?

    A. a person who has run away

    B. understandings; realizations

C. small bags for carrying money or things

D. the shells of sea creatures

Key: C (small bags for carrying money or things)

63. [fill · recall · DOK 1 · Dual Credit (Indiana College Core): ICC-WC-1.5] Complete the quotation from Kamala, paragraph 72: "This is what fools call magic and of which they think it would be effected by means of the _____." Word bank: daemons, merchants, rivers, teachers

Key: daemons

64. [fill · recall · DOK 1 · Dual Credit (Indiana College Core): ICC-WC-1.5] Complete the quotation from Kamala, paragraph 15: "For a long time, he had lived in the _____" Word bank: cities, palaces, markets, forests

Key: forests

65. [mc · recall · DOK 1 · Dual Credit (Indiana College Core): ICC-WC-1.5] Which word completes this sentence from Kamala, paragraph 73? "Kamala listened to him. She loved his voice, she loved the look from his _____."

A. eyes

B. hands

C. purse

D. robe

Key: A (eyes)

66. [fill · recall · DOK 1 · Dual Credit (Indiana College Core): ICC-WC-1.5] Complete the quotation from Kamala, paragraph 34: "Your mouth is like a freshly cracked _____, Kamala." Word bank: stone, fig, shell, wound

Key: fig

67. [mc · inference · DOK 2 · Dual Credit (Indiana College Core): ICC-WC-1.5] What does this passage most clearly show? "No, it would be a pity, if a pretty young man like you would want to tackle it in such a wrong manner." (Kamala, paragraph 37)

A. Kamala refuses ever to see him again.

B. Kamala praises his skill as a lover.

C. Kamala teases him while warning that love cannot be taken by force.

D. Kamala asks him to become a merchant and to work for Kamaswami in the city.

Key: C (Kamala teases him while warning that love cannot be taken by force.)

68. [mc · inference · DOK 2 · Dual Credit (Indiana College Core): ICC-WC-1.5] What does Kamala's warning about her mouth teach Siddhartha about love?

A. Love can be bought by any rich man

B. Love must be given freely; it cannot be taken

C. Love is a sin that a Samana must avoid

D. Love is easy to learn and is quickly forgotten again

Key: B (Love must be given freely; it cannot be taken)

69. [mc · inference · DOK 2 · Dual Credit (Indiana College Core): ICC-WC-1.5] What does this passage most clearly show? "You will give me the gift another time." (Kamala, paragraph 9)

A. The ferryman is angry at being unpaid.

B. Siddhartha promises to send the money to him later.

C. The ferryman wants Siddhartha's robe.

D. The ferryman expects to meet Siddhartha again.

Key: D (The ferryman expects to meet Siddhartha again.)

70. [short · inference · DOK 4 · Dual Credit (Indiana College Core): ICC-WC-1.5] What does this dream show about Siddhartha? "In the night when he slept in the straw hut of a ferryman by the river, Siddhartha had a dream: Govinda was standing in front of him, dressed in the yellow robe of an ascetic." (Kamala, paragraph 4) Build a short argument from it: trace the idea across at least three chapters, this one and earlier ones, weigh one competing reading, and defend your position with evidence from each.

Sample answer: The dream shows that Siddhartha is turning from Govinda's path of the robe toward the senses: "In the night when he slept in the straw hut of a ferryman by the river, Siddhartha had a dream: Govinda was standing in front of him, dressed in the yellow robe of an ascetic." (Kamala, paragraph 4). The dream begins with Govinda "in the yellow robe of an ascetic," the life Siddhartha has just left. Govinda's bond began as discipleship to Siddhartha: "And in days to come, when Siddhartha would become a god, when he would join the glorious, then Govinda wanted to follow him as his friend, his companion, his servant, his spear-carrier, his shadow." (The Son of the Brahmin, paragraph 5). In Gotama that bond broke: "And now my friend is going to stay with your people, he has taken his refuge with you." (Gotama, paragraph 31). Across the three chapters Govinda stands for a life of following, and the dream shows Siddhartha leaving that life behind. A competing reading sees only longing for his lost friend; but the friend turns into a woman in the dream, so the longing is already moving toward Kamala, which supports my reading.

71. [mc · analysis · DOK 3 · Dual Credit (Indiana College Core): ICC-WC-1.5] Which literary element does this describe in "Kamala"? The narrator shows Kamala's cleverness through the way she teases, bargains and plans for Siddhartha.

A. Onomatopoeia

B. Alliteration

C. Characterization

D. Setting

Key: C (Characterization)

72. [short · analysis · DOK 3 · Dual Credit (Indiana College Core): ICC-WC-1.5] Claim: Siddhartha enters the city as a deliberate student of the world. Explain how this evidence supports the claim: "Then, he entered the city. Now he had a goal." (Kamala, paragraph 21)

Sample answer: The evidence supports the claim because it shows Siddhartha entering the city with a purpose, not drifting: "Then, he entered the city. Now he had a goal." (Kamala, paragraph 21). The two short sentences mark a turning point, and the word "goal" shows that he comes to learn something definite, the art of love from Kamala, just as he once set out to learn from teachers.

73. [mc · analysis · DOK 3 · Dual Credit (Indiana College Core): ICC-WC-1.5] Which literary element does this describe in "Kamala"? The narrator lists what Siddhartha now sees: trees, stars, animals, clouds, rainbows, rocks, herbs, flowers.

A. Dialogue

B. Imagery

C. Plot

D. Irony

Key: B (Imagery)

74. [short · synthesis · DOK 4 · Dual Credit (Indiana College Core): ICC-WC-1.5] Synthesis: trace how Siddhartha's sense of belonging develops from Awakening to Kamala. Use one quotation from each.

Sample answer: Siddhartha moves from total isolation to a hunger for company. In Awakening he feels that "Nobody was thus alone as he was." (Awakening, paragraph 11). In Kamala he reaches the city "and was happy, for he felt the need to be among people" (Kamala, paragraph 15). The first passage is the cold shock of standing outside every caste; the second shows him turning that loneliness into a wish to join the world, which leads him to Kamala.

75. [short · synthesis · DOK 4 · Dual Credit (Indiana College Core): ICC-WC-1.5] Evaluate this claim about the chapter: "Siddhartha succeeds in the city through his own will alone." Is it fully persuasive? Argue with evidence, including a passage that complicates it.

    Sample answer: The claim is persuasive in part. "From that moment on when I had made this resolution, I also knew that I would carry it out." (Kamala, paragraph 70) supports it: Siddhartha credits his own resolve. But "But where would you be without me? What would you be, if Kamala wasn't helping you?" (Kamala, paragraph 69) complicates it: Kamala arranges his meeting with Kamaswami and gives him clothes and food. A fair verdict is that his will sets the goal, while Kamala opens the doors.

76. [fill · recall · DOK 1] Complete the quotation from Kamala, paragraph 61: "Being accustomed to the _____, he managed to get out of the grove and over the hedge without making a sound." Word bank: forest, alphabet, arithmetic, thunder

    Key: forest

77. [fill · recall · DOK 1] Fill in the blank with the vocabulary word that fits: "He saw trees, stars, animals, clouds, _____, rocks, herbs, flowers, stream and river, the glistening dew in the bushes in the morning, distant high mountains which were blue and pale, birds sang and bees, wind silverishly blew through the rice field." Word bank: debts, rainbows, prices, contracts

    Key: rainbows

78. [fill · recall · DOK 1] Complete the quotation from Kamala, paragraph 12: "All are submissive, all would like to be friends, like to obey, think _____." Word bank: deeply, little, often, clearly

    Key: little

79. [mc · recall · DOK 1] Which word completes this sentence from Kamala, paragraph 62? "He gave the rice cake to a _____ and remained without food."

    A. dog
    B. monk
    C. child
    D. crow

    Key: A (dog)

80. [fill · recall · DOK 1] Complete the quotation from Kamala, paragraph 4: "Govinda was standing in front of him, dressed in the yellow robe of an _____." Word bank: ascetic, merchant, officer, emperor

    Key: ascetic

81. [mc · recall · DOK 1] In the line "Siddhartha was standing at the entrance, made a bow and received the courtesan's greeting.", what does "courtesan" most nearly mean?

    A. a female priest who serves in a temple
    B. a woman paid to be the companion of wealthy men
    C. a servant who carries a lady's chair
    D. a queen who rules over a city

    Key: B (a woman paid to be the companion of wealthy men)

82. [mc · inference · DOK 2] Why does Siddhartha now call the life people lead in the world simple?

    A. Everyone in the city is honest and kind

    B. Its goals of clothes and money are small and near

    C. He already owns all that he needs

    D. The Samanas once taught him to enjoy every kind of pleasure

    Key: B (Its goals of clothes and money are small and near)

83. [mc · inference · DOK 2] What does this passage most clearly show? “Certainly, I can do this. Many people can do that.” (Kamala, paragraph 56)

    A. He is ashamed that he cannot write.

    B. He boasts that he is the finest scholar alive.

    C. He takes reading and writing for granted.

    D. He wants Kamala to teach him to read.

    Key: C (He takes reading and writing for granted.)

84. [short · inference · DOK 3] What does Siddhartha do on his first day in the city, and how does the line prepare his later life? “Pursuing his goal, he allowed the city to suck him in, drifted through the flow of the streets, stood still on the squares, rested on the stairs of stone by the river.” (Kamala, paragraph 22) Answer by connecting it to one earlier chapter: quote a second passage and explain how the two passages together develop the idea.

    Sample answer: Siddhartha lets the city carry him: “Pursuing his goal, he allowed the city to suck him in, drifted through the flow of the streets, stood still on the squares, rested on the stairs of stone by the river.” (Kamala, paragraph 22). In With the Samanas he scorned such places: “his mouth twitched with contempt when he walked through a city of nicely dressed people” (With the Samanas, paragraph 2). Together the passages show his contempt giving way to curiosity, and the words “suck him in” already hint that the city will hold him longer than he plans.

85. [short · inference · DOK 3] What stops Siddhartha in this moment, and what does it show about him? “And in this moment he heard, shuddering with awe, the voice of his innermost self, and this voice said ‘No.’” (Kamala, paragraph 14) Answer by connecting it to one earlier chapter: quote a second passage and explain how the two passages together develop the idea.

    Sample answer: His inner self stops him: “And in this moment he heard, shuddering with awe, the voice of his innermost self, and this voice said ‘No.’” (Kamala, paragraph 14). The single word "No" shows that he still follows the voice inside him rather than his desire. The same inner guide led him away from the Buddha: “nobody will obtain salvation by means of teachings!” (Gotama, paragraph 37). Together the passages show him obeying an inner judgment over an attractive outer path, first a great teacher and now a beautiful woman.

86. [mc · analysis · DOK 3] Which literary element does this describe in “Kamala”? The large city, with its squares, temples, barbers and boats by the river, is the new world Siddhartha enters.

    A. Dialogue

    B. Onomatopoeia

    C. Setting

    D. Hyperbole

    Key: C (Setting)

87. [mc · analysis · DOK 3] Which literary element does this describe in "Kamala"? The bargain is light and teasing: the two laugh, flirt and joke about clothes, shoes and money.

    A. Simile

    B. Hyperbole

    C. Alliteration

    D. Tone / mood

    Key: D (Tone / mood)

88. [short · analysis · DOK 3] Analyze the word choice in "Commemorate me when you make offerings to the gods" (Kamala, paragraph 11). Pick two words and explain what they suggest.

    Sample answer: The ferryman asks no payment but friendship. The evidence is "Commemorate me when you make offerings to the gods" (Kamala, paragraph 11). The word "Commemorate" asks only to be remembered, and "offerings" ties that memory to worship rather than money. The ferryman's request shows a generosity that stands outside the buying and selling Siddhartha is about to enter.

89. [short · synthesis · DOK 4] Evaluate this claim about the chapter: "When Siddhartha enters the city, he leaves the Samana behind entirely." Is it fully persuasive? Argue with evidence, including a passage that complicates it.

    Sample answer: The claim is persuasive in part. "Suddenly, pride flared up in him. He was no Samana any more, it was no longer becoming to him to beg." (Kamala, paragraph 62) supports it: he refuses even to beg. But "This is what Siddhartha has learned among the Samanas." (Kamala, paragraph 72) complicates it: he still relies on thinking, waiting and fasting, the Samana's skills, to reach his goals. A fair verdict is that he drops the Samana's outward life while keeping his inner discipline.

90. [short · synthesis · DOK 4] Synthesis: trace how the question of whom Siddhartha learns from develops from Awakening to Kamala. Use one quotation from each.

    Sample answer: Siddhartha moves from learning only from himself to choosing a new, worldly teacher. In Awakening he vows: "I want to learn from myself, want to be my student" (Awakening, paragraph 6). In Kamala he says: "It was my resolution to learn love from this most beautiful woman." (Kamala, paragraph 70). The second passage seems to break the first vow, yet the word "resolution" shows that he still chooses his own path; Kamala teaches a skill, not a doctrine.

91. [mc · recall · DOK 1] What does Kamala say a poor man must do to obtain money?

    A. Beg at the door of the inn

    B. Steal from the rich merchants of the city

    C. Do what he has learned and ask for pay

    D. Pray to the gods for luck

    Key: C (Do what he has learned and ask for pay)

92. [fill · recall · DOK 1] Complete the quotation from Kamala, paragraph 23: "conducted him without a word into a _____, where Kamala was lying on a couch" Word bank: kitchen, pavilion, prison, stable

    Key: pavilion

93. [fill · recall · DOK 1] Complete the quotation from Kamala, paragraph 47: "Deeply, seeing the lotus's _____, Bowed that man, and smiling Kamala thanked." Word bank: blossom, thorn, root, shadow

    Key: blossom

94. [mc · recall · DOK 1] Who shaves Siddhartha's beard and cuts his hair in the city?

    A. A barber's assistant he befriended

    B. Kamala's maid

C. The ferryman

D. A priest of the temple of Vishnu

Key: A (A barber's assistant he befriended)

95. [mc · recall · DOK 1] Which word completes this sentence from Kamala, paragraph 21? "Then, he entered the city. Now he had a _____."

A. goal

B. home

C. master

D. wife

Key: A (goal)

96. [fill · recall · DOK 1] Complete the quotation from Kamala, paragraph 57: "You will also still find use for the magic _____." Word bank: coins, spells, horses, debts

Key: spells

97. [mc · inference · DOK 2] What does Siddhartha's visit to the barber before he meets Kamala show?

A. He wants to become a barber himself

B. He is shedding the Samana to enter the world

C. He is preparing to return home to his father

D. He has decided to join the Buddha's monks

Key: B (He is shedding the Samana to enter the world)

98. [short · inference · DOK 2] What does Siddhartha say brought him to Kamala? Use this line. "It was my resolution to learn love from this most beautiful woman." (Kamala, paragraph 70)

Sample answer: Siddhartha claims that his own firm decision brought him to Kamala. The evidence is "It was my resolution to learn love from this most beautiful woman." (Kamala, paragraph 70). The word "resolution" shows he sees love as something to learn by will, the way he once learned fasting and waiting.

99. [mc · analysis · DOK 3] Which literary element does this describe in "Kamala"? Siddhartha's desire for the woman at the stream pulls against the inner voice that tells him no.

A. Setting

B. Onomatopoeia

C. Conflict

D. Alliteration

Key: C (Conflict)

100. [short · analysis · DOK 3] Analyze the word choice in "a bright red mouth like a freshly cracked fig" (Kamala, paragraph 16). Pick two words and explain what they suggest.

Sample answer: Kamala first appears to Siddhartha as something ripe and tempting. The evidence is "a bright red mouth like a freshly cracked fig" (Kamala, paragraph 16). "Bright red" gives the colour a vivid, almost dazzling force, and "freshly cracked" makes the mouth a fruit just opened and ready to taste, so the image ties her beauty to appetite and the senses he is about to explore.

101. [short · analysis · DOK 3] Claim: Kamala treats love as an art that has to be learned. Explain how this evidence supports the claim: "how she taught him, how wise she was, how she controlled him, rejected him, lured him" (Kamala, paragraph 50)

Sample answer: The evidence supports the claim because a single kiss is described as a lesson: "how she taught him, how wise she was, how she controlled him, rejected him, lured him" (Kamala, paragraph 50). The verbs "taught," "controlled" and "lured" describe skill and method, not mere feeling, so Kamala appears as a master teaching a craft to a beginner.

102. [mc · analysis · DOK 3] Which literary element does this describe in "Kamala"? Siddhartha thinks the people's life here is simple and without difficulty, pointing to how easily he will slip into it.

    A. Personification

    B. Foreshadowing

    C. Setting

    D. Dialogue

    Key: B (Foreshadowing)

103. [short · synthesis · DOK 4] Close reading: how do the diction and syntax of "Siddhartha does nothing, he waits, he thinks, he fasts, but he passes through the things of the world like a rock through water" (Kamala, paragraph 72) shape its meaning? Consider a second, competing reading.

    Sample answer: The sentence makes stillness into power: "Siddhartha does nothing, he waits, he thinks, he fasts, but he passes through the things of the world like a rock through water" (Kamala, paragraph 72). Speaking of himself in the third person, Siddhartha lists three quiet verbs and then turns on "but" to the image of a rock that sinks straight to the bottom, so doing nothing becomes the fastest way to a goal. A competing reading hears arrogance: he names himself like a legend and treats Kamala's help as mere physics. Both are present, but the calm, even rhythm suggests he truly believes his Samana discipline still guides him.

104. [short · synthesis · DOK 4] Synthesis: trace how Siddhartha's view of the senses develops from Awakening to Kamala. Use one quotation from each. Address one competing reading and answer it.

    Sample answer: Siddhartha moves from discovering the senses to giving them equal standing with thought. In Awakening the visible world suddenly opens to him: "Beautiful was the world, colourful was the world, strange and mysterious was the world!" (Awakening, paragraph 7). In Kamala he turns that wonder into a principle: "Both, the thoughts as well as the senses, were pretty things, the ultimate meaning was hidden behind both of them" (Kamala, paragraph 3). A competing reading sees only a slide into pleasure that ends his search. But the senses are valued as a way to the hidden meaning, not as the meaning itself, which keeps them inside the search.

105. [short · synthesis · DOK 4] Evaluate this claim about the chapter: "Kamala is only a teacher of pleasure." Is it fully persuasive? Argue with evidence, including a passage that complicates it.

    Sample answer: The claim is persuasive in part. "Clothes are what he must have, pretty clothes, and shoes, pretty shoes, and lots of money in his pouch, and gifts for Kamala." (Kamala, paragraph 33) supports it: her demands are worldly. But "Did any Samana or Brahmin ever fear that someone might come and grab him and steal his learning, and his religious devotion, and his depth of thought?" (Kamala, paragraph 37) complicates it, however: she compares love to spiritual learning that can only be given freely. A fair verdict is that she teaches pleasure, yet she also teaches a truth about freedom and giving.

106. [mc · recall · DOK 1] Who leads Siddhartha secretly out of Kamala's grove when a visitor arrives?

    A. A maid

    B. Kamaswami

    C. A gardener

    D. The ferryman

    Key: A (A maid)

107. [fill · recall · DOK 1] Fill in the blank with the vocabulary word that fits: "children were rolling about in the street, were playing with pumpkinseeds and _____, screamed and wrestled" Word bank: daggers, ledgers, seashells, lanterns

Key: seashells

108. [fill · recall · DOK 1] Fill in the blank with the word that fits: “was in this moment astonished like a child about the _____ of knowledge and things worth learning” Word bank: burden, prison, shortage, cornucopia

Key: cornucopia

109. [fill · recall · DOK 1] Complete the quotation from Kamala, paragraph 58: “In this moment, a maid came running in and _____ a message into her mistress’s ear.” Word bank: cooked, whispered, swallowed, sharpened

Key: whispered

110. [mc · recall · DOK 1] Which word completes this sentence from Kamala, paragraph 14? “Politely, he petted her cheek, turned away from her and disappeared away from the disappointed woman with light steps into the bamboo _____.”

A. wood

B. temple

C. city

D. river

Key: A (wood)

111. [fill · recall · DOK 1] Complete the quotation from Kamala, paragraph 40: “Dear Kamala, thus advise me where I should go to, that I’ll find these three things most _____?” Word bank: quickly, never, sadly, rarely

Key: quickly

112. [mc · inference · DOK 2] In the poem Siddhartha recites (Kamala, paragraph 47), the young man prefers an offering to the woman of the grove over offerings for gods. What does that preference suggest about Siddhartha’s new direction?

A. He is turning from worship toward love and the senses

B. He plans to become a priest of the grove

C. He wants to mock the gods openly

D. He hopes Kamala will pay him for his poems with gold coins

Key: A (He is turning from worship toward love and the senses)

113. [short · inference · DOK 4] What does the ferryman predict, and what might the line suggest about Siddhartha's journey? “This too, I have learned from the river: everything is coming back!” (Kamala, paragraph 11) Build a short argument from it: trace the idea across at least three chapters, this one and earlier ones, weigh one competing reading, and defend your position with evidence from each.

Sample answer: The ferryman says “This too, I have learned from the river: everything is coming back!” (Kamala, paragraph 11). He has learned it from the river, which already acts as a teacher. The words “everything is coming back” suggest that Siddhartha, too, may one day return to this river. The prophecy cuts against Siddhartha's own resolve in Awakening, where he set out “no longer for home, no longer to his father, no longer back” (Awakening, paragraph 12). Together the passages set his forward drive against the river's circling pattern, and the ferryman's calm certainty hints which of the two will prove true. Return was the hope of his father too: “When you’ll have found blissfulness in the forest, then come back and teach me to be blissful” (The Son of the Brahmin, paragraph 49). A competing reading takes “coming back” as simple repetition, as if Siddhartha were walking in a circle. But each departure so far, from home, from the Samanas and from Gotama, has carried him forward, so across these chapters the return foreseen is a spiral of learning, not a circle.

114. [mc · inference · DOK 2] What does this passage most clearly show? “I’m opening one door after another for you.” (Kamala, paragraph 67)

    A. Kamala wants Siddhartha to leave her house at once.

    B. Kamala is giving him the keys to her grove.

    C. Kamala sees herself as the source of his success.

    D. Kamala is tired of helping the Samana.

    Key: C (Kamala sees herself as the source of his success.)

115. [short · inference · DOK 3] What does Kamala’s explanation reveal about her? “that Siddhartha is a handsome man, that his glance pleases the women, that therefore good fortune is coming towards him” (Kamala, paragraph 74) Connect it to a second quotation from another chapter.

    Sample answer: Kamala is a realist who credits charm rather than spiritual power. The evidence is “that Siddhartha is a handsome man, that his glance pleases the women, that therefore good fortune is coming towards him” (Kamala, paragraph 74). Against his talk of thinking, waiting and fasting, she points to what anyone can see. Her trust in the visible echoes Siddhartha’s own turn in Awakening, where he regrets that “I called the visible world a deception” (Awakening, paragraph 8). Together the passages show the novel moving toward the surface of life, with Kamala as its plain-spoken guide.

116. [mc · analysis · DOK 3] Which literary element does this describe in “Kamala”? The crescent moon floats like a boat in the blue night sky.

    A. Plot

    B. Dialogue

    C. Simile

    D. Theme

    Key: C (Simile)

117. [mc · analysis · DOK 3] Which literary element does this describe in “Kamala”? Siddhartha offers thinking, waiting and fasting to Kamala as if they were riches, though she hears nothing useful in them.

    A. Alliteration

    B. Setting

    C. Onomatopoeia

    D. Irony

    Key: D (Irony)

118. [short · analysis · DOK 3] Analyze the word choice in “Smiling, they parted. Smiling, Siddhartha was happy” (Kamala, paragraph 12). Pick two words and explain what they suggest.

    Sample answer: The farewell at the river is warm and easy. The evidence is “Smiling, they parted. Smiling, Siddhartha was happy” (Kamala, paragraph 12). Repeating “Smiling” at the head of both sentences links the two men in one mood, and the plain word “happy” shows how lightly Siddhartha takes the parting, though the ferryman’s promise that he will come back gives the scene more weight than he knows.

119. [short · synthesis · DOK 4] Evaluate this claim about the chapter: “Siddhartha’s refusal of the woman at the stream shows that he has mastered his desires.” Is it fully persuasive? Argue with evidence, including a passage that complicates it.

    Sample answer: The claim is persuasive in part. “And in this moment he heard, shuddering with awe, the voice of his innermost self, and this voice said ‘No.’” (Kamala, paragraph 14) supports it: an inner voice stops him. But “Never again I want to turn my eyes to the ground, when I’m coming across a beautiful woman.” (Kamala, paragraph 27) complicates it:

within a day he pursues Kamala openly. A fair verdict is that he refuses one woman not from mastery but because his inner self wants a deeper teacher of love.

120. [short · synthesis · DOK 4] Synthesis: trace how Siddhartha's sense of being newly born develops from Awakening to Kamala. Use one quotation from each. Address one competing reading and answer it.
Sample answer: Siddhartha moves from declaring a rebirth to living it as a learner. In Awakening he says: "I have indeed awakened and have not been born before this very day." (Awakening, paragraph 8). In Kamala, "Siddhartha learned something new on every step of his path, for the world was transformed, and his heart was enchanted." (Kamala, paragraph 1). The first passage is a claim; the second shows its result. A competing reading holds that "enchanted" warns of a new spell, the very Maya he rejected. That reading has force, but at this stage the chapter presents his wonder as real learning, not yet as a spell.

121. [fill · recall · DOK 1] Complete the quotation from Kamala, paragraph 1: "He saw the sun rising over the mountains with their forests and setting over the distant beach with its palm _____." Word bank: huts, trees, boats, temples
Key: trees

122. [fill · recall · DOK 1] Fill in the blank with the word that fits: "At the inn, where travellers stay, he positioned himself by the door, without words he asked for food, without a word he accepted a piece of rice _____."
Word bank: paper, cloth, cake, wood
Key: cake

123. [mc · recall · DOK 1] Which word completes this sentence from Kamala, paragraph 55? "Stop, Kamala interrupted him. You're able to _____? And write?"

A. read
B. sing
C. fight
D. ride

Key: A (read)

124. [fill · recall · DOK 1] Complete the quotation from Kamala, paragraph 63: "Now, everything is easy, easy like that lessons in _____, which Kamala is giving me." Word bank: kissing, rusting, melting, leaking
Key: kissing

125. [mc · recall · DOK 1] In the line "She beckoned him with her eyes", what does "beckoned" most nearly mean?

A. looked away from him in anger
B. signalled him to come closer
C. warned him to keep his distance
D. closed her eyes to sleep

Key: B (signalled him to come closer)

126. [mc · recall · DOK 1] In the line "Kamala smiled, played with her fan of peacocks' feathers", what does "peacocks" most nearly mean?

A. large birds with bright, spreading tails
B. small grey songbirds
C. river fish with silver scales
D. wild dogs of the forest

Key: A (large birds with bright, spreading tails)

127. [mc · inference · DOK 2] What does this passage most clearly show? “I wish that it should be this way, my teacher” (Kamala, paragraph 75)

    A. He mocks Kamala for her lack of learning.

    B. He plans to return to Gotama as his only teacher.

    C. He accepts her as his teacher, half playfully.

    D. He is sad to leave Kamala for good.

    Key: C (He accepts her as his teacher, half playfully.)

128. [mc · inference · DOK 2] What does Siddhartha’s astonishment at Kamala’s first kiss reveal?

    A. Kamala does not really care for him

    B. Love is an art with much still to learn

    C. He regrets leaving the forest and the Samanas

    D. He has learned all there is to know

    Key: B (Love is an art with much still to learn)

129. [short · inference · DOK 4] What does this boast reveal about how Siddhartha now sees himself? “The day before yesterday, I was still a shaggy beggar, as soon as yesterday I have kissed Kamala, and soon I’ll be a merchant” (Kamala, paragraph 68) Trace the idea through three chapters, with a quotation from each, and answer one competing reading.

    Sample answer: Siddhartha now sees himself as a man of quick and certain success. The evidence is “The day before yesterday, I was still a shaggy beggar, as soon as yesterday I have kissed Kamala, and soon I’ll be a merchant” (Kamala, paragraph 68). This confidence grows from Gotama, where he trusts only himself: “No teachings will entice me any more, since this man’s teachings have not enticed me.” (Gotama, paragraph 45). In Awakening he walks on “heading no longer for home, no longer to his father, no longer back” (Awakening, paragraph 12). A competing reading sees the boast as simple joy at a new life. Yet it leaves out Kamala’s help and any spiritual aim, so across the three chapters his self-reliance is sliding toward worldly pride.

130. [mc · analysis · DOK 3] Which literary element does this describe in “Kamala”? When Kamala claps, her golden bracelets clang, a detail of sound and glitter that makes the moment vivid.

    A. Allusion

    B. Theme

    C. Hyperbole

    D. Imagery

    Key: D (Imagery)

131. [short · analysis · DOK 3] Claim: Siddhartha’s pride has survived his years as an ascetic. Explain how this evidence supports the claim: “Suddenly, pride flared up in him. He was no Samana any more, it was no longer becoming to him to beg.” (Kamala, paragraph 62)

    Sample answer: The evidence supports the claim because pride bursts out the moment Siddhartha stops being a Samana: “Suddenly, pride flared up in him. He was no Samana any more, it was no longer becoming to him to beg.” (Kamala, paragraph 62). The verb “flared” suggests a fire that was only banked, never put out, and his refusal to beg shows that his old sense of rank was waiting beneath the ascetic’s humility.

132. [mc · analysis · DOK 3] Which literary element does this describe in “Kamala”? Kamala’s grove is fenced and guarded, so Siddhartha must slip over the hedge to leave it unseen.

    A. Onomatopoeia

B. Alliteration

C. Setting

D. Hyperbole

Key: C (Setting)

133. [short · analysis · DOK 3] Analyze the word choice in "the wide water shimmered reddishly in the light of the morning" (Kamala, paragraph 5). Pick two words and explain what they suggest.

Sample answer: The crossing is painted as a quiet, almost sacred moment. The evidence is "the wide water shimmered reddishly in the light of the morning" (Kamala, paragraph 5). "Shimmered" makes the river alive and changing, and "reddishly" colours it with the dawn, so the river that will matter so much later first appears as a living, glowing thing.

134. [short · synthesis · DOK 4] Evaluate this claim about the chapter: "The ferryman is a minor figure whom Siddhartha quickly forgets." Is it fully persuasive? Argue with evidence, including a passage that complicates it.

Sample answer: The claim is persuasive on the surface. "all I meet on my path are like Govinda" (Kamala, paragraph 12) supports it: Siddhartha files the ferryman among simple, childlike people. But "You too, Samana, will come back." (Kamala, paragraph 11) complicates it: the ferryman's prophecy, and his claim to learn from the river, mark him not as a passing helper but as a future guide. A fair verdict is that Siddhartha dismisses him while the novel quietly sets him up to matter.

135. [short · synthesis · DOK 4] Synthesis: trace how the direction of Siddhartha's path develops from Awakening to Kamala. Use one quotation from each. Address one competing reading and answer it.

Sample answer: Siddhartha's path changes from a refusal to a purpose. In Awakening he walks on "heading no longer for home, no longer to his father, no longer back" (Awakening, paragraph 12), defined only by what he leaves. In Kamala he finds direction: "Then, he entered the city. Now he had a goal." (Kamala, paragraph 21). A competing reading sees the goal, winning a courtesan, as a fall from the search for the self. Yet the novel frames it as a step in that same search, since he chooses this goal himself, as his own student.

Rigor version	Items (in order)	Mix
HS Sophomore	1, 2, 3, 4, 5, 6, 7, 8, 9, 10, 11, 12, 13, 14, 15	recall 10, inference 3, analysis 1, synthesis 1
HS Junior	16, 17, 18, 19, 20, 21, 22, 23, 24, 25, 26, 27, 28, 29, 30	recall 10, inference 3, analysis 2, synthesis 0
HS Senior	31, 32, 33, 34, 35, 36, 37, 38, 39, 40, 41, 42, 43, 44, 45	recall 9, inference 3, analysis 2, synthesis 1
AP	46, 47, 48, 49, 50, 51, 52, 53, 54, 55, 56, 57, 58, 59, 60	recall 6, inference 3, analysis 3, synthesis 3
College Freshman	61, 62, 63, 64, 65, 66, 67, 68, 69, 70, 71, 72, 73, 74, 75	recall 6, inference 4, analysis 3, synthesis 2
College Sophomore	76, 77, 78, 79, 80, 81, 82, 83, 84, 85, 86, 87, 88, 89, 90	recall 6, inference 4, analysis 3, synthesis 2
College Junior	91, 92, 93, 94, 95, 96, 97, 98, 99, 100, 101, 102, 103, 104, 105	recall 6, inference 2, analysis 4, synthesis 3
College Senior	106, 107, 108, 109, 110, 111, 112, 113, 114, 115, 116, 117, 118, 119, 120	recall 6, inference 4, analysis 3, synthesis 2

Graduate / PhD	121, 122, 123, 124, 125, 126, 127, 128, 129, 130, 131, 132, 133, 134, 135	recall 6, inference 3, analysis 4, synthesis 2

Writing prompts (eleven rigor levels)

HS Sophomore (450 words; Dual Credit (Indiana College Core): ICC-WC-1.1, ICC-WC-1.3, ICC-WC-1.4, ICC-WC-1.5): Analyze how Kamala develops the idea of entering the city and learning love. Make a precise claim, support it with at least three pieces of textual evidence, and explain how the author's use of characterization and symbolism shapes that idea. Address one possible counterclaim. (You are reading the English translation by Gunther Olesch, Anke Dreher, Amy Coulter, Stefan Langer and Semyon Chaichenets, so word-choice evidence is the translators' English.)

HS Junior (550 words; Dual Credit (Indiana College Core): ICC-WC-1.1, ICC-WC-1.3, ICC-WC-1.4, ICC-WC-1.5): Analyze how the structure of Kamala (where it begins, turns and ends) and its characterization shape the reader's understanding of entering the city and learning love. Identify one place where the text leaves matters uncertain and explain how that uncertainty adds to its meaning.

HS Senior (600 words; Dual Credit (Indiana College Core): ICC-WC-1.1, ICC-WC-1.3, ICC-WC-1.4, ICC-WC-1.5): Two readers disagree about what Kamala suggests about entering the city and learning love. Lay out two plausible interpretations, weigh the evidence for each (including the chapter's characterization and symbolism), and argue for the stronger one in a sustained, well-organized essay.

AP (650 words; Dual Credit (Indiana College Core): ICC-WC-1.1, ICC-WC-1.3, ICC-WC-1.4, ICC-WC-1.5): Write a literary argument in which you analyze how Hermann Hesse uses characterization in Kamala to complicate the reader's understanding of entering the city and learning love. Develop a defensible thesis, select evidence purposefully, and explain how specific choices of diction and syntax create meaning.

College Freshman (1000 words; Dual Credit (Indiana College Core): ICC-WC-1.3, ICC-WC-1.5, ICC-WC-1.1): Situate Kamala within its historical and literary context and argue how the chapter's treatment of entering the city and learning love responds to that context. Engage with at least one secondary perspective (a critic, historian or the author's own statements), integrate quotations smoothly, and cite in APA style.

College Sophomore (1250 words; Dual Credit (Indiana College Core): ICC-WC-1.1, ICC-WC-1.3, ICC-WC-1.4, ICC-WC-1.5): Read Kamala alongside the conventions of its genre and period. Argue how the chapter's handling of entering the city and learning love follows or bends those conventions, using the characterization as evidence, and test your reading against one published critic. Document two secondary sources in APA.

College Junior (1500 words; Dual Credit (Indiana College Core): ICC-WC-1.1, ICC-WC-1.3, ICC-WC-1.4, ICC-WC-1.5): Apply a named critical approach (for example formalist, historicist, feminist, psychoanalytic or ecocritical) to Kamala and its treatment of entering the city and learning love. State your method, show what it reveals in the chapter's characterization and symbolism, and identify where the text resists it.

College Senior (2000 words; Dual Credit (Indiana College Core): ICC-WC-1.1, ICC-WC-1.3, ICC-WC-1.4, ICC-WC-1.5): Develop a research argument that reads Kamala as evidence for a larger claim about entering the city and learning love in Siddhartha. Connect close reading of the chapter to the whole novel, engage at least four scholarly sources, and state precisely where your reading departs from theirs (Chicago style).

Graduate / PhD (2500 words; Dual Credit (Indiana College Core): ICC-WC-1.1, ICC-WC-1.3, ICC-WC-1.4, ICC-WC-1.5): Develop an original argument that reads Kamala as a hinge in the novel's larger treatment of entering the city and learning love. Position your reading within a named critical conversation (for example formalist, historicist, psychoanalytic, feminist or postcolonial approaches), account for the textual history where relevant, and articulate the stakes of your intervention for scholarship on Siddhartha.

SAT-style questions

1. It intoxicated him and rendered him unconscious. — When Siddhartha woke up, the pale river shimmered through the door of the hut, and in the forest, a dark call of an owl resounded deeply and pleasantly.

   As used in the text, what does the word “shimmered” most nearly mean?

   A. shone with a soft, wavering light

   B. male peafowl, birds with large, colorful tail feathers

   C. a woman paid to be the companion of wealthy men

   D. wild dogs that hunt or scavenge

2. “I thank you, my benefactor,” spoke Siddhartha, disembarking on the other side of the river. “I have no gift I could give you for your hospitality, my dear, and also no payment for your work. I am a man without a home, a son of a Brahmin and a Samana.”

   Which choice best states a central concern of “Kamala”?

   A. Entering the city and learning love

   B. The pain of a father's love

   C. The teacher and the teaching

   D. Detachment among the childlike people

SAT key: 1. A (shone with a soft, wavering light); 2. A (Entering the city and learning love)

Lesson 7: With the Childlike People

Focus: detachment among the childlike people

Objective: Students will analyze how characterization develops in “With the Childlike People” by writing a claim-evidence-reasoning paragraph that cites at least 2 quotations from the section, and will score at least 80% on the section quiz.

Standards: Dual Credit (Indiana College Core): ICC-WC-1.1, ICC-WC-1.3, ICC-WC-1.4, ICC-WC-1.5

Content note (sexual content, condescending language, alcohol or drugs (mentioned)): Kamala is a courtesan in an ancient Indian city; the novel treats love as an art she teaches, built on mutual pleasure: “pleasure cannot be taken without giving pleasure” (Hesse, 1922/2015, With the Childlike People, para. 29). Hesse shows that skill without love leaves Siddhartha empty: “Perhaps people of our kind can’t love. The childlike people can; that’s their secret.” (Hesse, 1922/2015, With the Childlike People, para. 47) The narrator calls ordinary people “childlike people”; question that condescension.
Student preview: The chapter continues the relationship and calls ordinary people 'childlike'.
Suggested language: “Is Siddhartha right to look down on the 'childlike people'?”

Teacher only · spoilers

Siddhartha works for Kamaswami but treats business as a game, caring little for profit, which irritates the merchant yet makes Siddhartha successful. He watches ordinary people—the 'childlike people'—with amusement as they suffer over money and desire. Kamala teaches him the art of love, and they agree that neither of them can truly love.

Background: Hesse contrasts spiritual detachment with worldly attachment, echoing Buddhist teaching on desire.

Significance: Siddhartha's superiority is ironic: he is beginning to become what he looks down on.

Lesson plan and lecture script (90 minutes)

0–8 min · Bell-ringer · You do (8 min)
Students write to the bell-ringer, then pair-share.
Siddhartha calls others 'childlike.' Is he being wise or arrogant? Write for five minutes. Starters: I think... because... / This connects to love and attachment because.... Content note before we start: The chapter continues the relationship and calls ordinary people 'childlike'.
Prompt: Siddhartha calls others 'childlike.' Is he being wise or arrogant?
Sentence starters: I think… because… · This connects to love and attachment because…
Strong response: A strong response takes a position and anticipates this: Siddhartha names the cost: “Perhaps people of our kind can’t love. The childlike people can; that’s their secret” (With the Childlike People, paragraph 47); both are detached, and that is their limit.

8–18 min · Vocabulary with etymology notes · We do (10 min)
Four key words in context.
Today's words: hastiness — acting too quickly; admonished — warned or scolded gently; carpets — thick woven floor coverings; calmness — steadiness of mind under stress.
Words: hastiness: acting too quickly · admonished: warned or scolded gently · carpets: thick woven floor coverings · calmness: steadiness of mind under stress

18–28 min · Background and context · I do (10 min)
Mini-lecture (read or adapt the script).
Hesse contrasts spiritual detachment with worldly attachment, echoing Buddhist teaching on desire. Siddhartha's superiority is ironic: he is beginning to become what he looks down on. Characterization: Siddhartha works for the merchant Kamaswami and learns trade, but treats it as a game; he learns love from Kamala. Figurative language: His image of people: most are "like a falling leaf," a few "like stars" with their own course. It reveals his pride. Irony: Siddhartha calls ordinary people "childlike" and feels superior, while slowly becoming one of them. Watch for teachers and teachings: Siddhartha learns from many teachers but concludes that wisdom cannot be taught in words. In this chapter, Kamaswami tells Siddhartha he has heard "that you were a Brahmin, a learned man, but that you seek to be in the service of a merchant" (With the Childlike People, paragraph 3).

28–40 min · I do: modeled close reading · I do (12 min)
Model the close reading of the anchor quotation using the written think-aloud below.
First, meaning. I read "Writing is good, thinking is better. Being smart is good, being patient is better" slowly and put it in my own words: Siddhartha tells Kamaswami that writing is good but thinking is better, and cleverness is good but patience is better. Next, craft. I notice the repeated pattern "is good... is better," which ranks each skill below a quieter one. The strongest word is "patient": it is the virtue he values most, learned in his years of waiting and fasting. Then, effect. Why does Siddhartha rank thinking above writing and patience above cleverness? My answer: Siddhartha ranks thinking above writing and patience above cleverness because he values inner discipline over worldly skill; he still holds his Samana wisdom as he enters the merchant's world that will erode it.

> Writing is good, thinking is better. Being smart is good, being patient is better (With the Childlike People, paragraph 26)

Think-aloud: First, meaning. I read "Writing is good, thinking is better. Being smart is good, being patient is better" slowly and put it in my own words: Siddhartha tells Kamaswami that writing is good but thinking is better, and cleverness is good but patience is better. Next, craft. I notice the repeated pattern "is good... is better," which ranks each skill below a quieter one. The strongest word is "patient": it is the virtue he values most, learned in his years of waiting and fasting. Then, effect. Why does Siddhartha rank thinking above writing and patience above cleverness? My answer: Siddhartha ranks thinking above writing and patience above cleverness because he values inner discipline over worldly skill; he still holds his Samana wisdom as he enters the merchant's world that will erode it.

40–55 min · We do: guided annotation · We do (15 min)
Guided analysis of a second quotation; expected answers given.
Ask: What words in this line stand out, and what do they suggest? Expected: Leaves are blown by the wind; stars follow their own law. Siddhartha thinks he is a star. Kamala's line suggests that his superiority keeps him from love, which links to love and attachment. Ask: How does this line connect to love and attachment? Expected: Siddhartha names the cost: "Perhaps people of our kind can't love. The childlike people can; that's their secret" (With the Childlike People, paragraph 47); both are detached, and that is their limit. (The simile that shows how he sees others.)

> Most people, Kamala, are like a falling leaf, which is blown and is turning around through the air, and wavers, and tumbles to the ground (With the Childlike People, paragraph 42)

Ask: What words in this line stand out, and what do they suggest?
Expected answer: Leaves are blown by the wind; stars follow their own law. Siddhartha thinks he is a star. Kamala's line suggests that his superiority keeps him from love, which links to love and attachment.
Ask: How does this line connect to love and attachment?
Expected answer: Siddhartha names the cost: "Perhaps people of our kind can't love. The childlike people can; that's their secret" (With the Childlike People, paragraph 47); both are detached, and that is their limit. (The simile that shows how he sees others.)

55–70 min · You do: independent annotation · You do (15 min)

Independent annotation and a claim-evidence-reasoning paragraph (exemplar given).

Annotate the chapter for characterization, figurative language (three marks with a margin note each), then write one claim-evidence-reasoning paragraph: what does this chapter suggest about detachment among the childlike people? Then start your writing prompt at your assigned level (HS Sophomore: Analyze how With the Childlike People develops the idea of detachment among the childlike people. Make a precise claim, support it with at least three pieces of textual evidence, and explain how the author's use of characterization and irony shapes that idea. Address one possible counterclaim. (You are reading the English translation by Gunther Olesch, Anke Dreher, Amy Coulter, Stefan Langer and Semyon Chaichenets, so word-choice evidence is the translators' English.)) Exemplar: Siddhartha's detachment in the city is a strength in business but a failure in love. When the text says “Most people, Kamala, are like a falling leaf, which is blown and is turning around through the air, and wavers, and tumbles to the ground” (With the Childlike People, paragraph 42), it shows this directly. He compares most people to "a falling leaf" and himself, implicitly, to the stars, and Siddhartha sees the cost: “Perhaps people of our kind can’t love. The childlike people can; that’s their secret”

Task: Annotate the chapter for characterization, figurative language (three marks with a margin note each), then write one claim-evidence-reasoning paragraph: what does this chapter suggest about detachment among the childlike people? Then start your writing prompt at your assigned level (HS Sophomore: Analyze how With the Childlike People develops the idea of detachment among the childlike people. Make a precise claim, support it with at least three pieces of textual evidence, and explain how the author's use of characterization and irony shapes that idea. Address one possible counterclaim. (You are reading the English translation by Gunther Olesch, Anke Dreher, Amy Coulter, Stefan Langer and Semyon Chaichenets, so word-choice evidence is the translators' English.))

Exemplar: Siddhartha's detachment in the city is a strength in business but a failure in love. When the text says “Most people, Kamala, are like a falling leaf, which is blown and is turning around through the air, and wavers, and tumbles to the ground” (With the Childlike People, paragraph 42), it shows this directly. He compares most people to "a falling leaf" and himself, implicitly, to the stars, and Siddhartha sees the cost: “Perhaps people of our kind can’t love. The childlike people can; that’s their secret”

70–80 min · Discussion · We do (10 min)

Structured discussion from the 30 tiered questions, with facilitation notes.

Anchor question: Siddhartha calls others 'childlike.' Is he being wise or arrogant? Ask: are the "childlike people" really inferior? What do they have that Siddhartha lacks?

Anchor question: Siddhartha calls others 'childlike.' Is he being wise or arrogant?

Facilitation: Ask: are the "childlike people" really inferior? What do they have that Siddhartha lacks?

80–87 min · Exit ticket / chapter quiz · You do (7 min)
Chapter quiz in the app and an exit ticket (answer given).
Chapter quiz in the app, then: In one sentence, what does this chapter suggest about detachment among the childlike people? Support it with one short quotation. Model answer: Siddhartha's detachment in the city is a strength in business but a failure in love. ("Most people, Kamala, are like a falling leaf, which is blown and is turning around through the air, and wavers, and tumbles to the ground", With the Childlike People, paragraph 42). Accept any defensible claim backed by a quotation from the chapter; the answer key for the quiz is in the Quiz section.
Exit ticket: In one sentence, what does this chapter suggest about detachment among the childlike people? Support it with one short quotation.
Answer: Model answer: Siddhartha's detachment in the city is a strength in business but a failure in love. ("Most people, Kamala, are like a falling leaf, which is blown and is turning around through the air, and wavers, and tumbles to the ground", With the Childlike People, paragraph 42). Accept any defensible claim backed by a quotation from the chapter; the answer key for the quiz is in the Quiz section.

87–90 min · Closure · I do (3 min)
Summarize the lesson and preview the next reading.
Today we saw how characterization shapes detachment among the childlike people. Key takeaway: Siddhartha names the cost: "Perhaps people of our kind can't love. The childlike people can; that's their secret" (With the Childlike People, paragraph 47); both are detached, and that is their limit.

Total: 90 minutes.

60-minute version of this lesson

Same script and content as above, with these timings (60 minutes).

Clock	Segment	Minutes	What to keep
0–5	Bell-ringer	5	Students write to the bell-ringer, then pair-share.
5–10	Vocabulary with etymology notes	5	Four key words in context.
10–16	Background and context	6	Mini-lecture (read or adapt the script).
16–24	I do: modeled close reading	8	Model the close reading of the anchor quotation using the written think-aloud below.
24–34	We do: guided annotation	10	Guided analysis of a second quotation; expected answers given.
34–44	You do: independent annotation	10	Independent annotation and a claim-evidence-reasoning paragraph (exemplar given).
44–54	Discussion	10	Structured discussion from the 30 tiered questions, with facilitation notes.
54–58	Exit ticket / chapter quiz	4	Chapter quiz in the app and an exit ticket (answer given).
58–60	Closure	2	Summarize the lesson and preview the next reading.

Teacher analysis (spoilers)

Literary elements

- Characterization: Siddhartha works for the merchant Kamaswami and learns trade, but treats it as a game; he learns love from Kamala.
- Figurative language: His image of people: most are "like a falling leaf," a few "like stars" with their own course. It reveals his pride.
- Irony: Siddhartha calls ordinary people "childlike" and feels superior, while slowly becoming one of them.

Themes and how they develop

- love and attachment: Siddhartha names the cost: “Perhaps people of our kind can’t love. The childlike people can; that’s their secret” (With the Childlike People, paragraph 47); both are detached, and that is their limit.

Symbols and motifs

- teachers and teachings: Siddhartha learns from many teachers but concludes that wisdom cannot be taught in words. In this chapter, Kamaswami tells Siddhartha he has heard “that you were a Brahmin, a learned man, but that you seek to be in the service of a merchant” (With the Childlike People, paragraph 3).
- the smile: The serene smile of Gotama marks enlightenment. In this chapter: “them complaining about pain at which a Samana would only smile, and suffering because of deprivations which a Samana would not feel” (With the Childlike People, paragraph 37).

Key quotations (checked against the reading text)

- “Writing is good, thinking is better. Being smart is good, being patient is better” (With the Childlike People, paragraph 26) What Siddhartha writes for Kamaswami: his ascetic values in proverb form.
- “Most people, Kamala, are like a falling leaf, which is blown and is turning around through the air, and wavers, and tumbles to the ground” (With the Childlike People, paragraph 42) The simile that shows how he sees others.
- “Perhaps people of our kind can’t love. The childlike people can; that’s their secret” (With the Childlike People, paragraph 47) Siddhartha names their shared weakness.

Model claim-evidence-reasoning

Claim: Siddhartha's detachment in the city is a strength in business but a failure in love.
Evidence: “Most people, Kamala, are like a falling leaf, which is blown and is turning around through the air, and wavers, and tumbles to the ground” (With the Childlike People, paragraph 42)
Reasoning: He compares most people to "a falling leaf" and himself, implicitly, to the stars, and Siddhartha sees the cost: “Perhaps people of our kind can’t love. The childlike people can; that’s their secret”

Passages referenced in this lesson (full text)

Siddhartha gave his garments to a poor Brahmin in the street. He wore nothing more than the loincloth and the earth-coloured, unsown cloak. He ate only once a day, and never something cooked. He fasted for fifteen days. He fasted for twenty-eight days. The flesh waned from his thighs and cheeks. Feverish dreams flickered from his enlarged eyes, long nails grew slowly on his parched fingers and a dry, shaggy beard grew on his chin. His glance turned to ice when he encountered women; his mouth twitched with contempt when he walked through a city of nicely dressed people. He saw merchants trading, princes hunting, mourners wailing for their dead, whores offering themselves, physicians trying to help the sick, priests determining the most suitable day for seeding, lovers loving, mothers nursing their children—and all of this was not worthy of one look from his eye, it all lied, it all stank, it all stank of lies, it all pretended to be meaningful and joyful and beautiful, and it all was just concealed putrefaction. The world tasted bitter. Life was torture. (With the Samanas, paragraph 2)

"I wish that you, O exalted one, would not be angry with me," said the young man. "I have not spoken to you like this to argue with you, to argue about words. You are truly right, there is little to opinions. But let me say this one more thing: I have not doubted in you for a single moment. I have not doubted for a single moment that you are Buddha, that you have reached the goal, the highest goal towards which so many thousands of Brahmins and sons of Brahmins are on their way. You have found salvation from death. It has come to you in the course of your own search, on your own path, through thoughts, through meditation, through realizations, through enlightenment. It has not come to you by means of teachings! And—thus is my thought, O exalted one—nobody will obtain salvation by means of teachings! You will not be able to convey and say to anybody, O venerable one, in words and through teachings what has happened to you in the hour of enlightenment! The teachings of the enlightened Buddha contain much, it teaches many to live righteously, to avoid evil. But there is one thing which these so clear, these so venerable teachings do not contain: they do not contain the mystery of what the exalted one has experienced for himself, he alone among hundreds of thousands. This is what I have thought and realized, when I have heard the teachings. This is why I am continuing my travels—not to seek other, better teachings, for I know there are none, but to depart from all teachings and all teachers and to reach my goal by myself or to die. But often, I'll think of this day, O exalted one, and of this hour, when my eyes beheld a holy man." (Gotama, paragraph 37)

I saw a man, Siddhartha thought, a single man, before whom I would have to lower my glance. I do not want to lower my glance before any other, not before any other. No teachings will entice me any more, since this man's teachings have not enticed me. (Gotama, paragraph 45)

Slowly walking along, Siddhartha pondered. He realized that he was no youth any more, but had turned into a man. He realized that one thing had left him, as a snake is left by its old skin, that one thing no longer existed in him, which had accompanied him throughout his youth and used to be a part of him: the wish to have teachers and to listen to teachings. He had also left the last teacher who had appeared on his path, even him, the highest and wisest teacher, the most holy one, Buddha, he had left him, had to part with him, was not able to accept his teachings. (Awakening, paragraph 2)

He looked around, as if he was seeing the world for the first time. Beautiful was the world, colourful was the world, strange and mysterious was the world! Here was blue, here was yellow, here was green, the sky and the river flowed, the forest and the mountains were rigid, all of it was beautiful, all of it was mysterious and magical, and in its midst was he, Siddhartha, the awakening one, on the path to himself. All of this, all this yellow and blue, river and forest, entered Siddhartha for the first time through the eyes, was no longer a spell of Mara, was no longer the veil of Maya, was no longer a pointless and coincidental diversity of mere appearances, despicable to the deeply thinking Brahmin, who scorns diversity, who seeks unity. Blue was blue, river was river, and if also in the blue and the river, in Siddhartha, the singular and divine lived hidden, so it was still that very divinity's way and purpose, to be here yellow, here blue, there sky, there forest, and here Siddhartha. The purpose and the essential properties were not somewhere behind the things, they were in them, in everything. (Awakening, paragraph 7)

Motionless, Siddhartha remained standing there, and for the time of one moment and breath, his heart felt cold, he felt a cold in his chest, as a small animal, a bird or a rabbit, would when seeing how alone he was. For many years, he had been without home and had felt nothing. Now, he felt it. Still, even in the deepest meditation, he had been his father's son, had been a Brahmin, of a high caste, a cleric. Now, he was nothing but Siddhartha, the awoken one, nothing else was left. Deeply, he inhaled, and for a moment, he felt cold and shivered. Nobody was thus alone as he was. There was no nobleman who did not belong to the noblemen, no worker that did not belong to the workers, and found refuge with them, shared their life, spoke their language. No Brahmin who would not be regarded as Brahmins and lived with them, no ascetic who would not find his refuge in the caste of the Samanas, and even the most forlorn hermit in the forest was not just one and alone, he was also surrounded by a place he belonged to, he also belonged to a caste, in which he was at home. Govinda had become a monk, and a thousand monks were his brothers, wore the same robe as he, believed in his faith, spoke his language. But he, Siddhartha, where did he belong to? With whom would he share his life? Whose language would he speak? (Awakening, paragraph 11)

Out of this moment, when the world melted away all around him, when he stood alone like a star in the sky, out of this moment of a cold and despair, Siddhartha emerged, more a self than before, more firmly concentrated. He felt: This had been the last tremor of the awakening, the last struggle of this birth. And it was not long until he walked again in long strides, started to proceed swiftly and impatiently, heading no longer for home, no longer to his father, no longer back. (Awakening, paragraph 12)

On the way, Siddhartha also remembered everything he had experienced in the Garden Jetavana, the teaching he had heard there, the divine Buddha, the farewell from Govinda, the conversation with the exalted one. Again he remembered his own words, he had spoken to the exalted one, every word, and with astonishment he became aware of the fact that there he had said things which he had not really known yet at this time. What he had said to Gotama: his, the Buddha's, treasure and secret was not the teachings, but the unexpressable and not teachable, which he had experienced in the hour of his enlightenment—it was nothing but this very thing which he had now gone to experience, what he now began to experience. Now, he had to experience his self. It is true that he had already known for a long time that his self was Atman, in its essence bearing the same eternal characteristics as Brahman. But he had never really found this self, because he had wanted to capture it in the net of thought. With the body definitely not being the self, and not the spectacle of the senses, so it also was not the thought, not the rational mind, not the learned wisdom, not the learned ability to draw conclusions and to develop previous thoughts in to new ones. No, this world of thought was also still on this side, and nothing could be achieved by killing the random self of the senses, if the random self of thoughts and learned knowledge was fattened on the other hand. Both, the thoughts as well as the senses, were pretty things, the ultimate meaning was hidden behind both of them, both had to be listened to, both had to be played with, both neither had to be scorned nor overestimated, from both the secret voices of the innermost truth had to be attentively perceived. He wanted to strive for nothing, except for what the voice commanded him to strive for, dwell on nothing, except where the voice would advise him to do so. Why had Gotama, at that time, in the hour of all hours, sat down under the bo tree, where the enlightenment hit him? He had heard a voice, a voice in his own heart, which had commanded him to seek rest under this tree, and he had neither preferred self-castigation, offerings, ablutions, nor prayer, neither food nor drink, neither sleep nor dream, he had obeyed the voice. To obey like this, not to an external command, only to the voice, to be ready like this, this was good, this was necessary, nothing else was necessary. (Kamala, paragraph 3)

Smiling, they parted. Smiling, Siddhartha was happy about the friendship and the kindness of the ferryman. "He is like Govinda," he thought with a smile, "all I meet on my path are like Govinda. All are thankful, though they are the ones who would have a right to receive thanks. All are submissive, all would like to be friends, like to obey, think little. Like children are all people." (Kamala, paragraph 12)

"No, Samana, I am not afraid of that. Did any Samana or Brahmin ever fear that someone might come and grab him and steal his learning, and his religious devotion, and his depth of thought? No, for they are his very own, and he would only give away from those whatever he is willing to give and to whomever he is willing to give. Like this it is, precisely like this it is also with Kamala and with the pleasures of love. Beautiful and red is Kamala's mouth, but just try to kiss it against Kamala's will, and you will not obtain a single drop of sweetness from it, which knows how to give so many sweet things! You are learning easily, Siddhartha, thus you should also learn this: love can be obtained by begging, buying, receiving it as a gift, finding it in the street, but it cannot be stolen. In this, you have come up with the wrong path. No, it would be a pity, if a pretty young man like you would want to tackle it in such a wrong manner." (Kamala, paragraph 37)

"I can think. I can wait. I can fast." (Kamala, paragraph 42)

"Very beautiful are your verses," exclaimed Kamala, "if I was rich, I would give you pieces of gold for them. But it will be difficult for you to earn thus much money with verses as you need. For you need a lot of money, if you want to be Kamala's friend." (Kamala, paragraph 50)

He had already discovered Kamala's house in the city long before, there he turned up the following day. (Kamala, paragraph 63)

Kamala listened to him. She loved his voice, she loved the look from his eyes. (Kamala, paragraph 72)

Siddhartha went to Kamaswami the merchant, he was directed into a rich house, servants led him between precious carpets into a chamber, where he awaited the master of the house. (With the Childlike People, paragraph 1)

Kamaswami entered, a swiftly, smoothly moving man with very gray hair, with very intelligent, cautious eyes, with a greedy mouth. Politely, the host and the guest greeted one another. (With the Childlike People, paragraph 2)

"I have been told," the merchant began, "that you were a Brahmin, a learned man, but that you seek to be in the service of a merchant. Might you have become destitute, Brahmin, so that you seek to serve?" (With the Childlike People, paragraph 3)

"No," said Siddhartha, "I have not become destitute and have never been destitute. You should know that I'm coming from the Samanas, with whom I have lived for a long time." (With the Childlike People, paragraph 4)

"If you're coming from the Samanas, how could you be anything but destitute? Aren't the Samanas entirely without possessions?" (With the Childlike People, paragraph 5)

"I am without possessions," said Siddhartha, "if this is what you mean. Surely, I am without possessions. But I am so voluntarily, and therefore I am not destitute." (With the Childlike People, paragraph 6)

"I haven't thought of this yet, sir. For more than three years, I have been without possessions, and have never thought about what I should live off of." (With the Childlike People, paragraph 8)

"Well said. But he wouldn't take anything from another person for nothing; he would give his merchandise in return." (With the Childlike People, paragraph 11)

"So it seems to be indeed. Everyone takes, everyone gives, such is life." (With the Childlike People, paragraph 12)

"Everyone gives what he has. The warrior gives strength, the merchant gives merchandise, the teacher teachings, the farmer rice, the fisher fish." (With the Childlike People, paragraph 14)

"Yes indeed. And what is it now what you've got to give? What is it that you've learned, what you're able to do?" (With the Childlike People, paragraph 15)

"It is very good, sir. When a person has nothing to eat, fasting is the smartest thing he could do. When, for example, Siddhartha hadn't learned to fast, he would have to accept any kind of service before that day is up, whether it may be with you or wherever, because hunger would force him to do so. But like this, Siddhartha can wait calmly, he knows no impatience, he knows no emergency, for a long time he can allow hunger to besiege him and can laugh about it. This, sir, is what fasting is good for." (With the Childlike People, paragraph 20)

"You're right, Samana. Wait for a moment." (With the Childlike People, paragraph 21)

Siddhartha looked at the scroll, on which a sales contract had been written down, and began to read out its contents. (With the Childlike People, paragraph 23)

"Excellent," said Kamaswami. "And would you write something for me on this piece of paper?" (With the Childlike People, paragraph 24)

He handed him a piece of paper and a pen, and Siddhartha wrote and returned the paper. (With the Childlike People, paragraph 25)

Kamaswami read: "Writing is good, thinking is better. Being smart is good, being patient is better." (With the Childlike People, paragraph 26)

"It is excellent how you're able to write," the merchant praised him. "Many a thing we will still have to discuss with one another. For today, I'm asking you to be my guest and to live in this house." (With the Childlike People, paragraph 27)

Siddhartha thanked him and accepted, and lived in the dealer's house from then on. Clothes were brought to him, and shoes, and every day a servant prepared a bath for him. Twice a day, a plentiful meal was served, but Siddhartha only ate once a day, and ate neither meat nor did he drink wine. Kamaswami told him about his trade, showed him the merchandise and storage rooms, showed him calculations. Siddhartha got to know many new things, he heard a lot and spoke little. And thinking of Kamala's words, he was never subservient to the merchant, forced him to treat him as an equal, yes even more than an equal. Kamaswami conducted his business with care and often with passion, but Siddhartha looked upon all of this as if it was a game, the rules of which he tried hard to learn precisely, but the contents of which did not touch his heart. (With the Childlike People, paragraph 28)

He was not in Kamaswami's house for long, when he already took part in his landlord's business. But daily, at the hour appointed by her, he visited beautiful Kamala, wearing pretty clothes, fine shoes, and soon he brought her gifts as well. Much he learned from her red, smart mouth. Much he learned from her tender, supple hand. Him, who was, regarding love, still a boy and had a tendency to plunge blindly and insatiably into lust like into a bottomless pit, him she taught, thoroughly starting with the basics, about that school of thought which teaches that pleasure cannot be taken without giving pleasure, and that every gesture, every caress, every touch, every look, every spot of the body, however small it was, had its secret, which would bring happiness to those who know about it and unleash it. She taught him that lovers must not part from one another after celebrating love, without one admiring the other, without being just as defeated as they have been victorious, so that with none of them should start feeling fed up or bored and get that evil feeling of having abused or having been abused. Wonderful hours he spent with the beautiful and smart artist, became her student, her lover, her friend. Here with Kamala was the worth and purpose of his present life, not with the business of Kamaswami. (With the Childlike People, paragraph 29)

The merchant passed to duties of writing important letters and contracts on to him and got into the habit of discussing all important affairs with him. He soon saw that Siddhartha knew little about rice and wool, shipping and trade, but that he acted in a fortunate manner, and that Siddhartha surpassed him, the merchant, in calmness and equanimity, and in the art of listening and deeply understanding previously unknown people. "This Brahmin," he said to a friend, "is no proper merchant and will never be one, there is never any passion in his soul when he conducts our business. But he has that mysterious quality of those people to whom success comes all by itself, whether this may be a good star of his birth, magic, or something he has learned among Samanas. He always seems to be merely playing with our business affairs, they never fully become a part of him, they never rule over him, he is never afraid of failure, he is never upset by a loss." (With the Childlike People, paragraph 30)

Kamaswami followed the advice. But Siddhartha cared little about this. When he made a profit, he accepted it with equanimity; when he made losses, he laughed and said: "Well, look at this, so this one turned out badly!" (With the Childlike People, paragraph 32)

It seemed indeed, as if he did not care about the business. At one time, he travelled to a village to buy a large harvest of rice there. But when he got there, the rice had already been sold to another merchant. Nevertheless, Siddhartha stayed for several days in that village, treated the farmers for a drink, gave copper-coins to their children, joined in the celebration of a wedding, and returned extremely satisfied from his trip. Kamaswami held against him that he had not turned back right away, that he had wasted time and money. Siddhartha answered: "Stop scolding, dear friend! Nothing was ever achieved by scolding. If a loss has occurred, let me bear that loss. I am very satisfied with this trip. I have gotten to know many kinds of people, a Brahmin has become my friend, children have sat on my knees, farmers have shown me their fields, nobody knew that I was a merchant." (With the Childlike People, paragraph 33)

"That's all very nice," exclaimed Kamaswami indignantly, "but in fact, you are a merchant after all, one ought to think! Or might you have only travelled for your amusement?" (With the Childlike People, paragraph 34)

"Surely," Siddhartha laughed, "surely I have travelled for my amusement. For what else? I have gotten to know people and places, I have received kindness and trust, I have found friendship. Look, my dear, if I had been Kamaswami, I would have travelled back, being annoyed and in a hurry, as soon as I had seen that my purchase had been rendered impossible, and time and money would indeed have been lost. But like this, I've had a few good days, I've learned, had joy, I've neither harmed myself nor others by annoyance and hastiness. And if I'll ever return there again, perhaps to buy an upcoming harvest, or for whatever purpose it might be, friendly people will receive me in a friendly and happy manner, and I will praise myself for not showing any hurry and displeasure at that time. So, leave it as it is, my friend, and don't harm yourself by scolding! If the day will come, when you will see: this Siddhartha is harming me, then speak a word and Siddhartha will go on his own path. But until then, let's be satisfied with one another." (With the Childlike People, paragraph 35)

Futile were also the merchant's attempts to convince Siddhartha that he should eat his bread. Siddhartha ate his own bread, or rather they both ate other people's bread, all people's bread. Siddhartha never listened to Kamaswami's worries and Kamaswami had many worries. Whether there was a business deal going on which was in danger of failing, or whether a shipment of merchandise seemed to have been lost, or a debtor seemed to be unable to pay, Kamaswami could never convince his partner that it would be useful to utter a few words of worry or anger, to have wrinkles on the forehead, to sleep badly. When, one day, Kamaswami held against him that he had learned everything he knew from him, he replied: "Would you please not kid me with such jokes! What I've learned from you is how much a basket of fish costs and how much interests may be charged on loaned money. These are your areas of expertise. I haven't learned to think from you, my dear Kamaswami, you ought to be the one seeking to learn from me." (With the Childlike People, paragraph 36)

Indeed his soul was not with the trade. The business was good enough to provide him with the money for Kamala, and it earned him much more than he needed. Besides from this, Siddhartha's interest and curiosity was only concerned with the people, whose businesses, crafts, worries, pleasures, and acts of foolishness used to be as alien and distant to him as the moon. However easily he succeeded in talking to all of them, in living with all of them, in learning from all of them, he was still aware that there was something which separated him from them and this separating factor was him being a Samana. He saw mankind going through life in a childlike or animallike manner, which he loved and also despised at the same time. He saw them toiling, saw them suffering, and becoming gray for the sake of things which seemed to him to entirely unworthy of this price, for money, for little pleasures, for being slightly honoured, he saw them scolding and insulting each other, he saw them complaining about pain at which a Samana would only smile, and suffering because of deprivations which a Samana would not feel. (With the Childlike People, paragraph 37)

He was open to everything, these people brought his way. Welcome was the merchant who offered him linen for sale, welcome was the debtor who sought another loan, welcome was the beggar who told him for one hour the story of his poverty and who was not half as poor as any given Samana. He did not treat the rich foreign merchant any different than the servant who shaved him and the street-vendor whom he let cheat him out of some small change when buying bananas. When Kamaswami came to him, to complain about his worries or to reproach him concerning his business, he listened curiously and happily, was puzzled by him, tried to understand him, consented that he was a little bit right, only as much as he considered indispensable, and turned away from him, towards the next person who would ask for him. And there were many who came to him, many to do business with him, many to cheat him, many to draw some secret out of him, many to appeal to his sympathy, many to get his advice. He gave advice, he pitied, he made gifts, he let them cheat him a bit, and this entire game and the passion with which all people played this game occupied his thoughts just as much as the gods and Brahmins used to occupy them. (With the Childlike People, paragraph 38)

At times he felt, deep in his chest, a dying, quiet voice, which admonished him quietly, lamented quietly; he hardly perceived it. And then, for an hour, he became aware of the strange life he was leading, of him doing lots of things which were only a game, of, though being happy and feeling joy at times, real life still passing him by and not touching him. As a ballplayer plays with his balls, he played with his business deals, with the people around him, watched them, found amusement in them; with his heart, with the source of his being, he was not with them. The source ran somewhere, far away from him, ran and ran invisibly, had nothing to do with his life any more. And at several times he suddenly became scared on account of such thoughts and wished that he would also be gifted with the ability to participate in all of this childlike-naive occupations of the daytime with passion and with his heart, really to live, really to act, really to enjoy and to live instead of just standing by as a spectator. But again and again, he came back to beautiful Kamala, learned the art of love, practised the cult of lust, in which more than in anything else giving and taking becomes one, chatted with her, learned from her, gave her advice, received advice. She understood him better than Govinda used to understand him, she was more similar to him. (With the Childlike People, paragraph 39)

Once, he said to her: "You are like me, you are different from most people. You are Kamala, nothing else, and inside of you, there is a peace and refuge, to which you can go at every hour of the day and be at home at yourself, as I can also do. Few people have this, and yet all could have it." (With the Childlike People, paragraph 40)

"Not all people are smart," said Kamala. (With the Childlike People, paragraph 41)

"No," said Siddhartha, "that's not the reason why. Kamaswami is just as smart as I, and still has no refuge in himself. Others have it, who are small children with respect to their mind. Most people, Kamala, are like a falling leaf, which is blown and is turning around through the air, and wavers, and tumbles to the ground. But others, a few, are like stars, they go on a fixed course, no wind reaches them, in themselves they have their law and their course. Among all the learned men and Samanas, of which I knew many, there was one of this kind, a perfected one, I'll never be able to forget him. It is that Gotama, the exalted one, who is spreading that teachings. Thousands of followers are listening to his teachings every day, follow his instructions every hour, but they are all falling leaves, not in themselves they have teachings and a law." (With the Childlike People, paragraph 42)

Kamala looked at him with a smile. "Again, you're talking about him," she said, "again, you're having a Samana's thoughts." (With the Childlike People, paragraph 43)

Siddhartha said nothing, and they played the game of love, one of the thirty or forty different games Kamala knew. Her body was flexible like that of a jaguar and like the bow of a hunter; he who had learned from her how to make love, was knowledgeable of many forms of lust, many secrets. For a long time she played with Siddhartha, enticed him, rejected him, forced him, embraced him: enjoyed his masterful skills, until he was defeated and rested exhausted by her side. (With the Childlike People, paragraph 44)

The courtesan bent over him, took a long look at his face, at his eyes, which had grown tired. (With the Childlike People, paragraph 45)

"It might very well be so," Siddhartha said tiredly. "I am like you. You also do not love—how else could you practise love as a craft? Perhaps people of our kind can't love. The childlike people can; that's their secret." (With the Childlike People, paragraph 47)

Vocabulary with etymology notes

Word	Definition (in this sentence)	In context	Word history
hastiness (noun)	acting too quickly	But like this, I've had a few good days, I've learned, had joy, I've neither harmed myself nor others by annoyance and hastiness.
admonished (verb)	warned or scolded gently	At times he felt, deep in his chest, a dying, quiet voice, which admonished him quietly, lamented quietly; he hardly perceived it.
carpets (noun)	thick woven floor coverings	Siddhartha went to Kamaswami the merchant, he was directed into a rich house, servants led him between precious carpets into a chamber, where he awaited the master of the house.
calmness (noun)	steadiness of mind under stress	He soon saw that Siddhartha knew little about rice and wool, shipping and trade, but that he acted in a fortunate manner, and that Siddhartha surpassed him, the merchant, in calmness and equanimity, and in the art of listening and deeply understanding previously unknown people.

Discussion questions

1. Siddhartha calls others 'childlike.' Is he being wise or arrogant?
2. Where does characterization appear in this chapter, and what effect does it have? Point to one passage.
3. How does this chapter connect to the book's larger concern with the search for self-knowledge?

Tiered discussion questions (30: recall, inferential, evaluative)

Wait time after every question (3 s for DOK 1, 5 s for DOK 2, 8 to 10 s for DOK 3 and 4); think-pair-share on DOK 3 and 4; answer each response with a follow-up probe; close with student-generated questions. Focus sets by rigor level: HS Sophomore:

1, 2, 3, 4, 13, 14, 15, 16, 17, 23, 24, 25; HS Junior: 1, 2, 3, 14, 15, 16, 17, 18, 24, 25, 26, 27; HS Senior: 1, 2, 3, 15, 16, 17, 18, 25, 26, 27, 28, 29; AP: 1, 2, 16, 17, 18, 19, 20, 26, 27, 28, 29, 30; College Freshman: 1, 2, 17, 18, 19, 20, 21, 22, 27, 28, 29, 30; College Sophomore: 1, 2, 11, 18, 19, 20, 21, 22, 23, 28, 29, 30; College Junior: 1, 11, 12, 19, 20, 21, 22, 23, 24, 25, 29, 30; College Senior: 1, 11, 12, 13, 20, 21, 22, 23, 24, 25, 26, 30; Graduate / PhD: 1, 11, 12, 13, 21, 22, 23, 24, 25, 26, 27, 28

Literal / recall

1. What does Siddhartha tell Kamaswami about how he has lived for the past three years? [DOK 1 · Cold call with support: call on a student by name, offering a sentence starter or rephrasing if needed · wait 3 s · Dual Credit (Indiana College Core): ICC-WC-1.1, ICC-WC-1.3, ICC-WC-1.4, ICC-WC-1.5] Look for: Without possessions, never thinking about what to live off

   Answer guidance: "For more than three years, I have been without possessions, and have never thought about what I should live off of." (With the Childlike People, paragraph 8)
2. What does he call ordinary people? [DOK 1 · Turn and Talk: students discuss briefly with a neighbor before answering · wait 3 s · Dual Credit (Indiana College Core): ICC-WC-1.1, ICC-WC-1.3, ICC-WC-1.4, ICC-WC-1.5] Look for: The childlike people

   Answer guidance: Childlike, or like children and animals: "He saw mankind going through life in a childlike or animallike manner, which he loved and also despised at the same time." (With the Childlike People, paragraph 37)
3. How does Kamaswami feel about Siddhartha's attitude? [DOK 1 · Cold call with support: call on a student by name, offering a sentence starter or rephrasing if needed · wait 3 s · Dual Credit (Indiana College Core): ICC-WC-1.1, ICC-WC-1.3, ICC-WC-1.4, ICC-WC-1.5] Look for: Irritated but impressed by results

   Answer guidance: Irritated by his carelessness but glad of the results. Kamaswami scolds him for travelling for pleasure ("exclaimed Kamaswami indignantly" (With the Childlike People, paragraph 34)), yet he follows a friend's advice to give him a third of the profits (paragraphs 31–32).
4. When Siddhartha says that few people have an inner refuge, what reason does Kamala give? [DOK 1 · Turn and Talk: students discuss briefly with a neighbor before answering · wait 3 s · Dual Credit (Indiana College Core): ICC-WC-1.1, ICC-WC-1.3, ICC-WC-1.4, ICC-WC-1.5] Look for: "Not all people are smart" (With the Childlike People, paragraph 41)

   Answer guidance: She says, "Not all people are smart" (With the Childlike People, paragraph 41). Siddhartha answers that cleverness is not the reason: Kamaswami is as smart as he is and still has no refuge in himself (paragraph 42).
5. How does Siddhartha respond to Kamaswami's business worries? [DOK 1 · Cold call with support: call on a student by name, offering a sentence starter or rephrasing if needed · wait 3 s · Dual Credit (Indiana College Core): ICC-WC-1.1, ICC-WC-1.3, ICC-WC-1.4, ICC-WC-1.5] Look for: He never listens to them or shares them

   Answer guidance: "Siddhartha never listened to Kamaswami's worries and Kamaswami had many worries" (With the Childlike People, paragraph 36); he will not frown or lose sleep over a deal.
6. Retell the three most important events of "With the Childlike People" in order, in one sentence each. [DOK 1 · Turn and Talk: students discuss briefly with a neighbor before answering · wait 3 s · Dual Credit (Indiana College Core): ICC-WC-1.1, ICC-WC-1.3, ICC-WC-1.4, ICC-WC-1.5] Look for: Siddhartha works for Kamaswami but treats business as a game, caring little for profit, which irritates the merchant yet makes Siddhartha successful. He watches ordinary people—the 'childlike people'—with amusement as they suffer over money and desire. Kamala teaches him the art of love, and they agree that neither of them can truly love.

   Answer guidance: Siddhartha impresses Kamaswami and joins his business (With the Childlike People, paragraphs 1–28); he treats trade as a game while learning love from Kamala (paragraphs 29–38); he hears a fading inner voice and admits to Kamala that neither of them can love (paragraphs 39–47).

7. Which characters appear or are mentioned in "With the Childlike People"? Name two and one thing each says or does. [DOK 1 · Cold call with support: call on a student by name, offering a sentence starter or rephrasing if needed · wait 3 s · Dual Credit (Indiana College Core): ICC-WC-1.1, ICC-WC-1.3, ICC-WC-1.4, ICC-WC-1.5] Look for: Names and actions taken from the chapter; check against the teacher summary.
   Answer guidance: Two of: Kamaswami, who tests him with a contract and paper (paragraphs 22–26); Kamala, who teaches him love and says he loves nobody (paragraph 46); the friend who advises the merchant (paragraph 31).
8. Where and when does "With the Childlike People" take place? Point to the line that tells you. [DOK 1 · Turn and Talk: students discuss briefly with a neighbor before answering · wait 3 s · Dual Credit (Indiana College Core): ICC-WC-1.1, ICC-WC-1.3, ICC-WC-1.4, ICC-WC-1.5] Look for: A place/time detail quoted from the chapter.
   Answer guidance: In the city, in Kamaswami's house and Kamala's grove, over months or years of a new life. "Siddhartha thanked him and accepted, and lived in the dealer's house from then on." (With the Childlike People, paragraph 28)
9. Reread: "These are your areas of expertise." What does "expertise" mean here, and what is literally happening in this line? [DOK 1 · Turn and Talk: students discuss briefly with a neighbor before answering · wait 3 s · Dual Credit (Indiana College Core): ICC-WC-1.1, ICC-WC-1.3, ICC-WC-1.4, ICC-WC-1.5] Look for: expertise: special skill or knowledge.
   Answer guidance: "Expertise" here means: special skill or knowledge. In With the Childlike People, paragraph 36, Siddhartha tells Kamaswami that prices of fish and interest on loans are the merchant's own fields of knowledge.
10. Reread: "But daily, at the hour appointed by her, he visited beautiful Kamala, wearing pretty clothes, fine shoes, and soon he brought her gifts as well." What does "appointed" mean here, and what is literally happening in this line? [DOK 1 · Turn and Talk: students discuss briefly with a neighbor before answering · wait 3 s · Dual Credit (Indiana College Core): ICC-WC-1.1, ICC-WC-1.3, ICC-WC-1.4, ICC-WC-1.5] Look for: appointed: fixed or set in advance.
    Answer guidance: "Appointed" here means: fixed or set in advance. In With the Childlike People, paragraph 29, every day Siddhartha visits Kamala at the time she has chosen, now dressed well and bringing gifts.

Inferential / analytical

1. What does "With the Childlike People" suggest about detachment among the childlike people? State the inference and the line that supports it. [DOK 2 · Think-Pair-Share: students think alone, discuss with a partner, then share with the class · wait 5 s · Dual Credit (Indiana College Core): ICC-WC-1.1, ICC-WC-1.3, ICC-WC-1.4, ICC-WC-1.5] Look for: A stated inference (for example, that his detachment keeps him from being hurt but also from living) backed by one located line, such as the one in With the Childlike People, paragraph 37.
   Answer guidance: The chapter suggests that his detachment keeps him from being hurt but also from living. Support: "Indeed his soul was not with the trade." (With the Childlike People, paragraph 37)
2. Find one example of characterization in this chapter. What does it reveal that a plain statement would not? [DOK 2 · Follow-up: ask a probing question that builds on the previous answer · wait 5 s · Dual Credit (Indiana College Core): ICC-WC-1.1, ICC-WC-1.3, ICC-WC-1.4, ICC-WC-1.5] Look for: Look for what characters say, do and think, and how others react to them.

Answer guidance: Kamaswami's first appearance ("a swiftly, smoothly moving man with very gray hair, with very intelligent, cautious eyes" (With the Childlike People, paragraph 2)) shows a careful man ruled by worry, the opposite of Siddhartha's calm.

3. How does the irony in this chapter shape what we understand about detachment among the childlike people? [DOK 3 · Think-Pair-Share: students think alone, discuss with a partner, then share with the class · wait 8 s · Dual Credit (Indiana College Core): ICC-WC-1.1, ICC-WC-1.3, ICC-WC-1.4, ICC-WC-1.5] Look for: Look for gaps between what characters expect or say and what is true.

   Answer guidance: The irony is that the man who despises the childlike people begins to want what they have: "wished that he would also be gifted with the ability to participate in all of this childlike-naive occupations of the day" (With the Childlike People, paragraph 39). His detachment is becoming a lack.

4. In the passage that begins "Siddhartha went to Kamaswami the merchant, he was directed into a rich house, servants led him between precious carpets into a chamber, where he awaited the master of the house.", why might Hesse have chosen these particular words? Pick two and explain their connotations. [DOK 2 · Follow-up: ask a probing question that builds on the previous answer · wait 5 s · Dual Credit (Indiana College Core): ICC-WC-1.1, ICC-WC-1.3, ICC-WC-1.4, ICC-WC-1.5] Look for: Diction analysis of two words in the anchor passage.

   Answer guidance: In With the Childlike People, paragraph 1, words of wealth ("rich house," "precious" things) build the merchant's world before the man appears; Siddhartha enters it as a guest, not a convert.

5. What causes the main turn in "With the Childlike People", and what effect is it likely to have on what follows? [DOK 2 · Follow-up: ask a probing question that builds on the previous answer · wait 5 s · Dual Credit (Indiana College Core): ICC-WC-1.1, ICC-WC-1.3, ICC-WC-1.4, ICC-WC-1.5] Look for: Siddhartha works for Kamaswami but treats business as a game, caring little for profit, which irritates the merchant yet makes Siddhartha successful. He watches ordinary people—the 'childlike people'—with amusement as they suffer over money and desire. Kamala teaches him the art of love, and they…

   Answer guidance: The turn is the voice he can barely hear (With the Childlike People, paragraph 39): it marks the start of his worry that real life is passing him by. Effect: the next chapter shows that unease growing.

6. How does "With the Childlike People" build on "Kamala"? Name one link of cause and effect. [DOK 3 · Think-Pair-Share: students think alone, discuss with a partner, then share with the class · wait 8 s · Dual Credit (Indiana College Core): ICC-WC-1.1, ICC-WC-1.3, ICC-WC-1.4, ICC-WC-1.5] Look for: A causal or structural link between this and the previous chapter.

   Answer guidance: Cause and effect: Kamala sent him to Kamaswami at the end of "Kamala" (paragraph 65 there), and here the same three skills (paragraph 16) win him his place.

7. What can we infer about a character's motives from what they say and do here, as opposed to what they claim? [DOK 3 · Follow-up: ask a probing question that builds on the previous answer · wait 8 s · Dual Credit (Indiana College Core): ICC-WC-1.1, ICC-WC-1.3, ICC-WC-1.4, ICC-WC-1.5] Look for: An inference about motive supported by a quoted line.

   Answer guidance: Siddhartha claims trade is only a game, but he keeps doing it for the money it brings Kamala ("The business was good enough to provide him with the money for Kamala" (With the Childlike People, paragraph 37)); Kamaswami claims to value the business, but he values Siddhartha's calm too (paragraph 31).

8. The bell-ringer asked: "Siddhartha calls others 'childlike.' Is he being wise or arrogant?" Now that we have read closely, how would you revise your first answer, and which line changed your mind? [DOK 2 · Think-

Pair-Share: students think alone, discuss with a partner, then share with the class · wait 5 s · Dual Credit (Indiana College Core): ICC-WC-1.1, ICC-WC-1.3, ICC-WC-1.4, ICC-WC-1.5] Look for: A revised answer anchored in the text.

Answer guidance: A revised answer should weigh both: he sees real weakness in others (With the Childlike People, paragraph 42, Kamaswami "has no refuge in himself"), but the chapter shows him envying them (paragraph 39), so arrogance is part of it.

9. Where does theme appear, and how does it connect this chapter to the larger concern with the search for self-knowledge? [DOK 3 · Follow-up: ask a probing question that builds on the previous answer · wait 8 s · Dual Credit (Indiana College Core): ICC-WC-1.1, ICC-WC-1.3, ICC-WC-1.4, ICC-WC-1.5] Look for: Look for statements or moments that connect to the book's big ideas.

   Answer guidance: The theme of the self appears in his talk with Kamala about the refuge inside a person ("Kamaswami is just as smart as I, and still has no refuge in himself." (With the Childlike People, paragraph 42)); the chapter tests whether that inner refuge survives the city.

10. Background: Hesse contrasts spiritual detachment with worldly attachment, echoing Buddhist teaching on desire. How does knowing this change the way you read one moment in the chapter? [DOK 3 · Think-Pair-Share: students think alone, discuss with a partner, then share with the class · wait 8 s · Dual Credit (Indiana College Core): ICC-WC-1.1, ICC-WC-1.3, ICC-WC-1.4, ICC-WC-1.5] Look for: A specific moment reread in light of the context.

    Answer guidance: Knowing the Buddhist contrast between detachment and attachment shows that his detachment is not the peaceful kind: he is detached from people, not from desire, as paragraph 37 shows.

Evaluative / synthesis / creative

1. A critic might argue: "Siddhartha's superiority is ironic: he is beginning to become what he looks down on." How far do you agree? Take a stand and defend it with two lines from the chapter. [DOK 3 · Four Corners: students move to the corner that matches their position and explain why · wait 8 s · ICC-WC-1.5] Look for: A defended position with evidence and one counterpoint.

   Answer guidance: Agree: he despises the childlike people (With the Childlike People, paragraph 37) yet wishes to share their passion (paragraph 39). Counterpoint from the text: he still has the inner refuge Kamaswami lacks (paragraph 42), so he is not yet one of them.

2. Which character in this chapter acts most wisely, and which least? Judge them by a standard you name. [DOK 3 · Think-Pair-Share: students think alone, discuss with a partner, then share with the class · wait 8 s · ICC-WC-1.5] Look for: An evaluation using an explicit criterion and evidence.

   Answer guidance: With honesty as the standard, Kamala is wisest: she tells him plainly that he loves nobody (paragraph 46); Kamaswami least when he scolds a profitable trip (paragraph 34). Others may judge Siddhartha's calm the wisest.

3. Rewrite one moment of "With the Childlike People" from the point of view of a different character. What does the new angle reveal or hide about detachment among the childlike people? [DOK 4 · Think-Pair-Share: students think alone, discuss with a partner, then share with the class · wait 8 s · ICC-WC-1.5] Look for: A rewrite that keeps the chapter's events accurate, speaks in the chosen character's voice, and ends with a sentence on what the new angle shows or hides.

   Answer guidance: Kamaswami's view of the rice trip (With the Childlike People, paragraphs 33–35) works well: it shows his frustration and hides the inner emptiness Siddhartha later admits.

4. Write three questions of your own about "With the Childlike People": one recall, one "why/how", and one "should/what if". Trade with a partner and answer theirs. [DOK 3 · Student-generated: students write and pose their own questions · wait 8 s · ICC-WC-1.5] Look for: Three questions at three levels, each answerable from the chapter, traded and answered with a line.

Answer guidance: Example set: recall, 'What does Siddhartha write for Kamaswami?' (paragraph 26); why/how, 'Why doesn't Siddhartha worry about losses?' (paragraph 35); what if, 'Should Siddhartha have stayed a Samana?'

5. Connect this chapter to experience versus teaching: is the link strong or weak so far? What would Hesse need to show next to strengthen it? [DOK 4 · Socratic circle: an inner circle discusses while the outer circle listens and takes notes, then they switch · wait 8 s · ICC-WC-1.5] Look for: A judgment of thematic development across the work.

   Answer guidance: Strong: he now learns by experience (trade and love) instead of teaching, yet paragraph 39 shows experience without care is also empty. Hesse needs to show experience that changes him.

6. Is the characterization in this chapter effective, or does it feel heavy-handed? Evaluate it as a reader would in a review. [DOK 3 · Four Corners: students move to the corner that matches their position and explain why · wait 8 s · ICC-WC-1.5] Look for: An evaluative judgment with criteria and evidence.

   Answer guidance: Effective: Kamaswami and Kamala are shown through dialogue and habits (paragraphs 22–34, 40–47). The narrator's summaries of the childlike people (paragraph 37) can feel heavy.

7. Compare how "With the Childlike People" treats detachment among the childlike people with how another text, film or event you know treats a similar idea. What does Siddhartha see that the other misses? [DOK 4 · Socratic circle: an inner circle discusses while the outer circle listens and takes notes, then they switch · wait 8 s · ICC-WC-1.5] Look for: A cross-text synthesis.

   Answer guidance: A comparison should name a story of someone who succeeds without caring and quote "Indeed his soul was not with the trade." (With the Childlike People, paragraph 37) Siddhartha's case is that detachment wins money and loses life.

8. Predict what "Sansara" will bring, using two clues from this chapter. After reading, evaluate your prediction. [DOK 3 · Think-Pair-Share: students think alone, discuss with a partner, then share with the class · wait 8 s · ICC-WC-1.5] Look for: A prediction or judgment justified with textual clues.

   Answer guidance: Clues: the dying voice (With the Childlike People, paragraph 39) and his words about not loving (paragraph 47). Prediction: he will sink further into the city's life and lose touch with the inner voice.

9. Design a one-paragraph modern adaptation of this chapter (setting, characters, conflict). What must stay the same for it to still be about detachment among the childlike people? [DOK 4 · Think-Pair-Share: students think alone, discuss with a partner, then share with the class · wait 8 s · ICC-WC-1.5] Look for: A modern setting, characters and conflict that keep the chapter's core idea, with the one element that must not change named.

   Answer guidance: A modern version keeps a gifted outsider who succeeds in business and romance while feeling nothing. What must stay is the confession in paragraph 47 that he cannot love.

10. What question would you most like to ask Hermann Hesse about this chapter, and what answer do you think the text itself gives? [DOK 4 · Student-generated: students write and pose their own questions · wait 8 s · ICC-WC-1.5] Look for: A student-generated question answered from evidence.

    Answer guidance: Example: 'Does Siddhartha love Kamala?' The text answers through his own words: no, he practises love as a craft (With the Childlike People, paragraph 47).

Annotation focus

- Characterization: look for what characters say, do and think, and how others react to them (anchor passage in the We do segment)
- Also notice Irony: gaps between what characters expect or say and what is true

- Also notice Theme: statements or moments that connect to the book's big ideas

Chapter quiz: item bank (all eleven rigor versions)

1. [mc · recall · DOK 1] What is ironic about Siddhartha's view of the people of the town?

   A. He is poorer than them

   B. They can love, and he cannot

   C. He was born among them

   D. He does not truly see them at all

   Key: B (They can love, and he cannot)

2. [mc · recall · DOK 1] Siddhartha calls ordinary people childlike. What does that name suggest about how he sees them?

   A. He sees them as lost in games he stands above

   B. He sees them as wiser than he is himself

   C. He sees them as dangerous enemies to be avoided

   D. He sees them as holy innocents to imitate

   Key: A (He sees them as lost in games he stands above)

3. [fill · recall · DOK 1] Complete the quotation from With the Childlike People, paragraph 28: "Kamaswami told him about his trade, showed him the merchandise and storage rooms, showed him _____." Word bank: mercy, pity, calculations, prayers

   Key: calculations

4. [mc · recall · DOK 1] Which word completes this sentence from With the Childlike People, paragraph 6? "I am without _____,' said Siddhartha, 'if this is what you mean."

   A. eyes

   B. possessions

   C. hands

   D. skin

   Key: B (possessions)

5. [fill · recall · DOK 1] Complete the quotation from With the Childlike People, paragraph 20: "When a person has nothing to eat, fasting is the _____ thing he could do." Word bank: smartest, worst, silliest, rudest

   Key: smartest

6. [mc · recall · DOK 1] In the line "He soon saw that Siddhartha knew little about rice and wool, shipping and trade, but that he acted in a fortunate manner, and that Siddhartha surpassed him, the merchant, in calmness and equanimity, and in the art of…", what does "calmness" most nearly mean?

   A. chickens, ducks and similar birds raised for food

   B. a lifetime in a particular body

   C. understandings; realizations

   D. steadiness of mind under stress

   Key: D (steadiness of mind under stress)

7. [fill · recall · DOK 1] Complete the quotation from With the Childlike People, paragraph 42: "Most people, Kamala, are like a _____ leaf, which is blown and is turning around through the air, and wavers, and tumbles to the ground" Word bank: falling, glass, iron, stone

Key: falling

8. [fill · recall · DOK 1] Complete the quotation from With the Childlike People, paragraph 21: "You're right, Samana. Wait for a _____." Word bank: moment, kettle, ladder, pebble

   Key: moment

9. [mc · recall · DOK 1] Where does Siddhartha tell Kamaswami he has come from?

   A. From his father's house
   B. From the Samanas
   C. From Gotama's grove
   D. From the ferryman's hut

   Key: B (From the Samanas)

10. [mc · recall · DOK 1] In the line "Siddhartha went to Kamaswami the merchant, he was directed into a rich house, servants led him between precious carpets into a chamber, where he awaited the master of the house.", what does "carpets" most nearly mean?

    A. thick woven floor coverings
    B. a boat that carries people across water
    C. a person left stranded after a shipwreck
    D. small bags for carrying money or things

    Key: A (thick woven floor coverings)

11. [mc · recall · DOK 1] What does Siddhartha soon start bringing Kamala on his daily visits?

    A. Rice from the village
    B. Gifts
    C. Letters from Kamaswami
    D. Flowers from the forest

    Key: B (Gifts)

12. [mc · inference · DOK 2] Which choice best states a central concern of "With the Childlike People"?

    A. Learning to listen from the flowing river
    B. The teacher and the teaching
    C. Playing at worldly life with no heart
    D. The pain of a father's love

    Key: C (Playing at worldly life with no heart)

13. [short · inference · DOK 2] What can you infer from this line? "But he has that mysterious quality of those people to whom success comes all by itself, whether this may be a good star of his birth, magic, or something he has learned among Samanas." (With the Childlike People, paragraph 30) Answer in two or three sentences with one detail.

    Sample answer: Kamaswami is puzzled by Siddhartha's easy success. The evidence is "But he has that mysterious quality of those people to whom success comes all by itself, whether this may be a good star of his birth, magic, or something he has learned among Samanas." (With the Childlike People, paragraph 30). He can only guess at "magic" or a "good star," which shows he does not see that Siddhartha's calm, learned among the Samanas, is the real cause.

14. [short · inference · DOK 2] How does Siddhartha deal with Kamaswami's worries? Use this line. "Siddhartha never listened to Kamaswami's worries and Kamaswami had many worries." (With the Childlike People, paragraph 36)
    Sample answer: Siddhartha keeps Kamaswami's cares at a distance: "Siddhartha never listened to Kamaswami's worries and Kamaswami had many worries." (With the Childlike People, paragraph 36). The contrast between "never listened" and "many worries" shows that business does not touch his heart; he plays the game without its fears.
15. [short · analysis · DOK 3] Analyze the word choice in "Perhaps people of our kind can't love" (With the Childlike People, paragraph 47). Pick two words and explain what they suggest.
    Sample answer: "Perhaps people of our kind can't love" (With the Childlike People, paragraph 47). "Perhaps" makes the admission tentative, as if he is only now facing it. "Kind" sets him and Kamala apart as a separate type of person, so their detachment is a shared limit rather than a private flaw.
16. [fill · recall · DOK 1] Complete the quotation from With the Childlike People, paragraph 2: "Kamaswami entered, a swiftly, smoothly moving man with very gray _____" Word bank: hair, robes, walls, horses
    Key: hair
17. [mc · recall · DOK 1] What three things does Siddhartha tell Kamaswami he can do?
    A. Think, wait and fast
    B. Sing, dance and pray
    C. Count, trade and sell
    D. Fight, ride and hunt

    Key: A (Think, wait and fast)
18. [fill · recall · DOK 1] Complete the quotation from With the Childlike People, paragraph 47: "You also do not love—how else could you practise love as a _____?" Word bank: prayer, craft, sermon, burden
    Key: craft
19. [mc · recall · DOK 1] Ironically, the courtesan sees through Siddhartha's worldly life. How does Kamala tease him when he speaks of Gotama?
    A. She calls him a merchant
    B. She laughs at Gotama's robe
    C. She says he is having a Samana's thoughts again
    D. She says he should go back to the grove of the Buddha

    Key: C (She says he is having a Samana's thoughts again)
20. [mc · recall · DOK 1] In the line "Might you have become destitute, Brahmin, so that you seek to serve?", what does "destitute" most nearly mean?
    A. lacking money and the things one needs
    B. very proud of one's rank
    C. tired from a long journey
    D. angry at being insulted

    Key: A (lacking money and the things one needs)
21. [mc · recall · DOK 1] What does Kamaswami ask Siddhartha to do at the end of their first meeting?
    A. Leave the city at once
    B. Return in a year
    C. Be his guest and live in his house

D. Teach his children to read and write

Key: C (Be his guest and live in his house)

22. [mc · inference · DOK 2] Kamaswami scolds Siddhartha for wasting time and money in the rice village. What is ironic in Siddhartha's reply?

A. He says he lost more money there than Kamaswami knows

B. He says hurrying home in annoyance would have been the real waste

C. He says he will repay the whole loss twice over

D. He says Kamaswami sent him to the village too late

Key: B (He says hurrying home in annoyance would have been the real waste)

23. [fill · recall · DOK 1] Complete the quotation from With the Childlike People, paragraph 29: "Much he learned from her tender, supple _____." Word bank: purse, garden, hand, scroll

Key: hand

24. [mc · recall · DOK 1] How do the host and the guest greet one another when Siddhartha first meets Kamaswami?

A. Coldly

B. Politely

C. Loudly

D. Fearfully

Key: B (Politely)

25. [mc · recall · DOK 1] In the line "exclaimed Kamaswami indignantly", what does "indignantly" most nearly mean?

A. in a calm and very gentle way

B. in a sleepy way

C. in a shy, quiet way

D. in an angry, offended way

Key: D (in an angry, offended way)

26. [mc · inference · DOK 2] Why does Siddhartha stay in the village after the rice has been sold?

A. He is too tired to travel home

B. He hopes to steal the rice back

C. He values friendship and joy more than profit

D. He is afraid of Kamaswami's anger at the loss

Key: C (He values friendship and joy more than profit)

27. [short · inference · DOK 2] What does Siddhartha mean by his answer to Kamaswami? Use this line. "Everyone gives what he has." (With the Childlike People, paragraph 14)

Sample answer: Siddhartha means that every person trades with whatever skill or goods he has. The evidence is "Everyone gives what he has." (With the Childlike People, paragraph 14). He goes on to name the warrior, the merchant and the farmer, so his own gifts, thinking, waiting and fasting, become one more kind of goods.

28. [short · inference · DOK 2] How does Siddhartha answer Kamaswami's scolding about a lost deal? Use this line. "Nothing was ever achieved by scolding." (With the Childlike People, paragraph 33)

Sample answer: Siddhartha calmly refuses to worry about the loss. The evidence is "Nothing was ever achieved by scolding."

(With the Childlike People, paragraph 33). He treats anger as useless, which shows that he cares more about peace of mind than about money.

29. [mc · analysis · DOK 3] In this chapter, which theme does the following most directly develop? Siddhartha says "Perhaps people of our kind can't love": both are detached, and that is their limit.

    A. The search for self-knowledge

    B. Love and attachment

    C. Experience versus teaching

    D. The unity of all things

    Key: B (Love and attachment)

30. [short · analysis · DOK 3] Explain what Siddhartha says he and Kamala share. "You are Kamala, nothing else, and inside of you, there is a peace and refuge, to which you can go at every hour of the day and be at home at yourself, as I can also do." (With the Childlike People, paragraph 40)

    Sample answer: Siddhartha tells Kamala that they share an inner shelter: "You are Kamala, nothing else, and inside of you, there is a peace and refuge, to which you can go at every hour of the day and be at home at yourself, as I can also do." (With the Childlike People, paragraph 40). The "peace and refuge" is a place inside each of them, so he sees her as his equal in calm, unlike the childlike people around them.

31. [fill · recall · DOK 1] Complete the quotation from With the Childlike People, paragraph 44: "For a long time she played with Siddhartha, _____ him, rejected him, forced him, embraced him:" Word bank: enticed, baked, knitted, sneezed

    Key: enticed

32. [mc · recall · DOK 1] In the line "Futile were also the merchant's attempts to convince Siddhartha that he should eat his bread.", what does "Futile" most nearly mean?

    A. useless; without result

    B. costly; very expensive to make

    C. hidden; kept out of sight

    D. frequent; repeated

    Key: A (useless; without result)

33. [fill · recall · DOK 1] Complete the quotation from With the Childlike People, paragraph 26: "Writing is good, _____ is better. Being smart is good, being patient is better" Word bank: gladly, rarely, thinking, slowly

    Key: thinking

34. [fill · recall · DOK 1] Complete the quotation from With the Childlike People, paragraph 47: "Perhaps people of our kind can't love. The childlike people can; that's their _____" Word bank: secret, house, meal, road

    Key: secret

35. [mc · recall · DOK 1] Which word completes this sentence from With the Childlike People, paragraph 44? "he who had learned from her how to make love, was _____ of many forms of lust, many secrets."

    A. knowledgeable

    B. rusty

    C. muddy

    D. wooden

    Key: A (knowledgeable)

36. [mc · recall · DOK 1] Which word completes this sentence from With the Childlike People, paragraph 33? "treated the farmers for a drink, gave copper-coins to their children, joined in the celebration of a _____"

    A. funeral

    B. wedding

    C. battle

    D. trial

    Key: B (wedding)

37. [fill · recall · DOK 1] Fill in the blank with the vocabulary word that fits: "It is that Gotama, the exalted one, who is _____ that teachings." Word bank: sneezing, spreading, baking, knitting

    Key: spreading

38. [mc · recall · DOK 1] What does Kamaswami tell Siddhartha at the end of their first meeting?

    A. That he must leave by nightfall

    B. That many things are still to be discussed

    C. That he has no work to give

    D. That he should go back to the Samanas

    Key: B (That many things are still to be discussed)

39. [mc · recall · DOK 1] What does Kamaswami hold against Siddhartha after the rice trip?

    A. He stole some of the rice

    B. He insulted the farmers

    C. He wasted time and money

    D. He came back too soon

    Key: C (He wasted time and money)

40. [mc · inference · DOK 2] Siddhartha arrives with nothing yet tells Kamaswami he is "not destitute." What irony does this create?

    A. The rich merchant is secretly poorer than he seems

    B. The penniless Samana feels freer than the rich man

    C. Siddhartha is hiding gold from the merchant

    D. Kamaswami admits that he too has given up his wealth

    Key: B (The penniless Samana feels freer than the rich man)

41. [mc · recall · DOK 1] What does Siddhartha offer to do if Kamaswami ever finds that he is harming him?

    A. Pay back all the money he has earned

    B. Leave and go his own path

    C. Work for a year without pay

    D. Ask Kamala to speak for him

    Key: B (Leave and go his own path)

42. [short · inference · DOK 2] What does Siddhartha say fasting is good for? Use this line. "But like this, Siddhartha can wait calmly, he knows no impatience" (With the Childlike People, paragraph 20)

    Sample answer: Siddhartha says fasting gives him freedom, because hunger cannot force him to accept the first job he finds. The evidence is "But like this, Siddhartha can wait calmly, he knows no impatience" (With the Childlike People, paragraph 20). His Samana skill becomes a kind of power in the world of trade.

43. [mc · analysis · DOK 3] Which literary element does this describe in "With the Childlike People"? His image of people: most drift like leaves blown by the wind, a few 'like stars' with their own course. It reveals his pride.

    A. Alliteration

    B. Theme

    C. Hyperbole

    D. Simile

    Key: D (Simile)

44. [short · synthesis · DOK 4] Close reading: how do the diction and syntax of "Being smart is good, being patient is better" (With the Childlike People, paragraph 26) shape its meaning? Consider a second, competing reading.

    Sample answer: The parallel comparatives give the line the form of a proverb that ranks patience above cleverness: "Being smart is good, being patient is better" (With the Childlike People, paragraph 26). These are his Samana values, now written out for a merchant. A competing reading takes the line as proof that his wisdom wins in the city, since his calm makes him a successful trader. But the same detachment sets his limit, as he admits to Kamala: "Perhaps people of our kind can't love. The childlike people can; that's their secret." (With the Childlike People, paragraph 47). The neat proverb is the voice of a man who stands apart.

45. [short · synthesis · DOK 4] Synthesis: trace how love and attachment develops from Kamala to With the Childlike People. Use one quotation from each.

    Sample answer: Love begins as a skill to be learned and ends as an absence he admits. In Kamala, she tells him that love "cannot be stolen" (Kamala, paragraph 37), so he must earn it like a craft. In With the Childlike People he sees what that craft lacks: "You also do not love—how else could you practise love as a craft?" (With the Childlike People, paragraph 47). What he learned as an art leaves him unable to love.

46. [mc · recall · DOK 1] What does Siddhartha say when a loss has occurred in the business?

    A. The servants must pay for it

    B. Let me bear that loss

    C. Kamaswami should have warned me

    D. The gods have punished us

    Key: B (Let me bear that loss)

47. [fill · recall · DOK 1] Complete the quotation from With the Childlike People, paragraph 11: "But he wouldn't take anything from another person for nothing; he would give his _____ in return." Word bank: merchandise, sandals, rivers, stars

    Key: merchandise

48. [fill · recall · DOK 1] Complete the quotation from With the Childlike People, paragraph 39: "The source ran somewhere, far away from him, ran and ran _____" Word bank: hungrily, invisibly, sleepily, angrily

    Key: invisibly

49. [mc · recall · DOK 1] How does Siddhartha treat business?

    A. As a burden he hates

    B. As a way to help the poor of the city

    C. As sacred work

    D. As a game he does not take seriously

Key: D (As a game he does not take seriously)

50. [mc · recall · DOK 1] Why does Kamaswami assume Siddhartha must be destitute?

    A. He arrives on foot from the river

    B. He comes from the Samanas

    C. Kamala has told him so

    D. He wears a torn robe

    Key: B (He comes from the Samanas)

51. [mc · inference · DOK 2] At the end of the chapter Siddhartha says the childlike people can love. What is ironic about this?

    A. The childlike ones secretly scorn all love

    B. Those he looks down on have what he lacks

    C. He has just married a merchant's daughter

    D. Kamala tells him she has loved no one at all

    Key: B (Those he looks down on have what he lacks)

52. [mc · recall · DOK 1] Which word completes this sentence from With the Childlike People, paragraph 35? "I have gotten to know people and places, I have received kindness and trust, I have found _____."

    A. gold

    B. friendship

    C. rice

    D. debts

    Key: B (friendship)

53. [mc · recall · DOK 1] In the line "Then, he'll become more zealous.", what does "zealous" most nearly mean?

    A. lazy and careless

    B. sad and very lonely

    C. rich and famous

    D. eager and hard-working

    Key: D (eager and hard-working)

54. [fill · recall · DOK 1] Complete the quotation from With the Childlike People, paragraph 44: "enjoyed his _____ skills, until he was defeated and rested exhausted by her side." Word bank: masterful, rusty, muddy, wooden

    Key: masterful

55. [mc · recall · DOK 1] Ironically, whom does Siddhartha, who refused his teaching, still name as the one perfected man he has known?

    A. Govinda

    B. The oldest Samana

    C. Gotama

    D. Kamaswami

    Key: C (Gotama)

56. [short · inference · DOK 2] How does Siddhartha treat the people who come to him? Use this line. "He was open to everything, these people brought his way." (With the Childlike People, paragraph 38)

Sample answer: Siddhartha is open and curious toward everyone who comes to him. The evidence is "He was open to everything, these people brought his way." (With the Childlike People, paragraph 38). The word "everything" shows that he greets merchants, debtors and beggars alike, because people interest him far more than business.

57. [short · analysis · DOK 3] Analyze the word choice in "She understood him better than Govinda used to understand him, she was more similar to him." (With the Childlike People, paragraph 39). Pick two words and explain what they suggest.

    Sample answer: "She understood him better than Govinda used to understand him, she was more similar to him." (With the Childlike People, paragraph 39). "Better" ranks Kamala above his oldest friend, so the city has given him a closer companion than the forest did. "Similar" suggests why: like him, she stands apart from the childlike people, calm and self-contained.

58. [mc · analysis · DOK 3] Which literary element does this describe in "With the Childlike People"? In the first meeting, the merchant's careful questions and Siddhartha's calm answers show what each man values.

    A. Personification
    B. Alliteration
    C. Diction / vocabulary
    D. Characterization

    Key: D (Characterization)

59. [short · synthesis · DOK 4] Synthesis: trace how Siddhartha's faith in his Samana skills develops from Kamala to With the Childlike People. Use one quotation from each.

    Sample answer: Siddhartha keeps trusting his Samana skills as he moves into business. In Kamala he tells the courtesan: "I can think. I can wait. I can fast." (Kamala, paragraph 42). In With the Childlike People he explains to Kamaswami: "When a person has nothing to eat, fasting is the smartest thing he could do." (With the Childlike People, paragraph 20). The first passage is a bare boast; the second turns it into an argument a merchant can respect, which shows that he now uses his discipline as a tool for worldly success.

60. [short · synthesis · DOK 4] Close reading: how do the diction and syntax of "Everyone takes, everyone gives, such is life." (With the Childlike People, paragraph 12) shape its meaning? Consider a second, competing reading.

    Sample answer: The line sums up trade as a law of life: "Everyone takes, everyone gives, such is life." (With the Childlike People, paragraph 12). The balanced clauses, "takes" and "gives," put the two acts on equal footing, and the short close "such is life" closes the matter like a proverb. A competing reading hears a Samana's irony: he once lived by taking alms, and he uses the merchant's own logic to excuse it. Both readings stand, but the calm, even rhythm suggests that he truly sees giving and taking as one cycle.

61. [fill · recall · DOK 1 · Dual Credit (Indiana College Core): ICC-WC-1.5] Complete the quotation from With the Childlike People, paragraph 2: "Kamaswami entered, a swiftly, smoothly moving man with very gray hair, with very _____, cautious eyes, with a greedy mouth." Word bank: dull, sleepy, vacant, intelligent

    Key: intelligent

62. [mc · recall · DOK 1 · Dual Credit (Indiana College Core): ICC-WC-1.5] In the line "he was never subservient to the merchant", what does "subservient" most nearly mean?

    A. quick to anger at small things
    B. very skilled with numbers
    C. unable to read or write
    D. too ready to obey others

    Key: D (too ready to obey others)

63. [fill · recall · DOK 1 · Dual Credit (Indiana College Core): ICC-WC-1.5] Complete the quotation from With the Childlike People, paragraph 30: “there is never any _____ in his soul when he conducts our business.” Word bank: passion, salt, rust, ink

    Key: passion

64. [mc · recall · DOK 1 · Dual Credit (Indiana College Core): ICC-WC-1.5] What does Kamaswami point out about the Samanas when he first meets Siddhartha?

    A. That they are rich in secret

    B. That they are entirely without possessions

    C. That they cannot read

    D. That they live in the city

    Key: B (That they are entirely without possessions)

65. [mc · recall · DOK 1 · Dual Credit (Indiana College Core): ICC-WC-1.5] What does Siddhartha say each person gives in exchange for what he takes?

    A. What he has: strength, goods or teachings

    B. Only coins, since wealth is all that counts

    C. Nothing, since all people are thieves

    D. Prayers to the gods for the giver

    Key: A (What he has: strength, goods or teachings)

66. [mc · recall · DOK 1 · Dual Credit (Indiana College Core): ICC-WC-1.5] What is ironic about Siddhartha’s trip to buy the village’s rice?

    A. The deal succeeds, yet he returns in a bad mood

    B. The deal fails, yet he returns extremely satisfied

    C. He buys the rice but loses it on the way home

    D. Kamaswami praises the trip as the best deal he ever made

    Key: B (The deal fails, yet he returns extremely satisfied)

67. [mc · recall · DOK 1 · Dual Credit (Indiana College Core): ICC-WC-1.5] When does Siddhartha visit Kamala each day?

    A. At dawn, before the market opens

    B. At the hour she appoints

    C. Only when Kamaswami sends him

    D. At midnight, in secret

    Key: B (At the hour she appoints)

68. [mc · recall · DOK 1 · Dual Credit (Indiana College Core): ICC-WC-1.5] Kamaswami asks whether Siddhartha lives off the property of others. What ironic reversal does Siddhartha make?

    A. He admits that he has stolen food in the forest before

    B. He says Kamala has paid for everything he has

    C. He says a merchant lives off what others own too

    D. He promises to repay every coin within a year

    Key: C (He says a merchant lives off what others own too)

69. [mc · recall · DOK 1 · Dual Credit (Indiana College Core): ICC-WC-1.5] In the line “Much he learned from her tender, supple hand.”, what does “supple” most nearly mean?

    A. bending easily; soft

    B. rough and hard

    C. cold and stiff

    D. old and wrinkled

    Key: A (bending easily; soft)

70. [short · inference · DOK 2 · Dual Credit (Indiana College Core): ICC-WC-1.5] How does Siddhartha feel about his business deals deep down? Use this line. “As a ballplayer plays with his balls, he played with his business deals” (With the Childlike People, paragraph 39)

    Sample answer: Siddhartha treats his business as a game that does not touch his heart. The evidence is “As a ballplayer plays with his balls, he played with his business deals” (With the Childlike People, paragraph 39). The simile shows skill without seriousness: he handles deals well, but they matter to him no more than a ball does to a player.

71. [mc · analysis · DOK 3 · Dual Credit (Indiana College Core): ICC-WC-1.5] Which literary element does this describe in “With the Childlike People”? A dying, quiet voice deep in his chest admonishes him; his fading conscience is pictured as a voice.

    A. Plot

    B. Foreshadowing

    C. Setting

    D. Metaphor

    Key: D (Metaphor)

72. [short · analysis · DOK 3 · Dual Credit (Indiana College Core): ICC-WC-1.5] Analyze the word choice in “or rather they both ate other people’s bread, all people’s bread” (With the Childlike People, paragraph 36). Pick two words and explain what they suggest.

    Sample answer: Siddhartha refuses to feel dependent on Kamaswami. The evidence is “or rather they both ate other people’s bread, all people’s bread” (With the Childlike People, paragraph 36). The words “other people’s” turn the merchant into a dependent too, and widening it to “all people’s” makes wealth a shared thing that no one truly owns, which undercuts Kamaswami’s claim to be his patron.

73. [short · analysis · DOK 3 · Dual Credit (Indiana College Core): ICC-WC-1.5] Claim: Siddhartha's detachment in the city is a strength in business but a failure in love. Explain how this evidence supports the claim: “What I’ve learned from you is how much a basket of fish costs …” (With the Childlike People, paragraph 36).

    Sample answer: The evidence supports the claim because Siddhartha masters trade without letting it reach him: “What I’ve learned from you is how much a basket of fish costs …” (With the Childlike People, paragraph 36). Reducing all of Kamaswami’s teaching to prices and interest shows the cool distance that makes him a calm, successful dealer; the same distance, the chapter later shows, keeps him from loving anyone.

74. [short · synthesis · DOK 4 · Dual Credit (Indiana College Core): ICC-WC-1.5] Close reading: how do the diction and syntax of “Nevertheless, Siddhartha stayed for several days in that village, treated the farmers for a drink, gave copper-coins to their children, joined in the celebration of a wedding, and returned extremely satisfied from his trip.” (With the Childlike People, paragraph 33) shape its meaning? Consider a second, competing reading.

    Sample answer: The long chain of verbs, “stayed”, “treated”, “gave”, “joined”, “returned”, in “Nevertheless, Siddhartha stayed for several days in that village, treated the farmers for a drink, gave copper-coins to their children, joined in the celebration of a wedding, and returned extremely satisfied from his trip." (With the Childlike People, paragraph 33) fills the failed business trip with small human pleasures and ends on "extremely satisfied," so the sentence itself turns a loss into a gain. A competing reading sees only carelessness: a merchant who wastes time and money. But the syntax gives the farmers, children and wedding more space than the lost rice, which shows that Siddhartha measures the trip by people, not profit.

75. [short · synthesis · DOK 4 · Dual Credit (Indiana College Core): ICC-WC-1.5] Synthesis: trace how Siddhartha's view of ordinary people develops from Kamala to With the Childlike People. Use one quotation from each.
Sample answer: Siddhartha moves from scorn to a puzzled kind of envy toward ordinary people. In Kamala he decides: "Like children are all people." (Kamala, paragraph 12). In With the Childlike People he tells Kamala: "The childlike people can; that's their secret." (With the Childlike People, paragraph 47). The first passage looks down on people; the second admits they can do the one thing he cannot, love, which makes the name childlike half an insult and half a compliment.

76. [fill · recall · DOK 1] Complete the quotation from With the Childlike People, paragraph 15: "What is it that you've learned, what you're able to _____?" Word bank: do, rain, snow, bloom
Key: do

77. [mc · recall · DOK 1] What does Kamaswami tell a friend Siddhartha will never be?

A. A rich man
B. A proper merchant
C. A good husband
D. A Brahmin again

Key: B (A proper merchant)

78. [fill · recall · DOK 1] Fill in the blank with the vocabulary word that fits: "a dying, quiet voice, which _____ him quietly, lamented quietly" Word bank: crowned, carried, paid, admonished
Key: admonished

79. [mc · recall · DOK 1] What irony does Kamala point out about Siddhartha as a lover?

A. He loves her deeply, yet is the worst of lovers
B. He is the best lover she has seen, yet loves nobody
C. He wants to marry her, yet he will not even touch her
D. He loves only her, yet she sends him away from her

Key: B (He is the best lover she has seen, yet loves nobody)

80. [mc · recall · DOK 1] Where does Siddhartha live after his first meeting with Kamaswami?

A. In the merchant's house
B. In Kamala's grove
C. In an inn by the gate
D. In a hut by the river

Key: A (In the merchant's house)

81. [mc · recall · DOK 1] Which word completes this sentence from With the Childlike People, paragraph 38? "welcome was the debtor who sought another _____"

A. gift
B. loan
C. wife
D. horse

Key: B (loan)

82. [mc · recall · DOK 1] In the line “When he made a profit, he accepted it with equanimity”, what does “equanimity” most nearly mean?

    A. loud, wild joy

    B. deep shame

    C. quick, restless greed for more

    D. calm evenness of mind

    Key: D (calm evenness of mind)

83. [fill · recall · DOK 1] Complete the quotation from With the Childlike People, paragraph 33: “At one time, he travelled to a village to buy a large harvest of _____ there.” Word bank: silk, rice, cattle, salt

    Key: rice

84. [fill · recall · DOK 1] Complete the quotation from With the Childlike People, paragraph 28: “and every day a servant prepared a _____ for him” Word bank: bed, horse, bath, sermon

    Key: bath

85. [mc · inference · DOK 2] What does this passage most clearly show? “Writing is good, thinking is better. Being smart is good, being patient is better” (With the Childlike People, paragraph 26)

    A. Kamaswami's lesson on profit and loss, copied out for Siddhartha to learn.

    B. Siddhartha's letter of love to Kamala.

    C. His own Samana values, written out as short proverbs.

    D. Kamaswami's complaint about Siddhartha's work.

    Key: C (His own Samana values, written out as short proverbs.)

86. [mc · inference · DOK 2] Why does Siddhartha never share Kamaswami’s worries?

    A. His heart is not in the trade; it is a game to him

    B. He does not understand money

    C. He secretly hopes the business will fail so he can leave

    D. He trusts the gods to protect the goods

    Key: A (His heart is not in the trade; it is a game to him)

87. [short · inference · DOK 4] How does Siddhartha relate to business at first? Use this line. “Siddhartha looked upon all of this as if it was a game, the rules of which he tried hard to learn precisely, but the contents of which did not touch his heart.” (With the Childlike People, paragraph 28) Trace this attitude across at least three chapters, this one and earlier ones, weigh one competing reading, and defend your position with evidence from each.

    Sample answer: At first Siddhartha learns business carefully but keeps it at a distance, as something outside his real self. The evidence is “Siddhartha looked upon all of this as if it was a game, the rules of which he tried hard to learn precisely, but the contents of which did not touch his heart.” (With the Childlike People, paragraph 28). Calling it “a game” shows he does not take its goals seriously, and “did not touch his heart” shows he is in the world but not yet of it. He came to the city with nothing but “I can think. I can wait. I can fast.” (Kamala, paragraph 42), and the same distance goes back to Awakening, where he “stood alone like a star in the sky” (Awakening, paragraph 12). A competing reading holds that his detachment protects him, since a man who only plays a game cannot be ruined by it. But across these chapters his distance from others has never brought him peace, and here it keeps him from love, so his detachment shields him and shuts him in at once.

88. [short · analysis · DOK 4] Claim: Siddhartha's detachment in the city is a strength in business but a failure in love. Explain how this evidence supports the claim: “And thinking of Kamala’s words, he was never subservient to the merchant, forced him to treat him as an equal, yes even more than an equal.” (With the Childlike People, paragraph 28). Build a short argument from it: trace the idea across at least three chapters, this one and earlier ones, weigh one competing reading, and defend your position with evidence from each.

    Sample answer: The evidence supports the claim because Siddhartha refuses to bow to anyone: “And thinking of Kamala’s words, he was never subservient to the merchant, forced him to treat him as an equal, yes even more than an equal.” (With the Childlike People, paragraph 28). This distance makes him strong in business. It began with the Samanas, where his scorn kept people away: “his mouth twitched with contempt when he walked through a city of nicely dressed people” (With the Samanas, paragraph 2). In Awakening he saw that he belonged to no group: “There was no nobleman who did not belong to the noblemen, no worker that did not belong to the workers, and found refuge with them, shared their life, spoke their language.” (Awakening, paragraph 11). Across the three chapters, detachment keeps him free but alone, and in the city Kamala finally names the cost in love. A competing reading calls this detachment simply wisdom; but a wisdom that cannot love is the failure the chapter ends on, so my reading stands.

89. [mc · analysis · DOK 3] In this chapter, which theme does the following most directly develop? Siddhartha feels that Kamala understands him better than Govinda ever did, and that she is more like him than anyone.

    A. The unity of all things

    B. Experience versus teaching

    C. The search for self-knowledge

    D. Love and attachment

    Key: D (Love and attachment)

90. [short · synthesis · DOK 4] Synthesis: trace how what Kamala teaches Siddhartha develops from Kamala to With the Childlike People. Use one quotation from each.

    Sample answer: Kamala’s teaching moves from a first lesson to a whole philosophy of love. In Kamala, Siddhartha feels after the first kiss “how she taught him, how wise she was” (Kamala, paragraph 50). In With the Childlike People she teaches him “that pleasure cannot be taken without giving pleasure” (With the Childlike People, paragraph 29). The first passage shows his wonder at her skill; the second names the rule behind it, so love becomes an art of giving that he learns thoroughly, though without learning to love.

91. [fill · recall · DOK 1] Complete the quotation from With the Childlike People, paragraph 12: “Everyone takes, everyone _____, such is life.” Word bank: gives, sleeps, sings, hides

    Key: gives

92. [mc · recall · DOK 1] Which word completes this sentence from With the Childlike People, paragraph 32? “when he made losses, he _____ and said”

    A. laughed

    B. wept

    C. shouted

    D. prayed

    Key: A (laughed)

93. [fill · recall · DOK 1] Complete the quotation from With the Childlike People, paragraph 23: "Siddhartha looked at the scroll, on which a sales _____ had been written down" Word bank: poem, prayer, contract, song

    Key: contract

94. [mc · inference · DOK 2] Siddhartha treats trade as a game he does not care about. What is ironic about his success as a merchant?

    A. He fails at almost every deal he tries

    B. He succeeds because he does not care about winning

    C. Kamaswami secretly does all the work for him

    D. He wins only by cheating his partners

    Key: B (He succeeds because he does not care about winning)

95. [mc · recall · DOK 1] What does Siddhartha say Kamala has inside her, as he has?

    A. A peace and refuge

    B. Great wealth

    C. A famous teacher

    D. A love of the city

    Key: A (A peace and refuge)

96. [fill · recall · DOK 1] Complete the quotation from With the Childlike People, paragraph 43: "Again, you're talking about him, she said, again, you're having a _____ thoughts." Word bank: merchant's, soldier's, Samana's, child's

    Key: Samana's

97. [mc · recall · DOK 1] Which word completes this sentence from With the Childlike People, paragraph 45? "The courtesan bent over him, took a long look at his face, at his eyes, which had grown _____."

    A. blinded

    B. tired

    C. frightened

    D. hardened

    Key: B (tired)

98. [mc · recall · DOK 1] In the line "for a long time he can allow hunger to besiege him and can laugh about it", what does "besiege" most nearly mean?

    A. to feed and comfort

    B. to leave alone

    C. to amuse and entertain

    D. to surround and attack

    Key: D (to surround and attack)

99. [mc · recall · DOK 1] What does Siddhartha ironically say he gained from the failed rice trip?

    A. A cheaper harvest the next year

    B. A wife from the village

    C. Good days, joy and friendship

    D. Nothing but lost money

    Key: C (Good days, joy and friendship)

100. [mc · inference · DOK 2] What still separates Siddhartha from the people he lives among?

A. He is still, at heart, a Samana

B. He is much richer than they are

C. He speaks a different language

D. He refuses to talk with them

Key: A (He is still, at heart, a Samana)

101. [mc · inference · DOK 2] What does this passage most clearly show? “Perhaps people of our kind can’t love. The childlike people can; that’s their secret” (With the Childlike People, paragraph 47)

A. Kamala's plan to leave the city with him.

B. Siddhartha's contempt for Kamala's craft.

C. Kamala's wish to become a Samana.

D. Kamala and Siddhartha may be unable to love.

Key: D (Kamala and Siddhartha may be unable to love.)

102. [short · inference · DOK 4] What does this moment show about Siddhartha’s life in the town? “And then, for an hour, he became aware of the strange life he was leading” (With the Childlike People, paragraph 39) Trace the idea through three chapters, with a quotation from each, and answer one competing reading.

Sample answer: Siddhartha’s worldly life has become unreal to him, even while he succeeds. The evidence is “And then, for an hour, he became aware of the strange life he was leading” (With the Childlike People, paragraph 39). In Awakening he had found meaning in the visible world: “The purpose and the essential properties were not somewhere behind the things, they were in them, in everything.” (Awakening, paragraph 7). In Kamala the new life seemed easy: “It presents no difficulties.” (Kamala, paragraph 63). A competing reading sees his calm as the fulfilment of that awakening. Yet the word “strange” shows that the things he once embraced now feel distant, so across the three chapters his ease has turned into estrangement.

103. [mc · inference · DOK 2] What does this passage most clearly show? “The business was good enough to provide him with the money for Kamala, and it earned him much more than he needed.” (With the Childlike People, paragraph 37)

A. He is ruined by his losses

B. He hopes to become a great merchant

C. Business is only a means for him

D. He hands all his money to the poor

Key: C (Business is only a means for him)

104. [short · analysis · DOK 4] Whom does Siddhartha single out here, and why? “Among all the learned men and Samanas, of which I knew many, there was one of this kind, a perfected one, I’ll never be able to forget him.” (With the Childlike People, paragraph 42) Build a short argument from it: trace the idea across at least three chapters, this one and earlier ones, weigh one competing reading, and defend your position with evidence from each.

Sample answer: Siddhartha singles out Gotama: “Among all the learned men and Samanas, of which I knew many, there was one of this kind, a perfected one, I’ll never be able to forget him.” (With the Childlike People, paragraph 42). Even in the city he still honours the Buddha. In Gotama he granted the worth of the teaching: “The teachings of the enlightened Buddha contain much, it teaches many to live righteously, to avoid evil.” (Gotama, paragraph 37). In Awakening he had to leave the teacher anyway: “He had also left the last teacher who had appeared on his path, even him, the highest and wisest teacher, the most holy one, Buddha, he had left him, had to part with him, was not able to accept his teachings." (Awakening, paragraph 2). Across the three chapters, Siddhartha honours the man while refusing the teaching, so Gotama remains a model of what he hopes to become himself. A competing reading says this praise shows regret for leaving; but he praises the Buddha's perfection, not his doctrine, which fits his choice to seek it alone.

105. [short · synthesis · DOK 4] Synthesis: trace how Siddhartha's bond with Kamala develops from Kamala to With the Childlike People. Use one quotation from each. Address one competing reading and answer it.
Sample answer: Siddhartha's bond with Kamala moves from a bargain to a shared, honest emptiness. In Kamala she asks for fine clothes, shoes and money before she will teach him, and she insists that love "cannot be stolen" (Kamala, paragraph 37): the bond starts as an exchange between equals. In With the Childlike People the two become alike, and Kamala says, "Perhaps people of our kind can't love" (With the Childlike People, paragraph 47). A competing reading sees this as a tragedy for Kamala alone, since she is the courtesan who trades in love; but Siddhartha admits the same lack in himself, so the chapter presents it as a kinship between two clever, detached people, not as one character's flaw.

106. [fill · recall · DOK 1] Complete the quotation from With the Childlike People, paragraph 29: "Wonderful hours he spent with the beautiful and smart _____, became her student, her lover, her friend." Word bank: artist, river, lamp, stone
Key: artist

107. [fill · recall · DOK 1] Complete the quotation from With the Childlike People, paragraph 24: "And would you write something for me on this piece of _____?"
Key: paper

108. [mc · recall · DOK 1] Which word completes this sentence from With the Childlike People, paragraph 36? "Would you please not kid me with such _____!"

A. kettles
B. jokes
C. ladders
D. pebbles

Key: B (jokes)

109. [mc · inference · DOK 2] What is ironic about Kamaswami's plan to make Siddhartha work harder?

A. Siddhartha works so hard he falls ill
B. A share of profit and loss leaves him as careless as before
C. Kamaswami loses his own share
D. The friend who gave the advice soon goes bankrupt himself in the market

Key: B (A share of profit and loss leaves him as careless as before)

110. [mc · inference · DOK 2] After the rice trip, Kamaswami indignantly reminds Siddhartha that he is supposed to be a merchant (paragraph 34). What does the rebuke reveal about the two men?

A. Kamaswami values profit; Siddhartha values the villagers and the trip
B. Kamaswami secretly envies Siddhartha's freedom from his debts
C. Siddhartha has agreed that trade is his true calling in life
D. Each man cares only about the price of the village rice

Key: A (Kamaswami values profit; Siddhartha values the villagers and the trip)

111. [fill · recall · DOK 1] Complete the quotation from With the Childlike People, paragraph 28: “Siddhartha got to know many new things, he heard a lot and spoke _____.” Word bank: loudly, often, little, sharply

Key: little

112. [fill · recall · DOK 1] Complete the quotation from With the Childlike People, paragraph 36: “to have wrinkles on the _____, to sleep badly” Word bank: hands, door, forehead, table

Key: forehead

113. [mc · recall · DOK 1] In the line “had a tendency to plunge blindly and insatiably into lust like into a bottomless pit”, what does “insatiably” most nearly mean?

A. in a careful, slow and well-measured way

B. in a shy, timid way

C. in a sad, regretful way

D. in a way that can never be satisfied

Key: D (in a way that can never be satisfied)

114. [mc · inference · DOK 2] From Siddhartha’s talk with Kamaswami (paragraph 36), what does Siddhartha say the merchant has taught him?

A. How to read and write well

B. The price of fish and the interest on loans

C. How to wait, think and fast

D. How to win the trust of buyers and sellers at market

Key: B (The price of fish and the interest on loans)

115. [mc · recall · DOK 1] In the line “Twice a day, a plentiful meal was served”, what does “plentiful” most nearly mean?

A. plain; simple; meagre

B. ample; generous

C. stale; cold

D. rare; costly

Key: B (ample; generous)

116. [mc · inference · DOK 2] What does this passage most clearly show? “Few people have this, and yet all could have it.” (With the Childlike People, paragraph 40)

A. He thinks that peace belongs to the wealthy alone.

B. He wants Kamala to share her wealth.

C. He believes inner refuge is open to everyone.

D. He doubts that anyone can be at peace.

Key: C (He believes inner refuge is open to everyone.)

117. [mc · inference · DOK 2] Why does Siddhartha let the street-vendor cheat him?

A. Small sums do not matter to him

B. He does not know how to count

C. He is afraid of the vendor

D. He wants the vendor to owe him a favour

Key: A (Small sums do not matter to him)

118. [short · inference · DOK 4] What does this line reveal about Siddhartha's view of others? "Kamaswami is just as smart as I, and still has no refuge in himself." (With the Childlike People, paragraph 42) Trace the idea through three chapters, with a quotation from each, and answer one competing reading.
Sample answer: Siddhartha believes that inner peace, not intelligence, sets people apart. The evidence is "Kamaswami is just as smart as I, and still has no refuge in himself." (With the Childlike People, paragraph 42). The same sense of difference appears in Kamala: "Like children are all people." (Kamala, paragraph 12). It goes back to Gotama, where he trusts only his own path: "No teachings will entice me any more, since this man's teachings have not enticed me." (Gotama, paragraph 45). A competing reading calls this wisdom rather than pride. Yet across the three chapters the refuge he prizes also keeps him apart from others, which is why he cannot love.

119. [mc · analysis · DOK 3] In this chapter, which theme does the following most directly develop? "Indeed his soul was not with the trade." (With the Childlike People, paragraph 37)

A. Greed and its punishment
B. Loyalty to one's teacher
C. The power of fate
D. Detachment from worldly gain

Key: D (Detachment from worldly gain)

120. [short · synthesis · DOK 4] Synthesis: trace how Siddhartha's memory of Gotama develops from Kamala to With the Childlike People. Use one quotation from each. Address one competing reading and answer it.
Sample answer: Gotama moves from a teacher Siddhartha has left to a standard he cannot escape. In Kamala he realizes with astonishment "that there he had said things which he had not really known yet at this time" (Kamala, paragraph 3). In With the Childlike People, Kamala notices: "again, you're having a Samana's thoughts." (With the Childlike People, paragraph 43). A competing reading holds that Gotama now matters little, since Siddhartha is busy with trade and love. But the fact that he still speaks of Gotama in Kamala's bed shows that the old search survives beneath his new life.

121. [mc · inference · DOK 2] What is ironic about Siddhartha's success as a merchant?

A. He fails although he works harder than anyone
B. He grows poor by giving too many gifts to Kamala
C. He prospers though he does not care about trade
D. He becomes rich by fasting

Key: C (He prospers though he does not care about trade)

122. [fill · recall · DOK 1] Fill in the blank with the word that fits: "So, leave it as it is, my friend, and don't harm yourself by _____!" Word bank: scolding, singing, sleeping, praying
Key: scolding

123. [fill · recall · DOK 1] Complete the quotation from With the Childlike People, paragraph 25: "He handed him a piece of paper and a _____, and Siddhartha wrote and returned the paper."
Key: pen

124. [mc · recall · DOK 1] What does Kamaswami first assume about a Brahmin who seeks to serve a merchant?

A. That Kamala has sent him
B. That he has become destitute
C. That his father has disowned him
D. That he wants to learn to cheat

Key: B (That he has become destitute)

125. [mc · inference · DOK 2] What is ironic about Siddhartha's speech on fasting to Kamaswami?

A. He is starving even while he praises fasting

B. A Samana's skill wins him a rich life of plenty

C. Kamaswami fasts far more often than he does himself

D. He has not fasted since childhood

Key: B (A Samana's skill wins him a rich life of plenty)

126. [mc · recall · DOK 1] What does Kamala say she would want one day, when she is older?

A. To bear Siddhartha's child

B. To join the Samanas

C. To leave the city

D. To marry the rich merchant Kamaswami

Key: A (To bear Siddhartha's child)

127. [fill · recall · DOK 1] Complete the quotation from With the Childlike People, paragraph 39: "She understood him better than Govinda used to understand him, she was more _____ to him." Word bank: hostile, similar, invisible, foreign

Key: similar

128. [mc · recall · DOK 1] Which word completes this sentence from With the Childlike People, paragraph 30? "The merchant passed to duties of writing important letters and _____ on to him"

A. poems

B. contracts

C. prayers

D. songs

Key: B (contracts)

129. [fill · recall · DOK 1] Complete the quotation from With the Childlike People, paragraph 35: "But until then, let's be _____ with one another." Word bank: satisfied, buried, frozen, drowned

Key: satisfied

130. [mc · inference · DOK 2] Why does Kamala believe Siddhartha does not love her?

A. He has remained a Samana at heart

B. He loves another woman in the city

C. He is too poor to love

D. He is still angry with her

Key: A (He has remained a Samana at heart)

131. [short · inference · DOK 2] What does Siddhartha's answer reveal about his values? Use this line. "surely I have travelled for my amusement" (With the Childlike People, paragraph 35)

Sample answer: Siddhartha values experience and people over profit. The evidence is "surely I have travelled for my amusement" (With the Childlike People, paragraph 35). He cheerfully admits what Kamaswami meant as a charge, because to him the days of friendship in the village were worth more than the lost rice.

132. [mc · inference · DOK 2] What does this passage most clearly show? "He did not treat the rich foreign merchant any different than the servant who shaved him" (With the Childlike People, paragraph 38)

A. He despises the rich merchants.

B. He prefers servants to merchants.

C. He treats rich and poor alike.

D. He is unable to tell people apart.

Key: C (He treats rich and poor alike.)

133. [mc · analysis · DOK 3] In this chapter, which theme does the following most directly develop? Siddhartha finds the worth and purpose of his present life in his hours with Kamala, not in the merchant's business.

A. The unity of all things

B. Experience versus teaching

C. The search for self-knowledge

D. Love and attachment

Key: D (Love and attachment)

134. [short · synthesis · DOK 4] Close reading: how do the diction and syntax of "Most people, Kamala, are like a falling leaf, which is blown and is turning around through the air, and wavers, and tumbles to the ground" (With the Childlike People, paragraph 42) shape its meaning? Consider a second, competing reading.

Sample answer: The run of verbs in "Most people, Kamala, are like a falling leaf, which is blown and is turning around through the air, and wavers, and tumbles to the ground" (With the Childlike People, paragraph 42) piles up clauses joined by "and," so the sentence drifts and falls like the leaf. Most people, he says, are moved by outside forces. A competing reading hears compassion, a wise man's gentle description of others. But the simile sets him above them, and he names its cost himself: "Perhaps people of our kind can't love. The childlike people can; that's their secret." (With the Childlike People, paragraph 47). The image shows distance, not sympathy.

135. [short · synthesis · DOK 4] Synthesis: trace how the way Siddhartha moves through the world develops from Kamala to With the Childlike People. Use one quotation from each. Address one competing reading and answer it.

Sample answer: Siddhartha moves from purposeful detachment to a detachment that has become play. In Kamala he says he "passes through the things of the world like a rock through water" (Kamala, paragraph 72). In With the Childlike People, "As a ballplayer plays with his balls, he played with his business deals" (With the Childlike People, paragraph 39). A competing reading treats both images as the same calm mastery. Yet the rock falls toward a goal, while the ballplayer only amuses himself, so the second image shows that his detachment has lost its direction.

Rigor version	Items (in order)	Mix
HS Sophomore	1, 2, 3, 4, 5, 6, 7, 8, 9, 10, 11, 12, 13, 14, 15	recall 11, inference 3, analysis 1, synthesis 0
HS Junior	16, 17, 18, 19, 20, 21, 22, 23, 24, 25, 26, 27, 28, 29, 30	recall 9, inference 4, analysis 2, synthesis 0
HS Senior	31, 32, 33, 34, 35, 36, 37, 38, 39, 40, 41, 42, 43, 44, 45	recall 10, inference 2, analysis 1, synthesis 2
AP	46, 47, 48, 49, 50, 51, 52, 53, 54, 55, 56, 57, 58, 59, 60	recall 9, inference 2, analysis 2, synthesis 2
College Freshman	61, 62, 63, 64, 65, 66, 67, 68, 69, 70, 71, 72, 73, 74, 75	recall 9, inference 1, analysis 3, synthesis 2
College Sophomore	76, 77, 78, 79, 80, 81, 82, 83, 84, 85, 86, 87, 88, 89, 90	recall 9, inference 3, analysis 2, synthesis 1

College Junior	91, 92, 93, 94, 95, 96, 97, 98, 99, 100, 101, 102, 103, 104, 105	recall 8, inference 5, analysis 1, synthesis 1
College Senior	106, 107, 108, 109, 110, 111, 112, 113, 114, 115, 116, 117, 118, 119, 120	recall 7, inference 6, analysis 1, synthesis 1
Graduate / PhD	121, 122, 123, 124, 125, 126, 127, 128, 129, 130, 131, 132, 133, 134, 135	recall 7, inference 5, analysis 1, synthesis 2

Writing prompts (eleven rigor levels)

HS Sophomore (450 words; Dual Credit (Indiana College Core): ICC-WC-1.1, ICC-WC-1.3, ICC-WC-1.4, ICC-WC-1.5): Analyze how With the Childlike People develops the idea of detachment among the childlike people. Make a precise claim, support it with at least three pieces of textual evidence, and explain how the author's use of characterization and irony shapes that idea. Address one possible counterclaim. (You are reading the English translation by Gunther Olesch, Anke Dreher, Amy Coulter, Stefan Langer and Semyon Chaichenets, so word-choice evidence is the translators' English.)

HS Junior (550 words; Dual Credit (Indiana College Core): ICC-WC-1.1, ICC-WC-1.3, ICC-WC-1.4, ICC-WC-1.5): Analyze how the structure of With the Childlike People (where it begins, turns and ends) and its characterization shape the reader's understanding of detachment among the childlike people. Identify one place where the text leaves matters uncertain and explain how that uncertainty adds to its meaning.

HS Senior (600 words; Dual Credit (Indiana College Core): ICC-WC-1.1, ICC-WC-1.3, ICC-WC-1.4, ICC-WC-1.5): Two readers disagree about what With the Childlike People suggests about detachment among the childlike people. Lay out two plausible interpretations, weigh the evidence for each (including the chapter's characterization and irony), and argue for the stronger one in a sustained, well-organized essay.

AP (650 words; Dual Credit (Indiana College Core): ICC-WC-1.1, ICC-WC-1.3, ICC-WC-1.4, ICC-WC-1.5): Write a literary argument in which you analyze how Hermann Hesse uses characterization in With the Childlike People to complicate the reader's understanding of detachment among the childlike people. Develop a defensible thesis, select evidence purposefully, and explain how specific choices of diction and syntax create meaning.

College Freshman (1000 words; Dual Credit (Indiana College Core): ICC-WC-1.3, ICC-WC-1.5, ICC-WC-1.1): Situate With the Childlike People within its historical and literary context and argue how the chapter's treatment of detachment among the childlike people responds to that context. Engage with at least one secondary perspective (a critic, historian or the author's own statements), integrate quotations smoothly, and cite in APA style.

College Sophomore (1250 words; Dual Credit (Indiana College Core): ICC-WC-1.1, ICC-WC-1.3, ICC-WC-1.4, ICC-WC-1.5): Read With the Childlike People alongside the conventions of its genre and period. Argue how the chapter's handling of detachment among the childlike people follows or bends those conventions, using the characterization as evidence, and test your reading against one published critic. Document two secondary sources in APA.

College Junior (1500 words; Dual Credit (Indiana College Core): ICC-WC-1.1, ICC-WC-1.3, ICC-WC-1.4, ICC-WC-1.5): Apply a named critical approach (for example formalist, historicist, feminist, psychoanalytic or ecocritical) to With the Childlike People and its treatment of detachment among the childlike people. State your method, show what it reveals in the chapter's characterization and irony, and identify where the text resists it.

College Senior (2000 words; Dual Credit (Indiana College Core): ICC-WC-1.1, ICC-WC-1.3, ICC-WC-1.4, ICC-WC-1.5): Develop a research argument that reads With the Childlike People as evidence for a larger claim about detachment among the childlike people in Siddhartha. Connect close reading of the chapter to the whole novel, engage at least four scholarly sources, and state precisely where your reading departs from theirs (Chicago style).

Graduate / PhD (2500 words; Dual Credit (Indiana College Core): ICC-WC-1.1, ICC-WC-1.3, ICC-WC-1.4, ICC-WC-1.5): Develop an original argument that reads With the Childlike People as a hinge in the novel's larger treatment of detachment among the childlike people. Position your reading within a named critical conversation (for example formalist, historicist, psychoanalytic, feminist or postcolonial approaches), account for the textual history where relevant, and articulate the stakes of your intervention for scholarship on Siddhartha.

SAT-style questions

1. But like this, I've had a few good days, I've learned, had joy, I've neither harmed myself nor others by annoyance and hastiness.

   As used in the text, what does the word "hastiness" most nearly mean?

   A. thick woven floor coverings

   B. warned or scolded gently

   C. steadiness of mind under stress

   D. acting too quickly

2. Siddhartha went to Kamaswami the merchant, he was directed into a rich house, servants led him between precious carpets into a chamber, where he awaited the master of the house.

   Which choice best states a central concern of "With the Childlike People"?

   A. Wisdom cannot be taught

   B. Detachment among the childlike people

   C. The teacher and the teaching

   D. Despair and renewal by the river

SAT key: 1. D (acting too quickly); 2. B (Detachment among the childlike people)

Lesson 8: Sansara

Focus: the cycle of desire

Objective: Students will analyze how symbolism develops in "Sansara" by writing a claim-evidence-reasoning paragraph that cites at least 2 quotations from the section, and will score at least 80% on the section quiz.

Standards: Dual Credit (Indiana College Core): ICC-WC-1.1, ICC-WC-1.3, ICC-WC-1.4, ICC-WC-1.5

Content note (gambling, drinking, self-disgust, suicidal thoughts (framing announcement given before this chapter), sexual content): Siddhartha sinks into gambling, drink and self-disgust; be mindful of students affected by addiction in their families. Give the framing announcement before the reading (it covers the first approach to the death wish, paras. 9–13, and the attempt in "By the River"). Brief sexual content: "Never before, it had become so strangely clear to Siddhartha, how closely lust was akin to death." (Hesse, 1922/2015, Sansara, para. 8)
Student preview: Siddhartha gambles and drinks and grows to hate his life.
Suggested language: "What has Siddhartha lost, and how does he realize it?"
Safe messaging: Discuss the character's despair and what the text does with it; do not dwell on methods. Before the lesson, remind students that support is available and how to reach the counselor. Check in privately with any student who seems affected and follow your school's referral protocol. Share with students: If you or someone you know is struggling, call or text 988, or chat at 988lifeline.org (Suicide & Crisis Lifeline, U.S.); talk with a school counselor; or tell a trusted adult. Let a counselor know in advance that this chapter is being taught.

Teacher only · spoilers

Over many years Siddhartha grows wealthy, gambles, drinks, and becomes greedy and weary—like the childlike people. Kamala tells him she wishes to learn about Gotama. After a dream of Kamala's songbird lying dead in its golden cage, Siddhartha feels disgust at his life and leaves the city without a word. Kamala, pregnant with his child, frees her bird.

Background: Samsara (spelled 'Sansara' in this translation) is the cycle of birth, suffering and rebirth.

Significance: The caged songbird is the book's clearest symbol of Siddhartha's trapped inner voice.

Lesson plan and lecture script (90 minutes)

0–8 min · Bell-ringer · You do (8 min)
Students write to the bell-ringer, then pair-share.
Teacher reads aloud before the reading. Before we read the next chapters, I want to tell you about part of this story. After years of wealth and pleasure, Siddhartha feels empty and disgusted with his life. He leaves the city, and at a river he thinks about ending his life. He doesn't. The sacred word Om comes to him, he sleeps, and he wakes up feeling renewed. Hesse calls the wish an error that Siddhartha wakes up from, and the rest of the book is about finding peace and love. No one in the novel dies by suicide. So let's be clear: if you ever have thoughts of hurting yourself, you deserve support, and help is available. Self-harm is wrong, and it is never the answer to pain; the story shows its cost, not a solution. If you or someone you know is struggling, you can call or text 988, or chat at 988lifeline.org. You can also talk to a school counselor or any trusted adult. You don't have to face it alone. What does the dead songbird symbolize? Write for five minutes. Starters: I think... because... / This connects to love and attachment because.... Content note before we start: Siddhartha gambles and drinks and grows to hate his life.
Prompt: What does the dead songbird symbolize?
Sentence starters: I think… because… · This connects to love and attachment because…
Strong response: A strong response takes a position and anticipates this: the senses, pursued without love, become a cycle of craving: this is Sansara.

8–18 min · Vocabulary with etymology notes · We do (10 min)
Five key words in context, with verified word histories.
Today's words: gambled — played games of chance for money; castaway — a person left stranded after a shipwreck; demonstrating — showing clearly; mockingly — in a disrespectful jeering manner; zealously — with great energy and eagerness.
Words: gambled: played games of chance for money · castaway: a person left stranded after a shipwreck · demonstrating: showing clearly · mockingly: in a disrespectful jeering manner · zealously: with great energy and eagerness

18–28 min · Background and context · I do (10 min)
Mini-lecture (read or adapt the script).
Samsara (spelled 'Sansara' in this translation) is the cycle of birth, suffering and rebirth. The caged songbird is the book's clearest symbol of Siddhartha's trapped inner voice. Structure: Years pass in summary; Siddhartha slowly takes on the habits he despised: gambling, wine, greed, fear. Imagery: The dream of Kamala's songbird lying dead in its golden cage: his inner voice has gone silent. Tone / mood: Weary and disgusted; the prose itself becomes heavy with lists of pleasures. Watch for the songbird in the golden cage: his own spirit, imprisoned by wealth, has died; when he leaves, Kamala sets the bird free.

28–40 min · I do: modeled close reading · I do (12 min)
Model the close reading of the anchor quotation using the written think-aloud below.
First, meaning. I read "He was a feared gambler, few dared to take him on" slowly and put it in my own words: Siddhartha has become a feared gambler, so reckless with money that few people dare to play against him. Next, craft. I notice "feared," a word of power, used for a man who once sought peace and humility. The strongest word is "gambler": it shows he has sunk into the very world of desire he once scorned. Then, effect. What does Siddhartha's new reputation as a gambler show? My answer: Siddhartha's new reputation as a gambler shows how far he has fallen from his search: wealth has made him one of the "childlike people," preparing for his disgust and flight from the city.

> He was a feared gambler, few dared to take him on (Sansara, paragraph 6)

Think-aloud: First, meaning. I read "He was a feared gambler, few dared to take him on" slowly and put it in my own words: Siddhartha has become a feared gambler, so reckless with money that few people dare to play against him. Next, craft. I notice "feared," a word of power, used for a man who once sought peace and humility. The strongest word is "gambler": it shows he has sunk into the very world of desire he once scorned. Then, effect. What does Siddhartha's new reputation as a gambler show? My answer: Siddhartha's new reputation as a gambler shows how far he has fallen from his search: wealth has made him one of the "childlike people," preparing for his disgust and flight from the city.

40–55 min · We do: guided annotation · We do (15 min)
Guided analysis of a second quotation; expected answers given.
Ask: What words in this line stand out, and what do they suggest? Expected: The cage is golden (beautiful, costly) but still a cage: wealth imprisons. The mute bird is his inner voice. Expected link: Sansara as attractive captivity. Ask: How does this line connect to love and attachment? Expected: The senses, pursued without love, become a cycle of craving: this is Sansara. (The dream that wakes him.)

> Kamala owned a small, rare singing bird in a golden cage. Of this bird he dreamt (Sansara, paragraph 10)

Ask: What words in this line stand out, and what do they suggest?
Expected answer: The cage is golden (beautiful, costly) but still a cage: wealth imprisons. The mute bird is his inner voice. Expected link: Sansara as attractive captivity.
Ask: How does this line connect to love and attachment?
Expected answer: The senses, pursued without love, become a cycle of craving: this is Sansara. (The dream that wakes him.)

55–70 min · You do: independent annotation · You do (15 min)

Independent annotation and a claim-evidence-reasoning paragraph (exemplar given).

Annotate the chapter for structure, imagery (three marks with a margin note each), then write one claim-evidence-reasoning paragraph: what does this chapter suggest about the cycle of desire? Then start your writing prompt at your assigned level (HS Sophomore: Analyze how Sansara develops the idea of the cycle of desire. Make a precise claim, support it with at least three pieces of textual evidence, and explain how the author's use of symbolism and theme shapes that idea. Address one possible counterclaim. (You are reading the English translation by Gunther Olesch, Anke Dreher, Amy Coulter, Stefan Langer and Semyon Chaichenets, so word-choice evidence is the translators' English.)) Exemplar: The songbird in the golden cage symbolizes Siddhartha's spirit, silenced by the comfortable prison of wealth. When the text says “Kamala owned a small, rare singing bird in a golden cage. Of this bird he dreamt” (Sansara, paragraph 10), it shows this directly. He dreams that the bird in its "golden cage" has become mute, and after he leaves, Kamala "opened the door of the cage, took the bird out and let it fly," marking his release.

Task: Annotate the chapter for structure, imagery (three marks with a margin note each), then write one claim-evidence-reasoning paragraph: what does this chapter suggest about the cycle of desire? Then start your writing prompt at your assigned level (HS Sophomore: Analyze how Sansara develops the idea of the cycle of desire. Make a precise claim, support it with at least three pieces of textual evidence, and explain how the author's use of symbolism and theme shapes that idea. Address one possible counterclaim. (You are reading the English translation by Gunther Olesch, Anke Dreher, Amy Coulter, Stefan Langer and Semyon Chaichenets, so word-choice evidence is the translators' English.))

Exemplar: The songbird in the golden cage symbolizes Siddhartha's spirit, silenced by the comfortable prison of wealth. When the text says “Kamala owned a small, rare singing bird in a golden cage. Of this bird he dreamt” (Sansara, paragraph 10), it shows this directly. He dreams that the bird in its "golden cage" has become mute, and after he leaves, Kamala "opened the door of the cage, took the bird out and let it fly," marking his release.

70–80 min · Discussion · We do (10 min)

Structured discussion from the 30 tiered questions, with facilitation notes.

Anchor question: What does the dead songbird symbolize? Ask: what modern "golden cages" can students name? Keep the discussion tied to the text.

Anchor question: What does the dead songbird symbolize?

Facilitation: Ask: what modern "golden cages" can students name? Keep the discussion tied to the text.

80–87 min · Exit ticket / chapter quiz · You do (7 min)
Chapter quiz in the app and an exit ticket (answer given).
Chapter quiz in the app, then: In one sentence, what does this chapter suggest about the cycle of desire? Support it with one short quotation. Model answer: The songbird in the golden cage symbolizes Siddhartha's spirit, silenced by the comfortable prison of wealth. ("Kamala owned a small, rare singing bird in a golden cage. Of this bird he dreamt", Sansara, paragraph 10). Accept any defensible claim backed by a quotation from the chapter; the answer key for the quiz is in the Quiz section.
Exit ticket: In one sentence, what does this chapter suggest about the cycle of desire? Support it with one short quotation.
Answer: Model answer: The songbird in the golden cage symbolizes Siddhartha's spirit, silenced by the comfortable prison of wealth. ("Kamala owned a small, rare singing bird in a golden cage. Of this bird he dreamt", Sansara, paragraph 10). Accept any defensible claim backed by a quotation from the chapter; the answer key for the quiz is in the Quiz section.

87–90 min · Closure · I do (3 min)
Summarize the lesson and preview the next reading.
Today we saw how structure shapes the cycle of desire. Key takeaway: the senses, pursued without love, become a cycle of craving: this is Sansara.

Total: 90 minutes.

60-minute version of this lesson

Same script and content as above, with these timings (60 minutes).

Clock	Segment	Minutes	What to keep
0–5	Bell-ringer	5	Students write to the bell-ringer, then pair-share.
5–10	Vocabulary with etymology notes	5	Five key words in context, with verified word histories.
10–16	Background and context	6	Mini-lecture (read or adapt the script).
16–24	I do: modeled close reading	8	Model the close reading of the anchor quotation using the written think-aloud below.
24–34	We do: guided annotation	10	Guided analysis of a second quotation; expected answers given.
34–44	You do: independent annotation	10	Independent annotation and a claim-evidence-reasoning paragraph (exemplar given).
44–54	Discussion	10	Structured discussion from the 30 tiered questions, with facilitation notes.
54–58	Exit ticket / chapter quiz	4	Chapter quiz in the app and an exit ticket (answer given).
58–60	Closure	2	Summarize the lesson and preview the next reading.

Teacher analysis (spoilers)

Literary elements

- Structure: Years pass in summary; Siddhartha slowly takes on the habits he despised: gambling, wine, greed, fear.
- Imagery: The dream of Kamala's songbird lying dead in its golden cage: his inner voice has gone silent.
- Tone / mood: Weary and disgusted; the prose itself becomes heavy with lists of pleasures.

Themes and how they develop

- love and attachment: the senses, pursued without love, become a cycle of craving: this is Sansara.

Symbols and motifs

- the songbird in the golden cage: his own spirit, imprisoned by wealth, has died; when he leaves, Kamala sets the bird free.

Key quotations (checked against the reading text)

- "Kamala owned a small, rare singing bird in a golden cage. Of this bird he dreamt" (Sansara, paragraph 10) The dream that wakes him.
- "He was a feared gambler, few dared to take him on" (Sansara, paragraph 6) Gambling shows how far he has fallen into the game of the world.
- "She opened the door of the cage, took the bird out and let it fly" (Sansara, paragraph 17) Kamala's response to his disappearance: she understands.

Model claim-evidence-reasoning

Claim: The songbird in the golden cage symbolizes Siddhartha's spirit, silenced by the comfortable prison of wealth.
Evidence: "Kamala owned a small, rare singing bird in a golden cage. Of this bird he dreamt" (Sansara, paragraph 10)
Reasoning: He dreams that the bird in its "golden cage" has become mute, and after he leaves, Kamala "opened the door of the cage, took the bird out and let it fly," marking his release.

Passages referenced in this lesson (full text)

As he slowly left on stiff legs in the first light of day the still quiet town, a shadow rose near the last hut, who had crouched there, and joined the pilgrim—Govinda. (The Son of the Brahmin, paragraph 50)

Quoth Siddhartha: "Yesterday, O exalted one, I had been privileged to hear your wondrous teachings. Together with my friend, I had come from afar, to hear your teachings. And now my friend is going to stay with your people, he has taken his refuge with you. But I will again start on my pilgrimage." (Gotama, paragraph 31)

"I wish that you, O exalted one, would not be angry with me," said the young man. "I have not spoken to you like this to argue with you, to argue about words. You are truly right, there is little to opinions. But let me say this one more thing: I have not doubted in you for a single moment. I have not doubted for a single moment that you are Buddha, that you have reached the goal, the highest goal towards which so many thousands of Brahmins and sons of Brahmins are on their way. You have found salvation from death. It has come to you in the course of your own search, on your own path, through thoughts, through meditation, through realizations, through enlightenment. It has not come to you by means of teachings! And—thus is my thought, O exalted one—nobody will obtain salvation by means of teachings! You will not be able to convey and say to anybody, O venerable one, in words and through teachings what has happened to you in the hour of enlightenment! The teachings of the enlightened Buddha contain much, it teaches many to live righteously, to avoid evil. But there is one thing which these so clear, these so venerable teachings do not contain: they do not contain the mystery of what the exalted one has experienced for himself, he alone among hundreds of thousands. This is what I have thought and realized, when I have heard the teachings. This is why I am continuing my travels—not to seek other, better teachings, for I know there are none, but to depart from all teachings and all teachers and to reach my goal by myself or to die. But often, I'll think of this day, O exalted one, and of this hour, when my eyes beheld a holy man." (Gotama, paragraph 37)

I saw a man, Siddhartha thought, a single man, before whom I would have to lower my glance. I do not want to lower my glance before any other, not before any other. No teachings will entice me any more, since this man's teachings have not enticed me. (Gotama, paragraph 45)

"Surely. This too, I have learned from the river: everything is coming back! You too, Samana, will come back. Now farewell! Let your friendship be my reward. Commemorate me when you make offerings to the gods." (Kamala, paragraph 11)

Siddhartha bowed with a smile. "It would be a pity, Kamala, you are so right! It would be such a great pity. No, I shall not lose a single drop of sweetness from your mouth, nor you from mine! So it is settled: Siddhartha will return, once he'll have what he still lacks: clothes, shoes, money. But speak, lovely Kamala, couldn't you still give me one small piece of advice?" (Kamala, paragraph 38)

"Very beautiful are your verses," exclaimed Kamala, "if I was rich, I would give you pieces of gold for them. But it will be difficult for you to earn thus much money with verses as you need. For you need a lot of money, if you want to be Kamala's friend." (Kamala, paragraph 50)

Indeed his soul was not with the trade. The business was good enough to provide him with the money for Kamala, and it earned him much more than he needed. Besides from this, Siddhartha's interest and curiosity was only concerned with the people, whose businesses, crafts, worries, pleasures, and acts of foolishness used to be as alien and distant to him as the moon. However easily he succeeded in talking to all of them, in living with all of them, in learning from all of them, he was still aware that there was something which separated him from them and this separating factor was him being a Samana. He saw mankind going through life in a childlike or animallike manner, which he loved and also despised at the same time. He saw them toiling, saw them suffering, and becoming gray for the sake of things which seemed to him to entirely unworthy of this price, for money, for little pleasures, for being slightly honoured, he saw them scolding and insulting each other, he saw them complaining about pain at which a Samana would only smile, and suffering because of deprivations which a Samana would not feel. (With the Childlike People, paragraph 37)

At times he felt, deep in his chest, a dying, quiet voice, which admonished him quietly, lamented quietly; he hardly perceived it. And then, for an hour, he became aware of the strange life he was leading, of him doing lots of things which were only a game, of, though being happy and feeling joy at times, real life still passing him by and not touching him. As a ballplayer plays with his balls, he played with his business deals, with the people around him, watched them, found amusement in them; with his heart, with the source of his being, he was not with them. The source ran somewhere, far away from him, ran and ran invisibly, had nothing to do with his life any more. And at several times he suddenly became scared on account of such thoughts and wished that he would also be gifted with the ability to participate in all of this childlike-naive occupations of the daytime with passion and with his heart, really to live, really to act, really to enjoy and to live instead of just standing by as a spectator. But again and again, he came back to beautiful Kamala, learned the art of love, practised the cult of lust, in which more than in anything else giving and taking becomes one, chatted with her, learned from her, gave her advice, received advice. She understood him better than Govinda used to understand him, she was more similar to him. (With the Childlike People, paragraph 39)

Once, he said to her: "You are like me, you are different from most people. You are Kamala, nothing else, and inside of you, there is a peace and refuge, to which you can go at every hour of the day and be at home at yourself, as I can also do. Few people have this, and yet all could have it." (With the Childlike People, paragraph 40)

"No," said Siddhartha, "that's not the reason why. Kamaswami is just as smart as I, and still has no refuge in himself. Others have it, who are small children with respect to their mind. Most people, Kamala, are like a falling leaf, which is blown and is turning around through the air, and wavers, and tumbles to the ground. But others, a few, are like stars, they go on a fixed course, no wind reaches them, in themselves they have their law and their course. Among all the learned men and Samanas, of which I knew many, there was one of this kind, a perfected one, I'll never be able to forget him. It is that Gotama, the exalted one, who is spreading that teachings. Thousands of followers are listening to his teachings every day, follow his instructions every hour, but they are all falling leaves, not in themselves they have teachings and a law." (With the Childlike People, paragraph 42)

Siddhartha said nothing, and they played the game of love, one of the thirty or forty different games Kamala knew. Her body was flexible like that of a jaguar and like the bow of a hunter; he who had learned from her how to make love, was knowledgeable of many forms of lust, many secrets. For a long time she played with Siddhartha, enticed him, rejected him, forced him, embraced him: enjoyed his masterful skills, until he was defeated and rested exhausted by her side. (With the Childlike People, paragraph 44)

"You are the best lover," she said thoughtfully, "I ever saw. You're stronger than others, more supple, more willing. You've learned my art well, Siddhartha. At some time, when I'll be older, I'd want to bear your child. And yet, my dear, you've remained a Samana, and yet you do not love me, you love nobody. Isn't it so?" (With the Childlike People, paragraph 46)

"It might very well be so," Siddhartha said tiredly. "I am like you. You also do not love—how else could you practise love as a craft? Perhaps people of our kind can't love. The childlike people can; that's their secret." (With the Childlike People, paragraph 47)

For a long time, Siddhartha had lived the life of the world and of lust, though without being a part of it. His senses, which he had killed off in hot years as a Samana, had awoken again, he had tasted riches, had tasted lust, had tasted power; nevertheless he had still remained in his heart for a long time a Samana; Kamala, being smart, had realized this quite right. It was still the art of thinking, of waiting, of fasting, which guided his life; still the people of the world, the childlike people, had remained alien to him as he was alien to them. (Sansara, paragraph 1)

Years passed by; surrounded by the good life, Siddhartha hardly felt them fading away. He had become rich, for quite a while he possessed a house of his own and his own servants, and a garden before the city by the river. The people liked him, they came to him whenever they needed money or advice, but there was nobody close to him, except Kamala. (Sansara, paragraph 2)

That high, bright state of being awake, which he had experienced that one time at the height of his youth, in those days after Gotama's sermon, after the separation from Govinda, that tense expectation, that proud state of standing alone without teachings and without teachers, that supple willingness to listen to the divine voice in his own heart, had slowly become a memory, had been fleeting; distant and quiet, the holy source murmured, which used to be near, which used to murmur within himself. Nevertheless, many things he had learned from the Samanas, he had learned from Gotama, he had learned from his father the Brahmin, had remained within him for a long time afterwards: moderate living, joy of thinking, hours of meditation, secret knowledge of the self, of his eternal entity, which is neither body nor consciousness. Many a part of this he still had, but one part after another had been submerged and had gathered dust. Just as a potter's wheel, once it has been set in motion, will keep on turning for a long time and only slowly lose its vigour and come to a stop, thus Siddhartha's soul had kept on turning the wheel of asceticism, the wheel of thinking, the wheel of differentiation for a long time, still turning, but it turned slowly and hesitantly and was close to coming to a standstill. Slowly, like humidity entering the dying stem of a tree, filling it slowly and making it rot, the world and sloth had entered Siddhartha's soul, slowly it filled his soul, made it heavy, made it tired, put it to sleep. On the other hand, his senses had become alive, there was much they had learned, much they had experienced. (Sansara, paragraph 3)

Siddhartha had learned to trade, to use his power over people, to enjoy himself with a woman, he had learned to wear beautiful clothes, to give orders to servants, to bathe in perfumed waters. He had learned to eat tenderly and carefully prepared food, even fish, even meat and poultry, spices and sweets, and to drink wine, which causes sloth and forgetfulness. He had learned to play with dice and on a chessboard, to watch dancing girls, to have himself carried about in a sedan-chair, to sleep on a soft bed. But still he had felt different from and superior to the others; always he had watched them with some mockery, some mocking disdain, with the same disdain which a Samana constantly feels for the people of the world. When Kamaswami was ailing, when he was annoyed, when he felt insulted, when he was vexed by his worries as a merchant, Siddhartha had always watched it with mockery. Just slowly and imperceptibly, as the harvest seasons and rainy seasons passed by, his mockery had become more tired, his superiority had become more quiet. Just slowly, among his growing riches, Siddhartha had assumed something of the childlike people's ways for himself, something of their childlikeness and of their fearfulness. And yet, he envied them, envied them just the more, the more similar he became to them. He envied them for the one thing that was missing from him and that they had, the importance they were able to attach to their lives, the amount of passion in their joys and fears, the fearful but sweet happiness of being constantly in love. These people were all of the time in love with themselves, with women, with their children, with honours or money, with plans or hopes. But he did not learn this from them, this out of all things, this joy of a child and this foolishness of a child; he learned from them out of all things the unpleasant ones, which he himself despised. It happened more and more often that, in the morning after having had company the night before, he stayed in bed for a long time, felt unable to think and tired. It happened that he became angry and impatient, when Kamaswami bored him with his worries. It happened that he laughed just too loud, when he lost a game of dice. His face was still smarter and more spiritual than others, but it rarely laughed, and assumed, one after another, those features which are so often found in the faces of rich people, those features of discontent, of sickliness, of ill-humour, of sloth, of a lack of love. Slowly the disease of the soul, which rich people have, grabbed hold of him. (Sansara, paragraph 4)

Like a veil, like a thin mist, tiredness came over Siddhartha, slowly, getting a bit denser every day, a bit murkier every month, a bit heavier every year. As a new dress becomes old in time, loses its beautiful colour in time, gets stains, gets wrinkles, gets worn off at the seams, and starts to show threadbare spots here and there, thus Siddhartha's new life, which he had started after his separation from Govinda, had grown old, lost colour and splendour as the years passed by, was gathering wrinkles and stains, and hidden at bottom, already showing its ugliness here and there, disappointment and disgust were waiting. Siddhartha did not notice it. He only noticed that this bright and reliable voice inside of him, which had awoken in him at that time and had ever guided him in his best times, had become silent. (Sansara, paragraph 5)

He had been captured by the world, by lust, covetousness, sloth, and finally also by that vice which he had used to despise and mock the most as the most foolish one of all vices: greed. Property, possessions, and riches also had finally captured him; they were no longer a game and trifles to him, had become a shackle and a burden. On a strange and devious way, Siddhartha had gotten into this final and most base of all dependencies, by means of the game of dice. It was since that time, when he had stopped being a Samana in his heart, that Siddhartha began to play the game for money and precious things, which he at other times only joined with a smile and casually as a custom of the childlike people, with an increasing rage and passion. He was a feared gambler, few dared to take him on, so high and audacious were his stakes. He played the game due to a pain of his heart, losing and wasting his wretched money in the game brought him an angry joy, in no other way he could demonstrate his disdain for wealth, the merchants' false god, more clearly and more mockingly. Thus he gambled with high stakes and mercilessly, hating himself, mocking himself, won thousands, threw away thousands, lost money, lost jewelry, lost a house in the country, won again, lost again. That fear, that terrible and petrifying fear, which he felt while he was rolling the dice, while he was worried about losing high stakes, that fear he loved and sought to always renew it, always increase it, always get it to a slightly higher level, for in this feeling alone he still felt something like happiness, something like an intoxication, something like an elevated form of life in the midst of his saturated, lukewarm, dull life. (Sansara, paragraph 6)

And after each big loss, his mind was set on new riches, pursued the trade more zealously, forced his debtors more strictly to pay, because he wanted to continue gambling, he wanted to continue squandering, continue demonstrating his disdain of wealth. Siddhartha lost his calmness when losses occurred, lost his patience when he was not paid on time, lost his kindness towards beggars, lost his disposition for giving away and loaning money to those who petitioned him. He, who gambled away tens of thousands at one roll of the dice and laughed at it, became more strict and more petty in his business, occasionally dreaming at night about money! And whenever he woke up from this ugly spell, whenever he found his face in the mirror at the bedroom's wall to have aged and become more ugly, whenever embarrassment and disgust came over him, he continued fleeing, fleeing into a new game, fleeing into a numbing of his mind brought on by sex, by wine, and from there he fled back into the urge to pile up and obtain possessions. In this pointless cycle he ran, growing tired, growing old, growing ill. (Sansara, paragraph 7)

Then the time came when a dream warned him. He had spent the hours of the evening with Kamala, in her beautiful pleasure-garden. They had been sitting under the trees, talking, and Kamala had said thoughtful words, words behind which a sadness and tiredness lay hidden. She had asked him to tell her about Gotama, and could not hear enough of him, how clear his eyes, how still and beautiful his mouth, how kind his smile, how peaceful his walk had been. For a long time, he had to tell her about the exalted Buddha, and Kamala had sighed and had said: "One day, perhaps soon, I'll also follow that Buddha. I'll give him my pleasure-garden for a gift and take my refuge in his teachings." But after this, she had aroused him, and had tied him to her in the act of making love with painful fervour, biting and in tears, as if, once more, she wanted to squeeze the last sweet drop out of this vain, fleeting pleasure. Never before, it had become so strangely clear to Siddhartha, how closely lust was akin to death. Then he had lain by her side, and Kamala's face had been close to him, and under her eyes and next to the corners of her mouth he had, as clearly as never before, read a fearful inscription, an inscription of small lines, of slight grooves, an inscription reminiscent of autumn and old age, just as Siddhartha himself, who was only in his forties, had already noticed, here and there, gray hairs among his black ones. Tiredness was written on Kamala's beautiful face, tiredness from walking a long path, which has no happy destination, tiredness and the beginning of withering, and concealed, still unsaid, perhaps not even conscious anxiety: fear of old age, fear of the autumn, fear of having to die. With a sigh, he had bid his farewell to her, the soul full of reluctance, and full of concealed anxiety. (Sansara, paragraph 8)

Then, Siddhartha had spent the night in his house with dancing girls and wine, had acted as if he was superior to them towards the fellow members of his caste, though this was no longer true, had drunk much wine and gone to bed a long time after midnight, being tired and yet excited, close to weeping and despair, and had for a long time sought to sleep in vain, his heart full of misery which he thought he could not bear any longer, full of a disgust which he felt penetrating his entire body like the lukewarm, repulsive taste of the wine, the just too sweet, dull music, the just too soft smile of the dancing girls, the just too sweet scent of their hair and breasts. But more than by anything else, he was disgusted by himself, by his perfumed hair, by the smell of wine from his mouth, by the flabby tiredness and listlessness of his skin. Like when someone, who has eaten and drunk far too much, vomits it back up again with agonising pain and is nevertheless glad about the relief, thus this sleepless man wished to free himself of these pleasures, these habits and all of this pointless life and himself, in an immense burst of disgust. Not until the light of the morning and the beginning of the first activities in the street before his city-house, he had slightly fallen asleep, had found for a few moments a half unconsciousness, a hint of sleep. In those moments, he had a dream: (Sansara, paragraph 9)

Kamala owned a small, rare singing bird in a golden cage. Of this bird he dreamt. He dreamt: this bird had become mute, who at other times always used to sing in the morning, and since this arose his attention, he stepped in front of the cage and looked inside; there the small bird was dead and lay stiff on the ground. He took it out, weighed it for a moment in his hand, and then threw it away, out in the street, and in the same moment, he felt terribly shocked, and his heart hurt, as if he had thrown away from himself all value and everything good by throwing out this dead bird. (Sansara, paragraph 10)

Starting up from this dream, he felt encompassed by a deep sadness. Worthless, so it seemed to him, worthless and pointless was the way he had been going through life; nothing which was alive, nothing which was in some way delicious or worth keeping he had left in his hands. Alone he stood there and empty like a castaway on the shore. (Sansara, paragraph 11)

With a gloomy mind, Siddhartha went to the pleasure-garden he owned, locked the gate, sat down under a mango tree, felt death in his heart and horror in his chest, sat and sensed how everything died in him, withered in him, came to an end in him. By and by, he gathered his thoughts, and in his mind, he once again went the entire path of his life, starting with the first days he could remember. When was there ever a time when he had experienced happiness, felt a true bliss? Oh yes, several times he had experienced such a thing. In his years as a boy, he has had a taste of it, when he had obtained praise from the Brahmins, he had felt it in his heart: "There is a path in front of the one who has distinguished himself in the recitation of the holy verses, in the dispute with the learned ones, as an assistant in the offerings." Then, he had felt it in his heart: "There is a path in front of you, you are destined for, the gods are awaiting you." And again, as a young man, when the ever rising, upward fleeing, goal of all thinking had ripped him out of and up from the multitude of those seeking the same goal, when he wrestled in pain for the purpose of Brahman, when every obtained knowledge only kindled new thirst in him, then again he had, in the midst of the thirst, in the midst of the pain felt this very same thing: "Go on! Go on! You are called upon!" He had heard this voice when he had left his home and had chosen the life of a Samana, and again when he had gone away from the Samanas to that perfected one, and also when he had gone away from him to the uncertain. For how long had he not heard this voice any more, for how long had he reached no height any more, how even and dull was the manner in which his path had passed through life, for many long years, without a high goal, without thirst, without elevation, content with small lustful pleasures and yet never satisfied! For all of these many years, without knowing it himself, he had tried hard and longed to become a man like those many, like those children, and in all this, his life had been much more miserable and poorer than theirs, and their goals were not his, nor their worries; after all, that entire world of the Kamaswami-people had only been a game to him, a dance he would watch, a comedy. Only Kamala had been dear, had been valuable to him—but was she still thus? Did he still need her, or she him? Did they not play a game without an ending? Was it necessary to live for this? No, it was not necessary! The name of this game was Sansara, a game for children, a game which was perhaps enjoyable to play once, twice, ten times—but for ever and ever over again? (Sansara, paragraph 12)

Then, Siddhartha knew that the game was over, that he could not play it any more. Shivers ran over his body, inside of him, so he felt, something had died. (Sansara, paragraph 13)

That entire day, he sat under the mango tree, thinking of his father, thinking of Govinda, thinking of Gotama. Did he have to leave them to become a Kamaswami? He still sat there, when the night had fallen. When, looking up, he caught sight of the stars, he thought: "Here I'm sitting under my mango tree, in my pleasure-garden." He smiled a little—was it really necessary, was it right, was it not as foolish game, that he owned a mango tree, that he owned a garden? (Sansara, paragraph 14)

He also put an end to this, this also died in him. He rose, bid his farewell to the mango tree, his farewell to the pleasure-garden. Since he had been without food this day, he felt strong hunger, and thought of his house in the city, of his chamber and bed, of the table with the meals on it. He smiled tiredly, shook himself, and bid his farewell to these things. (Sansara, paragraph 15)

In the same hour of the night, Siddhartha left his garden, left the city, and never came back. For a long time, Kamaswami had people look for him, thinking that he had fallen into the hands of robbers. Kamala had no one look for him. When she was told that Siddhartha had disappeared, she was not astonished. Did she not always expect it? Was he not a Samana, a man who was at home nowhere, a pilgrim? And most of all, she had felt this the last time they had been together, and she was happy, in spite of all the pain of the loss, that she had pulled him so affectionately to her heart for this last time, that she had felt one more time to be so completely possessed and penetrated by him. (Sansara, paragraph 16)

When she received the first news of Siddhartha's disappearance, she went to the window, where she held a rare singing bird captive in a golden cage. She opened the door of the cage, took the bird out and let it fly. For a long time, she gazed after it, the flying bird. From this day on, she received no more visitors and kept her house locked. But after some time, she became aware that she was pregnant from the last time she was together with Siddhartha. (Sansara, paragraph 17)

Vocabulary with etymology notes

Word	Definition (in this sentence)	In context	Word history
gambled (verb)	played games of chance for money	Thus he gambled with high stakes and mercilessly, hating himself, mocking himself, won thousands, threw away thousands, lost money, lost jewelry, lost a house in the country, won again, lost again.
castaway (noun)	a person left stranded after a shipwreck	Alone he stood there and empty like a castaway on the shore.
demonstrating (verb)	showing clearly	And after each big loss, his mind was set on new riches, pursued the trade more zealously, forced his debtors more strictly to pay, because he wanted to continue gambling, he wanted to continue squandering, continue demonstrating his disdain of wealth.

mockingly (adverb)	in a disrespectful jeering manner	He played the game due to a pain of his heart, losing and wasting his wretched money in the game brought him an angry joy, in no other way he could demonstrate his disdain for wealth, the merchants' false god, more clearly and more mockingly.
zealously (adverb)	with great energy and eagerness	And after each big loss, his mind was set on new riches, pursued the trade more zealously, forced his debtors more strictly to pay, because he wanted to continue gambling, he wanted to continue squandering, continue demonstrating his disdain of wealth.
debtors (noun)	a person who owes a creditor; someone who has the obligation of paying a debt	And after each big loss, his mind was set on new riches, pursued the trade more zealously, forced his debtors more strictly to pay, because he wanted to continue gambling, he wanted to continue squandering, continue demonstrating his disdain of wealth.
encompassed (verb)	surrounded	Starting up from this dream, he felt encompassed by a deep sadness.
poultry (noun)	chickens, ducks and similar birds raised for food	He had learned to eat tenderly and carefully prepared food, even fish, even meat and poultry, spices and sweets, and to drink wine, which causes sloth and forgetfulness.

Discussion questions

1. What does the dead songbird symbolize?
2. Where does symbolism appear in this chapter, and what effect does it have? Point to one passage.
3. How does this chapter connect to the book's larger concern with experience versus teaching?

Tiered discussion questions (30: recall, inferential, evaluative)

Wait time after every question (3 s for DOK 1, 5 s for DOK 2, 8 to 10 s for DOK 3 and 4); think-pair-share on DOK 3 and 4; answer each response with a follow-up probe; close with student-generated questions. Focus sets by rigor level: HS Sophomore: 1, 2, 3, 4, 13, 14, 15, 16, 17, 23, 24, 25; HS Junior: 1, 2, 3, 14, 15, 16, 17, 18, 24, 25, 26, 27; HS Senior: 1, 2, 3, 15, 16, 17, 18, 25, 26, 27, 28, 29; AP: 1, 2, 16, 17, 18, 19, 20, 26, 27, 28, 29, 30; College Freshman: 1, 2, 17, 18, 19, 20, 21, 22, 27, 28, 29, 30; College Sophomore: 1, 2, 11, 18, 19, 20, 21, 22, 23, 28, 29, 30; College Junior: 1, 11, 12, 19, 20, 21, 22, 23, 24, 25, 29, 30; College Senior: 1, 11, 12, 13, 20, 21, 22, 23, 24, 25, 26, 30; Graduate / PhD: 1, 11, 12, 13, 21, 22, 23, 24, 25, 26, 27, 28

Literal / recall

1. Which line shows how Siddhartha used to look down on the childlike people? Read it to us. [DOK 1 · Cold call with support: call on a student by name, offering a sentence starter or rephrasing if needed · wait 3 s · Dual Credit (Indiana College Core): ICC-WC-1.1, ICC-WC-1.3, ICC-WC-1.4, ICC-WC-1.5] Look for: The line on watching them with "some mocking disdain"
   Answer guidance: The disdain line: "always he had watched them with some mockery, some mocking disdain, with the same disdain which a Samana constantly feels for the people of the world" (Sansara, paragraph 4). The repeated "disdain" shows how far above them he once felt.

2. Why does the dream about the songbird shake Siddhartha so deeply? [DOK 1 · Turn and Talk: students discuss briefly with a neighbor before answering · wait 3 s · Dual Credit (Indiana College Core): ICC-WC-1.1, ICC-WC-1.3, ICC-WC-1.4, ICC-WC-1.5] Look for: The dead bird feels like his own worth thrown away
   Answer guidance: When he throws the dead bird out, "his heart hurt, as if he had thrown away from himself all value and everything good by throwing out this dead bird" (Sansara, paragraph 10). The mute bird mirrors the inner voice that has gone silent in him.
3. What does Kamala do when she hears that Siddhartha has disappeared? [DOK 1 · Cold call with support: call on a student by name, offering a sentence starter or rephrasing if needed · wait 3 s · Dual Credit (Indiana College Core): ICC-WC-1.1, ICC-WC-1.3, ICC-WC-1.4, ICC-WC-1.5] Look for: She sets free the rare singing bird from its golden cage
   Answer guidance: "She opened the door of the cage, took the bird out and let it fly." (Sansara, paragraph 17)
4. What does Siddhartha do in his mind as he sits under the tree after the dream? [DOK 1 · Turn and Talk: students discuss briefly with a neighbor before answering · wait 3 s · Dual Credit (Indiana College Core): ICC-WC-1.1, ICC-WC-1.3, ICC-WC-1.4, ICC-WC-1.5] Look for: He goes back over the whole path of his life from his first memories
   Answer guidance: "By and by, he gathered his thoughts, and in his mind, he once again went the entire path of his life, starting with the first days he could remember." (Sansara, paragraph 12)
5. What is Sansara? [DOK 1 · Cold call with support: call on a student by name, offering a sentence starter or rephrasing if needed · wait 3 s · Dual Credit (Indiana College Core): ICC-WC-1.1, ICC-WC-1.3, ICC-WC-1.4, ICC-WC-1.5] Look for: The cycle of suffering and rebirth
   Answer guidance: The cycle of desire, suffering and rebirth; here Siddhartha names it as an endless children's game: "The name of this game was Sansara, a game for children" (Sansara, paragraph 12).
6. Retell the three most important events of "Sansara" in order, in one sentence each. [DOK 1 · Turn and Talk: students discuss briefly with a neighbor before answering · wait 3 s · Dual Credit (Indiana College Core): ICC-WC-1.1, ICC-WC-1.3, ICC-WC-1.4, ICC-WC-1.5] Look for: Over many years Siddhartha grows wealthy, gambles, drinks, and becomes greedy and weary—like the childlike people. Kamala tells him she wishes to learn about Gotama. After a dream of Kamala's songbird lying dead in its golden cage, Siddhartha feels disgust at his life and leaves the city without a word. Kamala, pregnant with his child, frees her bird.
   Answer guidance: Over the years Siddhartha sinks into wealth, gambling and weariness (Sansara, paragraphs 2–7); he dreams of Kamala's dead songbird and feels his life is worthless (paragraphs 10–11); he leaves his garden and the city for good, and Kamala frees her bird (paragraphs 15–17).
7. Which characters appear or are mentioned in "Sansara"? Name two and one thing each says or does. [DOK 1 · Cold call with support: call on a student by name, offering a sentence starter or rephrasing if needed · wait 3 s · Dual Credit (Indiana College Core): ICC-WC-1.1, ICC-WC-1.3, ICC-WC-1.4, ICC-WC-1.5] Look for: Names and actions taken from the chapter; check against the teacher summary.
   Answer guidance: Two of: Kamala, who speaks of the Buddha with sadness and frees her bird (paragraphs 8, 17); Kamaswami, whose business Siddhartha pursues more pettily (paragraph 7); Gotama, Govinda and his father, whom he remembers under the mango tree (paragraph 14).
8. Where and when does "Sansara" take place? Point to the line that tells you. [DOK 1 · Turn and Talk: students discuss briefly with a neighbor before answering · wait 3 s · Dual Credit (Indiana College Core): ICC-WC-1.1, ICC-WC-1.3, ICC-WC-1.4, ICC-WC-1.5] Look for: A place/time detail quoted from the chapter.
   Answer guidance: In the city, his pleasure-garden and Kamala's grove, over many years: "Years passed by; surrounded by the good life, Siddhartha hardly felt them fading away." (Sansara, paragraph 2)

9. Reread: “Just slowly and imperceptibly, as the harvest seasons and rainy seasons passed by, his mockery had become more tired, his superiority had become more quiet.” What does “imperceptibly” mean here, and what is literally happening in this line? [DOK 1 · Turn and Talk: students discuss briefly with a neighbor before answering · wait 3 s · Dual Credit (Indiana College Core): ICC-WC-1.1, ICC-WC-1.3, ICC-WC-1.4, ICC-WC-1.5] Look for: imperceptibly: so gradually that it could not be noticed.
   Answer guidance: “Imperceptibly” here means: so gradually that it could not be noticed. In Sansara, paragraph 4, over the years Siddhartha changes so slowly that he does not notice his mockery and pride fading.
10. Reread: “On a strange and devious way, Siddhartha had gotten into this final and most base of all dependencies, by means of the game of dice.” What does “devious” mean here, and what is literally happening in this line? [DOK 1 · Turn and Talk: students discuss briefly with a neighbor before answering · wait 3 s · Dual Credit (Indiana College Core): ICC-WC-1.1, ICC-WC-1.3, ICC-WC-1.4, ICC-WC-1.5] Look for: devious: indirect and winding; not straightforward.
    Answer guidance: “Devious” here means: indirect and winding; not straightforward. In Sansara, paragraph 6, by a roundabout path, Siddhartha has fallen into his worst dependency, gambling with dice.

Inferential / analytical

1. What does “Sansara” suggest about the cycle of desire? State the inference and the line that supports it. [DOK 2 · Think-Pair-Share: students think alone, discuss with a partner, then share with the class · wait 5 s · Dual Credit (Indiana College Core): ICC-WC-1.1, ICC-WC-1.3, ICC-WC-1.4, ICC-WC-1.5] Look for: A stated inference (for example, that desire feeds on itself: each loss makes him want more) backed by one located line, such as the one in Sansara, paragraph 7.
   Answer guidance: The chapter suggests that desire feeds on itself: each loss makes him want more. Support: “And after each big loss, his mind was set on new riches” (Sansara, paragraph 7).
2. Find one example of symbolism in this chapter. What does it reveal that a plain statement would not? [DOK 2 · Follow-up: ask a probing question that builds on the previous answer · wait 5 s · Dual Credit (Indiana College Core): ICC-WC-1.1, ICC-WC-1.3, ICC-WC-1.4, ICC-WC-1.5] Look for: Look for objects, places or actions that stand for larger ideas.
   Answer guidance: The caged songbird (Sansara, paragraphs 10 and 17) stands for the inner voice that has gone silent in him; a plain statement would not carry the sense of beauty kept prisoner and then dead.
3. How does the theme in this chapter shape what we understand about the cycle of desire? [DOK 3 · Think-Pair-Share: students think alone, discuss with a partner, then share with the class · wait 8 s · Dual Credit (Indiana College Core): ICC-WC-1.1, ICC-WC-1.3, ICC-WC-1.4, ICC-WC-1.5] Look for: Look for statements or moments that connect to the book's big ideas.
   Answer guidance: The theme of the cycle is named in the game image (“a game which was perhaps enjoyable to play once, twice, ten times—but for ever and ever over again?” (Sansara, paragraph 12)): pleasure repeated endlessly becomes the trap.
4. In the passage that begins “She had asked him to tell her about Gotama, and could not hear enough of him, how clear his eyes, how still and beautiful his mouth, how kind his smile, how peaceful his walk had been.”, why might Hesse have chosen these particular words? Pick two and explain their connotations. [DOK 2 · Follow-up: ask a probing question that builds on the previous answer · wait 5 s · Dual Credit (Indiana College Core): ICC-WC-1.1, ICC-WC-1.3, ICC-WC-1.4, ICC-WC-1.5] Look for: Diction analysis of two words in the anchor passage.
   Answer guidance: In Sansara, paragraph 8, “could not hear enough” shows Kamala’s hunger for something her life lacks, and the gentle adjectives “still” and “peaceful” set Gotama’s calm against the restless pleasure-garden; the words quietly prepare her turn toward the Buddha.

5. What causes the main turn in “Sansara”, and what effect is it likely to have on what follows? [DOK 2 · Follow-up: ask a probing question that builds on the previous answer · wait 5 s · Dual Credit (Indiana College Core): ICC-WC-1.1, ICC-WC-1.3, ICC-WC-1.4, ICC-WC-1.5] Look for: Over many years Siddhartha grows wealthy, gambles, drinks, and becomes greedy and weary—like the childlike people. Kamala tells him she wishes to learn about Gotama. After a dream of Kamala's songbird lying dead in its golden cage, Siddhartha feels disgust at his life and leaves the city without a…
   Answer guidance: The cause is the dream of the dead bird and the sadness after it (Sansara, paragraphs 10–11). Effect: he sees that the game is over (paragraph 13) and leaves the city.
6. How does “Sansara” build on “With the Childlike People”? Name one link of cause and effect. [DOK 3 · Think-Pair-Share: students think alone, discuss with a partner, then share with the class · wait 8 s · Dual Credit (Indiana College Core): ICC-WC-1.1, ICC-WC-1.3, ICC-WC-1.4, ICC-WC-1.5] Look for: A causal or structural link between this and the previous chapter.
   Answer guidance: Cause and effect: in “With the Childlike People” he played at trade and love while a quiet voice warned him; here the game takes him over, “For a long time, Siddhartha had lived the life of the world and of lust, though without being a part of it.” (Sansara, paragraph 1)
7. What can we infer about a character's motives from what they say and do here, as opposed to what they claim? [DOK 3 · Follow-up: ask a probing question that builds on the previous answer · wait 8 s · Dual Credit (Indiana College Core): ICC-WC-1.1, ICC-WC-1.3, ICC-WC-1.4, ICC-WC-1.5] Look for: An inference about motive supported by a quoted line.
   Answer guidance: Siddhartha gambles as if he despised money (Sansara, paragraph 7, he “laughed at it”) but dreams of it at night; Kamala claims nothing, but her words about the Buddha (paragraph 8) show she longs for something else too.
8. The bell-ringer asked: “What does the dead songbird symbolize?” Now that we have read closely, how would you revise your first answer, and which line changed your mind? [DOK 2 · Think-Pair-Share: students think alone, discuss with a partner, then share with the class · wait 5 s · Dual Credit (Indiana College Core): ICC-WC-1.1, ICC-WC-1.3, ICC-WC-1.4, ICC-WC-1.5] Look for: A revised answer anchored in the text.
   Answer guidance: A revised answer should tie the bird to what died in Siddhartha (the inner voice of the previous chapter) and cite “Of this bird he dreamt.” (Sansara, paragraph 10); Kamala freeing it in paragraph 17 adds that she too lets something go.
9. Where does tone / mood appear, and how does it connect this chapter to the larger concern with experience versus teaching? [DOK 3 · Follow-up: ask a probing question that builds on the previous answer · wait 8 s · Dual Credit (Indiana College Core): ICC-WC-1.1, ICC-WC-1.3, ICC-WC-1.4, ICC-WC-1.5] Look for: Look for word choices that reveal the narrator's attitude or the scene's feeling.
   Answer guidance: The mood is heavy and tired (Sansara, paragraph 5, the veil and the old dress); it connects to the larger concern because despair is what finally turns him back toward the search.
10. Background: Samsara (spelled 'Sansara' in this translation) is the cycle of birth, suffering and rebirth. How does knowing this change the way you read one moment in the chapter? [DOK 3 · Think-Pair-Share: students think alone, discuss with a partner, then share with the class · wait 8 s · Dual Credit (Indiana College Core): ICC-WC-1.1, ICC-WC-1.3, ICC-WC-1.4, ICC-WC-1.5] Look for: A specific moment reread in light of the context.
    Answer guidance: Knowing Samsara is the cycle of birth, suffering and rebirth makes his game image exact (Sansara, paragraph 12): repeated pleasure is itself a small Samsara.

Evaluative / synthesis / creative

1. A critic might argue: "The caged songbird is the book's clearest symbol of Siddhartha's trapped inner voice." How far do you agree? Take a stand and defend it with two lines from the chapter. [DOK 3 · Four Corners: students move to the corner that matches their position and explain why · wait 8 s · ICC-WC-1.5] Look for: A defended position with evidence and one counterpoint.
   Answer guidance: Agree it is a central symbol (paragraphs 10 and 17), but a counterpoint from the text is the old-dress image of paragraph 5 or the game of paragraph 12, which describe the trap just as clearly.
2. Which character in this chapter acts most wisely, and which least? Judge them by a standard you name. [DOK 3 · Think-Pair-Share: students think alone, discuss with a partner, then share with the class · wait 8 s · ICC-WC-1.5] Look for: An evaluation using an explicit criterion and evidence.
   Answer guidance: With self-knowledge as the standard, Kamala is wisest: she frees the bird and keeps her sadness honest (paragraphs 8, 17); Siddhartha least in his gambling (paragraph 6), though he is also the one who finally sees and leaves.
3. Rewrite one moment of "Sansara" from the point of view of a different character. What does the new angle reveal or hide about the cycle of desire? [DOK 4 · Think-Pair-Share: students think alone, discuss with a partner, then share with the class · wait 8 s · ICC-WC-1.5] Look for: A rewrite that keeps the chapter's events accurate, speaks in the chosen character's voice, and ends with a sentence on what the new angle shows or hides.
   Answer guidance: Kamala's view of his disappearance (Sansara, paragraph 17) works well: from her window the departure looks like loss, and it hides the despair under the mango tree.
4. Write three questions of your own about "Sansara": one recall, one "why/how", and one "should/what if". Trade with a partner and answer theirs. [DOK 3 · Student-generated: students write and pose their own questions · wait 8 s · ICC-WC-1.5] Look for: Three questions at three levels, each answerable from the chapter, traded and answered with a line.
   Answer guidance: Example set: recall, 'What does Kamala do with her bird?' (paragraph 17); why/how, 'Why does Siddhartha leave?' (paragraphs 11–13); what if, 'Should he have told Kamala?'
5. Connect this chapter to the unity of all things: is the link strong or weak so far? What would Hesse need to show next to strengthen it? [DOK 4 · Socratic circle: an inner circle discusses while the outer circle listens and takes notes, then they switch · wait 8 s · ICC-WC-1.5] Look for: A judgment of thematic development across the work.
   Answer guidance: Weak: the chapter shows division, not unity, as he lives without being part of the world (paragraph 1). Hesse would need to show him reconnect with the world, which the river chapters begin.
6. Is the symbolism in this chapter effective, or does it feel heavy-handed? Evaluate it as a reader would in a review. [DOK 3 · Four Corners: students move to the corner that matches their position and explain why · wait 8 s · ICC-WC-1.5] Look for: An evaluative judgment with criteria and evidence.
   Answer guidance: Effective for most readers: the bird is introduced in a dream and paid off by Kamala's act (paragraph 17). Some find the parallel too neat.
7. Compare how "Sansara" treats the cycle of desire with how another text, film or event you know treats a similar idea. What does Siddhartha see that the other misses? [DOK 4 · Socratic circle: an inner circle discusses while the outer circle listens and takes notes, then they switch · wait 8 s · ICC-WC-1.5] Look for: A cross-text synthesis.
   Answer guidance: A comparison should name a story of success that turns empty and quote "The name of this game was Sansara, a game for children" (Sansara, paragraph 12); Siddhartha's case is that he knows better and still falls.

8. Predict what “By the River” will bring, using two clues from this chapter. After reading, evaluate your prediction. [DOK 3 · Think-Pair-Share: students think alone, discuss with a partner, then share with the class · wait 8 s · ICC-WC-1.5] Look for: A prediction or judgment justified with textual clues.
   Answer guidance: Clues: he leaves the city in the night (Sansara, paragraph 16) and remembers his father, Govinda and Gotama (paragraph 14). Prediction: he will return to nature or the river in despair, looking for what he lost.
9. Design a one-paragraph modern adaptation of this chapter (setting, characters, conflict). What must stay the same for it to still be about the cycle of desire? [DOK 4 · Think-Pair-Share: students think alone, discuss with a partner, then share with the class · wait 8 s · ICC-WC-1.5] Look for: A modern setting, characters and conflict that keep the chapter’s core idea, with the one element that must not change named.
   Answer guidance: A modern version keeps a successful person who wakes up to a life of habits and walks away. What must stay is the moment of seeing the ‘game’ for what it is (paragraph 13).
10. What question would you most like to ask Hermann Hesse about this chapter, and what answer do you think the text itself gives? [DOK 4 · Student-generated: students write and pose their own questions · wait 8 s · ICC-WC-1.5] Look for: A student-generated question answered from evidence.
    Answer guidance: Example: ‘Why did it take so many years for Siddhartha to leave?’ The text says the tiredness came “slowly, getting a bit denser every day” (Sansara, paragraph 5).

Annotation focus

- Symbolism: look for objects, places or actions that stand for larger ideas (anchor passage in the We do segment)
- Also notice Theme: statements or moments that connect to the book's big ideas
- Also notice Tone / mood: word choices that reveal the narrator's attitude or the scene's feeling

Chapter quiz: item bank (all eleven rigor versions)

1. [fill · recall · DOK 1] Complete the quotation from Sansara, paragraph 5: “He only noticed that this bright and _____ voice inside of him, which had awoken in him at that time and had ever guided him in his best times, had become silent.” Word bank: reliable, false, lying, rasping
   Key: reliable
2. [mc · recall · DOK 1] In the line “Alone he stood there and empty like a castaway on the shore.”, what does “castaway” most nearly mean?
   A. a person left stranded after a shipwreck
   B. people who punish themselves for their sins
   C. perfumed oils and creams
   D. a prayer asking God's help as part of a religious service
   Key: A (a person left stranded after a shipwreck)
3. [fill · recall · DOK 1] Complete the quotation from Sansara, paragraph 10: “Kamala owned a small, rare _____ bird in a golden cage. Of this bird he dreamt” Word bank: mooing, roaring, singing, barking
   Key: singing
4. [mc · recall · DOK 1] What happens to Siddhartha over the years in the city?
   A. He becomes a ferryman on the river
   B. He becomes poor

C. He becomes a holy man

D. He becomes greedy and weary

Key: D (He becomes greedy and weary)

5. [mc · recall · DOK 1] In the line "in no other way he could demonstrate his disdain for wealth, the merchants' false god, more clearly and more mockingly.", what does "mockingly" most nearly mean?

   A. with appreciation; in a grateful manner

   B. with great energy and eagerness

   C. in a wonderful, marvellous way

   D. in a scornful, jeering way

   Key: D (in a scornful, jeering way)

6. [fill · recall · DOK 1] Complete the quotation from Sansara, paragraph 4: "When Kamaswami was ailing, when he was annoyed, when he felt _____, when he was vexed by his worries as a merchant, Siddhartha had always watched it with mockery." Word bank: insulted, cheerful, delighted, grateful

   Key: insulted

7. [mc · recall · DOK 1] Which word completes this sentence from Sansara, paragraph 4? "But he did not learn this from them, this out of all things, this joy of a child and this _____ of a child; he learned from them out of all things the unpleasant ones, which he himself despised."

   A. foolishness

   B. patience

   C. dignity

   D. silence

   Key: A (foolishness)

8. [fill · recall · DOK 1] Complete the quotation from Sansara, paragraph 8: "He had spent the hours of the evening with Kamala, in her beautiful _____." Word bank: prison, pleasure-garden, shipyard, quarry

   Key: pleasure-garden

9. [fill · recall · DOK 1] Complete the quotation from Sansara, paragraph 6: "He was a feared _____, few dared to take him on"

   Key: gambler

10. [mc · recall · DOK 1] How does Siddhartha leave the city?

    A. On a ship

    B. With Kamala

    C. Suddenly, without a word

    D. With a great farewell feast

    Key: C (Suddenly, without a word)

11. [mc · inference · DOK 2] Which choice best states a central concern of "Sansara"?

    A. Awakening to the world

    B. Detachment among the childlike people

    C. Learning to listen from the flowing river

    D. The cycle of desire

    Key: D (The cycle of desire)

12. [short · inference · DOK 2] What can you infer from this line? “few dared to take him on, so high and audacious were his stakes” (Sansara, paragraph 6) Answer in two or three sentences with one detail.
    Sample answer: Siddhartha has sunk so deep into the game of the world that he now risks everything in it. The evidence is “few dared to take him on, so high and audacious were his stakes” (Sansara, paragraph 6). The words “high and audacious” show a reckless hunger for the thrill of winning and losing, far from the calm man who once said he could wait.
13. [short · analysis · DOK 3] In this chapter, which theme does the following most directly develop? “to drink wine, which causes sloth and forgetfulness” (Sansara, paragraph 4) Name the theme and explain in two or three sentences, quoting the text.
    Sample answer: The line develops the theme of the senses pulling Siddhartha away from himself. The evidence is “to drink wine, which causes sloth and forgetfulness” (Sansara, paragraph 4). Wine is listed among the pleasures he has learned, and what it makes him forget is the inner voice and the path he once followed.
14. [mc · analysis · DOK 3] Which literary element does this describe in “Sansara”? The dream of Kamala's songbird lying dead in its golden cage: his inner voice has gone silent.
    A. Conflict
    B. Imagery
    C. Allusion
    D. Alliteration

    Key: B (Imagery)
15. [short · analysis · DOK 3] Analyze how this simile shows Siddhartha's decline. “Just as a potter’s wheel, once it has been set in motion, will keep on turning for a long time and only slowly lose its vigour and come to a stop” (Sansara, paragraph 3)
    Sample answer: “Just as a potter’s wheel, once it has been set in motion, will keep on turning for a long time and only slowly lose its vigour and come to a stop” (Sansara, paragraph 3). The wheel keeps turning after the push that started it, slowing gradually; his Samana discipline keeps working for years, then fades bit by bit until worldly life takes over.
16. [fill · recall · DOK 1] Fill in the blank with the vocabulary word that fits: “He had learned to eat tenderly and carefully prepared food, even fish, even meat and _____, spices and sweets” Word bank: jewels, poultry, letters, ships
    Key: poultry
17. [fill · recall · DOK 1] Complete the quotation from Sansara, paragraph 1: “he had tasted riches, had tasted lust, had tasted _____” Word bank: ladders, kettles, power, gravel
    Key: power
18. [mc · recall · DOK 1] In paragraph 1, how do the childlike people still seem to Siddhartha?
    A. Wise and worthy teachers
    B. Alien to him, as he is alien to them
    C. Dangerous enemies
    D. Close friends and brothers

    Key: B (Alien to him, as he is alien to them)
19. [fill · recall · DOK 1] Complete the quotation from Sansara, paragraph 12: “Oh yes, _____ times he had experienced such a thing.”
    Key: several
20. [mc · recall · DOK 1] What symbolic act does Kamala perform after Siddhartha leaves?
    A. Follows him

B. Burns her garden

C. Frees her songbird

D. Marries the merchant Kamaswami

Key: C (Frees her songbird)

21. [mc · recall · DOK 1] In the line “Thus he gambled with high stakes and mercilessly, hating himself, mocking himself, won thousands, threw away thousands, lost money, lost jewelry, lost a house in the country, won again, lost again.”, what does “gambled” most nearly mean?

A. helped develop; helped grow

B. wagered on games of chance

C. longed for something strongly

D. pulled back or moved away

Key: B (wagered on games of chance)

22. [mc · recall · DOK 1] Which word completes this sentence from Sansara, paragraph 16? “Kamala had no one _____ for him.”

A. look

B. sold

C. fallen

D. swum

Key: A (look)

23. [fill · recall · DOK 1] Complete the quotation from Sansara, paragraph 13: “Then, Siddhartha knew that the game was over, that he could not _____ it any more.” Word bank: sing, eat, play, wash

Key: play

24. [mc · recall · DOK 1] In the line “to drink wine, which causes sloth and forgetfulness”, what does “sloth” most nearly mean?

A. laziness

B. courage

C. wisdom

D. hunger

Key: A (laziness)

25. [mc · recall · DOK 1] Which vice, the one he once mocked most, does Siddhartha finally fall into?

A. Pride

B. Anger

C. Envy

D. Greed

Key: D (Greed)

26. [mc · inference · DOK 2] Why does Siddhartha begin gambling for high stakes?

A. To pay off his debts to Kamala

B. To win back his father’s house

C. To help the poor of the city

D. To show his scorn for wealth

Key: D (To show his scorn for wealth)

27. [short · inference · DOK 2] What has changed in Siddhartha's relationship to wealth? Use this line. “Just slowly, among his growing riches, Siddhartha had assumed something of the childlike people’s ways for himself, something of their childlikeness and of their fearfulness.” (Sansara, paragraph 4)
    Sample answer: Wealth has slowly made him like the people he once looked down on: “Just slowly, among his growing riches, Siddhartha had assumed something of the childlike people’s ways for himself, something of their childlikeness and of their fearfulness.” (Sansara, paragraph 4). “Slowly” shows the change crept up on him, and “fearfulness” shows that riches have brought worry, not freedom.

28. [mc · analysis · DOK 3] Which literary element does this describe in “Sansara”? Years pass in summary; Siddhartha slowly takes on the habits he despised: gambling, wine, greed, fear.
    A. Point of view
    B. Structure
    C. Simile
    D. Setting

    Key: B (Structure)

29. [short · analysis · DOK 3] Analyze how this image shows Siddhartha’s state of mind: “Like a veil, like a thin mist, tiredness came over Siddhartha” (Sansara, paragraph 5)
    Sample answer: Siddhartha’s weariness grows so slowly that he barely notices it. The evidence is “Like a veil, like a thin mist, tiredness came over Siddhartha” (Sansara, paragraph 5). A veil and a mist are soft and thin, so the image shows that his tiredness hides the world from him gently, without any single moment of pain.

30. [short · synthesis · DOK 4] Synthesis: trace how love and attachment develops from With the Childlike People to Sansara. Use one quotation from each.
    Sample answer: Without love, attachment fastens on things. In With the Childlike People he admits, “Perhaps people of our kind can’t love. The childlike people can; that’s their secret.” (With the Childlike People, paragraph 47). In Sansara the emptiness fills with possessions: “Property, possessions, and riches also had finally captured him; they were no longer a game and trifles to him, had become a shackle and a burden.” (Sansara, paragraph 6). The emptiness where love should be is filled by possessions.

31. [fill · recall · DOK 1] Complete the quotation from Sansara, paragraph 15: “He also put an end to this, this also _____ in him.” Word bank: swam, died, sang, baked
    Key: died

32. [mc · recall · DOK 1] In the line “He, who gambled away tens of thousands at one roll of the dice and laughed at it, became more strict and more petty in his business”, what does “petty” most nearly mean?
    A. generous; kind
    B. small-minded; mean
    C. brave; bold
    D. sleepy; dull

    Key: B (small-minded; mean)

33. [fill · recall · DOK 1] Fill in the blank with the word that fits: “Kamala had said thoughtful words, words behind which a sadness and _____ lay hidden” Word bank: wealth, tiredness, laughter, music
    Key: tiredness

34. [fill · recall · DOK 1] Complete the quotation from Sansara, paragraph 8: "fear of old age, fear of the _____, fear of having to die."

    Key: autumn

35. [mc · recall · DOK 1] In the line "He had been captured by the world, by lust, covetousness, sloth", what does "covetousness" most nearly mean?

    A. fear of the dark night

    B. love of music and song

    C. sorrow for the dead and lost friends

    D. greedy desire for what others have

    Key: D (greedy desire for what others have)

36. [fill · recall · DOK 1] Complete the quotation from Sansara, paragraph 2: "He had become _____, for quite a while he possessed a house of his own and his own servants"

    Key: rich

37. [mc · recall · DOK 1] What does Kamaswami think has happened when Siddhartha disappears?

    A. He has gone home to his father

    B. He has sailed away on a ship

    C. He has fallen into the hands of robbers

    D. He has gone away to join the Buddha's monks

    Key: C (He has fallen into the hands of robbers)

38. [mc · recall · DOK 1] Kamala had long read the symbols of his unrest. How does she react when told that Siddhartha has disappeared?

    A. She sends men to find him

    B. She curses his name

    C. She is not astonished

    D. She falls ill with grief

    Key: C (She is not astonished)

39. [mc · recall · DOK 1] After his night of wine and dancing girls, to what is Siddhartha's disgust compared?

    A. The cold touch of river water

    B. The lukewarm, repulsive taste of the wine

    C. The smell of the gambling hall

    D. The noise of the market at dawn

    Key: B (The lukewarm, repulsive taste of the wine)

40. [short · inference · DOK 2] What does the way Siddhartha leaves show about him? Use this line. "In the same hour of the night, Siddhartha left his garden, left the city, and never came back." (Sansara, paragraph 16)

    Sample answer: Siddhartha leaves with complete resolve once he sees his life is empty. The evidence is "In the same hour of the night, Siddhartha left his garden, left the city, and never came back." (Sansara, paragraph 16). He goes at once and for good, which shows that he can still cut himself free as he did when he left the Samanas and Gotama.

41. [short · analysis · DOK 3] Analyze the word choice in "took the bird out and let it fly" (Sansara, paragraph 17). Pick two words and explain what they suggest.

    Sample answer: "took the bird out and let it fly" (Sansara, paragraph 17). "Let" shows Kamala releasing the bird by choice, without force or anger. “Fly” gives the bird, and the spirit it stands for, its freedom: she understands that Siddhartha has gone and lets him go.

42. [mc · analysis · DOK 3] Which literary element does this describe in “Sansara”? Siddhartha’s nights are filled with dancing girls, wine, “the just too sweet, dull music, the just too soft smile.”

    A. Dialogue

    B. Imagery

    C. Plot

    D. Alliteration

    Key: B (Imagery)

43. [mc · analysis · DOK 3] Which literary element does this describe in “Sansara”? His weariness comes “a bit denser every day, a bit murkier every month, a bit heavier every year”: the sentence is built from three matching parts that grow with time.

    A. Structure

    B. Hyperbole

    C. Setting

    D. Alliteration

    Key: A (Structure)

44. [short · synthesis · DOK 4] Close reading: how do the diction and syntax of “The name of this game was Sansara, a game for children, a game which was perhaps enjoyable to play once, twice, ten times—but for ever and ever over again?” (Sansara, paragraph 12) shape its meaning? Consider a second, competing reading.

    Sample answer: The sentence names the whole worldly life as a child’s game, “a game for children,” in “The name of this game was Sansara, a game for children, a game which was perhaps enjoyable to play once, twice, ten times—but for ever and ever over again?” (Sansara, paragraph 12); the counting “once, twice, ten times” speeds up and then breaks off at the dash into “for ever and ever,” so the syntax itself turns pleasure into endless repetition, and the question mark turns it into a refusal. A competing reading hears a fond look back at real pleasure, since he admits it was “enjoyable”; but “perhaps” and the final question show that the enjoyment is already doubtful, so the line is a turning away.

45. [short · synthesis · DOK 4] Synthesis: trace how Siddhartha’s attitude toward business develops from With the Childlike People to Sansara. Use one quotation from each.

    Sample answer: Business moves from a game to a prison for Siddhartha. In With the Childlike People, “As a ballplayer plays with his balls, he played with his business deals” (With the Childlike People, paragraph 39). In Sansara, riches “were no longer a game and trifles to him, had become a shackle and a burden” (Sansara, paragraph 6). The first passage shows detachment; the second shows the same deals turned into chains, so the game has captured the player.

46. [fill · recall · DOK 1] Fill in the blank with the word that fits: “On the other hand, his senses had become alive, there was much they had learned, much they had _____.” Word bank: experienced, refused, wasted, hidden

    Key: experienced

47. [fill · recall · DOK 1] Fill in the blank with the word that fits: “gets stains, gets wrinkles, gets worn off at the seams, and starts to show _____ spots here and there” Word bank: golden, threadbare, painted, jeweled

    Key: threadbare

48. [mc · recall · DOK 1] What symbol of Siddhartha’s dying inner life appears in his dream?

    A. Govinda dying in the grove

    B. His father's house

C. A great river in flood at his door

D. Kamala's songbird dead in its cage

Key: D (Kamala's songbird dead in its cage)

49. [mc · recall · DOK 1] In the line “Was he not a Samana, a man who was at home nowhere, a pilgrim?”, what does “pilgrim” most nearly mean?

A. a traveller on a holy journey

B. a rich trader

C. a soldier in the service of the king

D. a servant in a temple

Key: A (a traveller on a holy journey)

50. [fill · recall · DOK 1] Complete the quotation from Sansara, paragraph 12: “felt death in his heart and _____ in his chest” Word bank: joy, gold, horror, music

Key: horror

51. [mc · inference · DOK 2] What does this passage most clearly show? “Only Kamala had been dear, had been valuable to him—but was she still thus?” (Sansara, paragraph 12)

A. He has decided to marry Kamala.

B. Even his bond with Kamala now feels uncertain to him.

C. Kamala has asked him to leave the city.

D. He values his money more than Kamala.

Key: B (Even his bond with Kamala now feels uncertain to him.)

52. [mc · inference · DOK 2] Why does Siddhartha grow strict and petty toward his debtors?

A. He wants to punish Kamaswami

B. He has been robbed by a friend

C. He needs money to keep gambling

D. The law demands it of merchants

Key: C (He needs money to keep gambling)

53. [short · inference · DOK 2] What does Siddhartha understand at this moment? Use this line. “Then, Siddhartha knew that the game was over, that he could not play it any more.” (Sansara, paragraph 13)

Sample answer: Siddhartha understands that his worldly life has come to an end. The evidence is “Then, Siddhartha knew that the game was over, that he could not play it any more.” (Sansara, paragraph 13). The word “game” recalls how he once treated business as play, and “over” and “could not” show that the play has lost its power to hold him.

54. [mc · analysis · DOK 3] Which literary element does this describe in “Sansara”? The holy source within Siddhartha is said to murmur, distant and quiet, as if his inner voice were a faraway stream.

A. Dialogue

B. Setting

C. Metaphor

D. Onomatopoeia

Key: C (Metaphor)

55. [mc · analysis · DOK 3] Which literary element does this describe in "Sansara"? Kamala, "being smart," is shown to have read the signs of Siddhartha's unrest long before he understands it himself.

    A. Figurative language

    B. Characterization

    C. Alliteration

    D. Dialogue

    Key: B (Characterization)

56. [short · analysis · DOK 3] Analyze how this image shows Siddhartha's state of mind: "a disgust which he felt penetrating his entire body like the lukewarm, repulsive taste of the wine" (Sansara, paragraph 9)

    Sample answer: Siddhartha is sick of his own life. The evidence is "a disgust which he felt penetrating his entire body like the lukewarm, repulsive taste of the wine" (Sansara, paragraph 9). The pleasure he drank now tastes "lukewarm" and "repulsive," so the image shows that the joys of the senses have turned against him.

57. [short · analysis · DOK 3] In this chapter, which theme does the following most directly develop? "The people liked him, they came to him whenever they needed money or advice, but there was nobody close to him, except Kamala." (Sansara, paragraph 2) Name the theme and explain it with the line.

    Sample answer: The line develops the theme of loneliness in the midst of wealth. The evidence is "The people liked him, they came to him whenever they needed money or advice, but there was nobody close to him, except Kamala." (Sansara, paragraph 2). The turn on "but" shows that people come for what he gives, not for who he is, so his riches leave him almost alone.

58. [short · synthesis · DOK 4] Close reading: how do the diction and syntax of "He was a feared gambler, few dared to take him on" (Sansara, paragraph 6) shape its meaning? Consider a second, competing reading.

    Sample answer: The comma splice packs reputation and fear into one breath: "He was a feared gambler, few dared to take him on" (Sansara, paragraph 6). "Feared" makes him powerful, but only within the game. A competing reading sees strength here, since he is still a master who wins. But the same paragraph says the game has turned on him: "Property, possessions, and riches also had finally captured him; they were no longer a game and trifles to him, had become a shackle and a burden." (Sansara, paragraph 6). The gambler who frightens others is himself captured, so the line marks how far he has fallen.

59. [short · synthesis · DOK 4] Close reading: how do the diction and syntax of "Worthless, so it seemed to him, worthless and pointless was the way he had been going through life" (Sansara, paragraph 11) shape its meaning? Consider a second, competing reading.

    Sample answer: The sentence makes Siddhartha's judgment of his life fall like a verdict: "Worthless, so it seemed to him, worthless and pointless was the way he had been going through life" (Sansara, paragraph 11). Opening on "Worthless" and repeating it puts the judgment first, before the subject, so the reader feels its weight at once. A competing reading notes "so it seemed to him," which hints that this despair is a mood, not the truth. Both are present, but the despair is what drives him out of the city.

60. [short · synthesis · DOK 4] Synthesis: trace how Kamala's view of Siddhartha as a Samana develops from With the Childlike People to Sansara. Use one quotation from each.

    Sample answer: Kamala's view of Siddhartha moves from complaint to understanding. In With the Childlike People she says: "And yet, my dear, you've remained a Samana, and yet you do not love me, you love nobody." (With the Childlike People, paragraph 46). In Sansara, after he leaves, she thinks: "Was he not a Samana, a man who was at home nowhere, a pilgrim?" (Sansara, paragraph 16). The first passage is a reproach; the second accepts his nature, so his leaving does not surprise her.

61. [fill · recall · DOK 1 · Dual Credit (Indiana College Core): ICC-WC-1.5] Fill in the blank with the word that fits: "Was it _____ to live for this?" Word bank: rusty, necessary, muddy, wooden

    Key: necessary

62. [fill · recall · DOK 1 · Dual Credit (Indiana College Core): ICC-WC-1.5] Fill in the blank with the word that fits: "distant and quiet, the holy source _____, which used to be near" Word bank: roared, froze, sneezed, murmured

    Key: murmured

63. [mc · recall · DOK 1 · Dual Credit (Indiana College Core): ICC-WC-1.5] Which word completes this sentence from Sansara, paragraph 4? "It happened that he became angry and _____, when Kamaswami bored him with his worries."

    A. impatient
    B. wooden
    C. salty
    D. purple

    Key: A (impatient)

64. [fill · recall · DOK 1 · Dual Credit (Indiana College Core): ICC-WC-1.5] Complete the quotation from Sansara, paragraph 2: "Years passed by; surrounded by the good life, Siddhartha hardly felt them _____ away." Word bank: ringing, fading, boiling, climbing

    Key: fading

65. [mc · recall · DOK 1 · Dual Credit (Indiana College Core): ICC-WC-1.5] In the line "a bit denser every day, a bit murkier every month", what does "murkier" most nearly mean?

    A. darker and less clear
    B. brighter and much sharper
    C. warmer and softer
    D. quieter and calmer

    Key: A (darker and less clear)

66. [mc · inference · DOK 2 · Dual Credit (Indiana College Core): ICC-WC-1.5] What does this passage most clearly show? "He was a feared gambler, few dared to take him on" (Sansara, paragraph 6)

    A. Gambling shows how far he has fallen into the game of the world.
    B. Gambling is a pastime he soon gives up.
    C. He gambles only to help the poor of the city.
    D. Gambling keeps him close to Kamala.

    Key: A (Gambling shows how far he has fallen into the game of the world.)

67. [short · inference · DOK 4 · Dual Credit (Indiana College Core): ICC-WC-1.5] What can you infer from this line? "Never before, it had become so strangely clear to Siddhartha, how closely lust was akin to death." (Sansara, paragraph 8) Build a short argument from it: trace the idea across at least three chapters, this one and earlier ones, weigh one competing reading, and defend your position with evidence from each.

    Sample answer: Siddhartha now feels that the life of pleasure is a kind of dying. The evidence is "Never before, it had become so strangely clear to Siddhartha, how closely lust was akin to death." (Sansara, paragraph 8). In Kamala the senses first seemed fresh and sweet: "He tilted his head so that his face touched hers and placed his mouth on that mouth which was like a freshly cracked fig." (Kamala, paragraph 50). In With the Childlike People love became a set of games: "Siddhartha said nothing, and they played the game of love, one of the thirty or forty different games Kamala knew." (With the Childlike People, paragraph 44). Across the three chapters, sensual life moves from new fruit, to practiced play, to something "akin to death." A competing reading says he is only tired that evening; but "never before" and "so strangely clear" mark a lasting insight, not a passing mood.

68. [mc · inference · DOK 2 · Dual Credit (Indiana College Core): ICC-WC-1.5] What does Siddhartha realize as he reviews his life under the mango tree?

    A. He has been happy every day in the city

    B. He should have stayed in business with Kamaswami

    C. He has not felt true bliss for many years

    D. He owes his success to his father

    Key: C (He has not felt true bliss for many years)

69. [short · inference · DOK 4 · Dual Credit (Indiana College Core): ICC-WC-1.5] What has changed in Siddhartha's relationship to wealth? Use this line. "He had become rich, for quite a while he possessed a house of his own and his own servants, and a garden before the city by the river." (Sansara, paragraph 2) Build a short argument from it: trace the idea across at least three chapters, this one and earlier ones, weigh one competing reading, and defend your position with evidence from each.

    Sample answer: Wealth has become his settled way of life: "He had become rich, for quite a while he possessed a house of his own and his own servants, and a garden before the city by the river." (Sansara, paragraph 2). The list of a house, servants and a garden shows that money is no longer something he uses but something he lives inside. In Kamala he wanted money only as a tool: "So it is settled: Siddhartha will return, once he'll have what he still lacks: clothes, shoes, money." (Kamala, paragraph 38). In With the Childlike People it was still a means: "The business was good enough to provide him with the money for Kamala, and it earned him much more than he needed." (With the Childlike People, paragraph 37). Across the three chapters, money moves from a tool he lacks, to a means for love, to the whole frame of his life. A competing reading says the rich life is only a pleasant phase he controls; but "for quite a while" shows how long he has stayed, and the chapter soon calls his riches a burden, which supports my reading.

70. [mc · inference · DOK 2 · Dual Credit (Indiana College Core): ICC-WC-1.5] What does this passage most clearly show? "Kamala had no one look for him." (Sansara, paragraph 16)

    A. She is glad to be rid of him.

    B. She accepts that he had to go.

    C. She has already found another lover.

    D. She fears what he might say.

    Key: B (She accepts that he had to go.)

71. [mc · analysis · DOK 3 · Dual Credit (Indiana College Core): ICC-WC-1.5] Which literary element does this describe in "Sansara"? The chapter moves from a slow decline to one sudden night of departure: he leaves garden and city and never returns.

    A. Personification

    B. Structure

    C. Setting

    D. Hyperbole

    Key: B (Structure)

72. [short · analysis · DOK 3 · Dual Credit (Indiana College Core): ICC-WC-1.5] Analyze how this image shows Siddhartha's state of mind: "As a new dress becomes old in time, loses its beautiful colour in time" (Sansara, paragraph 5)

Sample answer: Siddhartha's new life has worn out the way clothes do. The evidence is "As a new dress becomes old in time, loses its beautiful colour in time" (Sansara, paragraph 5). The repeated "in time" shows that the change came slowly, so he hardly saw his life losing its brightness until it was faded.

73. [short · analysis · DOK 3 · Dual Credit (Indiana College Core): ICC-WC-1.5] In this chapter, which theme does the following most directly develop? "It was still the art of thinking, of waiting, of fasting, which guided his life" (Sansara, paragraph 1) Name the theme and explain it with the line.

Sample answer: The line develops the theme of the Samana surviving inside the man of the world. The evidence is "It was still the art of thinking, of waiting, of fasting, which guided his life" (Sansara, paragraph 1). The word "still" shows that his old discipline lasts into his first years of wealth, before it slowly fades.

74. [mc · analysis · DOK 3 · Dual Credit (Indiana College Core): ICC-WC-1.5] Which literary element does this describe in "Sansara"? Siddhartha, who once mocked greed as the most foolish vice, becomes greedy himself.

A. Setting

B. Irony

C. Onomatopoeia

D. Alliteration

Key: B (Irony)

75. [short · synthesis · DOK 4 · Dual Credit (Indiana College Core): ICC-WC-1.5] Synthesis: trace how Siddhartha's feeling for Kamala develops from With the Childlike People to Sansara. Use one quotation from each.

Sample answer: Kamala moves from the one person who understands him to the last thing he doubts. In With the Childlike People, "She understood him better than Govinda used to understand him, she was more similar to him." (With the Childlike People, paragraph 39). The comparison with Govinda shows how close she has become. In Sansara the closeness is questioned: "Only Kamala had been dear, had been valuable to him—but was she still thus?" (Sansara, paragraph 12). The words "Only" and "had been" place even this bond in the past, so his love for her becomes one more thing the world has worn away.

76. [fill · recall · DOK 1] Fill in the blank with the word that fits: "Siddhartha had gotten into this final and most base of all _____, by means of the game of dice." Word bank: victories, dependencies, festivals, friendships

Key: dependencies

77. [fill · recall · DOK 1] Fill in the blank with the word that fits: "In his years as a boy, he has had a taste of it, when he had obtained _____ from the Brahmins" Word bank: gravel, praise, plaster, sawdust

Key: praise

78. [mc · recall · DOK 1] In the line "that she had pulled him so affectionately to her heart", what does "affectionately" most nearly mean?

A. lovingly

B. angrily

C. carelessly

D. sleepily

Key: A (lovingly)

79. [fill · recall · DOK 1] Complete the quotation from Sansara, paragraph 13: "Shivers ran over his body, inside of him, so he felt, something had _____." Word bank: sung, painted, died, laughed

Key: died

80. [mc · recall · DOK 1] Which old skills still guide Siddhartha's life in his first years of wealth?

    A. Singing, dancing and praying

    B. Trading, counting and lending

    C. Riding, hunting and fighting

    D. Thinking, waiting and fasting

    Key: D (Thinking, waiting and fasting)

81. [mc · inference · DOK 2] What does this passage most clearly show? "He had learned to play with dice and on a chessboard, to watch dancing girls" (Sansara, paragraph 4)

    A. He has taken up the pastimes of the rich.

    B. He has become a famous dancer.

    C. He teaches games to the poor.

    D. He hates every kind of game.

    Key: A (He has taken up the pastimes of the rich.)

82. [mc · inference · DOK 2] Why does Kamala ask Siddhartha so much about Gotama?

    A. She plans to sell Gotama a garden

    B. She is jealous of Govinda

    C. She longs for the peace that Gotama has

    D. She wants Siddhartha to leave her for good

    Key: C (She longs for the peace that Gotama has)

83. [short · inference · DOK 4] What has become of Siddhartha's sense of being above others? Use this line. "had acted as if he was superior to them towards the fellow members of his caste, though this was no longer true" (Sansara, paragraph 9) Trace the idea through three chapters, with a quotation from each, and answer one competing reading.

    Sample answer: Siddhartha's sense of superiority has become a pose. The evidence is "had acted as if he was superior to them towards the fellow members of his caste, though this was no longer true" (Sansara, paragraph 9). In Gotama it was real independence: "No teachings will entice me any more, since this man's teachings have not enticed me." (Gotama, paragraph 45). In With the Childlike People it rested on his inner refuge: "Kamaswami is just as smart as I, and still has no refuge in himself." (With the Childlike People, paragraph 42). A competing reading says he is still superior in spirit. Yet "no longer true" shows that the refuge has been lost, so across the three chapters his pride has outlived its cause.

84. [short · analysis · DOK 3] Claim: The songbird in the golden cage symbolizes Siddhartha's spirit, silenced by the comfortable prison of wealth. Explain how this evidence supports the claim: "Kamala owned a small, rare singing bird in a golden cage. Of this bird he dreamt" (Sansara, paragraph 10).

    Sample answer: He dreams that the bird in its "golden cage" has become mute, and after he leaves, Kamala "opened the door of the cage, took the bird out and let it fly," marking his release. The evidence is "Kamala owned a small, rare singing bird in a golden cage. Of this bird he dreamt" (Sansara, paragraph 10), which ties the bird to Kamala's world of wealth before his dream shows it dead.

85. [mc · analysis · DOK 3] Which literary element does this describe in "Sansara"? His life is compared to a potter's wheel that keeps turning for a long time after it is pushed, only slowly running down.

    A. Dialogue

    B. Simile

    C. Onomatopoeia

D. Hyperbole

Key: B (Simile)

86. [mc · analysis · DOK 3] Which literary element does this describe in "Sansara"? The bird Kamala sets free at the end answers the bird that dies in Siddhartha's dream.

A. Dialogue

B. Symbolism

C. Onomatopoeia

D. Hyperbole

Key: B (Symbolism)

87. [short · analysis · DOK 3] Analyze the word choice in "They had been sitting under the trees, talking, and Kamala had said thoughtful words, words behind which a sadness and tiredness lay hidden." (Sansara, paragraph 8). Pick two words and explain what they suggest.

Sample answer: "They had been sitting under the trees, talking, and Kamala had said thoughtful words, words behind which a sadness and tiredness lay hidden." (Sansara, paragraph 8). "Thoughtful" shows Kamala is no longer only playful; she is reflecting on their life. "Hidden" suggests her sadness and tiredness lie under the surface of their pleasures, a sign that the life of the senses is wearing them both down.

88. [short · analysis · DOK 3] In this chapter, which theme does the following most directly develop? "distant and quiet, the holy source murmured, which used to be near" (Sansara, paragraph 3) Name the theme and explain it with the line.

Sample answer: The line develops the theme of the fading inner voice. The evidence is "distant and quiet, the holy source murmured, which used to be near" (Sansara, paragraph 3). The contrast between "distant" and "used to be near" shows that the voice of his own heart has not died but has drifted far away from him.

89. [short · analysis · DOK 3] Analyze how this image shows Siddhartha's state of mind: "had become a shackle and a burden" (Sansara, paragraph 6)

Sample answer: Siddhartha has become a prisoner of his riches. The evidence is "had become a shackle and a burden" (Sansara, paragraph 6). A shackle binds and a burden weighs down, so the image shows that the wealth he once played with now holds him captive.

90. [short · synthesis · DOK 4] Synthesis: trace how Siddhartha's inner refuge develops from With the Childlike People to Sansara. Use one quotation from each.

Sample answer: Siddhartha's inner refuge moves from a possession he boasts of to an emptiness he feels. In With the Childlike People he tells Kamala of the peace within: "Few people have this, and yet all could have it." (With the Childlike People, paragraph 40). In Sansara, after his dream, "Alone he stood there and empty like a castaway on the shore." (Sansara, paragraph 11). The first passage is confident; the second shows the refuge lost, so he is now as unsheltered as the people he once pitied.

91. [fill · recall · DOK 1] Complete the quotation from Sansara, paragraph 12: "Did they not play a game without an _____?" Word bank: apple, oven, eagle, ending

Key: ending

92. [mc · recall · DOK 1] Which word completes this sentence from Sansara, paragraph 12? "When was there ever a time when he had experienced happiness, felt a true _____?"

A. bliss

B. hunger

C. winter

D. debt

Key: A (bliss)

93. [fill · recall · DOK 1] Fill in the blank with the word that fits: "His senses, which he had killed off in hot years as a Samana, had _____ again" Word bank: died, slept, awoken, failed

Key: awoken

94. [fill · recall · DOK 1] Complete the quotation from Sansara, paragraph 8: "With a sigh, he had bid his farewell to her, the soul full of reluctance, and full of concealed _____." Word bank: anxiety, bread, rain, ink

Key: anxiety

95. [mc · recall · DOK 1] In the line "they were no longer a game and trifles to him, had become a shackle and a burden", what does "shackle" most nearly mean?

A. a chain that holds a prisoner

B. a crown of gold

C. a gift for a friend

D. a game for children

Key: A (a chain that holds a prisoner)

96. [mc · inference · DOK 2] What does Siddhartha's leaving of the tree and the pleasure-garden show?

A. He plans to sell them for a profit

B. He is going on a short trip

C. He is letting go of what he owns

D. He is angry with his servants

Key: C (He is letting go of what he owns)

97. [mc · inference · DOK 2] What does this passage most clearly show? "Did he have to leave them to become a Kamaswami?" (Sansara, paragraph 14)

A. He wants to become richer than Kamaswami.

B. He sees his wealth as a betrayal of his search.

C. He plans to visit his father soon.

D. He regrets leaving Kamaswami's service.

Key: B (He sees his wealth as a betrayal of his search.)

98. [mc · inference · DOK 2] What does this passage most clearly show? "The people liked him, they came to him whenever they needed money or advice" (Sansara, paragraph 2)

A. He is valued for what he can give.

B. He is feared by everyone in the city.

C. He lends money only to his friends.

D. He gives advice to no one.

Key: A (He is valued for what he can give.)

99. [short · inference · DOK 4] What does Siddhartha remember on the day he leaves? Use this line. "…thinking of his father, thinking of Govinda, thinking of Gotama." (Sansara, paragraph 14) Trace the idea through three chapters, with a quotation from each, and answer one competing reading.

Sample answer: On the day of his decision he remembers the three who shaped his search: "…thinking of his father, thinking of Govinda, thinking of Gotama." (Sansara, paragraph 14). His father let him go: "He took his hand from the shoulder of his son and went outside." (The Son of the Brahmin, paragraph 50). Govinda chose another path: "And now my friend is going to stay with your people, he has taken his refuge with you." (Gotama, paragraph 31). Gotama gave a teaching he honoured: "The teachings of the enlightened Buddha contain much, it teaches many to live righteously, to avoid evil." (Gotama, paragraph 37). Across these chapters each figure stands for a way he once followed or left, and remembering them shows him how far he has strayed. A competing reading calls this mere homesickness; but he remembers teachers and seekers, not comforts, so the memory is a call back to the search.

100. [short · analysis · DOK 3] In this chapter, which theme does the following most directly develop? "He, who gambled away tens of thousands at one roll of the dice and laughed at it, became more strict and more petty in his business" (Sansara, paragraph 7) Name the theme and explain it with the line.
Sample answer: The line develops the theme of wealth corrupting the self. The evidence is "He, who gambled away tens of thousands at one roll of the dice and laughed at it, became more strict and more petty in his business" (Sansara, paragraph 7). The contrast between laughing at huge losses and growing "petty" with small debts shows that money now rules him.

101. [mc · analysis · DOK 3] Which literary element does this describe in "Sansara"? The locked pleasure-garden and its mango tree, where Siddhartha sits alone all day reviewing his life.

A. Dialogue
B. Onomatopoeia
C. Setting
D. Hyperbole

Key: C (Setting)

102. [short · analysis · DOK 3] Analyze how this image shows Siddhartha's state of mind: "there the small bird was dead and lay stiff on the ground" (Sansara, paragraph 10)
Sample answer: Siddhartha senses that something alive in him has died. The evidence is "there the small bird was dead and lay stiff on the ground" (Sansara, paragraph 10). The singing bird that has gone "stiff" mirrors his own silenced inner voice, which is why the dream shocks him so deeply.

103. [mc · analysis · DOK 3] Which literary element does this describe in "Sansara"? The narrator tells us what Siddhartha thinks and feels, and also what Kamala and Kamaswami do after he leaves.

A. Alliteration
B. Point of view
C. Personification
D. Hyperbole

Key: B (Point of view)

104. [short · synthesis · DOK 4] Synthesis: trace how Siddhartha's bond with Kamala develops from With the Childlike People to Sansara. Use one quotation from each. Address one competing reading and answer it.
Sample answer: The bond moves from a shared inner refuge to a final act of release. In With the Childlike People he tells her what they share: "You are Kamala, nothing else, and inside of you, there is a peace and refuge, to which you can go at every hour of the day and be at home at yourself, as I can also do." (With the Childlike People, paragraph 40). In Sansara, after he has gone, Kamala answers with a gesture: "She opened the door of the cage, took the bird out and let it fly." (Sansara, paragraph 17). The refuge each carried inside becomes, for her, the freedom to let the bird go. A competing reading says freeing the bird is only grief, a sign that she has lost him. But she acts calmly, as one who understands his leaving, so the release honours their bond rather than ending it.

105. [short · synthesis · DOK 4] Close reading: how do the diction and syntax of "a bit denser every day, a bit murkier every month, a bit heavier every year" (Sansara, paragraph 5) shape its meaning? Consider a second, competing reading.

Sample answer: The sentence makes decline feel gradual and unstoppable: "a bit denser every day, a bit murkier every month, a bit heavier every year" (Sansara, paragraph 5). Each phrase repeats "a bit" while the time grows from day to month to year, so the rhythm itself shows small changes adding up. A competing reading hears gentleness in "a bit," as if the decline were harmless. Yet the growing time span shows that the small changes have become a whole life.

106. [fill · recall · DOK 1] Complete the quotation from Sansara, paragraph 17: "From this day on, she received no more visitors and kept her house _____."

Key: locked

107. [fill · recall · DOK 1] Fill in the blank with the word that fits: "to have himself carried about in a _____, to sleep on a soft bed" Word bank: fishing boat, prison cart, sedan-chair, wheelbarrow

Key: sedan-chair

108. [mc · recall · DOK 1] Who is the only person close to Siddhartha in his years of wealth?

A. Kamaswami
B. Govinda
C. Gotama
D. Kamala

Key: D (Kamala)

109. [mc · recall · DOK 1] Which parts of his old Samana life does Siddhartha slowly lose in the city?

A. His wealth and his fine clothes
B. Moderate living, the joy of thinking and hours of meditation
C. His friendship with Kamaswami
D. His skill at the game of dice

Key: B (Moderate living, the joy of thinking and hours of meditation)

110. [mc · recall · DOK 1] What does Kamala say she, too, may perhaps soon do one day?

A. Follow the Buddha
B. Leave the city for the forest
C. Marry Kamaswami
D. Buy a new singing bird

Key: A (Follow the Buddha)

111. [mc · inference · DOK 2] What does this passage most clearly show? "Then the time came when a dream warned him." (Sansara, paragraph 8)

A. His crisis begins inside him, in a dream.
B. A priest warns him of danger.
C. Kamala tells him to leave the city.
D. He is robbed and must flee.

Key: A (His crisis begins inside him, in a dream.)

112. [short · inference · DOK 4] What does Kamala's discovery mean for the story? Use this line. "she became aware that she was pregnant from the last time she was together with Siddhartha" (Sansara, paragraph 17) Trace the idea through three chapters, with a quotation from each, and answer one competing reading.

Sample answer: Kamala's pregnancy means that Siddhartha's worldly life will follow him. The evidence is "she became aware that she was pregnant from the last time she was together with Siddhartha" (Sansara, paragraph 17). She had foretold it in With the Childlike People: "At some time, when I'll be older, I'd want to bear your child." (With the Childlike People, paragraph 46). The ferryman in Kamala had promised: "everything is coming back!" (Kamala, paragraph 11). A competing reading treats the child as a simple ending to the love story. Yet across the three chapters it fits the novel's pattern of return, so his past will come back to him.

113. [mc · inference · DOK 2] Why does Kamala free her songbird when Siddhartha leaves?

A. The bird has stopped singing for her

B. She wants to sell the golden cage

C. A servant has begged her many times to set it free

D. She lets it go free, as he has gone free

Key: D (She lets it go free, as he has gone free)

114. [mc · analysis · DOK 3] Which literary element does this describe in "Sansara"? The struggle between the life of the senses and the fading voice of the Samana drives the chapter.

A. Setting

B. Conflict

C. Onomatopoeia

D. Alliteration

Key: B (Conflict)

115. [short · analysis · DOK 3] Analyze the word choice in "For a long time, she gazed after it, the flying bird." (Sansara, paragraph 17). Pick two words and explain what they suggest.

Sample answer: Kamala's farewell to the bird is also a farewell to Siddhartha. The evidence is "For a long time, she gazed after it, the flying bird." (Sansara, paragraph 17). "Gazed" suggests a long, loving look, and placing "the flying bird" at the end of the sentence lets it soar away from her, just as Siddhartha has gone.

116. [short · analysis · DOK 3] Analyze how this image shows Siddhartha's state of mind: "Shivers ran over his body, inside of him, so he felt, something had died." (Sansara, paragraph 13)

Sample answer: Siddhartha feels the end of his worldly life as a physical death. The evidence is "Shivers ran over his body, inside of him, so he felt, something had died." (Sansara, paragraph 13). The shivers show shock and cold, and "something had died" shows that a whole part of his life has ended inside him.

117. [short · analysis · DOK 3] Claim: Siddhartha's wealth has made him a prisoner. Explain how this evidence supports the claim: "Siddhartha had gotten into this final and most base of all dependencies, by means of the game of dice." (Sansara, paragraph 6)

Sample answer: The evidence supports the claim because it names his gambling as a form of bondage: "Siddhartha had gotten into this final and most base of all dependencies, by means of the game of dice." (Sansara, paragraph 6). The word "dependencies" shows that the man who once needed nothing now cannot do without the thrill of money, and "final" and "most base" mark it as the lowest point of his captivity.

118. [short · analysis · DOK 3] In this chapter, which theme does the following most directly develop? "Was he not a Samana, a man who was at home nowhere, a pilgrim?" (Sansara, paragraph 16) Name the theme and explain it with the line.

Sample answer: The line develops the theme of Siddhartha's true nature as a seeker. The evidence is "Was he not a Samana, a man who was at home nowhere, a pilgrim?" (Sansara, paragraph 16). Kamala sees that "at home nowhere" describes him better than any house or garden, so his leaving is a return to who he is.

119. [mc · analysis · DOK 3] Which literary element does this describe in "Sansara"? Tiredness settles on Siddhartha "like a veil, like a thin mist."

    A. Plot

    B. Simile

    C. Setting

    D. Dialogue

    Key: B (Simile)

120. [short · synthesis · DOK 4] Synthesis: trace how Siddhartha's distance from the childlike people develops from With the Childlike People to Sansara. Use one quotation from each. Address one competing reading and answer it.

    Sample answer: Siddhartha's distance from ordinary people moves from envy to estrangement. In With the Childlike People he says: "Perhaps people of our kind can't love. The childlike people can; that's their secret." (With the Childlike People, paragraph 47). In Sansara, "still the people of the world, the childlike people, had remained alien to him as he was alien to them." (Sansara, paragraph 1). A competing reading holds that he has become one of them through greed and gambling. Yet he takes on their vices without their gift for love, so he stays alien to them while losing what made him different.

121. [fill · recall · DOK 1] Complete the quotation from Sansara, paragraph 4: "These people were all of the time in love with themselves, with women, with their children, with honours or _____" Word bank: money, dust, stone, rain

    Key: money

122. [fill · recall · DOK 1] Fill in the blank with the word that fits: "had acted as if he was _____ to them towards the fellow members of his caste, though this was no longer true" Word bank: salty, superior, wooden, rusty

    Key: superior

123. [mc · recall · DOK 1] What does Siddhartha own outside the city by the river?

    A. A temple

    B. A ship

    C. A mine

    D. A garden

    Key: D (A garden)

124. [fill · recall · DOK 1] Complete the quotation from Sansara, paragraph 3: "that proud state of standing alone without teachings and without _____" Word bank: eyelids, weather, teachers, rainfall

    Key: teachers

125. [mc · recall · DOK 1] In the line "With a gloomy mind, Siddhartha went to the pleasure-garden he owned", what does "gloomy" most nearly mean?

    A. dark and sad

    B. bright and cheerful

    C. busy and loud

    D. calm and content

    Key: A (dark and sad)

126. [mc · inference · DOK 2] What does the chapter suggest about Siddhartha's early detachment from wealth?

    A. It grew stronger and stronger with every year

    B. It made him poor in the end

C. It slowly gave way to real dependence

D. It was shared by Kamaswami

Key: C (It slowly gave way to real dependence)

127. [mc · inference · DOK 2] What does this passage most clearly show? “But after some time, she became aware that she was pregnant from the last time she was together with Siddhartha.” (Sansara, paragraph 17)

A. Kamala marries the merchant Kamaswami

B. Kamala sells her pleasure garden

C. Kamala carries Siddhartha’s child

D. Kamala becomes a wandering Samana

Key: C (Kamala carries Siddhartha’s child)

128. [short · inference · DOK 3] What has happened to Siddhartha’s old gifts? Use this line. “Many a part of this he still had, but one part after another had been submerged and had gathered dust.” (Sansara, paragraph 3)

Sample answer: His Samana gifts have not vanished in one blow; they have sunk out of sight piece by piece: “Many a part of this he still had, but one part after another had been submerged and had gathered dust” (Sansara, paragraph 3). The words “submerged” and “gathered dust” describe things put away and neglected, not destroyed, so the line leaves room for them to be recovered.

129. [short · analysis · DOK 3] In this chapter, which theme does the following most directly develop? “Did he have to leave them to become a Kamaswami?” (Sansara, paragraph 14) Name the theme and explain it with the line.

Sample answer: The line develops the theme of betraying one’s calling. The evidence is “Did he have to leave them to become a Kamaswami?” (Sansara, paragraph 14). Turning the merchant’s name into a type, “a Kamaswami,” shows Siddhartha’s shame that he left his father, Govinda and Gotama only to become an ordinary rich man.

130. [mc · analysis · DOK 3] Which literary element does this describe in “Sansara”? The chapter’s title names the endless round of birth, desire and death in Hindu and Buddhist thought.

A. Onomatopoeia

B. Setting

C. Allusion

D. Hyperbole

Key: C (Allusion)

131. [mc · analysis · DOK 3] Which literary element does this describe in “Sansara”? The chapter closes with Kamala’s pregnancy, a hint that Siddhartha’s past will one day return to him.

A. Onomatopoeia

B. Foreshadowing

C. Setting

D. Dialogue

Key: B (Foreshadowing)

132. [short · analysis · DOK 3] Claim: Kamala understands Siddhartha better than he understands himself. Explain how this evidence supports the claim: “Kamala, being smart, had realized this quite right.” (Sansara, paragraph 1)

Sample answer: The evidence supports the claim because Kamala sees what Siddhartha hides: “Kamala, being smart, had realized this quite right." (Sansara, paragraph 1). She has seen that he is still a Samana in his heart, and the words "quite right" confirm her judgment, which she shows again when she is not astonished by his leaving.

133. [short · analysis · DOK 3] Analyze how this image shows Siddhartha's state of mind: "felt death in his heart and horror in his chest" (Sansara, paragraph 12)

    Sample answer: Siddhartha is overwhelmed by despair. The evidence is "felt death in his heart and horror in his chest" (Sansara, paragraph 12). Placing "death" and "horror" in his heart and chest makes his despair bodily, showing that the emptiness of his life has become something he can physically feel.

134. [short · synthesis · DOK 4] Close reading: how do the diction and syntax of "He rose, bid his farewell to the mango tree, his farewell to the pleasure-garden." (Sansara, paragraph 15) shape its meaning? Consider a second, competing reading.

    Sample answer: The sentence turns leaving into a quiet ritual: "He rose, bid his farewell to the mango tree, his farewell to the pleasure-garden." (Sansara, paragraph 15). The repeated "his farewell" gives each object its own goodbye, which slows the moment and makes it solemn. A competing reading finds it absurd to bid farewell to a tree. Yet the courtesy shows that he leaves without anger, letting go of his possessions calmly, as a Samana would.

135. [short · synthesis · DOK 4] Synthesis: trace how the voice inside Siddhartha develops from With the Childlike People to Sansara. Use one quotation from each. Address one competing reading and answer it.

    Sample answer: The inner voice moves from a faint warning to a memory of what he has lost. In With the Childlike People he hears "a dying, quiet voice, which admonished him quietly, lamented quietly" (With the Childlike People, paragraph 39), and he hardly listens. In Sansara he can only remember how it once spoke: "There is a path in front of you, you are destined for, the gods are awaiting you." (Sansara, paragraph 12). A competing reading holds that the voice is simply dead. But the fact that he can still recall its words, and acts on that memory by leaving, shows that it has gone quiet rather than died.

Rigor version	Items (in order)	Mix
HS Sophomore	1, 2, 3, 4, 5, 6, 7, 8, 9, 10, 11, 12, 13, 14, 15	recall 10, inference 2, analysis 3, synthesis 0
HS Junior	16, 17, 18, 19, 20, 21, 22, 23, 24, 25, 26, 27, 28, 29, 30	recall 10, inference 2, analysis 2, synthesis 1
HS Senior	31, 32, 33, 34, 35, 36, 37, 38, 39, 40, 41, 42, 43, 44, 45	recall 8, inference 2, analysis 3, synthesis 2
AP	46, 47, 48, 49, 50, 51, 52, 53, 54, 55, 56, 57, 58, 59, 60	recall 5, inference 3, analysis 4, synthesis 3
College Freshman	61, 62, 63, 64, 65, 66, 67, 68, 69, 70, 71, 72, 73, 74, 75	recall 5, inference 5, analysis 4, synthesis 1
College Sophomore	76, 77, 78, 79, 80, 81, 82, 83, 84, 85, 86, 87, 88, 89, 90	recall 5, inference 3, analysis 6, synthesis 1
College Junior	91, 92, 93, 94, 95, 96, 97, 98, 99, 100, 101, 102, 103, 104, 105	recall 5, inference 4, analysis 4, synthesis 2
College Senior	106, 107, 108, 109, 110, 111, 112, 113, 114, 115, 116, 117, 118, 119, 120	recall 5, inference 3, analysis 6, synthesis 1
Graduate / PhD	121, 122, 123, 124, 125, 126, 127, 128, 129, 130, 131, 132, 133, 134, 135	recall 5, inference 3, analysis 5, synthesis 2

Writing prompts (eleven rigor levels)

HS Sophomore (450 words; Dual Credit (Indiana College Core): ICC-WC-1.1, ICC-WC-1.3, ICC-WC-1.4, ICC-WC-1.5): Analyze how Sansara develops the idea of the cycle of desire. Make a precise claim, support it with at least three pieces of textual evidence, and explain how the author's use of symbolism and theme shapes that idea. Address one possible counterclaim. (You are reading the English translation by Gunther Olesch, Anke Dreher, Amy Coulter, Stefan Langer and Semyon Chaichenets, so word-choice evidence is the translators' English.)

HS Junior (550 words; Dual Credit (Indiana College Core): ICC-WC-1.1, ICC-WC-1.3, ICC-WC-1.4, ICC-WC-1.5): Analyze how the structure of Sansara (where it begins, turns and ends) and its symbolism shape the reader's understanding of the cycle of desire. Identify one place where the text leaves matters uncertain and explain how that uncertainty adds to its meaning.

HS Senior (600 words; Dual Credit (Indiana College Core): ICC-WC-1.1, ICC-WC-1.3, ICC-WC-1.4, ICC-WC-1.5): Two readers disagree about what Sansara suggests about the cycle of desire. Lay out two plausible interpretations, weigh the evidence for each (including the chapter's symbolism and theme), and argue for the stronger one in a sustained, well-organized essay.

AP (650 words; Dual Credit (Indiana College Core): ICC-WC-1.1, ICC-WC-1.3, ICC-WC-1.4, ICC-WC-1.5): Write a literary argument in which you analyze how Hermann Hesse uses symbolism in Sansara to complicate the reader's understanding of the cycle of desire. Develop a defensible thesis, select evidence purposefully, and explain how specific choices of diction and syntax create meaning.

College Freshman (1000 words; Dual Credit (Indiana College Core): ICC-WC-1.3, ICC-WC-1.5, ICC-WC-1.1): Situate Sansara within its historical and literary context and argue how the chapter's treatment of the cycle of desire responds to that context. Engage with at least one secondary perspective (a critic, historian or the author's own statements), integrate quotations smoothly, and cite in APA style.

College Sophomore (1250 words; Dual Credit (Indiana College Core): ICC-WC-1.1, ICC-WC-1.3, ICC-WC-1.4, ICC-WC-1.5): Read Sansara alongside the conventions of its genre and period. Argue how the chapter's handling of the cycle of desire follows or bends those conventions, using the symbolism as evidence, and test your reading against one published critic. Document two secondary sources in APA.

College Junior (1500 words; Dual Credit (Indiana College Core): ICC-WC-1.1, ICC-WC-1.3, ICC-WC-1.4, ICC-WC-1.5): Apply a named critical approach (for example formalist, historicist, feminist, psychoanalytic or ecocritical) to Sansara and its treatment of the cycle of desire. State your method, show what it reveals in the chapter's symbolism and theme, and identify where the text resists it.

College Senior (2000 words; Dual Credit (Indiana College Core): ICC-WC-1.1, ICC-WC-1.3, ICC-WC-1.4, ICC-WC-1.5): Develop a research argument that reads Sansara as evidence for a larger claim about the cycle of desire in Siddhartha. Connect close reading of the chapter to the whole novel, engage at least four scholarly sources, and state precisely where your reading departs from theirs (Chicago style).

Graduate / PhD (2500 words; Dual Credit (Indiana College Core): ICC-WC-1.1, ICC-WC-1.3, ICC-WC-1.4, ICC-WC-1.5): Develop an original argument that reads Sansara as a hinge in the novel's larger treatment of the cycle of desire. Position your reading within a named critical conversation (for example formalist, historicist, psychoanalytic, feminist or postcolonial approaches), account for the textual history where relevant, and articulate the stakes of your intervention for scholarship on Siddhartha.

SAT-style questions

1. And after each big loss, his mind was set on new riches, pursued the trade more zealously, forced his debtors more strictly to pay, because he wanted to continue gambling, he wanted to continue squandering, continue demonstrating his disdain of wealth.

   As used in the text, what does the word "demonstrating" most nearly mean?

   A. hiding from view
   B. protesting publicly
   C. putting to the test
   D. showing clearly

2. Starting up from this dream, he felt encompassed by a deep sadness. Worthless, so it seemed to him, worthless and pointless was the way he had been going through life; nothing which was alive, nothing which was in some way delicious or worth keeping he had left in his hands. Alone he stood there and empty like a castaway on the shore.

   Which choice best states the central idea of this passage?

   A. He sees that his life of pleasure has left him empty
   B. He is afraid of losing his money at dice
   C. He longs to return to his father's house
   D. He decides to marry Kamala at last

SAT key: 1. D (showing clearly); 2. A (He sees that his life of pleasure has left him empty)

Lesson 9: By the River

Focus: despair and renewal by the river

Objective: Students will analyze how symbolism develops in "By the River" by writing a claim-evidence-reasoning paragraph that cites at least 2 quotations from the section, and will score at least 80% on the section quiz.

Standards: Dual Credit (Indiana College Core): ICC-WC-1.1, ICC-WC-1.3, ICC-WC-1.4, ICC-WC-1.5

Content note (suicidal thoughts and attempt (referenced by paragraph only), alcohol or drugs (mentioned)): At the river Siddhartha despairs and comes close to ending his life. Those lines (By the River, paras. 2–5) stay complete in the book text but are referred to by paragraph only; no lesson item quotes them or asks about a method. Keep the focus on the turn: "And in the moment when the sound of Om touched Siddhartha's ear, his dormant spirit suddenly woke up and realized the foolishness of his actions." (Hesse, 1922/2015, By the River, para. 6) No one in the novel dies by suicide: Kamala dies of a snakebite (The Ferryman, paras. 47–64), and Siddhartha is stopped by the word Om (By the River, para. 6). Teacher note: some schools' guidelines may treat this passage differently.
Student preview: Siddhartha comes close to ending his life, and something stops him. If this is hard for you, you can talk to me or a counselor.
Suggested language: "What stops Siddhartha, and what does he feel afterward?"

Teacher only · spoilers

Siddhartha reaches the river sick of himself and comes close to ending his life (By the River, paras. 2–5; referenced, not quoted). From deep within comes the sacred word Om, and he falls into a deep sleep under a coconut tree. He wakes renewed; Govinda, now a monk, has watched over him without recognizing him. Siddhartha reflects that he had to experience despair to learn its emptiness, and decides to stay by the river.

Background: Om is the sacred syllable in Hindu and Buddhist traditions, representing ultimate reality.

Significance: Rebirth by water is a classic archetype; the river becomes the novel's central symbol.

Lesson plan and lecture script (90 minutes)

0–8 min · Bell-ringer · You do (8 min)
Students write to the bell-ringer, then pair-share.
Why does Siddhartha say he had to experience despair himself? Write for five minutes. Starters: I think... because... / This connects to the search for the self because.... Content note before we start: Siddhartha feels deep despair and thinks about ending his life. If this is hard for you, you can talk to me or a counselor.
Prompt: Why does Siddhartha say he had to experience despair himself?
Sentence starters: I think… because… · This connects to the search for the self because…
Strong response: A strong response takes a position and anticipates this: Siddhartha sees that he had to go through folly to kill the proud Brahmin and Samana within him.

8–18 min · Vocabulary with etymology notes · We do (10 min)
Five key words in context, with verified word histories.
Today's words: ointments — perfumed oils and creams; unlearn — to forget a habit or way of thinking; penitents — people who punish themselves for their sins; annihilating — destroying completely; oneness — the quality of being united into one. "annihilate": Origin: Latin annihilātus.
Words: ointments: perfumed oils and creams · unlearn: to forget a habit or way of thinking · penitents: people who punish themselves for their sins · annihilating: destroying completely · oneness: the quality of being united into one

18–28 min · Background and context · I do (10 min)
Mini-lecture (read or adapt the script).
Om is the sacred syllable in Hindu and Buddhist traditions, representing ultimate reality. Rebirth by water is a classic archetype; the river becomes the novel's central symbol. Characterization: Disgusted with himself, Siddhartha comes close to ending his life at the river (By the River, paras. 2–5, referenced only); the word Om rises from his inner self and stops him. Structure: Despair, sleep, awakening: the chapter repeats the structure of "Awakening," now as rebirth from despair. Irony: Govinda, now a monk, watches over the sleeping stranger and does not recognize him. Watch for the river: the place of attempted death becomes the place of rebirth.

28–40 min · I do: modeled close reading · I do (12 min)
Model the close reading of the anchor quotation using the written think-aloud below.
First, meaning. I read "Now, Siddhartha smiled" slowly and put it in my own words: Govinda, now a monk, has watched over a sleeping stranger and does not recognize him; when he asks how the stranger knows his name, Siddhartha smiles. Next, craft. I notice the line is only three words, set alone after the monk's puzzled question, so the smile answers him before any words do. The strongest word is "smiled": the smile is the first calm, knowing gesture after his despair at the river, so it marks a man who has come back to himself. Then, effect. Why does Siddhartha smile when the monk asks how he knows his name? My answer: The monk is his old friend Govinda, who cannot recognize him; Siddhartha smiles because he has just woken by the river calm and renewed, no longer the weary rich merchant who came to the river in despair.

> Now, Siddhartha smiled (By the River, paragraph 22)

Think-aloud: First, meaning. I read "Now, Siddhartha smiled" slowly and put it in my own words: Govinda, now a monk, has watched over a sleeping stranger and does not recognize him; when he asks how the stranger knows his name, Siddhartha smiles. Next, craft. I notice the line is only three words, set alone after the monk's puzzled question, so the smile answers him before any words do. The strongest word is "smiled": the smile is the first calm, knowing gesture after his despair at the river, so it marks a man who has come back to himself. Then, effect. Why does Siddhartha smile when the monk asks how he knows his name? My answer: The monk is his old friend Govinda, who cannot recognize him; Siddhartha smiles because he has just woken by the river calm and renewed, no longer the weary rich merchant who came to the river in despair.

40–55 min · We do: guided annotation · We do (15 min)
Guided analysis of a second quotation; expected answers given.
Ask: What words in this line stand out, and what do they suggest? Expected: A sponge absorbs until full: he is saturated with worldly life. Expected link: the river, a place of death, becomes a place of new life. Ask: How does this line connect to the search for the self? Expected: Siddhartha sees that he had to go through folly to kill the proud Brahmin and Samana within him. (Simile for the saturation of his worldly life.)

> Deeply, he had been entangled in Sansara, he had sucked up disgust and death from all sides into his body, like a sponge sucks up water until it is full (By the River, paragraph 1)

Ask: What words in this line stand out, and what do they suggest?
Expected answer: A sponge absorbs until full: he is saturated with worldly life. Expected link: the river, a place of death, becomes a place of new life.
Ask: How does this line connect to the search for the self?
Expected answer: Siddhartha sees that he had to go through folly to kill the proud Brahmin and Samana within him. (Simile for the saturation of his worldly life.)

55–70 min · You do: independent annotation · You do (15 min)
Independent annotation and a claim-evidence-reasoning paragraph (exemplar given).
Annotate the chapter for characterization, structure (three marks with a margin note each), then write one claim-evidence-reasoning paragraph: what does this chapter suggest about despair and renewal by the river? Then start your writing prompt at your assigned level (HS Sophomore: Analyze how By the River develops the idea of despair and renewal by the river. Make a precise claim, support it with at least three pieces of textual evidence, and explain how the author's use of symbolism and imagery shapes that idea. Address one possible counterclaim. (You are reading the English translation by Gunther Olesch, Anke Dreher, Amy Coulter, Stefan Langer and Semyon Chaichenets, so word-choice evidence is the translators' English.)) Exemplar: Siddhartha's despair at the river becomes the condition for his rebirth. When the text says "Deeply, he had been entangled in Sansara, he had sucked up disgust and death from all sides into his body, like a sponge sucks up water until it is full" (By the River, paragraph 1), it shows this directly. Full of Sansara "like a sponge sucks up water until it is full," he wants to die, but after the Om and his sleep "Siddhartha smiled," and he judges even his years in the city as a necessary part of the path.
Task: Annotate the chapter for characterization, structure (three marks with a margin note each), then write one claim-evidence-reasoning paragraph: what does this chapter suggest about despair and renewal by the river? Then start your writing prompt at your assigned level (HS Sophomore: Analyze how By the River develops the idea of despair and renewal by the river. Make a precise claim, support it with at least three pieces of textual evidence, and explain how the author's use of symbolism and imagery shapes that idea. Address one possible counterclaim. (You are reading the English translation by Gunther Olesch, Anke Dreher, Amy Coulter, Stefan Langer and Semyon Chaichenets, so word-choice evidence is the translators' English.))
Exemplar: Siddhartha's despair at the river becomes the condition for his rebirth. When the text says "Deeply, he had been entangled in Sansara, he had sucked up disgust and death from all sides into his body, like a sponge sucks up water until it is full" (By the River, paragraph 1), it shows this directly. Full of Sansara "like a sponge sucks up water until it is full," he wants to die, but after the Om and his sleep "Siddhartha smiled," and he judges even his years in the city as a necessary part of the path.

70–80 min · Discussion · We do (10 min)
Structured discussion from the 30 tiered questions, with facilitation notes.
Anchor question: Why does Siddhartha say he had to experience despair himself? Content note: this chapter includes a suicide attempt. Follow the content note's guidance; keep the focus on how Hesse uses the scene.
Anchor question: Why does Siddhartha say he had to experience despair himself?
Facilitation: Content note: this chapter includes a suicide attempt. Follow the content note's guidance; keep the focus on how Hesse uses the scene.

80–87 min · Exit ticket / chapter quiz · You do (7 min)
Chapter quiz in the app and an exit ticket (answer given).
Chapter quiz in the app, then: In one sentence, what does this chapter suggest about despair and renewal by the river? Support it with one short quotation. Model answer: Siddhartha's despair at the river becomes the condition for his rebirth. ("Deeply, he had been entangled in Sansara, he had sucked up disgust and death from all sides into his body, like a sponge sucks up water until it is full", By the River, paragraph 1). Accept any defensible claim backed by a quotation from the chapter; the answer key for the quiz is in the Quiz section.
Exit ticket: In one sentence, what does this chapter suggest about despair and renewal by the river? Support it with one short quotation.
Answer: Model answer: Siddhartha's despair at the river becomes the condition for his rebirth. ("Deeply, he had been entangled in Sansara, he had sucked up disgust and death from all sides into his body, like a sponge sucks up water until it is full", By the River, paragraph 1). Accept any defensible claim backed by a quotation from the chapter; the answer key for the quiz is in the Quiz section.

87–90 min · Closure · I do (3 min)
Summarize the lesson and preview the next reading.
Today we saw how characterization shapes despair and renewal by the river. Key takeaway: Siddhartha sees that he had to go through folly to kill the proud Brahmin and Samana within him.

Total: 90 minutes.

60-minute version of this lesson

Same script and content as above, with these timings (60 minutes).

Clock	Segment	Minutes	What to keep
0–5	Bell-ringer	5	Students write to the bell-ringer, then pair-share.
5–10	Vocabulary with etymology notes	5	Five key words in context, with verified word histories.
10–16	Background and context	6	Mini-lecture (read or adapt the script).
16–24	I do: modeled close reading	8	Model the close reading of the anchor quotation using the written think-aloud below.
24–34	We do: guided annotation	10	Guided analysis of a second quotation; expected answers given.
34–44	You do: independent annotation	10	Independent annotation and a claim-evidence-reasoning paragraph (exemplar given).

44–54	Discussion	10	Structured discussion from the 30 tiered questions, with facilitation notes.
54–58	Exit ticket / chapter quiz	4	Chapter quiz in the app and an exit ticket (answer given).
58–60	Closure	2	Summarize the lesson and preview the next reading.

Teacher analysis (spoilers)

Literary elements

- Characterization: Disgusted with himself, Siddhartha comes close to ending his life at the river (By the River, paras. 2–5, referenced only); the word Om rises from his inner self and stops him.
- Structure: Despair, sleep, awakening: the chapter repeats the structure of "Awakening," now as rebirth from despair.
- Irony: Govinda, now a monk, watches over the sleeping stranger and does not recognize him.

Themes and how they develop

- the search for the self: Siddhartha sees that he had to go through folly to kill the proud Brahmin and Samana within him.

Symbols and motifs

- the river: the place of attempted death becomes the place of rebirth.

Key quotations (checked against the reading text)

- "Deeply, he had been entangled in Sansara, he had sucked up disgust and death from all sides into his body, like a sponge sucks up water until it is full" (By the River, paragraph 1) Simile for the saturation of his worldly life.
- "Now, Siddhartha smiled" (By the River, paragraph 22) The turn after Om; his first smile since the city.
- "I went and learned the art of love with Kamala, learned trading with Kamaswami, piled up money, wasted money" (By the River, paragraph 42) His summary of the detour.

Model claim-evidence-reasoning

Claim: Siddhartha's despair at the river becomes the condition for his rebirth.
Evidence: "Deeply, he had been entangled in Sansara, he had sucked up disgust and death from all sides into his body, like a sponge sucks up water until it is full" (By the River, paragraph 1)
Reasoning: Full of Sansara "like a sponge sucks up water until it is full," he wants to die, but after the Om and his sleep "Siddhartha smiled," and he judges even his years in the city as a necessary part of the path.

Passages referenced in this lesson (full text)

A goal stood before Siddhartha, a single goal: to become empty, empty of thirst, empty of wishing, empty of dreams, empty of joy and sorrow. Dead to himself, not to be a self any more, to find tranquility with an emptied heart, to be open to miracles in unselfish thoughts, that was his goal. Once all of my self was overcome and had died, once every desire and every urge was silent in the heart, then the ultimate part of me had to awake, the innermost of my being, which is no longer my self, the great secret. (With the Samanas, paragraph 3)

Having been pondering while slowly walking along, he now stopped as these thoughts caught hold of him, and right away another thought sprang forth from these, a new thought, which was: "That I know nothing about myself, that Siddhartha has remained thus alien and unknown to me, stems from one cause, a single cause: I was afraid of myself, I was fleeing from myself! I searched Atman, I searched Brahman, I was willing to dissect my self and peel off all of its layers, to find the core of all peels in its unknown interior, the Atman, life, the divine part, the ultimate part. But I have lost myself in the process." (Awakening, paragraph 4)

Siddhartha opened his eyes and looked around, a smile filled his face and a feeling of awakening from long dreams flowed through him from his head down to his toes. And it was not long before he walked again, walked quickly like a man who knows what he has got to do. (Awakening, paragraph 5)

"How deaf and stupid have I been!" he thought, walking swiftly along. "When someone reads a text, wants to discover its meaning, he will not scorn the symbols and letters and call them deceptions, coincidence, and worthless hull, but he will read them, he will study and love them, letter by letter. But I, who wanted to read the book of the world and the book of my own being, I have, for the sake of a meaning I had anticipated before I read, scorned the symbols and letters, I called the visible world a deception, called my eyes and my tongue coincidental and worthless forms without substance. No, this is over, I have awakened, I have indeed awakened and have not been born before this very day." (Awakening, paragraph 8)

Because suddenly, he had also become aware of this: He, who was indeed like someone who had just woken up or like a newborn baby, he had to start his life anew and start again at the very beginning. When he had left in this very morning from the grove Jetavana, the grove of that exalted one, already awakening, already on the path towards himself, he had every intention, regarded as natural and took for granted, that he, after years as an ascetic, would return to his home and his father. But now, only in this moment, when he stopped as if a snake was lying on his path, he also awoke to this realization: "But I am no longer the one I was, I am no ascetic any more, I am not a priest any more, I am no Brahmin any more. Whatever should I do at home and at my father's place? Study? Make offerings? Practise meditation? But all this is over, all of this is no longer alongside my path." (Awakening, paragraph 10)

Motionless, Siddhartha remained standing there, and for the time of one moment and breath, his heart felt cold, he felt a cold in his chest, as a small animal, a bird or a rabbit, would when seeing how alone he was. For many years, he had been without home and had felt nothing. Now, he felt it. Still, even in the deepest meditation, he had been his father's son, had been a Brahmin, of a high caste, a cleric. Now, he was nothing but Siddhartha, the awoken one, nothing else was left. Deeply, he inhaled, and for a moment, he felt cold and shivered. Nobody was thus alone as he was. There was no nobleman who did not belong to the noblemen, no worker that did not belong to the workers, and found refuge with them, shared their life, spoke their language. No Brahmin who would not be regarded as Brahmins and lived with them, no ascetic who would not find his refuge in the caste of the Samanas, and even the most forlorn hermit in the forest was not just one and alone, he was also surrounded by a place he belonged to, he also belonged to a caste, in which he was at home. Govinda had become a monk, and a thousand monks were his brothers, wore the same robe as he, believed in his faith, spoke his language. But he, Siddhartha, where did he belong to? With whom would he share his life? Whose language would he speak? (Awakening, paragraph 11)

Out of this moment, when the world melted away all around him, when he stood alone like a star in the sky, out of this moment of a cold and despair, Siddhartha emerged, more a self than before, more firmly concentrated. He felt:

This had been the last tremor of the awakening, the last struggle of this birth. And it was not long until he walked again in long strides, started to proceed swiftly and impatiently, heading no longer for home, no longer to his father, no longer back. (Awakening, paragraph 12)

"To tell you this and to thank you for being so beautiful. And if it doesn't displease you, Kamala, I would like to ask you to be my friend and teacher, for I know nothing yet of that art which you have mastered in the highest degree." (Kamala, paragraph 29)

"I can think. I can wait. I can fast." (Kamala, paragraph 42)

At times he felt, deep in his chest, a dying, quiet voice, which admonished him quietly, lamented quietly; he hardly perceived it. And then, for an hour, he became aware of the strange life he was leading, of him doing lots of things which were only a game, of, though being happy and feeling joy at times, real life still passing him by and not touching him. As a ballplayer plays with his balls, he played with his business deals, with the people around him, watched them, found amusement in them; with his heart, with the source of his being, he was not with them. The source ran somewhere, far away from him, ran and ran invisibly, had nothing to do with his life any more. And at several times he suddenly became scared on account of such thoughts and wished that he would also be gifted with the ability to participate in all of this childlike-naive occupations of the daytime with passion and with his heart, really to live, really to act, really to enjoy and to live instead of just standing by as a spectator. But again and again, he came back to beautiful Kamala, learned the art of love, practised the cult of lust, in which more than in anything else giving and taking becomes one, chatted with her, learned from her, gave her advice, received advice. She understood him better than Govinda used to understand him, she was more similar to him. (With the Childlike People, paragraph 39)

He had been captured by the world, by lust, covetousness, sloth, and finally also by that vice which he had used to despise and mock the most as the most foolish one of all vices: greed. Property, possessions, and riches also had finally captured him; they were no longer a game and trifles to him, had become a shackle and a burden. On a strange and devious way, Siddhartha had gotten into this final and most base of all dependencies, by means of the game of dice. It was since that time, when he had stopped being a Samana in his heart, that Siddhartha began to play the game for money and precious things, which he at other times only joined with a smile and casually as a custom of the childlike people, with an increasing rage and passion. He was a feared gambler, few dared to take him on, so high and audacious were his stakes. He played the game due to a pain of his heart, losing and wasting his wretched money in the game brought him an angry joy, in no other way he could demonstrate his disdain for wealth, the merchants' false god, more clearly and more mockingly. Thus he gambled with high stakes and mercilessly, hating himself, mocking himself, won thousands, threw away thousands, lost money, lost jewelry, lost a house in the country, won again, lost again. That fear, that terrible and petrifying fear, which he felt while he was rolling the dice, while he was worried about losing high stakes, that fear he loved and sought to always renew it, always increase it, always get it to a slightly higher level, for in this feeling alone he still felt something like happiness, something like an intoxication, something like an elevated form of life in the midst of his saturated, lukewarm, dull life. (Sansara, paragraph 6)

Kamala owned a small, rare singing bird in a golden cage. Of this bird he dreamt. He dreamt: this bird had become mute, who at other times always used to sing in the morning, and since this arose his attention, he stepped in front of the cage and looked inside; there the small bird was dead and lay stiff on the ground. He took it out, weighed it for a moment in his hand, and then threw it away, out in the street, and in the same moment, he felt terribly shocked, and his heart hurt, as if he had thrown away from himself all value and everything good by throwing out this dead bird. (Sansara, paragraph 10)

Then, Siddhartha knew that the game was over, that he could not play it any more. Shivers ran over his body, inside of him, so he felt, something had died. (Sansara, paragraph 13)

Siddhartha walked through the forest, was already far from the city, and knew nothing but that one thing, that there was no going back for him, that this life, as he had lived it for many years until now, was over and done away with, and that he had tasted all of it, sucked everything out of it until he was disgusted with it. Dead was the singing bird, he had dreamt of. Dead was the bird in his heart. Deeply, he had been entangled in Sansara, he had sucked up disgust and death from all sides into his body, like a sponge sucks up water until it is full. And full he was, full of the feeling of been sick of it, full of misery, full of death, there was nothing left in this world which could have attracted him, given him joy, given him comfort. (By the River, paragraph 1)

[By the River, paragraph 2: cited by paragraph number only; read it in the book text]

[By the River, paragraph 3: cited by paragraph number only; read it in the book text]

[By the River, paragraph 4: cited by paragraph number only; read it in the book text]

[By the River, paragraph 5: cited by paragraph number only; read it in the book text]

Then, out of remote areas of his soul, out of past times of his now weary life, a sound stirred up. It was a word, a syllable, which he, without thinking, with a slurred voice, spoke to himself, the old word which is the beginning and the end of all prayers of the Brahmins, the holy Om, which roughly means "that what is perfect" or "the completion." And in the moment when the sound of Om touched Siddhartha's ear, his dormant spirit suddenly woke up and realized the foolishness of his actions. (By the River, paragraph 6)

Siddhartha was deeply shocked. So this was how things were with him, so doomed was he, so much he had lost his way and was forsaken by all knowledge, that he had been able to seek death, that this wish, this wish of a child, had been able to grow in him: to find rest by annihilating his body! What all agony of these recent times, all sobering realizations, all desperation had not brought about, this was brought on by this moment, when the Om entered his consciousness: he became aware of himself in his misery and in his error. (By the River, paragraph 7)

Om! he spoke to himself: Om! and again he knew about Brahman, knew about the indestructibility of life, knew about all that is divine, which he had forgotten. (By the River, paragraph 8)

But this was only a moment, flash. By the foot of the coconut tree, Siddhartha collapsed, struck down by tiredness, mumbling Om, placed his head on the root of the tree and fell into a deep sleep. (By the River, paragraph 9)

Deep was his sleep and without dreams, for a long time he had not known such a sleep any more. When he woke up after many hours, he felt as if ten years had passed, he heard the water quietly flowing, did not know where he was and who had brought him here, opened his eyes, saw with astonishment that there were trees and the sky above him, and he remembered where he was and how he got here. But it took him a long while for this, and the past seemed to him as if it had been covered by a veil, infinitely distant, infinitely far away, infinitely meaningless. He only knew that his previous life (in the first moment when he thought about it, this past life seemed to him like a very old, previous incarnation, like an early prebirth of his present self)—that his previous life had been abandoned by him, that, full of disgust and wretchedness, he had even intended to throw his life away, but that by a river, under a coconut tree, he has come to his senses, the holy word Om on his lips, that then he had fallen asleep and had now woken up and was looking at the world as a new man. Quietly, he spoke the word Om to himself, speaking which he had fallen asleep, and it seemed to him as if his entire long sleep had been nothing but a long meditative recitation of Om, a thinking of Om, a submergence and complete entering into Om, into the nameless, the perfected. (By the River, paragraph 10)

What a wonderful sleep had this been! Never before by sleep, he had been thus refreshed, thus renewed, thus rejuvenated! Perhaps he had really died, had drowned and was reborn in a new body? But no, he knew himself, he knew his hand and his feet, knew the place where he lay, knew this self in his chest, this Siddhartha, the eccentric, the weird one, but this Siddhartha was nevertheless transformed, was renewed, was strangely well rested, strangely awake, joyful and curious. (By the River, paragraph 11)

Siddhartha straightened up, then he saw a person sitting opposite to him, an unknown man, a monk in a yellow robe with a shaven head, sitting in the position of pondering. He observed the man, who had neither hair on his head nor a beard, and he had not observed him for long when he recognised this monk as Govinda, the friend of his youth, Govinda who had taken his refuge with the exalted Buddha. Govinda had aged, he too, but still his face bore the same features, expressed zeal, faithfulness, searching, timidness. But when Govinda, sensing his gaze, opened his eyes and looked at him, Siddhartha saw that Govinda did not recognise him. Govinda was happy to find him awake; apparently, he had been sitting here for a long time and been waiting for him to wake up, though he did not know him. (By the River, paragraph 12)

"I have been sleeping," said Siddhartha. "However did you get here?" (By the River, paragraph 13)

"You have been sleeping," answered Govinda. "It is not good to be sleeping in such places, where snakes often are and the animals of the forest have their paths. I, O sir, am a follower of the exalted Gotama, the Buddha, the Sakyamuni, and have been on a pilgrimage together with several of us on this path, when I saw you lying and sleeping in a place where it is dangerous to sleep. Therefore, I sought to wake you up, O sir, and since I saw that your sleep was very deep, I stayed behind from my group and sat with you. And then, so it seems, I have fallen asleep myself, I who wanted to guard your sleep. Badly I have served you, tiredness has overwhelmed me. But now that you're awake, let me go to catch up with my brothers." (By the River, paragraph 14)

"I thank you, Samana, for watching out over my sleep," spoke Siddhartha. "You're friendly, you followers of the exalted one. Now you may go then." (By the River, paragraph 15)

"I'm going, sir. May you, sir, always be in good health." (By the River, paragraph 16)

"I thank you, Samana." (By the River, paragraph 17)

Govinda made the gesture of a salutation and said: "Farewell." (By the River, paragraph 18)

Now, Siddhartha smiled. (By the River, paragraph 22)

"I know you, O Govinda, from your father's hut, and from the school of the Brahmins, and from the offerings, and from our walk to the Samanas, and from that hour when you took your refuge with the exalted one in the grove Jetavana." (By the River, paragraph 23)

"You're Siddhartha," Govinda exclaimed loudly. "Now, I'm recognising you, and don't comprehend any more how I couldn't recognise you right away. Be welcome, Siddhartha, my joy is great to see you again." (By the River, paragraph 24)

"It also gives me joy to see you again. You've been the guard of my sleep, again I thank you for this, though I wouldn't have required any guard. Where are you going to, O friend?" (By the River, paragraph 25)

Quoth Siddhartha: "With me too, friend, it is as it is with you. I'm going nowhere. I'm just travelling. I'm on a pilgrimage." (By the River, paragraph 27)

Govinda spoke: "You're saying: you're on a pilgrimage, and I believe in you. But, forgive me, O Siddhartha, you do not look like a pilgrim. You're wearing a rich man's garments, you're wearing the shoes of a distinguished gentleman, and your hair, with the fragrance of perfume, is not a pilgrim's hair, not the hair of a Samana." (By the River, paragraph 28)

"Right so, my dear, you have observed well, your keen eyes see everything. But I haven't said to you that I was a Samana. I said: I'm on a pilgrimage. And so it is: I'm on a pilgrimage." (By the River, paragraph 29)

"I believe you, my dear Govinda. But now, today, you've met a pilgrim just like this, wearing such shoes, such a garment. Remember, my dear: Not eternal is the world of appearances, not eternal, anything but eternal are our garments and the style of our hair, and our hair and bodies themselves. I'm wearing a rich man's clothes, you've seen this quite right. I'm wearing them, because I have been a rich man, and I'm wearing my hair like the worldly and lustful people, for I have been one of them." (By the River, paragraph 31)

"I don't know it, I don't know it just like you. I'm travelling. I was a rich man and am no rich man any more, and what I'll be tomorrow, I don't know." (By the River, paragraph 33)

"I've lost them or they me. They somehow happened to slip away from me. The wheel of physical manifestations is turning quickly, Govinda. Where is Siddhartha the Brahmin? Where is Siddhartha the Samana? Where is Siddhartha the rich man? Non-eternal things change quickly, Govinda, you know it." (By the River, paragraph 35)

Govinda looked at the friend of his youth for a long time, with doubt in his eyes. After that, he gave him the salutation which one would use on a gentleman and went on his way. (By the River, paragraph 36)

With a smiling face, Siddhartha watched him leave, he loved him still, this faithful man, this fearful man. And how could he not have loved everybody and everything in this moment, in the glorious hour after his wonderful sleep, filled with Om! The enchantment, which had happened inside of him in his sleep and by means of the Om, was this very thing that he loved everything, that he was full of joyful love for everything he saw. And it was this very thing, so it seemed to him now, which had been his sickness before, that he was not able to love anybody or anything. (By the River, paragraph 37)

With a smiling face, Siddhartha watched the leaving monk. The sleep had strengthened him much, but hunger gave him much pain, for by now he had not eaten for two days, and the times were long past when he had been tough against hunger. With sadness, and yet also with a smile, he thought of that time. In those days, so he remembered, he had boasted of three things to Kamala, had been able to do three noble and undefeatable feats: fasting—waiting—thinking. These had been his possession, his power and strength, his solid staff; in the busy, laborious years of his youth, he had learned these three feats, nothing else. And now, they had abandoned him, none of them was his any more, neither fasting, nor waiting, nor thinking. For the most wretched things, he had given them up, for what fades most quickly, for sensual lust, for the good life, for riches! His life had indeed been strange. And now, so it seemed, now he had really become a childlike person. (By the River, paragraph 38)

Siddhartha thought about his situation. Thinking was hard on him, he did not really feel like it, but he forced himself. (By the River, paragraph 39)

Now, he thought, since all these most easily perishing things have slipped from me again, now I'm standing here under the sun again just as I have been standing here a little child, nothing is mine, I have no abilities, there is nothing I could bring about, I have learned nothing. How wondrous is this! Now, that I'm no longer young, that my hair is already half gray, that my strength is fading, now I'm starting again at the beginning and as a child! Again, he had to smile. Yes, his fate had been strange! Things were going downhill with him, and now he was again facing the world void and naked and stupid. But he could not feel sad about this, no, he even felt a great urge to laugh, to laugh about himself, to laugh about this strange, foolish world. (By the River, paragraph 40)

"Things are going downhill with you!" he said to himself, and laughed about it, and as he was saying it, he happened to glance at the river, and he also saw the river going downhill, always moving on downhill, and singing and being happy through it all. He liked this well, kindly he smiled at the river. Was this not the river in which he had intended to drown himself, in past times, a hundred years ago, or had he dreamed this? (By the River, paragraph 41)

Wondrous indeed was my life, so he thought, wondrous detours it has taken. As a boy, I had only to do with gods and offerings. As a youth, I had only to do with asceticism, with thinking and meditation, was searching for Brahman, worshipped the eternal in the Atman. But as a young man, I followed the penitents, lived in the forest, suffered of heat and frost, learned to hunger, taught my body to become dead. Wonderfully, soon afterwards, insight came towards me in the form of the great Buddha's teachings, I felt the knowledge of the oneness of the world circling in me like my own blood. But I also had to leave Buddha and the great knowledge. I went and learned the art of love with Kamala, learned trading with Kamaswami, piled up money, wasted money, learned to love my stomach, learned to please my senses. I had to spend many years losing my spirit, to unlearn thinking again, to forget the oneness. Isn't it just as if I had turned slowly and on a long detour from a man into a child, from a thinker into a childlike person? And yet, this path has been very good; and yet, the bird in my chest has not died. But what a path has this been! I had to pass through so much stupidity, through so much vices, through so many errors, through so much disgust and disappointment and woe, just to become a child again and to be able to start over. But it was right so, my heart says "Yes" to it, my eyes smile to it. I've had to experience despair, I've had to sink down to the most foolish one of all thoughts, to the thought of suicide, in order to be able to experience divine grace, to hear Om again, to be able to sleep properly and awake properly again. I had to become a fool, to find Atman in me again. I had to sin, to be able to live again. Where else might my path lead me to? It is foolish, this path, it moves in loops, perhaps it is going around in a circle. Let it go as it likes, I want to take it. (By the River, paragraph 42)

Wonderfully, he felt joy rolling like waves in his chest. (By the River, paragraph 43)

Wherever from, he asked his heart, where from did you get this happiness? Might it come from that long, good sleep, which has done me so good? Or from the word Om, which I said? Or from the fact that I have escaped, that I have completely fled, that I am finally free again and am standing like a child under the sky? Oh how good is it to have fled, to have become free! How clean and beautiful is the air here, how good to breathe! There, where I ran away from, there everything smelled of ointments, of spices, of wine, of excess, of sloth. How did I hate this world of the rich, of those who revel in fine food, of the gamblers! How did I hate myself for staying in this terrible world for so long! How did I hate myself, have deprived, poisoned, tortured myself, have made myself old and evil! No, never again I will, as I used to like doing so much, delude myself into thinking that Siddhartha was wise! But this one thing I have done well, this I like, this I must praise, that there is now an end to that hatred against myself, to that foolish and dreary life! I praise you, Siddhartha, after so many years of foolishness, you have once again had an idea, have done something, have heard the bird in your chest singing and have followed it! (By the River, paragraph 44)

Thus he praised himself, found joy in himself, listened curiously to his stomach, which was rumbling with hunger. He had now, so he felt, in these recent times and days, completely tasted and spit out, devoured up to the point of desperation and death, a piece of suffering, a piece of misery. Like this, it was good. For much longer, he could have stayed with Kamaswami, made money, wasted money, filled his stomach, and let his soul die of thirst; for much longer he could have lived in this soft, well upholstered hell, if this had not happened: the moment of complete hopelessness and despair, that most extreme moment, when he hung over the rushing waters and was ready to destroy himself. That he had felt this despair, this deep disgust, and that he had not succumbed to it, that the bird, the joyful source and voice in him was still alive after all, this was why he felt joy, this was why he laughed, this was why his face was smiling brightly under his hair which had turned gray. (By the River, paragraph 45)

"It is good," he thought, "to get a taste of everything for oneself, which one needs to know. That lust for the world and riches do not belong to the good things, I have already learned as a child. I have known it for a long time, but I have experienced only now. And now I know it, don't just know it in my memory, but in my eyes, in my heart, in my stomach. Good for me, to know this!" (By the River, paragraph 46)

For a long time, he pondered his transformation, listened to the bird, as it sang for joy. Had not this bird died in him, had he not felt its death? No, something else from within him had died, something which already for a long time had yearned to die. Was it not this what he used to intend to kill in his ardent years as a penitent? Was this not his self, his small, frightened, and proud self, he had wrestled with for so many years, which had defeated him again and again, which was back again after every killing, prohibited joy, felt fear? Was it not this, which today had finally come to its death, here in the forest, by this lovely river? Was it not due to this death, that he was now like a child, so full of trust, so without fear, so full of joy? (By the River, paragraph 47)

Now Siddhartha also got some idea of why he had fought this self in vain as a Brahmin, as a penitent. Too much knowledge had held him back, too many holy verses, too many sacrificial rules, to much self-castigation, so much doing and striving for that goal! Full of arrogance, he had been, always the smartest, always working the most, always one step ahead of all others, always the knowing and spiritual one, always the priest or wise one. Into being a priest, into this arrogance, into this spirituality, his self had retreated, there it sat firmly and grew, while he thought he would kill it by fasting and penance. Now he saw it and saw that the secret voice had been right, that no teacher would ever have been able to bring about his salvation. Therefore, he had to go out into the world, lose himself to lust and power, to woman and money, had to become a merchant, a dice-gambler, a drinker, and a greedy person, until the priest and Samana in him was dead. Therefore, he had to continue bearing these ugly years, bearing the disgust, the teachings, the pointlessness of a dreary and wasted life up to the end, up to bitter despair, until Siddhartha the lustful, Siddhartha the greedy could also die. He had died, a new Siddhartha had woken up from the sleep. He would also grow old, he would also eventually have to die, mortal was Siddhartha, mortal was every physical form. But today he was young, was a child, the new Siddhartha, and was full of joy. (By the River, paragraph 48)

He thought these thoughts, listened with a smile to his stomach, listened gratefully to a buzzing bee. Cheerfully, he looked into the rushing river, never before he had like a water so well as this one, never before he had perceived the voice and the parable of the moving water thus strongly and beautifully. It seemed to him as if the river had something special to tell him, something he did not know yet, which was still awaiting him. In this river, Siddhartha had intended to drown himself, in it the old, tired, desperate Siddhartha had drowned today. But the new Siddhartha felt a deep love for this rushing water, and decided for himself, not to leave it very soon. (By the River, paragraph 49)

The pilgrims were getting close to Vasudeva's ferry, when little Siddhartha once again forced his mother to rest. She, Kamala herself, had also become tired, and while the boy was chewing a banana, she crouched down on the ground, closed her eyes a bit, and rested. But suddenly, she uttered a wailing scream, the boy looked at her in fear and saw her face having grown pale from horror; and from under her dress, a small, black snake fled, by which Kamala had been bitten. (The Ferryman, paragraph 47)

Hurriedly, they now both ran along the path, in order to reach people, and got near to the ferry, there Kamala collapsed, and was not able to go any further. But the boy started crying miserably, only interrupting it to kiss and hug his mother, and she also joined his loud screams for help, until the sound reached Vasudeva's ears, who stood at the ferry. Quickly, he came walking, took the woman on his arms, carried her into the boat, the boy ran along, and soon they all reached the hut, where Siddhartha stood by the stove and was just lighting the fire. He looked up and first saw the boy's face, which wondrously reminded him of something, like a warning to remember something he had forgotten. Then he saw Kamala, whom he instantly recognised, though she lay unconscious in the ferryman's arms, and now he knew that it was his own son, whose face had been such a warning reminder to him, and the heart stirred in his chest. (The Ferryman, paragraph 48)

Kamala's wound was washed, but had already turned black and her body was swollen, she was made to drink a healing potion. Her consciousness returned, she lay on Siddhartha's bed in the hut and bent over her stood Siddhartha, who used to love her so much. It seemed like a dream to her; with a smile, she looked at her friend's face; just slowly she, realized her situation, remembered the bite, called timidly for the boy. (The Ferryman, paragraph 49)

"He's with you, don't worry," said Siddhartha. (The Ferryman, paragraph 50)

Kamala looked into his eyes. She spoke with a heavy tongue, paralysed by the poison. "You've become old, my dear," she said, "you've become gray. But you are like the young Samana, who at one time came without clothes, with dusty feet, to me into the garden. You are much more like him, than you were like him at that time when you had left me and Kamaswami. In the eyes, you're like him, Siddhartha. Alas, I have also grown old, old—could you still recognise me?" (The Ferryman, paragraph 51)

Siddhartha smiled: "Instantly, I recognised you, Kamala, my dear." (The Ferryman, paragraph 52)

Vocabulary with etymology notes

Word	Definition (in this sentence)	In context	Word history
ointments (noun)	perfumed oils and creams	There, where I ran away from, there everything smelled of ointments, of spices, of wine, of excess, of sloth.
unlearn (verb)	to forget a habit or way of thinking	I had to spend many years losing my spirit, to unlearn thinking again, to forget the oneness.
penitents (noun)	people who punish themselves for their sins	But as a young man, I followed the penitents, lived in the forest, suffered of heat and frost, learned to hunger, taught my body to become dead.
annihilating (verb)	destroying completely	so much he had lost his way and was forsaken by all knowledge, that he had been able to seek death, that this wish, this wish of a child, had been able to grow in him: to find rest by annihilating his body!	"annihilate": Origin: Latin annihilātus. (Liber et Libri origin note, https://en.wiktionary.org/wiki/annihilate#Etymology)
oneness (noun)	the quality of being united into one	Wonderfully, soon afterwards, insight came towards me in the form of the great Buddha's teachings, I felt the knowledge of the oneness of the world circling in me like my own blood.

gratefully (adverb)	with appreciation; in a grateful manner	He thought these thoughts, listened with a smile to his stomach, listened gratefully to a buzzing bee.
boasted (verb)	showed off	In those days, so he remembered, he had boasted of three things to Kamala, had been able to do three noble and undefeatable feats: fasting—waiting—thinking.
retreated (verb)	pulled back or moved away	Into being a priest, into this arrogance, into this spirituality, his self had retreated, there it sat firmly and grew, while he thought he would kill it by fasting and penance.

Discussion questions

1. Why does Siddhartha say he had to experience despair himself?
2. Where does symbolism appear in this chapter, and what effect does it have? Point to one passage.
3. How does this chapter connect to the book's larger concern with the unity of all things?

Tiered discussion questions (30: recall, inferential, evaluative)

Wait time after every question (3 s for DOK 1, 5 s for DOK 2, 8 to 10 s for DOK 3 and 4); think-pair-share on DOK 3 and 4; answer each response with a follow-up probe; close with student-generated questions. Focus sets by rigor level: HS Sophomore: 1, 2, 3, 4, 13, 14, 15, 16, 17, 23, 24, 25; HS Junior: 1, 2, 3, 14, 15, 16, 17, 18, 24, 25, 26, 27; HS Senior: 1, 2, 3, 15, 16, 17, 18, 25, 26, 27, 28, 29; AP: 1, 2, 16, 17, 18, 19, 20, 26, 27, 28, 29, 30; College Freshman: 1, 2, 17, 18, 19, 20, 21, 22, 27, 28, 29, 30; College Sophomore: 1, 2, 11, 18, 19, 20, 21, 22, 23, 28, 29, 30; College Junior: 1, 11, 12, 19, 20, 21, 22, 23, 24, 25, 29, 30; College Senior: 1, 11, 12, 13, 20, 21, 22, 23, 24, 25, 26, 30; Graduate / PhD: 1, 11, 12, 13, 21, 22, 23, 24, 25, 26, 27, 28

Literal / recall

1. What does Siddhartha's despair lead him toward at the river? [DOK 1 · Cold call with support: call on a student by name, offering a sentence starter or rephrasing if needed · wait 3 s · Dual Credit (Indiana College Core): ICC-WC-1.1, ICC-WC-1.3, ICC-WC-1.4, ICC-WC-1.5] Look for: Despair so deep that he wants to die (By the River, paras. 2–5, referenced only)

   Answer guidance: Toward a wish to die. Point students to the paragraphs by number only and do not read them aloud: By the River, paragraphs 2–5. Later he names it himself as “the thought of suicide” (By the River, paragraph 42). Teacher note: some schools' guidelines may treat this passage differently.
2. What stops him? [DOK 1 · Turn and Talk: students discuss briefly with a neighbor before answering · wait 3 s · Dual Credit (Indiana College Core): ICC-WC-1.1, ICC-WC-1.3, ICC-WC-1.4, ICC-WC-1.5] Look for: The word Om rising within

   Answer guidance: The word Om, rising from deep in his memory: “It was a word, a syllable, which he, without thinking, with a slurred voice, spoke to himself” (By the River, paragraph 6)… and “when the Om entered his consciousness” (By the River, paragraph 7).
3. Why does Govinda doubt that Siddhartha is a pilgrim? [DOK 1 · Cold call with support: call on a student by name, offering a sentence starter or rephrasing if needed · wait 3 s · Dual Credit (Indiana College Core): ICC-WC-1.1, ICC-

WC-1.3, ICC-WC-1.4, ICC-WC-1.5] Look for: His rich clothes, fine shoes and perfumed hair

Answer guidance: Because he looks like a rich man: "You're wearing a rich man's garments, you're wearing the shoes of a distinguished gentleman, and your hair, with the fragrance of perfume, is not a pilgrim's hair" (By the River, paragraph 28).

4. Does Govinda recognize him at first? [DOK 1 · Turn and Talk: students discuss briefly with a neighbor before answering · wait 3 s · Dual Credit (Indiana College Core): ICC-WC-1.1, ICC-WC-1.3, ICC-WC-1.4, ICC-WC-1.5] Look for: No

   Answer guidance: No: "Siddhartha saw that Govinda did not recognise him" (By the River, paragraph 12). Govinda knows him only after he gives his name: "Now, I'm recognising you" (By the River, paragraph 24).

5. What does Siddhartha promise himself he will never do again? [DOK 1 · Cold call with support: call on a student by name, offering a sentence starter or rephrasing if needed · wait 3 s · Dual Credit (Indiana College Core): ICC-WC-1.1, ICC-WC-1.3, ICC-WC-1.4, ICC-WC-1.5] Look for: Delude himself into thinking he is wise

   Answer guidance: "No, never again I will, as I used to like doing so much, delude myself into thinking that Siddhartha was wise!" (By the River, paragraph 44)

6. Retell the three most important events of "By the River" in order, in one sentence each. [DOK 1 · Turn and Talk: students discuss briefly with a neighbor before answering · wait 3 s · Dual Credit (Indiana College Core): ICC-WC-1.1, ICC-WC-1.3, ICC-WC-1.4, ICC-WC-1.5] Look for: Siddhartha reaches the river sick of himself and comes close to ending his life (By the River, paras. 2–5; referenced, not quoted). From deep within comes the sacred word Om, and he falls into a deep sleep under a coconut tree. He wakes renewed; Govinda, now a monk, has watched over him without recognizing him. Siddhartha reflects that he had to experience despair to learn its emptiness, and decides to stay by the river.

   Answer guidance: In despair he comes to the river (paragraph 1; paragraphs 2–5 are cite-only); the word Om stops him and he sleeps under the coconut tree (paragraphs 6–9); he wakes renewed, talks with Govinda and decides to stay by the river (paragraphs 12–49).

7. Which characters appear or are mentioned in "By the River"? Name two and one thing each says or does. [DOK 1 · Cold call with support: call on a student by name, offering a sentence starter or rephrasing if needed · wait 3 s · Dual Credit (Indiana College Core): ICC-WC-1.1, ICC-WC-1.3, ICC-WC-1.4, ICC-WC-1.5] Look for: Names and actions taken from the chapter; check against the teacher summary.

   Answer guidance: Two of: Govinda, who guards the sleeper without knowing him (paragraph 14); Kamala and Kamaswami, remembered as the life he fled (paragraph 45); Gotama, whose teaching Govinda still follows (paragraph 42).

8. Where and when does "By the River" take place? Point to the line that tells you. [DOK 1 · Turn and Talk: students discuss briefly with a neighbor before answering · wait 3 s · Dual Credit (Indiana College Core): ICC-WC-1.1, ICC-WC-1.3, ICC-WC-1.4, ICC-WC-1.5] Look for: A place/time detail quoted from the chapter.

   Answer guidance: By the river in the forest, one day and night after he leaves the city: "Siddhartha walked through the forest, was already far from the city" (By the River, paragraph 1)… The coconut tree on the bank is in paragraph 9.

9. Reread: "These had been his possession, his power and strength, his solid staff; in the busy, laborious years of his youth, he had learned these three feats, nothing else." What does "laborious" mean here, and what is literally happening in this line? [DOK 1 · Turn and Talk: students discuss briefly with a neighbor before answering · wait 3 s · Dual Credit (Indiana College Core): ICC-WC-1.1, ICC-WC-1.3, ICC-WC-1.4, ICC-WC-1.5] Look for: laborious: needing much hard work.

   Answer guidance: "Laborious" here means: needing much hard work. In By the River, paragraph 38, Siddhartha remembers that in his hard-working youth he learned only three feats: fasting, waiting and thinking.

10. Reread: "And how could he not have loved everybody and everything in this moment, in the glorious hour after his wonderful sleep, filled with Om!" What does "glorious" mean here, and what is literally happening in this line? [DOK 1 · Turn and Talk: students discuss briefly with a neighbor before answering · wait 3 s · Dual Credit (Indiana College Core): ICC-WC-1.1, ICC-WC-1.3, ICC-WC-1.4, ICC-WC-1.5] Look for: glorious: wonderful; full of splendour.

    Answer guidance: "Glorious" here means: wonderful; full of splendour. In By the River, paragraph 37, after his deep sleep Siddhartha wakes into a joyful hour in which he loves everyone and everything.

Inferential / analytical

1. What does "By the River" suggest about despair and renewal by the river? State the inference and the line that supports it. [DOK 2 · Think-Pair-Share: students think alone, discuss with a partner, then share with the class · wait 5 s · Dual Credit (Indiana College Core): ICC-WC-1.1, ICC-WC-1.3, ICC-WC-1.4, ICC-WC-1.5] Look for: A stated inference (for example, that renewal comes through despair, not around it) backed by one located line, such as the one in By the River, paragraph 47.

    Answer guidance: The chapter suggests that renewal comes through despair, not around it. Support: "Was it not due to this death, that he was now like a child, so full of trust, so without fear, so full of joy?" (By the River, paragraph 47)

2. Find one example of symbolism in this chapter. What does it reveal that a plain statement would not? [DOK 2 · Follow-up: ask a probing question that builds on the previous answer · wait 5 s · Dual Credit (Indiana College Core): ICC-WC-1.1, ICC-WC-1.3, ICC-WC-1.4, ICC-WC-1.5] Look for: Look for objects, places or actions that stand for larger ideas.

    Answer guidance: The bird in his chest ("that the bird, the joyful source and voice in him was still alive after all" (By the River, paragraph 45)) stands for the inner voice that died in Kamala's cage; it shows renewal as something that survived inside him.

3. How does the imagery in this chapter shape what we understand about despair and renewal by the river? [DOK 3 · Think-Pair-Share: students think alone, discuss with a partner, then share with the class · wait 8 s · Dual Credit (Indiana College Core): ICC-WC-1.1, ICC-WC-1.3, ICC-WC-1.4, ICC-WC-1.5] Look for: Look for sensory details (sight, sound, cold, light) and what mood they create.

    Answer guidance: Images of sleep and waking ("Never before by sleep, he had been thus refreshed, thus renewed, thus rejuvenated!" (By the River, paragraph 11)) and of the rushing water (paragraph 49) make renewal physical, like a body waking.

4. In the passage that begins "For a long time, he pondered his transformation, listened to the bird, as it sang for joy.", why might Hesse have chosen these particular words? Pick two and explain their connotations. [DOK 2 · Follow-up: ask a probing question that builds on the previous answer · wait 5 s · Dual Credit (Indiana College Core): ICC-WC-1.1, ICC-WC-1.3, ICC-WC-1.4, ICC-WC-1.5] Look for: Diction analysis of two words in the anchor passage.

    Answer guidance: In By the River, paragraph 47, "pondered" shows calm thought instead of panic, and "sang for joy" gives the inner bird its voice back; the words mark how far he has come since the start of the chapter.

5. What causes the main turn in "By the River", and what effect is it likely to have on what follows? [DOK 2 · Follow-up: ask a probing question that builds on the previous answer · wait 5 s · Dual Credit (Indiana College Core): ICC-

WC-1.1, ICC-WC-1.3, ICC-WC-1.4, ICC-WC-1.5] Look for: Siddhartha reaches the river sick of himself and comes close to ending his life (By the River, paras. 2–5; referenced, not quoted). From deep within comes the sacred word Om, and he falls into a deep sleep under a coconut tree. He wakes renewed; Govinda, now a monk, has watched over him without recognizing him. Siddhartha reflects that he had to experience…

Answer guidance: The cause is the word Om (By the River, paragraph 7), which wakes him from despair. Effect: after sleep he is "renewed" (paragraph 11) and will stay by the river, where the next chapter finds him.

6. How does "By the River" build on "Sansara"? Name one link of cause and effect. [DOK 3 · Think-Pair-Share: students think alone, discuss with a partner, then share with the class · wait 8 s · Dual Credit (Indiana College Core): ICC-WC-1.1, ICC-WC-1.3, ICC-WC-1.4, ICC-WC-1.5] Look for: A causal or structural link between this and the previous chapter.

   Answer guidance: Cause and effect: in "Sansara" he left the city in the night; this chapter begins with that flight and its end, "there was no going back for him" (By the River, paragraph 1).

7. What can we infer about a character's motives from what they say and do here, as opposed to what they claim? [DOK 3 · Follow-up: ask a probing question that builds on the previous answer · wait 8 s · Dual Credit (Indiana College Core): ICC-WC-1.1, ICC-WC-1.3, ICC-WC-1.4, ICC-WC-1.5] Look for: An inference about motive supported by a quoted line.

   Answer guidance: Govinda says he stayed only to guard a sleeper (paragraph 14), but his kindness to a stranger shows the Buddha's teaching at work; Siddhartha claims he is a pilgrim (paragraph 27) while he really has nowhere to go.

8. The bell-ringer asked: "Why does Siddhartha say he had to experience despair himself?" Now that we have read closely, how would you revise your first answer, and which line changed your mind? [DOK 2 · Think-Pair-Share: students think alone, discuss with a partner, then share with the class · wait 5 s · Dual Credit (Indiana College Core): ICC-WC-1.1, ICC-WC-1.3, ICC-WC-1.4, ICC-WC-1.5] Look for: A revised answer anchored in the text.

   Answer guidance: A revised answer should use his own explanation: he had to fall to the lowest point to find grace again, as he says in By the River, paragraph 42 (cite by paragraph; the line names suicide, so do not ask students to read it aloud). Teacher note: some schools' guidelines may treat this passage differently.

9. Where does theme appear, and how does it connect this chapter to the larger concern with the unity of all things? [DOK 3 · Follow-up: ask a probing question that builds on the previous answer · wait 8 s · Dual Credit (Indiana College Core): ICC-WC-1.1, ICC-WC-1.3, ICC-WC-1.4, ICC-WC-1.5] Look for: Look for statements or moments that connect to the book's big ideas.

   Answer guidance: The theme of oneness appears in Om, "the old word which is the beginning and the end of all prayers" (By the River, paragraph 6), and in his wish to forget and then regain "the oneness" (paragraph 42).

10. Background: Om is the sacred syllable in Hindu and Buddhist traditions, representing ultimate reality. How does knowing this change the way you read one moment in the chapter? [DOK 3 · Think-Pair-Share: students think alone, discuss with a partner, then share with the class · wait 8 s · Dual Credit (Indiana College Core): ICC-WC-1.1, ICC-WC-1.3, ICC-WC-1.4, ICC-WC-1.5] Look for: A specific moment reread in light of the context.

    Answer guidance: Knowing that Om stands for ultimate reality explains why one word can stop him (paragraph 7): it reconnects him to everything he had lost, not just to a habit of prayer.

Evaluative / synthesis / creative

1. A critic might argue: "Rebirth by water is a classic archetype; the river becomes the novel's central symbol." How far do you agree? Take a stand and defend it with two lines from the chapter. [DOK 3 · Four Corners: students move to the corner that matches their position and explain why · wait 8 s · ICC-WC-1.5] Look for: A defended position with evidence and one counterpoint.
   Answer guidance: Agree in part: the river becomes the place of renewal (paragraph 49). A text counterpoint: the renewal is caused by Om and sleep (paragraphs 6–11), not by the water itself.
2. Which character in this chapter acts most wisely, and which least? Judge them by a standard you name. [DOK 3 · Think-Pair-Share: students think alone, discuss with a partner, then share with the class · wait 8 s · ICC-WC-1.5] Look for: An evaluation using an explicit criterion and evidence.
   Answer guidance: With kindness as the standard, Govinda is wisest: he guards a stranger (paragraph 14). Siddhartha's earlier despair is least wise, but he judges it himself in paragraph 42.
3. Rewrite one moment of "By the River" from the point of view of a different character. What does the new angle reveal or hide about despair and renewal by the river? [DOK 4 · Think-Pair-Share: students think alone, discuss with a partner, then share with the class · wait 8 s · ICC-WC-1.5] Look for: A rewrite that keeps the chapter's events accurate, speaks in the chosen character's voice, and ends with a sentence on what the new angle shows or hides.
   Answer guidance: Govinda's view of the meeting (By the River, paragraphs 12–36) works well: he sees a rich man asleep in the forest and doubts his words, which hides the inner rebirth.
4. Write three questions of your own about "By the River": one recall, one "why/how", and one "should/what if". Trade with a partner and answer theirs. [DOK 3 · Student-generated: students write and pose their own questions · wait 8 s · ICC-WC-1.5] Look for: Three questions at three levels, each answerable from the chapter, traded and answered with a line.
   Answer guidance: Example set: recall, 'Under what tree does he sleep?' (coconut, paragraph 9); why/how, 'Why doesn't Govinda recognise him?' (paragraph 24); what if, 'Should Siddhartha have gone with Govinda?'
5. Connect this chapter to the river and time: is the link strong or weak so far? What would Hesse need to show next to strengthen it? [DOK 4 · Socratic circle: an inner circle discusses while the outer circle listens and takes notes, then they switch · wait 8 s · ICC-WC-1.5] Look for: A judgment of thematic development across the work.
   Answer guidance: Strong start: the river already seems to have something to tell him ("It seemed to him as if the river had something special to tell him" (By the River, paragraph 49)). Hesse needs to show what the river teaches about time.
6. Is the symbolism in this chapter effective, or does it feel heavy-handed? Evaluate it as a reader would in a review. [DOK 3 · Four Corners: students move to the corner that matches their position and explain why · wait 8 s · ICC-WC-1.5] Look for: An evaluative judgment with criteria and evidence.
   Answer guidance: Effective: the bird links back to the dead songbird of "Sansara" and returns here alive (paragraph 45). Some readers find the bird stated too directly.
7. Compare how "By the River" treats despair and renewal by the river with how another text, film or event you know treats a similar idea. What does Siddhartha see that the other misses? [DOK 4 · Socratic circle: an inner circle discusses while the outer circle listens and takes notes, then they switch · wait 8 s · ICC-WC-1.5] Look for: A cross-text synthesis.
   Answer guidance: A comparison should name a story of hitting bottom and starting over and quote "Was it not due to this death, that he was now like a child" (By the River, paragraph 47); Siddhartha's renewal is quiet and inward.

8. Predict what "The Ferryman" will bring, using two clues from this chapter. After reading, evaluate your prediction. [DOK 3 · Think-Pair-Share: students think alone, discuss with a partner, then share with the class · wait 8 s · ICC-WC-1.5] Look for: A prediction or judgment justified with textual clues.
   Answer guidance: Clues: the river seems to have something to tell him (paragraph 49) and he decides not to leave it (paragraph 49). Prediction: he will stay by the river and learn from it.
9. Design a one-paragraph modern adaptation of this chapter (setting, characters, conflict). What must stay the same for it to still be about despair and renewal by the river? [DOK 4 · Think-Pair-Share: students think alone, discuss with a partner, then share with the class · wait 8 s · ICC-WC-1.5] Look for: A modern setting, characters and conflict that keep the chapter's core idea, with the one element that must not change named.
   Answer guidance: A modern version keeps someone at the end of their rope who is stopped by a sudden memory of something sacred and wakes renewed. What must stay is the turn caused by Om (paragraph 7). Avoid depicting method.
10. What question would you most like to ask Hermann Hesse about this chapter, and what answer do you think the text itself gives? [DOK 4 · Student-generated: students write and pose their own questions · wait 8 s · ICC-WC-1.5] Look for: A student-generated question answered from evidence.
    Answer guidance: Example: 'Why does one word change everything?' The text answers in paragraph 7: Om brings back what all his recent agony had not.

Annotation focus

- Symbolism: look for objects, places or actions that stand for larger ideas (anchor passage in the We do segment)
- Also notice Imagery: sensory details (sight, sound, cold, light) and what mood they create
- Also notice Theme: statements or moments that connect to the book's big ideas

Chapter quiz: item bank (all eleven rigor versions)

1. [mc · recall · DOK 1] Which word completes this sentence from By the River, paragraph 12? "Siddhartha _____ up, then he saw a person sitting opposite to him, an unknown man, a monk in a yellow robe with a shaven head, sitting in the position of pondering."

   A. tore
   B. straightened
   C. summed
   D. overstretched

   Key: B (straightened)
2. [fill · recall · DOK 1] Fill in the blank with the vocabulary word that fits: "In those days, so he remembered, he had _____ of three things to Kamala, had been able to do three noble and undefeatable feats: fasting—waiting—thinking." Word bank: wept, boasted, slept, eaten
   Key: boasted
3. [fill · recall · DOK 1] Complete the quotation from By the River, paragraph 8: "Om! he spoke to himself: Om! and again he knew about Brahman, knew about the _____ of life, knew about all that is divine, which he had forgotten." Word bank: cheapness, dullness, pointlessness, indestructibility
   Key: indestructibility

4. [mc · recall · DOK 1] Who watches over Siddhartha while he sleeps by the river?

   A. Kamaswami, the merchant from the city

   B. The oldest Samana of the forest

   C. Govinda, the Brahmin's son

   D. Kamala, the courtesan

   Key: C (Govinda, the Brahmin's son)

5. [fill · recall · DOK 1] Complete the quotation from By the River, paragraph 1: "Deeply, he had been _____ in Sansara, he had sucked up disgust and death from all sides into his body, like a sponge sucks up water until it is full"

   Key: entangled

6. [mc · recall · DOK 1] Which word completes this sentence from By the River, paragraph 31? "Not eternal is the world of _____"

   A. yesterday

   B. everlasting

   C. appearances

   D. Atman

   Key: C (appearances)

7. [fill · recall · DOK 1] Complete the quotation from By the River, paragraph 14: "I, O sir, am a follower of the exalted Gotama, the Buddha, the Sakyamuni, and have been on a _____ together with several of us on this path, when I saw you lying and sleeping in a place where it is dangerous to sleep." Word bank: raid, spree, binge, pilgrimage

   Key: pilgrimage

8. [fill · recall · DOK 1] Fill in the blank with the vocabulary word that fits: "Wonderfully, soon afterwards, insight came towards me in the form of the great Buddha's teachings, I felt the knowledge of the _____ of the world circling in me like my own blood." Word bank: ugliness, oneness, division, price

   Key: oneness

9. [mc · recall · DOK 1] In the line "But as a young man, I followed the penitents, lived in the forest, suffered of heat and frost, learned to hunger, taught my body to become dead.", what does "penitents" most nearly mean?

   A. people who punish themselves for their sins

   B. a woman paid to be the companion of wealthy men

   C. in Buddhism and Hinduism, release from the cycle of rebirth and suffering

   D. a message informing of danger

   Key: A (people who punish themselves for their sins)

10. [mc · inference · DOK 2] Which of these passages comes earliest in By the River?

    A. "Siddhartha saw that Govinda did not recognise him."

    B. "his dormant spirit suddenly woke up"

    C. "he also saw the river going downhill, always moving on downhill"

    D. "And yet, this path has been very good"

    Key: B ("his dormant spirit suddenly woke up")

11. [short · inference · DOK 2] What can you infer from this line? “And full he was, full of the feeling of been sick of it, full of misery, full of death, there was nothing left in this world which could have attracted him, given him joy, given him comfort.” (By the River, paragraph 1) Answer in two or three sentences with one detail.
    Sample answer: Siddhartha has lost all pleasure in the life he built. The evidence is “And full he was, full of the feeling of been sick of it, full of misery, full of death, there was nothing left in this world which could have attracted him, given him joy, given him comfort.” (By the River, paragraph 1). The repeated “full of” shows how completely misery has filled him, and “nothing left” explains why he cannot go back to the city.

12. [short · analysis · DOK 3] Analyze the word choice in “I had to pass through so much stupidity, through so much vices, through so many errors, through so much disgust and disappointment and woe, just to become a child again and to be able to start over.” (By the River, paragraph 42). Pick two words and explain what they suggest.
    Sample answer: Siddhartha sees his past as a hard road that led somewhere. The evidence is “I had to pass through so much stupidity, through so much vices, through so many errors, through so much disgust and disappointment and woe, just to become a child again and to be able to start over.” (By the River, paragraph 42). The repeated “through so much” makes the years feel long and heavy, and the word “child” at the end turns all that “woe” into a fresh start rather than only a loss.

13. [mc · analysis · DOK 3] Which literary element does this describe in “By the River”? At the river Siddhartha comes close to ending his life (By the River, paras. 2–5, referenced only); the word Om rises from his inner self and stops him, showing who he truly is beneath his despair.
    A. Simile
    B. Characterization
    C. Metaphor
    D. Setting

    Key: B (Characterization)

14. [short · analysis · DOK 3] Analyze how the word choice in this passage from By the River, paragraph 40 shapes its tone: “But he could not feel sad about this, no, he even felt a great urge to laugh, to laugh about himself, to laugh about this strange, foolish world.” Use one more quotation from the chapter.
    Sample answer: The triple “to laugh” turns his loss into comedy, and “strange, foolish world” makes the failure sound light rather than tragic: “But he could not feel sad about this, no, he even felt a great urge to laugh, to laugh about himself, to laugh about this strange, foolish world.” (Hesse, 1922/2015, By the River, para. 40). The turn is prepared when Om stops him: “And in the moment when the sound of Om touched Siddhartha’s ear, his dormant spirit suddenly woke up and realized the foolishness of his actions.” (Hesse, 1922/2015, By the River, para. 6). So the tone moves from despair to cheerful renewal.

15. [short · synthesis · DOK 4] Close reading: how do the diction and syntax of “Now, Siddhartha smiled” (By the River, paragraph 22) shape its meaning? Consider a second, competing reading.
    Sample answer: The sentence is three words long, and “Now” marks a threshold: “Now, Siddhartha smiled” (By the River, paragraph 22). After the despair of the chapter's opening, the bare syntax lets the smile stand alone as the first sign of renewal. A competing reading hears irony, a bitter smile at his own ruin. But the chapter keeps the warmth, as when “kindly he smiled at the river” (By the River, paragraph 41), the river where his despair had brought him. The smile is acceptance of his past, not mockery of it.

16. [fill · recall · DOK 1] Fill in the blank with the word that fits: “there everything smelled of ointments, of spices, of wine, of _____, of sloth” Word bank: Tuesday, excess, arithmetic, yesterday
    Key: excess

17. [fill · recall · DOK 1] Complete the quotation from By the River, paragraph 11: “Never before by sleep, he had been thus refreshed, thus renewed, thus _____!” Word bank: punished, frightened, rejuvenated, impoverished

    Key: rejuvenated

18. [mc · recall · DOK 1] In the line “he had boasted of three things to Kamala”, what does “boasted” most nearly mean?

    A. spoken proudly of

    B. complained about

    C. forgotten

    D. hidden from

    Key: A (spoken proudly of)

19. [mc · recall · DOK 1] Why does Govinda say it is not good to sleep where Siddhartha lay?

    A. The river often floods there

    B. Robbers wait along the road

    C. Snakes and forest animals pass there

    D. It is holy ground for the monks

    Key: C (Snakes and forest animals pass there)

20. [mc · recall · DOK 1] What does Siddhartha decide?

    A. To stay by the water

    B. To return to the city

    C. To go home

    D. To join the monks

    Key: A (To stay by the water)

21. [mc · recall · DOK 1] Which word completes this sentence from By the River, paragraph 38? “for by now he had not eaten for two _____”

    A. hours

    B. days

    C. years

    D. apples

    Key: B (days)

22. [fill · recall · DOK 1] Complete the quotation from By the River, paragraph 31: “I _____ you, my dear Govinda.” Word bank: sneeze, believe, bake, knit

    Key: believe

23. [fill · recall · DOK 1] Complete the quotation from By the River, paragraph 10: “Deep was his sleep and without _____”

    Key: dreams

24. [mc · recall · DOK 1] Which word completes this sentence from By the River, paragraph 16? “May you, sir, always be in good _____.”

    A. health

    B. gravel

    C. plaster

D. sawdust

Key: A (health)

25. [short · inference · DOK 3] What can you infer from this line? “Now, Siddhartha smiled” (By the River, paragraph 22) Answer by connecting it to one earlier chapter: quote a second passage and explain how the two passages together develop the idea.

    Sample answer: After the word Om halts his despair and he sleeps, Siddhartha can smile again. The smile signals renewal and a calm acceptance of his past, the first sign that his old self has been reborn. The evidence is “Now, Siddhartha smiled” (By the River, paragraph 22). It echoes his first awakening: “a smile filled his face and a feeling of awakening from long dreams flowed through him” (Awakening, paragraph 5). Together the passages show the smile marking each rebirth, the second after a far deeper fall than the first.

26. [mc · inference · DOK 2] Which choice best states a central concern of “By the River”?

    A. Hearing the many voices

    B. Restlessness despite privilege

    C. The teacher and the teaching

    D. Despair and a new beginning

    Key: D (Despair and a new beginning)

27. [mc · inference · DOK 2] Which of these passages comes last in By the River?

    A. “Siddhartha was deeply shocked.”

    B. “The monk stopped.”

    C. “Govinda made the gesture of a salutation”

    D. “listened gratefully to a buzzing bee”

    Key: D (“listened gratefully to a buzzing bee”)

28. [short · analysis · DOK 3] Claim: Siddhartha's despair at the river becomes the condition for his rebirth. Explain how this evidence supports the claim: “That he had felt this despair, this deep disgust, and that he had not succumbed to it, that the bird, the joyful source and voice in him was still alive after all, this was why he felt joy, this was why he laughed, this was why his face was smiling brightly under his hair which had turned gray.” (By the River, paragraph 45).

    Sample answer: The evidence supports the claim because his joy comes from having passed through the despair: “That he had felt this despair, this deep disgust, and that he had not succumbed to it, that the bird, the joyful source and voice in him was still alive after all, this was why he felt joy, this was why he laughed, this was why his face was smiling brightly under his hair which had turned gray.” (By the River, paragraph 45). The repeated “this was why” ties his laughter directly to “this despair, this deep disgust,” so the near-suicide is not an accident on the way to renewal but its cause: he can laugh only because he had sunk that low and survived.

29. [short · analysis · DOK 3] Analyze the word choice in “Things are going downhill with you!” (By the River, paragraph 41). Pick two words and explain what they suggest.

    Sample answer: Siddhartha can laugh at his own fall. The evidence is “Things are going downhill with you!” (By the River, paragraph 41). “Going downhill” names his loss of wealth and status, while “with you” shows him talking to himself like a friend, and the exclamation mark makes it sound cheerful rather than bitter. The phrase also links him to the river, which goes downhill too, singing.

30. [short · synthesis · DOK 4] Analyze how the word choice in this passage shows Siddhartha’s new openness: “I was a rich man and am no rich man any more, and what I’ll be tomorrow, I don’t know.” (By the River, paragraph 33) Use one more quotation from the chapter.

Sample answer: Siddhartha has become open to whatever comes. The evidence is "I was a rich man and am no rich man any more, and what I'll be tomorrow, I don't know." (By the River, paragraph 33). The plain words "I don't know" show that he no longer needs a plan or a title, which is a new kind of freedom for him. His calm about losing everything matches how lightly he speaks of his lost riches to Govinda: "They somehow happened to slip away from me." (By the River, paragraph 35).

31. [fill · recall · DOK 1] Complete the quotation from By the River, paragraph 42: "I went and learned the art of love with Kamala, learned trading with Kamaswami, piled up money, _____ money"
    Key: wasted
32. [fill · recall · DOK 1] Fill in the blank with the vocabulary word that fits: "listened _____ to a buzzing bee"
    Word bank: angrily, gratefully, fearfully, sadly
    Key: gratefully
33. [mc · recall · DOK 1] In the line "this Siddhartha, the eccentric, the weird one", what does "eccentric" most nearly mean?
    A. wealthy; rich
    B. cruel; harsh
    C. famous; well known
    D. odd; unusual

    Key: D (odd; unusual)
34. [mc · recall · DOK 1] How does Siddhartha describe the followers of the exalted one when he thanks Govinda?
    A. Proud
    B. Friendly
    C. Strict
    D. Lazy

    Key: B (Friendly)
35. [mc · recall · DOK 1] What does Siddhartha notice about the river as he laughs at himself?
    A. It too runs downhill, happy all the way
    B. It has dried up
    C. It is flooding its banks after heavy rains
    D. It is frozen over

    Key: A (It too runs downhill, happy all the way)
36. [mc · recall · DOK 1] Which word completes this sentence from By the River, paragraph 41? "he also saw the river going downhill, always moving on downhill, and _____ and being happy through it all."
    A. weeping
    B. sulking
    C. complaining
    D. singing

    Key: D (singing)
37. [fill · recall · DOK 1] Fill in the blank with the vocabulary word that fits: "Then, out of _____ areas of his soul, out of past times of his now weary life, a sound stirred up." Word bank: rusty, remote, muddy, wooden
    Key: remote

38. [mc · recall · DOK 1] Which word completes this sentence from By the River, paragraph 36? “Govinda looked at the friend of his youth for a long time, with _____ in his eyes.”

    A. shoes

    B. doubt

    C. salt

    D. fire

    Key: B (doubt)

39. [short · inference · DOK 2] What can you infer from this line? “Things were going downhill with him, and now he was again facing the world void and naked and stupid.” (By the River, paragraph 40) Answer in two or three sentences with one detail.

    Sample answer: Siddhartha has lost everything he once used to define himself. The evidence is “Things were going downhill with him, and now he was again facing the world void and naked and stupid.” (By the River, paragraph 40). The words “void and naked” show that both his riches and his old Samana skills are gone, so he must begin again like a child, and the next lines show that he meets this emptiness with laughter rather than despair.

40. [mc · inference · DOK 2] Why is Siddhartha glad that his riches have slipped away?

    A. He did not like gold anyway

    B. Kamala will now take him back into her garden

    C. He is free to begin again like a child

    D. He can now pay his debts

    Key: C (He is free to begin again like a child)

41. [mc · inference · DOK 2] Which of these moments comes first in By the River?

    A. “Dead was the bird in his heart.”

    B. “Permit me to ask, sir, from where do you know my name?”

    C. “With a smiling face, Siddhartha watched the leaving monk.”

    D. “Thinking was hard on him”

    Key: A (“Dead was the bird in his heart.”)

42. [short · analysis · DOK 3] Claim: Siddhartha's despair at the river becomes the condition for his rebirth. Explain how this evidence supports the claim: “But the new Siddhartha felt a deep love for this rushing water, and decided for himself, not to leave it very soon.” (By the River, paragraph 49)

    Sample answer: The evidence supports the claim because the river that witnessed his despair now holds his love: “But the new Siddhartha felt a deep love for this rushing water, and decided for himself, not to leave it very soon.” (By the River, paragraph 49). Calling himself “the new Siddhartha” shows that the despair of the chapter’s opening (paragraphs 2–5, cited only) has ended in a rebirth, and his choice to stay by the water turns the place of his lowest moment into the place of his new life.

43. [short · analysis · DOK 3] Analyze how the word choice in this passage shows what held Siddhartha back: “Too much knowledge had held him back, too many holy verses, too many sacrificial rules” (By the River, paragraph 48) Use one more quotation from the chapter.

    Sample answer: Siddhartha sees that his learning blocked his path. The evidence is “Too much knowledge had held him back, too many holy verses, too many sacrificial rules” (By the River, paragraph 48). Repeating “too much” and “too many” shows that the problem was excess, so even holy things became a weight on him. The same passage names the cost of that striving: “Full of arrogance, he had been, always the smartest” (By the River, paragraph 48).

44. [short · analysis · DOK 3] Analyze the word choice in "learned to love my stomach, learned to please my senses" (By the River, paragraph 42). Pick two words and explain what they suggest.
    Sample answer: The words "stomach" and "please" make his worldly years sound bodily and small. The evidence is "learned to love my stomach, learned to please my senses" (By the River, paragraph 42). "Stomach" reduces his desires to appetite, and "please" suggests indulging the senses rather than seeking; the repeated "learned" turns these habits into an ironic education, the opposite of the learning he once sought.
45. [short · synthesis · DOK 4] Synthesis: trace how the search for the self develops from Awakening to By the River. Use one quotation from each.
    Sample answer: The search moves from naming the flight to understanding it. In Awakening he says, "I was afraid of myself, I was fleeing from myself" (Awakening, paragraph 4). In By the River he grasps why the flight failed: "Now Siddhartha also got some idea of why he had fought this self in vain as a Brahmin, as a penitent." (By the River, paragraph 48). The self is renewed, not abandoned.
46. [mc · recall · DOK 1] Which word completes this sentence from By the River, paragraph 42? "Wondrous indeed was my life, so he thought, wondrous _____ it has taken."
    A. kettles
    B. detours
    C. ladders
    D. pebbles

    Key: B (detours)
47. [fill · recall · DOK 1] Fill in the blank with the word that fits: "Too much knowledge had held him back, too many holy _____, too many sacrificial rules" Word bank: spoons, verses, ladders, pebbles
    Key: verses
48. [mc · recall · DOK 1] Ironically, how does Govinda first address his oldest friend by the river?
    A. As his old friend from boyhood
    B. As his old teacher
    C. As a thief on the road
    D. As a stranger, calling him sir

    Key: D (As a stranger, calling him sir)
49. [fill · recall · DOK 1] Fill in the blank with the word that fits: "since all these most easily _____ things have slipped from me again" Word bank: lasting, sacred, perishing, heavy
    Key: perishing
50. [mc · recall · DOK 1] Which word completes this sentence from By the River, paragraph 43? "Wonderfully, he felt joy rolling like _____ in his chest."
    A. stones
    B. waves
    C. drums
    D. clouds

    Key: B (waves)
51. [mc · recall · DOK 1] What does Siddhartha call his three old feats of fasting, waiting and thinking?
    A. His heavy chains
    B. His solid staff

C. His secret treasure

D. His old disease

Key: B (His solid staff)

52. [fill · recall · DOK 1] Fill in the blank with the word that fits: "The wheel of physical _____ is turning quickly, Govinda." Word bank: debts, prayers, manifestations, horses

Key: manifestations

53. [mc · recall · DOK 1] Which word completes this sentence from By the River, paragraph 24? "Now, I'm recognising you, and don't _____ any more how I couldn't recognise you right away."

A. sing

B. sell

C. comprehend

D. wash

Key: C (comprehend)

54. [mc · inference · DOK 2] Which of these lines does Siddhartha say or think last in By the River?

A. "Good for me, to know this!"

B. "Farewell, Govinda"

C. "I'm on a pilgrimage."

D. "How wondrous is this!"

Key: A ("Good for me, to know this!")

55. [mc · inference · DOK 2] What does Siddhartha now think kept him from defeating his self as a Brahmin?

A. Too little study of the Vedas and the Upanishads

B. Too few good teachers

C. Too much learning and striving

D. Too much time with Govinda

Key: C (Too much learning and striving)

56. [short · inference · DOK 2] What can you infer from this line? "You've been the guard of my sleep, again I thank you for this, though I wouldn't have required any guard." (By the River, paragraph 25) Answer in two or three sentences with one detail.

Sample answer: Siddhartha is grateful to Govinda but feels no need for protection. The evidence is "You've been the guard of my sleep, again I thank you for this, though I wouldn't have required any guard." (By the River, paragraph 25). The turn on "though" shows his new calm confidence, even as he thanks his old friend warmly.

57. [short · analysis · DOK 3] Analyze the word choice in "his small, frightened, and proud self" (By the River, paragraph 47). Pick two words and explain what they suggest.

Sample answer: Siddhartha now sees his old self as petty. The evidence is "his small, frightened, and proud self" (By the River, paragraph 47). "Small" shrinks the self he once fought so hard, and "frightened" sits oddly beside "proud," showing that his pride was a cover for fear. The words explain why its death feels like freedom.

58. [short · analysis · DOK 3] Analyze how the word choice in this passage shows Siddhartha's feeling for Govinda: "he loved him still, this faithful man, this fearful man" (By the River, paragraph 37) Use one more quotation from the chapter.

Sample answer: Siddhartha loves Govinda while seeing his weakness. The evidence is "he loved him still, this faithful man, this fearful man" (By the River, paragraph 37). Pairing "faithful" with "fearful" shows both his loyalty and his timid need for rules, and "still" shows that the love has lasted through all their years apart. Govinda's parting look shows the other side of their bond: "Govinda looked at the friend of his youth for a long time, with doubt in his eyes." (By the River, paragraph 36).

59. [short · synthesis · DOK 4] Synthesis: trace how the image of the dead bird develops from Sansara to By the River. Use one quotation from each.

    Sample answer: The dead bird moves from a sign of loss to a sign of release. In Sansara, Siddhartha dreams that "there the small bird was dead and lay stiff on the ground" (Sansara, paragraph 10). In By the River he realizes: "No, something else from within him had died" (By the River, paragraph 47). The first passage fills him with horror; the second shows that what died was his old self, so the same image now means freedom.

60. [short · synthesis · DOK 4] Close reading: how do the diction and syntax of "Was it not due to this death, that he was now like a child, so full of trust, so without fear, so full of joy?" (By the River, paragraph 47) shape its meaning? Consider a second, competing reading.

    Sample answer: The question form and the triple list of trust, fearlessness and joy turn a death into a gift: "Was it not due to this death, that he was now like a child, so full of trust, so without fear, so full of joy?" (By the River, paragraph 47). The sentence asks rather than states, so his rebirth is still something he is discovering. A competing reading takes "this death" as loss, the end of the man he was. But the chapter names what died as the false self only: "No, something else from within him had died, something which already for a long time had yearned to die." (By the River, paragraph 47). The rising list of trust, fearlessness and joy shows that the death freed him rather than destroyed him.

61. [fill · recall · DOK 1 · Dual Credit (Indiana College Core): ICC-WC-1.5] Complete the quotation from By the River, paragraph 6: "the old word which is the beginning and the end of all _____ of the Brahmins, the holy Om"

    Word bank: debts, wars, prayers, feasts

    Key: prayers

62. [mc · recall · DOK 1 · Dual Credit (Indiana College Core): ICC-WC-1.5] What does Siddhartha thank the Samana for when he wakes?

    A. For a meal of rice
    B. For watching out over his sleep
    C. For ferrying him across
    D. For a new robe

    Key: B (For watching out over his sleep)

63. [mc · recall · DOK 1 · Dual Credit (Indiana College Core): ICC-WC-1.5] In the line "I had to spend many years losing my spirit, to unlearn thinking again, to forget the oneness.", what does "unlearn" most nearly mean?

    A. to cut apart in order to examine closely
    B. to reject; to throw away
    C. to return (a feeling)
    D. to put out of mind what one once knew

    Key: D (to put out of mind what one once knew)

64. [fill · recall · DOK 1 · Dual Credit (Indiana College Core): ICC-WC-1.5] Fill in the blank with the word that fits: "to get a _____ of everything for oneself, which one needs to know." Word bank: taste, gravel, plaster, sawdust

    Key: taste

65. [mc · recall · DOK 1 · Dual Credit (Indiana College Core): ICC-WC-1.5] Which word completes this sentence from By the River, paragraph 41? "He liked this well, kindly he _____ at the river."

    A. shouted
    B. smiled

C. spat

D. stared

Key: B (smiled)

66. [mc · recall · DOK 1 · Dual Credit (Indiana College Core): ICC-WC-1.5] Which word completes this sentence from By the River, paragraph 29? “Right so, my dear, you have observed well, your keen _____ see everything.”

A. ears

B. friends

C. eyes

D. servants

Key: C (eyes)

67. [fill · recall · DOK 1 · Dual Credit (Indiana College Core): ICC-WC-1.5] Fill in the blank with the word that fits: “he loved him still, this faithful man, this _____ man” Word bank: wealthy, cruel, fearful, wooden

Key: fearful

68. [mc · recall · DOK 1 · Dual Credit (Indiana College Core): ICC-WC-1.5] In the line “Never before by sleep, he had been thus refreshed, thus renewed, thus rejuvenated!”, what does “rejuvenated” most nearly mean?

A. made young and fresh again

B. made old and weary

C. made rich

D. made angry

Key: A (made young and fresh again)

69. [mc · inference · DOK 2 · Dual Credit (Indiana College Core): ICC-WC-1.5] Which of these passages about Govinda comes earliest in By the River?

A. “Permit me to ask, sir, from where do you know my name?”

B. “Govinda looked at the friend of his youth for a long time”

C. “Govinda made the gesture of a salutation”

D. “Now, I’m recognising you”

Key: C (“Govinda made the gesture of a salutation”)

70. [short · inference · DOK 2 · Dual Credit (Indiana College Core): ICC-WC-1.5] What can you infer from this line? “Thinking was hard on him, he did not really feel like it, but he forced himself.” (By the River, paragraph 39) Answer in two or three sentences with one detail.

Sample answer: Siddhartha’s old mental strength has weakened. The evidence is “Thinking was hard on him, he did not really feel like it, but he forced himself.” (By the River, paragraph 39). Thinking was once one of his proudest skills, so the word “forced” shows how much his years in the city have worn him down.

71. [short · analysis · DOK 3 · Dual Credit (Indiana College Core): ICC-WC-1.5] Analyze the word choice in “How clean and beautiful is the air here, how good to breathe!” (By the River, paragraph 44). Pick two words and explain what they suggest.

Sample answer: Siddhartha feels his new life as clean and light. The evidence is “How clean and beautiful is the air here, how good to breathe!” (By the River, paragraph 44). “Clean” sets the forest air against the dirty city he has left, and “breathe” shows he can finally live freely again. The words make his escape feel like a return to health.

72. [mc · analysis · DOK 3 · Dual Credit (Indiana College Core): ICC-WC-1.5] Which literary element does this describe in "By the River"? Siddhartha says the world of forms is a wheel "turning quickly."

    A. Setting

    B. Metaphor

    C. Onomatopoeia

    D. Dialogue

    Key: B (Metaphor)

73. [short · synthesis · DOK 4 · Dual Credit (Indiana College Core): ICC-WC-1.5] Analyze how the word choice in this passage shows Siddhartha's new curiosity: "listened curiously to his stomach, which was rumbling with hunger" (By the River, paragraph 45) Use one more quotation from the chapter.

    Sample answer: Siddhartha meets even his hunger with interest. The evidence is "listened curiously to his stomach, which was rumbling with hunger" (By the River, paragraph 45). "Curiously" turns a pain into something worth attending to, which shows how fresh and open he has become after his sleep. The same delight shapes how he greets the air: "How clean and beautiful is the air here, how good to breathe!" (By the River, paragraph 44).

74. [short · synthesis · DOK 4 · Dual Credit (Indiana College Core): ICC-WC-1.5] Synthesis: trace how the idea of starting life again as a child develops from Awakening to By the River. Use one quotation from each.

    Sample answer: Siddhartha twice starts life again. In Awakening he feels "like a newborn baby, he had to start his life anew" (Awakening, paragraph 10). In By the River he says: "now I'm starting again at the beginning and as a child!" (By the River, paragraph 40). The first rebirth comes in youth, full of pride; the second comes with gray hair and nothing left, which makes it humbler and deeper.

75. [short · synthesis · DOK 4 · Dual Credit (Indiana College Core): ICC-WC-1.5] Close reading: how do the diction and syntax of "The wheel of physical manifestations is turning quickly, Govinda." (By the River, paragraph 35) shape its meaning? Consider a second, competing reading.

    Sample answer: The image turns Siddhartha's losses into a law of nature: "The wheel of physical manifestations is turning quickly, Govinda." (By the River, paragraph 35). The "wheel" recalls the cycle of Sansara, and "turning quickly" makes change the only constant. A competing reading hears a rich man excusing his fall with big words. Yet his calm and his own words about non-eternal things suggest he has truly learned it.

76. [mc · recall · DOK 1] Still in his rich clothes, what does Siddhartha ironically call himself when Govinda asks where he is going?

    A. A merchant

    B. A monk

    C. A Brahmin

    D. A pilgrim

    Key: D (A pilgrim)

77. [mc · recall · DOK 1] Which word completes this sentence from By the River, paragraph 49? "In this river, Siddhartha had intended to drown himself, in it the old, tired, _____ Siddhartha had drowned today."

    A. desperate

    B. rusty

    C. muddy

    D. wooden

    Key: A (desperate)

78. [fill · recall · DOK 1] Fill in the blank with the word that fits: "that my hair is already half _____, that my strength is fading" Word bank: golden, shaved, gray, braided

    Key: gray

79. [mc · inference · DOK 2] In By the River, what does Siddhartha say he hated about the world he has left?

    A. The world of the rich, of fine food and of gamblers

    B. The quiet, hungry, fasting life of the forest Samanas

    C. The holy songs sung in his father's house

    D. The long, dusty road back to the river

    Key: A (The world of the rich, of fine food and of gamblers)

80. [mc · recall · DOK 1] Which word completes this sentence from By the River, paragraph 42? "As a boy, I had only to do with gods and _____."

    A. merchants

    B. soldiers

    C. offerings

    D. games

    Key: C (offerings)

81. [mc · inference · DOK 2] Whom does Govinda tell the waking stranger he follows?

    A. The oldest Samana of the forest

    B. The exalted Gotama, the Buddha

    C. The Brahmin who taught him the Vedas

    D. The ferryman who once carried him

    Key: B (The exalted Gotama, the Buddha)

82. [fill · recall · DOK 1] Fill in the blank with the word that fits: "he felt as if ten _____ had passed, he heard the water quietly flowing" Word bank: spoons, years, rivers, kings

    Key: years

83. [mc · recall · DOK 1] Which word completes this sentence from By the River, paragraph 44? "How did I hate myself, have deprived, poisoned, tortured myself, have made myself old and _____!"

    A. wooden

    B. evil

    C. salty

    D. purple

    Key: B (evil)

84. [fill · recall · DOK 1] Complete the quotation from By the River, paragraph 9: "placed his head on the root of the tree and fell into a deep _____" Word bank: pit, cloud, sleep, rage

    Key: sleep

85. [mc · inference · DOK 2] What does this passage most clearly show? "I went and learned the art of love with Kamala, learned trading with Kamaswami, piled up money, wasted money" (By the River, paragraph 42)

    A. His pride in all he gained in the city.

    B. His wish to return to Kamala's garden.

    C. His plan to become a merchant again.

D. His summary of the detour.

Key: D (His summary of the detour.)

86. [short · inference · DOK 4] What can you infer from this line? “Therefore, he had to go out into the world, lose himself to lust and power, to woman and money, had to become a merchant, a dice-gambler, a drinker, and a greedy person, until the priest and Samana in him was dead.” (By the River, paragraph 48) Build a short argument from it: trace the idea across at least three chapters, this one and earlier ones, weigh one competing reading, and defend your position with evidence from each.

Sample answer: Siddhartha now sees his worldly years as a necessary stage. The evidence is “Therefore, he had to go out into the world, lose himself to lust and power, to woman and money, had to become a merchant, a dice-gambler, a drinker, and a greedy person, until the priest and Samana in him was dead.” (By the River, paragraph 48). The word “Therefore” turns the list of merchant, gambler and drinker into a cause: he had to live it all until the Samana in him died. The capture was building in Sansara: “Property, possessions, and riches also had finally captured him” (Sansara, paragraph 6). It reverses his goal with the Samanas, which was “to become empty, empty of thirst, empty of wishing” (With the Samanas, paragraph 3). A competing reading says “had to” is only an excuse for wasted years. But the Samana path had already failed to kill the self, so across With the Samanas, Sansara and By the River the fall into the world is the one road left to him, and the chapter treats it as the price of his awakening.

87. [mc · inference · DOK 2] Which of these moments comes last in By the River?

A. “Siddhartha straightened up, then he saw a person sitting opposite to him”

B. “For a long time, he pondered his transformation”

C. “Siddhartha thought about his situation.”

D. “Siddhartha was deeply shocked.”

Key: B (“For a long time, he pondered his transformation”)

88. [mc · analysis · DOK 3] Which literary element does this describe in “By the River”? The river running downhill and singing mirrors Siddhartha’s own cheerful fall from wealth.

A. Dialogue

B. Symbolism

C. Onomatopoeia

D. Hyperbole

Key: B (Symbolism)

89. [short · synthesis · DOK 4] Close reading: how do the diction and syntax of “Dead was the singing bird, he had dreamt of. Dead was the bird in his heart.” (By the River, paragraph 1) shape its meaning? Consider a second, competing reading.

Sample answer: The repeated opening word makes the loss final: “Dead was the singing bird, he had dreamt of. Dead was the bird in his heart.” (By the River, paragraph 1). Placing “Dead” first in both sentences stresses the fact before the thing, and the move from the dream bird to “the bird in his heart” turns a dream into a truth about himself. A competing reading sees the double “Dead” as a final verdict: his inner life is over and nothing remains but despair. Yet later in the same chapter he says “the bird in my chest has not died” (By the River, paragraph 42), so the inverted, mournful syntax marks the death of an old self that the chapter goes on to undo.

90. [short · synthesis · DOK 4] Synthesis: trace how Siddhartha’s boasted skills develop from Kamala to By the River. Use one quotation from each.

Sample answer: Siddhartha’s three skills move from a boast to a memory. In Kamala he tells her: “I can think. I can wait. I can fast.” (Kamala, paragraph 42). In By the River he remembers them as “fasting—waiting—thinking” (By the River, paragraph 38) and finds that they are lost. The first passage shows confidence; the second shows that the city took his strength, so he must begin again with nothing.

91. [mc · recall · DOK 1] What does Siddhartha say he knew long ago but has only now experienced?

    A. That lust and riches are not good things

    B. That Govinda would find him again

    C. That the river can speak

    D. That hunger can be borne for weeks

    Key: A (That lust and riches are not good things)

92. [fill · recall · DOK 1] Complete the quotation from By the River, paragraph 40: "now I'm starting again at the beginning and as a _____!"

    Key: child

93. [fill · recall · DOK 1] Fill in the blank with the word that fits: "always the smartest, always working the most, always one step _____ of all others" Word bank: behind, short, ahead, clear

    Key: ahead

94. [mc · recall · DOK 1] In By the River, what stops Siddhartha at the moment of his deepest despair?

    A. The sacred word Om, which wakes his spirit

    B. A letter from Kamala

    C. A sermon by Gotama

    D. A warning from the ferryman not to give up

    Key: A (The sacred word Om, which wakes his spirit)

95. [mc · recall · DOK 1] In By the River, what does the bird singing in Siddhartha's chest symbolize?

    A. His wealth and pleasures in the city

    B. His inner voice and joy, still alive

    C. Kamala's songbird set free

    D. A warning that his old life will soon end

    Key: B (His inner voice and joy, still alive)

96. [mc · recall · DOK 1] How does Siddhartha feel on the day of his awakening by the river?

    A. Old and worn out

    B. Young, new and full of joy

    C. Afraid of what Govinda will think

    D. Ashamed and ready to return to the city

    Key: B (Young, new and full of joy)

97. [mc · recall · DOK 1] Which word completes this sentence from By the River, paragraph 9? "But this was only a moment, _____."

    A. year

    B. flash

    C. dream

    D. song

    Key: B (flash)

98. [fill · recall · DOK 1] Fill in the blank with the word that fits: "that he was full of joyful _____ for everything he saw" Word bank: fear, scorn, love, stone

    Key: love

99. [mc · inference · DOK 2] What does the word Om reawaken in Siddhartha?

    A. His wish to return to his father and the Brahmins

    B. His hunger for money

    C. His fear of Kamaswami

    D. His sense of the divine and of life's endurance

    Key: D (His sense of the divine and of life's endurance)

100. [mc · inference · DOK 2] Which of these passages about the river comes last in By the River?

    A. "kindly he smiled at the river"

    B. "Cheerfully, he looked into the rushing river"

    C. "It seemed to him as if the river had something special to tell him"

    D. "decided for himself, not to leave it very soon"

    Key: D ("decided for himself, not to leave it very soon")

101. [short · analysis · DOK 3] Analyze the word choice in "Govinda looked at the friend of his youth for a long time, with doubt in his eyes." (By the River, paragraph 36). Pick two words and explain what they suggest.

    Sample answer: Govinda cannot trust what he sees in his old friend. The evidence is "Govinda looked at the friend of his youth for a long time, with doubt in his eyes." (By the River, paragraph 36). "Youth" recalls their close past, while "doubt" shows how far apart they have grown, so the long look holds both love and distrust.

102. [short · synthesis · DOK 4] Synthesis: trace how the search for the self develops from Awakening to By the River. Use one quotation from each. Address one competing reading and answer it.

    Sample answer: The search moves from a painful birth of the self to knowledge felt in the body. In Awakening his new self is born through struggle: "This had been the last tremor of the awakening, the last struggle of this birth." (Awakening, paragraph 12). In By the River he finally owns what he learned: "And now I know it, don't just know it in my memory, but in my eyes, in my heart, in my stomach." (By the River, paragraph 46). The first passage frames the self as something won by effort; the second shows knowledge that has to be lived, "in my heart, in my stomach." A competing reading holds that By the River ends the search by destroying the self. But what died was only the false self: "No, something else from within him had died, something which already for a long time had yearned to die." (By the River, paragraph 47). The self is renewed, not abandoned.

103. [short · synthesis · DOK 4] Analyze how the word choice in this passage shows how Siddhartha sees his past identities: "Where is Siddhartha the Brahmin? Where is Siddhartha the Samana? Where is Siddhartha the rich man?" (By the River, paragraph 35) Use one more quotation from the chapter.

    Sample answer: Siddhartha sees his past selves as roles that have passed away. The evidence is "Where is Siddhartha the Brahmin? Where is Siddhartha the Samana? Where is Siddhartha the rich man?" (By the River, paragraph 35). The repeated "Where is" lists each identity and finds it gone, showing that none of them was his lasting self. He says the same plainly to Govinda: "I was a rich man and am no rich man any more" (By the River, paragraph 33).

104. [short · synthesis · DOK 4] Close reading: how do the diction and syntax of "I'm going nowhere. I'm just travelling. I'm on a pilgrimage." (By the River, paragraph 27) shape its meaning? Consider a second, competing reading.

    Sample answer: Three short sentences give Siddhartha's new state a calm rhythm: "I'm going nowhere. I'm just travelling. I'm on a pilgrimage." (By the River, paragraph 27). He echoes Govinda's own words, "going nowhere," then lifts them to "pilgrimage," so aimless travel becomes a sacred journey. A competing reading hears irony or even a lie, since he wears a rich man's clothes. Yet the chapter shows that his inner journey has truly begun.

105. [short · synthesis · DOK 4] Close reading: how do the diction and syntax of "I have known it for a long time, but I have experienced only now." (By the River, paragraph 46) shape its meaning? Consider a second, competing reading.

    Sample answer: The sentence sets two kinds of knowing against each other: "I have known it for a long time, but I have experienced only now." (By the River, paragraph 46). The turn on "but" separates knowledge from experience, and "only now" makes experience the real teacher. A competing reading says he wasted years to learn what he already knew. Yet the novel insists that wisdom cannot be taught, so the detour was needed.

106. [mc · recall · DOK 1] Ironically, how does Govinda take leave of his oldest friend at last?

    A. With a warm embrace
    B. Without a single word
    C. With a blessing in Gotama's name, then silence
    D. With the greeting used for a gentleman

    Key: D (With the greeting used for a gentleman)

107. [fill · recall · DOK 1] Fill in the blank with the word that fits: "Let it go as it _____, I want to take it." Word bank: sneezes, likes, bakes, knits

    Key: likes

108. [fill · recall · DOK 1] Fill in the blank with the word that fits: "He would also grow old, he would also eventually have to die, mortal was Siddhartha, mortal was every physical _____." Word bank: form, coin, song, road

    Key: form

109. [mc · recall · DOK 1] In paragraph 44, Siddhartha sees himself "standing like a child under the sky." What does the child image stand for?

    A. A fresh start, free of his old life
    B. A wish to return home to his father and mother
    C. Fear of the dark forest
    D. Shame at his poverty

    Key: A (A fresh start, free of his old life)

110. [mc · recall · DOK 1] Which word completes this sentence from By the River, paragraph 44? "How did I hate myself for staying in this _____ world for so long!"

    A. rusty
    B. muddy
    C. terrible
    D. wooden

    Key: C (terrible)

111. [fill · recall · DOK 1] Complete the quotation from By the River, paragraph 7: "Siddhartha was deeply _____. So this was how things were with him, so doomed was he" Word bank: amused, bored, shocked, pleased

    Key: shocked

112. [fill · recall · DOK 1] Complete the quotation from By the River, paragraph 38: “The sleep had strengthened him much, but hunger gave him much _____” Word bank: pain, silk, music, gold

Key: pain

113. [mc · recall · DOK 1] What does Govinda say monks do except in the rainy season?

A. Stay in the grove

B. Work in the fields of the village

C. Travel from place to place

D. Fast in the forest

Key: C (Travel from place to place)

114. [mc · inference · DOK 2] Which of these passages about Siddhartha’s past comes first in By the River?

A. “from the school of the Brahmins, and from the offerings”

B. “Where is Siddhartha the Brahmin?”

C. “As a boy, I had only to do with gods and offerings.”

D. “Too much knowledge had held him back”

Key: A (“from the school of the Brahmins, and from the offerings”)

115. [mc · inference · DOK 2] What does this passage most clearly show? “Now, Siddhartha smiled” (By the River, paragraph 22)

A. His shame at having slept by the river.

B. His mockery of Govinda's yellow robe.

C. The turn after Om; his first smile since the city.

D. His plan to go back to Kamala's garden in the city.

Key: C (The turn after Om; his first smile since the city.)

116. [mc · analysis · DOK 3] Which literary element does this describe in “By the River”? Govinda, the faithful friend, fails to recognize Siddhartha in a rich man’s clothes.

A. Onomatopoeia

B. Irony

C. Setting

D. Alliteration

Key: B (Irony)

117. [short · analysis · DOK 4] Claim: Siddhartha's despair at the river becomes the condition for his rebirth. Explain how this evidence supports the claim: “Deeply, he had been entangled in Sansara, he had sucked up disgust and death from all sides into his body, like a sponge sucks up water until it is full” (By the River, paragraph 1). Build a short argument from it: trace the idea across at least three chapters, this one and earlier ones, weigh one competing reading, and defend your position with evidence from each.

Sample answer: The evidence supports the claim: “Deeply, he had been entangled in Sansara, he had sucked up disgust and death from all sides into his body, like a sponge sucks up water until it is full” (By the River, paragraph 1). Only when he is full does he break, and after the Om and his sleep, “Now, Siddhartha smiled” (By the River, paragraph 22). The saturation began in Sansara, where “Property, possessions, and riches also had finally captured him” (Sansara, paragraph 6), and the pattern of breaking down to begin again goes back to Awakening, where out of “a cold and despair, Siddhartha emerged, more a self than before” (Awakening, paragraph 12). A competing reading says the Om, not the despair, causes the rebirth. But the Om reaches him only at the edge of despair, so despair is its condition, though not its cause.

118. [short · analysis · DOK 4] Analyze the word choice in "I went and learned the art of love with Kamala, learned trading with Kamaswami, piled up money, wasted money" (By the River, paragraph 42). Build a short argument from it: trace the idea across at least three chapters, this one and earlier ones, weigh one competing reading, and defend your position with evidence from each.
Sample answer: Siddhartha sums up his years in the city as both a schooling and a loss. The evidence is "I went and learned the art of love with Kamala, learned trading with Kamaswami, piled up money, wasted money" (By the River, paragraph 42). The verbs "learned" and "wasted" frame his worldly years as both education and loss. The flat, repeated list makes the whole detour sound like a ledger he can now close. The idea runs back to Kamala, where he asks her "to be my friend and teacher, for I know nothing yet of that art which you have mastered in the highest degree" (Kamala, paragraph 29), and through With the Childlike People, where "with his heart, with the source of his being, he was not with them" (With the Childlike People, paragraph 39). A competing reading calls the detour pure waste; but "learned" recurs in all three, so the worldly years were a lesson he had to live, not a loss alone.

119. [short · synthesis · DOK 4] Analyze how the word choice in this passage shows the river's new meaning for Siddhartha: "It seemed to him as if the river had something special to tell him" (By the River, paragraph 49) Use one more quotation from the chapter.
Sample answer: The river has become a teacher waiting for Siddhartha. The evidence is "It seemed to him as if the river had something special to tell him" (By the River, paragraph 49). The words "something special to tell him" give the river a voice, which hints that his next lessons will come from it. The river was already shown as a model of cheerful change: "he also saw the river going downhill, always moving on downhill, and singing and being happy through it all" (By the River, paragraph 41).

120. [short · synthesis · DOK 4] Synthesis: trace how Siddhartha's feelings for Govinda develop from Awakening to By the River. Use one quotation from each. Address one competing reading and answer it.
Sample answer: Siddhartha's feelings for Govinda move from envy to love. In Awakening he sees that "Govinda had become a monk, and a thousand monks were his brothers" (Awakening, paragraph 11). In By the River "he loved him still, this faithful man, this fearful man" (By the River, paragraph 37). A competing reading says he now looks down on Govinda as fearful. Yet the love comes first, so his judgment is gentle, not proud.

121. [fill · recall · DOK 1] Complete the quotation from By the River, paragraph 28: "But, forgive me, O Siddhartha, you do not look like a _____." Word bank: pilgrim, candle, mountain, lantern
Key: pilgrim

122. [fill · recall · DOK 1] Fill in the blank with the word that fits: "_____, he had been sitting here for a long time and been waiting for him to wake up, though he did not know him." Word bank: tastily, apparently, greasily, juicily
Key: apparently

123. [mc · recall · DOK 1] In paragraph 14, what does the monk admit happened while guarding the sleeping Siddhartha?

A. The monk who wanted to guard his sleep had fallen asleep
B. A thief stole the monk's begging bowl
C. A tiger walked past the two of them
D. Other monks called the monk away to the grove

Key: A (The monk who wanted to guard his sleep had fallen asleep)

124. [mc · recall · DOK 1] Which bird, a symbol of his inner voice, does Siddhartha recall as he walks away from the city?

    A. An eagle over the mountains

    B. The dead singing bird of his dream

    C. A crow in the trees of Kamaswami's garden

    D. A parrot in the market

    Key: B (The dead singing bird of his dream)

125. [fill · recall · DOK 1] Fill in the blank with the word that fits: "It seemed to him as if the river had something special to _____ him" Word bank: cost, owe, tell, lend

    Key: tell

126. [mc · recall · DOK 1] Which word completes this sentence from By the River, paragraph 1? "that there was no going _____ for him"

    A. around

    B. back

    C. upward

    D. sideways

    Key: B (back)

127. [fill · recall · DOK 1] Fill in the blank with the word that fits: "then he saw a person sitting opposite to him, an unknown man, a monk in a yellow _____" Word bank: boat, river, robe, cart

    Key: robe

128. [mc · inference · DOK 2] What does Siddhartha feel, instead of sadness, at having to begin again as an old man?

    A. A wish to return to Kamala at once

    B. A fear of dying alone in the forest

    C. A great urge to laugh at himself

    D. Anger at Kamaswami and the city

    Key: C (A great urge to laugh at himself)

129. [mc · inference · DOK 2] What does Siddhartha mean when he says he knows the truth about riches in his stomach?

    A. He has eaten too much rich food

    B. He is hungry and wants money for food

    C. He has learned it by living it, not by memory

    D. He has forgotten everything he was ever taught by teachers

    Key: C (He has learned it by living it, not by memory)

130. [short · inference · DOK 4] What can you infer from this line? "Never before by sleep, he had been thus refreshed, thus renewed, thus rejuvenated!" (By the River, paragraph 11) Answer in two or three sentences with one detail. Trace the idea through three chapters, with a quotation from each, and answer one competing reading.

    Sample answer: Siddhartha wakes from his sleep as if reborn. The evidence is "Never before by sleep, he had been thus refreshed, thus renewed, thus rejuvenated!" (By the River, paragraph 11). In Awakening he had also felt new: "I have indeed awakened and have not been born before this very day." (Awakening, paragraph 8). In Sansara something had to end first: "Shivers ran over his body, inside of him, so he felt, something had died." (Sansara, paragraph 13). A competing reading calls the sleep mere rest after exhaustion. Yet across the three chapters death and rebirth follow each other, so this sleep marks a true new beginning.

131. [mc · inference · DOK 2] What does this passage most clearly show? "Non-eternal things change quickly, Govinda, you know it." (By the River, paragraph 35)

A. He plans to regain his lost riches.

B. He is ashamed to admit his poverty.

C. He blames Govinda and the monks for all of his losses.

D. He sees change as the nature of all things.

Key: D (He sees change as the nature of all things.)

132. [mc · inference · DOK 2] Which of these passages about joy comes last in By the River?

A. "It also gives me joy to see you again."

B. "my joy is great to see you again"

C. "Wonderfully, he felt joy rolling like waves in his chest."

D. "joyful and curious"

Key: C ("Wonderfully, he felt joy rolling like waves in his chest.")

133. [short · analysis · DOK 4] Analyze how the word choice in this passage from By the River, paragraph 42 shapes its tone: "And yet, this path has been very good; and yet, the bird in my chest has not died." Build a short argument from it: trace the idea across at least three chapters, this one and earlier ones, weigh one competing reading, and defend your position with evidence from each.

Sample answer: The repeated "and yet" turns a confession of failure into acceptance: "And yet, this path has been very good; and yet, the bird in my chest has not died." (By the River, paragraph 42). The turn is prepared when Om stops him: "And in the moment when the sound of Om touched Siddhartha's ear, his dormant spirit suddenly woke up and realized the foolishness of his actions." (By the River, paragraph 6). The living bird answers the dead songbird of Sansara, "Kamala owned a small, rare singing bird in a golden cage. Of this bird he dreamt" (Sansara, paragraph 10), and the turn repeats Awakening, where out of "a cold and despair, Siddhartha emerged, more a self than before" (Awakening, paragraph 12). A competing reading hears self-justification, a man excusing wasted years. But the tone rests on what survived, not on what he did, so it moves from despair to grateful renewal.

134. [short · synthesis · DOK 4] Close reading: how do the diction and syntax of "Oh how good is it to have fled, to have become free!" (By the River, paragraph 44) shape its meaning? Consider a second, competing reading.

Sample answer: The exclamation turns flight into liberation: "Oh how good is it to have fled, to have become free!" (By the River, paragraph 44). The parallel infinitives "to have fled" and "to have become free" join running away and gaining freedom, and the opening "Oh" makes it a cry of joy. A competing reading calls it an escape from responsibility. Yet the chapter treats the flight as necessary, since his old life was killing his soul.

135. [short · synthesis · DOK 4] Synthesis: trace how Siddhartha's struggle with his self develops from Awakening to By the River. Use one quotation from each. Address one competing reading and answer it.

Sample answer: Siddhartha's struggle with the self moves from isolation to release. In Awakening he sees that he belongs nowhere: "There was no nobleman who did not belong to the noblemen, no worker that did not belong to the workers" (Awakening, paragraph 11). In By the River he names the self that kept him apart: "Was this not his self, his small, frightened, and proud self, he had wrestled with for so many years" (By the River, paragraph 47). The loneliness of Awakening was the work of that "small, frightened, and proud self." A competing reading says the self was not defeated but only worn out by pleasure. Yet the chapter frames its death as the goal he sought as a penitent, reached at last by another road.

Rigor version	Items (in order)	Mix
HS Sophomore	1, 2, 3, 4, 5, 6, 7, 8, 9, 10, 11, 12, 13, 14, 15	recall 9, inference 2, analysis 3, synthesis 1
HS Junior	16, 17, 18, 19, 20, 21, 22, 23, 24, 25, 26, 27, 28, 29, 30	recall 9, inference 3, analysis 2, synthesis 1
HS Senior	31, 32, 33, 34, 35, 36, 37, 38, 39, 40, 41, 42, 43, 44, 45	recall 8, inference 3, analysis 3, synthesis 1
AP	46, 47, 48, 49, 50, 51, 52, 53, 54, 55, 56, 57, 58, 59, 60	recall 8, inference 3, analysis 2, synthesis 2
College Freshman	61, 62, 63, 64, 65, 66, 67, 68, 69, 70, 71, 72, 73, 74, 75	recall 8, inference 2, analysis 2, synthesis 3
College Sophomore	76, 77, 78, 79, 80, 81, 82, 83, 84, 85, 86, 87, 88, 89, 90	recall 7, inference 5, analysis 1, synthesis 2
College Junior	91, 92, 93, 94, 95, 96, 97, 98, 99, 100, 101, 102, 103, 104, 105	recall 8, inference 2, analysis 1, synthesis 4
College Senior	106, 107, 108, 109, 110, 111, 112, 113, 114, 115, 116, 117, 118, 119, 120	recall 8, inference 2, analysis 3, synthesis 2
Graduate / PhD	121, 122, 123, 124, 125, 126, 127, 128, 129, 130, 131, 132, 133, 134, 135	recall 7, inference 5, analysis 1, synthesis 2

Writing prompts (eleven rigor levels)

HS Sophomore (450 words; Dual Credit (Indiana College Core): ICC-WC-1.1, ICC-WC-1.3, ICC-WC-1.4, ICC-WC-1.5): Analyze how By the River develops the idea of despair and renewal by the river. Make a precise claim, support it with at least three pieces of textual evidence, and explain how the author's use of symbolism and imagery shapes that idea. Address one possible counterclaim. (You are reading the English translation by Gunther Olesch, Anke Dreher, Amy Coulter, Stefan Langer and Semyon Chaichenets, so word-choice evidence is the translators' English.)

HS Junior (550 words; Dual Credit (Indiana College Core): ICC-WC-1.1, ICC-WC-1.3, ICC-WC-1.4, ICC-WC-1.5): Analyze how the structure of By the River (where it begins, turns and ends) and its symbolism shape the reader's understanding of despair and renewal by the river. Identify one place where the text leaves matters uncertain and explain how that uncertainty adds to its meaning.

HS Senior (600 words; Dual Credit (Indiana College Core): ICC-WC-1.1, ICC-WC-1.3, ICC-WC-1.4, ICC-WC-1.5): Two readers disagree about what By the River suggests about despair and renewal by the river. Lay out two plausible interpretations, weigh the evidence for each (including the chapter's symbolism and imagery), and argue for the stronger one in a sustained, well-organized essay.

AP (650 words; Dual Credit (Indiana College Core): ICC-WC-1.1, ICC-WC-1.3, ICC-WC-1.4, ICC-WC-1.5): Write a literary argument in which you analyze how Hermann Hesse uses symbolism in By the River to complicate the reader's understanding of despair and renewal by the river. Develop a defensible thesis, select evidence purposefully, and explain how specific choices of diction and syntax create meaning.

College Freshman (1000 words; Dual Credit (Indiana College Core): ICC-WC-1.3, ICC-WC-1.5, ICC-WC-1.1): Situate By the River within its historical and literary context and argue how the chapter's treatment of despair and renewal by the river responds to that context. Engage with at least one secondary perspective (a critic, historian or the author's own statements), integrate quotations smoothly, and cite in APA style.

College Sophomore (1250 words; Dual Credit (Indiana College Core): ICC-WC-1.1, ICC-WC-1.3, ICC-WC-1.4, ICC-WC-1.5): Read By the River alongside the conventions of its genre and period. Argue how the chapter's handling of despair and renewal by the river follows or bends those conventions, using the symbolism as evidence, and test your reading against one published critic. Document two secondary sources in APA.

College Junior (1500 words; Dual Credit (Indiana College Core): ICC-WC-1.1, ICC-WC-1.3, ICC-WC-1.4, ICC-WC-1.5): Apply a named critical approach (for example formalist, historicist, feminist, psychoanalytic or ecocritical) to By the River and its treatment of despair and renewal by the river. State your method, show what it reveals in the chapter's symbolism and imagery, and identify where the text resists it.

College Senior (2000 words; Dual Credit (Indiana College Core): ICC-WC-1.1, ICC-WC-1.3, ICC-WC-1.4, ICC-WC-1.5): Develop a research argument that reads By the River as evidence for a larger claim about despair and renewal by the river in Siddhartha. Connect close reading of the chapter to the whole novel, engage at least four scholarly sources, and state precisely where your reading departs from theirs (Chicago style).

Graduate / PhD (2500 words; Dual Credit (Indiana College Core): ICC-WC-1.1, ICC-WC-1.3, ICC-WC-1.4, ICC-WC-1.5): Develop an original argument that reads By the River as a hinge in the novel's larger treatment of despair and renewal by the river. Position your reading within a named critical conversation (for example formalist, historicist, psychoanalytic, feminist or postcolonial approaches), account for the textual history where relevant, and articulate the stakes of your intervention for scholarship on Siddhartha.

SAT-style questions

1. For a long time, he pondered his transformation, listened to the bird, as it sang for joy. Had not this bird died in him, had he not felt its death?

   As used in the text, what does the word “transformation” most nearly mean?

   A. a sudden loss of memory

   B. a complete change in form or nature

   C. a long journey on foot

   D. a feeling of deep shame

2. For a long time, he pondered his transformation, listened to the bird, as it sang for joy. Had not this bird died in him, had he not felt its death? No, something else from within him had died, something which already for a long time had yearned to die. Was it not this what he used to intend to kill in his ardent years as a penitent? Was this not his self, his small, frightened, and proud self, he had wrestled with for so many years, which had defeated him again and again, which was back again after every killing, prohibited joy, felt fear? Was it not this, which today had finally come to its death, here in the forest, by this lovely river? Was it not due to this death, that he was now like a child, so full of trust, so without fear, so full of joy?

Which choice best states the central idea of this passage?

A. He regrets leaving the riches of the city

B. The proud, fearful self he fought for years has finally died

C. He fears that the bird in his heart is dead

D. He wants to return to the Samanas

SAT key: 1. B (a complete change in form or nature); 2. B (The proud, fearful self he fought for years has finally died)

Lesson 10: The Ferryman

Focus: learning from the river

Objective: Students will analyze how symbolism develops in "The Ferryman" by writing a claim-evidence-reasoning paragraph that cites at least 2 quotations from the section, and will score at least 80% on the section quiz.

Standards: Dual Credit (Indiana College Core): ICC-WC-1.1, ICC-WC-1.3, ICC-WC-1.4, ICC-WC-1.5

Content note (death of a character, alcohol or drugs (mentioned)): Kamala dies of a snakebite: "a small, black snake fled, by which Kamala had been bitten." (Hesse, 1922/2015, The Ferryman, para. 47) The scene is peaceful and is followed by a funeral pyre.
Student preview: Kamala is bitten by a snake and dies peacefully; the chapter also mentions drinking.
Suggested language: "How does Hesse make Kamala's death feel peaceful rather than frightening?"

Teacher only · spoilers

Siddhartha becomes Vasudeva's assistant. Vasudeva, a simple and attentive listener, teaches him to listen to the river, which shows that there is no such thing as time—the river is everywhere at once. Years pass peacefully. Gotama's monks pass by, carrying news that the Buddha is dying, and Kamala travels with her son to see him; she is bitten by a snake, recognizes Siddhartha at the ferry, and dies in his arms. Siddhartha keeps their son.

Background: The image of the river echoes ancient ideas, such as Heraclitus's saying that one cannot step into the same river twice.

Significance: The listening river replaces human teachers; Kamala's peaceful death and the son's arrival begin a new test.

Lesson plan and lecture script (90 minutes)

0–8 min · Bell-ringer · You do (8 min)
Students write to the bell-ringer, then pair-share.
What does the river teach that no person could? Write for five minutes. Starters: I think... because... / This connects to the river and time because.... Content note before we start: Kamala is bitten by a snake and dies peacefully; the chapter also mentions drinking.
Prompt: What does the river teach that no person could?
Sentence starters: I think… because… · This connects to the river and time because…
Strong response: A strong response takes a position and anticipates this: the river is "everywhere at once"; there is no time, only the present.

8–18 min · Vocabulary with etymology notes · We do (10 min)
Five key words in context, with verified word histories.
Today's words: obstructing — blocking; precocious — too bold or forward; presumptuous; ferried — carried across water by boat; oarsman — someone who rows a boat; wondrously — in a wonderful, marvellous way. "ferried": From Old English ferian "to carry, transport," a Germanic word related to fare.
Words: obstructing: blocking · precocious: too bold or forward; presumptuous · ferried: carried across water by boat · oarsman: someone who rows a boat · wondrously: in a wonderful, marvellous way

18–28 min · Background and context · I do (10 min)
Mini-lecture (read or adapt the script).
The image of the river echoes ancient ideas, such as Heraclitus's saying that one cannot step into the same river twice. The listening river replaces human teachers; Kamala's peaceful death and the son's arrival begin a new test. Characterization: Siddhartha joins Vasudeva the ferryman, who is a perfect listener and says the river taught him everything. Imagery: The river's surface, bubbles, colours, and above all its voices. Plot: Years later Kamala, now a Buddhist follower, comes with her son to see the dying Buddha; she is bitten by a snake and dies in Siddhartha's arms; the boy is Siddhartha's son. Watch for the river: The river teaches unity, simultaneity and listening; it returns in every stage of Siddhartha's life. In this chapter: "By this river I want to stay, thought Siddhartha, it is the same which I have crossed a long time ago on my way to the childlike people" (The Ferryman, paragraph 1).

28–40 min · I do: modeled close reading · I do (12 min)
Model the close reading of the anchor quotation using the written think-aloud below.
First, meaning. I read "Love this water! Stay near it! Learn from it" slowly and put it in my own words: Gazing into the river, Siddhartha hears a voice inside him urging him to love the water, stay near it and learn from it. Next, craft. I notice three short commands, each with an exclamation mark, like a calling. The strongest word is "Learn": it turns the river from scenery into a teacher. Then, effect. What does the river seem to tell Siddhartha? My answer: The river seems to tell Siddhartha to stay and learn from it, so he decides to remain with the ferryman; the line shows that his next teacher will be the river and listening, not a doctrine.

> Love this water! Stay near it! Learn from it (The Ferryman, paragraph 2)

Think-aloud: First, meaning. I read "Love this water! Stay near it! Learn from it" slowly and put it in my own words: Gazing into the river, Siddhartha hears a voice inside him urging him to love the water, stay near it and learn from it. Next, craft. I notice three short commands, each with an exclamation mark, like a calling. The strongest word is "Learn": it turns the river from scenery into a teacher. Then, effect. What does the river seem to tell Siddhartha? My answer: The river seems to tell Siddhartha to stay and learn from it, so he decides to remain with the ferryman; the line shows that his next teacher will be the river and listening, not a doctrine.

40–55 min · We do: guided annotation · We do (15 min)
Guided analysis of a second quotation; expected answers given.
Ask: What words in this line stand out, and what do they suggest? Expected: The list of places shows the river is one thing in many places at once; the lesson is that time is unreal. Expected link: the river and time. Ask: How does this line connect to the river and time? Expected: The river is "everywhere at once"; there is no time, only the present. (The river's lesson about time.)

> that the river is everywhere at once, at the source and at the mouth, at the waterfall, at the ferry, at the rapids, in the sea, in the mountains, everywhere at once (The Ferryman, paragraph 34)

Ask: What words in this line stand out, and what do they suggest?
Expected answer: The list of places shows the river is one thing in many places at once; the lesson is that time is unreal. Expected link: the river and time.
Ask: How does this line connect to the river and time?
Expected answer: The river is "everywhere at once"; there is no time, only the present. (The river's lesson about time.)

55–70 min · You do: independent annotation · You do (15 min)
Independent annotation and a claim-evidence-reasoning paragraph (exemplar given).
Annotate the chapter for characterization, imagery (three marks with a margin note each), then write one claim-evidence-reasoning paragraph: what does this chapter suggest about learning from the river? Then start your writing prompt at your assigned level (HS Sophomore: Analyze how The Ferryman develops the idea of learning from the river. Make a precise claim, support it with at least three pieces of textual evidence, and explain how the author's use of symbolism and characterization shapes that idea. Address one possible counterclaim. (You are reading the English translation by Gunther Olesch, Anke Dreher, Amy Coulter, Stefan Langer and Semyon Chaichenets, so word-choice evidence is the translators' English.)) Exemplar: The river teaches Siddhartha that time is an illusion and that every stage of life is present at once. When the text says “Nothing was, nothing will be; everything is, everything has existence and is present” (The Ferryman, paragraph 35), it shows this directly. He learns that "the river is everywhere at once," and concludes, "Nothing was, nothing will be; everything is," so his past selves are not lost but present.
Task: Annotate the chapter for characterization, imagery (three marks with a margin note each), then write one claim-evidence-reasoning paragraph: what does this chapter suggest about learning from the river? Then start your writing prompt at your assigned level (HS Sophomore: Analyze how The Ferryman develops the idea of learning from the river. Make a precise claim, support it with at least three pieces of textual evidence, and explain how the author's use of symbolism and characterization shapes that idea. Address one possible counterclaim. (You are reading the English translation by Gunther Olesch, Anke Dreher, Amy Coulter, Stefan Langer and Semyon Chaichenets, so word-choice evidence is the translators' English.))
Exemplar: The river teaches Siddhartha that time is an illusion and that every stage of life is present at once. When the text says “Nothing was, nothing will be; everything is, everything has existence and is present” (The Ferryman, paragraph 35), it shows this directly. He learns that "the river is everywhere at once," and concludes, "Nothing was, nothing will be; everything is," so his past selves are not lost but present.

70–80 min · Discussion · We do (10 min)
Structured discussion from the 30 tiered questions, with facilitation notes.
Anchor question: What does the river teach that no person could? Ask: what does it mean to live "only in the present"? Is it possible?
Anchor question: What does the river teach that no person could?
Facilitation: Ask: what does it mean to live "only in the present"? Is it possible?

80–87 min · Exit ticket / chapter quiz · You do (7 min)
Chapter quiz in the app and an exit ticket (answer given).
Chapter quiz in the app, then: In one sentence, what does this chapter suggest about learning from the river? Support it with one short quotation. Model answer: The river teaches Siddhartha that time is an illusion and that every stage of life is present at once. ("Nothing was, nothing will be; everything is, everything has existence and is present", The Ferryman, paragraph 35). Accept any defensible claim backed by a quotation from the chapter; the answer key for the quiz is in the Quiz section.
Exit ticket: In one sentence, what does this chapter suggest about learning from the river? Support it with one short quotation.
Answer: Model answer: The river teaches Siddhartha that time is an illusion and that every stage of life is present at once. ("Nothing was, nothing will be; everything is, everything has existence and is present", The Ferryman, paragraph 35). Accept any defensible claim backed by a quotation from the chapter; the answer key for the quiz is in the Quiz section.

87–90 min · Closure · I do (3 min)
Summarize the lesson and preview the next reading.
Today we saw how characterization shapes learning from the river. Key takeaway: the river is "everywhere at once"; there is no time, only the present.

Total: 90 minutes.

60-minute version of this lesson

Same script and content as above, with these timings (60 minutes).

Clock	Segment	Minutes	What to keep
0–5	Bell-ringer	5	Students write to the bell-ringer, then pair-share.
5–10	Vocabulary with etymology notes	5	Five key words in context, with verified word histories.
10–16	Background and context	6	Mini-lecture (read or adapt the script).
16–24	I do: modeled close reading	8	Model the close reading of the anchor quotation using the written think-aloud below.
24–34	We do: guided annotation	10	Guided analysis of a second quotation; expected answers given.
34–44	You do: independent annotation	10	Independent annotation and a claim-evidence-reasoning paragraph (exemplar given).

44–54	Discussion	10	Structured discussion from the 30 tiered questions, with facilitation notes.
54–58	Exit ticket / chapter quiz	4	Chapter quiz in the app and an exit ticket (answer given).
58–60	Closure	2	Summarize the lesson and preview the next reading.

Teacher analysis (spoilers)

Literary elements

- Characterization: Siddhartha joins Vasudeva the ferryman, who is a perfect listener and says the river taught him everything.
- Imagery: The river's surface, bubbles, colours, and above all its voices.
- Plot: Years later Kamala, now a Buddhist follower, comes with her son to see the dying Buddha; she is bitten by a snake and dies in Siddhartha's arms; the boy is Siddhartha's son.

Themes and how they develop

- the river and time: the river is "everywhere at once"; there is no time, only the present.

Symbols and motifs

- the river: The river teaches unity, simultaneity and listening; it returns in every stage of Siddhartha's life. In this chapter: “By this river I want to stay, thought Siddhartha, it is the same which I have crossed a long time ago on my way to the childlike people” (The Ferryman, paragraph 1).
- teachers and teachings: Siddhartha learns from many teachers but concludes that wisdom cannot be taught in words. In this chapter: “and it told him: Love this water! Stay near it! Learn from it! Oh yes, he wanted to learn from it, he” (The Ferryman, paragraph 2).

Key quotations (checked against the reading text)

- “Love this water! Stay near it! Learn from it” (The Ferryman, paragraph 2) The inner voice that makes him a ferryman.
- “that the river is everywhere at once, at the source and at the mouth, at the waterfall, at the ferry, at the rapids, in the sea, in the mountains, everywhere at once” (The Ferryman, paragraph 34) The river's lesson about time.
- “Nothing was, nothing will be; everything is, everything has existence and is present” (The Ferryman, paragraph 35) Siddhartha concludes that past and future are illusions and every stage of life exists at once.

Model claim-evidence-reasoning

Claim: The river teaches Siddhartha that time is an illusion and that every stage of life is present at once.
Evidence: “Nothing was, nothing will be; everything is, everything has existence and is present” (The Ferryman, paragraph 35)
Reasoning: He learns that "the river is everywhere at once," and concludes, "Nothing was, nothing will be; everything is," so his past selves are not lost but present.

Passages referenced in this lesson (full text)

"Surely. This too, I have learned from the river: everything is coming back! You too, Samana, will come back. Now farewell! Let your friendship be my reward. Commemorate me when you make offerings to the gods." (Kamala, paragraph 11)

Before the city, in a beautifully fenced grove, the traveller came across a small group of servants, both male and female, carrying baskets. In their midst, carried by four servants in an ornamental sedan-chair, sat a woman, the mistress, on red pillows under a colourful canopy. Siddhartha stopped at the entrance to the pleasure-garden and watched the parade, saw the servants, the maids, the baskets, saw the sedan-chair and saw the lady in it. Under black hair, which towered high on her head, he saw a very fair, very delicate, very smart face, a bright red mouth like a freshly cracked fig, eyebrows which were well tended and painted in a high arch, smart and watchful dark eyes, a clear, tall neck rising from a green and golden garment, resting fair hands, long and thin, with wide golden bracelets over the wrists. (Kamala, paragraph 16)

The merchant passed to duties of writing important letters and contracts on to him and got into the habit of discussing all important affairs with him. He soon saw that Siddhartha knew little about rice and wool, shipping and trade, but that he acted in a fortunate manner, and that Siddhartha surpassed him, the merchant, in calmness and equanimity, and in the art of listening and deeply understanding previously unknown people. "This Brahmin," he said to a friend, "is no proper merchant and will never be one, there is never any passion in his soul when he conducts our business. But he has that mysterious quality of those people to whom success comes all by itself, whether this may be a good star of his birth, magic, or something he has learned among Samanas. He always seems to be merely playing with our business affairs, they never fully become a part of him, they never rule over him, he is never afraid of failure, he is never upset by a loss." (With the Childlike People, paragraph 30)

Years passed by; surrounded by the good life, Siddhartha hardly felt them fading away. He had become rich, for quite a while he possessed a house of his own and his own servants, and a garden before the city by the river. The people liked him, they came to him whenever they needed money or advice, but there was nobody close to him, except Kamala. (Sansara, paragraph 2)

Then the time came when a dream warned him. He had spent the hours of the evening with Kamala, in her beautiful pleasure-garden. They had been sitting under the trees, talking, and Kamala had said thoughtful words, words behind which a sadness and tiredness lay hidden. She had asked him to tell her about Gotama, and could not hear enough of him, how clear his eyes, how still and beautiful his mouth, how kind his smile, how peaceful his walk had been. For a long time, he had to tell her about the exalted Buddha, and Kamala had sighed and had said: "One day, perhaps soon, I'll also follow that Buddha. I'll give him my pleasure-garden for a gift and take my refuge in his teachings." But after this, she had aroused him, and had tied him to her in the act of making love with painful fervour, biting and in tears, as if, once more, she wanted to squeeze the last sweet drop out of this vain, fleeting pleasure. Never before, it had become so strangely clear to Siddhartha, how closely lust was akin to death. Then he had lain by her side, and Kamala's face had been close to him, and under her eyes and next to the corners of her mouth he had, as clearly as never before, read a fearful inscription, an inscription of small lines, of slight grooves, an inscription reminiscent of autumn and old age, just as Siddhartha himself, who was only in his forties, had already noticed, here and there, gray hairs among his black ones. Tiredness was written on Kamala's beautiful face, tiredness from walking a long path, which has no happy destination, tiredness and the beginning of withering, and concealed, still unsaid, perhaps not even conscious anxiety: fear of old age, fear of the autumn, fear of having to die. With a sigh, he had bid his farewell to her, the soul full of reluctance, and full of concealed anxiety. (Sansara, paragraph 8)

"Things are going downhill with you!" he said to himself, and laughed about it, and as he was saying it, he happened to glance at the river, and he also saw the river going downhill, always moving on downhill, and singing and being happy through it all. He liked this well, kindly he smiled at the river. Was this not the river in which he had intended to drown himself, in past times, a hundred years ago, or had he dreamed this? (By the River, paragraph 41)

Wondrous indeed was my life, so he thought, wondrous detours it has taken. As a boy, I had only to do with gods and offerings. As a youth, I had only to do with asceticism, with thinking and meditation, was searching for Brahman, worshipped the eternal in the Atman. But as a young man, I followed the penitents, lived in the forest, suffered of heat and frost, learned to hunger, taught my body to become dead. Wonderfully, soon afterwards, insight came towards me in the form of the great Buddha's teachings, I felt the knowledge of the oneness of the world circling in me like my own blood. But I also had to leave Buddha and the great knowledge. I went and learned the art of love with Kamala, learned trading with Kamaswami, piled up money, wasted money, learned to love my stomach, learned to please my senses. I had to spend many years losing my spirit, to unlearn thinking again, to forget the oneness. Isn't it just as if I had turned slowly and on a long detour from a man into a child, from a thinker into a childlike person? And yet, this path has been very good; and yet, the bird in my chest has not died. But what a path has this been! I had to pass through so much stupidity, through so much vices, through so many errors, through so much disgust and disappointment and woe, just to become a child again and to be able to start over. But it was right so, my heart says "Yes" to it, my eyes smile to it. I've had to experience despair, I've had to sink down to the most foolish one of all thoughts, to the thought of suicide, in order to be able to experience divine grace, to hear Om again, to be able to sleep properly and awake properly again. I had to become a fool, to find Atman in me again. I had to sin, to be able to live again. Where else might my path lead me to? It is foolish, this path, it moves in loops, perhaps it is going around in a circle. Let it go as it likes, I want to take it. (By the River, paragraph 42)

He thought these thoughts, listened with a smile to his stomach, listened gratefully to a buzzing bee. Cheerfully, he looked into the rushing river, never before he had like a water so well as this one, never before he had perceived the voice and the parable of the moving water thus strongly and beautifully. It seemed to him as if the river had something special to tell him, something he did not know yet, which was still awaiting him. In this river, Siddhartha had intended to drown himself, in it the old, tired, desperate Siddhartha had drowned today. But the new Siddhartha felt a deep love for this rushing water, and decided for himself, not to leave it very soon. (By the River, paragraph 49)

By this river I want to stay, thought Siddhartha, it is the same which I have crossed a long time ago on my way to the childlike people, a friendly ferryman had guided me then, he is the one I want to go to, starting out from his hut, my path had led me at that time into a new life, which had now grown old and is dead—my present path, my present new life, shall also take its start there! (The Ferryman, paragraph 1)

Tenderly, he looked into the rushing water, into the transparent green, into the crystal lines of its drawing, so rich in secrets. Bright pearls he saw rising from the deep, quiet bubbles of air floating on the reflecting surface, the blue of the sky being depicted in it. With a thousand eyes, the river looked at him, with green ones, with white ones, with crystal ones, with sky-blue ones. How did he love this water, how did it delight him, how grateful was he to it! In his heart he heard the voice talking, which was newly awaking, and it told him: Love this water! Stay near it! Learn from it! Oh yes, he wanted to learn from it, he wanted to listen to it. He who would understand this water and its secrets, so it seemed to him, would also understand many other things, many secrets, all secrets. (The Ferryman, paragraph 2)

But out of all secrets of the river, he today only saw one, this one touched his soul. He saw: this water ran and ran, incessantly it ran, and was nevertheless always there, was always at all times the same and yet new in every moment! Great be he who would grasp this, understand this! He understood and grasped it not, only felt some idea of it stirring, a distant memory, divine voices. (The Ferryman, paragraph 3)

Siddhartha rose, the workings of hunger in his body became unbearable. In a daze he walked on, up the path by the bank, upriver, listened to the current, listened to the rumbling hunger in his body. (The Ferryman, paragraph 4)

When he reached the ferry, the boat was just ready, and the same ferryman who had once transported the young Samana across the river, stood in the boat, Siddhartha recognised him, he had also aged very much. (The Ferryman, paragraph 5)

"Would you like to ferry me over?" he asked. (The Ferryman, paragraph 6)

The ferryman, being astonished to see such an elegant man walking along and on foot, took him into his boat and pushed it off the bank. (The Ferryman, paragraph 7)

"It's a beautiful life you have chosen for yourself," the passenger spoke. "It must be beautiful to live by this water every day and to cruise on it." (The Ferryman, paragraph 8)

With a smile, the man at the oar moved from side to side: "It is beautiful, sir, it is as you say. But isn't every life, isn't every work beautiful?" (The Ferryman, paragraph 9)

"This may be true. But I envy you for yours." (The Ferryman, paragraph 10)

"Ah, you would soon stop enjoying it. This is nothing for people wearing fine clothes." (The Ferryman, paragraph 11)

"Ah, most of all I wouldn't want to continue travelling at all. Most of all I would like you, ferryman, to give me an old loincloth and keep me with you as your assistant, or rather as your trainee, for I'll have to learn first how to handle the boat." (The Ferryman, paragraph 16)

"Now I recognise you," he finally said. "At one time, you've slept in my hut, this was a long time ago, possibly more than twenty years ago, and you've been ferried across the river by me, and we parted like good friends. Haven't you been a Samana? I can't think of your name any more." (The Ferryman, paragraph 18)

"My name is Siddhartha, and I was a Samana, when you've last seen me." (The Ferryman, paragraph 19)

They had reached the middle of the river, and Vasudeva pushed the oar with more strength, in order to overcome the current. He worked calmly, his eyes fixed in on the front of the boat, with brawny arms. Siddhartha sat and watched him, and remembered, how once before, on that last day of his time as a Samana, love for this man had stirred in his heart. Gratefully, he accepted Vasudeva's invitation. When they had reached the bank, he helped him to tie the boat to the stakes; after this, the ferryman asked him to enter the hut, offered him bread and water, and Siddhartha ate with eager pleasure, and also ate with eager pleasure of the mango fruits Vasudeva offered him. (The Ferryman, paragraph 21)

Afterwards, it was almost the time of the sunset, they sat on a log by the bank, and Siddhartha told the ferryman about where he originally came from and about his life, as he had seen it before his eyes today, in that hour of despair. Until late at night, lasted his tale. (The Ferryman, paragraph 22)

Vasudeva listened with great attention. Listening carefully, he let everything enter his mind, birthplace and childhood, all that learning, all that searching, all joy, all distress. This was among the ferryman's virtues one of the greatest: like only a few, he knew how to listen. Without him having spoken a word, the speaker sensed how Vasudeva let his words enter his mind, quiet, open, waiting, how he did not lose a single one, awaited not a single one with impatience, did not add his praise or rebuke, was just listening. Siddhartha felt, what a happy fortune it is, to confess to such a listener, to bury in his heart his own life, his own search, his own suffering. (The Ferryman, paragraph 23)

But when Siddhartha fell silent, and a long silence had occurred, then Vasudeva said: "It is as I thought. The river has spoken to you. It is your friend as well, it speaks to you as well. That is good, that is very good. Stay with me, Siddhartha, my friend. I used to have a wife, her bed was next to mine, but she has died a long time ago, for a long time, I have lived alone. Now, you shall live with me, there is space and food for both." (The Ferryman, paragraph 25)

"I thank you," said Siddhartha, "I thank you and accept. And I also thank you for this, Vasudeva, for listening to me so well! These people are rare who know how to listen. And I did not meet a single one who knew it as well as you did. I will also learn in this respect from you." (The Ferryman, paragraph 26)

"You will learn it," spoke Vasudeva, "but not from me. The river has taught me to listen, from it you will learn it as well. It knows everything, the river, everything can be learned from it. See, you've already learned this from the water too, that it is good to strive downwards, to sink, to seek depth. The rich and elegant Siddhartha is becoming an oarsman's servant, the learned Brahmin Siddhartha becomes a ferryman: this has also been told to you by the river. You'll learn that other thing from it as well." (The Ferryman, paragraph 27)

Vasudeva rose. "It is late," he said, "let's go to sleep. I can't tell you that other thing, O friend. You'll learn it, or perhaps you know it already. See, I'm no learned man, I have no special skill in speaking, I also have no special skill in thinking. All I'm able to do is to listen and to be godly, I have learned nothing else. If I was able to say and teach it, I might be a wise man, but like this I am only a ferryman, and it is my task to ferry people across the river. I have transported many, thousands; and to all of them, my river has been nothing but an obstacle on their travels. They travelled to seek money and business, and for weddings, and on pilgrimages, and the river was obstructing their path, and the ferryman's job was to get them quickly across that obstacle. But for some among thousands, a few, four or five, the river has stopped being an obstacle, they have heard its voice, they have listened to it, and the river has become sacred to them, as it has become sacred to me. Let's rest now, Siddhartha." (The Ferryman, paragraph 29)

Siddhartha stayed with the ferryman and learned to operate the boat, and when there was nothing to do at the ferry, he worked with Vasudeva in the rice field, gathered wood, plucked the fruit off the banana trees. He learned to build an oar, and learned to mend the boat, and to weave baskets, and was joyful because of everything he learned, and the days and months passed quickly. But more than Vasudeva could teach him, he was taught by the river. Incessantly, he learned from it. Most of all, he learned from it to listen, to pay close attention with a quiet heart, with a waiting, opened soul, without passion, without a wish, without judgement, without an opinion. (The Ferryman, paragraph 30)

In a friendly manner, he lived side by side with Vasudeva, and occasionally they exchanged some words, few and at length thought about words. Vasudeva was no friend of words; rarely, Siddhartha succeeded in persuading him to speak. (The Ferryman, paragraph 31)

"Yes, Siddhartha," he spoke. "It is this what you mean, isn't it: that the river is everywhere at once, at the source and at the mouth, at the waterfall, at the ferry, at the rapids, in the sea, in the mountains, everywhere at once, and that there is only the present time for it, not the shadow of the past, not the shadow of the future?" (The Ferryman, paragraph 34)

"This it is," said Siddhartha. "And when I had learned it, I looked at my life, and it was also a river, and the boy Siddhartha was only separated from the man Siddhartha and from the old man Siddhartha by a shadow, not by something real. Also, Siddhartha's previous births were no past, and his death and his return to Brahma was no future. Nothing was, nothing will be; everything is, everything has existence and is present." (The Ferryman, paragraph 35)

And once again, when the river had just increased its flow in the rainy season and made a powerful noise, then said Siddhartha: "Isn't it so, O friend, the river has many voices, very many voices? Hasn't it the voice of a king, and of a warrior, and of a bull, and of a bird of the night, and of a woman giving birth, and of a sighing man, and a thousand other voices more?" (The Ferryman, paragraph 37)

"So it is," Vasudeva nodded, "all voices of the creatures are in its voice." (The Ferryman, paragraph 38)

Happily, Vasudeva's face was smiling, he bent over to Siddhartha and spoke the holy Om into his ear. And this had been the very thing which Siddhartha had also been hearing. (The Ferryman, paragraph 40)

And time after time, his smile became more similar to the ferryman's, became almost just as bright, almost just as throughly glowing with bliss, just as shining out of thousand small wrinkles, just as alike to a child's, just as alike to an old man's. Many travellers, seeing the two ferrymen, thought they were brothers. Often, they sat in the evening together by the bank on the log, said nothing and both listened to the water, which was no water to them, but the voice of life, the voice of what exists, of what is eternally taking shape. And it happened from time to time that both, when listening to the river, thought of the same things, of a conversation from the day before yesterday, of one of their travellers, the face and fate of whom had occupied their thoughts, of death, of their childhood, and that they both in the same moment, when the river had been saying something good to them, looked at each other, both thinking precisely the same thing, both delighted about the same answer to the same question. (The Ferryman, paragraph 41)

There was something about this ferry and the two ferrymen which was transmitted to others, which many of the travellers felt. It happened occasionally that a traveller, after having looked at the face of one of the ferrymen, started to tell the story of his life, told about pains, confessed evil things, asked for comfort and advice. It happened occasionally that someone asked for permission to stay for a night with them to listen to the river. It also happened that curious people came, who had been told that there were two wise men, or sorcerers, or holy men living by that ferry. The curious people asked many questions, but they got no answers, and they found neither sorcerers nor wise men, they only found two friendly little old men, who seemed to be mute and to have become a bit strange and gaga. And the curious people laughed and were discussing how foolishly and gullibly the common people were spreading such empty rumours. (The Ferryman, paragraph 42)

The years passed by, and nobody counted them. Then, at one time, monks came by on a pilgrimage, followers of Gotama, the Buddha, who were asking to be ferried across the river, and by them the ferrymen were told that they were most hurriedly walking back to their great teacher, for the news had spread the exalted one was deadly sick and would soon die his last human death, in order to become one with the salvation. It was not long until a new flock of monks came along on their pilgrimage, and another one, and the monks as well as most of the other travellers and people walking through the land spoke of nothing else than of Gotama and his impending death. And as people are flocking from everywhere and from all sides, when they are going to war or to the coronation of a king, and are gathering like ants in droves, thus they flocked, like being drawn on by a magic spell, to where the great Buddha was awaiting his death, where the huge event was to take place and the great perfected one of an era was to become one with the glory. (The Ferryman, paragraph 43)

Often, Siddhartha thought in those days of the dying wise man, the great teacher, whose voice had admonished nations and had awoken hundreds of thousands, whose voice he had also once heard, whose holy face he had also once seen with respect. Kindly he thought of him, saw his path to perfection before his eyes, and remembered with a smile those words which he had once, as a young man, said to him, the exalted one. They had been, so it seemed to him, proud and precocious words; with a smile, he remembered them. For a long time he knew that there was nothing standing between Gotama and him any more, though he was still unable to accept his teachings. No, there was no teaching a truly searching person, someone who truly wanted to find, could accept. But he who had found, he could approve of any teachings, every path, every goal, there was nothing standing between him and all the other thousand any more who lived in that what is eternal, who breathed what is divine. (The Ferryman, paragraph 44)

On one of these days, when so many went on a pilgrimage to the dying Buddha, Kamala also went to him, who used to be the most beautiful of the courtesans. A long time ago, she had retired from her previous life, had given her garden to the monks of Gotama as a gift, had taken her refuge in the teachings, was among the friends and benefactors of the pilgrims. Together with Siddhartha the boy, her son, she had gone on her way due to the news of the near death of Gotama, in simple clothes, on foot. With her little son, she was travelling by the river; but the boy had soon grown tired, desired to go back home, desired to rest, desired to eat, became disobedient and started whining. (The Ferryman, paragraph 45)

Kamala often had to take a rest with him, he was accustomed to having his way against her, she had to feed him, had to comfort him, had to scold him. He did not comprehend why he had to go on this exhausting and sad pilgrimage with his mother, to an unknown place, to a stranger, who was holy and about to die. So what if he died, how did this concern the boy? (The Ferryman, paragraph 46)

The pilgrims were getting close to Vasudeva's ferry, when little Siddhartha once again forced his mother to rest. She, Kamala herself, had also become tired, and while the boy was chewing a banana, she crouched down on the ground, closed her eyes a bit, and rested. But suddenly, she uttered a wailing scream, the boy looked at her in fear and saw her face having grown pale from horror; and from under her dress, a small, black snake fled, by which Kamala had been bitten. (The Ferryman, paragraph 47)

Hurriedly, they now both ran along the path, in order to reach people, and got near to the ferry, there Kamala collapsed, and was not able to go any further. But the boy started crying miserably, only interrupting it to kiss and hug his mother, and she also joined his loud screams for help, until the sound reached Vasudeva's ears, who stood at the ferry. Quickly, he came walking, took the woman on his arms, carried her into the boat, the boy ran along, and soon they all reached the hut, where Siddhartha stood by the stove and was just lighting the fire. He looked up and first saw the boy's face, which wondrously reminded him of something, like a warning to remember something he had forgotten. Then he saw Kamala, whom he instantly recognised, though she lay unconscious in the ferryman's arms, and now he knew that it was his own son, whose face had been such a warning reminder to him, and the heart stirred in his chest. (The Ferryman, paragraph 48)

Kamala's wound was washed, but had already turned black and her body was swollen, she was made to drink a healing potion. Her consciousness returned, she lay on Siddhartha's bed in the hut and bent over her stood Siddhartha, who used to love her so much. It seemed like a dream to her; with a smile, she looked at her friend's face; just slowly she, realized her situation, remembered the bite, called timidly for the boy. (The Ferryman, paragraph 49)

"He's with you, don't worry," said Siddhartha. (The Ferryman, paragraph 50)

Kamala looked into his eyes. She spoke with a heavy tongue, paralysed by the poison. "You've become old, my dear," she said, "you've become gray. But you are like the young Samana, who at one time came without clothes, with dusty feet, to me into the garden. You are much more like him, than you were like him at that time when you had left me and Kamaswami. In the eyes, you're like him, Siddhartha. Alas, I have also grown old, old—could you still recognise me?" (The Ferryman, paragraph 51)

Siddhartha smiled: "Instantly, I recognised you, Kamala, my dear." (The Ferryman, paragraph 52)

Kamala pointed to her boy and said: "Did you recognise him as well? He is your son." (The Ferryman, paragraph 53)

Her eyes became confused and fell shut. The boy wept, Siddhartha took him on his knees, let him weep, petted his hair, and at the sight of the child's face, a Brahmin prayer came to his mind, which he had learned a long time ago, when he had been a little boy himself. Slowly, with a singing voice, he started to speak; from his past and childhood, the words came flowing to him. And with that singsong, the boy became calm, was only now and then uttering a sob and fell asleep. Siddhartha placed him on Vasudeva's bed. Vasudeva stood by the stove and cooked rice. Siddhartha gave him a look, which he returned with a smile. (The Ferryman, paragraph 54)

Vasudeva nodded; over his friendly face ran the light of the stove's fire. (The Ferryman, paragraph 56)

Once again, Kamala returned to consciousness. Pain distorted her face, Siddhartha's eyes read the suffering on her mouth, on her pale cheeks. Quietly, he read it, attentively, waiting, his mind becoming one with her suffering. Kamala felt it, her gaze sought his eyes. (The Ferryman, paragraph 57)

Looking at him, she said: "Now I see that your eyes have changed as well. They've become completely different. By what do I still recognise that you're Siddhartha? It's you, and it's not you." (The Ferryman, paragraph 58)

Siddhartha said nothing, quietly his eyes looked at hers. (The Ferryman, paragraph 59)

"You have achieved it?" she asked. "You have found peace?" (The Ferryman, paragraph 60)

He smiled and placed his hand on hers. (The Ferryman, paragraph 61)

"I'm seeing it," she said, "I'm seeing it. I too will find peace." (The Ferryman, paragraph 62)

Kamala never stopped looking into his eyes. She thought about her pilgrimage to Gotama, which she wanted to take, in order to see the face of the perfected one, to breathe his peace, and she thought that she had now found him in his place, and that it was good, just as good, as if she had seen the other one. She wanted to tell this to him, but the tongue no longer obeyed her will. Without speaking, she looked at him, and he saw the life fading from her eyes. When the final pain filled her eyes and made them grow dim, when the final shiver ran through her limbs, his finger closed her eyelids. (The Ferryman, paragraph 64)

For a long time, he sat and looked at her peacefully dead face. For a long time, he observed her mouth, her old, tired mouth, with those lips, which had become thin, and he remembered, that he used to, in the spring of his years, compare this mouth with a freshly cracked fig. For a long time, he sat, read in the pale face, in the tired wrinkles, filled himself with this sight, saw his own face lying in the same manner, just as white, just as quenched out, and saw at the same time his face and hers being young, with red lips, with fiery eyes, and the feeling of this both being present and at the same time real, the feeling of eternity, completely filled every aspect of his being. Deeply he felt, more deeply than ever before, in this hour, the indestructibility of every life, the eternity of every moment. (The Ferryman, paragraph 65)

When he rose, Vasudeva had prepared rice for him. But Siddhartha did not eat. In the stable, where their goat stood, the two old men prepared beds of straw for themselves, and Vasudeva lay himself down to sleep. But Siddhartha went outside and sat this night before the hut, listening to the river, surrounded by the past, touched and encircled by all times of his life at the same time. But occasionally, he rose, stepped to the door of the hut and listened, whether the boy was sleeping. (The Ferryman, paragraph 66)

"You've experienced suffering, Siddhartha, but I see: no sadness has entered your heart." (The Ferryman, paragraph 70)

"No, my dear, how should I be sad? I, who have been rich and happy, have become even richer and happier now. My son has been given to me." (The Ferryman, paragraph 71)

> "Your son shall be welcome to me as well. But now, Siddhartha, let's get to work, there is much to be done. Kamala has died on the same bed, on which my wife had died a long time ago. Let us also build Kamala's funeral pile on the same hill on which I had then built my wife's funeral pile." (The Ferryman, paragraph 72)

Vocabulary with etymology notes

Word	Definition (in this sentence)	In context	Word history
obstructing (verb)	blocking	They travelled to seek money and business, and for weddings, and on pilgrimages, and the river was obstructing their path, and the ferryman's job was to get them quickly across that obstacle.
precocious (adjective)	too bold or forward; presumptuous	They had been, so it seemed to him, proud and precocious words; with a smile, he remembered them.
ferried (verb)	carried across water by boat	Behold, once before you have ferried me across this water in your boat for the immaterial reward of a good deed.	"ferried": From Old English ferian "to carry, transport," a Germanic word related to fare. (Online Etymology Dictionary (hand-checked note), https://www.etymonline.com/word/ferry)
oarsman (noun)	someone who rows a boat	The rich and elegant Siddhartha is becoming an oarsman's servant, the learned Brahmin Siddhartha becomes a ferryman: this has also been told to you by the river.
wondrously (adverb)	in a wonderful, marvellous way	He looked up and first saw the boy's face, which wondrously reminded him of something, like a warning to remember something he had forgotten.
birthplace (noun)	the place where someone was born	Listening carefully, he let everything enter his mind, birthplace and childhood, all that learning, all that searching, all joy, all distress.
singsong (noun)	a regular and monotonous rising and falling intonation	And with that singsong, the boy became calm, was only now and then uttering a sob and fell asleep.	"singsong": Origin: an English formation from sing + song. (Liber et Libri origin note, https://en.wiktionary.org/wiki/singsong#Etymology)

Discussion questions

1. What does the river teach that no person could?

2. Where does symbolism appear in this chapter, and what effect does it have? Point to one passage.
3. How does this chapter connect to the book's larger concern with the river and time?

Tiered discussion questions (30: recall, inferential, evaluative)

Wait time after every question (3 s for DOK 1, 5 s for DOK 2, 8 to 10 s for DOK 3 and 4); think-pair-share on DOK 3 and 4; answer each response with a follow-up probe; close with student-generated questions. Focus sets by rigor level: HS Sophomore: 1, 2, 3, 4, 13, 14, 15, 16, 17, 23, 24, 25; HS Junior: 1, 2, 3, 14, 15, 16, 17, 18, 24, 25, 26, 27; HS Senior: 1, 2, 3, 15, 16, 17, 18, 25, 26, 27, 28, 29; AP: 1, 2, 16, 17, 18, 19, 20, 26, 27, 28, 29, 30; College Freshman: 1, 2, 17, 18, 19, 20, 21, 22, 27, 28, 29, 30; College Sophomore: 1, 2, 11, 18, 19, 20, 21, 22, 23, 28, 29, 30; College Junior: 1, 11, 12, 19, 20, 21, 22, 23, 24, 25, 29, 30; College Senior: 1, 11, 12, 13, 20, 21, 22, 23, 24, 25, 26, 30; Graduate / PhD: 1, 11, 12, 13, 21, 22, 23, 24, 25, 26, 27, 28

Literal / recall

1. What does the passenger say about the ferryman's life by the river? [DOK 1 · Cold call with support: call on a student by name, offering a sentence starter or rephrasing if needed · wait 3 s · Dual Credit (Indiana College Core): ICC-WC-1.1, ICC-WC-1.3, ICC-WC-1.4, ICC-WC-1.5] Look for: That it must be beautiful to live by the water
   Answer guidance: That it is a beautiful life: "It must be beautiful to live by this water every day and to cruise on it." (The Ferryman, paragraph 8)
2. What is Vasudeva's greatest skill? [DOK 1 · Turn and Talk: students discuss briefly with a neighbor before answering · wait 3 s · Dual Credit (Indiana College Core): ICC-WC-1.1, ICC-WC-1.3, ICC-WC-1.4, ICC-WC-1.5] Look for: Listening
   Answer guidance: Listening: "This was among the ferryman's virtues one of the greatest: like only a few, he knew how to listen." (The Ferryman, paragraph 23)
3. What does the river teach about time? [DOK 1 · Cold call with support: call on a student by name, offering a sentence starter or rephrasing if needed · wait 3 s · Dual Credit (Indiana College Core): ICC-WC-1.1, ICC-WC-1.3, ICC-WC-1.4, ICC-WC-1.5] Look for: That time does not truly exist
   Answer guidance: That for the river there is only the present: "there is only the present time for it, not the shadow of the past, not the shadow of the future" (The Ferryman, paragraph 34).
4. Whom does Kamala point out to Siddhartha before she loses consciousness, and what does she tell him? [DOK 1 · Turn and Talk: students discuss briefly with a neighbor before answering · wait 3 s · Dual Credit (Indiana College Core): ICC-WC-1.1, ICC-WC-1.3, ICC-WC-1.4, ICC-WC-1.5] Look for: Her boy; she tells him the boy is his son
   Answer guidance: "Kamala pointed to her boy and said: 'Did you recognise him as well? He is your son.'" (The Ferryman, paragraph 53)
5. How does the boy feel about the journey with his mother? [DOK 1 · Cold call with support: call on a student by name, offering a sentence starter or rephrasing if needed · wait 3 s · Dual Credit (Indiana College Core): ICC-WC-1.1, ICC-WC-1.3, ICC-WC-1.4, ICC-WC-1.5] Look for: He does not understand why he must make this tiring, sad pilgrimage
   Answer guidance: He resents it: "He did not comprehend why he had to go on this exhausting and sad pilgrimage with his mother, to an unknown place, to a stranger" (The Ferryman, paragraph 46).
6. Retell the three most important events of "The Ferryman" in order, in one sentence each. [DOK 1 · Turn and Talk: students discuss briefly with a neighbor before answering · wait 3 s · Dual Credit (Indiana College Core): ICC-WC-1.1, ICC-WC-1.3, ICC-WC-1.4, ICC-WC-1.5] Look for: Siddhartha becomes Vasudeva's assistant. Vasudeva, a simple and attentive listener, teaches him to listen to the river, which shows that there is no such thing as time—the river is everywhere at once. Years pass peacefully. Gotama's monks pass by, carrying news that the Buddha is dying, and Kamala travels with her son to see him; she is bitten by a snake, recognizes Siddhartha at the ferry, and…
   Answer guidance: Siddhartha returns to the ferry and becomes Vasudeva's helper (The Ferryman, paragraphs 5–30); he learns from the river that time is not real (paragraphs 32–36); years later Kamala, on her way to the dying Buddha, is bitten by a snake and dies at the ferry, leaving him their son (paragraphs 45–73).

7. Which characters appear or are mentioned in "The Ferryman"? Name two and one thing each says or does. [DOK 1 · Cold call with support: call on a student by name, offering a sentence starter or rephrasing if needed · wait 3 s · Dual Credit (Indiana College Core): ICC-WC-1.1, ICC-WC-1.3, ICC-WC-1.4, ICC-WC-1.5] Look for: Names and actions taken from the chapter; check against the teacher summary.

   Answer guidance: Two of: Vasudeva, who listens and teaches him to listen to the river (paragraphs 23, 27); Kamala, who dies at the hut asking whether he has found peace (paragraph 60); their son, who weeps and is held by Siddhartha (paragraph 54).

8. Where and when does "The Ferryman" take place? Point to the line that tells you. [DOK 1 · Turn and Talk: students discuss briefly with a neighbor before answering · wait 3 s · Dual Credit (Indiana College Core): ICC-WC-1.1, ICC-WC-1.3, ICC-WC-1.4, ICC-WC-1.5] Look for: A place/time detail quoted from the chapter.

   Answer guidance: At the ferry and Vasudeva's hut by the river, over many years: "The years passed by, and nobody counted them." (The Ferryman, paragraph 43)

9. Reread: "Siddhartha rose, the workings of hunger in his body became unbearable." What does "unbearable" mean here, and what is literally happening in this line? [DOK 1 · Turn and Talk: students discuss briefly with a neighbor before answering · wait 3 s · Dual Credit (Indiana College Core): ICC-WC-1.1, ICC-WC-1.3, ICC-WC-1.4, ICC-WC-1.5] Look for: unbearable: too painful or strong to put up with.

   Answer guidance: "Unbearable" here means: too painful or strong to put up with. In The Ferryman, paragraph 4, Siddhartha gets up because his hunger has become too strong to ignore.

10. Reread: "Her consciousness returned, she lay on Siddhartha's bed in the hut and bent over her stood Siddhartha, who used to love her so much." What does "consciousness" mean here, and what is literally happening in this line? [DOK 1 · Turn and Talk: students discuss briefly with a neighbor before answering · wait 3 s · Dual Credit (Indiana College Core): ICC-WC-1.1, ICC-WC-1.3, ICC-WC-1.4, ICC-WC-1.5] Look for: consciousness: the state of being awake and aware.

    Answer guidance: "Consciousness" here means: the state of being awake and aware. In The Ferryman, paragraph 49, Kamala wakes up after the snakebite and finds herself on Siddhartha's bed with him bending over her.

Inferential / analytical

1. What does "The Ferryman" suggest about learning from the river? State the inference and the line that supports it. [DOK 2 · Think-Pair-Share: students think alone, discuss with a partner, then share with the class · wait 5 s · Dual Credit (Indiana College Core): ICC-WC-1.1, ICC-WC-1.3, ICC-WC-1.4, ICC-WC-1.5] Look for: A stated inference (for example, that the river teaches by listening, not by doctrine) backed by one located line, such as the one in The Ferryman, paragraph 30.

   Answer guidance: The chapter suggests that the river teaches by listening, not by doctrine. Support: "But more than Vasudeva could teach him, he was taught by the river." (The Ferryman, paragraph 30)

2. Find one example of symbolism in this chapter. What does it reveal that a plain statement would not? [DOK 2 · Follow-up: ask a probing question that builds on the previous answer · wait 5 s · Dual Credit (Indiana College Core): ICC-WC-1.1, ICC-WC-1.3, ICC-WC-1.4, ICC-WC-1.5] Look for: Look for objects, places or actions that stand for larger ideas.

   Answer guidance: The river is everywhere at once (The Ferryman, paragraph 34) and so stands for timeless unity; it shows what a statement about 'no time' could not: one thing present at source and mouth at once.

3. How does the characterization in this chapter shape what we understand about learning from the river? [DOK 3 · Think-Pair-Share: students think alone, discuss with a partner, then share with the class · wait 8 s · Dual Credit (Indiana College Core): ICC-WC-1.1, ICC-WC-1.3, ICC-WC-1.4, ICC-WC-1.5] Look for: Look for what characters say, do and think, and how others react to them.

   Answer guidance: Vasudeva is drawn as the perfect listener (The Ferryman, paragraph 23) and modest teacher ("You will learn it," spoke Vasudeva, "but not from me." (The Ferryman, paragraph 27)); he shows that learning from the river means learning to listen.

4. In the passage that begins "'Now I recognise you,'", why might Hesse have chosen these particular words? Pick two and explain their connotations. [DOK 2 · Follow-up: ask a probing question that builds on the previous answer · wait 5 s · Dual Credit (Indiana College Core): ICC-WC-1.1, ICC-WC-1.3, ICC-WC-1.4, ICC-WC-1.5] Look for: Diction analysis of two words in the anchor passage.

   Answer guidance: In The Ferryman, paragraph 18, "recognise" after a long look makes the meeting slow and searching; the ferryman remembers the Samana in the rich man, which shows that he sees through appearances.

5. What causes the main turn in "The Ferryman", and what effect is it likely to have on what follows? [DOK 2 · Follow-up: ask a probing question that builds on the previous answer · wait 5 s · Dual Credit (Indiana College Core): ICC-WC-1.1, ICC-WC-1.3, ICC-WC-1.4, ICC-WC-1.5] Look for: Siddhartha becomes Vasudeva's assistant. Vasudeva, a simple and attentive listener, teaches him to listen to the river, which shows that there is no such thing as time—the river is everywhere at once. Years pass peacefully. Gotama's monks pass by, carrying news that the Buddha is dying, and Kamala…

   Answer guidance: The cause is Kamala's arrival with their son (The Ferryman, paragraphs 45–53). Effect: her death leaves Siddhartha with a son, and love and worry come back into his life in the next chapter.

6. How does "The Ferryman" build on "By the River"? Name one link of cause and effect. [DOK 3 · Think-Pair-Share: students think alone, discuss with a partner, then share with the class · wait 8 s · Dual Credit (Indiana College Core): ICC-WC-1.1, ICC-WC-1.3, ICC-WC-1.4, ICC-WC-1.5] Look for: A causal or structural link between this and the previous chapter.

   Answer guidance: Cause and effect: in "By the River" he decided not to leave the river; here he acts on it, "By this river I want to stay, thought Siddhartha" (The Ferryman, paragraph 1).

7. What can we infer about a character's motives from what they say and do here, as opposed to what they claim? [DOK 3 · Follow-up: ask a probing question that builds on the previous answer · wait 8 s · Dual Credit (Indiana College Core): ICC-WC-1.1, ICC-WC-1.3, ICC-WC-1.4, ICC-WC-1.5] Look for: An inference about motive supported by a quoted line.

   Answer guidance: Vasudeva says he is no learned man and cannot teach (paragraph 29), yet his listening is the teaching; Kamala says she travels to the Buddha (paragraph 45), but her questions at death are about Siddhartha's peace (paragraph 60).

8. The bell-ringer asked: "What does the river teach that no person could?" Now that we have read closely, how would you revise your first answer, and which line changed your mind? [DOK 2 · Think-Pair-Share: students think alone, discuss with a partner, then share with the class · wait 5 s · Dual Credit (Indiana College Core): ICC-WC-1.1, ICC-WC-1.3, ICC-WC-1.4, ICC-WC-1.5] Look for: A revised answer anchored in the text.

   Answer guidance: A revised answer should name listening and timelessness (The Ferryman, paragraphs 30 and 34) and add that the river teaches by example, not words, which Vasudeva says plainly: "The river has taught me to listen" (paragraph 27).

9. Where does theme appear, and how does it connect this chapter to the larger concern with the river and time? [DOK 3 · Follow-up: ask a probing question that builds on the previous answer · wait 8 s · Dual Credit (Indiana College Core): ICC-WC-1.1, ICC-WC-1.3, ICC-WC-1.4, ICC-WC-1.5] Look for: Look for statements or moments that connect to the book's big ideas.
   Answer guidance: The theme of the river and time is stated in The Ferryman, paragraph 34 and applied to his life in paragraph 35: “I looked at my life, and it was also a river” (The Ferryman, paragraph 35).
10. Background: The image of the river echoes ancient ideas, such as Heraclitus's saying that one cannot step into the same river twice. How does knowing this change the way you read one moment in the chapter? [DOK 3 · Think-Pair-Share: students think alone, discuss with a partner, then share with the class · wait 8 s · Dual Credit (Indiana College Core): ICC-WC-1.1, ICC-WC-1.3, ICC-WC-1.4, ICC-WC-1.5] Look for: A specific moment reread in light of the context.
    Answer guidance: Knowing Heraclitus’s saying shows Hesse’s twist: the river changes yet is everywhere at once (The Ferryman, paragraph 34), so for Siddhartha it teaches unity, not only change.

Evaluative / synthesis / creative

1. A critic might argue: “The listening river replaces human teachers; Kamala's peaceful death and the son's arrival begin a new test.” How far do you agree? Take a stand and defend it with two lines from the chapter. [DOK 3 · Four Corners: students move to the corner that matches their position and explain why · wait 8 s · ICC-WC-1.5] Look for: A defended position with evidence and one counterpoint.
   Answer guidance: Agree in part: Siddhartha learns more from the river than from Vasudeva (paragraph 30). A text counterpoint: Vasudeva’s listening and example (paragraphs 23, 27) are still a human teacher’s work.
2. Which character in this chapter acts most wisely, and which least? Judge them by a standard you name. [DOK 3 · Think-Pair-Share: students think alone, discuss with a partner, then share with the class · wait 8 s · ICC-WC-1.5] Look for: An evaluation using an explicit criterion and evidence.
   Answer guidance: With patience as the standard, Vasudeva is wisest (paragraphs 23, 72); the boy, who whines and makes his tired mother stop to rest, is least wise, though he is a child (paragraphs 46–47).
3. Rewrite one moment of “The Ferryman” from the point of view of a different character. What does the new angle reveal or hide about learning from the river? [DOK 4 · Think-Pair-Share: students think alone, discuss with a partner, then share with the class · wait 8 s · ICC-WC-1.5] Look for: A rewrite that keeps the chapter’s events accurate, speaks in the chosen character’s voice, and ends with a sentence on what the new angle shows or hides.
   Answer guidance: Kamala’s view of her last hour (The Ferryman, paragraphs 57–64) works well: she sees peace in his eyes and wants it, which hides his own grief.
4. Write three questions of your own about “The Ferryman”: one recall, one “why/how”, and one “should/what if”. Trade with a partner and answer theirs. [DOK 3 · Student-generated: students write and pose their own questions · wait 8 s · ICC-WC-1.5] Look for: Three questions at three levels, each answerable from the chapter, traded and answered with a line.
   Answer guidance: Example set: recall, ‘How is Kamala hurt?’ (snake, paragraph 47); why/how, ‘Why doesn’t Siddhartha feel sad?’ (paragraph 71); what if, ‘Should Siddhartha have gone to the Buddha too?’
5. Connect this chapter to love and attachment: is the link strong or weak so far? What would Hesse need to show next to strengthen it? [DOK 4 · Socratic circle: an inner circle discusses while the outer circle listens and takes notes, then they switch · wait 8 s · ICC-WC-1.5] Look for: A judgment of thematic development across the work.

Answer guidance: Strong: love returns as grief and as a son (The Ferryman, paragraphs 53, 65). Hesse now needs to show the cost of that love, which the next chapter does.

6. Is the symbolism in this chapter effective, or does it feel heavy-handed? Evaluate it as a reader would in a review. [DOK 3 · Four Corners: students move to the corner that matches their position and explain why · wait 8 s · ICC-WC-1.5] Look for: An evaluative judgment with criteria and evidence.
   Answer guidance: Effective: the river's lessons are given in dialogue and experience (paragraphs 32–40). Some readers find the timeless-river passages abstract.
7. Compare how "The Ferryman" treats learning from the river with how another text, film or event you know treats a similar idea. What does Siddhartha see that the other misses? [DOK 4 · Socratic circle: an inner circle discusses while the outer circle listens and takes notes, then they switch · wait 8 s · ICC-WC-1.5] Look for: A cross-text synthesis.
   Answer guidance: A comparison should name a story of a mentor who teaches by listening and quote "But more than Vasudeva could teach him, he was taught by the river." (The Ferryman, paragraph 30)
8. Predict what "The Son" will bring, using two clues from this chapter. After reading, evaluate your prediction. [DOK 3 · Think-Pair-Share: students think alone, discuss with a partner, then share with the class · wait 8 s · ICC-WC-1.5] Look for: A prediction or judgment justified with textual clues.
   Answer guidance: Clues: the boy is spoiled and used to having his way ("he was accustomed to having his way against her" (The Ferryman, paragraph 46)) and now lives with two old men. Prediction: conflict between Siddhartha and his son.
9. Design a one-paragraph modern adaptation of this chapter (setting, characters, conflict). What must stay the same for it to still be about learning from the river? [DOK 4 · Think-Pair-Share: students think alone, discuss with a partner, then share with the class · wait 8 s · ICC-WC-1.5] Look for: A modern setting, characters and conflict that keep the chapter's core idea, with the one element that must not change named.
   Answer guidance: A modern version keeps a burnt-out man who learns from a quiet mentor and nature, then meets a child he never knew. What must stay is the lesson of listening (paragraph 30).
10. What question would you most like to ask Hermann Hesse about this chapter, and what answer do you think the text itself gives? [DOK 4 · Student-generated: students write and pose their own questions · wait 8 s · ICC-WC-1.5] Look for: A student-generated question answered from evidence.
    Answer guidance: Example: 'Why is Siddhartha not sad at Kamala's death?' The text answers: he has become "even richer and happier" by gaining a son and by seeing her peace (The Ferryman, paragraph 71).

Annotation focus

- Symbolism: look for objects, places or actions that stand for larger ideas (anchor passage in the We do segment)
- Also notice Characterization: what characters say, do and think, and how others react to them
- Also notice Theme: statements or moments that connect to the book's big ideas

Chapter quiz: item bank (all eleven rigor versions)

1. [mc · recall · DOK 1] In the line "They travelled to seek money and business, and for weddings, and on pilgrimages, and the river was obstructing their path, and the ferryman's job was to get them quickly across that obstacle.", what does "obstructing" most nearly mean?

   A. making by lacing strips or threads together

B. washing or soaking in water

C. blocking; standing in the way

D. taking part in; sharing

Key: C (blocking; standing in the way)

2. [fill · recall · DOK 1] Fill in the blank with the vocabulary word that fits: “He looked up and first saw the boy’s face, which _____ reminded him of something, like a warning to remember something he had forgotten.” Word bank: wondrously, cruelly, angrily, boringly

   Key: wondrously

3. [fill · recall · DOK 1] Complete the quotation from The Ferryman, paragraph 3: “Great be he who would grasp this, _____ this!” Word bank: sweep, understand, paint, cook

   Key: understand

4. [mc · recall · DOK 1] In the line “Behold, once before you have ferried me across this water in your boat for the immaterial reward of a good deed.”, what does “ferried” most nearly mean?

   A. transported from one shore to the other

   B. played games of chance for money

   C. longed for something strongly

   D. made a loud ringing noise

   Key: A (transported from one shore to the other)

5. [fill · recall · DOK 1] Complete the quotation from The Ferryman, paragraph 25: “But when Siddhartha fell silent, and a long _____ had occurred, then Vasudeva said:” Word bank: silence, gravel, plaster, sawdust

   Key: silence

6. [mc · recall · DOK 1] Whose assistant does Siddhartha become?

   A. Gotama's

   B. Kamaswami's

   C. Govinda's

   D. Vasudeva's

   Key: D (Vasudeva's)

7. [mc · recall · DOK 1] Who stays with Siddhartha after Kamala dies?

   A. Their young son

   B. Gotama, the teacher in the grove

   C. Kamaswami, the merchant

   D. Govinda, the Brahmin's son

   Key: A (Their young son)

8. [fill · recall · DOK 1] Fill in the blank with the vocabulary word that fits: “Listening carefully, he let everything enter his mind, _____ and childhood, all that learning, all that searching, all joy, all distress.” Word bank: marketplace, birthplace, warehouse, merchandise

   Key: birthplace

9. [mc · recall · DOK 1] How is Kamala hurt?

   A. She is bitten by a snake

   B. She falls into the river from the boat

C. She catches fever

D. She is robbed

Key: A (She is bitten by a snake)

10. [fill · recall · DOK 1] Complete the quotation from The Ferryman, paragraph 34: "that the river is _____ at once, at the source and at the mouth, at the waterfall, at the ferry, at the rapids, in the sea, in the mountains"

    Key: everywhere

11. [mc · inference · DOK 2] Which of these passages comes earliest in The Ferryman?

    A. "He understood and grasped it not, only felt some idea of it stirring, a distant memory, divine voices."

    B. "he today only saw one, this one touched his soul."

    C. "In a daze he walked on, up the path by the bank, upriver, listened to the current, listened to the rumbling hunger in his body."

    D. "He saw: this water ran and ran, incessantly it ran, and was nevertheless always there, was always at all times the same and yet new in…"

    Key: B ("he today only saw one, this one touched his soul.")

12. [short · inference · DOK 2] What does the river teach Siddhartha in this passage? "See, you've already learned this from the water too, that it is good to strive downwards, to sink, to seek depth." (The Ferryman, paragraph 27)

    Sample answer: "See, you've already learned this from the water too, that it is good to strive downwards, to sink, to seek depth." (The Ferryman, paragraph 27). The river teaches humility: water always flows down and seeks the deep. Siddhartha, who has just sunk to despair, learns that going down can be good, a way to depth instead of only failure.

13. [mc · analysis · DOK 3] Which literary element does this describe in "The Ferryman"? Siddhartha joins Vasudeva the ferryman, who is a perfect listener and says the river taught him everything.

    A. Allusion

    B. Theme

    C. Irony

    D. Characterization

    Key: D (Characterization)

14. [short · synthesis · DOK 4] Synthesis: trace how the river and time develops from By the River to The Ferryman. Use one quotation from each.

    Sample answer: The river changes from a place of private crisis to a place of timeless presence. In By the River, the waking Siddhartha already feels drawn to it: "kindly he smiled at the river" (By the River, paragraph 41). In The Ferryman the same water holds all life together: "all voices of the creatures are in its voice" (The Ferryman, paragraph 38). The man who first smiled at the river becomes the ferryman who hears every voice in it.

15. [short · synthesis · DOK 4] Close reading: how do the diction and syntax of "How did he love this water, how did it delight him, how grateful was he to it!" (The Ferryman, paragraph 2) shape its meaning? Consider a second, competing reading.

    Sample answer: The three "how" clauses rise from love to delight to gratitude: "How did he love this water, how did it delight him, how grateful was he to it!" (The Ferryman, paragraph 2). The exclamation makes the feeling burst out after his despair, so the river becomes something he cherishes. A competing reading treats the outburst as mere relief, a romantic escape from a failed life. But the feeling turns at once into study: "Oh yes, he wanted to learn from it, he wanted to listen to it." (The Ferryman, paragraph 2). The love leads to learning, so it marks the beginning of his life as the river's student, not a retreat.

16. [fill · recall · DOK 1] Fill in the blank with the word that fits: "He worked calmly, his eyes fixed in on the front of the boat, with _____ arms." Word bank: empty, brawny, painted, broken

    Key: brawny

17. [mc · recall · DOK 1] In the line "Wouldn't you, ferryman, like to accept these clothes, which are a nuisance to me, from me?", what does "nuisance" most nearly mean?

    A. a precious gift from a friend

    B. a holy sign

    C. an annoying bother

    D. a warm comfort

    Key: C (an annoying bother)

18. [mc · recall · DOK 1] According to paragraph 43, who counted the years that passed at the ferry?

    A. Vasudeva

    B. Siddhartha

    C. Nobody

    D. The travellers

    Key: C (Nobody)

19. [mc · recall · DOK 1] How is Kamala travelling when she comes toward the river?

    A. On horseback with servants

    B. In a carriage with Kamaswami

    C. Alone, on foot

    D. With her little son

    Key: D (With her little son)

20. [mc · recall · DOK 1] What does Siddhartha help Vasudeva do when they reach the bank?

    A. Mend the broken oars

    B. Tie the boat to the stakes

    C. Carry the day's catch of fish up to the hut

    D. Build a fire on the shore

    Key: B (Tie the boat to the stakes)

21. [fill · recall · DOK 1] Complete the quotation from The Ferryman, paragraph 51: "She spoke with a heavy tongue, paralysed by the _____." Word bank: poison, pillow, singing, sunlight

    Key: poison

22. [fill · recall · DOK 1] Complete the quotation from The Ferryman, paragraph 47: "while the boy was chewing a _____" Word bank: banana, song, cloud, debt

    Key: banana

23. [mc · recall · DOK 1] In the line "In a daze he walked on, up the path by the bank, upriver", what does "daze" most nearly mean?

    A. a confused, dreamlike state

    B. a fast run along a road

C. a loud, cheerful song

D. a sudden, deep anger at everything

Key: A (a confused, dreamlike state)

24. [fill · recall · DOK 1] Complete the quotation from The Ferryman, paragraph 51: “But you are like the young Samana, who at one time came without clothes, with dusty _____, to me into the garden.” Word bank: songs, prayers, feet, wishes

Key: feet

25. [mc · inference · DOK 2] Which of these passages comes last in The Ferryman?

A. “My name is Vasudeva.”

B. “Would you like to ferry me over?”

C. “Instantly, I recognised you, Kamala, my dear.”

D. “they built the funeral pile”

Key: D (“they built the funeral pile”)

26. [short · inference · DOK 2] What does Vasudeva see in Siddhartha after Kamala’s death? Use this line. “You’ve experienced suffering, Siddhartha, but I see: no sadness has entered your heart.” (The Ferryman, paragraph 70)

Sample answer: Vasudeva sees that Siddhartha has suffered without being broken by sadness. The evidence is “You’ve experienced suffering, Siddhartha, but I see: no sadness has entered your heart.” (The Ferryman, paragraph 70). The turn on “but” separates pain from sadness, showing that Siddhartha has learned to accept loss.

27. [short · inference · DOK 2] What can you infer from this line? “Without him having spoken a word, the speaker sensed how Vasudeva let his words enter his mind, quiet, open, waiting, how he did not lose a single one, awaited not a single one with impatience, did not add his praise or rebuke, was just listening.” (The Ferryman, paragraph 23) Answer in two or three sentences with one detail.

Sample answer: Vasudeva is a rare, patient listener. The evidence is “Without him having spoken a word, the speaker sensed how Vasudeva let his words enter his mind, quiet, open, waiting, how he did not lose a single one, awaited not a single one with impatience, did not add his praise or rebuke, was just listening.” (The Ferryman, paragraph 23). The list “quiet, open, waiting” and the phrase “just listening” show that he gives Siddhartha full attention without judging him, which is why Siddhartha can tell his whole life to him.

28. [mc · analysis · DOK 3] Which literary element does this describe in “The Ferryman”? “With a thousand eyes, the river looked at him” (The Ferryman, paragraph 2).

A. Plot

B. Setting

C. Theme

D. Personification

Key: D (Personification)

29. [mc · analysis · DOK 3] In this chapter, which theme does the following most directly develop? “A long time ago, she had retired from her previous life, had given her garden to the monks of Gotama as a gift” (The Ferryman, paragraph 45)

A. The joy of wealth

B. Revenge for old wrongs

C. Turning away from worldly life

D. The danger of rivers

Key: C (Turning away from worldly life)

30. [short · synthesis · DOK 4] Close reading: how do the diction and syntax of "It's you, and it's not you." (The Ferryman, paragraph 58) shape its meaning? Consider a second, competing reading.
Sample answer: Kamala's short sentence holds a paradox: "It's you, and it's not you." (The Ferryman, paragraph 58). The repeated "It's you" is split by "not," so the same person is both affirmed and denied in six words. A competing reading takes it as the confusion of a dying woman. Yet she has just said that his eyes have changed, so the paradox is a clear insight into his transformation.

31. [fill · recall · DOK 1] Fill in the blank with the word that fits: "she was made to drink a healing _____" Word bank: shadow, potion, stone, debt
Key: potion

32. [fill · recall · DOK 1] Fill in the blank with the vocabulary word that fits: "And with that _____, the boy became calm, was only now and then uttering a sob and fell asleep." Word bank: singsong, quarrel, uproar, tantrum
Key: singsong

33. [mc · recall · DOK 1] In paragraph 61, what does Siddhartha do as he sits with the dying Kamala?

A. He runs off to fetch a healer from the village

B. He weeps and turns away

C. He prays aloud to the gods

D. He smiles and places his hand on hers

Key: D (He smiles and places his hand on hers)

34. [mc · recall · DOK 1] Who carries the wounded Kamala to the hut?

A. Vasudeva

B. Siddhartha

C. Her son

D. A monk

Key: A (Vasudeva)

35. [mc · recall · DOK 1] In the line "entirely and completely absorbed by it, with his eyes closed", what does "absorbed" most nearly mean?

A. tired and bored

B. angry and upset

C. completely taken up in attention

D. confused and lost

Key: C (completely taken up in attention)

36. [mc · recall · DOK 1] What does Siddhartha remember as he watches Vasudeva row?

A. That he once owed the ferryman money

B. That love for this man once stirred in his heart

C. That Govinda had warned him about the river

D. That Kamala had once crossed here with him

Key: B (That love for this man once stirred in his heart)

37. [mc · recall · DOK 1] Whom did Kamala hope to see on her last pilgrimage?

    A. The dying Buddha

    B. Her old friend Kamaswami

    C. Siddhartha's father

    D. The oldest Samana

    Key: A (The dying Buddha)

38. [fill · recall · DOK 1] Complete the quotation from The Ferryman, paragraph 48: "and got near to the ferry, there Kamala _____, and was not able to go any further." Word bank: collapsed, sang, bargained, knitted

    Key: collapsed

39. [fill · recall · DOK 1] Complete the quotation from The Ferryman, paragraph 3: "But out of all _____ of the river, he today only saw one, this one touched his soul." Word bank: secrets, fish, boats, fares

    Key: secrets

40. [mc · inference · DOK 2] Which of these lines comes first in The Ferryman?

    A. "Would you like to ferry me over?"

    B. "The years passed by, and nobody counted them."

    C. "He's with you, don't worry"

    D. "You haven't slept"

    Key: A ("Would you like to ferry me over?")

41. [short · inference · DOK 2] What does Vasudeva recognize in Siddhartha's story? Use this line. "The river has spoken to you. It is your friend as well" (The Ferryman, paragraph 25)

    Sample answer: Vasudeva recognizes that Siddhartha has the same bond with the river that he has. The evidence is "The river has spoken to you. It is your friend as well" (The Ferryman, paragraph 25). The words "as well" show that Vasudeva sees him as a fellow listener, which is why he invites him to stay.

42. [short · inference · DOK 2] What can you infer from this line? "Without speaking, she looked at him, and he saw the life fading from her eyes." (The Ferryman, paragraph 64) Answer in two or three sentences with one detail.

    Sample answer: Siddhartha can watch Kamala die without looking away. The evidence is "Without speaking, she looked at him, and he saw the life fading from her eyes." (The Ferryman, paragraph 64). No words are needed between them any more, and his steady watching suggests the calm attention he has learned at the river.

43. [mc · analysis · DOK 3] Which literary element does this describe in "The Ferryman"? The ferry where Siddhartha once crossed as a young Samana becomes the place where his new life begins.

    A. Onomatopoeia

    B. Alliteration

    C. Hyperbole

    D. Setting

    Key: D (Setting)

44. [mc · analysis · DOK 3] In this chapter, which theme does the following most directly develop? "The years passed by, and nobody counted them." (The Ferryman, paragraph 43)

    A. The love of money

    B. The duty of a son to his father

    C. The power of kings

D. The overcoming of time

Key: D (The overcoming of time)

45. [short · synthesis · DOK 4] Close reading: how do the diction and syntax of "Quietly, he read it, attentively, waiting, his mind becoming one with her suffering." (The Ferryman, paragraph 57) shape its meaning? Consider a second, competing reading.

    Sample answer: The adverbs "Quietly" and "attentively" and the participle "waiting" slow the sentence down, and it ends on union: "Quietly, he read it, attentively, waiting, his mind becoming one with her suffering." (The Ferryman, paragraph 57). Reading her face like a text, he takes in her pain without turning away. A competing reading takes this as simple pity for a dying woman. But the watching opens into a wider insight later in the scene: "the feeling of this both being present and at the same time real, the feeling of eternity, completely filled every aspect of his being" (The Ferryman, paragraph 65). The diction of patient reading turns compassion into the first step toward seeing all lives as one.

46. [mc · recall · DOK 1] In the line "The ferryman, being astonished to see such an elegant man walking along and on foot", what does "elegant" most nearly mean?

    A. poorly and raggedly dressed

    B. finely dressed

    C. old and bent with age

    D. rough and rude in manner

    Key: B (finely dressed)

47. [fill · recall · DOK 1] Complete the quotation from The Ferryman, paragraph 3: "only felt some idea of it stirring, a distant memory, divine _____" Word bank: coins, voices, storms, cities

    Key: voices

48. [mc · recall · DOK 1] In the line "Tenderly, he looked into the rushing water, into the transparent green", what does "transparent" most nearly mean?

    A. clear enough to see through

    B. dark and muddy

    C. loud and rushing

    D. cold and icy

    Key: A (clear enough to see through)

49. [fill · recall · DOK 1] Fill in the blank with the word that fits: "told about pains, _____ evil things, asked for comfort and advice" Word bank: sold, stole, confessed, painted

    Key: confessed

50. [mc · recall · DOK 1] What does Siddhartha ask the ferryman to give him?

    A. A boat of his own

    B. Money for the journey back to the city and Kamala

    C. A letter to Kamala

    D. An old loincloth and work as his helper

    Key: D (An old loincloth and work as his helper)

51. [fill · recall · DOK 1] Complete the quotation from The Ferryman, paragraph 66: "In the stable, where their _____ stood, the two old men prepared beds of straw for themselves" Word bank: goat, song, cloud, debt

    Key: goat

52. [mc · recall · DOK 1] What thought does Siddhartha say the river gave him in the night after Kamala's death?

    A. The thought of oneness

    B. To return to the city

    C. To find Govinda

    D. To forget Kamala and the city

    Key: A (The thought of oneness)

53. [mc · inference · DOK 2] Which of these passages about Kamala comes earliest in The Ferryman?

    A. "Kamala looked into his eyes."

    B. "You have found peace?"

    C. "Kamala also went to him"

    D. "For a long time, he sat and looked at her peacefully dead face."

    Key: C ("Kamala also went to him")

54. [short · inference · DOK 2] What can you infer from this line? "You are much more like him, than you were like him at that time when you had left me and Kamaswami." (The Ferryman, paragraph 51) Answer in two or three sentences with one detail.

    Sample answer: Kamala sees that Siddhartha has returned to the young Samana she first met. The evidence is "You are much more like him, than you were like him at that time when you had left me and Kamaswami." (The Ferryman, paragraph 51). "Him" is the young Samana who came to her garden "with dusty feet", so the line suggests that his years at the river have undone what the city made of him.

55. [short · inference · DOK 2] How have Siddhartha and Vasudeva grown alike? Use this line. "Many travellers, seeing the two ferrymen, thought they were brothers." (The Ferryman, paragraph 41)

    Sample answer: Siddhartha has grown so like Vasudeva that strangers cannot tell them apart. The evidence is "Many travellers, seeing the two ferrymen, thought they were brothers." (The Ferryman, paragraph 41). The word "brothers" shows that their shared work and peace have made them alike in face and spirit.

56. [short · inference · DOK 2] What word does Vasudeva speak into Siddhartha's ear, and why does it matter? "Happily, Vasudeva's face was smiling, he bent over to Siddhartha and spoke the holy Om into his ear." (The Ferryman, paragraph 40)

    Sample answer: Vasudeva whispers the holy Om, the very word Siddhartha had been hearing in the river's ten thousand voices: "Happily, Vasudeva's face was smiling, he bent over to Siddhartha and spoke the holy Om into his ear." (The Ferryman, paragraph 40). Om names the oneness behind all the voices, so the two men share the same insight without needing to explain it.

57. [mc · inference · DOK 2] What does this passage most clearly show? "Nothing was, nothing will be; everything is, everything has existence and is present." (The Ferryman, paragraph 35)

    A. The river's danger for travellers.

    B. Past and future are illusions; all of life exists at once.

    C. Vasudeva's wish to retire to the forest.

    D. His grief at Kamala's death.

    Key: B (Past and future are illusions; all of life exists at once.)

58. [mc · analysis · DOK 3] In this chapter, which theme does the following most directly develop? “which was no water to them, but the voice of life, the voice of what exists, of what is eternally taking shape” (The Ferryman, paragraph 41)

    A. Experience versus teaching

    B. Wealth and its cost

    C. The search for fame

    D. The unity of all life

    Key: D (The unity of all life)

59. [short · synthesis · DOK 4] Synthesis: trace how the image of Kamala’s mouth develops from Kamala to The Ferryman. Use one quotation from each.

    Sample answer: Kamala’s mouth moves from a symbol of desire to a symbol of age and loss. In Kamala, Siddhartha first sees “a bright red mouth like a freshly cracked fig” (Kamala, paragraph 16). In The Ferryman he remembers he used to “compare this mouth with a freshly cracked fig” (The Ferryman, paragraph 65) as he looks at her old, tired face. The repeated image measures how much time has passed and how his love has deepened into tenderness.

60. [short · synthesis · DOK 4] Close reading: how do the diction and syntax of “Bright pearls he saw rising from the deep, quiet bubbles of air floating on the reflecting surface, the blue of the sky being depicted in it.” (The Ferryman, paragraph 2) shape its meaning? Consider a second, competing reading.

    Sample answer: The sentence is built of slow, gentle images, “bright pearls”, “quiet bubbles”, “the blue of the sky”, in “Bright pearls he saw rising from the deep, quiet bubbles of air floating on the reflecting surface, the blue of the sky being depicted in it.” (The Ferryman, paragraph 2); the participles “rising”, “floating” and “being depicted” keep everything in motion without haste, so the river seems to hold both depth and sky at once. A competing reading treats this as simple scenery. But the reflection of the sky in the water prepares the chapter’s idea that the river contains everything, so the description is already a lesson.

61. [fill · recall · DOK 1 · Dual Credit (Indiana College Core): ICC-WC-1.5] Fill in the blank with the word that fits: “Bright _____ he saw rising from the deep, quiet bubbles of air floating on the reflecting surface” Word bank: pearls, debts, sandals, ladders

    Key: pearls

62. [fill · recall · DOK 1 · Dual Credit (Indiana College Core): ICC-WC-1.5] Fill in the blank with the word that fits: “Siddhartha spoke with _____; deeply, this enlightenment had delighted him.” Word bank: anger, fear, ecstasy, boredom

    Key: ecstasy

63. [mc · recall · DOK 1 · Dual Credit (Indiana College Core): ICC-WC-1.5] In the line “The rich and elegant Siddhartha is becoming an oarsman’s servant, the learned Brahmin Siddhartha becomes a ferryman: this has also been told to you by the river.”, what does “oarsman” most nearly mean?

    A. someone who rows a boat

    B. a person who has run away

    C. beginners in a religious order

    D. thick woven floor coverings

    Key: A (someone who rows a boat)

64. [mc · recall · DOK 1 · Dual Credit (Indiana College Core): ICC-WC-1.5] In the line “She spoke with a heavy tongue, paralysed by the poison.”, what does “paralysed” most nearly mean?

    A. made very angry

B. filled with joy

C. unable to move

D. awake and alert

Key: C (unable to move)

65. [fill · recall · DOK 1 · Dual Credit (Indiana College Core): ICC-WC-1.5] Complete the quotation from The Ferryman, paragraph 54: "The boy wept, Siddhartha took him on his _____, let him weep, petted his hair" Word bank: soup, knees, candles, ink

Key: knees

66. [mc · recall · DOK 1 · Dual Credit (Indiana College Core): ICC-WC-1.5] In the line "He worked calmly, his eyes fixed in on the front of the boat, with brawny arms.", what does "brawny" most nearly mean?

A. strong and muscular

B. thin and weak

C. pale and soft

D. long and bony

Key: A (strong and muscular)

67. [fill · recall · DOK 1 · Dual Credit (Indiana College Core): ICC-WC-1.5] Complete the quotation from The Ferryman, paragraph 65: "he used to, in the spring of his years, compare this mouth with a freshly cracked _____" Word bank: iron, fig, cloud, song

Key: fig

68. [mc · inference · DOK 2 · Dual Credit (Indiana College Core): ICC-WC-1.5] What does this passage most clearly show? "Love this water! Stay near it! Learn from it" (The Ferryman, paragraph 2)

A. The voice urges him to return to the city.

B. The voice tells him to stay and learn at the water.

C. The voice tells him to seek out Gotama.

D. The voice warns him to leave the river behind for good.

Key: B (The voice tells him to stay and learn at the water.)

69. [short · inference · DOK 3 · Dual Credit (Indiana College Core): ICC-WC-1.5] What can you infer from this line? "that the river is everywhere at once, at the source and at the mouth, at the waterfall, at the ferry, at the rapids, in the sea, in the mountains, everywhere at once" (The Ferryman, paragraph 34) Answer by connecting it to one earlier chapter: quote a second passage and explain how the two passages together develop the idea.

Sample answer: Siddhartha learns from the river that time is not real. The evidence is "that the river is everywhere at once, at the source and at the mouth, at the waterfall, at the ferry, at the rapids, in the sea, in the…" (The Ferryman, paragraph 34). Because the river exists at its source and its mouth at the same moment, Siddhartha infers that time is an illusion. This lets him see his own past and future selves as present at once. Earlier he had looked back on his city years as pure loss: "piled up money, wasted money" (By the River, paragraph 42). Together the passages suggest that if time is not real, those years are not lost after all but still present in him.

70. [mc · inference · DOK 2 · Dual Credit (Indiana College Core): ICC-WC-1.5] Which of these passages about listening comes first in The Ferryman?

A. "Vasudeva listened with great attention."

B. "listened to the current"

C. “These people are rare who know how to listen.”

D. “I was listening to the river.”

Key: B (“listened to the current”)

71. [short · inference · DOK 2 · Dual Credit (Indiana College Core): ICC-WC-1.5] How do the repetition and the image of eyes in this line shape what the river means to Siddhartha? “With a thousand eyes, the river looked at him, with green ones, with white ones, with crystal ones, with sky-blue ones.” (The Ferryman, paragraph 2)

Sample answer: The repeated “with … ones” makes the sentence look at the river again and again, from green to white to crystal to sky-blue, so the reader sees the water as many-sided and alive. Giving the river “a thousand eyes” turns it from an object into a watcher, so the syntax shows what the river will teach Siddhartha: it is a living teacher that sees him. The rising list of colours marks this as the start of his new attention.

72. [mc · inference · DOK 2 · Dual Credit (Indiana College Core): ICC-WC-1.5] What does this passage most clearly show? “Instantly, I recognised you, Kamala, my dear.” (The Ferryman, paragraph 52)

A. He is surprised that Kamala is alive.

B. He has never forgotten Kamala.

C. He is angry that Kamala came.

D. He does not know who Kamala is.

Key: B (He has never forgotten Kamala.)

73. [mc · analysis · DOK 3 · Dual Credit (Indiana College Core): ICC-WC-1.5] Which literary element does this describe in “The Ferryman”? Vasudeva claims no wisdom of his own and calls himself a simple man, showing his humility.

A. Figurative language

B. Characterization

C. Alliteration

D. Setting

Key: B (Characterization)

74. [mc · analysis · DOK 3 · Dual Credit (Indiana College Core): ICC-WC-1.5] In this chapter, which theme does the following most directly develop? “These people are rare who know how to listen.” (The Ferryman, paragraph 26)

A. The danger of rivers

B. The pride of the Brahmins

C. The value of trade

D. The rare gift of hearing others

Key: D (The rare gift of hearing others)

75. [short · synthesis · DOK 4 · Dual Credit (Indiana College Core): ICC-WC-1.5] Synthesis: trace how listening develops from With the Childlike People to The Ferryman. Use one quotation from each.

Sample answer: Listening moves from a business skill to a spiritual gift. In With the Childlike People, Siddhartha surpasses the merchant “in the art of listening and deeply understanding previously unknown people” (With the Childlike People, paragraph 30). In The Ferryman, he meets a greater master: “like only a few, he knew how to listen.” (The Ferryman, paragraph 23). The first passage shows a talent used for trade; the second shows listening as a path to wisdom, which Vasudeva will teach him.

76. [fill · recall · DOK 1] Complete the quotation from The Ferryman, paragraph 22: "Until late at night, lasted his _____." Word bank: tale, spoon, ladder, pebble

    Key: tale

77. [mc · recall · DOK 1] In his ecstasy, what does Siddhartha identify all pain and sorrow with?

    A. Money
    B. Time
    C. Desire
    D. Fate

    Key: B (Time)

78. [fill · recall · DOK 1] Fill in the blank with the word that fits: "Siddhartha's eyes read the _____ on her mouth, on her pale cheeks" Word bank: laughter, hunger, suffering, colours

    Key: suffering

79. [mc · recall · DOK 1] In the line "whose voice had admonished nations and had awoken hundreds of thousands", what does "admonished" most nearly mean?

    A. praised loudly in public
    B. ignored on purpose
    C. warned or urged earnestly
    D. bought and sold

    Key: C (warned or urged earnestly)

80. [mc · recall · DOK 1] In the line "give me an old loincloth and keep me with you as your assistant", what does "loincloth" most nearly mean?

    A. a simple cloth worn around the hips
    B. a fine silk robe worn at great feasts
    C. a leather belt
    D. a fishing net

    Key: A (a simple cloth worn around the hips)

81. [fill · recall · DOK 1] Complete the quotation from The Ferryman, paragraph 56: "over his friendly face ran the light of the stove's _____" Word bank: oil, fire, smoke, pot

    Key: fire

82. [mc · recall · DOK 1] How does Siddhartha name himself to the ferryman?

    A. As a merchant from the city
    B. As Siddhartha, once a Samana
    C. As a pilgrim on his way to Gotama
    D. As Govinda's friend

    Key: B (As Siddhartha, once a Samana)

83. [mc · inference · DOK 2] Which of these passages about the river's voices comes last in The Ferryman?

    A. "The river has spoken to you."
    B. "the river has many voices, very many voices"
    C. "a distant memory, divine voices"
    D. "all voices of the creatures are in its voice"

Key: D (“all voices of the creatures are in its voice”)

84. [mc · inference · DOK 2] What does this passage most clearly show? “told about pains, confessed evil things, asked for comfort and advice” (The Ferryman, paragraph 42)

    A. Travellers come to the ferry to trade goods.

    B. The ferrymen’s peace invites strangers to open up.

    C. The ferrymen punish those who confess.

    D. The ferrymen charge travellers a high price for advice.

    Key: B (The ferrymen’s peace invites strangers to open up.)

85. [short · inference · DOK 3] What does the river teach Siddhartha in this passage? “this water ran and ran, incessantly it ran, and was nevertheless always there, was always at all times the same and yet new in every moment!” (The Ferryman, paragraph 3) Answer by connecting it to one earlier chapter: quote a second passage and explain how the two passages together develop the idea.

    Sample answer: “this water ran and ran, incessantly it ran, and was nevertheless always there, was always at all times the same and yet new in every moment!” (The Ferryman, paragraph 3). The river is constant and changing at once. "The same and yet new" shows the unity of opposites that will become the core of his wisdom. He has just found the same truth in himself: “And yet, this path has been very good; and yet, the bird in my chest has not died.” (By the River, paragraph 42). Together the passages show the river mirroring a man who has changed utterly yet is still himself.

86. [mc · inference · DOK 2] What does this passage most clearly show? “You have found peace?” (The Ferryman, paragraph 60)

    A. Kamala wants Siddhartha to leave her.

    B. Kamala sees a change she has long hoped for.

    C. Kamala thinks Siddhartha is still a rich merchant.

    D. Kamala does not recognise Siddhartha.

    Key: B (Kamala sees a change she has long hoped for.)

87. [short · inference · DOK 2] What can you infer from this line? “Slowly, with a singing voice, he started to speak; from his past and childhood, the words came flowing to him.” (The Ferryman, paragraph 54) Answer in two or three sentences with one detail.

    Sample answer: Siddhartha is tender and patient with the frightened boy. The evidence is “Slowly, with a singing voice, he started to speak; from his past and childhood, the words came flowing to him.” (The Ferryman, paragraph 54). He soothes his son with the songs of his own childhood, which shows a gentleness and a longing for closeness that he has never shown before.

88. [mc · analysis · DOK 3] Which literary element does this describe in “The Ferryman”? In the rainy season the swollen water roars, and the two old men sit on its bank to hear its voices.

    A. Plot

    B. Dialogue

    C. Setting

    D. Theme

    Key: C (Setting)

89. [mc · analysis · DOK 3] In this chapter, which theme does the following most directly develop? “Hasn’t it the voice of a king, and of a warrior, and of a bull, and of a bird of the night” (The Ferryman, paragraph 37)

    A. The cruelty of kings

B. The fear of the night

C. The proud life of warriors and kings

D. The unity of all voices in the river

Key: D (The unity of all voices in the river)

90. [short · synthesis · DOK 4] Synthesis: trace how the ferryman's promise that Siddhartha would return develops from Kamala to The Ferryman. Use one quotation from each.

Sample answer: The ferryman's promise moves from prophecy to fulfilment. In Kamala he says: "You too, Samana, will come back." (Kamala, paragraph 11). In The Ferryman he greets the returning traveller: "Now I recognise you" (The Ferryman, paragraph 18). The first passage sounds like a pleasant farewell; the second shows it was true, so the river has brought Siddhartha back as it brings everything back.

91. [fill · recall · DOK 1] Fill in the blank with the word that fits: "he was _____ to having his way against her"

Word bank: frightened, unwilling, accustomed, forbidden

Key: accustomed

92. [mc · recall · DOK 1] In the line "They had been, so it seemed to him, proud and precocious words; with a smile, he remembered them.", what does "precocious" most nearly mean?

A. too bold or forward; presumptuous

B. decided by fate; leading to an unhappy end

C. infected and full of pus

D. occurring or operating at the same time

Key: A (too bold or forward; presumptuous)

93. [fill · recall · DOK 1] Fill in the blank with the word that fits: "While the boy was still _____, they built the funeral pile." Word bank: asleep, salty, wooden, golden

Key: asleep

94. [mc · recall · DOK 1] In the line "Quietly, he read it, attentively, waiting", what does "attentively" most nearly mean?

A. carelessly

B. angrily

C. with close care

D. sleepily

Key: C (with close care)

95. [mc · recall · DOK 1] In the line "But suddenly, she uttered a wailing scream", what does "wailing" most nearly mean?

A. crying out in pain

B. laughing

C. singing

D. whispering

Key: A (crying out in pain)

96. [fill · recall · DOK 1] Complete the quotation from The Ferryman, paragraph 9: "But isn't every life, isn't every _____ beautiful?" Word bank: work, spoon, pebble, ladder

Key: work

97. [fill · recall · DOK 1] Complete the quotation from The Ferryman, paragraph 26: “These people are _____ who know how to listen.” Word bank: rich, rare, foolish, many

    Key: rare

98. [mc · inference · DOK 2] Which of these moments with the boy comes first in The Ferryman?

    A. “while the boy was chewing a banana”

    B. “But the boy started crying miserably”

    C. “He is your son.”

    D. “The boy wept, Siddhartha took him on his knees”

    Key: A (“while the boy was chewing a banana”)

99. [short · inference · DOK 2] Why does Siddhartha feel richer after Kamala dies? Use this line. “I, who have been rich and happy, have become even richer and happier now.” (The Ferryman, paragraph 71)

    Sample answer: Siddhartha feels richer because he has gained a son. The evidence is “I, who have been rich and happy, have become even richer and happier now.” (The Ferryman, paragraph 71). He uses “rich” in a new sense, not money but love, which shows that he can find gain even in the hour of loss.

100. [mc · inference · DOK 2] What does this passage most clearly show? “give me an old loincloth and keep me with you as your assistant, or rather as your trainee” (The Ferryman, paragraph 16)

    A. He wants to own the ferry one day.

    B. He is ready to start again humbly.

    C. He plans to rob the ferryman.

    D. He is too proud to ask for help.

    Key: B (He is ready to start again humbly.)

101. [short · inference · DOK 2] What can you infer from this line? “Haven’t you been a Samana? I can’t think of your name any more.” (The Ferryman, paragraph 18) Answer in two or three sentences with one detail.

    Sample answer: Vasudeva remembers Siddhartha’s face and story but not his name. The evidence is “Haven’t you been a Samana? I can’t think of your name any more.” (The Ferryman, paragraph 18). He recalls the Samana after twenty years, which shows how closely he once watched and listened to his passenger.

102. [mc · analysis · DOK 3] In this chapter, which theme does the following most directly develop? “they have heard its voice, they have listened to it, and the river has become sacred to them, as it has become sacred to me” (The Ferryman, paragraph 29)

    A. The value of a good bed

    B. The pride of the courtesan

    C. The danger of travel on foot for pilgrims

    D. Seeing the ordinary as sacred

    Key: D (Seeing the ordinary as sacred)

103. [mc · analysis · DOK 3] Which literary element does this describe in “The Ferryman”? The river's surface, bubbles, colours, and above all its voices.

    A. Irony

    B. Imagery

    C. Alliteration

    D. Point of view

Key: B (Imagery)

104. [short · analysis · DOK 3] Claim: The river teaches Siddhartha that time is an illusion and that every stage of life is present at once. Explain how this evidence supports the claim: “But Siddhartha went outside and sat this night before the hut, listening to the river, surrounded by the past, touched and encircled by all times of his life at the same time.” (The Ferryman, paragraph 66).

    Sample answer: The evidence supports the claim: “But Siddhartha went outside and sat this night before the hut, listening to the river, surrounded by the past, touched and encircled by all times of his life at the same time.” (The Ferryman, paragraph 66). Sitting by the river, he is “encircled by all times of his life at the same time,” so his past is not gone but present around him, and every stage of his life exists at once, just as the river is present everywhere.

105. [short · synthesis · DOK 4] Synthesis: trace how the river as a teacher develops from By the River to The Ferryman. Use one quotation from each. Address one competing reading and answer it.

    Sample answer: The river moves from a promise to a lesson. In By the River it only hints at what it holds: “It seemed to him as if the river had something special to tell him, something he did not know yet, which was still awaiting him.” (By the River, paragraph 49). In The Ferryman Siddhartha has learned that lesson, and Vasudeva names it: “that there is only the present time for it, not the shadow of the past, not the shadow of the future?” (The Ferryman, paragraph 34). The secret that was “still awaiting him” turns out to be that only the present exists. A competing reading says the river teaches nothing; Siddhartha simply projects his own thoughts onto water. But Vasudeva hears the same thing independently, so the lesson is shared and tested, not private fancy.

106. [fill · recall · DOK 1] Fill in the blank with the word that fits: “rarely, Siddhartha succeeded in _____ him to speak.” Word bank: persuading, sneezing, baking, knitting

    Key: persuading

107. [fill · recall · DOK 1] Fill in the blank with the word that fits: “whose voice had _____ nations and had awoken hundreds of thousands” Word bank: admonished, melted, rusted, buried

    Key: admonished

108. [mc · recall · DOK 1] In the line “this water ran and ran, incessantly it ran”, what does “incessantly” most nearly mean?

    A. in a slow way
    B. in a peaceful way
    C. in an endless way
    D. in a playful way

    Key: C (in an endless way)

109. [mc · recall · DOK 1] In the line “But the boy started crying miserably”, what does “miserably” most nearly mean?

    A. in a very unhappy way
    B. in a happy way
    C. quietly
    D. proudly

    Key: A (in a very unhappy way)

110. [fill · recall · DOK 1] Complete the quotation from The Ferryman, paragraph 2: “Tenderly, he looked into the rushing water, into the transparent _____” Word bank: glass, mirror, green, gold

    Key: green

111. [mc · recall · DOK 1] Why is the ferryman astonished when Siddhartha arrives?

    A. He is riding a horse

    B. He has no shoes

    C. He is carrying a sleeping child on his back

    D. An elegant man is walking on foot

    Key: D (An elegant man is walking on foot)

112. [fill · recall · DOK 1] Complete the quotation from The Ferryman, paragraph 5: "Siddhartha recognised him, he had also _____ very much." Word bank: grown, aged, eaten, laughed

    Key: aged

113. [mc · inference · DOK 2] What does this passage most clearly show? "all voices of the creatures are in its voice." (The Ferryman, paragraph 38)

    A. Vasudeva is going deaf with age.

    B. Vasudeva hears every living thing in the river.

    C. The river is too loud to bear.

    D. Vasudeva fears the many creatures that live in the river.

    Key: B (Vasudeva hears every living thing in the river.)

114. [mc · inference · DOK 2] Which of these passages about Gotama comes last in The Ferryman?

    A. "Kindly he thought of him"

    B. "followers of Gotama, the Buddha"

    C. "She thought about her pilgrimage to Gotama"

    D. "on my way to the childlike people"

    Key: C ("She thought about her pilgrimage to Gotama")

115. [short · inference · DOK 3] What does Kamala's last look show? Use this line and one more quotation from the chapter. "Kamala never stopped looking into his eyes." (The Ferryman, paragraph 64)

    Sample answer: Kamala's last look shows that she finds in Siddhartha the peace she was seeking. The evidence is "Kamala never stopped looking into his eyes." (The Ferryman, paragraph 64). An earlier line explains why: "You have found peace?" (The Ferryman, paragraph 60). Her question shows that she sees in his face the peace she had set out to find in Gotama, so her last look rests on him.

116. [mc · inference · DOK 2] What does this passage most clearly show? "When the final pain filled her eyes and made them grow dim, when the final shiver ran through her limbs, his finger closed her eyelids." (The Ferryman, paragraph 64)

    A. Kamala falls into a deep sleep and wakes up the next morning healed.

    B. Siddhartha stays with Kamala to the very end of her life.

    C. Vasudeva closes Kamala's eyes for him.

    D. The boy runs away during the night.

    Key: B (Siddhartha stays with Kamala to the very end of her life.)

117. [short · inference · DOK 2] What can you infer from this line? "This is nothing for people wearing fine clothes." (The Ferryman, paragraph 11) Answer in two or three sentences with one detail.

    Sample answer: The ferryman judges Siddhartha by his rich clothes and doubts he could bear the work. The evidence is

"This is nothing for people wearing fine clothes." (The Ferryman, paragraph 11). The remark shows that Siddhartha still looks like a city merchant, which is why he wants to give the clothes away.

118. [mc · analysis · DOK 3] Which literary element does this describe in "The Ferryman"? Kamala sets out to see the dying Buddha but finds the peace she sought in Siddhartha's face instead.

    A. Onomatopoeia

    B. Irony

    C. Setting

    D. Alliteration

    Key: B (Irony)

119. [mc · analysis · DOK 3] In this chapter, which theme does the following most directly develop? "I, who have been rich and happy, have become even richer and happier now." (The Ferryman, paragraph 71)

    A. The pursuit of wealth

    B. The pain of fatherhood

    C. The fear of death

    D. Gain through loss

    Key: D (Gain through loss)

120. [short · synthesis · DOK 4] Synthesis: trace how Kamala's longing for peace develops from Sansara to The Ferryman. Use one quotation from each. Address one competing reading and answer it.

    Sample answer: Kamala's longing for peace moves from hope to fulfilment. In Sansara she wanted to hear of Gotama: "She had asked him to tell her about Gotama, and could not hear enough of him" (Sansara, paragraph 8). In The Ferryman, dying, she says: "I too will find peace." (The Ferryman, paragraph 62). A competing reading sees her journey as a failure, since the snake bite stops her before she ever reaches the dying Buddha. Yet she finds in Siddhartha's face the calm she set out to see in Gotama's, so the longing that began in her pleasure-garden is answered at the ferry rather than at the grove.

121. [fill · recall · DOK 1] Complete the quotation from The Ferryman, paragraph 64: "Kamala never stopped looking into his _____." Word bank: purse, hands, eyes, garden

    Key: eyes

122. [fill · recall · DOK 1] Complete the quotation from The Ferryman, paragraph 49: "just slowly she, realized her situation, remembered the bite, called timidly for the _____." Word bank: boy, river, debt, rope

    Key: boy

123. [mc · recall · DOK 1] What does Vasudeva tell Siddhartha about his own wife?

    A. She left him long ago for a rich merchant in the city

    B. She lives across the river

    C. He has not married

    D. She died long ago; he has lived alone since

    Key: D (She died long ago; he has lived alone since)

124. [mc · recall · DOK 1] What does Vasudeva do as the boat reaches the middle of the river?

    A. He stops rowing to rest

    B. He pushes the oar harder to overcome the current

    C. He asks Siddhartha to take the oar

    D. He turns the boat back toward the shore they left

Key: B (He pushes the oar harder to overcome the current)

125. [mc · recall · DOK 1] In the line “In ecstatic delight, he had spoken”, what does “ecstatic” most nearly mean?

A. calm; sleepy

B. bitter; angry

C. overjoyed; carried away

D. shy, nervous and uncertain

Key: C (overjoyed; carried away)

126. [fill · recall · DOK 1] Complete the quotation from The Ferryman, paragraph 1: “By this river I want to _____, thought Siddhartha” Word bank: stay, rust, melt, bark

Key: stay

127. [mc · recall · DOK 1] In the line “birthplace and childhood, all that learning, all that searching”, what does “birthplace” most nearly mean?

A. the place where one was born

B. a burial ground for the old dead

C. a holy temple

D. a market town

Key: A (the place where one was born)

128. [mc · inference · DOK 2] Which choice best states a central concern of “The Ferryman”?

A. Self-denial as a path

B. Learning to listen from the flowing river

C. The pain of a father's love

D. Wealth and its cost

Key: B (Learning to listen from the flowing river)

129. [mc · inference · DOK 2] What does this passage most clearly show? “Let us also build Kamala’s funeral pile on the same hill on which I had then built my wife’s funeral pile.” (The Ferryman, paragraph 72)

A. Vasudeva wants to forget his wife.

B. Vasudeva sees Kamala’s death as part of the same round as his wife’s.

C. Vasudeva is angry that Kamala died in his hut.

D. Vasudeva plans to leave the river after the funeral.

Key: B (Vasudeva sees Kamala’s death as part of the same round as his wife’s.)

130. [mc · inference · DOK 2] Which of these passages about recognition comes first in The Ferryman?

A. “Now I recognise you”

B. “Siddhartha recognised him”

C. “Instantly, I recognised you, Kamala, my dear.”

D. “By what do I still recognise that you’re Siddhartha?”

Key: B (“Siddhartha recognised him”)

131. [short · inference · DOK 2] What does this line show about how people respond to the Buddha’s coming death? “thus they flocked, like being drawn on by a magic spell, to where the great Buddha was awaiting his death” (The Ferryman, paragraph 43)

Sample answer: People are drawn to the dying Buddha as if they had no choice. The evidence is “thus they flocked, like being drawn on by a magic spell, to where the great Buddha was awaiting his death" (The Ferryman, paragraph 43). "Flocked" and "magic spell" make the crowds sound like birds pulled by a force, which shows how much his life meant to them and sets up Kamala's journey to him.

132. [mc · analysis · DOK 3] In this chapter, which theme does the following most directly develop? "Happily, Vasudeva's face was smiling, he bent over to Siddhartha and spoke the holy Om into his ear." (The Ferryman, paragraph 40)

    A. The secret language of ferrymen

    B. The duty to pray each day

    C. The rivalry between friends

    D. The oneness behind all things

    Key: D (The oneness behind all things)

133. [short · analysis · DOK 3] Analyze the word choice in "And the curious people laughed and were discussing how foolishly and gullibly the common people were spreading such empty rumours." (The Ferryman, paragraph 42). Pick two words and explain what they suggest.

    Sample answer: "And the curious people laughed and were discussing how foolishly and gullibly the common people were spreading such empty rumours." (The Ferryman, paragraph 42). "Curious" shows that the visitors come for a spectacle, not to learn, and "gullibly" turns their scorn back on themselves: they mock others for believing what they cannot see. Together the words show that the ferrymen's wisdom is invisible to people who come looking for magic.

134. [short · synthesis · DOK 4] Synthesis: trace how Siddhartha's relation to time develops from Sansara to The Ferryman. Use one quotation from each. Address one competing reading and answer it.

    Sample answer: Time moves from a slow loss to something overcome. In Sansara, "Years passed by; surrounded by the good life, Siddhartha hardly felt them fading away." (Sansara, paragraph 2). In The Ferryman, "The years passed by, and nobody counted them." (The Ferryman, paragraph 43). A competing reading finds the two passages alike, since in both he ignores the years. Yet in Sansara he fails to notice time while it ruins him, and at the river he lives beyond it, which is the river's lesson.

135. [short · synthesis · DOK 4] Close reading: how do the diction and syntax of "Until late at night, lasted his tale." (The Ferryman, paragraph 22) shape its meaning? Consider a second, competing reading.

    Sample answer: The inverted sentence puts the length of the telling first: "Until late at night, lasted his tale." (The Ferryman, paragraph 22). Ending on "his tale" makes his whole life a story told at last to a listener. A competing reading finds only a plain note of time. Yet the hours of telling show that Siddhartha needs to be heard, and Vasudeva's patience prepares the next lesson of the chapter, the art of listening.

Rigor version	Items (in order)	Mix
HS Sophomore	1, 2, 3, 4, 5, 6, 7, 8, 9, 10, 11, 12, 13, 14, 15	recall 10, inference 2, analysis 1, synthesis 2
HS Junior	16, 17, 18, 19, 20, 21, 22, 23, 24, 25, 26, 27, 28, 29, 30	recall 9, inference 3, analysis 2, synthesis 1
HS Senior	31, 32, 33, 34, 35, 36, 37, 38, 39, 40, 41, 42, 43, 44, 45	recall 9, inference 3, analysis 2, synthesis 1
AP	46, 47, 48, 49, 50, 51, 52, 53, 54, 55, 56, 57, 58, 59, 60	recall 7, inference 5, analysis 1, synthesis 2
College Freshman	61, 62, 63, 64, 65, 66, 67, 68, 69, 70, 71, 72, 73, 74, 75

		recall 7, inference 5, analysis 2, synthesis 1
College Sophomore	76, 77, 78, 79, 80, 81, 82, 83, 84, 85, 86, 87, 88, 89, 90	recall 7, inference 5, analysis 2, synthesis 1
College Junior	91, 92, 93, 94, 95, 96, 97, 98, 99, 100, 101, 102, 103, 104, 105	recall 7, inference 4, analysis 3, synthesis 1
College Senior	106, 107, 108, 109, 110, 111, 112, 113, 114, 115, 116, 117, 118, 119, 120	recall 7, inference 5, analysis 2, synthesis 1
Graduate / PhD	121, 122, 123, 124, 125, 126, 127, 128, 129, 130, 131, 132, 133, 134, 135	recall 7, inference 4, analysis 2, synthesis 2

Writing prompts (eleven rigor levels)

HS Sophomore (450 words; Dual Credit (Indiana College Core): ICC-WC-1.1, ICC-WC-1.3, ICC-WC-1.4, ICC-WC-1.5): Analyze how The Ferryman develops the idea of learning from the river. Make a precise claim, support it with at least three pieces of textual evidence, and explain how the author's use of symbolism and characterization shapes that idea. Address one possible counterclaim. (You are reading the English translation by Gunther Olesch, Anke Dreher, Amy Coulter, Stefan Langer and Semyon Chaichenets, so word-choice evidence is the translators' English.)

HS Junior (550 words; Dual Credit (Indiana College Core): ICC-WC-1.1, ICC-WC-1.3, ICC-WC-1.4, ICC-WC-1.5): Analyze how the structure of The Ferryman (where it begins, turns and ends) and its symbolism shape the reader's understanding of learning from the river. Identify one place where the text leaves matters uncertain and explain how that uncertainty adds to its meaning.

HS Senior (600 words; Dual Credit (Indiana College Core): ICC-WC-1.1, ICC-WC-1.3, ICC-WC-1.4, ICC-WC-1.5): Two readers disagree about what The Ferryman suggests about learning from the river. Lay out two plausible interpretations, weigh the evidence for each (including the chapter's symbolism and characterization), and argue for the stronger one in a sustained, well-organized essay.

AP (650 words; Dual Credit (Indiana College Core): ICC-WC-1.1, ICC-WC-1.3, ICC-WC-1.4, ICC-WC-1.5): Write a literary argument in which you analyze how Hermann Hesse uses symbolism in The Ferryman to complicate the reader's understanding of learning from the river. Develop a defensible thesis, select evidence purposefully, and explain how specific choices of diction and syntax create meaning.

College Freshman (1000 words; Dual Credit (Indiana College Core): ICC-WC-1.3, ICC-WC-1.5, ICC-WC-1.1): Situate The Ferryman within its historical and literary context and argue how the chapter's treatment of learning from the river responds to that context. Engage with at least one secondary perspective (a critic, historian or the author's own statements), integrate quotations smoothly, and cite in APA style.

College Sophomore (1250 words; Dual Credit (Indiana College Core): ICC-WC-1.1, ICC-WC-1.3, ICC-WC-1.4, ICC-WC-1.5): Read The Ferryman alongside the conventions of its genre and period. Argue how the chapter's handling of learning from the river follows or bends those conventions, using the symbolism as evidence, and test your reading against one published critic. Document two secondary sources in APA.

College Junior (1500 words; Dual Credit (Indiana College Core): ICC-WC-1.1, ICC-WC-1.3, ICC-WC-1.4, ICC-WC-1.5): Apply a named critical approach (for example formalist, historicist, feminist, psychoanalytic or ecocritical) to The Ferryman and its treatment of learning from the river. State your method, show what it reveals in the chapter's symbolism and characterization, and identify where the text resists it.

College Senior (2000 words; Dual Credit (Indiana College Core): ICC-WC-1.1, ICC-WC-1.3, ICC-WC-1.4, ICC-WC-1.5): Develop a research argument that reads The Ferryman as evidence for a larger claim about learning from the river in Siddhartha. Connect close reading of the chapter to the whole novel, engage at least four scholarly sources, and state precisely where your reading departs from theirs (Chicago style).

Graduate / PhD (2500 words; Dual Credit (Indiana College Core): ICC-WC-1.1, ICC-WC-1.3, ICC-WC-1.4, ICC-WC-1.5): Develop an original argument that reads The Ferryman as a hinge in the novel's larger treatment of learning from the river. Position your reading within a named critical conversation (for example formalist, historicist, psychoanalytic, feminist or postcolonial approaches), account for the textual history where relevant, and articulate the stakes of your intervention for scholarship on Siddhartha.

SAT-style questions

1. And the curious people laughed and were discussing how foolishly and gullibly the common people were spreading such empty rumours.

   As used in the text, what does the word “gullibly” most nearly mean?

   A. in a way too ready to believe things

   B. in a cruel and harsh way

   C. in a very slow way

   D. with great skill

2. “Now I recognise you,” he finally said. “At one time, you’ve slept in my hut, this was a long time ago, possibly more than twenty years ago, and you’ve been ferried across the river by me, and we parted like good friends. Haven’t you been a Samana? I can’t think of your name any more.”

   Which choice best states the central idea of this passage?

   A. The ferryman remembers Siddhartha from a crossing long ago

   B. Siddhartha has lost all memory of the river

   C. The ferryman refuses to carry a stranger

   D. Siddhartha asks to buy the ferryman’s boat

SAT key: 1. A (in a way too ready to believe things); 2. A (The ferryman remembers Siddhartha from a crossing long ago)

Lesson 11: The Son

Focus: the pain of a father's love

Objective: Students will analyze how characterization develops in “The Son” by writing a claim-evidence-reasoning paragraph that cites at least 2 quotations from the section, and will score at least 80% on the section quiz.

Standards: Dual Credit (Indiana College Core): ICC-WC-1.1, ICC-WC-1.3, ICC-WC-1.4, ICC-WC-1.5

Content note (family conflict, alcohol or drugs (mentioned)): Siddhartha's son rejects and robs him; the boy's insult “even if you’ve ten times been my mother’s fornicator!” (Hesse, 1922/2015, The Son, para. 21) is crude, not a slur. Siddhartha remembers the wish to die (The Son, para. 32). Reminder: recall the framing announcement (lesson 8, before “Sansara”); if this is weighing on you, talk to a school counselor or a trusted adult, or call or text 988, or chat at 988lifeline.org.
Student preview: Siddhartha's son rebels against him.
Suggested language: “Why can't Siddhartha teach his son what he learned?”

Teacher only · spoilers

Siddhartha's spoiled son, raised in wealth, despises the ferry life and his father's gentleness. Vasudeva advises letting the boy return to the world, but Siddhartha cannot let go. The son finally runs away, stealing the ferry money. Siddhartha follows to the city and stops at Kamala's old garden, realizing he must not pursue him. Vasudeva brings him home.

Background: This chapter reverses Chapter One: now Siddhartha is the father whose son leaves.

Significance: Siddhartha experiences foolish, painful love—the very attachment he once found childlike.

Lesson plan and lecture script (90 minutes)

0–8 min · Bell-ringer · You do (8 min)
Students write to the bell-ringer, then pair-share.
How does Siddhartha's situation mirror his own father's? Write for five minutes. Starters: I think... because... / This connects to love and attachment because.... Content note before we start: Siddhartha's son rebels against him.
Prompt: How does Siddhartha's situation mirror his own father's?
Sentence starters: I think… because… · This connects to love and attachment because…
Strong response: A strong response takes a position and anticipates this: a father's love becomes his "final wound."

8–18 min · Vocabulary with etymology notes · We do (10 min)
Five key words in context, with verified word histories.
Today's words: reciprocate — to return (a feeling); ranting — loud and angry; soiling — making dirty; burdening — weighing down with a load; exuberant — joyously unrestrained. "reciprocate": from Latin reciprocare (to move back and forth), from reciprocus (returning the same way).
Words: reciprocate: to return (a feeling) · ranting: loud and angry · soiling: making dirty · burdening: weighing down with a load · exuberant: joyously unrestrained

18–28 min · Background and context · I do (10 min)
Mini-lecture (read or adapt the script).
This chapter reverses Chapter One: now Siddhartha is the father whose son leaves. Siddhartha experiences foolish, painful love—the very attachment he once found childlike. Characterization: Siddhartha's son is spoiled and resentful; Siddhartha loves him blindly and cannot let him go. Irony: Siddhartha, who once could not love, now loves foolishly, like the childlike people. Dialogue: Vasudeva's questions ask Siddhartha to see his own youth in the boy. Watch for the son: the boy is Siddhartha's younger self returned: proud, restless, unwilling to be taught. When he runs away, Siddhartha is in his own father's place.

28–40 min · I do: modeled close reading · I do (12 min)
Model the close reading of the anchor quotation using the written think-aloud below.
First, meaning. I read "You cannot love" slowly and put it in my own words: Looking at his son, who reminds him of Kamala, Siddhartha remembers her telling him long ago that he could not love. Next, craft. I notice the remark is blunt and short, and it returns from the past just when he is suffering for love. The strongest word is "love": the word names exactly what he is now feeling for the first time, so her old judgment is being proved wrong and right at once. Then, effect. Why does Kamala's old remark come back to Siddhartha now? My answer: Kamala's old remark that he could not love comes back to Siddhartha now because he loves his son helplessly; the memory shows he has learned to love, and that love brings pain he cannot control.

> You cannot love (The Son, paragraph 17)

Think-aloud: First, meaning. I read "You cannot love" slowly and put it in my own words: Looking at his son, who reminds him of Kamala, Siddhartha remembers her telling him long ago that he could not love. Next, craft. I notice the remark is blunt and short, and it returns from the past just when he is suffering for love. The strongest word is "love": the word names exactly what he is now feeling for the first time, so her old judgment is being proved wrong and right at once. Then, effect. Why does Kamala's old remark come back to Siddhartha now? My answer: Kamala's old remark that he could not love comes back to Siddhartha now because he loves his son helplessly; the memory shows he has learned to love, and that love brings pain he cannot control.

40–55 min · We do: guided annotation · We do (15 min)
Guided analysis of a second quotation; expected answers given.
Ask: What words in this line stand out, and what do they suggest? Expected: Vasudeva's question implies that no one can be spared their own path; Siddhartha made his own mistakes and learned from them, so protecting his son would take away the only way to learn. Expected link: love and attachment, and the novel's claim about teaching versus experience. Ask: How does this line connect to love and attachment? Expected: A father's love becomes his "final wound." (Vasudeva's question: each must find his own way.)

> Would you actually believe that you had committed your foolish acts in order to spare your son from committing them too (The Son, paragraph 14)

Ask: What words in this line stand out, and what do they suggest?
Expected answer: Vasudeva's question implies that no one can be spared their own path; Siddhartha made his own mistakes and learned from them, so protecting his son would take away the only way to learn. Expected link: love and attachment, and the novel's claim about teaching versus experience.
Ask: How does this line connect to love and attachment?
Expected answer: A father's love becomes his "final wound." (Vasudeva's question: each must find his own way.)

55–70 min · You do: independent annotation · You do (15 min)
Independent annotation and a claim-evidence-reasoning paragraph (exemplar given).
Annotate the chapter for characterization, irony (three marks with a margin note each), then write one claim-evidence-reasoning paragraph: what does this chapter suggest about the pain of a father's love? Then start your writing prompt at your assigned level (HS Sophomore: Analyze how The Son develops the idea of the pain of a father's love. Make a precise claim, support it with at least three pieces of textual evidence, and explain how the author's use of characterization and irony shapes that idea. Address one possible counterclaim. (You are reading the English translation by Gunther Olesch, Anke Dreher, Amy Coulter, Stefan Langer and Semyon Chaichenets, so word-choice evidence is the translators' English.)) Exemplar: Siddhartha's love for his son repeats his father's love for him, showing the cycle of attachment. When the text says “Would you actually believe that you had committed your foolish acts in order to spare your son from committing them too” (The Son, paragraph 14), it shows this directly. Vasudeva asks whether he committed "foolish acts in order to spare your son from committing them too," reminding him that he, too, left his father.
Task: Annotate the chapter for characterization, irony (three marks with a margin note each), then write one claim-evidence-reasoning paragraph: what does this chapter suggest about the pain of a father's love? Then start your writing prompt at your assigned level (HS Sophomore: Analyze how The Son develops the idea of the pain of a father's love. Make a precise claim, support it with at least three pieces of textual evidence, and explain how the author's use of characterization and irony shapes that idea. Address one possible counterclaim. (You are reading the English translation by Gunther Olesch, Anke Dreher, Amy Coulter, Stefan Langer and Semyon Chaichenets, so word-choice evidence is the translators' English.))
Exemplar: Siddhartha's love for his son repeats his father's love for him, showing the cycle of attachment. When the text says “Would you actually believe that you had committed your foolish acts in order to spare your son from committing them too” (The Son, paragraph 14), it shows this directly. Vasudeva asks whether he committed "foolish acts in order to spare your son from committing them too," reminding him that he, too, left his father.

70–80 min · Discussion · We do (10 min)
Structured discussion from the 30 tiered questions, with facilitation notes.
Anchor question: How does Siddhartha's situation mirror his own father's? Ask: should Siddhartha let his son go? Compare with Chapter I.
Anchor question: How does Siddhartha's situation mirror his own father's?
Facilitation: Ask: should Siddhartha let his son go? Compare with Chapter I.

80–87 min · Exit ticket / chapter quiz · You do (7 min)
Chapter quiz in the app and an exit ticket (answer given).
Chapter quiz in the app, then: In one sentence, what does this chapter suggest about the pain of a father's love? Support it with one short quotation. Model answer: Siddhartha's love for his son repeats his father's love for him, showing the cycle of attachment. ("Would you actually believe that you had committed your foolish acts in order to spare your son from committing them too", The Son, paragraph 14). Accept any defensible claim backed by a quotation from the chapter; the answer key for the quiz is in the Quiz section.
Exit ticket: In one sentence, what does this chapter suggest about the pain of a father's love? Support it with one short quotation.
Answer: Model answer: Siddhartha's love for his son repeats his father's love for him, showing the cycle of attachment. ("Would you actually believe that you had committed your foolish acts in order to spare your son from committing them too", The Son, paragraph 14). Accept any defensible claim backed by a quotation from the chapter; the answer key for the quiz is in the Quiz section.

87–90 min · Closure · I do (3 min)
Summarize the lesson and preview the next reading.
Today we saw how characterization shapes the pain of a father's love. Key takeaway: a father's love becomes his "final wound."

Total: 90 minutes.

60-minute version of this lesson

Same script and content as above, with these timings (60 minutes).

Clock	Segment	Minutes	What to keep
0–5	Bell-ringer	5	Students write to the bell-ringer, then pair-share.
5–10	Vocabulary with etymology notes	5	Five key words in context, with verified word histories.
10–16	Background and context	6	Mini-lecture (read or adapt the script).
16–24	I do: modeled close reading	8	Model the close reading of the anchor quotation using the written think-aloud below.
24–34	We do: guided annotation	10	Guided analysis of a second quotation; expected answers given.
34–44	You do: independent annotation	10	Independent annotation and a claim-evidence-reasoning paragraph (exemplar given).

44–54	Discussion	10	Structured discussion from the 30 tiered questions, with facilitation notes.
54–58	Exit ticket / chapter quiz	4	Chapter quiz in the app and an exit ticket (answer given).
58–60	Closure	2	Summarize the lesson and preview the next reading.

Teacher analysis (spoilers)

Literary elements

- Characterization: Siddhartha's son is spoiled and resentful; Siddhartha loves him blindly and cannot let him go.
- Irony: Siddhartha, who once could not love, now loves foolishly, like the childlike people.
- Dialogue: Vasudeva's questions ask Siddhartha to see his own youth in the boy.

Themes and how they develop

- love and attachment: a father's love becomes his "final wound."

Symbols and motifs

- the son: the boy is Siddhartha's younger self returned: proud, restless, unwilling to be taught. When he runs away, Siddhartha is in his own father's place.

Key quotations (checked against the reading text)

- “Would you actually believe that you had committed your foolish acts in order to spare your son from committing them too” (The Son, paragraph 14) Vasudeva's question: each must find his own way.
- “You cannot love” (The Son, paragraph 17) Kamala's old words haunt him.
- “now he, Siddhartha, had also become completely a childlike person” (The Son, paragraph 17) His transformation.

Model claim-evidence-reasoning

Claim: Siddhartha's love for his son repeats his father's love for him, showing the cycle of attachment.
Evidence: “Would you actually believe that you had committed your foolish acts in order to spare your son from committing them too” (The Son, paragraph 14)
Reasoning: Vasudeva asks whether he committed "foolish acts in order to spare your son from committing them too," reminding him that he, too, left his father.

Passages referenced in this lesson (full text)

He took his hand from the shoulder of his son and went outside. Siddhartha wavered to the side, as he tried to walk. He put his limbs back under control, bowed to his father, and went to his mother to do as his father had said. (The Son of the Brahmin, paragraph 49)

Before the city, in a beautifully fenced grove, the traveller came across a small group of servants, both male and female, carrying baskets. In their midst, carried by four servants in an ornamental sedan-chair, sat a woman, the mistress, on red pillows under a colourful canopy. Siddhartha stopped at the entrance to the pleasure-garden and watched the parade, saw the servants, the maids, the baskets, saw the sedan-chair and saw the lady in it. Under black hair, which towered high on her head, he saw a very fair, very delicate, very smart face, a bright red mouth like a freshly cracked fig, eyebrows which were well tended and painted in a high arch, smart and watchful dark eyes, a clear, tall neck rising from a green and golden garment, resting fair hands, long and thin, with wide golden bracelets over the wrists. (Kamala, paragraph 16)

"I can think. I can wait. I can fast." (Kamala, paragraph 42)

"You are the best lover," she said thoughtfully, "I ever saw. You're stronger than others, more supple, more willing. You've learned my art well, Siddhartha. At some time, when I'll be older, I'd want to bear your child. And yet, my dear, you've remained a Samana, and yet you do not love me, you love nobody. Isn't it so?" (With the Childlike People, paragraph 46)

"It might very well be so," Siddhartha said tiredly. "I am like you. You also do not love—how else could you practise love as a craft? Perhaps people of our kind can't love. The childlike people can; that's their secret." (With the Childlike People, paragraph 47)

He had been captured by the world, by lust, covetousness, sloth, and finally also by that vice which he had used to despise and mock the most as the most foolish one of all vices: greed. Property, possessions, and riches also had finally captured him; they were no longer a game and trifles to him, had become a shackle and a burden. On a strange and devious way, Siddhartha had gotten into this final and most base of all dependencies, by means of the game of dice. It was since that time, when he had stopped being a Samana in his heart, that Siddhartha began to play the game for money and precious things, which he at other times only joined with a smile and casually as a custom of the childlike people, with an increasing rage and passion. He was a feared gambler, few dared to take him on, so high and audacious were his stakes. He played the game due to a pain of his heart, losing and wasting his wretched money in the game brought him an angry joy, in no other way he could demonstrate his disdain for wealth, the merchants' false god, more clearly and more mockingly. Thus he gambled with high stakes and mercilessly, hating himself, mocking himself, won thousands, threw away thousands, lost money, lost jewelry, lost a house in the country, won again, lost again. That fear, that terrible and petrifying fear, which he felt while he was rolling the dice, while he was worried about losing high stakes, that fear he loved and sought to always renew it, always increase it, always get it to a slightly higher level, for in this feeling alone he still felt something like happiness, something like an intoxication, something like an elevated form of life in the midst of his saturated, lukewarm, dull life. (Sansara, paragraph 6)

Now Siddhartha also got some idea of why he had fought this self in vain as a Brahmin, as a penitent. Too much knowledge had held him back, too many holy verses, too many sacrificial rules, to much self-castigation, so much doing and striving for that goal! Full of arrogance, he had been, always the smartest, always working the most, always one step ahead of all others, always the knowing and spiritual one, always the priest or wise one. Into being a priest, into this arrogance, into this spirituality, his self had retreated, there it sat firmly and grew, while he thought he would kill it by fasting and penance. Now he saw it and saw that the secret voice had been right, that no teacher would ever have been able to bring about his salvation. Therefore, he had to go out into the world, lose himself to lust and power, to woman and money, had to become a merchant, a dice-gambler, a drinker, and a greedy person, until the priest and Samana in him was dead. Therefore, he had to continue bearing these ugly years, bearing the disgust, the teachings, the pointlessness of a dreary and wasted life up to the end, up to bitter despair, until Siddhartha the lustful, Siddhartha the greedy could also die. He had died, a new Siddhartha had woken up from the sleep. He would also grow old, he would also eventually have to die, mortal was Siddhartha, mortal was every physical form. But today he was young, was a child, the new Siddhartha, and was full of joy. (By the River, paragraph 48)

"No, my dear, how should I be sad? I, who have been rich and happy, have become even richer and happier now. My son has been given to me." (The Ferryman, paragraph 71)

Timid and weeping, the boy had attended his mother's funeral; gloomy and shy, he had listened to Siddhartha, who greeted him as his son and welcomed him at his place in Vasudeva's hut. Pale, he sat for many days by the hill of the dead, did not want to eat, gave no open look, did not open his heart, met his fate with resistance and denial. (The Son, paragraph 1)

Siddhartha spared him and let him do as he pleased, he honoured his mourning. Siddhartha understood that his son did not know him, that he could not love him like a father. Slowly, he also saw and understood that the eleven-year-old was a pampered boy, a mother's boy, and that he had grown up in the habits of rich people, accustomed to finer food, to a soft bed, accustomed to giving orders to servants. Siddhartha understood that the mourning, pampered child could not suddenly and willingly be content with a life among strangers and in poverty. He did not force him, he did many a chore for him, always picked the best piece of the meal for him. Slowly, he hoped to win him over, by friendly patience. (The Son, paragraph 2)

Rich and happy, he had called himself, when the boy had come to him. Since time had passed on in the meantime, and the boy remained a stranger and in a gloomy disposition, since he displayed a proud and stubbornly disobedient heart, did not want to do any work, did not pay his respect to the old men, stole from Vasudeva's fruit trees, then Siddhartha began to understand that his son had not brought him happiness and peace, but suffering and worry. But he loved him, and he preferred the suffering and worries of love over happiness and joy without the boy. Since young Siddhartha was in the hut, the old men had split the work. Vasudeva had again taken on the job of the ferryman all by himself, and Siddhartha, in order to be with his son, did the work in the hut and the field. (The Son, paragraph 3)

For a long time, for long months, Siddhartha waited for his son to understand him, to accept his love, to perhaps reciprocate it. For long months, Vasudeva waited, watching, waited and said nothing. One day, when Siddhartha the younger had once again tormented his father very much with spite and an unsteadiness in his wishes and had broken both of his rice bowls, Vasudeva took in the evening his friend aside and talked to him. (The Son, paragraph 4)

"Pardon me," he said, "from a friendly heart, I'm talking to you. I'm seeing that you are tormenting yourself, I'm seeing that you're in grief. Your son, my dear, is worrying you, and he is also worrying me. That young bird is accustomed to a different life, to a different nest. He has not, like you, ran away from riches and the city, being disgusted and fed up with it; against his will, he had to leave all this behind. I asked the river, O friend, many times I have asked it. But the river laughs, it laughs at me, it laughs at you and me, and is shaking with laughter at our foolishness. Water wants to join water, youth wants to join youth, your son is not in the place where he can prosper. You too should ask the river; you too should listen to it!" (The Son, paragraph 5)

Vasudeva's smile flourished more warmly. "Oh yes, he too is called upon, he too is of the eternal life. But do we, you and me, know what he is called upon to do, what path to take, what actions to perform, what pain to endure? Not a small one, his pain will be; after all, his heart is proud and hard, people like this have to suffer a lot, err a lot, do much injustice, burden themselves with much sin. Tell me, my dear: you're not taking control of your son's upbringing? You don't force him? You don't beat him? You don't punish him?" (The Son, paragraph 8)

"I knew it. You don't force him, don't beat him, don't give him orders, because you know that 'soft' is stronger than 'hard,' water stronger than rocks, love stronger than force. Very good, I praise you. But aren't you mistaken in thinking that you wouldn't force him, wouldn't punish him? Don't you shackle him with your love? Don't you make him feel inferior every day, and don't you make it even harder on him with your kindness and patience? Don't you force him, the arrogant and pampered boy, to live in a hut with two old banana-eaters, to whom even rice is a delicacy, whose thoughts can't be his, whose hearts are old and quiet and beat in a different pace than his? Isn't he forced, isn't he punished by all this?" (The Son, paragraph 10)

Troubled, Siddhartha looked to the ground. Quietly, he asked: "What do you think I should do?" (The Son, paragraph 11)

Quoth Vasudeva: "Bring him into the city, bring him into his mother's house, there'll still be servants around, give him to them. And when there aren't any around any more, bring him to a teacher, not for the teachings' sake, but so that he shall be among other boys, and among girls, and in the world which is his own. Have you never thought of this?" (The Son, paragraph 12)

"You're seeing into my heart," Siddhartha spoke sadly. "Often, I have thought of this. But look, how shall I put him, who had no tender heart anyhow, into this world? Won't he become exuberant, won't he lose himself to pleasure and power, won't he repeat all of his father's mistakes, won't he perhaps get entirely lost in Sansara?" (The Son, paragraph 13)

Brightly, the ferryman's smile lit up; softly, he touched Siddhartha's arm and said: "Ask the river about it, my friend! Hear it laugh about it! Would you actually believe that you had committed your foolish acts in order to spare your son from committing them too? And could you in any way protect your son from Sansara? How could you? By means of teachings, prayer, admonition? My dear, have you entirely forgotten that story, that story containing so many lessons, that story about Siddhartha, a Brahmin's son, which you once told me here on this very spot? Who has kept the Samana Siddhartha safe from Sansara, from sin, from greed, from foolishness? Were his father's religious devotion, his teachers warnings, his own knowledge, his own search able to keep him safe? Which father, which teacher had been able to protect him from living his life for himself, from soiling himself with life, from burdening himself with guilt, from drinking the bitter drink for himself, from finding his path for himself? Would you think, my dear, anybody might perhaps be spared from taking this path? That perhaps your little son would be spared, because you love him, because you would like to keep him from suffering and pain and disappointment? But even if you would die ten times for him, you would not be able to take the slightest part of his destiny upon yourself." (The Son, paragraph 14)

Never before had Vasudeva spoken so many words. Kindly, Siddhartha thanked him, went troubled into the hut, could not sleep for a long time. Vasudeva had told him nothing, he had not already thought and known for himself. But this was a knowledge he could not act upon, stronger than the knowledge was his love for the boy, stronger was his tenderness, his fear to lose him. Had he ever lost his heart so much to something, had he ever loved any person thus, thus blindly, thus sufferingly, thus unsuccessfully, and yet thus happily? (The Son, paragraph 15)

Siddhartha could not heed his friend's advice, he could not give up the boy. He let the boy give him orders, he let him disregard him. He said nothing and waited; daily, he began the mute struggle of friendliness, the silent war of patience. Vasudeva also said nothing and waited, friendly, knowing, patient. They were both masters of patience. (The Son, paragraph 16)

At one time, when the boy's face reminded him very much of Kamala, Siddhartha suddenly had to think of a line which Kamala a long time ago, in the days of their youth, had once said to him. "You cannot love," she had said to him, and he had agreed with her and had compared himself with a star, while comparing the childlike people with falling leaves, and nevertheless he had also sensed an accusation in that line. Indeed, he had never been able to lose or devote himself completely to another person, to forget himself, to commit foolish acts for the love of another person; never he had been able to do this, and this was, as it had seemed to him at that time, the great distinction which set him apart from the childlike people. But now, since his son was here, now he, Siddhartha, had also become completely a childlike person, suffering for the sake of another person, loving another person, lost to a love, having become a fool on account of love. Now he too felt, late, once in his lifetime, this strongest and strangest of all passions, suffered from it, suffered miserably, and was nevertheless in bliss, was nevertheless renewed in one respect, enriched by one thing. (The Son, paragraph 17)

He did sense very well that this love, this blind love for his son, was a passion, something very human, that it was Sansara, a murky source, dark waters. Nevertheless, he felt at the same time, it was not worthless, it was necessary, came from the essence of his own being. This pleasure also had to be atoned for, this pain also had to be endured, these foolish acts also had to be committed. (The Son, paragraph 18)

Through all this, the son let him commit his foolish acts, let him court for his affection, let him humiliate himself every day by giving in to his moods. This father had nothing which would have delighted him and nothing which he would have feared. He was a good man, this father, a good, kind, soft man, perhaps a very devout man, perhaps a saint, all these were no attributes which could win the boy over. He was bored by this father, who kept him prisoner here in this miserable hut of his, he was bored by him, and for him to answer every naughtiness with a smile, every insult with friendliness, every viciousness with kindness, this very thing was the hated trick of this old sneak. Much more the boy would have liked it if he had been threatened by him, if he had been abused by him. (The Son, paragraph 19)

A day came, when what young Siddhartha had on his mind came bursting forth, and he openly turned against his father. The latter had given him a task, he had told him to gather brushwood. But the boy did not leave the hut, in stubborn disobedience and rage he stayed where he was, thumped on the ground with his feet, clenched his fists, and screamed in a powerful outburst his hatred and contempt into his father's face. (The Son, paragraph 20)

"Get the brushwood for yourself!" he shouted foaming at the mouth. "I'm not your servant. I do know, that you won't hit me, you don't dare; I do know, that you constantly want to punish me and put me down with your religious devotion and your indulgence. You want me to become like you, just as devout, just as soft, just as wise! But I, listen up, just to make you suffer, I'd rather become a highway-robber and murderer, and go to hell, than to become like you! I hate you, you're not my father, even if you've ten times been my mother's fornicator!" (The Son, paragraph 21)

Rage and grief boiled over in him, foamed at the father in a hundred savage and evil words. Then the boy ran away and only returned late at night. (The Son, paragraph 22)

But the next morning, he had disappeared. What had also disappeared was a small basket, woven out of bast of two colours, in which the ferrymen kept those copper and silver coins which they received as a fare. The boat had also disappeared, Siddhartha saw it lying by the opposite bank. The boy had ran away. (The Son, paragraph 23)

"I must follow him," said Siddhartha, who had been shivering with grief since those ranting speeches the boy had made yesterday. "A child can't go through the forest all alone. He'll perish. We must build a raft, Vasudeva, to get over the water." (The Son, paragraph 24)

"We will build a raft," said Vasudeva, "to get our boat back, which the boy has taken away. But him, you shall let run along, my friend, he is no child any more, he knows how to get around. He's looking for the path to the city, and he is right, don't forget that. He's doing what you've failed to do yourself. He's taking care of himself, he's taking his course. Alas, Siddhartha, I see you suffering, but you're suffering a pain at which one would like to laugh, at which you'll soon laugh for yourself." (The Son, paragraph 25)

Siddhartha did not answer. He already held the axe in his hands and began to make a raft of bamboo, and Vasudeva helped him to tie the canes together with ropes of grass. Then they crossed over, drifted far off their course, pulled the raft upriver on the opposite bank. (The Son, paragraph 26)

"Why did you take the axe along?" asked Siddhartha. (The Son, paragraph 27)

Vasudeva said: "It might have been possible that the oar of our boat got lost." (The Son, paragraph 28)

But Siddhartha knew what his friend was thinking. He thought, the boy would have thrown away or broken the oar in order to get even and in order to keep them from following him. And in fact, there was no oar left in the boat. Vasudeva pointed to the bottom of the boat and looked at his friend with a smile, as if he wanted to say: "Don't you see what your son is trying to tell you? Don't you see that he doesn't want to be followed?" But he did not say this in words. He started making a new oar. But Siddhartha bid his farewell, to look for the runaway. Vasudeva did not stop him. (The Son, paragraph 29)

When Siddhartha had already been walking through the forest for a long time, the thought occurred to him that his search was useless. Either, so he thought, the boy was far ahead and had already reached the city, or, if he should still be on his way, he would conceal himself from him, the pursuer. As he continued thinking, he also found that he, on his part, was not worried for his son, that he knew deep inside that he had neither perished nor was in any danger in the forest. Nevertheless, he ran without stopping, no longer to save him, just to satisfy his desire, just to perhaps see him one more time. And he ran up to just outside of the city. (The Son, paragraph 30)

When, near the city, he reached a wide road, he stopped, by the entrance of the beautiful pleasure-garden, which used to belong to Kamala, where he had seen her for the first time in her sedan-chair. The past rose up in his soul, again he saw himself standing there, young, a bearded, naked Samana, his hair full of dust. For a long time, Siddhartha stood there and looked through the open gate into the garden, seeing monks in yellow robes walking among the beautiful trees. (The Son, paragraph 31)

For a long time, he stood there, pondering, seeing images, listening to the story of his life. For a long time, he stood there, looked at the monks, saw young Siddhartha in their place, saw young Kamala walking among the high trees. Clearly, he saw himself being served food and drink by Kamala, receiving his first kiss from her, looking proudly and disdainfully back on his Brahmanism, beginning proudly and full of desire his worldly life. He saw Kamaswami, saw the servants, the orgies, the gamblers with the dice, the musicians, saw Kamala's songbird in the cage, lived through all this once again, breathed Sansara, was once again old and tired, felt once again disgust, felt once again the wish to annihilate himself, was once again healed by the holy Om. (The Son, paragraph 32)

After having been standing by the gate of the garden for a long time, Siddhartha realised that his desire was foolish, which had made him go up to this place, that he could not help his son, that he was not allowed to cling him. Deeply, he felt the love for the runaway in his heart, like a wound, and he felt at the same time that this wound had not been given to him in order to turn the knife in it, that it had to become a blossom and had to shine. (The Son, paragraph 33)

That this wound did not blossom yet, did not shine yet, at this hour, made him sad. Instead of the desired goal, which had drawn him here following the runaway son, there was now emptiness. Sadly, he sat down, felt something dying in his heart, experienced emptiness, saw no joy any more, no goal. He sat lost in thought and waited. This he had learned by the river, this one thing: waiting, having patience, listening attentively. And he sat and listened, in the dust of the road, listened to his heart, beating tiredly and sadly, waited for a voice. Many an hour he crouched, listening, saw no images any more, fell into emptiness, let himself fall, without seeing a path. And when he felt the wound burning, he silently spoke the Om, filled himself with Om. The monks in the garden saw him, and since he crouched for many hours, and dust was gathering on his gray hair, one of them came to him and placed two bananas in front of him. The old man did not see him. (The Son, paragraph 34)

From this petrified state, he was awoken by a hand touching his shoulder. Instantly, he recognised this touch, this tender, bashful touch, and regained his senses. He rose and greeted Vasudeva, who had followed him. And when he looked into Vasudeva's friendly face, into the small wrinkles, which were as if they were filled with nothing but his smile, into the happy eyes, then he smiled too. Now he saw the bananas lying in front of him, picked them up, gave one to the ferryman, ate the other one himself. After this, he silently went back into the forest with Vasudeva, returned home to the ferry. Neither one talked about what had happened today, neither one mentioned the boy's name, neither one spoke about him running away, neither one spoke about the wound. In the hut, Siddhartha lay down on his bed, and when after a while Vasudeva came to him, to offer him a bowl of coconut milk, he already found him asleep. (The Son, paragraph 35)

Vocabulary with etymology notes

Word	Definition (in this sentence)	In context	Word history
reciprocate (verb)	to return (a feeling)	For a long time, for long months, Siddhartha waited for his son to understand him, to accept his love, to perhaps reciprocate it.	"reciprocate": from Latin reciprocare (to move back and forth), from reciprocus (returning the same way). (Liber et Libri origin note, https://www.etymonline.com/word/reciprocate)
ranting (adjective)	loud and angry	"I must follow him," said Siddhartha, who had been shivering with grief since those ranting speeches the boy had made yesterday.
soiling (verb)	making dirty	Which father, which teacher had been able to protect him from living his life for himself, from soiling himself with life, from burdening himself with guilt, from drinking the bitter drink for himself, from finding his path for himself?
burdening (verb)	weighing down with a load	Which father, which teacher had been able to protect him from living his life for himself, from soiling himself with life, from burdening himself with guilt, from drinking the bitter drink for himself, from finding his path for himself?
exuberant (adjective)	joyously unrestrained	Won't he become exuberant, won't he lose himself to pleasure and power, won't he repeat all of his father's mistakes, won't he perhaps get entirely lost in Sansara?"

thumped (verb)	hit hard with a dull sound	But the boy did not leave the hut, in stubborn disobedience and rage he stayed where he was, thumped on the ground with his feet, clenched his fists, and screamed in a powerful outburst his hatred and contempt into his father's face.
humiliate (verb)	cause to feel shame; hurt the pride of	Through all this, the son let him commit his foolish acts, let him court for his affection, let him humiliate himself every day by giving in to his moods.	"humiliate": Origin: Late Latin humiliātus; earlier Latin humilis ("lowly"). (Liber et Libri origin note, https://en.wiktionary.org/wiki/humiliate#Etymology)
warnings (noun)	a message informing of danger	Were his father's religious devotion, his teachers warnings, his own knowledge, his own search able to keep him safe?
enriched (verb)	make better or improve in quality	Now he too felt, late, once in his lifetime, this strongest and strangest of all passions, suffered from it, suffered miserably, and was nevertheless in bliss, was nevertheless renewed in one respect, enriched by one thing.	"enriched": Origin of "enrich": Anglo-Norman enrichir. (Liber et Libri origin note, https://en.wiktionary.org/wiki/enrich#Etymology)
admonition (noun)	a gentle scolding or warning	By means of teachings, prayer, admonition?	"admonition": Origin: Old French amonicion; earlier Latin admonitio. (Liber et Libri origin note, https://en.wiktionary.org/wiki/admonition#Etymology)

Discussion questions

1. How does Siddhartha's situation mirror his own father's?
2. Where does characterization appear in this chapter, and what effect does it have? Point to one passage.
3. How does this chapter connect to the book's larger concern with love and attachment?

Tiered discussion questions (30: recall, inferential, evaluative)

Wait time after every question (3 s for DOK 1, 5 s for DOK 2, 8 to 10 s for DOK 3 and 4); think-pair-share on DOK 3 and 4; answer each response with a follow-up probe; close with student-generated questions. Focus sets by rigor level: HS Sophomore: 1, 2, 3, 4, 13, 14, 15, 16, 17, 23, 24, 25; HS Junior: 1, 2, 3, 14, 15, 16, 17, 18, 24, 25, 26, 27; HS Senior: 1, 2, 3, 15, 16, 17, 18, 25, 26, 27, 28, 29; AP: 1, 2, 16, 17, 18, 19, 20, 26, 27, 28, 29, 30; College Freshman: 1, 2, 17, 18, 19, 20, 21, 22, 27, 28, 29, 30; College Sophomore: 1, 2, 11, 18, 19, 20, 21, 22, 23, 28, 29, 30; College Junior: 1, 11, 12, 19, 20, 21, 22, 23, 24, 25, 29, 30; College Senior: 1, 11, 12, 13, 20, 21, 22, 23, 24, 25, 26, 30; Graduate / PhD: 1, 11, 12, 13, 21, 22, 23, 24, 25, 26, 27, 28

Literal / recall

1. Which line of Kamala's does Siddhartha remember when the boy's face reminds him of her? [DOK 1 · Cold call with support: call on a student by name, offering a sentence starter or rephrasing if needed · wait 3 s · Dual Credit

(Indiana College Core): ICC-WC-1.1, ICC-WC-1.3, ICC-WC-1.4, ICC-WC-1.5] Look for: "You cannot love"

Answer guidance: "'You cannot love,' she had said to him, and he had agreed with her" (The Son, paragraph 17).

2. What image does Vasudeva use for the boy's old life? [DOK 1 · Turn and Talk: students discuss briefly with a neighbor before answering · wait 3 s · Dual Credit (Indiana College Core): ICC-WC-1.1, ICC-WC-1.3, ICC-WC-1.4, ICC-WC-1.5] Look for: A young bird used to a different nest

   Answer guidance: A bird from another nest: "That young bird is accustomed to a different life, to a different nest." (The Son, paragraph 5)

3. What does the boy do after his outburst of rage? [DOK 1 · Cold call with support: call on a student by name, offering a sentence starter or rephrasing if needed · wait 3 s · Dual Credit (Indiana College Core): ICC-WC-1.1, ICC-WC-1.3, ICC-WC-1.4, ICC-WC-1.5] Look for: He runs away and returns late at night

   Answer guidance: He leaves and comes back only at night: "Then the boy ran away and only returned late at night." (The Son, paragraph 22)

4. What does Siddhartha ask Vasudeva when they set out with the raft? [DOK 1 · Turn and Talk: students discuss briefly with a neighbor before answering · wait 3 s · Dual Credit (Indiana College Core): ICC-WC-1.1, ICC-WC-1.3, ICC-WC-1.4, ICC-WC-1.5] Look for: Why he brought the axe

   Answer guidance: About the axe: "Why did you take the axe along?" asked Siddhartha. (The Son, paragraph 27)

5. What does Siddhartha feel at the garden gate instead of the goal he hoped for? [DOK 1 · Cold call with support: call on a student by name, offering a sentence starter or rephrasing if needed · wait 3 s · Dual Credit (Indiana College Core): ICC-WC-1.1, ICC-WC-1.3, ICC-WC-1.4, ICC-WC-1.5] Look for: Emptiness

   Answer guidance: Emptiness and sadness: "Instead of the desired goal, which had drawn him here following the runaway son, there was now emptiness." (The Son, paragraph 34)

6. Retell the three most important events of "The Son" in order, in one sentence each. [DOK 1 · Turn and Talk: students discuss briefly with a neighbor before answering · wait 3 s · Dual Credit (Indiana College Core): ICC-WC-1.1, ICC-WC-1.3, ICC-WC-1.4, ICC-WC-1.5] Look for: Siddhartha's spoiled son, raised in wealth, despises the ferry life and his father's gentleness. Vasudeva advises letting the boy return to the world, but Siddhartha cannot let go. The son finally runs away, stealing the ferry money. Siddhartha follows to the city and stops at Kamala's old garden, realizing he must not pursue him. Vasudeva brings him home.

   Answer guidance: The grieving boy refuses his father's patient love (The Son, paragraphs 1–4); Siddhartha rejects Vasudeva's advice to let him go (paragraphs 12–16); the boy rages, steals the fare money and runs away, and Siddhartha follows him to Kamala's garden and stops (paragraphs 20–33).

7. Which characters appear or are mentioned in "The Son"? Name two and one thing each says or does. [DOK 1 · Cold call with support: call on a student by name, offering a sentence starter or rephrasing if needed · wait 3 s · Dual Credit (Indiana College Core): ICC-WC-1.1, ICC-WC-1.3, ICC-WC-1.4, ICC-WC-1.5] Look for: Names and actions taken from the chapter; check against the teacher summary.

   Answer guidance: Two of: the son, who shouts "I'm not your servant" (paragraph 21); Vasudeva, who advises letting him go and goes with Siddhartha to the city (paragraphs 12, 35); Kamala, remembered at her garden gate (paragraph 31).

8. Where and when does "The Son" take place? Point to the line that tells you. [DOK 1 · Turn and Talk: students discuss briefly with a neighbor before answering · wait 3 s · Dual Credit (Indiana College Core): ICC-WC-1.1, ICC-WC-1.3, ICC-WC-1.4, ICC-WC-1.5] Look for: A place/time detail quoted from the chapter.

   Answer guidance: At the ferry over months, then the city road and Kamala's old garden: "For a long time, for long months, Siddhartha waited for his son to understand him" (The Son, paragraph 4)… and paragraph 31 for the garden.

9. Reread: "For a long time, for long months, Siddhartha waited for his son to understand him, to accept his love, to perhaps reciprocate it." What does "reciprocate" mean here, and what is literally happening in this line? [DOK 1 · Turn and Talk: students discuss briefly with a neighbor before answering · wait 3 s · Dual Credit (Indiana College Core): ICC-WC-1.1, ICC-WC-1.3, ICC-WC-1.4, ICC-WC-1.5] Look for: reciprocate: to return (a feeling).
   Answer guidance: "Reciprocate" here means: to return (a feeling). In The Son, paragraph 4, the word names his long waiting; literally, Siddhartha waits month after month for the boy to accept his love and return it, and it does not happen.
10. Reread: "'I must follow him,' said Siddhartha, who had been shivering with grief since those ranting speeches the boy had made yesterday." What does "ranting" mean here, and what is literally happening in this line? [DOK 1 · Turn and Talk: students discuss briefly with a neighbor before answering · wait 3 s · Dual Credit (Indiana College Core): ICC-WC-1.1, ICC-WC-1.3, ICC-WC-1.4, ICC-WC-1.5] Look for: ranting: loud and angry.
    Answer guidance: "Ranting" here means: loud and angry. In The Son, paragraph 24, Siddhartha has been "shivering with grief" since his son's raging speech; literally, he insists on following the boy who has run away with the boat.

Inferential / analytical

1. What does "The Son" suggest about the pain of a father's love? State the inference and the line that supports it. [DOK 2 · Think-Pair-Share: students think alone, discuss with a partner, then share with the class · wait 5 s · Dual Credit (Indiana College Core): ICC-WC-1.1, ICC-WC-1.3, ICC-WC-1.4, ICC-WC-1.5] Look for: A stated inference (for example, that a father's love is both foolish and necessary) backed by one located line, such as the one in The Son, paragraph 18.
   Answer guidance: The chapter suggests a father's love is both foolish and necessary. Support: "Nevertheless, he felt at the same time, it was not worthless, it was necessary, came from the essence of his own being." (The Son, paragraph 18)
2. Find one example of characterization in this chapter. What does it reveal that a plain statement would not? [DOK 2 · Follow-up: ask a probing question that builds on the previous answer · wait 5 s · Dual Credit (Indiana College Core): ICC-WC-1.1, ICC-WC-1.3, ICC-WC-1.4, ICC-WC-1.5] Look for: Look for what characters say, do and think, and how others react to them.
   Answer guidance: The boy is characterized at the funeral and after ("Pale, he sat for many days by the hill of the dead, did not want to eat" (The Son, paragraph 1)): grief and pride, shown in actions, explain his later rage better than a label would.
3. How does the irony in this chapter shape what we understand about the pain of a father's love? [DOK 3 · Think-Pair-Share: students think alone, discuss with a partner, then share with the class · wait 8 s · Dual Credit (Indiana College Core): ICC-WC-1.1, ICC-WC-1.3, ICC-WC-1.4, ICC-WC-1.5] Look for: Look for gaps between what characters expect or say and what is true.
   Answer guidance: The irony is that Siddhartha now lives what he left: like his own father, he cannot hold a son who wants to go, and like the childlike people, he is ruled by passion (The Son, paragraph 18).
4. In the passage that begins "For a long time, for long months, Siddhartha waited for his son to understand him, to accept his love, to perhaps reciprocate it.", why might Hesse have chosen these particular words? Pick two and explain their connotations. [DOK 2 · Follow-up: ask a probing question that builds on the previous answer · wait 5 s · Dual Credit (Indiana College Core): ICC-WC-1.1, ICC-WC-1.3, ICC-WC-1.4, ICC-WC-1.5] Look for:

Diction analysis of two words in the anchor passage.

Answer guidance: In The Son, paragraph 4, “for a long time, for long months” stretches the wait by repetition; “waited” makes his love passive and patient, which the boy reads as weakness.

5. What causes the main turn in “The Son”, and what effect is it likely to have on what follows? [DOK 2 · Follow-up: ask a probing question that builds on the previous answer · wait 5 s · Dual Credit (Indiana College Core): ICC-WC-1.1, ICC-WC-1.3, ICC-WC-1.4, ICC-WC-1.5] Look for: Siddhartha's spoiled son, raised in wealth, despises the ferry life and his father's gentleness. Vasudeva advises letting the boy return to the world, but Siddhartha cannot let go. The son finally runs away, stealing the ferry money. Siddhartha follows to the city and stops at Kamala's old garden,…

   Answer guidance: The cause is the boy’s outburst and flight (The Son, paragraphs 20–23). Effect: Siddhartha learns he cannot keep him (paragraph 33) and carries the wound into the next chapter.

6. How does “The Son” build on “The Ferryman”? Name one link of cause and effect. [DOK 3 · Think-Pair-Share: students think alone, discuss with a partner, then share with the class · wait 8 s · Dual Credit (Indiana College Core): ICC-WC-1.1, ICC-WC-1.3, ICC-WC-1.4, ICC-WC-1.5] Look for: A causal or structural link between this and the previous chapter.

   Answer guidance: Cause and effect: at the end of “The Ferryman” Kamala died and left the boy; here that gift becomes his deepest pain, “Rich and happy, he had called himself, when the boy had come to him.” (The Son, paragraph 3)

7. What can we infer about a character's motives from what they say and do here, as opposed to what they claim? [DOK 3 · Follow-up: ask a probing question that builds on the previous answer · wait 8 s · Dual Credit (Indiana College Core): ICC-WC-1.1, ICC-WC-1.3, ICC-WC-1.4, ICC-WC-1.5] Look for: An inference about motive supported by a quoted line.

   Answer guidance: Siddhartha claims patience, but his clinging shows need (“Siddhartha could not heed his friend’s advice, he could not give up the boy.” (The Son, paragraph 16)); the boy claims hatred, but grief for his mother drives it (paragraph 1).

8. The bell-ringer asked: “How does Siddhartha's situation mirror his own father's?” Now that we have read closely, how would you revise your first answer, and which line changed your mind? [DOK 2 · Think-Pair-Share: students think alone, discuss with a partner, then share with the class · wait 5 s · Dual Credit (Indiana College Core): ICC-WC-1.1, ICC-WC-1.3, ICC-WC-1.4, ICC-WC-1.5] Look for: A revised answer anchored in the text.

   Answer guidance: A revised answer should line up the two departures: Siddhartha left his father at night in “The Son of the Brahmin”; now his son leaves him the same way (The Son, paragraph 23), and he must accept it (paragraph 33).

9. Where does the theme of love and attachment appear most clearly in this chapter, and how does it connect to the rest of the book? [DOK 3 · Follow-up: ask a probing question that builds on the previous answer · wait 8 s · Dual Credit (Indiana College Core): ICC-WC-1.1, ICC-WC-1.3, ICC-WC-1.4, ICC-WC-1.5] Look for: A located moment where Siddhartha’s love for his son turns into clinging, linked to one earlier chapter.

   Answer guidance: The theme of love and attachment appears where he sees he cannot live for another: “he could not help his son, that he was not allowed to cling him” (The Son, paragraph 33).

10. Background: This chapter reverses Chapter One: now Siddhartha is the father whose son leaves. How does knowing this change the way you read one moment in the chapter? [DOK 3 · Think-Pair-Share: students think alone, discuss with a partner, then share with the class · wait 8 s · Dual Credit (Indiana College Core): ICC-WC-1.1, ICC-WC-1.3, ICC-WC-1.4, ICC-WC-1.5] Look for: A specific moment reread in light of the context.

    Answer guidance: Knowing the chapter reverses Chapter One lets students read the father’s side:

Siddhartha now feels what his father felt the night he stood in the chamber (compare paragraph 33 with "The Son of the Brahmin," paragraph 47).

Evaluative / synthesis / creative

1. A critic might argue: "Siddhartha experiences foolish, painful love—the very attachment he once found childlike." How far do you agree? Take a stand and defend it with two lines from the chapter. [DOK 3 · Four Corners: students move to the corner that matches their position and explain why · wait 8 s · ICC-WC-1.5] Look for: A defended position with evidence and one counterpoint.
   Answer guidance: Agree: he experiences the passion he despised (The Son, paragraph 18). A text counterpoint: he judges it "not worthless" and "necessary" in the same paragraph, so the chapter does not simply call it a fall.
2. Which character in this chapter acts most wisely, and which least? Judge them by a standard you name. [DOK 3 · Think-Pair-Share: students think alone, discuss with a partner, then share with the class · wait 8 s · ICC-WC-1.5] Look for: An evaluation using an explicit criterion and evidence.
   Answer guidance: With wisdom as letting go, Vasudeva is wisest (paragraph 12); Siddhartha least when he refuses that advice (paragraph 16), though the boy's theft (paragraph 23) is the least wise act.
3. Rewrite one moment of "The Son" from the point of view of a different character. What does the new angle reveal or hide about the pain of a father's love? [DOK 4 · Think-Pair-Share: students think alone, discuss with a partner, then share with the class · wait 8 s · ICC-WC-1.5] Look for: A rewrite that keeps the chapter's events accurate, speaks in the chosen character's voice, and ends with a sentence on what the new angle shows or hides.
   Answer guidance: The son's view of his outburst (The Son, paragraphs 20–22) works well: it shows how suffocating patience can feel and hides how much his father loves him.
4. Write three questions of your own about "The Son": one recall, one "why/how", and one "should/what if". Trade with a partner and answer theirs. [DOK 3 · Student-generated: students write and pose their own questions · wait 8 s · ICC-WC-1.5] Look for: Three questions at three levels, each answerable from the chapter, traded and answered with a line.
   Answer guidance: Example set: recall, 'What does the boy take?' (the fare basket and boat, paragraph 23); why/how, 'Why won't Siddhartha let him go?' (paragraph 18); what if, 'Should Siddhartha have taken him to the city?'
5. Connect this chapter to the search for self-knowledge: is the link strong or weak so far? What would Hesse need to show next to strengthen it? [DOK 4 · Socratic circle: an inner circle discusses while the outer circle listens and takes notes, then they switch · wait 8 s · ICC-WC-1.5] Look for: A judgment of thematic development across the work.
   Answer guidance: Strong: he learns about himself through love, not teaching (paragraph 18). Hesse needs to show the wound healing into insight, which "Om" does.
6. Is the characterization in this chapter effective, or does it feel heavy-handed? Evaluate it as a reader would in a review. [DOK 3 · Four Corners: students move to the corner that matches their position and explain why · wait 8 s · ICC-WC-1.5] Look for: An evaluative judgment with criteria and evidence.
   Answer guidance: Effective: the boy is drawn through actions and his outburst (paragraphs 1, 21). Some readers find the outburst exaggerated.
7. Compare how "The Son" treats the pain of a father's love with how another text, film or event you know treats a similar idea. What does Siddhartha see that the other misses? [DOK 4 · Socratic circle: an inner circle discusses while the outer circle listens and takes notes, then they switch · wait 8 s · ICC-WC-1.5] Look for: A cross-text synthesis.

Answer guidance: A comparison should name a story of a parent and a rebellious child and quote "he could not help his son, that he was not allowed to cling him" (The Son, paragraph 33); Siddhartha's case adds that he once did the same to his father.

8. Predict what "Om" will bring, using two clues from this chapter. After reading, evaluate your prediction. [DOK 3 · Think-Pair-Share: students think alone, discuss with a partner, then share with the class · wait 8 s · ICC-WC-1.5] Look for: A prediction or judgment justified with textual clues.
   Answer guidance: Clues: the wound has "not been given to him in order to turn the knife in it" (The Son, paragraph 33), and Vasudeva brings him home (paragraph 35). Prediction: he will turn his grief into understanding with the river's help.
9. Design a one-paragraph modern adaptation of this chapter (setting, characters, conflict). What must stay the same for it to still be about the pain of a father's love? [DOK 4 · Think-Pair-Share: students think alone, discuss with a partner, then share with the class · wait 8 s · ICC-WC-1.5] Look for: A modern setting, characters and conflict that keep the chapter's core idea, with the one element that must not change named.
   Answer guidance: A modern version keeps a wise, patient parent and a grieving, angry teenager who runs off. What must stay is the parent's realization that he cannot hold the child (paragraph 33).
10. What question would you most like to ask Hermann Hesse about this chapter, and what answer do you think the text itself gives? [DOK 4 · Student-generated: students write and pose their own questions · wait 8 s · ICC-WC-1.5] Look for: A student-generated question answered from evidence.
    Answer guidance: Example: 'Did Siddhartha fail as a father?' The text says his love was blind but necessary (The Son, paragraph 18).

Annotation focus

- Characterization: look for what characters say, do and think, and how others react to them (anchor passage in the We do segment)
- Also notice Irony: gaps between what characters expect or say and what is true
- Also notice Theme: statements or moments that connect to the book's big ideas

Chapter quiz: item bank (all eleven rigor versions)

1. [mc · recall · DOK 1] What does Vasudeva advise?
   A. Lock him up in the hut
   B. Punish him for running away
   C. Let the boy go into the world
   D. Send him to the monks in Gotama's grove

   Key: C (Let the boy go into the world)
2. [mc · recall · DOK 1] How does the son treat Siddhartha?
   A. With silence
   B. With contempt
   C. With love
   D. With fear and awe

   Key: B (With contempt)

3. [mc · recall · DOK 1] Which word completes this sentence from The Son, paragraph 2? “He did not force him, he did many a chore for him, _____ picked the best piece of the meal for him.”

   A. always

   B. sideways

   C. loudly

   D. backwards

   Key: A (always)

4. [fill · recall · DOK 1] Fill in the blank with the vocabulary word that fits: “Were his father’s religious devotion, his teachers _____, his own knowledge, his own search able to keep him safe?” Word bank: debts, warnings, salaries, robes

   Key: warnings

5. [fill · recall · DOK 1] Fill in the blank with the vocabulary word that fits: “But the boy did not leave the hut, in stubborn disobedience and rage he stayed where he was, _____ on the ground with his feet, clenched his fists, and screamed in a powerful outburst his hatred and contempt into his father’s face.” Word bank: danced, thumped, slept, knelt

   Key: thumped

6. [mc · recall · DOK 1] What is ironic about Siddhartha's pain?

   A. He forgets the boy and returns to the city of his youth

   B. He becomes rich from the ferry

   C. He is happy to be alone again

   D. He now feels the attachment he once called childlike

   Key: D (He now feels the attachment he once called childlike)

7. [mc · recall · DOK 1] Where does Siddhartha go in pursuit?

   A. To the mountains where the Samanas live

   B. To his father's house

   C. To the city and Kamala's old garden

   D. To Gotama's grove

   Key: C (To the city and Kamala's old garden)

8. [mc · recall · DOK 1] Which word completes this sentence from The Son, paragraph 5? “But the river laughs, it laughs at me, it laughs at you and me, and is shaking with laughter at our _____.”

   A. foolishness

   B. oars

   C. hut

   D. fare

   Key: A (foolishness)

9. [short · inference · DOK 2] What can you infer from this line? “You cannot love” (The Son, paragraph 17) Answer in two or three sentences with one detail.

   Sample answer: Kamala's old judgment of him returns to haunt Siddhartha. The evidence is “You cannot love” (The Son, paragraph 17). Kamala once told him he could not love, and now his anguish over his son proves that he finally can. The pain shows that he has entered the ordinary human feeling he once looked down on.

10. [mc · inference · DOK 2] Which of these passages comes earliest in The Son?
    A. “Pale, he sat for many days by the hill of the dead, did not want to eat, gave no open look, did not open his heart, met his fate with…”
    B. “gloomy and shy, he had listened to Siddhartha”
    C. “Siddhartha spared him and let him do as he pleased, he honoured his mourning.”
    D. “Siddhartha understood that his son did not know him, that he could not love him like a father.”

    Key: B (“gloomy and shy, he had listened to Siddhartha”)

11. [mc · inference · DOK 2] Which choice best states a central concern of “The Son”?
    A. The pain of a father's love
    B. Despair and renewal by the river
    C. Entering the city and learning love
    D. Detachment among the childlike people

    Key: A (The pain of a father's love)

12. [short · inference · DOK 2] What warning does Vasudeva give Siddhartha about his son? “Don’t you shackle him with your love?” (The Son, paragraph 10)

    Sample answer: Vasudeva warns that Siddhartha's love has become a chain that holds the boy against his will. The evidence is “Don’t you shackle him with your love?” (The Son, paragraph 10). The word “shackle” turns love into a prisoner's chain, and the question form lets Siddhartha reach the painful truth himself: by holding on he is hurting his son and must let him go.

13. [short · inference · DOK 2] What does Vasudeva mean, and how does it apply to Siddhartha's own past? “Who has kept the Samana Siddhartha safe from Sansara, from sin, from greed,…” (The Son, paragraph 14)

    Sample answer: “Who has kept the Samana Siddhartha safe from Sansara, from sin, from greed,…” (The Son, paragraph 14). No one could keep Siddhartha from his own mistakes, and no one can keep his son from his. Siddhartha once left his father and went through Sansara to learn; now his son must take his own path too.

14. [mc · analysis · DOK 3] Which literary element does this describe in “The Son”? Siddhartha's son is spoiled and resentful; Siddhartha loves him blindly and cannot let him go.
    A. Characterization
    B. Imagery
    C. Diction / vocabulary
    D. Hyperbole

    Key: A (Characterization)

15. [mc · analysis · DOK 3] Which literary element does this describe in “The Son”? The hut and the field by the river, where the two old men split the work and the boy refuses to settle.
    A. Allusion
    B. Setting
    C. Simile
    D. Point of view

    Key: B (Setting)

16. [mc · recall · DOK 1] How old is Siddhartha’s son when he comes to the river?
    A. Five

B. Sixteen

C. Eleven

D. Twenty

Key: C (Eleven)

17. [mc · recall · DOK 1] Where does the boy sit for many days after the funeral?

A. In the boat

B. In the city

C. By the hill of the dead

D. At the market in the city

Key: C (By the hill of the dead)

18. [mc · recall · DOK 1] Which word completes this sentence from The Son, paragraph 23? “What had also disappeared was a small basket, woven out of bast of two _____”

A. colours

B. rivers

C. flowers

D. animals

Key: A (colours)

19. [fill · recall · DOK 1] Complete the quotation from The Son, paragraph 8: “Oh yes, he too is called upon, he too is of the _____ life.” Word bank: brief, petty, eternal, wasted

Key: eternal

20. [mc · recall · DOK 1] What does the son steal?

A. The ferry money

B. Kamala's ring

C. Food and clothes from the hut

D. Siddhartha’s Samana robe

Key: A (The ferry money)

21. [fill · recall · DOK 1] Fill in the blank with the vocabulary word that fits: “Won’t he become _____, won’t he lose himself to pleasure and power, won’t he repeat all of his father’s mistakes, won’t he perhaps get entirely lost in Sansara?” Word bank: exuberant, wise, holy, calm

Key: exuberant

22. [mc · recall · DOK 1] How does Siddhartha’s son behave at Kamala’s funeral?

A. Laughing loudly

B. Timid and weeping

C. Angry and shouting

D. Calm and silent

Key: B (Timid and weeping)

23. [mc · recall · DOK 1] What does Siddhartha quietly ask Vasudeva after the warning about his son?

A. Where Kamala is buried

B. How to sell the boat

C. When the rains will come

D. What he should do

Key: D (What he should do)

24. [mc · inference · DOK 2] In paragraph 10, what does Vasudeva suggest when he asks whether Siddhartha is mistaken in thinking he does not force or punish the boy?

A. That Siddhartha should beat the boy

B. That Siddhartha's gentle love is itself a pressure on the boy

C. That the boy is happy at the ferry

D. That the boy should be sent to the Samanas

Key: B (That Siddhartha's gentle love is itself a pressure on the boy)

25. [mc · inference · DOK 2] Which of these passages comes last in The Son?

A. "The boy had ran away."

B. "They were both masters of patience."

C. "Slowly, he hoped to win him over"

D. "From this petrified state, he was awoken"

Key: D ("From this petrified state, he was awoken")

26. [short · inference · DOK 2] What does Vasudeva mean by this comparison? Use this line. "Water wants to join water, youth wants to join youth, your son is not in the place where he can prosper." (The Son, paragraph 5)

Sample answer: Vasudeva means that the boy belongs with people his own age, not with two old men. The evidence is "Water wants to join water, youth wants to join youth, your son is not in the place where he can prosper." (The Son, paragraph 5). Comparing the boy to water that flows toward water shows that leaving would be natural, so keeping him at the hut works against his nature.

27. [short · inference · DOK 2] How does Siddhartha try to win his son? Use this line. "Slowly, he hoped to win him over, by friendly patience." (The Son, paragraph 2)

Sample answer: Siddhartha tries to win his son through gentle patience, not force. The evidence is "Slowly, he hoped to win him over, by friendly patience." (The Son, paragraph 2). The words "slowly" and "patience" show that he is willing to wait a long time and hopes that kindness alone will change the boy.

28. [short · inference · DOK 2] What does Siddhartha's love for his son show about how he has changed? Use this line. "Had he ever lost his heart so much to something, had he ever loved any person thus, thus blindly, thus sufferingly, thus unsuccessfully, and yet thus happily?" (The Son, paragraph 15)

Sample answer: "Had he ever lost his heart so much to something, had he ever loved any person thus, thus blindly, thus sufferingly, thus unsuccessfully, and yet thus happily?" (The Son, paragraph 15). The answer to his question is no: he has never loved anyone this way. The repeated "thus" piles up blind, painful, failing love, yet ends on "happily," so he has become like the childlike people he once looked down on, able at last to give himself to another person.

29. [mc · analysis · DOK 3] In this chapter, which theme does the following most directly develop? Siddhartha feels the runaway boy in his heart as a wound that must become a blossom.

A. The search for self-knowledge

B. The unity of all things

C. Love and attachment

D. Experience versus teaching

Key: C (Love and attachment)

30. [mc · analysis · DOK 3] Which literary element does this describe in "The Son"? The boy's rage is shown through his actions: he thumps the ground, clenches his fists and screams.

    A. Characterization

    B. Onomatopoeia

    C. Alliteration

    D. Setting

    Key: A (Characterization)

31. [fill · recall · DOK 1] Fill in the blank with the word that fits: "The boat had also _____, Siddhartha saw it lying by the opposite bank." Word bank: disappeared, whispered, sung, painted

    Key: disappeared

32. [mc · recall · DOK 1] In the line "Then they crossed over, drifted far off their course, pulled the raft upriver on the opposite bank.", what does "drifted" most nearly mean?

    A. rowed hard against the strong wind

    B. carried along by the current

    C. sank slowly into the water

    D. waited quietly on the shore

    Key: B (carried along by the current)

33. [mc · recall · DOK 1] How do the old men split the work after the boy arrives?

    A. Siddhartha runs the ferry; Vasudeva cooks

    B. Vasudeva runs the ferry; Siddhartha works the hut and field

    C. They hire a servant for the field

    D. The boy takes over the ferry

    Key: B (Vasudeva runs the ferry; Siddhartha works the hut and field)

34. [fill · recall · DOK 1] Fill in the blank with the vocabulary word that fits: "Through all this, the son let him commit his foolish acts, let him court for his affection, let him _____ himself every day by giving in to his moods." Word bank: enrich, praise, reward, humiliate

    Key: humiliate

35. [mc · recall · DOK 1] Near the city, where does Siddhartha stop and stand for a long time?

    A. At the gate of his old merchant house

    B. By the entrance of Kamala's old pleasure-garden

    C. At the river crossing below the town

    D. Beside the temple of the Brahmins

    Key: B (By the entrance of Kamala's old pleasure-garden)

36. [mc · recall · DOK 1] Which word completes this sentence from The Son, paragraph 16? "daily, he began the mute struggle of friendliness, the silent _____ of patience."

    A. war

    B. spoon

    C. ladder

    D. pebble

    Key: A (war)

37. [fill · recall · DOK 1] Complete the quotation from The Son, paragraph 8: "Vasudeva's smile _____ more warmly." Word bank: faded, froze, flourished, hardened

    Key: flourished

38. [mc · recall · DOK 1] Who follows Siddhartha to the city and finds him?

    A. Vasudeva

    B. Govinda

    C. Kamaswami

    D. His son

    Key: A (Vasudeva)

39. [short · inference · DOK 2] What can you infer from this line? "Much more the boy would have liked it if he had been threatened by him, if he had been abused by him." (The Son, paragraph 19) Answer in two or three sentences with one detail.

    Sample answer: The boy does not want a gentle father; he wants one he can fight. The evidence is "Much more the boy would have liked it if he had been threatened by him, if he had been abused by him." (The Son, paragraph 19). Wishing to be "threatened" shows that Siddhartha's kindness feels to him like a trap, because it gives him nothing to push against.

40. [mc · inference · DOK 2] Why does the boy run away to the city?

    A. The city life is the world he belongs to

    B. He wants to find his old friend Govinda there

    C. He is looking for his grandfather

    D. Vasudeva has sent him away

    Key: A (The city life is the world he belongs to)

41. [mc · inference · DOK 2] Which of these passages comes first in The Son?

    A. "he honoured his mourning"

    B. "Never before had Vasudeva spoken so many words."

    C. "Rage and grief boiled over in him"

    D. "He sat lost in thought and waited."

    Key: A ("he honoured his mourning")

42. [short · inference · DOK 2] What does Vasudeva praise in Siddhartha's way with his son? Use this line. "water stronger than rocks, love stronger than force" (The Son, paragraph 10)

    Sample answer: Vasudeva praises Siddhartha for choosing gentleness over force. The evidence is "water stronger than rocks, love stronger than force" (The Son, paragraph 10). The comparison to water wearing down rock shows that softness can win in the end, though Vasudeva goes on to warn that love can bind as well.

43. [short · inference · DOK 2] How does Siddhartha judge his love for his son? Use this line. "this blind love for his son, was a passion, something very human" (The Son, paragraph 18)

    Sample answer: Siddhartha sees his love as a blind passion, yet also as something human he must accept. The evidence is "this blind love for his son, was a passion, something very human" (The Son, paragraph 18). The word "blind" admits its folly, while "very human" shows that he no longer stands above ordinary people.

44. [mc · analysis · DOK 3] In this chapter, which theme does the following most directly develop? "This pleasure also had to be atoned for, this pain also had to be endured" (The Son, paragraph 18)

    A. The joy of wealth

    B. The power of prayer

C. Suffering as part of life

D. The danger of rivers and floods

Key: C (Suffering as part of life)

45. [short · synthesis · DOK 4] Close reading: how do the diction and syntax of "Don't you make him feel inferior every day, and don't you make it even harder on him with your kindness and patience?" (The Son, paragraph 10) shape its meaning? Consider a second, competing reading.

Sample answer: Vasudeva's question turns Siddhartha's virtues against him: "Don't you make him feel inferior every day, and don't you make it even harder on him with your kindness and patience?" (The Son, paragraph 10). Placing "kindness and patience" at the end, after "inferior" and "harder," shows that even goodness can be a kind of pressure. A competing reading hears a harsh rebuke. But Vasudeva begins with open concern for his friend: "I'm seeing that you are tormenting yourself, I'm seeing that you're in grief." (The Son, paragraph 5). The question is a gentle invitation to see that the boy must be let go.

46. [mc · recall · DOK 1] Which word completes this sentence from The Son, paragraph 20? "he had told him to gather _____"

A. brushwood

B. seashells

C. coins

D. stones

Key: A (brushwood)

47. [fill · recall · DOK 1] Complete the quotation from The Son, paragraph 14: "By means of teachings, prayer, _____?" Word bank: admonition, gravel, plaster, sawdust

Key: admonition

48. [fill · recall · DOK 1] Complete the quotation from The Son, paragraph 14: "Brightly, the ferryman's smile _____ up;" Word bank: swam, lit, sang, ate

Key: lit

49. [mc · recall · DOK 1] At the garden gate, what brings Siddhartha back to his senses?

A. The barking of a dog

B. The voice of his son calling him

C. A tender, bashful touch he recognises at once

D. A monk ringing a bell

Key: C (A tender, bashful touch he recognises at once)

50. [mc · inference · DOK 2] Which of these passages about Vasudeva comes earliest in The Son?

A. "Vasudeva's smile flourished more warmly."

B. "Never before had Vasudeva spoken so many words."

C. "Vasudeva waited, watching"

D. "He rose and greeted Vasudeva"

Key: C ("Vasudeva waited, watching")

51. [mc · inference · DOK 2] Why does Siddhartha fear sending the boy to the city?

A. He thinks the city is too far

B. He has no servants there

C. He thinks the boy cannot read

D. He fears the boy will repeat his own mistakes

Key: D (He fears the boy will repeat his own mistakes)

52. [short · inference · DOK 2] What does Vasudeva mean about the runaway boy? Use this line. “He’s doing what you’ve failed to do yourself.” (The Son, paragraph 25)

Sample answer: Vasudeva means that the boy is finding his own way, as every person must. The evidence is “He’s doing what you’ve failed to do yourself.” (The Son, paragraph 25). The word “failed” gently points out that Siddhartha cannot let go, while the boy is already taking charge of his own life.

53. [short · inference · DOK 2] How does Siddhartha feel about his runaway son? Use this line. “Deeply, he felt the love for the runaway in his heart, like a wound” (The Son, paragraph 33)

Sample answer: Siddhartha’s love for his son has become a painful wound. The evidence is “Deeply, he felt the love for the runaway in his heart, like a wound” (The Son, paragraph 33). The simile shows that his love now hurts him, yet he keeps it, which shows how much he has changed from the man who could not love.

54. [short · inference · DOK 2] What can you infer from this line? “That this wound did not blossom yet, did not shine yet, at this hour, made him sad.” (The Son, paragraph 34) Answer in two or three sentences with one detail.

Sample answer: Siddhartha hopes his pain will one day become something good. The evidence is “That this wound did not blossom yet, did not shine yet, at this hour, made him sad.” (The Son, paragraph 34). The word “yet” shows that he expects the wound to blossom later, so his sadness is mixed with hope.

55. [mc · analysis · DOK 3] In this chapter, which theme does the following most directly develop? “Bring him into the city, bring him into his mother’s house” (The Son, paragraph 12)

A. The value of a good school

B. The beauty and comfort of city life

C. Letting go of those we love

D. Respect for one’s elders

Key: C (Letting go of those we love)

56. [mc · analysis · DOK 3] Which literary element does this describe in “The Son”? The boy shouts that he would rather become a robber than be devout and wise like his father, just as Siddhartha once left his own father.

A. Irony

B. Personification

C. Diction / vocabulary

D. Imagery

Key: A (Irony)

57. [mc · analysis · DOK 3] Which literary element does this describe in “The Son”? Vasudeva calls the boy a young bird used to a different nest.

A. Onomatopoeia

B. Setting

C. Dialogue

D. Metaphor

Key: D (Metaphor)

58. [short · analysis · DOK 3] Analyze the word choice in “now he, Siddhartha, had also become completely a childlike person” (The Son, paragraph 17). Pick two words and explain what they suggest.
    Sample answer: Siddhartha recognizes that he has become one of the people he once looked down on. The evidence is “now he, Siddhartha, had also become completely a childlike person” (The Son, paragraph 17). The words "completely" and "childlike" stress how fully he now shares the passions of the people he once pitied. Loving his son has made him one of them, not above them.

59. [short · synthesis · DOK 4] Synthesis: trace how love and attachment develops from Sansara to The Son. Use one quotation from each.
    Sample answer: Attachment moves from things to a person. In Sansara, “Property, possessions, and riches also had finally captured him; they were no longer a game and trifles to him, had become a shackle and a burden.” (Sansara, paragraph 6). In The Son he clings to the boy in the same way: “Nevertheless, he ran without stopping, no longer to save him, just to satisfy his desire, just to perhaps see him one more time.” (The Son, paragraph 30). The man who was once captured by riches is now captured by love.

60. [short · synthesis · DOK 4] Close reading: how do the diction and syntax of “Ask the river about it, my friend! Hear it laugh about it!” (The Son, paragraph 14) shape its meaning? Consider a second, competing reading.
    Sample answer: Vasudeva’s two exclamations turn advice into an invitation: “Ask the river about it, my friend! Hear it laugh about it!” (The Son, paragraph 14). The imperatives “Ask” and “Hear” send Siddhartha away from his worry toward listening, and the river’s “laugh” makes his fears seem small. A competing reading finds the laughter cruel toward a suffering father. Yet the laugh is gentle, the river’s way of reminding him that every life must take its own course.

61. [fill · recall · DOK 1 · Dual Credit (Indiana College Core): ICC-WC-1.5] Complete the quotation from The Son, paragraph 14: “Would you actually believe that you had committed your _____ acts in order to spare your son from committing them too” Word bank: foolish, purple, liquid, wooden
    Key: foolish

62. [fill · recall · DOK 1 · Dual Credit (Indiana College Core): ICC-WC-1.5] Fill in the blank with the word that fits: “From this _____ state, he was awoken by a hand touching his shoulder.” Word bank: gilded, painted, petrified, crowned
    Key: petrified

63. [mc · recall · DOK 1 · Dual Credit (Indiana College Core): ICC-WC-1.5] Where does Vasudeva advise sending the boy?
    A. To a monastery
    B. To the Samanas
    C. To his mother’s house in the city
    D. To his old friend Govinda

    Key: C (To his mother’s house in the city)

64. [mc · recall · DOK 1 · Dual Credit (Indiana College Core): ICC-WC-1.5] How far does Siddhartha run after his son?
    A. Only to the edge of the river
    B. All the way to Kamaswami’s house
    C. Up to just outside the city
    D. Into the forest of the Samanas

    Key: C (Up to just outside the city)

65. [mc · recall · DOK 1 · Dual Credit (Indiana College Core): ICC-WC-1.5] What does the boy shout when told to gather brushwood?

    A. That he is far too tired to work today

    B. That he is not Siddhartha's servant

    C. That he will go later

    D. That he is hungry

    Key: B (That he is not Siddhartha's servant)

66. [mc · inference · DOK 2 · Dual Credit (Indiana College Core): ICC-WC-1.5] What does Siddhartha realize at the gate of Kamala's garden?

    A. He should buy back the garden

    B. He must become a merchant again

    C. He will find his son hiding inside the garden

    D. He cannot help his son or cling to him

    Key: D (He cannot help his son or cling to him)

67. [mc · inference · DOK 2 · Dual Credit (Indiana College Core): ICC-WC-1.5] Which of these passages about the boy's anger comes last in The Son?

    A. "thumped on the ground with his feet"

    B. "Rage and grief boiled over in him"

    C. "met his fate with resistance and denial"

    D. "a proud and stubbornly disobedient heart"

    Key: B ("Rage and grief boiled over in him")

68. [short · inference · DOK 3 · Dual Credit (Indiana College Core): ICC-WC-1.5] What does Vasudeva advise Siddhartha to do with the boy? "bring him to a teacher, not for the teachings' sake, but so that he shall be among other boys, and among girls, and in the world which is his own" (The Son, paragraph 12) Answer by connecting it to one earlier chapter: quote a second passage and explain how the two passages together develop the idea.

    Sample answer: Vasudeva advises sending the boy back to the world of other young people. The evidence is "bring him to a teacher, not for the teachings' sake, but so that he shall be among other boys, and among girls, and in the world which is his own" (The Son, paragraph 12). The phrase "not for the teachings' sake" shows that Vasudeva expects no lesson to save the boy; he must live among his own kind. Siddhartha learned the same truth about himself by the river: "Now he saw it and saw that the secret voice had been right, that no teacher would ever have been able to bring about his salvation." (By the River, paragraph 48). Together the passages show that what was true of the father is true of the son: no teacher can give salvation, so the boy must be free to find his own way.

69. [short · inference · DOK 2 · Dual Credit (Indiana College Core): ICC-WC-1.5] How has Siddhartha's idea of happiness changed? Use this line. "But he loved him, and he preferred the suffering and worries of love over happiness and joy without the boy." (The Son, paragraph 3)

    Sample answer: Siddhartha no longer measures happiness by peace and joy. The evidence is "But he loved him, and he preferred the suffering and worries of love over happiness and joy without the boy." (The Son, paragraph 3). He chooses "the suffering and worries of love" over "happiness and joy," which shows that love now matters more to him than his own calm.

70. [mc · analysis · DOK 3 · Dual Credit (Indiana College Core): ICC-WC-1.5] Which literary element does this describe in "The Son"? Vasudeva urges Siddhartha to let the boy go, while Siddhartha insists on keeping him.

    A. Conflict

    B. Alliteration

    C. Setting

    D. Hyperbole

    Key: A (Conflict)

71. [mc · analysis · DOK 3 · Dual Credit (Indiana College Core): ICC-WC-1.5] In this chapter, which theme does the following most directly develop? "He's doing what you've failed to do yourself." (The Son, paragraph 25)

    A. Children must obey their fathers

    B. Failure cannot be forgiven

    C. Each person must find his own path

    D. Wealth decides one's fate

    Key: C (Each person must find his own path)

72. [short · analysis · DOK 3 · Dual Credit (Indiana College Core): ICC-WC-1.5] Analyze the word choice in "this tender, bashful touch" (The Son, paragraph 35). Pick two words and explain what they suggest.

    Sample answer: Vasudeva's care comes gently and without words. The evidence is "this tender, bashful touch" (The Son, paragraph 35). "Tender" shows his love for his friend, and "bashful" shows his modesty, as if he were shy of intruding, so the touch heals Siddhartha without any lecture.

73. [mc · analysis · DOK 3 · Dual Credit (Indiana College Core): ICC-WC-1.5] Which literary element does this describe in "The Son"? Siddhartha's love for his son is a wound that has not yet blossomed or begun to shine.

    A. Metaphor

    B. Plot

    C. Setting

    D. Alliteration

    Key: A (Metaphor)

74. [short · synthesis · DOK 4 · Dual Credit (Indiana College Core): ICC-WC-1.5] Synthesis: trace how Siddhartha's joy in his son develops from The Ferryman to The Son. Use one quotation from each.

    Sample answer: Siddhartha's joy in his son moves from gratitude to disappointment. In The Ferryman he says: "My son has been given to me." (The Ferryman, paragraph 71). In The Son, "Rich and happy, he had called himself, when the boy had come to him." (The Son, paragraph 3). The first passage welcomes the boy as a gift; the second looks back on that joy as a hope the boy has not fulfilled.

75. [short · synthesis · DOK 4 · Dual Credit (Indiana College Core): ICC-WC-1.5] Close reading: how do the diction and syntax of "You cannot love" (The Son, paragraph 17) shape its meaning? Consider a second, competing reading.

    Sample answer: Kamala's old words return to accuse him: "'You cannot love,' she had said to him, and he had agreed with her" (The Son, paragraph 17). The flat, three-word sentence once named his superiority, but the paragraph turns it around: "now he, Siddhartha, had also become completely a childlike person, suffering for the sake of another person, loving another person" (The Son, paragraph 17). A competing reading is that the line is still true, since his love for his son is possessive; the paragraph's "suffered miserably, and was nevertheless in bliss" supports reading it as real love bought with suffering.

76. [fill · recall · DOK 1] Fill in the blank with the word that fits: “Kindly, Siddhartha thanked him, went _____ into the hut, could not sleep for a long time.” Word bank: troubled, delighted, refreshed, amused

    Key: troubled

77. [mc · recall · DOK 1] Which word completes this sentence from The Son, paragraph 28? “It might have been possible that the _____ of our boat got lost.”

    A. oar

    B. song

    C. cloud

    D. debt

    Key: A (oar)

78. [fill · recall · DOK 1] Fill in the blank with the word that fits: “that the eleven-year-old was a _____ boy, a mother’s boy” Word bank: pampered, wooden, salty, rusted

    Key: pampered

79. [mc · recall · DOK 1] What do Siddhartha and Vasudeva say about the boy on their way home?

    A. They plan to search again tomorrow

    B. Nothing; neither one mentions him

    C. They blame each other for his flight

    D. They agree he will come back

    Key: B (Nothing; neither one mentions him)

80. [mc · inference · DOK 2] Which of these passages about waiting comes first in The Son?

    A. “with love and with friendly patience”

    B. “the silent war of patience”

    C. “He sat lost in thought and waited.”

    D. “For long months, Vasudeva waited”

    Key: D (“For long months, Vasudeva waited”)

81. [mc · inference · DOK 2] Early on, what does Siddhartha understand about his son?

    A. That the boy does not know him and cannot love him like a father

    B. That the boy will soon run back to the city

    C. That the boy wants to become a ferryman

    D. That the boy blames Vasudeva for his mother’s sudden death by the snake

    Key: A (That the boy does not know him and cannot love him like a father)

82. [short · inference · DOK 2] Why can’t Siddhartha act on what he knows? Use this line. “stronger than the knowledge was his love for the boy” (The Son, paragraph 15)

    Sample answer: Siddhartha cannot act because his love overpowers his wisdom. The evidence is “stronger than the knowledge was his love for the boy” (The Son, paragraph 15). Putting “stronger” first shows that love wins the struggle inside him, even though he knows Vasudeva is right.

83. [short · inference · DOK 2] Why does Siddhartha want to follow the boy? Use this line. “A child can’t go through the forest all alone.” (The Son, paragraph 24)

    Sample answer: Siddhartha wants to follow because he still sees his son as a helpless child. The evidence is “A child can’t go through the forest all alone." (The Son, paragraph 24). The word "child" shows his fear, though Vasudeva answers that the boy is no child any more.

84. [short · analysis · DOK 3] Analyze the word choice in "Rage and grief boiled over in him" (The Son, paragraph 22). Pick two words and explain what they suggest.
    Sample answer: The boy's feelings explode like a pot left on the fire. The evidence is "Rage and grief boiled over in him" (The Son, paragraph 22). Pairing "rage" with "grief" shows that his anger hides sorrow for his mother, and "boiled over" shows that he can no longer hold it in.

85. [mc · analysis · DOK 3] Which literary element does this describe in "The Son"? Vasudeva tells Siddhartha to ask the river and hear it laugh.
    A. Plot
    B. Setting
    C. Theme
    D. Personification

    Key: D (Personification)

86. [short · analysis · DOK 3] Claim: Siddhartha's love for his son repeats his father's love for him, showing the cycle of attachment. Explain how this evidence supports the claim: "Would you actually believe that you had committed your foolish acts in order to spare your son from committing them too?" (The Son, paragraph 14).
    Sample answer: Vasudeva asks: "Would you actually believe that you had committed your foolish acts in order to spare your son from committing them too?" (The Son, paragraph 14). The pairing of "committed" and "spare" is the point: Siddhartha's own mistakes were lived by him, and they cannot be lived on his son's behalf. Just as his father had to let him go, he is now repeating his father's hope of protecting a son, which shows the cycle of attachment.

87. [mc · analysis · DOK 3] In this chapter, which theme does the following most directly develop? "You too should ask the river; you too should listen to it!" (The Son, paragraph 5)
    A. The need for strict rules
    B. The danger of poverty
    C. Listening as the path to wisdom
    D. The pride of the ferryman

    Key: C (Listening as the path to wisdom)

88. [mc · analysis · DOK 3] Which literary element does this describe in "The Son"? Vasudeva says only that a part of the boat might have been lost, but his smile shows he means far more than he says.
    A. Personification
    B. Alliteration
    C. Hyperbole
    D. Irony

    Key: D (Irony)

89. [short · synthesis · DOK 4] Synthesis: trace how Kamala's charge that Siddhartha cannot love develops from With the Childlike People to The Son. Use one quotation from each.
    Sample answer: Kamala's charge moves from a truth Siddhartha accepts to one he outgrows. In With the Childlike People she says: "and yet you do not love me, you love nobody" (With the Childlike People, paragraph 46). In The Son he remembers that "he had agreed with her and had compared himself with a star" (The Son, paragraph 17). The first passage describes his coldness; the second recalls it at the moment he finally loves blindly, so her words have become untrue.

90. [short · synthesis · DOK 4] Close reading: how do the diction and syntax of "That young bird is accustomed to a different life, to a different nest." (The Son, paragraph 5) shape its meaning? Consider a second, competing reading.

    Sample answer: Vasudeva's image explains the boy's unhappiness gently: "That young bird is accustomed to a different life, to a different nest." (The Son, paragraph 5). The repeated "different" stresses that the boy belongs elsewhere, and "young bird" makes him fragile rather than wicked. A competing reading hears Vasudeva calling the boy spoiled and unfit for life by the river. Yet the words "different life" and "different nest" describe a difference of upbringing, not a fault, so the image argues that the boy must be allowed to go back to the world he knows.

91. [fill · recall · DOK 1] Fill in the blank with the word that fits: "this tender, _____ touch" Word bank: violent, bashful, greedy, careless

    Key: bashful

92. [mc · recall · DOK 1] Who lives in Kamala's old garden now?

    A. Kamaswami
    B. A new courtesan
    C. Monks of Gotama
    D. Siddhartha's son

    Key: C (Monks of Gotama)

93. [fill · recall · DOK 1] Fill in the blank with the word that fits: "I'm seeing that you are _____ yourself, I'm seeing that you're in grief." Word bank: tormenting, enjoying, praising, feeding

    Key: tormenting

94. [mc · recall · DOK 1] How does Vasudeva rouse Siddhartha at the garden gate?

    A. By calling his name
    B. By touching his shoulder
    C. By ringing a bell
    D. By splashing him with water

    Key: B (By touching his shoulder)

95. [mc · inference · DOK 2] What does Vasudeva say about the boy who has taken the boat?

    A. He must be punished when he is found
    B. He is right to look for the path to the city
    C. He will drown before he reaches the city
    D. He has stolen from them out of hunger

    Key: B (He is right to look for the path to the city)

96. [short · inference · DOK 3] What can you infer from this line? "This pleasure also had to be atoned for, this pain also had to be endured, these foolish acts also had to be committed." (The Son, paragraph 18) Answer by connecting it to one earlier chapter: quote a second passage and explain how the two passages together develop the idea.

    Sample answer: Siddhartha accepts that loving his son will cost him pain, and he takes that cost willingly. The evidence is "This pleasure also had to be atoned for, this pain also had to be endured, these foolish acts also had to be committed." (The Son, paragraph 18). The repeated "also had to" shows that he sees pleasure, pain and foolishness as parts of one necessary experience. Earlier he had judged himself unable to feel such love: “Perhaps people of our kind can’t love. The childlike people can; that’s their secret.” (With the Childlike People, paragraph 47). Together the passages show that the man who once stood apart from love now enters it fully, with its foolishness and its price.

97. [mc · inference · DOK 2] Which of these passages about the river comes last in The Son?

    A. “This he had learned by the river”

    B. “Ask the river about it, my friend!”

    C. “One day, the river shall also talk to him”

    D. “to get over the water”

    Key: A (“This he had learned by the river”)

98. [short · inference · DOK 3] What does Siddhartha realize at the garden gate? Use this line and one more quotation from the chapter. “that he could not help his son, that he was not allowed to cling him” (The Son, paragraph 33)

    Sample answer: Siddhartha realizes that he must let his son go. The evidence is “that he could not help his son, that he was not allowed to cling him” (The Son, paragraph 33). The realization had been coming in the forest: “the thought occurred to him that his search was useless” (The Son, paragraph 30). Together the passages show his love slowly accepting what his mind already knew.

99. [short · inference · DOK 2] How does the boy respond to his new life? Use this line. “met his fate with resistance and denial” (The Son, paragraph 1)

    Sample answer: The boy refuses to accept his new life by the river. The evidence is “met his fate with resistance and denial” (The Son, paragraph 1). The words “resistance” and “denial” show that he fights against his loss and against the father he does not know.

100. [mc · analysis · DOK 3] In this chapter, which theme does the following most directly develop? “I’m not your servant.” (The Son, paragraph 21)

    A. The life of servants

    B. The value of hard work

    C. A son’s rebellion against his father

    D. Loyalty to one’s master

    Key: C (A son’s rebellion against his father)

101. [short · analysis · DOK 3] Analyze the word choice in “the mute struggle of friendliness, the silent war of patience” (The Son, paragraph 16). Pick two words and explain what they suggest.

    Sample answer: Siddhartha’s gentleness is a hard fight. The evidence is “the mute struggle of friendliness, the silent war of patience” (The Son, paragraph 16). “Struggle” and “war” clash with “friendliness” and “patience,” showing how much effort his kindness costs him, while “mute” and “silent” show that the fight is never spoken.

102. [mc · analysis · DOK 3] Which literary element does this describe in “The Son”? Siddhartha tries to win his son with patience and gentleness, yet the boy would have liked threats and blows better.

    A. Setting

    B. Onomatopoeia

    C. Alliteration

    D. Irony

    Key: D (Irony)

103. [short · analysis · DOK 3] Claim: Vasudeva teaches Siddhartha more by showing than by telling. Explain how this evidence supports the claim: "And in fact, there was no oar left in the boat." (The Son, paragraph 29)
Sample answer: The evidence supports the claim because Vasudeva lets the missing oar speak for him: "And in fact, there was no oar left in the boat." (The Son, paragraph 29). He had only said the oar "might" be lost, and now the empty boat shows the boy's message plainly. The bare words "no oar left" make the lesson clear without any argument.

104. [mc · analysis · DOK 3] Which literary element does this describe in "The Son"? Vasudeva says water is stronger than rocks, meaning soft patience beats hardness.

A. Plot
B. Setting
C. Onomatopoeia
D. Metaphor

Key: D (Metaphor)

105. [short · synthesis · DOK 4] Synthesis: trace how letting go develops from The Son of the Brahmin to The Son. Use one quotation from each. Address one competing reading and answer it.
Sample answer: Letting go moves from a father's permission to a father's wound. In The Son of the Brahmin, Siddhartha's father releases him: "When you'll have found blissfulness in the forest, then come back and teach me to be blissful." (The Son of the Brahmin, paragraph 49). In The Son, Siddhartha must release his own son and feels the cost: "Deeply, he felt the love for the runaway in his heart, like a wound, and he felt at the same time that this wound had not been given to him in order to turn the knife in it, that it had to become a blossom and had to shine." (The Son, paragraph 33). The father's calm blessing becomes, for Siddhartha, a wound he must let "become a blossom." A competing reading says Siddhartha fails where his father succeeded, since he chases the boy to the city. But at the gate he stops, and the wound he accepts there is the same letting go, learned through pain rather than duty.

106. [fill · recall · DOK 1] Complete the quotation from The Son, paragraph 3: "Since young Siddhartha was in the hut, the old men had split the _____." Word bank: work, moon, song, cloud
Key: work

107. [fill · recall · DOK 1] Fill in the blank with the word that fits: "he shouted _____ at the mouth." Word bank: foaming, sneezing, baking, knitting
Key: foaming

108. [mc · recall · DOK 1] How does Vasudeva describe the boy's heart?

A. Soft and gentle
B. Proud and hard
C. Weak and sick
D. Empty and cold

Key: B (Proud and hard)

109. [fill · recall · DOK 1] Fill in the blank with the word that fits: "_____ and grief boiled over in him" Word bank: Joy, Rage, Peace, Hunger
Key: Rage

110. [mc · recall · DOK 1] What does a monk place in front of Siddhartha as he crouches at the garden gate?

A. A cup of water
B. Two bananas
C. A bowl of rice

D. A yellow robe

Key: B (Two bananas)

111. [mc · inference · DOK 2] Which of these passages about Kamala comes first in The Son?

A. “bring him into his mother’s house”

B. “when the boy’s face reminded him very much of Kamala”

C. “Timid and weeping, the boy had attended his mother’s funeral”

D. “receiving his first kiss from her”

Key: C (“Timid and weeping, the boy had attended his mother’s funeral”)

112. [short · inference · DOK 2] What does Siddhartha realize while searching the forest? Use this line. “the thought occurred to him that his search was useless” (The Son, paragraph 30)

Sample answer: Siddhartha realizes that chasing his son will not bring him back. The evidence is “the thought occurred to him that his search was useless” (The Son, paragraph 30). The word “useless” shows that he begins to see the truth of Vasudeva’s advice, even as he keeps walking toward the city.

113. [short · inference · DOK 2] What does this line show about Vasudeva’s concern? Use this line. “Never before had Vasudeva spoken so many words.” (The Son, paragraph 15)

Sample answer: Vasudeva is so worried for his friend that he breaks his usual silence. The evidence is “Never before had Vasudeva spoken so many words.” (The Son, paragraph 15). Because he usually listens rather than speaks, his long speech shows how serious the danger to Siddhartha has become.

114. [mc · analysis · DOK 3] Which literary element does this describe in “The Son”? Father and son wage a silent war: patience on one side, defiance on the other.

A. Conflict

B. Onomatopoeia

C. Setting

D. Alliteration

Key: A (Conflict)

115. [mc · analysis · DOK 3] In this chapter, which theme does the following most directly develop? “won’t he repeat all of his father’s mistakes” (The Son, paragraph 13)

A. The joy of a new start

B. The wisdom and innocence of children

C. The cycle of the generations

D. The power of teachers

Key: C (The cycle of the generations)

116. [short · analysis · DOK 3] Analyze the word choice in “a pampered boy, a mother’s boy” (The Son, paragraph 2). Pick two words and explain what they suggest.

Sample answer: The boy has been spoiled by a soft, rich life. The evidence is “a pampered boy, a mother’s boy” (The Son, paragraph 2). “Pampered” suggests luxury and indulgence, and “mother’s boy” shows how attached he was to Kamala, which explains why the simple life by the river feels like a punishment.

117. [mc · analysis · DOK 3] Which literary element does this describe in “The Son”? At Kamala’s old garden, Siddhartha sees his whole past rise up in pictures before him.

A. Imagery

B. Dialogue

C. Plot

D. Onomatopoeia

Key: A (Imagery)

118. [short · synthesis · DOK 4] Close reading: how do the diction and syntax of "he knew deep inside that he had neither perished nor was in any danger in the forest" (The Son, paragraph 30) shape its meaning? Consider a second, competing reading.
Sample answer: The calm "neither… nor" sentence quietly undoes the reason for his search: "he knew deep inside that he had neither perished nor was in any danger in the forest" (The Son, paragraph 30). "Deep inside" sets a knowing self against the anxious father who keeps running, and the balanced syntax sounds settled, not panicked. A competing reading takes it as wishful thinking. But the same paragraph says he was "not worried for his son", so the line shows that his search now serves his own need, not the boy's safety.

119. [short · synthesis · DOK 4] Close reading: how do the diction and syntax of "He was a good man, this father, a good, kind, soft man" (The Son, paragraph 19) shape its meaning? Consider a second, competing reading.
Sample answer: The sentence piles up praise that turns into a charge: "He was a good man, this father, a good, kind, soft man" (The Son, paragraph 19). The repeated "good" sounds admiring, but the list ends on "soft," and "this father" holds him at a distance, so we hear the boy's scorn. A competing reading takes the line as the narrator's simple praise. Yet in context it shows why the boy rejects him: goodness without force cannot win a proud heart.

120. [short · synthesis · DOK 4] Synthesis: trace how Siddhartha's patience develops from Kamala to The Son. Use one quotation from each. Address one competing reading and answer it.
Sample answer: Patience moves from a skill Siddhartha boasts of to a bond he shares. In Kamala he says: "I can think. I can wait. I can fast." (Kamala, paragraph 42). In The Son, he and Vasudeva wait for the boy: "They were both masters of patience." (The Son, paragraph 16). A competing reading says his patience now fails, since it does not win the boy. Yet the chapter shows that waiting, not winning, is the lesson, and the river will finish it.

121. [fill · recall · DOK 1] Complete the quotation from The Son, paragraph 17: "now he, Siddhartha, had also become _____ a childlike person" Word bank: completely, hardly, never, once
Key: completely

122. [fill · recall · DOK 1] Fill in the blank with the word that fits: "it was Sansara, a _____ source, dark waters"
Word bank: holy, golden, murky, pure
Key: murky

123. [mc · recall · DOK 1] Why does Vasudeva say he brought the axe?

A. To cut firewood

B. To fight off robbers in the forest

C. In case the oar was lost

D. To build a new hut

Key: C (In case the oar was lost)

124. [mc · recall · DOK 1] How does Siddhartha see his younger self in memory at the garden gate?

A. As a rich merchant

B. As a bearded, naked Samana

C. As a Brahmin priest

D. As a tired old ferryman by the river

Key: B (As a bearded, naked Samana)

125. [mc · recall · DOK 1] Which word completes this sentence from The Son, paragraph 3? “did not pay his respect to the old men, stole from Vasudeva’s _____ trees”

    A. shade

    B. oak

    C. pine

    D. fruit

    Key: D (fruit)

126. [mc · inference · DOK 2] What does Vasudeva predict for a boy with so proud and hard a heart?

    A. He will soon grow gentle and content at the river

    B. He will have to suffer and err a great deal

    C. He will become a famous teacher

    D. He will return to his father within a year

    Key: B (He will have to suffer and err a great deal)

127. [short · inference · DOK 4] What does Siddhartha fear for his son? “won’t he repeat all of his father’s mistakes, won’t he perhaps get entirely lost in Sansara?” (The Son, paragraph 13) Build a short argument from it: trace the idea across at least three chapters, this one and earlier ones, weigh one competing reading, and defend your position with evidence from each.

    Sample answer: Siddhartha fears that his son will fall into the same world that once held him. The evidence is “won’t he repeat all of his father’s mistakes, won’t he perhaps get entirely lost in Sansara?” (The Son, paragraph 13). He knows that world well: “Property, possessions, and riches also had finally captured him” (Sansara, paragraph 6). Yet by the river he saw that the fall had been necessary: “Therefore, he had to go out into the world, lose himself to lust and power, to woman and money, had to become a merchant, a dice-gambler, a drinker, and a greedy person, until the priest and Samana in him was dead.” (By the River, paragraph 48). Across Sansara, By the River and The Son, the father who learned through his own mistakes now wants to spare his son from them. A competing reading says his fear is simple love and therefore right. But his own history shows that the mistakes were the path, so the fear, however loving, works against the lesson his life has taught him.

128. [mc · inference · DOK 2] Which of these passages about the raft and boat comes last in The Son?

    A. “We must build a raft, Vasudeva”

    B. “there was no oar left in the boat”

    C. “began to make a raft of bamboo”

    D. “The boat had also disappeared”

    Key: B (“there was no oar left in the boat”)

129. [short · inference · DOK 3] What does Vasudeva mean, and how does it apply to Siddhartha's own past? “But even if you would die ten times for him, you would not be able to take the slightest part of his destiny upon yourself.” (The Son, paragraph 14) Answer by connecting it to one earlier chapter: quote a second passage and explain how the two passages together develop the idea.

    Sample answer: “But even if you would die ten times for him, you would not be able to take the slightest part of his destiny upon yourself.” (The Son, paragraph 14). No one can live another person's life. Siddhartha once left his own father to find his path; now his son must do the same. For example, Siddhartha’s own father released him: “When you’ll have found blissfulness in the forest, then come back and teach me to be blissful” (The Son of the Brahmin, paragraph 49). Set beside Vasudeva’s words, it shows that letting a son go is the lesson Siddhartha once benefited from and must now practise himself.

130. [short · analysis · DOK 3] Claim: Siddhartha's love for his son makes him like the childlike people. Explain how this evidence supports the claim: "let him court for his affection, let him humiliate himself every day by giving in to his moods" (The Son, paragraph 19)

    Sample answer: The evidence supports the claim because Siddhartha now behaves like the lovers he once pitied: "let him court for his affection, let him humiliate himself every day by giving in to his moods" (The Son, paragraph 19). The verbs "court" and "humiliate" show him begging for love, as childlike people do, and "every day" shows that he cannot stop.

131. [mc · analysis · DOK 3] In this chapter, which theme does the following most directly develop? "He sat lost in thought and waited." (The Son, paragraph 34)

    A. The weakness of old age

    B. The boredom and noise of city life

    C. Patience as a form of wisdom

    D. The danger of idleness

    Key: C (Patience as a form of wisdom)

132. [mc · analysis · DOK 3] Which literary element does this describe in "The Son"? Vasudeva's quiet, patient care for both father and son shows his wisdom without the narrator naming it.

    A. Onomatopoeia

    B. Alliteration

    C. Hyperbole

    D. Characterization

    Key: D (Characterization)

133. [mc · analysis · DOK 3] Which literary element does this describe in "The Son"? At the gate of Kamala's old pleasure-garden, Siddhartha stands for hours watching the monks inside.

    A. Setting

    B. Onomatopoeia

    C. Alliteration

    D. Hyperbole

    Key: A (Setting)

134. [short · synthesis · DOK 4] Synthesis: trace how the meaning of Kamala's garden develops from Kamala to The Son. Use one quotation from each. Address one competing reading and answer it.

    Sample answer: Kamala's garden moves from a gate into the world to a place of memory. In Kamala, Siddhartha first sees it: "Before the city, in a beautifully fenced grove, the traveller came across a small group of servants" (Kamala, paragraph 16). In The Son he stands "by the entrance of the beautiful pleasure-garden, which used to belong to Kamala" (The Son, paragraph 31). A competing reading treats the return to the garden as nostalgia, an old man mourning his pleasures. Yet he sees "monks in yellow robes walking among the beautiful trees" (The Son, paragraph 31) where he once saw Kamala, so the garden itself has turned from desire to renunciation, and the scene asks him to let go as the place has.

135. [short · synthesis · DOK 4] Close reading: how do the diction and syntax of "Rich and happy, he had called himself, when the boy had come to him." (The Son, paragraph 3) shape its meaning? Consider a second, competing reading.

    Sample answer: The inverted sentence puts the old joy first and then undercuts it: "Rich and happy, he had called himself, when the boy had come to him." (The Son, paragraph 3). Starting with "Rich and happy" recalls his own words to Vasudeva, while "had called himself" marks them as a claim now proved false. A competing reading takes the line as pure irony: the man who called himself rich is now robbed of his son and his peace. Yet the pluperfect "had called" looks back without contempt, and the pain the boy brings is the love Siddhartha once said he could not feel, so the old claim to riches is not simply mocked.

Rigor version	Items (in order)	Mix
HS Sophomore	1, 2, 3, 4, 5, 6, 7, 8, 9, 10, 11, 12, 13, 14, 15	recall 8, inference 5, analysis 2, synthesis 0
HS Junior	16, 17, 18, 19, 20, 21, 22, 23, 24, 25, 26, 27, 28, 29, 30	recall 8, inference 5, analysis 2, synthesis 0
HS Senior	31, 32, 33, 34, 35, 36, 37, 38, 39, 40, 41, 42, 43, 44, 45	recall 8, inference 5, analysis 1, synthesis 1
AP	46, 47, 48, 49, 50, 51, 52, 53, 54, 55, 56, 57, 58, 59, 60	recall 4, inference 5, analysis 4, synthesis 2
College Freshman	61, 62, 63, 64, 65, 66, 67, 68, 69, 70, 71, 72, 73, 74, 75	recall 5, inference 4, analysis 4, synthesis 2
College Sophomore	76, 77, 78, 79, 80, 81, 82, 83, 84, 85, 86, 87, 88, 89, 90	recall 4, inference 4, analysis 5, synthesis 2
College Junior	91, 92, 93, 94, 95, 96, 97, 98, 99, 100, 101, 102, 103, 104, 105	recall 4, inference 5, analysis 5, synthesis 1
College Senior	106, 107, 108, 109, 110, 111, 112, 113, 114, 115, 116, 117, 118, 119, 120	recall 4, inference 4, analysis 4, synthesis 3
Graduate / PhD	121, 122, 123, 124, 125, 126, 127, 128, 129, 130, 131, 132, 133, 134, 135	recall 5, inference 4, analysis 4, synthesis 2

Writing prompts (eleven rigor levels)

HS Sophomore (450 words; Dual Credit (Indiana College Core): ICC-WC-1.1, ICC-WC-1.3, ICC-WC-1.4, ICC-WC-1.5): Analyze how The Son develops the idea of the pain of a father's love. Make a precise claim, support it with at least three pieces of textual evidence, and explain how the author's use of characterization and irony shapes that idea. Address one possible counterclaim. (You are reading the English translation by Gunther Olesch, Anke Dreher, Amy Coulter, Stefan Langer and Semyon Chaichenets, so word-choice evidence is the translators' English.)

HS Junior (550 words; Dual Credit (Indiana College Core): ICC-WC-1.1, ICC-WC-1.3, ICC-WC-1.4, ICC-WC-1.5): Analyze how the structure of The Son (where it begins, turns and ends) and its characterization shape the reader's understanding of the pain of a father's love. Identify one place where the text leaves matters uncertain and explain how that uncertainty adds to its meaning.

HS Senior (600 words; Dual Credit (Indiana College Core): ICC-WC-1.1, ICC-WC-1.3, ICC-WC-1.4, ICC-WC-1.5): Two readers disagree about what The Son suggests about the pain of a father's love. Lay out two plausible interpretations, weigh the evidence for each (including the chapter's characterization and irony), and argue for the stronger one in a sustained, well-organized essay.

AP (650 words; Dual Credit (Indiana College Core): ICC-WC-1.1, ICC-WC-1.3, ICC-WC-1.4, ICC-WC-1.5): Write a literary argument in which you analyze how Hermann Hesse uses characterization in The Son to complicate the reader's understanding of the pain of a father's love. Develop a defensible thesis, select evidence purposefully, and explain how specific choices of diction and syntax create meaning.

College Freshman (1000 words; Dual Credit (Indiana College Core): ICC-WC-1.3, ICC-WC-1.5, ICC-WC-1.1): Situate The Son within its historical and literary context and argue how the chapter's treatment of the pain of a father's love responds to that context. Engage with at least one secondary perspective (a critic, historian or the author's own statements), integrate quotations smoothly, and cite in APA style.

College Sophomore (1250 words; Dual Credit (Indiana College Core): ICC-WC-1.1, ICC-WC-1.3, ICC-WC-1.4, ICC-WC-1.5): Read The Son alongside the conventions of its genre and period. Argue how the chapter's handling of the pain of a father's love follows or bends those conventions, using the characterization as evidence, and test your reading against one published critic. Document two secondary sources in APA.

College Junior (1500 words; Dual Credit (Indiana College Core): ICC-WC-1.1, ICC-WC-1.3, ICC-WC-1.4, ICC-WC-1.5): Apply a named critical approach (for example formalist, historicist, feminist, psychoanalytic or ecocritical) to The Son and its treatment of the pain of a father's love. State your method, show what it reveals in the chapter's characterization and irony, and identify where the text resists it.

College Senior (2000 words; Dual Credit (Indiana College Core): ICC-WC-1.1, ICC-WC-1.3, ICC-WC-1.4, ICC-WC-1.5): Develop a research argument that reads The Son as evidence for a larger claim about the pain of a father's love in Siddhartha. Connect close reading of the chapter to the whole novel, engage at least four scholarly sources, and state precisely where your reading departs from theirs (Chicago style).

Graduate / PhD (2500 words; Dual Credit (Indiana College Core): ICC-WC-1.1, ICC-WC-1.3, ICC-WC-1.4, ICC-WC-1.5): Develop an original argument that reads The Son as a hinge in the novel's larger treatment of the pain of a father's love. Position your reading within a named critical conversation (for example formalist, historicist, psychoanalytic, feminist or postcolonial approaches), account for the textual history where relevant, and articulate the stakes of your intervention for scholarship on Siddhartha.

SAT-style questions

1. Which father, which teacher had been able to protect him from living his life for himself, from soiling himself with life, from burdening himself with guilt, from drinking the bitter drink for himself, from finding his path for himself?

   As used in the text, what does the word “burdening” most nearly mean?

   A. loading down with a weight

   B. lifting up gently

   C. washing clean

   D. setting free

2. For a long time, for long months, Siddhartha waited for his son to understand him, to accept his love, to perhaps reciprocate it. For long months, Vasudeva waited, watching, waited and said nothing. One day, when Siddhartha the younger had once again tormented his father very much with spite and an unsteadiness in his wishes and had broken both of his rice bowls, Vasudeva took in the evening his friend aside and talked to him.

Which choice best states the central idea of this passage?

A. Siddhartha's patient waiting has failed, and Vasudeva finally speaks

B. Vasudeva is angry that the boy broke the rice bowls

C. The boy has already run away to the city

D. Siddhartha decides to punish his son

SAT key: 1. A (loading down with a weight); 2. A (Siddhartha's patient waiting has failed, and Vasudeva finally speaks)

Lesson 12: Om

Focus: hearing the many voices

Objective: Students will analyze how symbolism develops in “Om” by writing a claim-evidence-reasoning paragraph that cites at least 2 quotations from the section, and will score at least 80% on the section quiz.

Standards: Dual Credit (Indiana College Core): ICC-WC-1.1, ICC-WC-1.3, ICC-WC-1.4, ICC-WC-1.5

Teacher only · spoilers

Still aching for his son, Siddhartha sees his reflection resemble his own father and understands the circle of suffering. He confesses everything to Vasudeva, who leads him to listen; the river's voices—joy and sorrow, good and evil—blend into one word, Om. Siddhartha achieves serenity. Vasudeva, his work done, goes “into the forests,” “into the oneness” (Om, paragraph 24).

Background: Hesse blends Hindu and Buddhist ideas of unity with Western mysticism.

Significance: The climax: all opposites unite into one harmony, and the student becomes the master.

Lesson plan and lecture script (90 minutes)

0–8 min · Bell-ringer · You do (8 min)
Students write to the bell-ringer, then pair-share.
What does Siddhartha finally understand when he hears all the voices together? Write for five minutes. Starters: I think... because... / This connects to unity of opposites because....
Prompt: What does Siddhartha finally understand when he hears all the voices together?
Sentence starters: I think… because… · This connects to unity of opposites because…
Strong response: A strong response takes a position and anticipates this: all voices are one.

8–18 min · Vocabulary with etymology notes · We do (10 min)
Five key words in context, with verified word histories.
Today's words: blossomed — developed; grew and flourished; fateful — decided by fate; leading to an unhappy end; ferryboat — a boat that carries people across water; ripened — grew ripe; matured; nurtured — helped develop; helped grow. “ferryboat”: ferry, from Old English ferian "to carry, transport," + boat. “nurtured”: Origin of “nurture”: Old French norriture; earlier Late Latin nutritura (“nourishment”).
Words: blossomed: developed; grew and flourished · fateful: decided by fate; leading to an unhappy end · ferryboat: a boat that carries people across water · ripened: grew ripe; matured · nurtured: helped develop; helped grow

18–28 min · Background and context · I do (10 min)
Mini-lecture (read or adapt the script).
Hesse blends Hindu and Buddhist ideas of unity with Western mysticism. The climax: all opposites unite into one harmony, and the student becomes the master. Structure: The climax: Siddhartha listens to the river and hears all voices become Om. Characterization: Vasudeva, his work done, leaves for the forest. Imagery: Voices of joy, grief, longing, death blend into one. Watch for Om: the syllable that saved him at the river in "By the River" returns as the sum of all voices: the end of his search is the sound he began with as a Brahmin's son.

28–40 min · I do: modeled close reading · I do (12 min)
Model the close reading of the anchor quotation using the written think-aloud below.
First, meaning. I read "harmony, knowledge of the eternal perfection of the world, smiling, oneness" slowly and put it in my own words: Listening to the river's thousand voices become one word, Om, Siddhartha feels harmony, knowledge of the world's eternal perfection, smiling and oneness. Next, craft. I notice a list of abstract nouns with no verb, like a moment beyond time and action. The strongest word is "oneness": it names the unity he has been searching for since childhood. Then, effect. What does Siddhartha finally feel when he listens to the river? My answer: Siddhartha reaches enlightenment not through teaching but through listening; his suffering over his son has dissolved into acceptance of all things.

> harmony, knowledge of the eternal perfection of the world, smiling, oneness (Om, paragraph 3)

Think-aloud: First, meaning. I read "harmony, knowledge of the eternal perfection of the world, smiling, oneness" slowly and put it in my own words: Listening to the river's thousand voices become one word, Om, Siddhartha feels harmony, knowledge of the world's eternal perfection, smiling and oneness. Next, craft. I notice a list of abstract nouns with no verb, like a moment beyond time and action. The strongest word is "oneness": it names the unity he has been searching for since childhood. Then, effect. What does Siddhartha finally feel when he listens to the river? My answer: Siddhartha reaches enlightenment not through teaching but through listening; his suffering over his son has dissolved into acceptance of all things.

40–55 min · We do: guided annotation · We do (15 min)
Guided analysis of a second quotation; expected answers given.
Ask: What words in this line stand out, and what do they suggest? Expected: "Thousand voices" become "a single word": joy and grief, life and death are heard together. Om is "the perfection," not because suffering stops but because it is part of the whole. Expected link: unity of opposites, and the river as teacher. Ask: How does this line connect to unity of opposites? Expected: All voices are one. (The climax.)

> then the great song of the thousand voices consisted of a single word, which was Om: the perfection (Om, paragraph 17)

Ask: What words in this line stand out, and what do they suggest?
Expected answer: "Thousand voices" become "a single word": joy and grief, life and death are heard together. Om is "the perfection," not because suffering stops but because it is part of the whole. Expected link: unity of opposites, and the river as teacher.
Ask: How does this line connect to unity of opposites?
Expected answer: All voices are one. (The climax.)

55–70 min · You do: independent annotation · You do (15 min)
Independent annotation and a claim-evidence-reasoning paragraph (exemplar given).
Annotate the chapter for structure, characterization (three marks with a margin note each), then write one claim-evidence-reasoning paragraph: what does this chapter suggest about hearing the many voices? Then start your writing prompt at your assigned level (HS Sophomore: Analyze how Om develops the idea of hearing the many voices. Make a precise claim, support it with at least three pieces of textual evidence, and explain how the author's use of symbolism and imagery shapes that idea. Address one possible counterclaim. (You are reading the English translation by Gunther Olesch, Anke Dreher, Amy Coulter, Stefan Langer and Semyon Chaichenets, so word-choice evidence is the translators' English.)) Exemplar: Siddhartha's enlightenment comes from listening, not from teaching: he hears every voice of life as one. When the text says “then the great song of the thousand voices consisted of a single word, which was Om: the perfection” (Om, paragraph 17), it shows this directly. Only after his "final wound" does "the great song of the thousand voices" consist "of a single word, which was Om: the perfection," and he sees the same "oneness" in Vasudeva's smiling face.
Task: Annotate the chapter for structure, characterization (three marks with a margin note each), then write one claim-evidence-reasoning paragraph: what does this chapter suggest about hearing the many voices? Then start your writing prompt at your assigned level (HS Sophomore: Analyze how Om develops the idea of hearing the many voices. Make a precise claim, support it with at least three pieces of textual evidence, and explain how the author's use of symbolism and imagery shapes that idea. Address one possible counterclaim. (You are reading the English translation by Gunther Olesch, Anke Dreher, Amy Coulter, Stefan Langer and Semyon Chaichenets, so word-choice evidence is the translators' English.))
Exemplar: Siddhartha's enlightenment comes from listening, not from teaching: he hears every voice of life as one. When the text says “then the great song of the thousand voices consisted of a single word, which was Om: the perfection” (Om, paragraph 17), it shows this directly. Only after his "final wound" does "the great song of the thousand voices" consist "of a single word, which was Om: the perfection," and he sees the same "oneness" in Vasudeva's smiling face.

70–80 min · Discussion · We do (10 min)
Structured discussion from the 30 tiered questions, with facilitation notes.
Anchor question: What does Siddhartha finally understand when he hears all the voices together? Ask: how does Siddhartha's enlightenment compare with the Buddha's?
Anchor question: What does Siddhartha finally understand when he hears all the voices together?
Facilitation: Ask: how does Siddhartha's enlightenment compare with the Buddha's?

80–87 min · Exit ticket / chapter quiz · You do (7 min)
Chapter quiz in the app and an exit ticket (answer given).
Chapter quiz in the app, then: In one sentence, what does this chapter suggest about hearing the many voices? Support it with one short quotation. Model answer: Siddhartha's enlightenment comes from listening, not from teaching: he hears every voice of life as one. ("then the great song of the thousand voices consisted of a single word, which was Om: the perfection", Om, paragraph 17). Accept any defensible claim backed by a quotation from the chapter; the answer key for the quiz is in the Quiz section.
Exit ticket: In one sentence, what does this chapter suggest about hearing the many voices? Support it with one short quotation.
Answer: Model answer: Siddhartha's enlightenment comes from listening, not from teaching: he hears every voice of life as one. ("then the great song of the thousand voices consisted of a single word, which was Om: the perfection", Om, paragraph 17). Accept any defensible claim backed by a quotation from the chapter; the answer key for the quiz is in the Quiz section.

87–90 min · Closure · I do (3 min)
Summarize the lesson and preview the next reading.
Today we saw how structure shapes hearing the many voices. Key takeaway: all voices are one.

Total: 90 minutes.

60-minute version of this lesson

Same script and content as above, with these timings (60 minutes).

Clock	Segment	Minutes	What to keep
0–5	Bell-ringer	5	Students write to the bell-ringer, then pair-share.
5–10	Vocabulary with etymology notes	5	Five key words in context, with verified word histories.
10–16	Background and context	6	Mini-lecture (read or adapt the script).
16–24	I do: modeled close reading	8	Model the close reading of the anchor quotation using the written think-aloud below.
24–34	We do: guided annotation	10	Guided analysis of a second quotation; expected answers given.
34–44	You do: independent annotation	10	Independent annotation and a claim-evidence-reasoning paragraph (exemplar given).
44–54	Discussion	10

			Structured discussion from the 30 tiered questions, with facilitation notes.
54–58	Exit ticket / chapter quiz	4	Chapter quiz in the app and an exit ticket (answer given).
58–60	Closure	2	Summarize the lesson and preview the next reading.

Teacher analysis (spoilers)

Literary elements

- Structure: The climax: Siddhartha listens to the river and hears all voices become Om.
- Characterization: Vasudeva, his work done, leaves for the forest.
- Imagery: Voices of joy, grief, longing, death blend into one.
- Point of view: The narration slows and expands into one long listening; the reader hears the voices in the order Siddhartha does.

Themes and how they develop

- unity of opposites: all voices are one.

Symbols and motifs

- Om: the syllable that saved him at the river in “By the River” returns as the sum of all voices: the end of his search is the sound he began with as a Brahmin's son.

Key quotations (checked against the reading text)

- “then the great song of the thousand voices consisted of a single word, which was Om: the perfection” (Om, paragraph 17) The climax.
- “harmony, knowledge of the eternal perfection of the world, smiling, oneness” (Om, paragraph 3) Siddhartha's enlightenment in Vasudeva's face.
- “he understood them, he understood” (Om, paragraph 2) His new compassion for ordinary people.

Model claim-evidence-reasoning

Claim: Siddhartha's enlightenment comes from listening, not from teaching: he hears every voice of life as one.
Evidence: “then the great song of the thousand voices consisted of a single word, which was Om: the perfection” (Om, paragraph 17)
Reasoning: Only after his "final wound" does "the great song of the thousand voices" consist "of a single word, which was Om: the perfection," and he sees the same "oneness" in Vasudeva's smiling face.

Passages referenced in this lesson (full text)

> Once, Samanas had travelled through Siddhartha's town, ascetics on a pilgrimage, three skinny, withered men, neither old nor young, with dusty and bloody shoulders, almost naked, scorched by the sun, surrounded by loneliness, strangers and enemies to the world, strangers and lank jackals in the realm of humans. Behind them blew a hot scent of quiet passion, of destructive service, of merciless self-denial. (The Son of the Brahmin, paragraph 15)

The Buddha turned away, and his glance and half of a smile remained forever etched in Siddhartha's memory. (Gotama, paragraph 43)

"Yes," said the ferryman, "a very beautiful river, I love it more than anything. Often I have listened to it, often I have looked into its eyes, and always I have learned from it. Much can be learned from a river." (Kamala, paragraph 7)

"Surely. This too, I have learned from the river: everything is coming back! You too, Samana, will come back. Now farewell! Let your friendship be my reward. Commemorate me when you make offerings to the gods." (Kamala, paragraph 11)

Indeed his soul was not with the trade. The business was good enough to provide him with the money for Kamala, and it earned him much more than he needed. Besides from this, Siddhartha's interest and curiosity was only concerned with the people, whose businesses, crafts, worries, pleasures, and acts of foolishness used to be as alien and distant to him as the moon. However easily he succeeded in talking to all of them, in living with all of them, in learning from all of them, he was still aware that there was something which separated him from them and this separating factor was him being a Samana. He saw mankind going through life in a childlike or animallike manner, which he loved and also despised at the same time. He saw them toiling, saw them suffering, and becoming gray for the sake of things which seemed to him to entirely unworthy of this price, for money, for little pleasures, for being slightly honoured, he saw them scolding and insulting each other, he saw them complaining about pain at which a Samana would only smile, and suffering because of deprivations which a Samana would not feel. (With the Childlike People, paragraph 37)

Wondrous indeed was my life, so he thought, wondrous detours it has taken. As a boy, I had only to do with gods and offerings. As a youth, I had only to do with asceticism, with thinking and meditation, was searching for Brahman, worshipped the eternal in the Atman. But as a young man, I followed the penitents, lived in the forest, suffered of heat and frost, learned to hunger, taught my body to become dead. Wonderfully, soon afterwards, insight came towards me in the form of the great Buddha's teachings, I felt the knowledge of the oneness of the world circling in me like my own blood. But I also had to leave Buddha and the great knowledge. I went and learned the art of love with Kamala, learned trading with Kamaswami, piled up money, wasted money, learned to love my stomach, learned to please my senses. I had to spend many years losing my spirit, to unlearn thinking again, to forget the oneness. Isn't it just as if I had turned slowly and on a long detour from a man into a child, from a thinker into a childlike person? And yet, this path has been very good; and yet, the bird in my chest has not died. But what a path has this been! I had to pass through so much stupidity, through so much vices, through so many errors, through so much disgust and disappointment and woe, just to become a child again and to be able to start over. But it was right so, my heart says "Yes" to it, my eyes smile to it. I've had to experience despair, I've had to sink down to the most foolish one of all thoughts, to the thought of suicide, in order to be able to experience divine grace, to hear Om again, to be able to sleep properly and awake properly again. I had to become a fool, to find Atman in me again. I had to sin, to be able to live again. Where else might my path lead me to? It is foolish, this path, it moves in loops, perhaps it is going around in a circle. Let it go as it likes, I want to take it. (By the River, paragraph 42)

Vasudeva listened with great attention. Listening carefully, he let everything enter his mind, birthplace and childhood, all that learning, all that searching, all joy, all distress. This was among the ferryman's virtues one of the greatest: like only a few, he knew how to listen. Without him having spoken a word, the speaker sensed how Vasudeva let his words enter his mind, quiet, open, waiting, how he did not lose a single one, awaited not a single one with impatience, did not add his praise or rebuke, was just listening. Siddhartha felt, what a happy fortune it is, to confess to such a listener, to bury in his heart his own life, his own search, his own suffering. (The Ferryman, paragraph 23)

"This it is," said Siddhartha. "And when I had learned it, I looked at my life, and it was also a river, and the boy Siddhartha was only separated from the man Siddhartha and from the old man Siddhartha by a shadow, not by something real. Also, Siddhartha's previous births were no past, and his death and his return to Brahma was no future. Nothing was, nothing will be; everything is, everything has existence and is present." (The Ferryman, paragraph 35)

"Pardon me," he said, "from a friendly heart, I'm talking to you. I'm seeing that you are tormenting yourself, I'm seeing that you're in grief. Your son, my dear, is worrying you, and he is also worrying me. That young bird is accustomed to a different life, to a different nest. He has not, like you, ran away from riches and the city, being disgusted and fed up with it; against his will, he had to leave all this behind. I asked the river, O friend, many times I have asked it. But the river laughs, it laughs at me, it laughs at you and me, and is shaking with laughter at our foolishness. Water wants to join water, youth wants to join youth, your son is not in the place where he can prosper. You too should ask the river; you too should listen to it!" (The Son, paragraph 5)

Brightly, the ferryman's smile lit up; softly, he touched Siddhartha's arm and said: "Ask the river about it, my friend! Hear it laugh about it! Would you actually believe that you had committed your foolish acts in order to spare your son from committing them too? And could you in any way protect your son from Sansara? How could you? By means of teachings, prayer, admonition? My dear, have you entirely forgotten that story, that story containing so many lessons, that story about Siddhartha, a Brahmin's son, which you once told me here on this very spot? Who has kept the Samana Siddhartha safe from Sansara, from sin, from greed, from foolishness? Were his father's religious devotion, his teachers warnings, his own knowledge, his own search able to keep him safe? Which father, which teacher had been able to protect him from living his life for himself, from soiling himself with life, from burdening himself with guilt, from drinking the bitter drink for himself, from finding his path for himself? Would you think, my dear, anybody might perhaps be spared from taking this path? That perhaps your little son would be spared, because you love him, because you would like to keep him from suffering and pain and disappointment? But even if you would die ten times for him, you would not be able to take the slightest part of his destiny upon yourself." (The Son, paragraph 14)

At one time, when the boy's face reminded him very much of Kamala, Siddhartha suddenly had to think of a line which Kamala a long time ago, in the days of their youth, had once said to him. "You cannot love," she had said to him, and he had agreed with her and had compared himself with a star, while comparing the childlike people with falling leaves, and nevertheless he had also sensed an accusation in that line. Indeed, he had never been able to lose or devote himself completely to another person, to forget himself, to commit foolish acts for the love of another person; never he had been able to do this, and this was, as it had seemed to him at that time, the great distinction which set him apart from the childlike people. But now, since his son was here, now he, Siddhartha, had also become completely a childlike person, suffering for the sake of another person, loving another person, lost to a love, having become a fool on account of love. Now he too felt, late, once in his lifetime, this strongest and strangest of all passions, suffered from it, suffered miserably, and was nevertheless in bliss, was nevertheless renewed in one respect, enriched by one thing. (The Son, paragraph 17)

After having been standing by the gate of the garden for a long time, Siddhartha realised that his desire was foolish, which had made him go up to this place, that he could not help his son, that he was not allowed to cling him. Deeply, he felt the love for the runaway in his heart, like a wound, and he felt at the same time that this wound had not been given to him in order to turn the knife in it, that it had to become a blossom and had to shine. (The Son, paragraph 33)

That this wound did not blossom yet, did not shine yet, at this hour, made him sad. Instead of the desired goal, which had drawn him here following the runaway son, there was now emptiness. Sadly, he sat down, felt something dying in his heart, experienced emptiness, saw no joy any more, no goal. He sat lost in thought and waited. This he had learned by the river, this one thing: waiting, having patience, listening attentively. And he sat and listened, in the dust of the road, listened to his heart, beating tiredly and sadly, waited for a voice. Many an hour he crouched, listening, saw no images any more, fell into emptiness, let himself fall, without seeing a path. And when he felt the wound burning, he silently spoke the Om, filled himself with Om. The monks in the garden saw him, and since he crouched for many hours, and dust was gathering on his gray hair, one of them came to him and placed two bananas in front of him. The old man did not see him. (The Son, paragraph 34)

For a long time, the wound continued to burn. Many a traveller Siddhartha had to ferry across the river who was accompanied by a son or a daughter, and he saw none of them without envying him, without thinking: "So many, so many thousands possess this sweetest of good fortunes—why don't I? Even bad people, even thieves and robbers have children and love them, and are being loved by them, all except for me." Thus simply, thus without reason he now thought, thus similar to the childlike people he had become. (Om, paragraph 1)

Differently than before, he now looked upon people, less smart, less proud, but instead warmer, more curious, more involved. When he ferried travellers of the ordinary kind, childlike people, businessmen, warriors, women, these people did not seem alien to him as they used to: he understood them, he understood and shared their life, which was not guided by thoughts and insight, but solely by urges and wishes, he felt like them. Though he was near perfection and was bearing his final wound, it still seemed to him as if those childlike people were his brothers, their vanities, desires for possession, and ridiculous aspects were no longer ridiculous to him, became understandable, became lovable, even became worthy of veneration to him. The blind love of a mother for her child, the stupid, blind pride of a conceited father for his only son, the blind, wild desire of a young, vain woman for jewelry and admiring glances from men, all of these urges, all of this childish stuff, all of these simple, foolish, but immensely strong, strongly living, strongly prevailing urges and desires were now no childish notions for Siddhartha any more, he saw people living for their sake, saw them achieving infinitely much for their sake, travelling, conducting wars, suffering infinitely much, bearing infinitely much, and he could love them for it, he saw life, that what is alive, the indestructible, the Brahman in each of their passions, each of their acts. Worthy of love and admiration were these people in their blind loyalty, their blind strength and tenacity. They lacked nothing, there was nothing the knowledgeable one, the thinker, had to put him above them except for one little thing, a single, tiny, small thing: the consciousness, the conscious thought of the oneness of all life. And Siddhartha even doubted in many an hour, whether this knowledge, this thought was to be valued thus highly, whether it might not also perhaps be a childish idea of the thinking people, of the thinking and childlike people. In all other respects, the worldly people were of equal rank to the wise men, were often far superior to them, just as animals too can, after all, in some moments, seem to be superior to humans in their tough, unrelenting performance of what is necessary. (Om, paragraph 2)

Slowly blossomed, slowly ripened in Siddhartha the realisation, the knowledge, what wisdom actually was, what the goal of his long search was. It was nothing but a readiness of the soul, an ability, a secret art, to think every moment, while living his life, the thought of oneness, to be able to feel and inhale the oneness. Slowly this blossomed in him, was shining back at him from Vasudeva's old, childlike face: harmony, knowledge of the eternal perfection of the world, smiling, oneness. (Om, paragraph 3)

But the wound still burned, longingly and bitterly Siddhartha thought of his son, nurtured his love and tenderness in his heart, allowed the pain to gnaw at him, committed all foolish acts of love. Not by itself, this flame would go out. (Om, paragraph 4)

And one day, when the wound burned violently, Siddhartha ferried across the river, driven by a yearning, got off the boat and was willing to go to the city and to look for his son. The river flowed softly and quietly, it was the dry season, but its voice sounded strange: it laughed! It laughed clearly. The river laughed, it laughed brightly and clearly at the old ferryman. Siddhartha stopped, he bent over the water, in order to hear even better, and he saw his face reflected in the quietly moving waters, and in this reflected face there was something, which reminded him, something he had forgotten, and as he thought about it, he found it: this face resembled another face, which he used to know and love and also fear. It resembled his father's face, the Brahmin. And he remembered how he, a long time ago, as a young man, had forced his father to let him go to the penitents, how he had bade his farewell to him, how he had gone and had never come back. Had his father not also suffered the same pain for him, which he now suffered for his son? Had his father not long since died, alone, without having seen his son again? Did he not have to expect the same fate for himself? Was it not a comedy, a strange and stupid matter, this repetition, this running around in a fateful circle? (Om, paragraph 5)

The river laughed. Yes, so it was, everything came back, which had not been suffered and solved up to its end, the same pain was suffered over and over again. But Siddhartha went back into the boat and ferried back to the hut, thinking of his father, thinking of his son, laughed at by the river, at odds with himself, tending towards despair, and not less tending towards laughing along at himself and the entire world. (Om, paragraph 6)

Alas, the wound was not blossoming yet, his heart was still fighting his fate, cheerfulness and victory were not yet shining from his suffering. Nevertheless, he felt hope, and once he had returned to the hut, he felt an undefeatable desire to open up to Vasudeva, to show him everything, the master of listening, to say everything. (Om, paragraph 7)

Vasudeva was sitting in the hut and weaving a basket. He no longer used the ferryboat, his eyes were starting to get weak, and not just his eyes; his arms and hands as well. Unchanged and flourishing was only the joy and the cheerful benevolence of his face. (Om, paragraph 8)

Siddhartha sat down next to the old man, slowly he started talking. What they had never talked about, he now told him of, of his walk to the city, at that time, of the burning wound, of his envy at the sight of happy fathers, of his knowledge of the foolishness of such wishes, of his futile fight against them. He reported everything, he was able to say everything, even the most embarrassing parts, everything could be said, everything shown, everything he could tell. He presented his wound, also told how he fled today, how he ferried across the water, a childish runaway, willing to walk to the city, how the river had laughed. (Om, paragraph 9)

While he spoke, spoke for a long time, while Vasudeva was listening with a quiet face, Vasudeva's listening gave Siddhartha a stronger sensation than ever before, he sensed how his pain, his fears flowed over to him, how his secret hope flowed over, came back at him from his counterpart. To show his wound to this listener was the same as bathing it in the river, until it had cooled and become one with the river. While he was still speaking, still admitting and confessing, Siddhartha felt more and more that this was no longer Vasudeva, no longer a human being, who was listening to him, that this motionless listener was absorbing his confession into himself like a tree the rain, that this motionless man was the river itself, that he was God himself, that he was the eternal itself. And while Siddhartha stopped thinking of himself and his wound, this realisation of Vasudeva's changed character took possession of him, and the more he felt it and entered into it, the less wondrous it became, the more he realised that everything was in order and natural, that Vasudeva had already been like this for a long time, almost forever, that only he had not quite recognised it, yes, that he himself had almost reached the same state. He felt, that he was now seeing old Vasudeva as the people see the gods, and that this could not last; in his heart, he started bidding his farewell to Vasudeva. Through all this, he talked incessantly. (Om, paragraph 10)

When he had finished talking, Vasudeva turned his friendly eyes, which had grown slightly weak, at him, said nothing, let his silent love and cheerfulness, understanding and knowledge, shine at him. He took Siddhartha's hand, led him to the seat by the bank, sat down with him, smiled at the river. (Om, paragraph 11)

"You've heard it laugh," he said. "But you haven't heard everything. Let's listen, you'll hear more." (Om, paragraph 12)

They listened. Softly sounded the river, singing in many voices. Siddhartha looked into the water, and images appeared to him in the moving water: his father appeared, lonely, mourning for his son; he himself appeared, lonely, he also being tied with the bondage of yearning to his distant son; his son appeared, lonely as well, the boy, greedily rushing along the burning course of his young wishes, each one heading for his goal, each one obsessed by the goal, each one suffering. The river sang with a voice of suffering, longingly it sang, longingly, it flowed towards its goal, lamentingly its voice sang. (Om, paragraph 13)

"Do you hear?" Vasudeva's mute gaze asked. Siddhartha nodded. (Om, paragraph 14)

"Listen better!" Vasudeva whispered. (Om, paragraph 15)

Siddhartha made an effort to listen better. The image of his father, his own image, the image of his son merged, Kamala's image also appeared and was dispersed, and the image of Govinda, and other images, and they merged with each other, turned all into the river, headed all, being the river, for the goal, longing, desiring, suffering, and the river's voice sounded full of yearning, full of burning woe, full of unsatisfiable desire. For the goal, the river was heading, Siddhartha saw it hurrying, the river, which consisted of him and his loved ones and of all people, he had ever seen, all of these waves and waters were hurrying, suffering, towards goals, many goals, the waterfall, the lake, the rapids, the sea, and all goals were reached, and every goal was followed by a new one, and the water turned into vapour and rose to the sky, turned into rain and poured down from the sky, turned into a source, a stream, a river, headed forward once again, flowed on once again. But the longing voice had changed. It still resounded, full of suffering, searching, but other voices joined it, voices of joy and of suffering, good and bad voices, laughing and sad ones, a hundred voices, a thousand voices. (Om, paragraph 16)

Siddhartha listened. He was now nothing but a listener, completely concentrated on listening, completely empty, he felt, that he had now finished learning to listen. Often before, he had heard all this, these many voices in the river, today it sounded new. Already, he could no longer tell the many voices apart, not the happy ones from the weeping ones, not the ones of children from those of men, they all belonged together, the lamentation of yearning and the laughter of the knowledgeable one, the scream of rage and the moaning of the dying ones, everything was one, everything was intertwined and connected, entangled a thousand times. And everything together, all voices, all goals, all yearning, all suffering, all pleasure, all that was good and evil, all of this together was the world. All of it together was the flow of events, was the music of life. And when Siddhartha was listening attentively to this river, this song of a thousand voices, when he neither listened to the suffering nor the laughter, when he did not tie his soul to any particular voice and submerged his self into it, but when he heard them all, perceived the whole, the oneness, then the great song of the thousand voices consisted of a single word, which was Om: the perfection. (Om, paragraph 17)

"Do you hear," Vasudeva's gaze asked again. (Om, paragraph 18)

Brightly, Vasudeva's smile was shining, floating radiantly over all the wrinkles of his old face, as the Om was floating in the air over all the voices of the river. Brightly his smile was shining, when he looked at his friend, and brightly the same smile was now starting to shine on Siddhartha's face as well. His wound blossomed, his suffering was shining, his self had flown into the oneness. (Om, paragraph 19)

In this hour, Siddhartha stopped fighting his fate, stopped suffering. On his face flourished the cheerfulness of a knowledge, which is no longer opposed by any will, which knows perfection, which is in agreement with the flow of events, with the current of life, full of sympathy for the pain of others, full of sympathy for the pleasure of others, devoted to the flow, belonging to the oneness. (Om, paragraph 20)

When Vasudeva rose from the seat by the bank, when he looked into Siddhartha's eyes and saw the cheerfulness of the knowledge shining in them, he softly touched his shoulder with his hand, in this careful and tender manner, and said: "I've been waiting for this hour, my dear. Now that it has come, let me leave. For a long time, I've been waiting for this hour; for a long time, I've been Vasudeva the ferryman. Now it's enough. Farewell, hut, farewell, river, farewell, Siddhartha!" (Om, paragraph 21)

Siddhartha made a deep bow before him who bid his farewell. (Om, paragraph 22)

"I'm going into the forests, I'm going into the oneness," spoke Vasudeva with a bright smile. (Om, paragraph 24)

With a bright smile, he left; Siddhartha watched him leaving. With deep joy, with deep solemnity he watched him leave, saw his steps full of peace, saw his head full of lustre, saw his body full of light. (Om, paragraph 25)

Vocabulary with etymology notes

Word	Definition (in this sentence)	In context	Word history
blossomed (verb)	developed; grew and flourished	Slowly blossomed, slowly ripened in Siddhartha the realisation, the knowledge, what wisdom actually was, what the goal of his long search was.
fateful (adjective)	decided by fate; leading to an unhappy end	Was it not a comedy, a strange and stupid matter, this repetition, this running around in a fateful circle?
ferryboat (noun)	a boat that carries people across water	He no longer used the ferryboat, his eyes were starting to get weak, and not just his eyes; his arms and hands as well.	"ferryboat": ferry, from Old English ferian "to carry, transport," + boat. (Online Etymology Dictionary (hand-checked note), https://www.etymonline.com/word/ferry)
ripened (verb)	grew ripe; matured	Slowly blossomed, slowly ripened in Siddhartha the realisation, the knowledge, what wisdom actually was, what the goal of his long search was.
nurtured (verb)	helped develop; helped grow	But the wound still burned, longingly and bitterly Siddhartha thought of his son, nurtured his love and tenderness in his heart, allowed the pain to gnaw at him, committed all foolish acts of love.	"nurtured": Origin of "nurture": Old French norriture; earlier Late Latin nutritura ("nourishment"). (Liber et Libri origin note, https://en.wiktionary.org/wiki/nurture#Etymology)
runaway (noun)	a person who has run away	He presented his wound, also told how he fled today, how he ferried across the water, a childish runaway, willing to walk to the city, how the river had laughed.

resounded (verb)	ring or echo with sound	It still resounded, full of suffering, searching, but other voices joined it, voices of joy and of suffering, good and bad voices, laughing and sad ones, a hundred voices, a thousand voices.
bathing (verb)	washing or soaking in water	To show his wound to this listener was the same as bathing it in the river, until it had cooled and become one with the river.	"bathing": Origin: an English formation from bathe + -ing. (Liber et Libri origin note, https://en.wiktionary.org/wiki/bathing#Etymology)
weaving (verb)	making by lacing strips or threads together	Vasudeva was sitting in the hut and weaving a basket.
solemnity (noun)	a trait of dignified seriousness	With deep joy, with deep solemnity he watched him leave, saw his steps full of peace, saw his head full of lustre, saw his body full of light.	"solemnity": Origin: Old French solemnite; earlier Latin sollemnitās. (Liber et Libri origin note, https://en.wiktionary.org/wiki/solemnity#Etymology)

Discussion questions

1. What does Siddhartha finally understand when he hears all the voices together?
2. Where does symbolism appear in this chapter, and what effect does it have? Point to one passage.
3. How does this chapter connect to the book's larger concern with the search for self-knowledge?

Tiered discussion questions (30: recall, inferential, evaluative)

Wait time after every question (3 s for DOK 1, 5 s for DOK 2, 8 to 10 s for DOK 3 and 4); think-pair-share on DOK 3 and 4; answer each response with a follow-up probe; close with student-generated questions. Focus sets by rigor level: HS Sophomore: 1, 2, 3, 4, 13, 14, 15, 16, 17, 23, 24, 25; HS Junior: 1, 2, 3, 14, 15, 16, 17, 18, 24, 25, 26, 27; HS Senior: 1, 2, 3, 15, 16, 17, 18, 25, 26, 27, 28, 29; AP: 1, 2, 16, 17, 18, 19, 20, 26, 27, 28, 29, 30; College Freshman: 1, 2, 17, 18, 19, 20, 21, 22, 27, 28, 29, 30; College Sophomore: 1, 2, 11, 18, 19, 20, 21, 22, 23, 28, 29, 30; College Junior: 1, 11, 12, 19, 20, 21, 22, 23, 24, 25, 29, 30; College Senior: 1, 11, 12, 13, 20, 21, 22, 23, 24, 25, 26, 30; Graduate / PhD: 1, 11, 12, 13, 21, 22, 23, 24, 25, 26, 27, 28

Literal / recall

1. Whom does Siddhartha's reflection resemble? [DOK 1 · Cold call with support: call on a student by name, offering a sentence starter or rephrasing if needed · wait 3 s · Dual Credit (Indiana College Core): ICC-WC-1.1, ICC-WC-1.3, ICC-WC-1.4, ICC-WC-1.5] Look for: His father
   Answer guidance: His father's: "It resembled his father's face, the Brahmin." (Om, paragraph 5)
2. What is Vasudeva doing in the hut when Siddhartha comes back from the river? [DOK 1 · Turn and Talk: students discuss briefly with a neighbor before answering · wait 3 s · Dual Credit (Indiana College Core): ICC-WC-1.1, ICC-WC-1.3, ICC-WC-1.4, ICC-WC-1.5] Look for: Sitting and weaving a basket
   Answer guidance: "Vasudeva was sitting in the hut and weaving a basket." (Om, paragraph 8)

3. Whose images does Siddhartha see merge in the river as he listens better? [DOK 1 · Cold call with support: call on a student by name, offering a sentence starter or rephrasing if needed · wait 3 s · Dual Credit (Indiana College Core): ICC-WC-1.1, ICC-WC-1.3, ICC-WC-1.4, ICC-WC-1.5] Look for: His father's, his own and his son's; then Kamala's and Govinda's

   Answer guidance: "The image of his father, his own image, the image of his son merged, Kamala's image also appeared" (Om, paragraph 16).
4. What does Siddhartha feel flowing over to Vasudeva as he speaks? [DOK 1 · Turn and Talk: students discuss briefly with a neighbor before answering · wait 3 s · Dual Credit (Indiana College Core): ICC-WC-1.1, ICC-WC-1.3, ICC-WC-1.4, ICC-WC-1.5] Look for: His pain and his fears

   Answer guidance: His pain and fear: "he sensed how his pain, his fears flowed over to him, how his secret hope flowed over" (Om, paragraph 10).
5. What does Vasudeva see shining in Siddhartha's eyes when he rises from the seat by the bank? [DOK 1 · Cold call with support: call on a student by name, offering a sentence starter or rephrasing if needed · wait 3 s · Dual Credit (Indiana College Core): ICC-WC-1.1, ICC-WC-1.3, ICC-WC-1.4, ICC-WC-1.5] Look for: The cheerfulness of the knowledge

   Answer guidance: He "saw the cheerfulness of the knowledge shining in them" (Om, paragraph 21).
6. Retell the three most important events of "Om" in order, in one sentence each. [DOK 1 · Turn and Talk: students discuss briefly with a neighbor before answering · wait 3 s · Dual Credit (Indiana College Core): ICC-WC-1.1, ICC-WC-1.3, ICC-WC-1.4, ICC-WC-1.5] Look for: Still aching for his son, Siddhartha sees his reflection resemble his own father and understands the circle of suffering. He confesses everything to Vasudeva, who leads him to listen; the river's voices—joy and sorrow, good and evil—blend into one word, Om. Siddhartha achieves serenity. Vasudeva, his work done, goes "into the forests," "into the oneness" (Om, paragraph 24).

   Answer guidance: Siddhartha still aches for his son and sets off for the city, but the river laughs and he turns back (Om, paragraphs 4–6); he tells Vasudeva everything (paragraphs 7–10); listening together, he hears all voices become Om, and Vasudeva leaves for the forest (paragraphs 13–25).
7. Which characters appear or are mentioned in "Om"? Name two and one thing each says or does. [DOK 1 · Cold call with support: call on a student by name, offering a sentence starter or rephrasing if needed · wait 3 s · Dual Credit (Indiana College Core): ICC-WC-1.1, ICC-WC-1.3, ICC-WC-1.4, ICC-WC-1.5] Look for: Names and actions taken from the chapter; check against the teacher summary.

   Answer guidance: Two of: Vasudeva, who listens and then says farewell (paragraphs 10, 21–24); the son, whose image he sees in the river (paragraph 13); his father, whose face he sees in his own reflection (paragraph 5).
8. Where and when does "Om" take place? Point to the line that tells you. [DOK 1 · Turn and Talk: students discuss briefly with a neighbor before answering · wait 3 s · Dual Credit (Indiana College Core): ICC-WC-1.1, ICC-WC-1.3, ICC-WC-1.4, ICC-WC-1.5] Look for: A place/time detail quoted from the chapter.

   Answer guidance: At the river and Vasudeva's hut, in the dry season, years after the son leaves: "it was the dry season, but its voice sounded strange: it laughed!" (Om, paragraph 5)
9. Reread: "Slowly this blossomed in him, was shining back at him from Vasudeva's old, childlike face: harmony, knowledge of the eternal perfection of the world, smiling, oneness." What does "harmony" mean here, and what is literally happening in this line? [DOK 1 · Turn and Talk: students discuss briefly with a neighbor before answering · wait 3 s · Dual Credit (Indiana College Core): ICC-WC-1.1, ICC-WC-1.3, ICC-WC-1.4, ICC-WC-1.5] Look for: harmony: a peaceful agreement of all the parts.

Answer guidance: "Harmony" here means: a peaceful agreement of all the parts. In Om, paragraph 3, Siddhartha sees in Vasudeva's face the calm unity he is beginning to understand.

10. Reread: "Was it not a comedy, a strange and stupid matter, this repetition, this running around in a fateful circle?" What does "repetition" mean here, and what is literally happening in this line? [DOK 1 · Turn and Talk: students discuss briefly with a neighbor before answering · wait 3 s · Dual Credit (Indiana College Core): ICC-WC-1.1, ICC-WC-1.3, ICC-WC-1.4, ICC-WC-1.5] Look for: repetition: doing or living the same thing again.
Answer guidance: "Repetition" here means: doing or living the same thing again. In Om, paragraph 5, he sees that he is now suffering over his son just as his father once suffered over him, the same pattern again.

Inferential / analytical

1. What does "Om" suggest about hearing the many voices? State the inference and the line that supports it. [DOK 2 · Think-Pair-Share: students think alone, discuss with a partner, then share with the class · wait 5 s · Dual Credit (Indiana College Core): ICC-WC-1.1, ICC-WC-1.3, ICC-WC-1.4, ICC-WC-1.5] Look for: A stated inference (for example, that hearing all voices together is the end of the search) backed by one located line, such as the one in Om, paragraph 17.
Answer guidance: The chapter suggests that hearing all voices together is the end of the search. Support: "everything was one, everything was intertwined and connected, entangled a thousand times" (Om, paragraph 17).
2. Find one example of symbolism in this chapter. What does it reveal that a plain statement would not? [DOK 2 · Follow-up: ask a probing question that builds on the previous answer · wait 5 s · Dual Credit (Indiana College Core): ICC-WC-1.1, ICC-WC-1.3, ICC-WC-1.4, ICC-WC-1.5] Look for: Look for objects, places or actions that stand for larger ideas.
Answer guidance: The river's laughter ("The river laughed." (Om, paragraph 6)) stands for the mockery of his repeating pain; a statement would not carry how the same pain returns 'over and over again.'
3. How does the imagery in this chapter shape what we understand about hearing the many voices? [DOK 3 · Think-Pair-Share: students think alone, discuss with a partner, then share with the class · wait 8 s · Dual Credit (Indiana College Core): ICC-WC-1.1, ICC-WC-1.3, ICC-WC-1.4, ICC-WC-1.5] Look for: Look for sensory details (sight, sound, cold, light) and what mood they create.
Answer guidance: Images of faces merging in the water ("The image of his father, his own image, the image of his son merged" (Om, paragraph 16)) make the unity of all lives visible.
4. In the passage that begins "Slowly blossomed, slowly ripened in Siddhartha the realisation, the knowledge, what wisdom actually was, what the goal of his long search was.", why might Hesse have chosen these particular words? Pick two and explain their connotations. [DOK 2 · Follow-up: ask a probing question that builds on the previous answer · wait 5 s · Dual Credit (Indiana College Core): ICC-WC-1.1, ICC-WC-1.3, ICC-WC-1.4, ICC-WC-1.5] Look for: Diction analysis of two words in the anchor passage.
Answer guidance: In Om, paragraph 3, the doubled "slowly blossomed, slowly ripened" makes wisdom grow like a plant, not arrive as a lesson.
5. What causes the main turn in "Om", and what effect is it likely to have on what follows? [DOK 2 · Follow-up: ask a probing question that builds on the previous answer · wait 5 s · Dual Credit (Indiana College Core): ICC-WC-1.1, ICC-WC-1.3, ICC-WC-1.4, ICC-WC-1.5] Look for: Still aching for his son, Siddhartha sees his reflection resemble his own father and understands the circle of suffering. He confesses everything to Vasudeva, who leads him to listen; the river's voices—joy and sorrow, good and evil—blend into one word, Om. Siddhartha achieves serenity. Vasudeva,…
Answer guidance: The cause is his confession and the listening at the river (Om, paragraphs 9–17). Effect: he stops fighting his fate (paragraph 20), and Vasudeva can leave him in charge of the ferry.

6. How does “Om” build on “The Son”? Name one link of cause and effect. [DOK 3 · Think-Pair-Share: students think alone, discuss with a partner, then share with the class · wait 8 s · Dual Credit (Indiana College Core): ICC-WC-1.1, ICC-WC-1.3, ICC-WC-1.4, ICC-WC-1.5] Look for: A causal or structural link between this and the previous chapter.
   Answer guidance: Cause and effect: the wound from “The Son” still burns (“For a long time, the wound continued to burn.” (Om, paragraph 1)) and drives him toward the city, where the river turns him back.
7. What can we infer about a character's motives from what they say and do here, as opposed to what they claim? [DOK 3 · Follow-up: ask a probing question that builds on the previous answer · wait 8 s · Dual Credit (Indiana College Core): ICC-WC-1.1, ICC-WC-1.3, ICC-WC-1.4, ICC-WC-1.5] Look for: An inference about motive supported by a quoted line.
   Answer guidance: Siddhartha claims he only wants to see his son, but his envy of fathers (paragraph 1) shows longing for his own happiness; Vasudeva says little, but his waiting for “this hour” (paragraph 21) shows his purpose was to help Siddhartha reach it.
8. The bell-ringer asked: “What does Siddhartha finally understand when he hears all the voices together?” Now that we have read closely, how would you revise your first answer, and which line changed your mind? [DOK 2 · Think-Pair-Share: students think alone, discuss with a partner, then share with the class · wait 5 s · Dual Credit (Indiana College Core): ICC-WC-1.1, ICC-WC-1.3, ICC-WC-1.4, ICC-WC-1.5] Look for: A revised answer anchored in the text.
   Answer guidance: A revised answer should go beyond ‘everything is one’ to what that means for him: pain, joy and longing belong together, so he stops resisting his fate (Om, paragraphs 17 and 20).
9. Where does theme appear, and how does it connect this chapter to the larger concern with the search for self-knowledge? [DOK 3 · Follow-up: ask a probing question that builds on the previous answer · wait 8 s · Dual Credit (Indiana College Core): ICC-WC-1.1, ICC-WC-1.3, ICC-WC-1.4, ICC-WC-1.5] Look for: Look for statements or moments that connect to the book's big ideas.
   Answer guidance: The theme of oneness appears in the merging voices (Om, paragraph 17) and in the definition of wisdom in paragraph 3: “to think every moment, while living his life, the thought of oneness” (Om, paragraph 3).
10. Background: Hesse blends Hindu and Buddhist ideas of unity with Western mysticism. How does knowing this change the way you read one moment in the chapter? [DOK 3 · Think-Pair-Share: students think alone, discuss with a partner, then share with the class · wait 8 s · Dual Credit (Indiana College Core): ICC-WC-1.1, ICC-WC-1.3, ICC-WC-1.4, ICC-WC-1.5] Look for: A specific moment reread in light of the context.
    Answer guidance: Knowing Hesse blends traditions explains why Om, a Hindu syllable, crowns a Buddhist-style insight (paragraph 19): the chapter presents unity as larger than any one teaching.

Evaluative / synthesis / creative

1. A critic might argue: “The climax: all opposites unite into one harmony, and the student becomes the master.” How far do you agree? Take a stand and defend it with two lines from the chapter. [DOK 3 · Four Corners: students move to the corner that matches their position and explain why · wait 8 s · ICC-WC-1.5] Look for: A defended position with evidence and one counterpoint.
   Answer guidance: Agree: the voices unite into Om (paragraphs 17–19). A text counterpoint: the chapter begins with a wound that ‘would not go out by itself’ (paragraph 4), so the harmony is earned through pain, not simply given.
2. Which character in this chapter acts most wisely, and which least? Judge them by a standard you name. [DOK 3 · Think-Pair-Share: students think alone, discuss with a partner, then share with the class · wait 8 s · ICC-WC-1.5]

Look for: An evaluation using an explicit criterion and evidence.

Answer guidance: With listening as the standard, Vasudeva is wisest (paragraphs 10–15); Siddhartha least when he sets off to chase his son (paragraph 5), though he turns back himself.

3. Rewrite one moment of "Om" from the point of view of a different character. What does the new angle reveal or hide about hearing the many voices? [DOK 4 · Think-Pair-Share: students think alone, discuss with a partner, then share with the class · wait 8 s · ICC-WC-1.5] Look for: A rewrite that keeps the chapter's events accurate, speaks in the chosen character's voice, and ends with a sentence on what the new angle shows or hides.

   Answer guidance: Vasudeva's view of the listening (Om, paragraphs 11–21) works well: it shows patience and joy and hides the struggle inside Siddhartha.

4. Write three questions of your own about "Om": one recall, one "why/how", and one "should/what if". Trade with a partner and answer theirs. [DOK 3 · Student-generated: students write and pose their own questions · wait 8 s · ICC-WC-1.5] Look for: Three questions at three levels, each answerable from the chapter, traded and answered with a line.

   Answer guidance: Example set: recall, 'What does Vasudeva do at the end?' (goes into the forest, paragraph 24); why/how, 'Why does the river laugh?' (paragraph 6); what if, 'Should Siddhartha have gone to the city?'

5. Connect this chapter to experience versus teaching: is the link strong or weak so far? What would Hesse need to show next to strengthen it? [DOK 4 · Socratic circle: an inner circle discusses while the outer circle listens and takes notes, then they switch · wait 8 s · ICC-WC-1.5] Look for: A judgment of thematic development across the work.

   Answer guidance: Strong: no one teaches him; Vasudeva only says "Listen better!" (paragraph 15) and the experience does the rest.

6. Is the symbolism in this chapter effective, or does it feel heavy-handed? Evaluate it as a reader would in a review. [DOK 3 · Four Corners: students move to the corner that matches their position and explain why · wait 8 s · ICC-WC-1.5] Look for: An evaluative judgment with criteria and evidence.

   Answer guidance: Effective for many readers: the laughing river and merging faces are concrete. Some find the Om finale (paragraph 19) abstract.

7. Compare how "Om" treats hearing the many voices with how another text, film or event you know treats a similar idea. What does Siddhartha see that the other misses? [DOK 4 · Socratic circle: an inner circle discusses while the outer circle listens and takes notes, then they switch · wait 8 s · ICC-WC-1.5] Look for: A cross-text synthesis.

   Answer guidance: A comparison should name a moment when a character hears or sees everything at once and quote "everything was one" (Om, paragraph 17); Siddhartha's version ends in calm acceptance, not ecstasy.

8. Predict what "Govinda" will bring, using two clues from this chapter. After reading, evaluate your prediction. [DOK 3 · Think-Pair-Share: students think alone, discuss with a partner, then share with the class · wait 8 s · ICC-WC-1.5] Look for: A prediction or judgment justified with textual clues.

   Answer guidance: Clues: Vasudeva leaves and Siddhartha remains as the ferryman (paragraphs 24–25), and he now looks on others with sympathy (paragraph 2). Prediction: someone from his past will come to the river and see his change.

9. Design a one-paragraph modern adaptation of this chapter (setting, characters, conflict). What must stay the same for it to still be about hearing the many voices? [DOK 4 · Think-Pair-Share: students think alone, discuss with a partner, then share with the class · wait 8 s · ICC-WC-1.5] Look for: A modern setting, characters and conflict that keep the chapter's core idea, with the one element that must not change named.

Answer guidance: A modern version keeps a grieving parent who finally lets go after listening with an old friend. What must stay is the moment of stopping the fight with fate (paragraph 20).

10. What question would you most like to ask Hermann Hesse about this chapter, and what answer do you think the text itself gives? [DOK 4 · Student-generated: students write and pose their own questions · wait 8 s · ICC-WC-1.5] Look for: A student-generated question answered from evidence.
    Answer guidance: Example: 'What did Siddhartha actually learn from the river?' The text answers in paragraph 3: wisdom is the readiness to feel oneness in every moment.

Annotation focus

- Symbolism: look for objects, places or actions that stand for larger ideas (anchor passage in the We do segment)
- Also notice Imagery: sensory details (sight, sound, cold, light) and what mood they create
- Also notice Theme: statements or moments that connect to the book's big ideas

Chapter quiz: item bank (all eleven rigor versions)

1. [fill · recall · DOK 1] Fill in the blank with the vocabulary word that fits: "But the wound still burned, longingly and bitterly Siddhartha thought of his son, _____ his love and tenderness in his heart, allowed the pain to gnaw at him, committed all foolish acts of love." Word bank: nurtured, forgot, sold, spent
   Key: nurtured
2. [mc · recall · DOK 1] Which word completes this sentence from Om, paragraph 4? "Not by itself, this _____ would go out."
   A. river
   B. path
   C. boat
   D. flame

   Key: D (flame)
3. [mc · recall · DOK 1] In the line "Was it not a comedy, a strange and stupid matter, this repetition, this running around in a fateful circle?", what does "fateful" most nearly mean?
   A. bringing doom; leading to an unhappy end
   B. original; existing from the very beginning
   C. strikingly unusual or odd
   D. occurring or operating at the same time

   Key: A (bringing doom; leading to an unhappy end)
4. [mc · recall · DOK 1] What does Vasudeva do afterward?
   A. Becomes a monk
   B. Leaves for the city to find his own son
   C. Takes a new boat
   D. Goes into the forests, into the oneness

   Key: D (Goes into the forests, into the oneness)

5. [mc · recall · DOK 1] Which word completes this sentence from Om, paragraph 19? “Brightly, Vasudeva’s smile was shining, floating _____ over all the wrinkles of his old face, as the Om was floating in the air over all the voices of the river.”

   A. gloomily

   B. radiantly

   C. harshly

   D. coldly

   Key: B (radiantly)

6. [fill · recall · DOK 1] Fill in the blank with the vocabulary word that fits: “He presented his wound, also told how he fled today, how he ferried across the water, a childish _____, willing to walk to the city, how the river had laughed.” Word bank: king, runaway, priest, merchant

   Key: runaway

7. [fill · recall · DOK 1] Fill in the blank with the vocabulary word that fits: “It still _____, full of suffering, searching, but other voices joined it, voices of joy and of suffering, good and bad voices, laughing and sad ones, a hundred voices, a thousand voices.” Word bank: laughed, rejoiced, resounded, celebrated

   Key: resounded

8. [fill · recall · DOK 1] Complete the quotation from Om, paragraph 1: “For a long time, the wound _____ to burn.” Word bank: salted, continued, painted, folded

   Key: continued

9. [mc · recall · DOK 1] What do all the river's voices become?

   A. Only silence

   B. His son's voice

   C. The single word Om

   D. A song of war and victory

   Key: C (The single word Om)

10. [fill · recall · DOK 1] Complete the quotation from Om, paragraph 17: “He was now nothing but a listener, completely concentrated on listening, completely _____” Word bank: noisy, distracted, chattering, empty

    Key: empty

11. [fill · recall · DOK 1] Complete the quotation from Om, paragraph 13: “Siddhartha looked into the water, and images _____ to him in the moving water” Word bank: appeared, remembered, started, smiled

    Key: appeared

12. [mc · inference · DOK 2] Which choice best states a central concern of “Om”?

    A. Detachment among the childlike people

    B. Self-denial as a path

    C. Hearing the many voices

    D. Entering the city and learning love

    Key: C (Hearing the many voices)

13. [short · inference · DOK 2] What does Siddhartha see in the river, and why does it matter? “It resembled his father’s face, the Brahmin.” (Om, paragraph 5)

    Sample answer: Looking into the river, Siddhartha sees that his own face has come to look like his father's. The evidence is

"It resembled his father's face, the Brahmin." (Om, paragraph 5). The likeness makes him realize that he is now suffering for his son just as his father once suffered when Siddhartha left home, so his pain is part of a cycle that every life repeats.

14. [short · analysis · DOK 3] Analyze the word choice in "he understood them, he understood" (Om, paragraph 2). Pick two words and explain what they suggest.
    Sample answer: Siddhartha now feels with ordinary people instead of judging them. The evidence is "he understood them, he understood" (Om, paragraph 2). The repeated word "understood" stresses a change from judging people to sharing their feelings, and "them" points to the childlike people he once scorned. The echo makes his compassion sound settled and complete.
15. [short · synthesis · DOK 4] Synthesis: trace how unity of opposites develops from The Son to Om. Use one quotation from each.
    Sample answer: Opposites that fight in The Son are joined in Om. In The Son love is helpless against fate: "But even if you would die ten times for him, you would not be able to take the slightest part of his destiny upon yourself." (The Son, paragraph 14). In Om pain and joy merge: "His wound blossomed, his suffering was shining, his self had flown into the oneness." (Om, paragraph 19). The suffering that was helpless in The Son becomes part of the oneness in Om.
16. [mc · recall · DOK 1] How do ordinary travellers, such as businessmen, warriors and women, now seem to Siddhartha?
    A. More foolish than ever
    B. No longer alien to him
    C. Frightening and hostile
    D. Unworthy of his help

    Key: B (No longer alien to him)
17. [fill · recall · DOK 1] Complete the quotation from Om, paragraph 21: "I've been waiting for this hour, my _____."
    Key: dear
18. [fill · recall · DOK 1] Complete the quotation from Om, paragraph 12: "But you haven't heard _____." Word bank: tall, everything, slowly, wooden
    Key: everything
19. [fill · recall · DOK 1] Fill in the blank with the vocabulary word that fits: "To show his wound to this listener was the same as _____ it in the river, until it had cooled and become one with the river." Word bank: selling, hiding, losing, bathing
    Key: bathing
20. [mc · recall · DOK 1] In the line "Slowly blossomed, slowly ripened in Siddhartha the realisation", what does "ripened" most nearly mean?
    A. grew fully mature
    B. dried up
    C. was forgotten
    D. was hidden away

    Key: A (grew fully mature)
21. [mc · recall · DOK 1] What state does Siddhartha reach?
    A. Confusion
    B. Despair

C. Serenity

D. Anger

Key: C (Serenity)

22. [fill · recall · DOK 1] Fill in the blank with the vocabulary word that fits: "With deep joy, with deep _____ he watched him leave" Word bank: solemnity, anger, haste, envy

Key: solemnity

23. [mc · recall · DOK 1] What does Vasudeva whisper to Siddhartha as they sit by the river?

A. "Go to the city!"

B. "Forget your son!"

C. "Cross the river!"

D. "Listen better!"

Key: D ("Listen better!")

24. [mc · recall · DOK 1] Seeing so many thousands possess "this sweetest of good fortunes," what does Siddhartha ask?

A. Why the gods are so cruel

B. Why Vasudeva lives alone

C. Why the river here is so wide and deep

D. Why he does not have it too

Key: D (Why he does not have it too)

25. [mc · recall · DOK 1] Which word completes this sentence from Om, paragraph 16? "turned into rain and poured down from the sky, turned into a _____, a stream, a river"

A. desert

B. source

C. mountain

D. city

Key: B (source)

26. [mc · inference · DOK 2] In this chapter, which theme does the following most directly develop? Siddhartha now feels that ordinary travellers are like family to him (Om, paragraph 2).

A. Contempt for the world

B. The value of wealth

C. Compassion for ordinary people

D. Fear of strangers

Key: C (Compassion for ordinary people)

27. [short · inference · DOK 2] Why does Siddhartha want to confess to Vasudeva? Use this line. "he felt an undefeatable desire to open up to Vasudeva" (Om, paragraph 7)

Sample answer: Siddhartha trusts Vasudeva as the one person who can truly hear him. The evidence is "he felt an undefeatable desire to open up to Vasudeva" (Om, paragraph 7). Calling Vasudeva "the master of listening" shows why he chooses him, and the repeated "everything" shows that he wants to hide nothing.

28. [short · inference · DOK 2] What pattern does Siddhartha recognize? Use this line. "Had his father not also suffered the same pain for him, which he now suffered for his son?" (Om, paragraph 5)

Sample answer: "Had his father not also suffered the same pain for him, which he now suffered for his son?" (Om, paragraph 5). Siddhartha sees that his pain repeats his father's: he left his father just as his son has left him. The question shows the suffering moving in a circle from one generation to the next.

29. [mc · analysis · DOK 3] Which literary element does this describe in "Om"? The climax: Siddhartha listens to the river and hears all voices become Om.

    A. Simile

    B. Allusion

    C. Symbolism

    D. Structure

    Key: D (Structure)

30. [short · synthesis · DOK 4] Synthesis: trace how the river's laughter develops from The Son to Om. Use one quotation from each.

    Sample answer: The river's laughter moves from a lesson Vasudeva reports to one Siddhartha hears himself. In The Son, Vasudeva says: "But the river laughs, it laughs at me, it laughs at you and me, and is shaking with laughter at our foolishness." (The Son, paragraph 5). In Om, "The river laughed, it laughed brightly and clearly at the old ferryman." (Om, paragraph 5). The first passage is advice; the second makes Siddhartha face his own foolishness directly.

31. [fill · recall · DOK 1] Complete the quotation from Om, paragraph 24: "I'm going into the forests, I'm going into the _____"

    Key: oneness

32. [mc · recall · DOK 1] In the line "how his secret hope flowed over, came back at him from his counterpart", what does "counterpart" most nearly mean?

    A. a stranger passing on the road

    B. a part of the boat

    C. the person facing him in the talk

    D. a gift he had been given

    Key: C (the person facing him in the talk)

33. [mc · recall · DOK 1] In the line "He no longer used the ferryboat, his eyes were starting to get weak, and not just his eyes; his arms and hands as well.", what does "ferryboat" most nearly mean?

    A. a boat that carries people across water

    B. a woman paid to be the companion of wealthy men

    C. understandings; realizations

    D. male peafowl, birds with large, colorful tail feathers

    Key: A (a boat that carries people across water)

34. [fill · recall · DOK 1] Complete the quotation from Om, paragraph 5: "Had his father not long since died, alone, _____ having seen his son again?" Word bank: without, beneath, behind, inside

    Key: without

35. [mc · recall · DOK 1] What does the river do when Siddhartha sets off for the city?

    A. It roars in flood

    B. It falls silent

    C. It weeps for him

    D. It laughs at him

Key: D (It laughs at him)

36. [mc · recall · DOK 1] Which word completes this sentence from Om, paragraph 2? “he understood them, he understood and _____ their life”

    A. shared

    B. sneezed

    C. baked

    D. knitted

    Key: A (shared)

37. [fill · recall · DOK 1] Complete the quotation from Om, paragraph 25: “With a bright _____, he left” Word bank: lantern, sword, smile, basket

    Key: smile

38. [fill · recall · DOK 1] Fill in the blank with the vocabulary word that fits: “he himself appeared, lonely, he also being tied with the _____ of yearning to his distant son” Word bank: bondage, laughter, harvest, paint

    Key: bondage

39. [mc · recall · DOK 1] What mood does Siddhartha feel as he rows back to the hut after the river laughs?

    A. Pure and simple joy

    B. Calm, settled certainty

    C. Torn between despair and laughter

    D. Burning anger at his ungrateful runaway son

    Key: C (Torn between despair and laughter)

40. [mc · inference · DOK 2] In this chapter, which theme does the following most directly develop? “To show his wound to this listener was the same as bathing it in the river” (Om, paragraph 10)

    A. The danger of deep water

    B. Punishment for foolishness

    C. The power of money to buy comfort

    D. Healing through being heard

    Key: D (Healing through being heard)

41. [short · inference · DOK 2] How does Siddhartha feel when Vasudeva leaves? Use this line. “With deep joy, with deep solemnity he watched him leave” (Om, paragraph 25)

    Sample answer: Siddhartha feels joy and reverence rather than grief. The evidence is “With deep joy, with deep solemnity he watched him leave” (Om, paragraph 25). The word “joy” shows that he is glad for his friend, and “solemnity” shows that he treats the parting as a sacred moment.

42. [short · inference · DOK 2] What does Siddhartha notice about how worldly people live? Use this line. “he saw people living for their sake, saw them achieving infinitely much for their sake” (Om, paragraph 2)

    Sample answer: Siddhartha notices that ordinary people achieve great things through their passions. The evidence is “he saw people living for their sake, saw them achieving infinitely much for their sake” (Om, paragraph 2). The phrase “infinitely much” shows his new respect for urges he once called childish.

43. [short · analysis · DOK 3] Analyze the word choice in “longingly it sang, longingly, it flowed towards its goal, lamentingly its voice sang” (Om, paragraph 13). Pick two words and explain what they suggest.

    Sample answer: The river’s song is full of sorrow and desire. The evidence is “longingly it sang, longingly, it flowed towards its goal, lamentingly its voice sang" (Om, paragraph 13). "Longingly" shows the river yearning like Siddhartha for his son, and "lamentingly" adds mourning, so the river echoes his own pain.

44. [mc · analysis · DOK 3] Which literary element does this describe in "Om"? The many voices of the river join into one sound, the word Om, which stands for the unity of all things.

    A. Onomatopoeia
    B. Symbolism
    C. Hyperbole
    D. Rhyme

    Key: B (Symbolism)

45. [short · synthesis · DOK 4] Synthesis: trace how Vasudeva's listening develops from The Ferryman to Om. Use one quotation from each.

    Sample answer: Vasudeva's listening moves from a virtue Siddhartha notices to a power that heals him. In The Ferryman, "like only a few, he knew how to listen." (The Ferryman, paragraph 23). In Om, Vasudeva "said nothing, let his silent love and cheerfulness, understanding and knowledge, shine at him" (Om, paragraph 11). The first passage praises a skill; the second shows that silent attention is how Vasudeva teaches.

46. [fill · recall · DOK 1] Fill in the blank with the word that fits: "Through all this, he talked _____." Word bank: incessantly, saltily, rustily, grassily

    Key: incessantly

47. [fill · recall · DOK 1] Fill in the blank with the word that fits: "he felt an _____ desire to open up to Vasudeva"

    Word bank: faint, borrowed, undefeatable, angry

    Key: undefeatable

48. [mc · recall · DOK 1] What tone marks Vasudeva's farewell?

    A. Bitter and resentful
    B. Anxious and hurried
    C. Bright and peaceful
    D. Cold and distant

    Key: C (Bright and peaceful)

49. [mc · recall · DOK 1] Which word completes this sentence from Om, paragraph 11? "He took Siddhartha's hand, led him to the seat by the _____"

    A. fire
    B. door
    C. gate
    D. bank

    Key: D (bank)

50. [mc · recall · DOK 1] In the line "Unchanged and flourishing was only the joy and the cheerful benevolence of his face.", what does "benevolence" most nearly mean?

    A. kindness; goodwill
    B. wealth; riches
    C. judgment; blame
    D. sadness; grief

Key: A (kindness; goodwill)

51. [mc · recall · DOK 1] Thinking of his own father, what does Siddhartha wonder about himself?

    A. Whether he should return home

    B. Whether his father is still alive

    C. Whether he should become a Brahmin again

    D. Whether he must expect the same fate

    Key: D (Whether he must expect the same fate)

52. [mc · inference · DOK 2] In this chapter, which theme does the following most directly develop? Vasudeva leaves with a bright smile for the forests (Om, paragraph 25).

    A. Fear of death

    B. Fulfilment and peaceful release

    C. Loneliness in old age

    D. Regret for all the wasted years

    Key: B (Fulfilment and peaceful release)

53. [short · inference · DOK 2] What can you infer from this line? "And everything together, all voices, all goals, all yearning, all suffering, all pleasure, all that was good and evil, all of this together was the world." (Om, paragraph 17) Answer in two or three sentences with one detail.

    Sample answer: Siddhartha now accepts the whole world, good and bad together. The evidence is "And everything together, all voices, all goals, all yearning, all suffering, all pleasure, all that was good and evil, all of this together was the world." (Om, paragraph 17). The repeated "all" gathers suffering and pleasure, good and evil into one list, so nothing is left out or judged. This shows he no longer wants to escape pain but sees it as part of one whole.

54. [short · inference · DOK 2] Why does Siddhartha doubt the value of his own knowledge? Use this line. "whether it might not also perhaps be a childish idea of the thinking people" (Om, paragraph 2)

    Sample answer: Siddhartha wonders whether thinkers are any wiser than the childlike people. The evidence is "whether it might not also perhaps be a childish idea of the thinking people" (Om, paragraph 2). Calling the thinkers' idea "childish" turns his old scorn back on himself and shows his new humility.

55. [short · inference · DOK 2] What does Siddhartha finally confess to Vasudeva? Use this line. "What they had never talked about, he now told him of, of his walk to the city, at that time, of the burning wound, of his envy at the sight of happy fathers, of his knowledge of the foolishness of such wishes, of his futile fight against them." (Om, paragraph 9)

    Sample answer: Siddhartha confesses the longing and envy he had hidden. The evidence is "What they had never talked about, he now told him of, of his walk to the city, at that time, of the burning wound, of his envy at the sight of happy fathers, of his knowledge of the foolishness of such wishes, of his futile fight against them." (Om, paragraph 9). The long chain of "of … of" pours out everything at once, and the words "envy" and "futile" admit both the feeling and his failure to master it, which shows how much trust he now places in Vasudeva.

56. [mc · analysis · DOK 3] Which literary element does this describe in "Om"? Vasudeva, his work done, takes leave with a bright, calm smile, untroubled and free of regret.

    A. Personification

    B. Characterization

    C. Setting

    D. Metaphor

Key: B (Characterization)

57. [short · analysis · DOK 3] Analyze the word choice in "the boy, greedily rushing along the burning course of his young wishes" (Om, paragraph 13). Pick two words and explain what they suggest.
    Sample answer: The son is driven by hungry, painful desire. The evidence is "the boy, greedily rushing along the burning course of his young wishes" (Om, paragraph 13). "Greedily" shows his selfish hunger for life, and "burning" suggests that his wishes will hurt him, as Siddhartha's once did.

58. [mc · analysis · DOK 3] Which literary element does this describe in "Om"? His reflection resembles his father's face, so it represents the circle of fathers and sons.
    A. Symbolism
    B. Simile
    C. Hyperbole
    D. Alliteration

    Key: A (Symbolism)

59. [short · synthesis · DOK 4] Synthesis: trace how Siddhartha's view of the childlike people develops from With the Childlike People to Om. Use one quotation from each.
    Sample answer: Siddhartha's view of the childlike people moves from mixed scorn to love. In With the Childlike People, "He saw mankind going through life in a childlike or animallike manner, which he loved and also despised at the same time." (With the Childlike People, paragraph 37). In Om, "it still seemed to him as if those childlike people were his brothers" (Om, paragraph 2). The first passage keeps them at a distance; the second makes them family.

60. [short · synthesis · DOK 4] Close reading: how do the diction and syntax of "Alas, the wound was not blossoming yet, his heart was still fighting his fate, cheerfulness and victory were not yet shining from his suffering." (Om, paragraph 7) shape its meaning? Consider a second, competing reading.
    Sample answer: The repeated "not … yet" marks the sentence as a waiting room: "Alas, the wound was not blossoming yet, his heart was still fighting his fate, cheerfulness and victory were not yet shining from his suffering." (Om, paragraph 7). "Blossoming" and "shining" are images of a future the wound has not reached, while "still fighting" names the struggle of the present. A competing reading hears only hopelessness, a man stuck in pain. But "yet" promises change, and the chapter keeps that promise: "His wound blossomed, his suffering was shining, his self had flown into the oneness." (Om, paragraph 19). The diction sets up suffering as a bud that will open, not a dead end.

61. [fill · recall · DOK 1 · Dual Credit (Indiana College Core): ICC-WC-1.5] Fill in the blank with the word that fits: "Kamala's image also appeared and was _____" Word bank: dispersed, salted, wooden, purple
    Key: dispersed

62. [fill · recall · DOK 1 · Dual Credit (Indiana College Core): ICC-WC-1.5] Fill in the blank with the word that fits: "longingly, it flowed towards its _____" Word bank: cave, goal, king, hut
    Key: goal

63. [mc · recall · DOK 1 · Dual Credit (Indiana College Core): ICC-WC-1.5] Where does Siddhartha go after the river laughs at him?
    A. On to the city
    B. Into the forest
    C. To his father's house to ask forgiveness
    D. Back to the hut by boat

    Key: D (Back to the hut by boat)

64. [mc · recall · DOK 1 · Dual Credit (Indiana College Core): ICC-WC-1.5] In the line “the stupid, blind pride of a conceited father for his only son”, what does “conceited” most nearly mean?

    A. very generous to others

    B. deeply humble and meek

    C. too proud of oneself

    D. often absent from home

    Key: C (too proud of oneself)

65. [mc · recall · DOK 1 · Dual Credit (Indiana College Core): ICC-WC-1.5] In the line “their vanities, desires for possession, and ridiculous aspects were no longer ridiculous to him”, what does “vanities” most nearly mean?

    A. proud concerns with oneself

    B. small acts of kindness to others

    C. heavy debts owed to merchants

    D. old injuries from the past

    Key: A (proud concerns with oneself)

66. [mc · recall · DOK 1 · Dual Credit (Indiana College Core): ICC-WC-1.5] Which word completes this sentence from Om, paragraph 20? “In this hour, Siddhartha stopped fighting his _____”

    A. hunger

    B. fate

    C. fever

    D. sleep

    Key: B (fate)

67. [mc · inference · DOK 2 · Dual Credit (Indiana College Core): ICC-WC-1.5] What does Siddhartha do as Vasudeva bids him farewell?

    A. He begs him to stay at the ferry

    B. He makes a deep bow before him

    C. He turns away in tears

    D. He follows him into the forest

    Key: B (He makes a deep bow before him)

68. [short · inference · DOK 2 · Dual Credit (Indiana College Core): ICC-WC-1.5] What can you infer from this line? “they all belonged together, the lamentation of yearning and the laughter of the knowledgeable one” (Om, paragraph 17) Answer in two or three sentences with one detail.

    Sample answer: Siddhartha no longer separates suffering from wisdom. The evidence is “they all belonged together, the lamentation of yearning and the laughter of the knowledgeable one” (Om, paragraph 17). Pairing “lamentation” with “laughter” shows that his grief and his insight are parts of one whole.

69. [short · inference · DOK 2 · Dual Credit (Indiana College Core): ICC-WC-1.5] What does Siddhartha realize wisdom actually is? Use this line. “It was nothing but a readiness of the soul, an ability, a secret art” (Om, paragraph 3)

    Sample answer: Siddhartha realizes that wisdom is a way of being rather than a set of teachings. The evidence is “It was nothing but a readiness of the soul, an ability, a secret art” (Om, paragraph 3). The words “readiness” and “art” show that wisdom must be practised and felt, not learned from words.

70. [short · inference · DOK 2 · Dual Credit (Indiana College Core): ICC-WC-1.5] What does Siddhartha recognize about his own behaviour? Use this line. “Thus simply, thus without reason he now thought, thus similar to the childlike people he had become.” (Om, paragraph 1)

    Sample answer: Siddhartha sees that his longing for his son has made him like the childlike people. The evidence is “Thus simply, thus without reason he now thought, thus similar to the childlike people he had become.” (Om, paragraph 1). The words “without reason” show that his feelings now rule his mind, as they rule ordinary people.

71. [short · analysis · DOK 3 · Dual Credit (Indiana College Core): ICC-WC-1.5] Analyze the word choice in “Brightly his smile was shining” (Om, paragraph 19). Pick two words and explain what they suggest.

    Sample answer: Vasudeva’s smile shows a joy that spreads like light. The evidence is “Brightly his smile was shining” (Om, paragraph 19). “Brightly” and “shining” both belong to light, suggesting that his peace glows outward and is about to pass to Siddhartha.

72. [mc · analysis · DOK 3 · Dual Credit (Indiana College Core): ICC-WC-1.5] Which literary element does this describe in “Om”? The idea that each generation suffers the pain it once caused, a “fateful circle,” runs through the chapter.

    A. Theme
    B. Hyperbole
    C. Alliteration
    D. Setting

    Key: A (Theme)

73. [mc · analysis · DOK 3 · Dual Credit (Indiana College Core): ICC-WC-1.5] Which literary element does this describe in “Om”? Vasudeva’s eyes and hands grow weak, yet his face stays joyful and kind.

    A. Symbolism
    B. Characterization
    C. Setting
    D. Figurative language

    Key: B (Characterization)

74. [short · synthesis · DOK 4 · Dual Credit (Indiana College Core): ICC-WC-1.5] Synthesis: trace how Siddhartha’s pain over his son turns into understanding, from The Son to Om. Use one quotation from each and address one competing reading.

    Sample answer: In The Son, Siddhartha feels “the love for the runaway in his heart, like a wound,” and senses “that it had to become a blossom and had to shine” (The Son, paragraph 33). The simile names the pain, while “had to” already points toward its change. In Om the change completes: “then the great song of the thousand voices consisted of a single word, which was Om: the perfection” (Om, paragraph 17). Grief, laughter and longing merge into one sound, so his own wound becomes one voice among many. A competing reading says he simply stops caring about his son; but the text shows the love remains, now held within the unity rather than against it.

75. [short · synthesis · DOK 4 · Dual Credit (Indiana College Core): ICC-WC-1.5] Close reading: how do the diction and syntax of “With a bright smile, he left; Siddhartha watched him leaving.” (Om, paragraph 25) shape its meaning? Consider a second, competing reading.

    Sample answer: The balanced sentence joins the one who goes and the one who stays: “With a bright smile, he left; Siddhartha watched him leaving.” (Om, paragraph 25). The semicolon splits it into two halves, Vasudeva’s action and Siddhartha’s gaze, and “bright smile” sets a joyful tone. A competing reading sees only loss in the plain second clause:

Vasudeva goes, and Siddhartha is left alone at the ferry. Yet the next sentence says he watched "With deep joy, with deep solemnity" (Om, paragraph 25), so the short, balanced syntax records a completed parting rather than a broken bond.

76. [fill · recall · DOK 1] Fill in the blank with the word that fits: "Unchanged and _____ was only the joy and the cheerful benevolence of his face." Word bank: fading, flourishing, hidden, frozen

    Key: flourishing

77. [fill · recall · DOK 1] Complete the quotation from Om, paragraph 6: "at odds with himself, tending towards _____" Word bank: sleep, riches, despair, travel

    Key: despair

78. [mc · recall · DOK 1] Whom does he confess everything to?

    A. The river god

    B. Vasudeva, a quiet man

    C. Kamala, the courtesan

    D. Govinda, the Brahmin's son

    Key: B (Vasudeva, a quiet man)

79. [mc · recall · DOK 1] Which word completes this sentence from Om, paragraph 13? "Softly sounded the river, singing in many _____."

    A. colours

    B. boats

    C. stones

    D. voices

    Key: D (voices)

80. [mc · recall · DOK 1] In the line "lamentingly its voice sang", what does "lamentingly" most nearly mean?

    A. in a mourning, grieving way

    B. in a joyful, dancing way

    C. in a loud, angry way

    D. in a bored, careless way

    Key: A (in a mourning, grieving way)

81. [mc · recall · DOK 1] What season is it when the river laughs at Siddhartha?

    A. The rainy season

    B. The middle of winter

    C. The spring floods

    D. The dry season

    Key: D (The dry season)

82. [mc · inference · DOK 2] In this chapter, which theme does the following most directly develop? Siddhartha doubts whether his knowledge of oneness is not "a childish idea of the thinking people" (Om, paragraph 2).

    A. Pride in learning

    B. Humility about wisdom

    C. The failure of the senses

    D. The worth of money

    Key: B (Humility about wisdom)

83. [short · inference · DOK 3] What can you infer from this line? “Vasudeva’s listening gave Siddhartha a stronger sensation than ever before, he sensed how his pain, his fears flowed over to him, how his secret hope flowed over” (Om, paragraph 10) Answer by connecting it to one earlier chapter: quote a second passage and explain how the two passages together develop the idea.

    Sample answer: Siddhartha is healed by being heard, not by being taught. The evidence is “Vasudeva’s listening gave Siddhartha a stronger sensation than ever before, he sensed how his pain, his fears flowed over to him, how his secret hope flowed over” (Om, paragraph 10). The verb “flowed” makes Vasudeva’s listening work like the river, carrying his pain and even his secret hope over to his friend. We can infer that Vasudeva has become like the river itself. He learned this from the water: “Often I have listened to it, often I have looked into its eyes, and always I have learned from it.” (Kamala, paragraph 7). Together the passages show that the teacher’s gift is the listening he learned from the river, now passed on to Siddhartha.

84. [mc · inference · DOK 2] What does Siddhartha set out to do one day when the wound burns violently?

    A. Leave the ferry and become a Samana again

    B. Ask Vasudeva to send the boy a message

    C. Go to the city and look for his son

    D. Visit the grave of Kamala on the hill

    Key: C (Go to the city and look for his son)

85. [short · inference · DOK 3] What does this line show about Siddhartha’s love for his son? “longingly and bitterly Siddhartha thought of his son, nurtured his love and tenderness in his heart, allowed the pain to gnaw at him, committed all foolish acts of love” (Om, paragraph 4) Answer by connecting it to one earlier chapter: quote a second passage and explain how the two passages together develop the idea.

    Sample answer: Siddhartha clings to his love even though it hurts him. The evidence is “longingly and bitterly Siddhartha thought of his son, nurtured his love and tenderness in his heart, allowed the pain to gnaw at him, committed all foolish acts of love” (Om, paragraph 4). The verbs “nurtured” and “allowed” show that he keeps the wound open himself, choosing the pain rather than letting it heal. In The Son this passion first took hold of him: “Now he too felt, late, once in his lifetime, this strongest and strangest of all passions, suffered from it, suffered miserably, and was nevertheless in bliss” (The Son, paragraph 17). Together the passages show a love that began as bliss mixed with suffering and has now become a burning wound he still tends.

86. [short · inference · DOK 3] What can you infer from this line? “His wound blossomed, his suffering was shining, his self had flown into the oneness.” (Om, paragraph 19) Answer by connecting it to one earlier chapter: quote a second passage and explain how the two passages together develop the idea.

    Sample answer: Siddhartha’s pain has turned into peace. The evidence is “His wound blossomed, his suffering was shining, his self had flown into the oneness.” (Om, paragraph 19). The wound “blossomed” like a flower, so the same suffering that hurt him now becomes the source of his joy as his self merges into “the oneness.” In The Son he could only hold the pain at bay: “And when he felt the wound burning, he silently spoke the Om, filled himself with Om.” (The Son, paragraph 34). Together the passages show the wound moving from something he must cover with Om to something that opens into Om.

87. [short · inference · DOK 2] What does Siddhartha understand about Vasudeva as he confesses? Use this line. “that Vasudeva had already been like this for a long time, almost forever” (Om, paragraph 10)

    Sample answer: Siddhartha sees that Vasudeva’s holiness is not new; he simply failed to notice it. The evidence is “that Vasudeva had already been like this for a long time, almost forever” (Om, paragraph 10). The phrase “almost forever” shows that the change is in Siddhartha’s seeing, not in his friend.

88. [mc · analysis · DOK 3] Which literary element does this describe in “Om”? Vasudeva takes in Siddhartha’s confession the way a tree takes in the rain.

    A. Simile

B. Flashback

C. Irony

D. Allusion

Key: A (Simile)

89. [mc · analysis · DOK 3] Siddhartha hears the river as one whole (Om, paragraph 17) just before Vasudeva leaves for the forest. Why does that order matter?

A. Vasudeva leaves because Siddhartha has offended him with his questions

B. Siddhartha has learned the river's lesson, so he can now take Vasudeva's place

C. The river's sounds frighten Vasudeva into leaving the hut for ever

D. Vasudeva goes off to bring Siddhartha's runaway son back home from the city now

Key: B (Siddhartha has learned the river's lesson, so he can now take Vasudeva's place)

90. [short · synthesis · DOK 4] Synthesis: trace how the meaning of Om develops from The Son of the Brahmin to Om. Use one quotation from each.

Sample answer: Om moves from a word aimed at a target to a sound that holds everything. In The Son of the Brahmin, "Thus sat he, wrapped up in contemplation, thinking Om, his soul sent after the Brahman as an arrow." (The Son of the Brahmin, paragraph 15). In Om, the smile floats "as the Om was floating in the air over all the voices of the river" (Om, paragraph 19). The first passage makes Om a means of reaching; the second shows it present in all things.

91. [fill · recall · DOK 1] Fill in the blank with the word that fits: "his eyes were starting to get _____" Word bank: weak, blue, wooden, salty

Key: weak

92. [mc · recall · DOK 1] In the line "Slowly blossomed, slowly ripened in Siddhartha the realisation, the knowledge, what wisdom actually was, what the goal of his long search was.", what does "blossomed" most nearly mean?

A. developed; grew and flourished

B. played games of chance for money

C. carried across water by boat

D. withered; dried up

Key: A (developed; grew and flourished)

93. [fill · recall · DOK 1] Complete the quotation from Om, paragraph 16: "full of yearning, full of burning woe, full of _____ desire" Word bank: gentle, forgotten, faint, unsatisfiable

Key: unsatisfiable

94. [mc · recall · DOK 1] How do the many voices of the river sound to Siddhartha on this day?

A. Angry and threatening, like a storm

B. Silent and dead

C. New, though he had often heard them before

D. Exactly as on every other day

Key: C (New, though he had often heard them before)

95. [mc · recall · DOK 1] Which word completes this sentence from Om, paragraph 1? "Many a traveller Siddhartha had to ferry across the river who was _____ by a son or a daughter"

A. sneezed

B. manufactured

C. accompanied

D. knitted

Key: C (accompanied)

96. [mc · recall · DOK 1] In the line “Worthy of love and admiration were these people in their blind loyalty, their blind strength and tenacity.”, what does “tenacity” most nearly mean?

A. stubborn persistence

B. sudden weakness

C. careless laziness

D. gentle humour

Key: A (stubborn persistence)

97. [mc · inference · DOK 2] What does this passage most clearly show? “Even bad people, even thieves and robbers have children and love them” (Om, paragraph 1)

A. His fear of robbers on the river

B. His wish to punish wrongdoers

C. His envy of fathers with children

D. His pride in his own goodness and wisdom

Key: C (His envy of fathers with children)

98. [mc · inference · DOK 2] In this chapter, which theme does the following most directly develop? “Now it’s enough. Farewell, hut, farewell, river, farewell, Siddhartha!” (Om, paragraph 21)

A. Bitterness at an ungrateful friend

B. Letting go when the work is done

C. Fear of the forest

D. Longing for the city

Key: B (Letting go when the work is done)

99. [short · inference · DOK 3] What does Siddhartha learn about the river’s goals? Use this line and one more quotation from the chapter. “every goal was followed by a new one” (Om, paragraph 16)

Sample answer: Siddhartha learns that no goal is final, because life keeps flowing on. The evidence is “every goal was followed by a new one” (Om, paragraph 16). Later the endless striving becomes whole: “All of it together was the flow of events, was the music of life.” (Om, paragraph 17). Together the passages show that the restless goals, heard as one, make up life itself.

100. [short · inference · DOK 3] What pattern does Siddhartha recognize? Use this line. “everything came back, which had not been suffered and solved up to its end, the same pain was suffered over and over again.” (Om, paragraph 6) Answer by connecting it to one earlier chapter: quote a second passage and explain how the two passages together develop the idea.

Sample answer: “everything came back, which had not been suffered and solved up to its end, the same pain was suffered over and over again.” (Om, paragraph 6). Pain that is not fully faced returns. The words "over and over again" show the cycle of suffering that runs from his father to him to his son. Vasudeva foretold this pattern: “This too, I have learned from the river: everything is coming back” (Kamala, paragraph 11). Together the passages show that the return Vasudeva predicted is not only Siddhartha's journey but also his suffering, which comes back until he faces it.

101. [short · inference · DOK 2] What can you infer from this line? “harmony, knowledge of the eternal perfection of the world, smiling, oneness” (Om, paragraph 3) Answer in two or three sentences with one detail.
Sample answer: Siddhartha now sees in Vasudeva's face the enlightenment he has reached himself. The evidence is “harmony, knowledge of the eternal perfection of the world, smiling, oneness” (Om, paragraph 3). The words describing Vasudeva's face ("harmony," "smiling," "oneness") now describe what Siddhartha has reached. We can infer that the student has become like his teacher.

102. [mc · analysis · DOK 3] Siddhartha sits down beside Vasudeva and slowly starts his confession (Om, paragraph 9); by paragraph 17 he hears the river as one. How does the confession prepare for that moment?
A. Saying his wound aloud to a listener frees him to hear the river
B. It shows that he no longer needs Vasudeva’s company or his help
C. It proves that Vasudeva wants to leave the river and the hut
D. It marks his firm decision to go back to the city to find his son
Key: A (Saying his wound aloud to a listener frees him to hear the river)

103. [mc · analysis · DOK 3] Which literary element does this describe in “Om”? Vasudeva’s smile floats over his wrinkles as the Om floats over the river’s voices.
A. Simile
B. Flashback
C. Irony
D. Setting
Key: A (Simile)

104. [short · analysis · DOK 3] Claim: Siddhartha's enlightenment comes from listening, not from teaching: he hears every voice of life as one. Explain how this evidence supports the claim: “then the great song of the thousand voices consisted of a single word, which was Om: the perfection” (Om, paragraph 17).
Sample answer: The evidence supports the claim because Siddhartha reaches oneness by listening, not by being taught: “then the great song of the thousand voices consisted of a single word, which was Om: the perfection” (Om, paragraph 17). No doctrine is spoken here; the river's many voices, of joy and grief, good and evil, simply merge as he hears them. The word “song” matters: truth arrives as something heard and felt, and the single word “Om” gathers all those voices into one, which is exactly what listening, rather than teaching, can give.

105. [short · synthesis · DOK 4] Synthesis: trace how unity of opposites develops from By the River to Om. Use one quotation from each. Address one competing reading and answer it.
Sample answer: Opposites move from a paradox he lives to a harmony he hears. In By the River he sees that folly led to wisdom: “I had to become a fool, to find Atman in me again.” (By the River, paragraph 42). In Om every voice, good and bad, joins one sound: “All of it together was the flow of events, was the music of life.” (Om, paragraph 17). The fool and the seeker of Atman, the sorrow and the pleasure, turn out to belong to one whole. A competing reading says Om simply erases evil, so there are no opposites left. But the music is made “all of it together,” so the opposites remain and are held in harmony rather than removed.

106. [fill · recall · DOK 1] Fill in the blank with the word that fits: “the less _____ it became, the more he realised that everything was in order and natural” Word bank: ordinary, boring, wondrous, simple
Key: wondrous

107. [fill · recall · DOK 1] Complete the quotation from Om, paragraph 13: “The river sang with a voice of _____”
Word bank: triumph, suffering, anger, silence
Key: suffering

108. [mc · recall · DOK 1] What does Siddhartha feel Vasudeva has become while listening to him?

A. A judge of his foolishness

B. A stranger he cannot trust

C. The river itself, God, the eternal

D. A merchant weighing his every word for profit

Key: C (The river itself, God, the eternal)

109. [mc · recall · DOK 1] In the line "the blind, wild desire of a young, vain woman for jewelry", what does "vain" most nearly mean?

A. too proud of one's looks

B. deeply generous

C. very wise

D. quite shy

Key: A (too proud of one's looks)

110. [fill · recall · DOK 1] Fill in the blank with the word that fits: "They lacked nothing, there was nothing the knowledgeable one, the _____, had to put him above them except for one little thing" Word bank: thinker, kettle, ladder, pebble

Key: thinker

111. [mc · recall · DOK 1] Which word completes this sentence from Om, paragraph 25? "saw his steps full of peace, saw his head full of lustre, saw his body full of _____"

A. pain

B. shame

C. fear

D. light

Key: D (light)

112. [mc · inference · DOK 2] What does this passage most clearly show? "Siddhartha made a deep bow before him who bid his farewell." (Om, paragraph 22)

A. His anger at being left

B. His fear of being alone

C. His reverence for Vasudeva

D. His wish to keep Vasudeva at the hut

Key: C (His reverence for Vasudeva)

113. [mc · inference · DOK 2] In this chapter, which theme does the following most directly develop? "I've been waiting for this hour, my dear." (Om, paragraph 21)

A. Fear of the forest

B. Patience fulfilled at the right moment

C. Shame at weakness and at needing help from others

D. Love of beauty in the world

Key: B (Patience fulfilled at the right moment)

114. [short · inference · DOK 3] How does Vasudeva help Siddhartha without speaking? Use this line and one more quotation from the chapter. "said nothing, let his silent love and cheerfulness, understanding and knowledge, shine at him" (Om, paragraph 11)

Sample answer: Vasudeva helps through quiet presence instead of advice. The evidence is that he "said nothing, let his silent love and cheerfulness, understanding and knowledge, shine at him" (Om, paragraph 11). Even his question is wordless, for "Vasudeva's mute gaze asked." (Om, paragraph 14). Together the passages show that he teaches by silence and attention.

115. [short · inference · DOK 3] What can you infer about Siddhartha's state before the river's lesson? Use this line and one more quotation from the chapter. "Though he was near perfection and was bearing his final wound" (Om, paragraph 2)

Sample answer: Siddhartha is close to wisdom, but his pain still holds him back. The evidence is "Though he was near perfection and was bearing his final wound" (Om, paragraph 2). The narrator adds: "Alas, the wound was not blossoming yet" (Om, paragraph 7). Together the passages show that one last suffering must be accepted before he is whole.

116. [short · inference · DOK 2] What does Siddhartha feel when he is finally able to confess? Use this line. "He reported everything, he was able to say everything, even the most embarrassing parts" (Om, paragraph 9)

Sample answer: Siddhartha feels free to be completely honest. The evidence is "He reported everything, he was able to say everything, even the most embarrassing parts" (Om, paragraph 9). The repeated "everything" and the admission of "embarrassing parts" show that nothing is held back, which prepares his healing.

117. [mc · analysis · DOK 3] Which literary element does this describe in "Om"? The chapter opens with the wound still burning and ends with the wound blossoming.

A. Structure

B. Allusion

C. Hyperbole

D. Alliteration

Key: A (Structure)

118. [mc · analysis · DOK 3] How does Siddhartha now see the worldly people he once scorned?

A. As fools to be pitied

B. As his brothers, worthy of love

C. As enemies of wisdom who should be avoided

D. As customers only

Key: B (As his brothers, worthy of love)

119. [short · analysis · DOK 3] Claim: Siddhartha's new wisdom makes him humbler, not prouder. Explain how this evidence supports the claim: "less smart, less proud, but instead warmer, more curious, more involved" (Om, paragraph 2)

Sample answer: The evidence supports the claim because Siddhartha now meets people without superiority: "less smart, less proud, but instead warmer, more curious, more involved" (Om, paragraph 2). The words "less proud" show him giving up the thinker's pride, and "warmer" shows that wisdom has made him kinder rather than distant.

120. [short · synthesis · DOK 4] Synthesis: trace how the smile of the enlightened develops from Gotama to Om. Use one quotation from each. Address one competing reading and answer it.

Sample answer: The enlightened smile moves from something Siddhartha admires in another to something he wears himself. In Gotama, the Buddha's "glance and half of a smile remained forever etched in Siddhartha's memory." (Gotama, paragraph 43). In Om, "brightly the same smile was now starting to shine on Siddhartha's face as well." (Om, paragraph 19). A competing reading says he merely copies Vasudeva. Yet the smile comes only after he hears the river himself, so it is his own.

121. [fill · recall · DOK 1] Fill in the blank with the word that fits: "this motionless listener was absorbing his confession into himself like a tree the _____" Word bank: axe, rain, fire, stone

    Key: rain

122. [fill · recall · DOK 1] Fill in the blank with the word that fits: "the boy, _____ rushing along the burning course of his young wishes" Word bank: patiently, sleepily, humbly, greedily

    Key: greedily

123. [mc · recall · DOK 1] In the line "became lovable, even became worthy of veneration to him", what does "veneration" most nearly mean?

    A. mild amusement

    B. open contempt

    C. deep respect; reverence

    D. quiet pity

    Key: C (deep respect; reverence)

124. [mc · recall · DOK 1] In the line "all of these simple, foolish, but immensely strong, strongly living, strongly prevailing urges", what does "prevailing" most nearly mean?

    A. dominant; winning out

    B. fading; weakening

    C. hidden; secret

    D. borrowed; copied

    Key: A (dominant; winning out)

125. [mc · recall · DOK 1] In the line "in their tough, unrelenting performance of what is necessary", what does "unrelenting" most nearly mean?

    A. soft and hesitant

    B. cruel, spiteful and full of hate

    C. lazy and slow

    D. never easing or stopping

    Key: D (never easing or stopping)

126. [mc · recall · DOK 1] What does Siddhartha say when Vasudeva announces he is leaving?

    A. That Vasudeva must stay

    B. That he will come too

    C. That the hut will be lonely

    D. That he has known it

    Key: D (That he has known it)

127. [short · inference · DOK 3] What can you infer about Vasudeva as his body weakens? Use this line and one more quotation from the chapter. "Unchanged and flourishing was only the joy and the cheerful benevolence of his face." (Om, paragraph 8)

    Sample answer: Vasudeva's spirit stays strong while his body fails. The evidence is "Unchanged and flourishing was only the joy and the cheerful benevolence of his face." (Om, paragraph 8). The same peace soon passes to his friend: "In this hour, Siddhartha stopped fighting his fate, stopped suffering." (Om, paragraph 20). Together the passages show that Vasudeva's joy is the goal Siddhartha now reaches.

128. [mc · inference · DOK 2] In this chapter, which theme does the following most directly develop? “the conscious thought of the oneness of all life” (Om, paragraph 2)

A. Wealth and its cost

B. The oneness of all life

C. The teacher and the teaching

D. Pride in learning

Key: B (The oneness of all life)

129. [short · inference · DOK 3] What does Siddhartha understand when he stops tying his soul to one voice? Use this line and one more quotation from the chapter. “when he did not tie his soul to any particular voice and submerged his self into it” (Om, paragraph 17)

Sample answer: Siddhartha understands that oneness comes from letting go of the self. The evidence is “when he did not tie his soul to any particular voice and submerged his self into it” (Om, paragraph 17). Vasudeva then leaves for the same goal: “I’m going into the forests, I’m going into the oneness” (Om, paragraph 24). Together the passages show that surrender, not effort, leads to unity.

130. [short · inference · DOK 2] What happens to the water in the cycle Siddhartha sees? Use this line. “the water turned into vapour and rose to the sky…” (Om, paragraph 16)

Sample answer: The water changes form but keeps returning. The evidence is “the water turned into vapour and rose to the sky…” (Om, paragraph 16). The movement from “vapour” to “rain” shows a cycle with no end, which mirrors the return of pain and the unity of life.

131. [short · inference · DOK 2] Why does Siddhartha begin bidding farewell to Vasudeva in his heart? Use this line. “He felt, that he was now seeing old Vasudeva as the people see the gods, and that this could not last” (Om, paragraph 10)

Sample answer: Siddhartha senses that Vasudeva has reached a holiness that will soon take him away. The evidence is “He felt, that he was now seeing old Vasudeva as the people see the gods, and that this could not last” (Om, paragraph 10). Seeing him “as the people see the gods” shows his reverence, and “could not last” shows that he expects the parting.

132. [mc · analysis · DOK 3] What does Vasudeva’s long wait for “this hour” reveal about him?

A. He fears the forest

B. He has stayed only to guide Siddhartha

C. He is tired of Siddhartha

D. He wants to sell the hut and leave the river

Key: B (He has stayed only to guide Siddhartha)

133. [mc · analysis · DOK 3] Which literary element does this describe in “Om”? The water turning to vapour, falling again and flowing on suggests the cycle of all life.

A. Symbolism

B. Flashback

C. Dialogue

D. Hyperbole

Key: A (Symbolism)

134. [short · analysis · DOK 3] Analyze the word choice in “everything was intertwined and connected, entangled a thousand times” (Om, paragraph 17). Pick two words and explain what they suggest.

Sample answer: All voices of life are bound together. The evidence is “everything was intertwined and connected, entangled a thousand times" (Om, paragraph 17). "Intertwined" suggests threads woven together, and "entangled" suggests a knot that cannot be undone, so no single voice can be separated from the whole.

135. [short · synthesis · DOK 4] Synthesis: trace how Siddhartha's sense of time and wholeness develops from The Ferryman to Om. Use one quotation from each. Address one competing reading and answer it.
Sample answer: In The Ferryman the river teaches Siddhartha that time is unreal: "Nothing was, nothing will be; everything is, everything has existence and is present." (The Ferryman, paragraph 35). In Om that idea becomes something he hears and feels: "all that was good and evil, all of this together was the world" (Om, paragraph 17). The first passage is a thought about time; the second takes in every voice, including grief and evil, as one whole. A competing reading says nothing new is learned in Om. But in The Ferryman he still suffers over his son afterwards, while in Om the knowledge reaches his pain, which is why he stops fighting his fate.

Rigor version	Items (in order)	Mix
HS Sophomore	1, 2, 3, 4, 5, 6, 7, 8, 9, 10, 11, 12, 13, 14, 15	recall 11, inference 2, analysis 1, synthesis 1
HS Junior	16, 17, 18, 19, 20, 21, 22, 23, 24, 25, 26, 27, 28, 29, 30	recall 10, inference 3, analysis 1, synthesis 1
HS Senior	31, 32, 33, 34, 35, 36, 37, 38, 39, 40, 41, 42, 43, 44, 45	recall 9, inference 3, analysis 2, synthesis 1
AP	46, 47, 48, 49, 50, 51, 52, 53, 54, 55, 56, 57, 58, 59, 60	recall 6, inference 4, analysis 3, synthesis 2
College Freshman	61, 62, 63, 64, 65, 66, 67, 68, 69, 70, 71, 72, 73, 74, 75	recall 6, inference 4, analysis 3, synthesis 2
College Sophomore	76, 77, 78, 79, 80, 81, 82, 83, 84, 85, 86, 87, 88, 89, 90	recall 6, inference 6, analysis 2, synthesis 1
College Junior	91, 92, 93, 94, 95, 96, 97, 98, 99, 100, 101, 102, 103, 104, 105	recall 6, inference 5, analysis 3, synthesis 1
College Senior	106, 107, 108, 109, 110, 111, 112, 113, 114, 115, 116, 117, 118, 119, 120	recall 6, inference 5, analysis 3, synthesis 1
Graduate / PhD	121, 122, 123, 124, 125, 126, 127, 128, 129, 130, 131, 132, 133, 134, 135	recall 6, inference 5, analysis 3, synthesis 1

Writing prompts (eleven rigor levels)

HS Sophomore (450 words; Dual Credit (Indiana College Core): ICC-WC-1.1, ICC-WC-1.3, ICC-WC-1.4, ICC-WC-1.5): Analyze how Om develops the idea of hearing the many voices. Make a precise claim, support it with at least three pieces of textual evidence, and explain how the author's use of symbolism and imagery shapes that idea. Address one possible counterclaim. (You are reading the English translation by Gunther Olesch, Anke Dreher, Amy Coulter, Stefan Langer and Semyon Chaichenets, so word-choice evidence is the translators' English.)

HS Junior (550 words; Dual Credit (Indiana College Core): ICC-WC-1.1, ICC-WC-1.3, ICC-WC-1.4, ICC-WC-1.5): Analyze how the structure of Om (where it begins, turns and ends) and its symbolism shape the reader's understanding of hearing the many voices. Identify one place where the text leaves matters uncertain and explain how that uncertainty adds to its meaning.

HS Senior (600 words; Dual Credit (Indiana College Core): ICC-WC-1.1, ICC-WC-1.3, ICC-WC-1.4, ICC-WC-1.5): Two readers disagree about what Om suggests about hearing the many voices. Lay out two plausible interpretations, weigh the evidence for each (including the chapter's symbolism and imagery), and argue for the stronger one in a sustained, well-organized essay.

AP (650 words; Dual Credit (Indiana College Core): ICC-WC-1.1, ICC-WC-1.3, ICC-WC-1.4, ICC-WC-1.5): Write a literary argument in which you analyze how Hermann Hesse uses symbolism in Om to complicate the reader's understanding of hearing the many voices. Develop a defensible thesis, select evidence purposefully, and explain how specific choices of diction and syntax create meaning.

College Freshman (1000 words; Dual Credit (Indiana College Core): ICC-WC-1.3, ICC-WC-1.5, ICC-WC-1.1): Situate Om within its historical and literary context and argue how the chapter's treatment of hearing the many voices responds to that context. Engage with at least one secondary perspective (a critic, historian or the author's own statements), integrate quotations smoothly, and cite in APA style.

College Sophomore (1250 words; Dual Credit (Indiana College Core): ICC-WC-1.1, ICC-WC-1.3, ICC-WC-1.4, ICC-WC-1.5): Read Om alongside the conventions of its genre and period. Argue how the chapter's handling of hearing the many voices follows or bends those conventions, using the symbolism as evidence, and test your reading against one published critic. Document two secondary sources in APA.

College Junior (1500 words; Dual Credit (Indiana College Core): ICC-WC-1.1, ICC-WC-1.3, ICC-WC-1.4, ICC-WC-1.5): Apply a named critical approach (for example formalist, historicist, feminist, psychoanalytic or ecocritical) to Om and its treatment of hearing the many voices. State your method, show what it reveals in the chapter's symbolism and imagery, and identify where the text resists it.

College Senior (2000 words; Dual Credit (Indiana College Core): ICC-WC-1.1, ICC-WC-1.3, ICC-WC-1.4, ICC-WC-1.5): Develop a research argument that reads Om as evidence for a larger claim about hearing the many voices in Siddhartha. Connect close reading of the chapter to the whole novel, engage at least four scholarly sources, and state precisely where your reading departs from theirs (Chicago style).

Graduate / PhD (2500 words; Dual Credit (Indiana College Core): ICC-WC-1.1, ICC-WC-1.3, ICC-WC-1.4, ICC-WC-1.5): Develop an original argument that reads Om as a hinge in the novel's larger treatment of hearing the many voices. Position your reading within a named critical conversation (for example formalist, historicist, psychoanalytic, feminist or postcolonial approaches), account for the textual history where relevant, and articulate the stakes of your intervention for scholarship on Siddhartha.

SAT-style questions

1. Slowly blossomed, slowly ripened in Siddhartha the realisation, the knowledge, what wisdom actually was, what the goal of his long search was. It was nothing but a readiness of the soul, an ability, a secret art, to think every moment, while living his life, the thought of oneness, to be able to feel and inhale the oneness. Slowly this blossomed in him, was shining back at him from Vasudeva's old, childlike face: harmony, knowledge of the eternal perfection of the world, smiling, oneness.

As used in the text, what does the word "inhale" most nearly mean?

A. breathe in

B. push away

C. write down

D. put out

2. Slowly blossomed, slowly ripened in Siddhartha the realisation, the knowledge, what wisdom actually was, what the goal of his long search was. It was nothing but a readiness of the soul, an ability, a secret art, to think every moment, while living his life, the thought of oneness, to be able to feel and inhale the oneness. Slowly this blossomed in him, was shining back at him from Vasudeva's old, childlike face: harmony, knowledge of the eternal perfection of the world, smiling, oneness.

Which choice best states the central idea of this passage?

A. Wisdom is a lived readiness to feel the oneness of all things

B. Wisdom is a set of teachings learned from Vasudeva

C. Siddhartha has grown too old to search any more

D. Vasudeva's face shows that he is tired

SAT key: 1. A (breathe in); 2. A (Wisdom is a lived readiness to feel the oneness of all things)

Lesson 13: Govinda

Focus: wisdom cannot be taught

Objective: Students will analyze how theme develops in "Govinda" by writing a claim-evidence-reasoning paragraph that cites at least 2 quotations from the section, and will score at least 80% on the section quiz.

Standards: Dual Credit (Indiana College Core): ICC-WC-1.1, ICC-WC-1.3, ICC-WC-1.4, ICC-WC-1.5

Content note (violence and sexuality in a symbolic vision): Govinda's vision includes "he saw the face of a murderer, he saw him plunging a knife into the body of another person" (Hesse, 1922/2015, Govinda, para. 41), an execution and lovers (Govinda, para. 41): brief and symbolic, all held in one smile.
Student preview: Govinda has a vision of all of life, good and terrible, in one face.
Suggested language: "What does the river of faces show Govinda?"

Teacher only · spoilers

Old Govinda, still searching, comes to the ferry and asks for teaching. Siddhartha says that wisdom cannot be communicated in words, that every truth's opposite is also true, and that one must love the world. Asked to kiss Siddhartha's forehead, Govinda sees in his face a stream of countless faces and forms—the unity of all things—and bows, weeping, before his friend's smile.

Background: The ending echoes Buddhist ideas of non-self and the Hindu idea of the oneness of reality.

Significance: The final image, Siddhartha's smile resembling Gotama's, suggests he has found his own path to enlightenment.

Lesson plan and lecture script (90 minutes)

0–8 min · Bell-ringer · You do (8 min)
Students write to the bell-ringer, then pair-share.
Govinda followed a teacher all his life; Siddhartha followed experience. Who learned more? Write for five minutes. Starters: I think... because... / This connects to teaching versus experience because....
Prompt: Govinda followed a teacher all his life; Siddhartha followed experience. Who learned more?
Sentence starters: I think… because… · This connects to teaching versus experience because…
Strong response: A strong response takes a position and anticipates this: knowledge can be taught, wisdom cannot.

8–18 min · Vocabulary with etymology notes · We do (10 min)
Five key words in context, with verified word histories.
Today's words: insights — understandings; realizations; benevolently — in a kind, well-meaning way; searcher — a person who searches; bizarre — strikingly unusual or odd; progressed — moved forward; advanced. "searcher": Origin: Old French cercheor.
Words: insights: understandings; realizations · benevolently: in a kind, well-meaning way · searcher: a person who searches · bizarre: strikingly unusual or odd · progressed: moved forward; advanced

18–28 min · Background and context · I do (10 min)
Mini-lecture (read or adapt the script).
The ending echoes Buddhist ideas of non-self and the Hindu idea of the oneness of reality. The final image, Siddhartha's smile resembling Gotama's, suggests he has found his own path to enlightenment. Dialogue: Siddhartha and the old Govinda talk; Siddhartha says wisdom cannot be taught. Characterization: Govinda kisses his forehead and sees all faces in Siddhartha's face. Symbolism: Govinda's vision of countless faces in Siddhartha's face (fish, newborns, murderers, gods) shows the unity Siddhartha cannot put into words; the smile he sees is like the Buddha's. Watch for the river: The river teaches unity, simultaneity and listening; it returns in every stage of Siddhartha's life. In this chapter: "He heard talk of an old ferryman, who lived one day's journey away by the river, and who was regarded as a wise man by many." (Govinda, paragraph 1).

28–40 min · I do: modeled close reading · I do (12 min)
Model the close reading of the anchor quotation using the written think-aloud below.
First, meaning. I read "Searching means: having a goal. But finding means: being free, being open, having no goal" slowly and put it in my own words: Siddhartha tells Govinda that searching means having a goal, while finding means being free, open and goalless. Next, craft. I notice the contrast between "searching" and "finding," explained like definitions. The strongest word is "free": it shows that letting go of the goal, not chasing it, brings wisdom. Then, effect. What does Siddhartha teach Govinda about searching and finding? My answer: Govinda has searched all his life without finding peace because he is too fixed on the goal; Siddhartha teaches that openness, not effort, allows wisdom to come.

> Searching means: having a goal. But finding means: being free, being open, having no goal (Govinda, paragraph 7)

Think-aloud: First, meaning. I read "Searching means: having a goal. But finding means: being free, being open, having no goal" slowly and put it in my own words: Siddhartha tells Govinda that searching means having a goal, while finding means being free, open and goalless. Next, craft. I notice the contrast between "searching" and "finding," explained like definitions. The strongest word is "free": it shows that letting go of the goal, not chasing it, brings wisdom. Then, effect. What does Siddhartha teach Govinda about searching and finding? My answer: Govinda has searched all his life without finding peace because he is too fixed on the goal; Siddhartha teaches that openness, not effort, allows wisdom to come.

40–55 min · We do: guided annotation · We do (15 min)
Guided analysis of a second quotation; expected answers given.
Ask: What words in this line stand out, and what do they suggest? Expected: The paradox is that a book (words) argues that wisdom cannot be passed on in words. Students might answer that the novel offers an experience, not a doctrine: we live Siddhartha's life with him. Expected link: teaching versus experience. Ask: How does this line connect to teaching versus experience? Expected: Knowledge can be taught, wisdom cannot. (The novel's thesis.)

> wisdom cannot be passed on. Wisdom which a wise man tries to pass on to someone always sounds like foolishness (Govinda, paragraph 17)

Ask: What words in this line stand out, and what do they suggest?
Expected answer: The paradox is that a book (words) argues that wisdom cannot be passed on in words. Students might answer that the novel offers an experience, not a doctrine: we live Siddhartha's life with him. Expected link: teaching versus experience.
Ask: How does this line connect to teaching versus experience?
Expected answer: Knowledge can be taught, wisdom cannot. (The novel's thesis.)

55–70 min · You do: independent annotation · You do (15 min)
Independent annotation and a claim-evidence-reasoning paragraph (exemplar given).
Annotate the chapter for dialogue, characterization (three marks with a margin note each), then write one claim-evidence-reasoning paragraph: what does this chapter suggest about the idea that wisdom cannot be taught? Then start your writing prompt at your assigned level (HS Sophomore: Analyze how Govinda develops the idea that wisdom cannot be taught. Make a precise claim, support it with at least three pieces of textual evidence, and explain how the author's use of theme and characterization shapes that idea. Address one possible counterclaim. (You are reading the English translation by Gunther Olesch, Anke Dreher, Amy Coulter, Stefan Langer and Semyon Chaichenets, so word-choice evidence is the translators' English.)) Exemplar: The novel ends by claiming that wisdom must be lived, not taught. When the text says "wisdom cannot be passed on. Wisdom which a wise man tries to pass on to someone always sounds like foolishness" (Govinda, paragraph 17), it shows this directly. Siddhartha tells Govinda that "wisdom cannot be passed on" and that "searching means: having a goal," which is Govinda's obstacle; Govinda's understanding comes only when he kisses Siddhartha's forehead and sees, rather than hears.
Task: Annotate the chapter for dialogue, characterization (three marks with a margin note each), then write one claim-evidence-reasoning paragraph: what does this chapter suggest about the idea that wisdom cannot be taught? Then start your writing prompt at your assigned level (HS Sophomore: Analyze how Govinda develops the idea that wisdom cannot be taught. Make a precise claim, support it with at least three pieces of textual evidence, and explain how the author's use of theme and characterization shapes that idea. Address one possible counterclaim. (You are reading the English translation by Gunther Olesch, Anke Dreher, Amy Coulter, Stefan Langer and Semyon Chaichenets, so word-choice evidence is the translators' English.))
Exemplar: The novel ends by claiming that wisdom must be lived, not taught. When the text says "wisdom cannot be passed on. Wisdom which a wise man tries to pass on to someone always sounds like foolishness" (Govinda, paragraph 17), it shows this directly. Siddhartha tells Govinda that "wisdom cannot be passed on" and that "searching means: having a goal," which is Govinda's obstacle; Govinda's understanding comes only when he kisses Siddhartha's forehead and sees, rather than hears.

70–80 min · Discussion · We do (10 min)
Structured discussion from the 30 tiered questions, with facilitation notes.
Anchor question: Govinda followed a teacher all his life; Siddhartha followed experience. Who learned more? Ask: is there a paradox in a novel teaching that wisdom cannot be taught?
Anchor question: Govinda followed a teacher all his life; Siddhartha followed experience. Who learned more?
Facilitation: Ask: is there a paradox in a novel teaching that wisdom cannot be taught?

80–87 min · Exit ticket / chapter quiz · You do (7 min)
Chapter quiz in the app and an exit ticket (answer given).
Chapter quiz in the app, then: In one sentence, what does this chapter suggest about the idea that wisdom cannot be taught? Support it with one short quotation. Model answer: The novel ends by claiming that wisdom must be lived, not taught. ("wisdom cannot be passed on. Wisdom which a wise man tries to pass on to someone always sounds like foolishness", Govinda, paragraph 17). Accept any defensible claim backed by a quotation from the chapter; the answer key for the quiz is in the Quiz section.
Exit ticket: In one sentence, what does this chapter suggest about the idea that wisdom cannot be taught? Support it with one short quotation.
Answer: Model answer: The novel ends by claiming that wisdom must be lived, not taught. ("wisdom cannot be passed on. Wisdom which a wise man tries to pass on to someone always sounds like foolishness", Govinda, paragraph 17). Accept any defensible claim backed by a quotation from the chapter; the answer key for the quiz is in the Quiz section.

87–90 min · Closure · I do (3 min)
Summarize the lesson and preview the next reading.
Today we saw how dialogue shapes the idea that wisdom cannot be taught. Key takeaway: knowledge can be taught, wisdom cannot.

Total: 90 minutes.

60-minute version of this lesson

Same script and content as above, with these timings (60 minutes).

Clock	Segment	Minutes	What to keep
0–5	Bell-ringer	5	Students write to the bell-ringer, then pair-share.
5–10	Vocabulary with etymology notes	5	Five key words in context, with verified word histories.
10–16	Background and context	6	Mini-lecture (read or adapt the script).
16–24	I do: modeled close reading	8	Model the close reading of the anchor quotation using the written think-aloud below.
24–34	We do: guided annotation	10	Guided analysis of a second quotation; expected answers given.
34–44	You do: independent annotation	10	Independent annotation and a claim-evidence-reasoning paragraph (exemplar given).

44–54	Discussion	10	Structured discussion from the 30 tiered questions, with facilitation notes.
54–58	Exit ticket / chapter quiz	4	Chapter quiz in the app and an exit ticket (answer given).
58–60	Closure	2	Summarize the lesson and preview the next reading.

Teacher analysis (spoilers)

Literary elements

- Dialogue: Siddhartha and the old Govinda talk; Siddhartha says wisdom cannot be taught.
- Characterization: Govinda kisses his forehead and sees all faces in Siddhartha's face.
- Symbolism: Govinda's vision of countless faces in Siddhartha's face (fish, newborns, murderers, gods) shows the unity Siddhartha cannot put into words; the smile he sees is like the Buddha's.

Themes and how they develop

- teaching versus experience: knowledge can be taught, wisdom cannot.
- unity of opposites: Siddhartha says the world "is perfect in every moment, all sin already carries the divine forgiveness in itself."

Symbols and motifs

- the river: The river teaches unity, simultaneity and listening; it returns in every stage of Siddhartha's life. In this chapter: “He heard talk of an old ferryman, who lived one day's journey away by the river, and who was regarded as a wise man by many.” (Govinda, paragraph 1).
- teachers and teachings: Siddhartha learns from many teachers but concludes that wisdom cannot be taught in words. In this chapter: “Do you have a teaching? Do you have a faith, or a knowledge, you follow, which helps you to live and to do right?” (Govinda, paragraph 14).

Key quotations (checked against the reading text)

- “wisdom cannot be passed on. Wisdom which a wise man tries to pass on to someone always sounds like foolishness” (Govinda, paragraph 17) The novel's thesis.
- “Searching means: having a goal. But finding means: being free, being open, having no goal” (Govinda, paragraph 7) Govinda's problem.
- “I can love a stone, Govinda, and also a tree or a piece of bark” (Govinda, paragraph 26) Love of the world.

Model claim-evidence-reasoning

Claim: The novel ends by claiming that wisdom must be lived, not taught.
Evidence: “wisdom cannot be passed on. Wisdom which a wise man tries to pass on to someone always sounds like foolishness” (Govinda, paragraph 17)
Reasoning: Siddhartha tells Govinda that "wisdom cannot be passed on" and that "searching means: having a goal," which is Govinda's obstacle; Govinda's understanding comes only when he kisses Siddhartha's forehead and sees, rather than hears.

Passages referenced in this lesson (full text)

A goal stood before Siddhartha, a single goal: to become empty, empty of thirst, empty of wishing, empty of dreams, empty of joy and sorrow. Dead to himself, not to be a self any more, to find tranquility with an emptied heart, to be open to miracles in unselfish thoughts, that was his goal. Once all of my self was overcome and had died, once every desire and every urge was silent in the heart, then the ultimate part of me had to awake, the innermost of my being, which is no longer my self, the great secret. (With the Samanas, paragraph 3)

By his side lived Govinda, his shadow, walked the same paths, undertook the same efforts. They rarely spoke to one another, than the service and the exercises required. Occasionally the two of them went through the villages, to beg for food for themselves and their teachers. (With the Samanas, paragraph 8)

Quoth Siddhartha: "I can't help but feel that it is not like this, my friend. What I've learned, being among the Samanas, up to this day, this, O Govinda, I could have learned more quickly and by simpler means. In every tavern of that part of a town where the whorehouses are, my friend, among carters and gamblers I could have learned it." (With the Samanas, paragraph 11)

The Buddha went on his way, modestly and deep in his thoughts, his calm face was neither happy nor sad, it seemed to smile quietly and inwardly. With a hidden smile, quiet, calm, somewhat resembling a healthy child, the Buddha walked, wore the robe and placed his feet just as all of his monks did, according to a precise rule. But his face and his walk, his quietly lowered glance, his quietly dangling hand and even every finger of his quietly dangling hand expressed peace, expressed perfection, did not search, did not imitate, breathed softly in an unwithering calm, in an unwithering light, an untouchable peace. (Gotama, paragraph 12)

Right afterwards, when the Buddha had retired for the night, Govinda turned to Siddhartha and spoke eagerly: "Siddhartha, it is not my place to scold you. We have both heard the exalted one, we have both perceived the teachings. Govinda has heard the teachings, he has taken refuge in it. But you, my honoured friend, don't you also want to walk the path of salvation? Would you want to hesitate, do you want to wait any longer?" (Gotama, paragraph 20)

"I wish that you, O exalted one, would not be angry with me," said the young man. "I have not spoken to you like this to argue with you, to argue about words. You are truly right, there is little to opinions. But let me say this one more thing: I have not doubted in you for a single moment. I have not doubted for a single moment that you are Buddha, that you have reached the goal, the highest goal towards which so many thousands of Brahmins and sons of Brahmins are on their way. You have found salvation from death. It has come to you in the course of your own search, on your own path, through thoughts, through meditation, through realizations, through enlightenment. It has not come to you by means of teachings! And—thus is my thought, O exalted one—nobody will obtain salvation by means of teachings! You will not be able to convey and say to anybody, O venerable one, in words and through teachings what has happened to you in the hour of enlightenment! The teachings of the enlightened Buddha contain much, it teaches many to live righteously, to avoid evil. But there is one thing which these so clear, these so venerable teachings do not contain: they do not contain the mystery of what the exalted one has experienced for himself, he alone among hundreds of thousands. This is what I have thought and realized, when I have heard the teachings. This is why I am continuing my travels—not to seek other, better teachings, for I know there are none, but to depart from all teachings and all teachers and to reach my goal by myself or to die. But often, I'll think of this day, O exalted one, and of this hour, when my eyes beheld a holy man." (Gotama, paragraph 37)

With half of a smile, with an unwavering openness and kindness, Gotama looked into the stranger's eyes and bid him to leave with a hardly noticeable gesture. (Gotama, paragraph 41)

"Oh," he thought, taking a deep breath, "now I would not let Siddhartha escape from me again! No longer, I want to begin my thoughts and my life with Atman and with the suffering of the world. I do not want to kill and dissect myself any longer, to find a secret behind the ruins. Neither Yoga-Veda shall teach me any more, nor Atharva-Veda, nor the ascetics, nor any kind of teachings. I want to learn from myself, want to be my student, want to get to know myself, the secret of Siddhartha." (Awakening, paragraph 6)

"You are the best lover," she said thoughtfully, "I ever saw. You're stronger than others, more supple, more willing. You've learned my art well, Siddhartha. At some time, when I'll be older, I'd want to bear your child. And yet, my dear, you've remained a Samana, and yet you do not love me, you love nobody. Isn't it so?" (With the Childlike People, paragraph 46)

Siddhartha straightened up, then he saw a person sitting opposite to him, an unknown man, a monk in a yellow robe with a shaven head, sitting in the position of pondering. He observed the man, who had neither hair on his head nor a beard, and he had not observed him for long when he recognised this monk as Govinda, the friend of his youth, Govinda who had taken his refuge with the exalted Buddha. Govinda had aged, he too, but still his face bore the same features, expressed zeal, faithfulness, searching, timidness. But when Govinda, sensing his gaze, opened his eyes and looked at him, Siddhartha saw that Govinda did not recognise him. Govinda was happy to find him awake; apparently, he had been sitting here for a long time and been waiting for him to wake up, though he did not know him. (By the River, paragraph 12)

With a smiling face, Siddhartha watched him leave, he loved him still, this faithful man, this fearful man. And how could he not have loved everybody and everything in this moment, in the glorious hour after his wonderful sleep, filled with Om! The enchantment, which had happened inside of him in his sleep and by means of the Om, was this very thing that he loved everything, that he was full of joyful love for everything he saw. And it was this very thing, so it seemed to him now, which had been his sickness before, that he was not able to love anybody or anything. (By the River, paragraph 37)

Wondrous indeed was my life, so he thought, wondrous detours it has taken. As a boy, I had only to do with gods and offerings. As a youth, I had only to do with asceticism, with thinking and meditation, was searching for Brahman, worshipped the eternal in the Atman. But as a young man, I followed the penitents, lived in the forest, suffered of heat and frost, learned to hunger, taught my body to become dead. Wonderfully, soon afterwards, insight came towards me in the form of the great Buddha's teachings, I felt the knowledge of the oneness of the world circling in me like my own blood. But I also had to leave Buddha and the great knowledge. I went and learned the art of love with Kamala, learned trading with Kamaswami, piled up money, wasted money, learned to love my stomach, learned to please my senses. I had to spend many years losing my spirit, to unlearn thinking again, to forget the oneness. Isn't it just as if I had turned slowly and on a long detour from a man into a child, from a thinker into a childlike person? And yet, this path has been very good; and yet, the bird in my chest has not died. But what a path has this been! I had to pass through so much stupidity, through so much vices, through so many errors, through so much disgust and disappointment and woe, just to become a child again and to be able to start over. But it was right so, my heart says "Yes" to it, my eyes smile to it. I've had to experience despair, I've had to sink down to the most foolish one of all thoughts, to the thought of suicide, in order to be able to experience divine grace, to hear Om again, to be able to sleep properly and awake properly again. I had to become a fool, to find Atman in me again. I had to sin, to be able to live again. Where else might my path lead me to? It is foolish, this path, it moves in loops, perhaps it is going around in a circle. Let it go as it likes, I want to take it. (By the River, paragraph 42)

"You will learn it," spoke Vasudeva, "but not from me. The river has taught me to listen, from it you will learn it as well. It knows everything, the river, everything can be learned from it. See, you've already learned this from the water too, that it is good to strive downwards, to sink, to seek depth. The rich and elegant Siddhartha is becoming an oarsman's servant, the learned Brahmin Siddhartha becomes a ferryman: this has also been told to you by the river. You'll learn that other thing from it as well." (The Ferryman, paragraph 27)

Vasudeva rose. "It is late," he said, "let's go to sleep. I can't tell you that other thing, O friend. You'll learn it, or perhaps you know it already. See, I'm no learned man, I have no special skill in speaking, I also have no special skill in thinking. All I'm able to do is to listen and to be godly, I have learned nothing else. If I was able to say and teach it, I might be a wise man, but like this I am only a ferryman, and it is my task to ferry people across the river. I have transported many, thousands; and to all of them, my river has been nothing but an obstacle on their travels. They travelled to seek money and business, and for weddings, and on pilgrimages, and the river was obstructing their path, and the ferryman's job was to get them quickly across that obstacle. But for some among thousands, a few, four or five, the river has stopped being an obstacle, they have heard its voice, they have listened to it, and the river has become sacred to them, as it has become sacred to me. Let's rest now, Siddhartha." (The Ferryman, paragraph 29)

Siddhartha stayed with the ferryman and learned to operate the boat, and when there was nothing to do at the ferry, he worked with Vasudeva in the rice field, gathered wood, plucked the fruit off the banana trees. He learned to build an oar, and learned to mend the boat, and to weave baskets, and was joyful because of everything he learned, and the days and months passed quickly. But more than Vasudeva could teach him, he was taught by the river. Incessantly, he learned from it. Most of all, he learned from it to listen, to pay close attention with a quiet heart, with a waiting, opened soul, without passion, without a wish, without judgement, without an opinion. (The Ferryman, paragraph 30)

Together with other monks, Govinda used to spend the time of rest between pilgrimages in the pleasure-grove, which the courtesan Kamala had given to the followers of Gotama for a gift. He heard talk of an old ferryman, who lived one day's journey away by the river, and who was regarded as a wise man by many. When Govinda went back on his way, he chose the path to the ferry, eager to see the ferryman. Because, though he had lived his entire life by the rules, though he was also looked upon with veneration by the younger monks on account of his age and his modesty, the restlessness and the searching still had not perished from his heart. (Govinda, paragraph 1)

He came to the river and asked the old man to ferry him over, and when they got off the boat on the other side, he said to the old man: "You're very good to us monks and pilgrims, you have already ferried many of us across the river. Aren't you too, ferryman, a searcher for the right path?" (Govinda, paragraph 2)

Quoth Siddhartha, smiling from his old eyes: "Do you call yourself a searcher, O venerable one, though you are already of an old in years and are wearing the robe of Gotama's monks?" (Govinda, paragraph 3)

"It's true, I'm old," spoke Govinda, "but I haven't stopped searching. Never I'll stop searching, this seems to be my destiny. You too, so it seems to me, have been searching. Would you like to tell me something, O honourable one?" (Govinda, paragraph 4)

Quoth Siddhartha: "What should I possibly have to tell you, O venerable one? Perhaps that you're searching far too much? That in all that searching, you don't find the time for finding?" (Govinda, paragraph 5)

"When someone is searching," said Siddhartha, "then it might easily happen that the only thing his eyes still see is that what he searches for, that he is unable to find anything, to let anything enter his mind, because he always thinks of nothing but the object of his search, because he has a goal, because he is obsessed by the goal. Searching means: having a goal. But finding means: being free, being open, having no goal. You, O venerable one, are perhaps indeed a searcher, because, striving for your goal, there are many things you don't see, which are directly in front of your eyes." (Govinda, paragraph 7)

"I don't quite understand yet," asked Govinda, "what do you mean by this?" (Govinda, paragraph 8)

Quoth Siddhartha: "A long time ago, O venerable one, many years ago, you've once before been at this river and have found a sleeping man by the river, and have sat down with him to guard his sleep. But, O Govinda, you did not recognise the sleeping man." (Govinda, paragraph 9)

"Are you Siddhartha?" he asked with a timid voice. "I wouldn't have recognised you this time as well! From my heart, I'm greeting you, Siddhartha; from my heart, I'm happy to see you once again! You've changed a lot, my friend.—And so you've now become a ferryman?" (Govinda, paragraph 11)

In a friendly manner, Siddhartha laughed. "A ferryman, yes. Many people, Govinda, have to change a lot, have to wear many a robe, I am one of those, my dear. Be welcome, Govinda, and spend the night in my hut." (Govinda, paragraph 12)

Govinda stayed the night in the hut and slept on the bed which used to be Vasudeva's bed. Many questions he posed to the friend of his youth, many things Siddhartha had to tell him from his life. (Govinda, paragraph 13)

When in the next morning the time had come to start the day's journey, Govinda said, not without hesitation, these words: "Before I'll continue on my path, Siddhartha, permit me to ask one more question. Do you have a teaching? Do you have a faith, or a knowledge, you follow, which helps you to live and to do right?" (Govinda, paragraph 14)

Quoth Siddhartha: "You know, my dear, that I already as a young man, in those days when we lived with the penitents in the forest, started to distrust teachers and teachings and to turn my back to them. I have stuck with this. Nevertheless, I have had many teachers since then. A beautiful courtesan has been my teacher for a long time, and a rich merchant was my teacher, and some gamblers with dice. Once, even a follower of Buddha, travelling on foot, has been my teacher; he sat with me when I had fallen asleep in the forest, on the pilgrimage. I've also learned from him, I'm also grateful to him, very grateful. But most of all, I have learned here from this river and from my predecessor, the ferryman Vasudeva. He was a very simple person, Vasudeva, he was no thinker, but he knew what is necessary just as well as Gotama, he was a perfect man, a saint." (Govinda, paragraph 15)

Govinda said: "Still, O Siddhartha, you love a bit to mock people, as it seems to me. I believe in you and know that you haven't followed a teacher. But haven't you found something by yourself, though you've found no teachings, you still found certain thoughts, certain insights, which are your own and which help you to live? If you would like to tell me some of these, you would delight my heart." (Govinda, paragraph 16)

Quoth Siddhartha: "I've had thoughts, yes, and insight, again and again. Sometimes, for an hour or for an entire day, I have felt knowledge in me, as one would feel life in one's heart. There have been many thoughts, but it would be hard for me to convey them to you. Look, my dear Govinda, this is one of my thoughts, which I have found: wisdom cannot be passed on. Wisdom which a wise man tries to pass on to someone always sounds like foolishness." (Govinda, paragraph 17)

"I'm not kidding. I'm telling you what I've found. Knowledge can be conveyed, but not wisdom. It can be found, it can be lived, it is possible to be carried by it, miracles can be performed with it, but it cannot be expressed in words and taught. This was what I, even as a young man, sometimes suspected, what has driven me away from the teachers. I have found a thought, Govinda, which you'll again regard as a joke or foolishness, but which is my best thought. It says: The opposite of every truth is just as true! That's like this: any truth can only be expressed and put into words when it is one-sided. Everything is one-sided which can be thought with thoughts and said with words, it's all one-sided, all just one half, all lacks completeness, roundness, oneness. When the exalted Gotama spoke in his teachings of the world, he had to divide it into Sansara and Nirvana, into deception and truth, into suffering and salvation. It cannot be done differently, there is no other way for him who wants to teach. But the world itself, what exists around us and inside of us, is never one-sided. A person or an act is never entirely Sansara or entirely Nirvana, a person is never entirely holy or entirely sinful. It does really seem like this, because we are subject to deception, as if time was something real. Time is not real, Govinda, I have experienced this often and often again. And if time is not real, then the gap which seems to be between the world and the eternity, between suffering and blissfulness, between evil and good, is also a deception." (Govinda, paragraph 19)

"Listen well, my dear, listen well! The sinner, which I am and which you are, is a sinner, but in times to come he will be Brahma again, he will reach the Nirvana, will be Buddha—and now see: these 'times to come' are a deception, are only a parable! The sinner is not on his way to become a Buddha, he is not in the process of developing, though our capacity for thinking does not know how else to picture these things. No, within the sinner is now and today already the future Buddha, his future is already all there, you have to worship in him, in you, in everyone the Buddha which is coming into being, the possible, the hidden Buddha. The world, my friend Govinda, is not imperfect, or on a slow path towards perfection: no, it is perfect in every moment, all sin already carries the divine forgiveness in itself, all small children already have the old person in themselves, all infants already have death, all dying people the eternal life. It is not possible for any person to see how far another one has already progressed on his path; in the robber and dice-gambler, the Buddha is waiting; in the Brahmin, the robber is waiting. In deep meditation, there is the possibility to put time out of existence, to see all life which was, is, and will be as if it was simultaneous, and there everything is good, everything is perfect, everything is Brahman. Therefore, I see whatever exists as good, death is to me like life, sin like holiness, wisdom like foolishness, everything has to be as it is, everything only requires my consent, only my willingness, my loving agreement, to be good for me, to do nothing but work for my benefit, to be unable to ever harm me. I have experienced on my body and on my soul that I needed sin very much, I needed lust, the desire for possessions, vanity, and needed the most shameful despair, in order to learn how to give up all resistance, in order to learn how to love the world, in order to stop comparing it to some world I wished, I imagined, some kind of perfection I had made up, but to leave it as it is and to love it and to enjoy being a part of it.—These, O Govinda, are some of the thoughts which have come into my mind." (Govinda, paragraph 21)

Siddhartha bent down, picked up a stone from the ground, and weighed it in his hand. (Govinda, paragraph 22)

"This here," he said playing with it, "is a stone, and will, after a certain time, perhaps turn into soil, and will turn from soil into a plant or animal or human being. In the past, I would have said: This stone is just a stone, it is worthless, it belongs to the world of the Maja; but because it might be able to become also a human being and a spirit in the cycle of transformations, therefore I also grant it importance. Thus, I would perhaps have thought in the past. But today I think: this stone is a stone, it is also animal, it is also god, it is also Buddha, I do not venerate and love it because it could turn into this or that, but rather because it is already and always everything—and it is this very fact, that it is a stone, that it appears to me now and today as a stone, this is why I love it and see worth and purpose in each of its veins and cavities, in the yellow, in the gray, in the hardness, in the sound it makes when I knock at it, in the dryness or wetness of its surface. There are stones which feel like oil or soap, and others like leaves, others like sand, and every one is special and prays the Om in its own way, each one is Brahman, but simultaneously and just as much it is a stone, is oily or juicy, and this is this very fact which I like and regard as wonderful and worthy of worship.—But let me speak no more of this. The words are not good for the secret meaning, everything always becomes a bit different, as soon as it is put into words, gets distorted a bit, a bit silly—yes, and this is also very good, and I like it a lot, I also very much agree with this, that this what is one man's treasure and wisdom always sounds like foolishness to another person." (Govinda, paragraph 23)

Govinda listened silently. (Govinda, paragraph 24)

"Why have you told me this about the stone?" he asked hesitantly after a pause. (Govinda, paragraph 25)

"I did it without any specific intention. Or perhaps what I meant was, that I love this very stone, and the river, and all these things we are looking at and from which we can learn. I can love a stone, Govinda, and also a tree or a piece of bark. These are things, and things can be loved. But I cannot love words. Therefore, teachings are no good for me, they have no hardness, no softness, no colours, no edges, no smell, no taste, they have nothing but words. Perhaps it is these which keep you from finding peace, perhaps it is the many words. Because salvation and virtue as well, Sansara and Nirvana as well, are mere words, Govinda. There is no thing which would be Nirvana; there is just the word Nirvana." (Govinda, paragraph 26)

Quoth Govinda: "Not just a word, my friend, is Nirvana. It is a thought." (Govinda, paragraph 27)

Siddhartha continued: "A thought, it might be so. I must confess to you, my dear: I don't differentiate much between thoughts and words. To be honest, I also have no high opinion of thoughts. I have a better opinion of things. Here on this ferryboat, for instance, a man has been my predecessor and teacher, a holy man, who has for many years simply believed in the river, nothing else. He had noticed that the river's spoke to him, he learned from it, it educated and taught him, the river seemed to be a god to him, for many years he did not know that every wind, every cloud, every bird, every beetle was just as divine and knows just as much and can teach just as much as the worshipped river. But when this holy man went into the forests, he knew everything, knew more than you and me, without teachers, without books, only because he had believed in the river." (Govinda, paragraph 28)

Govinda said: "But is that what you call 'things' actually something real, something which has existence? Isn't it just a deception of the Maja, just an image and illusion? Your stone, your tree, your river—are they actually a reality?" (Govinda, paragraph 29)

"This too," spoke Siddhartha, "I do not care very much about. Let the things be illusions or not, after all I would then also be an illusion, and thus they are always like me. This is what makes them so dear and worthy of veneration for me: they are like me. Therefore, I can love them. And this is now a teaching you will laugh about: love, O Govinda, seems to me to be the most important thing of all. To thoroughly understand the world, to explain it, to despise it, may be the thing great thinkers do. But I'm only interested in being able to love the world, not to despise it, not to hate it and me, to be able to look upon it and me and all beings with love and admiration and great respect." (Govinda, paragraph 30)

"This I understand," spoke Govinda. "But this very thing was discovered by the exalted one to be a deception. He commands benevolence, clemency, sympathy, tolerance, but not love; he forbade us to tie our heart in love to earthly things." (Govinda, paragraph 31)

"I know it," said Siddhartha; his smile shone golden. "I know it, Govinda. And behold, with this we are right in the middle of the thicket of opinions, in the dispute about words. For I cannot deny, my words of love are in a contradiction, a seeming contradiction with Gotama's words. For this very reason, I distrust in words so much, for I know, this contradiction is a deception. I know that I am in agreement with Gotama. How should he not know love, he, who has discovered all elements of human existence in their transitoriness, in their meaninglessness, and yet loved people thus much, to use a long, laborious life only to help them, to teach them! Even with him, even with your great teacher, I prefer the thing over the words, place more importance on his acts and life than on his speeches, more on the gestures of his hand than his opinions. Not in his speech, not in his thoughts, I see his greatness, only in his actions, in his life." (Govinda, paragraph 32)

(But secretly he thought to himself: This Siddhartha is a bizarre person, he expresses bizarre thoughts, his teachings sound foolish. So differently sound the exalted one's pure teachings, clearer, purer, more comprehensible, nothing strange, foolish, or silly is contained in them. But different from his thoughts seemed to me Siddhartha's hands and feet, his eyes, his forehead, his breath, his smile, his greeting, his walk. Never again, after our exalted Gotama has become one with the Nirvana, never since then have I met a person of whom I felt: this is a holy man! Only him, this Siddhartha, I have found to be like this. May his teachings be strange, may his words sound foolish; out of his gaze and his hand, his skin and his hair, out of every part of him shines a purity, shines a calmness, shines a cheerfulness and mildness and holiness, which I have seen in no other person since the final death of our exalted teacher.) (Govinda, paragraph 34)

As Govinda thought like this, and there was a conflict in his heart, he once again bowed to Siddhartha, drawn by love. Deeply he bowed to him who was calmly sitting. (Govinda, paragraph 35)

"Siddhartha," he spoke, "we have become old men. It is unlikely for one of us to see the other again in this incarnation. I see, beloved, that you have found peace. I confess that I haven't found it. Tell me, O honourable one, one more word, give me something on my way which I can grasp, which I can understand! Give me something to be with me on my path. It is often hard, my path, often dark, Siddhartha." (Govinda, paragraph 36)

Siddhartha said nothing and looked at him with the ever unchanged, quiet smile. Govinda stared at his face, with fear, with yearning, suffering, and the eternal search was visible in his look, eternal not-finding. (Govinda, paragraph 37)

Siddhartha saw it and smiled. (Govinda, paragraph 38)

"Bend down to me!" he whispered quietly in Govinda's ear. "Bend down to me! Like this, even closer! Very close! Kiss my forehead, Govinda!" (Govinda, paragraph 39)

But while Govinda with astonishment, and yet drawn by great love and expectation, obeyed his words, bent down closely to him and touched his forehead with his lips, something miraculous happened to him. While his thoughts were still dwelling on Siddhartha's wondrous words, while he was still struggling in vain and with reluctance to think away time, to imagine Nirvana and Sansara as one, while even a certain contempt for the words of his friend was fighting in him against an immense love and veneration, this happened to him: (Govinda, paragraph 40)

He no longer saw the face of his friend Siddhartha, instead he saw other faces, many, a long sequence, a flowing river of faces, of hundreds, of thousands, which all came and disappeared, and yet all seemed to be there simultaneously, which all constantly changed and renewed themselves, and which were still all Siddhartha. He saw the face of a fish, a carp, with an infinitely painfully opened mouth, the face of a dying fish, with fading eyes—he saw the face of a newborn child, red and full of wrinkles, distorted from crying—he saw the face of a murderer, he saw him plunging a knife into the body of another person—he saw, in the same second, this criminal in bondage, kneeling and his head being chopped off by the executioner with one blow of his sword—he saw the bodies of men and women, naked in positions and cramps of frenzied love—he saw corpses stretched out, motionless, cold, void—he saw the heads of animals, of boars, of crocodiles, of elephants, of bulls, of birds—he saw gods, saw Krishna, saw Agni—he saw all of these figures and faces in a thousand relationships with one another, each one helping the other, loving it, hating it, destroying it, giving rebirth to it, each one was a will to die, a passionately painful confession of transitoriness, and yet none of them died, each one only transformed, was always reborn, received evermore a new face, without any time having passed between the one and the other face—and all of these figures and faces rested, flowed, generated themselves, floated along and merged with each other, and they were all constantly covered by something thin, without individuality of its own, but yet existing, like a thin glass or ice, like a transparent skin, a shell or mold or mask of water, and this mask was smiling, and this mask was Siddhartha's smiling face, which he, Govinda, in this very same moment touched with his lips. And, Govinda saw it like this, this smile of the mask, this smile of oneness above the flowing forms, this smile of simultaneousness above the thousand births and deaths, this smile of Siddhartha was precisely the same, was precisely of the same kind as the quiet, delicate, impenetrable, perhaps benevolent, perhaps mocking, wise, thousandfold smile of Gotama, the Buddha, as he had seen it himself with great respect a hundred times. Like this, Govinda knew, the perfected ones are smiling. (Govinda, paragraph 41)

Not knowing any more whether time existed, whether the vision had lasted a second or a hundred years, not knowing any more whether there existed a Siddhartha, a Gotama, a me and a you, feeling in his innermost self as if he had been wounded by a divine arrow, the injury of which tasted sweet, being enchanted and dissolved in his innermost self, Govinda still stood for a little while bent over Siddhartha's quiet face, which he had just kissed, which had just been the scene of all manifestations, all transformations, all existence. The face was unchanged, after under its surface the depth of the thousandfoldness had closed up again, he smiled silently, smiled quietly and softly, perhaps very benevolently, perhaps very mockingly, precisely as he used to smile, the exalted one. (Govinda, paragraph 42)

Deeply, Govinda bowed; tears he knew nothing of ran down his old face; like a fire burnt the feeling of the most intimate love, the humblest veneration in his heart. Deeply, he bowed, touching the ground, before him who was sitting motionlessly, whose smile reminded him of everything he had ever loved in his life, what had ever been valuable and holy to him in his life. (Govinda, paragraph 43)

Vocabulary with etymology notes

Word	Definition (in this sentence)	In context	Word history
insights (noun)	understandings; realizations	But haven't you found something by yourself, though you've found no teachings, you still found certain thoughts, certain insights, which are your own and which help you to live?
benevolently (adverb)	in a kind, well-meaning way	The face was unchanged, after under its surface the depth of the thousandfoldness had closed up again, he smiled silently, smiled quietly and softly, perhaps very benevolently, perhaps very mockingly, precisely as he used to smile, the exalted one.
searcher (noun)	a person who searches	Aren't you too, ferryman, a searcher for the right path?"	"searcher": Origin: Old French cercheor. (Liber et Libri origin note, https://en.wiktionary.org/wiki/searcher#Etymology)
bizarre (adjective)	strikingly unusual or odd	(But secretly he thought to himself: This Siddhartha is a bizarre person, he expresses bizarre thoughts, his teachings sound foolish.	"bizarre": from French bizarre, "odd," from Italian bizzarro, first "quick to anger," later "strange." (Liber et Libri origin note, https://www.etymonline.com/word/bizarre)
progressed (verb)	moved forward; advanced	It is not possible for any person to see how far another one has already progressed on his path; in the robber and dice-gambler, the Buddha is waiting; in the Brahmin, the robber is waiting.

simultaneous (adjective)	occurring or operating at the same time	In deep meditation, there is the possibility to put time out of existence, to see all life which was, is, and will be as if it was simultaneous, and there everything is good, everything is perfect, everything is Brahman.	"simultaneous": Origin: Medieval Latin simultaneus; earlier Latin simul ("together"). (Liber et Libri origin note, https://en.wiktionary.org/wiki/simultaneous#Etymology)
incarnation (noun)	a lifetime in a particular body	It is unlikely for one of us to see the other again in this incarnation.
predecessor (noun)	one who precedes you in time (as in holding a position or office)	But most of all, I have learned here from this river and from my predecessor, the ferryman Vasudeva.

Discussion questions

1. Govinda followed a teacher all his life; Siddhartha followed experience. Who learned more?
2. Where does theme appear in this chapter, and what effect does it have? Point to one passage.
3. How does this chapter connect to the book's larger concern with experience versus teaching?

Tiered discussion questions (30: recall, inferential, evaluative)

Wait time after every question (3 s for DOK 1, 5 s for DOK 2, 8 to 10 s for DOK 3 and 4); think-pair-share on DOK 3 and 4; answer each response with a follow-up probe; close with student-generated questions. Focus sets by rigor level: HS Sophomore: 1, 2, 3, 4, 13, 14, 15, 16, 17, 23, 24, 25; HS Junior: 1, 2, 3, 14, 15, 16, 17, 18, 24, 25, 26, 27; HS Senior: 1, 2, 3, 15, 16, 17, 18, 25, 26, 27, 28, 29; AP: 1, 2, 16, 17, 18, 19, 20, 26, 27, 28, 29, 30; College Freshman: 1, 2, 17, 18, 19, 20, 21, 22, 27, 28, 29, 30; College Sophomore: 1, 2, 11, 18, 19, 20, 21, 22, 23, 28, 29, 30; College Junior: 1, 11, 12, 19, 20, 21, 22, 23, 24, 25, 29, 30; College Senior: 1, 11, 12, 13, 20, 21, 22, 23, 24, 25, 26, 30; Graduate / PhD: 1, 11, 12, 13, 21, 22, 23, 24, 25, 26, 27, 28

Literal / recall

1. Who comes to the ferry at the end? [DOK 1 · Cold call with support: call on a student by name, offering a sentence starter or rephrasing if needed · wait 3 s · Dual Credit (Indiana College Core): ICC-WC-1.1, ICC-WC-1.3, ICC-WC-1.4, ICC-WC-1.5] Look for: Govinda

   Answer guidance: Govinda, now an old monk, who has heard of a wise old ferryman: "He heard talk of an old ferryman, who lived one day's journey away by the river, and who was regarded as a wise man by many." (Govinda, paragraph 1)
2. What does Siddhartha say about wisdom? [DOK 1 · Turn and Talk: students discuss briefly with a neighbor before answering · wait 3 s · Dual Credit (Indiana College Core): ICC-WC-1.1, ICC-WC-1.3, ICC-WC-1.4, ICC-WC-1.5] Look for: It cannot be taught in words

   Answer guidance: That wisdom can be found and lived but not taught in words: "Knowledge can be conveyed, but not wisdom." (Govinda, paragraph 19)
3. What does Siddhartha say one must do with the world? [DOK 1 · Cold call with support: call on a student by name, offering a sentence starter or rephrasing if needed · wait 3 s · Dual Credit (Indiana College Core): ICC-WC-1.1, ICC-

WC-1.3, ICC-WC-1.4, ICC-WC-1.5] Look for: Love it

Answer guidance: Love it, rather than despise or explain it: “But I’m only interested in being able to love the world, not to despise it” (Govinda, paragraph 30).

4. What does Govinda see in Siddhartha's face? [DOK 1 · Turn and Talk: students discuss briefly with a neighbor before answering · wait 3 s · Dual Credit (Indiana College Core): ICC-WC-1.1, ICC-WC-1.3, ICC-WC-1.4, ICC-WC-1.5] Look for: Countless faces and forms flowing together

   Answer guidance: A flowing river of countless faces, all Siddhartha at once: “instead he saw other faces, many, a long sequence, a flowing river of faces” (Govinda, paragraph 41).

5. Whose smile does Siddhartha's resemble? [DOK 1 · Cold call with support: call on a student by name, offering a sentence starter or rephrasing if needed · wait 3 s · Dual Credit (Indiana College Core): ICC-WC-1.1, ICC-WC-1.3, ICC-WC-1.4, ICC-WC-1.5] Look for: Gotama's

   Answer guidance: Gotama’s. Govinda sees that Siddhartha’s smile is the Buddha’s: “this smile of Siddhartha was precisely the same” (Govinda, paragraph 41)… as the smile of Gotama he once saw.

6. Retell the three most important events of “Govinda” in order, in one sentence each. [DOK 1 · Turn and Talk: students discuss briefly with a neighbor before answering · wait 3 s · Dual Credit (Indiana College Core): ICC-WC-1.1, ICC-WC-1.3, ICC-WC-1.4, ICC-WC-1.5] Look for: Old Govinda, still searching, comes to the ferry and asks for teaching. Siddhartha says that wisdom cannot be communicated in words, that every truth's opposite is also true, and that one must love the world. Asked to kiss Siddhartha's forehead, Govinda sees in his face a stream of countless faces and forms—the unity of all things—and bows, weeping, before his friend's smile.

   Answer guidance: Govinda comes to the river and does not recognise the ferryman (paragraphs 1–11); Siddhartha tells him wisdom cannot be taught and speaks of love of the world (paragraphs 15–32); at Siddhartha’s word Govinda kisses his forehead and sees the river of faces and the Buddha’s smile (paragraphs 39–43).

7. Which characters appear or are mentioned in “Govinda”? Name two and one thing each says or does. [DOK 1 · Cold call with support: call on a student by name, offering a sentence starter or rephrasing if needed · wait 3 s · Dual Credit (Indiana College Core): ICC-WC-1.1, ICC-WC-1.3, ICC-WC-1.4, ICC-WC-1.5] Look for: Names and actions taken from the chapter; check against the teacher summary.

   Answer guidance: Two of: Govinda, who asks for a teaching to take with him (paragraph 14); Siddhartha, who picks up a stone to explain his love of things (paragraph 22); Vasudeva, remembered as “a perfect man, a saint” (paragraph 15).

8. Where and when does “Govinda” take place? Point to the line that tells you. [DOK 1 · Turn and Talk: students discuss briefly with a neighbor before answering · wait 3 s · Dual Credit (Indiana College Core): ICC-WC-1.1, ICC-WC-1.3, ICC-WC-1.4, ICC-WC-1.5] Look for: A place/time detail quoted from the chapter.

   Answer guidance: At the ferry and the hut by the river, over an evening and morning, many years later: “Govinda stayed the night in the hut and slept on the bed which used to be Vasudeva’s bed.” (Govinda, paragraph 13)

9. Reread: “But haven’t you found something by yourself, though you’ve found no teachings, you still found certain thoughts, certain insights, which are your own and which help you to live?” What does “insights” mean here, and what is literally happening in this line? [DOK 1 · Turn and Talk: students discuss briefly with a neighbor before answering · wait 3 s · Dual Credit (Indiana College Core): ICC-WC-1.1, ICC-WC-1.3, ICC-WC-1.4, ICC-WC-1.5] Look for: insights: understandings; realizations.

   Answer guidance: “Insights” here means: understandings; realizations. In Govinda, paragraph 16,

Govinda asks whether Siddhartha found something by himself without a teaching; literally, he wants a thought or insight he can take with him.

10. Reread: "The face was unchanged, after under its surface the depth of the thousandfoldness had closed up again, he smiled silently, smiled quietly and softly, perhaps very benevolently, perhaps very mockingly, precisely as he used to smile, the exalted one." What does "benevolently" mean here, and what is literally happening in this line? [DOK 1 · Turn and Talk: students discuss briefly with a neighbor before answering · wait 3 s · Dual Credit (Indiana College Core): ICC-WC-1.1, ICC-WC-1.3, ICC-WC-1.4, ICC-WC-1.5] Look for: benevolently: in a kind, well-meaning way.

    Answer guidance: Benevolently means in a kind, well-meaning way. Literally, Govinda sees Siddhartha's face unchanged on the surface, the thousandfold depth closed again beneath it, as he smiles quietly and kindly (Govinda, paragraph 42).

Inferential / analytical

1. What does "Govinda" suggest about the idea that wisdom cannot be taught? State the inference and the line that supports it. [DOK 2 · Think-Pair-Share: students think alone, discuss with a partner, then share with the class · wait 5 s · Dual Credit (Indiana College Core): ICC-WC-1.1, ICC-WC-1.3, ICC-WC-1.4, ICC-WC-1.5] Look for: A stated inference (for example, that wisdom can only be shown, not told) backed by one located line, such as the one in Govinda, paragraph 41.

    Answer guidance: The chapter suggests wisdom can only be shown, not told. Support: Govinda gets no teaching he can keep, but sees the truth in the face he kisses ("which all came and disappeared, and yet all seemed to be there simultaneously" (Govinda, paragraph 41)).

2. Find one example of theme in this chapter. What does it reveal that a plain statement would not? [DOK 2 · Follow-up: ask a probing question that builds on the previous answer · wait 5 s · Dual Credit (Indiana College Core): ICC-WC-1.1, ICC-WC-1.3, ICC-WC-1.4, ICC-WC-1.5] Look for: Look for statements or moments that connect to the book's big ideas.

    Answer guidance: The stone (Govinda, paragraphs 22–26) carries the theme: Siddhartha loves the stone for what it is, which shows love of the world better than any statement.

3. How does the characterization in this chapter shape what we understand about the idea that wisdom cannot be taught? [DOK 3 · Think-Pair-Share: students think alone, discuss with a partner, then share with the class · wait 8 s · Dual Credit (Indiana College Core): ICC-WC-1.1, ICC-WC-1.3, ICC-WC-1.4, ICC-WC-1.5] Look for: Look for what characters say, do and think, and how others react to them.

    Answer guidance: Govinda is drawn as a lifelong searcher who cannot stop searching ("Never I'll stop searching, this seems to be my destiny." (Govinda, paragraph 4)); his searching is what keeps him from finding, as Siddhartha says in paragraph 7.

4. In the passage that begins "He came to the river and asked the old man to ferry him over, and when they got off the boat on the other side, he said to the old man: 'You're very good to us monks and pilgrims,…'", why might Hesse have chosen these particular words? Pick two and explain their connotations. [DOK 2 · Follow-up: ask a probing question that builds on the previous answer · wait 5 s · Dual Credit (Indiana College Core): ICC-WC-1.1, ICC-WC-1.3, ICC-WC-1.4, ICC-WC-1.5] Look for: Diction analysis of two words in the anchor passage.

    Answer guidance: In Govinda, paragraph 2, the plain words of the request ("asked the old man to ferry him over") hide who the ferryman is; the simple diction sets up the recognition scene.

5. What causes the main turn in "Govinda", and what effect is it likely to have on what follows? [DOK 2 · Follow-up: ask a probing question that builds on the previous answer · wait 5 s · Dual Credit (Indiana College Core): ICC-

WC-1.1, ICC-WC-1.3, ICC-WC-1.4, ICC-WC-1.5] Look for: Old Govinda, still searching, comes to the ferry and asks for teaching. Siddhartha says that wisdom cannot be communicated in words, that every truth's opposite is also true, and that one must love the world. Asked to kiss Siddhartha's forehead, Govinda sees in his face a stream of countless faces and bows deeply.

Answer guidance: The cause is Govinda's last request for something to take away (Govinda, paragraphs 36–39). Effect: Siddhartha shows instead of tells, and Govinda finally sees.

6. How does "Govinda" build on "Om"? Name one link of cause and effect. [DOK 3 · Think-Pair-Share: students think alone, discuss with a partner, then share with the class · wait 8 s · Dual Credit (Indiana College Core): ICC-WC-1.1, ICC-WC-1.3, ICC-WC-1.4, ICC-WC-1.5] Look for: A causal or structural link between this and the previous chapter.

   Answer guidance: Cause and effect: in "Om" Siddhartha reached serenity and took over the ferry; here that serenity is what draws Govinda, who hears of the wise old ferryman (paragraph 1).

7. What can we infer about a character's motives from what they say and do here, as opposed to what they claim? [DOK 3 · Follow-up: ask a probing question that builds on the previous answer · wait 8 s · Dual Credit (Indiana College Core): ICC-WC-1.1, ICC-WC-1.3, ICC-WC-1.4, ICC-WC-1.5] Look for: An inference about motive supported by a quoted line.

   Answer guidance: Govinda claims he wants a teaching, but what moves him is love ("drawn by great love and expectation" (Govinda, paragraph 40)); Siddhartha claims he has no teaching, yet he gives Govinda the vision.

8. The bell-ringer asked: "Govinda followed a teacher all his life; Siddhartha followed experience. Who learned more?" Now that we have read closely, how would you revise your first answer, and which line changed your mind? [DOK 2 · Think-Pair-Share: students think alone, discuss with a partner, then share with the class · wait 5 s · Dual Credit (Indiana College Core): ICC-WC-1.1, ICC-WC-1.3, ICC-WC-1.4, ICC-WC-1.5] Look for: A revised answer anchored in the text.

   Answer guidance: A revised answer should contrast the outcomes: Govinda, the follower, still searches (paragraph 4), while Siddhartha, who followed no one, has found; and yet both meet in Gotama's smile (paragraph 41).

9. Where does irony appear, and how does it connect this chapter to the larger concern with experience versus teaching? [DOK 3 · Follow-up: ask a probing question that builds on the previous answer · wait 8 s · Dual Credit (Indiana College Core): ICC-WC-1.1, ICC-WC-1.3, ICC-WC-1.4, ICC-WC-1.5] Look for: Look for gaps between what characters expect or say and what is true.

   Answer guidance: The irony is that Govinda followed the Buddha all his life but finds the Buddha's smile in the man who refused him (Govinda, paragraph 41).

10. Background: The ending echoes Buddhist ideas of non-self and the Hindu idea of the oneness of reality. How does knowing this change the way you read one moment in the chapter? [DOK 3 · Think-Pair-Share: students think alone, discuss with a partner, then share with the class · wait 8 s · Dual Credit (Indiana College Core): ICC-WC-1.1, ICC-WC-1.3, ICC-WC-1.4, ICC-WC-1.5] Look for: A specific moment reread in light of the context.

    Answer guidance: Knowing the ideas of non-self and unity explains the vision: the faces are "still all Siddhartha" (Govinda, paragraph 41), so the self dissolves into all beings.

Evaluative / synthesis / creative

1. A critic might argue: "The final image, Siddhartha's smile resembling Gotama's, suggests he has found his own path to enlightenment." How far do you agree? Take a stand and defend it with two lines from the chapter. [DOK 3 · Four Corners: students move to the corner that matches their position and explain why · wait 8 s · ICC-

WC-1.5] Look for: A defended position with evidence and one counterpoint.

Answer guidance: Agree: Siddhartha's smile is "precisely the same" as Gotama's (paragraph 41). A text counterpoint: Siddhartha himself says his words of love contradict Gotama's, if only seemingly (paragraph 32).

2. Which character in this chapter acts most wisely, and which least? Judge them by a standard you name. [DOK 3 · Think-Pair-Share: students think alone, discuss with a partner, then share with the class · wait 8 s · ICC-WC-1.5] Look for: An evaluation using an explicit criterion and evidence.

   Answer guidance: With love as the standard, Siddhartha is wisest (paragraphs 26, 30); Govinda least while he clings to searching (paragraph 4), though he is humble enough to ask.

3. Rewrite one moment of "Govinda" from the point of view of a different character. What does the new angle reveal or hide about the idea that wisdom cannot be taught? [DOK 4 · Think-Pair-Share: students think alone, discuss with a partner, then share with the class · wait 8 s · ICC-WC-1.5] Look for: A rewrite that keeps the chapter's events accurate, speaks in the chosen character's voice, and ends with a sentence on what the new angle shows or hides.

   Answer guidance: Govinda's view of the final scene (Govinda, paragraphs 40–43) is already the chapter's angle; a version from Siddhartha's side would show his calm and hide the overwhelming vision.

4. Write three questions of your own about "Govinda": one recall, one "why/how", and one "should/what if". Trade with a partner and answer theirs. [DOK 3 · Student-generated: students write and pose their own questions · wait 8 s · ICC-WC-1.5] Look for: Three questions at three levels, each answerable from the chapter, traded and answered with a line.

   Answer guidance: Example set: recall, 'What does Siddhartha pick up?' (a stone, paragraph 22); why/how, 'Why can't wisdom be taught?' (paragraph 19); what if, 'Should Govinda stay at the river?'

5. Connect this chapter to the unity of all things: is the link strong or weak so far? What would Hesse need to show next to strengthen it? [DOK 4 · Socratic circle: an inner circle discusses while the outer circle listens and takes notes, then they switch · wait 8 s · ICC-WC-1.5] Look for: A judgment of thematic development across the work.

   Answer guidance: Strong and complete: the vision of all faces at once (Govinda, paragraph 41) is the unity the whole novel has pointed toward.

6. Is the theme in this chapter effective, or does it feel heavy-handed? Evaluate it as a reader would in a review. [DOK 3 · Four Corners: students move to the corner that matches their position and explain why · wait 8 s · ICC-WC-1.5] Look for: An evaluative judgment with criteria and evidence.

   Answer guidance: Effective in the final image; some readers find Siddhartha's long explanations (paragraphs 19–32) heavy before the vision shows the same thing.

7. Compare how "Govinda" treats the idea that wisdom cannot be taught with how another text, film or event you know treats a similar idea. What does Siddhartha see that the other misses? [DOK 4 · Socratic circle: an inner circle discusses while the outer circle listens and takes notes, then they switch · wait 8 s · ICC-WC-1.5] Look for: A cross-text synthesis.

   Answer guidance: A comparison should name a story where a lesson is shown rather than told and quote "Knowledge can be conveyed, but not wisdom." (Govinda, paragraph 19)

8. As the final chapter, does this ending resolve experience versus teaching? Argue whether the ending is earned. [DOK 3 · Think-Pair-Share: students think alone, discuss with a partner, then share with the class · wait 8 s · ICC-WC-1.5] Look for: A prediction or judgment justified with textual clues.

   Answer guidance: Yes, in its own terms: the teacher-follower Govinda receives wisdom only by experience, a kiss and a vision (paragraphs 39–41); students can argue it stays open because Govinda cannot take it home in words.

9. Design a one-paragraph modern adaptation of this chapter (setting, characters, conflict). What must stay the same for it to still be about the idea that wisdom cannot be taught? [DOK 4 · Think-Pair-Share: students think alone, discuss with a partner, then share with the class · wait 8 s · ICC-WC-1.5] Look for: A modern setting, characters and conflict that keep the chapter's core idea, with the one element that must not change named.
   Answer guidance: A modern version keeps two old friends, one who followed a famous teacher and one who found his own way. What must stay is the final showing instead of telling (paragraph 41).
10. What question would you most like to ask Hermann Hesse about this chapter, and what answer do you think the text itself gives? [DOK 4 · Student-generated: students write and pose their own questions · wait 8 s · ICC-WC-1.5] Look for: A student-generated question answered from evidence.
    Answer guidance: Example: 'Did Govinda finally understand?' The text shows tears and a deep bow (paragraph 43), so he felt what words could not give him.

Annotation focus

- Theme: look for statements or moments that connect to the book's big ideas (anchor passage in the We do segment)
- Also notice Characterization: what characters say, do and think, and how others react to them
- Also notice Irony: gaps between what characters expect or say and what is true

Chapter quiz: item bank (all eleven rigor versions)

1. [fill · recall · DOK 1] Fill in the blank with the vocabulary word that fits: "It is not possible for any person to see how far another one has already _____ on his path; in the robber and dice-gambler, the Buddha is waiting; in the Brahmin, the robber is waiting." Word bank: slept, progressed, eaten, wept
   Key: progressed
2. [mc · recall · DOK 1] Which word completes this sentence from Govinda, paragraph 8? "I don't quite understand yet," _____ Govinda.
   A. sang
   B. sneezed
   C. asked
   D. yawned

   Key: C (asked)
3. [fill · recall · DOK 1] Fill in the blank with the vocabulary word that fits: "But most of all, I have learned here from this river and from my _____, the ferryman Vasudeva." Word bank: enemy, servant, predecessor, creditor
   Key: predecessor
4. [mc · recall · DOK 1] What does Govinda ask about the "things" Siddhartha says he loves?
   A. Whether they are real
   B. Whether they can be sold
   C. Whether Gotama owned them
   D. Whether they will last forever

   Key: A (Whether they are real)
5. [mc · recall · DOK 1] What does Siddhartha pick up from the ground to explain his thought to Govinda?
   A. A leaf

B. A stone

C. A cup of water

D. An oar

Key: B (A stone)

6. [mc · recall · DOK 1] Which word completes this sentence from Govinda, paragraph 28? "But when this holy man went into the forests, he knew _____, knew more than you and me, without teachers, without books, only because he had believed in the river."

   A. nothing

   B. only a little

   C. everything

   D. less

   Key: C (everything)

7. [mc · recall · DOK 1] In the line "Aren't you too, ferryman, a searcher for the right path?", what does "searcher" most nearly mean?

   A. beginners in a religious order

   B. a gentle scolding or warning

   C. one who is on a quest for something

   D. understandings; realizations

   Key: C (one who is on a quest for something)

8. [mc · recall · DOK 1] In the line "But secretly he thought to himself: This Siddhartha is a bizarre person, he expresses bizarre thoughts, his teachings sound foolish.", what does "bizarre" most nearly mean?

   A. strikingly unusual or odd

   B. original; existing from the very beginning

   C. acting too quickly

   D. joyously unrestrained

   Key: A (strikingly unusual or odd)

9. [mc · recall · DOK 1] Which word completes this sentence from Govinda, paragraph 17? "There have been many thoughts, but it would be hard for me to _____ them to you."

   A. swallow

   B. plant

   C. convey

   D. paint

   Key: C (convey)

10. [fill · recall · DOK 1] Complete the quotation from Govinda, paragraph 15: "I've also learned from him, I'm also _____ to him" Word bank: grateful, rusty, muddy, wooden

    Key: grateful

11. [fill · recall · DOK 1] Fill in the blank with the vocabulary word that fits: "It is unlikely for one of us to see the other again in this _____." Word bank: market, incarnation, auction, warehouse

    Key: incarnation

12. [mc · inference · DOK 2] Which choice best states a central concern of "Govinda"?

    A. Wisdom cannot be taught

    B. Self-denial as a path

    C. Awakening to the world

    D. Despair and renewal by the river

    Key: A (Wisdom cannot be taught)

13. [short · inference · DOK 2] How does Siddhartha explain why a searcher fails to find? "the only thing his eyes still see is that what he searches for, that he is unable to find anything" (Govinda, paragraph 7)

    Sample answer: "the only thing his eyes still see is that what he searches for, that he is unable to find anything" (Govinda, paragraph 7). A searcher looks so hard at his goal that he misses everything else. Siddhartha suggests that finding needs an open mind, not more effort, which is why Govinda, still searching, has not found peace.

14. [short · inference · DOK 2] What is Siddhartha's main claim to Govinda, and how does it echo his earlier argument with the Buddha? "It can be found, it can be lived, it is possible to be carried by it, miracles can be performed with it, but it cannot be expressed in words and taught." (Govinda, paragraph 19)

    Sample answer: "It can be found, it can be lived, it is possible to be carried by it, miracles can be performed with it, but it cannot be expressed in words and taught." (Govinda, paragraph 19). Siddhartha claims that wisdom can be lived but not taught in words. It echoes what he told Gotama: "nobody will obtain salvation by means of teachings!" (Gotama, paragraph 37).

15. [short · synthesis · DOK 4] Synthesis: trace how Siddhartha's idea of where teachers are found develops from With the Samanas to Govinda. Use one quotation from each.

    Sample answer: Siddhartha comes to find teachers everywhere, not only among holy men. In With the Samanas he says bitterly, "this, O Govinda, I could have learned more quickly and by simpler means" (With the Samanas, paragraph 11), and he names taverns, carters and gamblers as teachers enough. Here the claim is a complaint: the Samana exercises teach no more than a tavern could. In Govinda he says, "Nevertheless, I have had many teachers since then." (Govinda, paragraph 15). Now the many teachers are a blessing; the courtesan, the merchant and the river have all taught him, so what began as scorn becomes gratitude.

16. [mc · recall · DOK 1] What symbolic gesture does Govinda make just before his vision?

    A. Bathes in the river

    B. Bows low before the Buddha's image

    C. Lights a lamp

    D. Kisses Siddhartha's forehead

    Key: D (Kisses Siddhartha's forehead)

17. [mc · recall · DOK 1] Which word completes this sentence from Govinda, paragraph 26? "Therefore, teachings are no good for me, they have no hardness, no softness, no _____"

    A. colours

    B. kingdoms

    C. rivers

    D. kings

    Key: A (colours)

18. [fill · recall · DOK 1] Complete the quotation from Govinda, paragraph 3: "Do you call yourself a _____, O venerable one, though you are already of an old in years and are wearing the robe of Gotama's monks?"

Word bank: merchant, searcher, ferryman, soldier

Key: searcher

19. [mc · recall · DOK 1] In the line "the quiet, delicate, impenetrable, perhaps benevolent, perhaps mocking, wise…", what does "impenetrable" most nearly mean?

    A. impossible to see into

    B. easy to read

    C. sad and tearful

    D. loud, harsh and unpleasant

    Key: A (impossible to see into)

20. [fill · recall · DOK 1] Fill in the blank with the word that fits: "Govinda stared at his face, with fear, with _____, suffering" Word bank: yearning, salt, wood, ink

    Key: yearning

21. [fill · recall · DOK 1] Fill in the blank with the word that fits: "Siddhartha said nothing and looked at him with the ever unchanged, quiet _____" Word bank: frown, anger, smile, tears

    Key: smile

22. [mc · recall · DOK 1] Which word completes this sentence from Govinda, paragraph 30? "To thoroughly _____ the world, to explain it, to despise it, may be the thing great thinkers do."

    A. forget

    B. paint

    C. understand

    D. sell

    Key: C (understand)

23. [fill · recall · DOK 1] Fill in the blank with the word that fits: "Deeply, Govinda _____; tears he knew nothing of ran down his old face" Word bank: laughed, bowed, slept, shouted

    Key: bowed

24. [mc · recall · DOK 1] Why does Govinda choose the path to the ferry?

    A. To see an old ferryman said to be wise

    B. To fetch Siddhartha for the monks

    C. To find his way back to the grove

    D. To buy a new boat for the monks

    Key: A (To see an old ferryman said to be wise)

25. [mc · recall · DOK 1] What did Vasudeva believe in for many years, according to Siddhartha?

    A. The Buddha's rules

    B. The Vedas

    C. Simply the river

    D. The gods of the city

    Key: C (Simply the river)

26. [mc · inference · DOK 2] In this chapter, which theme does the following most directly develop? "The opposite of every truth is just as true!" (Govinda, paragraph 19)

    A. The unity of opposites

B. The danger of lies

C. The value of strict rules

D. The cost of wealth

Key: A (The unity of opposites)

27. [short · inference · DOK 2] What can you infer from this line? “But different from his thoughts seemed to me Siddhartha’s hands and feet, his eyes, his forehead, his breath…” (Govinda, paragraph 34) Answer in two or three sentences with one detail.

Sample answer: Govinda senses Siddhartha’s holiness in his presence, not in his ideas. The evidence is “But different from his thoughts seemed to me Siddhartha’s hands and feet, his eyes, his forehead, his breath…” (Govinda, paragraph 34). The long list of body parts and gestures, set against “his thoughts,” shows that Govinda is moved by how Siddhartha lives, which proves Siddhartha’s point that wisdom is lived, not taught.

28. [short · inference · DOK 2] Why does Siddhartha tell Govinda he searches too much? Use this line. “That in all that searching, you don’t find the time for finding?” (Govinda, paragraph 5)

Sample answer: Siddhartha thinks Govinda’s constant searching blinds him to what is in front of him. The evidence is “That in all that searching, you don’t find the time for finding?” (Govinda, paragraph 5). The play between “searching” and “finding” shows that effort itself can block the goal.

29. [mc · analysis · DOK 3] Which literary element does this describe in “Govinda”? In their talk at the ferry, Govinda’s eager questions and Siddhartha’s gentle answers show how differently the two old men now seek.

A. Metaphor

B. Alliteration

C. Diction / vocabulary

D. Characterization

Key: D (Characterization)

30. [short · synthesis · DOK 4] Synthesis: trace how the friendship of Siddhartha and Govinda develops from With the Samanas to Govinda. Use one quotation from each.

Sample answer: Their friendship moves from following to reverence. In With the Samanas, “By his side lived Govinda, his shadow, walked the same paths, undertook the same efforts.” (With the Samanas, paragraph 8). In Govinda, “he once again bowed to Siddhartha, drawn by love.” (Govinda, paragraph 35). The first passage shows Govinda as a shadow; the second shows him bowing to a friend who has become his teacher.

31. [mc · recall · DOK 1] Which word completes this sentence from Govinda, paragraph 3? “are wearing the robe of Gotama’s _____”

A. monks

B. enemies

C. merchants

D. soldiers

Key: A (monks)

32. [mc · recall · DOK 1] Which word completes this sentence from Govinda, paragraph 39? “Kiss my _____, Govinda!”

A. hand

B. feet

C. forehead

D. begging bowl

Key: C (forehead)

33. [mc · recall · DOK 1] What does Govinda say when he finally recognises his friend?

A. That he must return to the order

B. That he has changed a lot and become a ferryman

C. That he looks just as he did in youth

D. That he should have stayed in the city with Kamala

Key: B (That he has changed a lot and become a ferryman)

34. [fill · recall · DOK 1] Complete the quotation from Govinda, paragraph 7: "Searching means: having a goal. But _____ means: being free, being open, having no goal"

Key: finding

35. [fill · recall · DOK 1] Fill in the blank with the vocabulary word that fits: "In deep meditation, there is the possibility to put time out of existence, to see all life which was, is, and will be as if it was _____, and there everything is good, everything is perfect, everything is Brahman." Word bank: false, ugly, simultaneous, wicked

Key: simultaneous

36. [mc · recall · DOK 1] Why does Govinda come to the river at the start of this chapter?

A. He has heard of a wise old ferryman and seeks him out

B. He is searching for Siddhartha's runaway son

C. He wants Siddhartha to rejoin Gotama's order

D. He has been sent by Gotama with a message

Key: A (He has heard of a wise old ferryman and seeks him out)

37. [fill · recall · DOK 1] Complete the quotation from Govinda, paragraph 4: "Never I'll stop searching, this seems to be my _____." Word bank: destiny, ladder, pebble, spoon

Key: destiny

38. [fill · recall · DOK 1] Fill in the blank with the word that fits: "though he was also looked upon with _____ …"

Word bank: contempt, pity, envy, veneration

Key: veneration

39. [mc · inference · DOK 2] In this chapter, which theme does the following most directly develop? Govinda admits, "I confess that I haven't found it." (Govinda, paragraph 36)

A. A lifelong search without peace

B. Contentment in old age within the order

C. Pride in obedience

D. Joy in teaching

Key: A (A lifelong search without peace)

40. [short · inference · DOK 2] What can you infer from this line? "Many people, Govinda, have to change a lot, have to wear many a robe, I am one of those, my dear." (Govinda, paragraph 12) Answer in two or three sentences with one detail.

Sample answer: Siddhartha accepts that his many lives were all part of his path. The evidence is "Many people, Govinda, have to change a lot, have to wear many a robe, I am one of those, my dear." (Govinda, paragraph 12). The "many a robe" recalls his roles as Brahmin, Samana, merchant and ferryman, and he speaks of them without regret.

41. [short · inference · DOK 2] How does Siddhartha judge the Buddha's greatness? Use this line. “Even with him, even with your great teacher, I prefer the thing over the words, place more importance on his acts and life than on his speeches, more on the gestures of his hand than his opinions.” (Govinda, paragraph 32)
    Sample answer: “Even with him, even with your great teacher, I prefer the thing over the words, place more importance on his acts and life than on his speeches, more on the gestures of his hand than his opinions.” (Govinda, paragraph 32). He values the Buddha’s life over his doctrine. The pairs “thing over the words” and “acts and life” over “speeches” show that greatness lies in how one lives, which fits the novel’s preference for experience over teaching.

42. [mc · analysis · DOK 3] Which literary element does this describe in “Govinda”? Seen through Govinda’s eyes, Siddhartha’s smile shows how fully the restless seeker has become a man at one with all things.
    A. Simile
    B. Setting
    C. Irony
    D. Characterization

    Key: D (Characterization)

43. [short · analysis · DOK 3] Analyze the word choice in “I can love a stone, Govinda, and also a tree or a piece of bark” (Govinda, paragraph 26). Pick two words and explain what they suggest.
    Sample answer: Siddhartha's love now reaches even the humblest things in the world. The evidence is “I can love a stone, Govinda, and also a tree or a piece of bark” (Govinda, paragraph 26). The plain words "stone" and "bark" show that his love now reaches the humblest things, not just ideas or people. Choosing ordinary objects makes the point that the whole world deserves love as it is.

44. [mc · analysis · DOK 3] Which literary element does this describe in “Govinda”? Govinda’s private thoughts about Siddhartha are set apart in parentheses.
    A. Allusion
    B. Onomatopoeia
    C. Figurative language
    D. Interior monologue

    Key: D (Interior monologue)

45. [short · synthesis · DOK 4] Synthesis: trace how Govinda’s failure to recognise Siddhartha develops from By the River to Govinda. Use one quotation from each.
    Sample answer: Govinda’s failure to recognise Siddhartha moves from a stranger’s kindness to a friend’s surprise. In By the River, Govinda “had been sitting here for a long time and been waiting for him to wake up, though he did not know him.” (By the River, paragraph 12). In Govinda, he cries: “I wouldn’t have recognised you this time as well!” (Govinda, paragraph 11). The first passage hides Siddhartha; the second shows how much he has changed.

46. [fill · recall · DOK 1] Fill in the blank with the word that fits: “Astonished, as if he had been the object of a magic _____” Word bank: meal, debt, spell, storm
    Key: spell

47. [fill · recall · DOK 1] Fill in the blank with the word that fits: “drawn by great love and _____” Word bank: boredom, expectation, anger, hunger
    Key: expectation

48. [mc · recall · DOK 1] In Govinda’s vision, what symbolic covering lies over all the faces?
    A. A dark cloud
    B. A heavy golden robe of silk

C. A cold stone

D. A thin, smiling mask

Key: D (A thin, smiling mask)

49. [mc · recall · DOK 1] Which word completes this sentence from Govinda, paragraph 38? “Siddhartha saw it and _____.”

A. wept

B. left

C. smiled

D. shouted

Key: C (smiled)

50. [fill · recall · DOK 1] Fill in the blank with the word that fits: “like a fire burnt the feeling of the most _____ love” Word bank: intimate, wooden, salty, rusty

Key: intimate

51. [mc · recall · DOK 1] Whom does Siddhartha name as his greatest teacher?

A. Gotama the Buddha

B. The river and Vasudeva

C. Kamala the beautiful courtesan

D. His father the Brahmin

Key: B (The river and Vasudeva)

52. [mc · recall · DOK 1] Which word completes this sentence from Govinda, paragraph 15? “he sat with me when I had fallen _____ in the forest, on the pilgrimage.”

A. bread

B. asleep

C. river

D. yellow

Key: B (asleep)

53. [mc · inference · DOK 2] What does this passage most clearly show? “I can love a stone, Govinda, and also a tree or a piece of bark” (Govinda, paragraph 26)

A. His love of the whole world.

B. His wish to gather disciples of his own.

C. His regret at leaving Gotama's grove.

D. His belief that a teacher can give wisdom.

Key: A (His love of the whole world.)

54. [mc · inference · DOK 2] In this chapter, which theme does the following most directly develop? “Not just a word, my friend, is Nirvana. It is a thought.” (Govinda, paragraph 27)

A. The joy of friendship

B. The power of the river

C. The fear of death

D. The limits of words and ideas

Key: D (The limits of words and ideas)

55. [short · inference · DOK 2] What does Siddhartha admire in Vasudeva? Use this line and one more quotation from the chapter. “He was a very simple person, Vasudeva, he was no thinker” (Govinda, paragraph 15)

    Sample answer: Siddhartha admires Vasudeva’s simplicity more than learning. The evidence is “He was a very simple person, Vasudeva, he was no thinker” (Govinda, paragraph 15). Later he calls Vasudeva “a holy man, who has for many years simply believed in the river, nothing else.” (Govinda, paragraph 28). The repeated idea of simplicity shows that, for Siddhartha, wisdom is lived rather than thought.

56. [short · inference · DOK 2] How does Govinda privately judge Siddhartha’s teachings? Use this line. “This Siddhartha is a bizarre person, he expresses bizarre thoughts, his teachings sound foolish.” (Govinda, paragraph 34)

    Sample answer: Govinda finds Siddhartha’s ideas strange and hard to accept. The evidence is “This Siddhartha is a bizarre person, he expresses bizarre thoughts, his teachings sound foolish.” (Govinda, paragraph 34). The repeated “bizarre” and the word “foolish” show his doubt, even though he still senses holiness in his friend.

57. [mc · analysis · DOK 3] What does Govinda’s question, “Are you Siddhartha?”, reveal about him?

    A. He is angry at being tricked

    B. He is astonished and unsure

    C. He is bored by the ferryman

    D. He is afraid of the river

    Key: B (He is astonished and unsure)

58. [mc · analysis · DOK 3] Which literary element does this describe in “Govinda”? The novel ends where it began, with Siddhartha and Govinda together, but with their roles reversed.

    A. Simile

    B. Structure

    C. Alliteration

    D. Hyperbole

    Key: B (Structure)

59. [short · synthesis · DOK 4] Close reading: how do the diction and syntax of “A person or an act is never entirely Sansara or entirely Nirvana, a person is never entirely holy or entirely sinful.” (Govinda, paragraph 19) shape its meaning? Consider a second, competing reading.

    Sample answer: The balanced “never entirely … or entirely” pairs cancel each other: “A person or an act is never entirely Sansara or entirely Nirvana, a person is never entirely holy or entirely sinful.” (Govinda, paragraph 19). The syntax refuses to place anyone on one side, so the sentence itself joins the opposites Gotama’s teaching divided. A competing reading says this erases the line between good and evil, so nothing matters. But Siddhartha’s aim is love, not indifference: “But I’m only interested in being able to love the world, not to despise it, not to hate it and me, to be able to look upon it and me and all beings with love and admiration and great respect.” (Govinda, paragraph 30). Refusing to divide the world lets him respect all beings, which is a moral stance, not its absence.

60. [short · synthesis · DOK 4] Synthesis: trace how Siddhartha’s distrust of teachings develops from Gotama to Govinda. Use one quotation from each.

    Sample answer: Siddhartha’s distrust of teachings moves from a young man’s argument to an old man’s settled view. In Gotama, he tells the Buddha: “nobody will obtain salvation by means of teachings!” (Gotama, paragraph 37). In Govinda, he says: “Therefore, teachings are no good for me” (Govinda, paragraph 26). The first passage is a bold challenge; the second rests on a lifetime of experience.

61. [fill · recall · DOK 1 · Dual Credit (Indiana College Core): ICC-WC-1.5] Fill in the blank with the word that fits: "Govinda said, not without _____, these words" Word bank: money, singing, anger, hesitation

    Key: hesitation

62. [fill · recall · DOK 1 · Dual Credit (Indiana College Core): ICC-WC-1.5] Complete the quotation from Govinda, paragraph 1: "When Govinda went back on his way, he chose the path to the ferry, _____ to see the ferryman." Word bank: eager, wooden, salty, purple

    Key: eager

63. [mc · recall · DOK 1 · Dual Credit (Indiana College Core): ICC-WC-1.5] In the line "Quoth Siddhartha, smiling from his old eyes", what does "Quoth" most nearly mean?

    A. wrote
    B. sang
    C. said
    D. shouted

    Key: C (said)

64. [fill · recall · DOK 1 · Dual Credit (Indiana College Core): ICC-WC-1.5] Fill in the blank with the word that fits: "In a friendly manner, Siddhartha _____." Word bank: wept, shouted, fled, laughed

    Key: laughed

65. [mc · recall · DOK 1 · Dual Credit (Indiana College Core): ICC-WC-1.5] What does Siddhartha call the 'times to come'?

    A. The goal of every seeker
    B. A deception, only a parable
    C. A gift from Gotama
    D. The reward for virtue

    Key: B (A deception, only a parable)

66. [mc · recall · DOK 1 · Dual Credit (Indiana College Core): ICC-WC-1.5] For Siddhartha a stone is a symbol of the oneness of all things. What does he compare the many stones to?

    A. Gold and silver
    B. Bright stars in the night sky
    C. Drops of rain
    D. Oil, soap, leaves and sand

    Key: D (Oil, soap, leaves and sand)

67. [mc · recall · DOK 1 · Dual Credit (Indiana College Core): ICC-WC-1.5] In the line "He commands benevolence, clemency, sympathy, tolerance, but not love", what does "clemency" most nearly mean?

    A. harsh and strict justice
    B. great wealth
    C. mercy and forgiveness
    D. loud praise

    Key: C (mercy and forgiveness)

68. [mc · inference · DOK 2 · Dual Credit (Indiana College Core): ICC-WC-1.5] In this chapter, which theme does the following most directly develop? Siddhartha counts “a beautiful courtesan” and “a rich merchant” among his teachers (Govinda, paragraph 15).

    A. The danger of desire

    B. Contempt for wealth

    C. Loyalty to one single teacher

    D. Learning from all of life

    Key: D (Learning from all of life)

69. [mc · inference · DOK 2 · Dual Credit (Indiana College Core): ICC-WC-1.5] What does this passage most clearly show? “I don’t differentiate much between thoughts and words.” (Govinda, paragraph 28)

    A. His distrust of all abstract talk

    B. His love of long and clever debate

    C. His wish to forget Gotama

    D. His respect for scholars

    Key: A (His distrust of all abstract talk)

70. [short · inference · DOK 3 · Dual Credit (Indiana College Core): ICC-WC-1.5] What can you infer from this line? “You, O venerable one, are perhaps indeed a searcher, because, striving for your goal, there are many things you don’t see, which are directly in front of your eyes.” (Govinda, paragraph 7) Answer by connecting it to one earlier chapter: quote a second passage and explain how the two passages together develop the idea.

    Sample answer: Govinda’s constant searching is what keeps him from finding. The evidence is “You, O venerable one, are perhaps indeed a searcher, because, striving for your goal, there are many things you don’t see, which are directly in front of your eyes.” (Govinda, paragraph 7). Because he strives so hard for his goal, he misses what is “directly in front of” his eyes, including the friend sitting beside him. As a Samana Siddhartha searched in this same goal-driven way, trying “to become empty, empty of thirst, empty of wishing, empty of dreams, empty of joy and sorrow” (With the Samanas, paragraph 3). Together the passages show that the striving of his youth is the error he now sees in Govinda.

71. [short · inference · DOK 2 · Dual Credit (Indiana College Core): ICC-WC-1.5] What does Govinda see in Siddhartha despite his strange words? Use this line. “out of every part of him shines a purity, shines a calmness, shines a cheerfulness and mildness and holiness” (Govinda, paragraph 34)

    Sample answer: Govinda sees holiness in Siddhartha’s whole being. The evidence is “out of every part of him shines a purity, shines a calmness, shines a cheerfulness and mildness and holiness” (Govinda, paragraph 34). The repeated “shines” shows that the truth comes through his presence, not his words.

72. [short · analysis · DOK 3 · Dual Credit (Indiana College Core): ICC-WC-1.5] Claim: The novel ends by claiming that wisdom must be lived, not taught. Explain how this evidence supports the claim: “Perhaps it is these which keep you from finding peace, perhaps it is the many words.” (Govinda, paragraph 26).

    Sample answer: The evidence supports the claim because Siddhartha blames words for Govinda’s lack of peace: “Perhaps it is these which keep you from finding peace, perhaps it is the many words.” (Govinda, paragraph 26). If “the many words” of teaching stand in the way, wisdom cannot come from being taught; Govinda finally understands only when he kisses Siddhartha’s forehead and sees, rather than hears.

73. [mc · analysis · DOK 3 · Dual Credit (Indiana College Core): ICC-WC-1.5] Which trait does Siddhartha show by refusing to give Govinda a teaching in words?

    A. Selfish secrecy about his knowledge

B. Honesty about wisdom's limits

C. A weak memory

D. Pride in his wealth

Key: B (Honesty about wisdom's limits)

74. [mc · analysis · DOK 3 · Dual Credit (Indiana College Core): ICC-WC-1.5] Which literary element does this describe in "Govinda"? Govinda once guarded the sleeping Siddhartha without knowing him, and now fails to know him again.

A. Metaphor

B. Irony

C. Alliteration

D. Hyperbole

Key: B (Irony)

75. [short · synthesis · DOK 4 · Dual Credit (Indiana College Core): ICC-WC-1.5] Synthesis: trace how the river as teacher develops from The Ferryman to Govinda. Use one quotation from each.

Sample answer: The river as teacher moves from Siddhartha's lesson to Vasudeva's legacy. In The Ferryman, "Most of all, he learned from it to listen, to pay close attention with a quiet heart" (The Ferryman, paragraph 30). In Govinda, Vasudeva is the man "who has for many years simply believed in the river, nothing else." (Govinda, paragraph 28). The first passage shows the river teaching Siddhartha; the second shows that it made Vasudeva a saint.

76. [mc · recall · DOK 1] What does Govinda ask before he leaves in the morning?

A. A little money for his long journey

B. Whether Siddhartha has a teaching

C. A ride back across

D. Food for the road

Key: B (Whether Siddhartha has a teaching)

77. [fill · recall · DOK 1] Complete the quotation from Govinda, paragraph 13: "Many _____ he posed to the friend of his youth, many things Siddhartha had to tell him from his life." Word bank: coins, meals, questions, debts

Key: questions

78. [fill · recall · DOK 1] Fill in the blank with the word that fits: "the restlessness and the searching still had not _____ from his heart" Word bank: eaten, perished, sung, spoken

Key: perished

79. [mc · recall · DOK 1] Which word completes this sentence from Govinda, paragraph 42? "he smiled silently, smiled quietly and _____"

A. loudly

B. bitterly

C. softly

D. coldly

Key: C (softly)

80. [fill · recall · DOK 1] Fill in the blank with the word that fits: "he once again bowed to Siddhartha, drawn by _____" Word bank: money, love, horses, force

Key: love

81. [mc · recall · DOK 1] Govinda's vision symbolizes timelessness. How long does he feel it lasted?

    A. From dusk until the next dawn

    B. A single long day

    C. Many long months

    D. A second or a hundred years

    Key: D (A second or a hundred years)

82. [mc · recall · DOK 1] In the line "being enchanted and dissolved in his innermost self", what does "enchanted" most nearly mean?

    A. badly frightened and shaken

    B. deeply bored

    C. charmed, as if by magic

    D. plainly angered

    Key: C (charmed, as if by magic)

83. [mc · inference · DOK 2] What does this passage most clearly show? "Your stone, your tree, your river—are they actually a reality?" (Govinda, paragraph 29)

    A. Govinda's doubt that things are real

    B. Govinda's delight in nature

    C. Govinda's anger at Siddhartha's mocking

    D. Govinda's wish to stay

    Key: A (Govinda's doubt that things are real)

84. [mc · inference · DOK 2] In this chapter, which theme does the following most directly develop? Govinda feels "a certain contempt for the words of his friend" fighting deep affection and reverence (Govinda, paragraph 40).

    A. Simple hatred of a rival teacher and his ways

    B. Fear of the forest

    C. Hunger for knowledge

    D. Inner conflict between doubt and devotion

    Key: D (Inner conflict between doubt and devotion)

85. [short · inference · DOK 2] How does Siddhartha reveal who he is to Govinda? Use this line. "But, O Govinda, you did not recognise the sleeping man." (Govinda, paragraph 9)

    Sample answer: Siddhartha reveals himself by recalling the day Govinda guarded his sleep. The evidence is "But, O Govinda, you did not recognise the sleeping man." (Govinda, paragraph 9). Naming him "Govinda" at last shows that the ferryman knows him, and the reminder shows that Govinda has failed to see him twice.

86. [short · inference · DOK 2] How does Govinda react to his vision at the end? Use this line. "tears he knew nothing of ran down his old face" (Govinda, paragraph 43)

    Sample answer: Govinda is moved beyond his own understanding. The evidence is "tears he knew nothing of ran down his old face" (Govinda, paragraph 43). The phrase "knew nothing of" shows that his feeling comes before thought, so he receives at last what words could not give.

87. [mc · analysis · DOK 3] Govinda says he believes Siddhartha has not followed a teacher (Govinda, paragraph 16), yet at the end (paragraph 43) he bows deeply before him. What does this turn show?

    A. Govinda has finally decided to leave the monks and join Siddhartha at the river

    B. The lifelong follower finds his teacher in one who followed none

    C. Siddhartha has secretly become a monk of Gotama's order after all, in the end

    D. Govinda bows only out of politeness to a very old and dying friend

    Key: B (The lifelong follower finds his teacher in one who followed none)

88. [mc · analysis · DOK 3] Which literary element does this describe in "Govinda"? Govinda's vision of a flowing river of faces ends the novel at its moment of highest intensity.

    A. Setting

    B. Simile

    C. Alliteration

    D. Plot

    Key: D (Plot)

89. [short · synthesis · DOK 4] Synthesis: trace how Siddhartha's embrace of the world develops from By the River to Govinda. Use one quotation from each.

    Sample answer: Siddhartha's embrace of the world moves from a sudden feeling to a stated belief. In By the River, "he loved everything, that he was full of joyful love for everything he saw." (By the River, paragraph 37). In Govinda, he wants "to be able to look upon it and me and all beings with love and admiration and great respect." (Govinda, paragraph 30). The first passage is a joy after sleep; the second is a way of living.

90. [short · synthesis · DOK 4] Close reading: how do the diction and syntax of "For this very reason, I distrust in words so much, for I know, this contradiction is a deception." (Govinda, paragraph 32) shape its meaning? Consider a second, competing reading.

    Sample answer: The repeated "I know" and the logical "For this very reason" make the distrust of words sound reasoned, not moody: "For this very reason, I distrust in words so much, for I know, this contradiction is a deception." (Govinda, paragraph 32). A competing reading says Siddhartha simply rejects the Buddha, since his words contradict Gotama's. But he insists on their unity: "I know that I am in agreement with Gotama." (Govinda, paragraph 32). And Govinda in the end understands through a gesture, not a lesson: "Kiss my forehead, Govinda!" (Govinda, paragraph 39). The contradiction lies only in the words, which confirms his distrust of them.

91. [fill · recall · DOK 1] Fill in the blank with the word that fits: "This stone is just a stone, it is _____, it belongs to the world of the Maja;" Word bank: worthless, rusty, muddy, wooden

    Key: worthless

92. [fill · recall · DOK 1] Complete the quotation from Govinda, paragraph 12: "Be welcome, Govinda, and spend the night in my _____." Word bank: hut, spoon, song, cloud

    Key: hut

93. [mc · recall · DOK 1] What does Siddhartha admit about thoughts?

    A. He has no high opinion of them

    B. He trusts them above all things

    C. He writes them down every day

    D. He learned them from Vasudeva

    Key: A (He has no high opinion of them)

94. [mc · recall · DOK 1] Which of his teachers does Siddhartha say once sat by him while he slept in the forest?

    A. The oldest Samana

    B. A monk who followed the Buddha

    C. Kamaswami the merchant

    D. His own father

    Key: B (A monk who followed the Buddha)

95. [mc · recall · DOK 1] What does Govinda say Nirvana is, against Siddhartha?

    A. Just a word

    B. A thought

    C. A place

    D. A dream

    Key: B (A thought)

96. [mc · recall · DOK 1] In the line "while he was still struggling in vain and with reluctance to think away time", what does "reluctance" most nearly mean?

    A. eagerness

    B. thoughtlessness

    C. unwillingness

    D. pride

    Key: C (unwillingness)

97. [fill · recall · DOK 1] Fill in the blank with the word that fits: "He commands benevolence, clemency, sympathy, _____, but not love" Word bank: cruelty, tolerance, greed, vanity

    Key: tolerance

98. [short · inference · DOK 2] Why does Siddhartha love the stone? Use this line. "this is why I love it and see worth and purpose in each of its veins and cavities" (Govinda, paragraph 23)

    Sample answer: Siddhartha loves the stone for being exactly what it is. The evidence is "this is why I love it and see worth and purpose in each of its veins and cavities" (Govinda, paragraph 23). The small details "veins and cavities" show that he values the thing itself, not what it might become.

99. [short · inference · DOK 2] Why does Siddhartha distrust words? Use this line. "The words are not good for the secret meaning" (Govinda, paragraph 23)

    Sample answer: Siddhartha thinks words distort the deepest truths. The evidence is "The words are not good for the secret meaning" (Govinda, paragraph 23). Calling the meaning "secret" shows that it can be lived or felt but not fully spoken.

100. [mc · inference · DOK 2] In this chapter, which theme does the following most directly develop? "within the sinner is now and today already the future Buddha" (Govinda, paragraph 21)

     A. Perfection present in all things

     B. Punishment for sin

     C. The slow and painful road to salvation

     D. The power of priests

     Key: A (Perfection present in all things)

101. [short · analysis · DOK 3] Analyze the word choice in "a flowing river of faces, of hundreds, of thousands" (Govinda, paragraph 41). Pick two words and explain what they suggest.

Sample answer: Govinda's vision shows all life as one moving stream. The evidence is "a flowing river of faces, of hundreds, of thousands" (Govinda, paragraph 41). "Flowing" ties the vision to the river Siddhartha learned from, and the rising "hundreds" and "thousands" suggest a number too large to count.

102. [mc · analysis · DOK 3] Which literary element does this describe in "Govinda"? Govinda, who has followed every rule, is the one who cannot find peace.

A. Simile

B. Irony

C. Setting

D. Alliteration

Key: B (Irony)

103. [mc · analysis · DOK 3] Which literary element does this describe in "Govinda"? Siddhartha laughs in a friendly way and invites Govinda to spend the night in his hut.

A. Setting

B. Irony

C. Simile

D. Characterization

Key: D (Characterization)

104. [short · synthesis · DOK 4] Synthesis: trace how Siddhartha's trust in his own thinking develops from Awakening to Govinda. Use one quotation from each. Address one competing reading and answer it.

Sample answer: Siddhartha moves from deciding to think for himself to knowing that his deepest thought cannot be handed on. In Awakening he resolves, "No longer, I want to begin my thoughts and my life with Atman and with the suffering of the world." (Awakening, paragraph 6). "No longer" marks a break with borrowed doctrine. In Govinda he says, "Look, my dear Govinda, this is one of my thoughts, which I have found: wisdom cannot be passed on." (Govinda, paragraph 17). His own thinking has led him to a truth that limits all teaching, including his own. A competing reading calls this a contradiction, since he shares the thought in words; but he offers it only as a pointer, which is why he then turns to the stone and to love.

105. [short · synthesis · DOK 4] Close reading: how do the diction and syntax of "Like this, Govinda knew, the perfected ones are smiling." (Govinda, paragraph 41) shape its meaning? Consider a second, competing reading.

Sample answer: The short, calm sentence closes the vision with certainty: "Like this, Govinda knew, the perfected ones are smiling." (Govinda, paragraph 41). The inserted "Govinda knew" makes this his own insight at last, and the present tense "are smiling" makes the smile timeless. A competing reading says Govinda only recognizes Gotama's smile, not wisdom itself. Yet the plural "perfected ones" joins Siddhartha to the Buddha, so he has seen the goal.

106. [fill · recall · DOK 1] Complete the quotation from Govinda, paragraph 23: "is a stone, and will, after a certain time, perhaps turn into _____" Word bank: soil, music, silence, laughter

Key: soil

107. [fill · recall · DOK 1] Fill in the blank with the word that fits: "Like this, Govinda knew, the perfected ones are _____." Word bank: arguing, shouting, smiling, sleeping

Key: smiling

108. [mc · recall · DOK 1] Which word completes this sentence from Govinda, paragraph 43? "Deeply, he bowed, touching the _____"

A. sky

B. river

C. ground

D. boat

Key: C (ground)

109. [fill · recall · DOK 1] Fill in the blank with the word that fits: "his smile shone _____" Word bank: grey, golden, cold, dull

Key: golden

110. [mc · recall · DOK 1] What does Siddhartha say about time?

A. It moves in a straight line

B. It is not real

C. It heals every wound

D. It belongs to the gods

Key: B (It is not real)

111. [mc · recall · DOK 1] What runs down Govinda's face as he bows at the end, a symbol of how deeply he is moved?

A. Rain

B. River water

C. Sweat

D. Tears

Key: D (Tears)

112. [mc · recall · DOK 1] Which word completes this sentence from Govinda, paragraph 26? "Because salvation and virtue as well, Sansara and Nirvana as well, are mere _____, Govinda."

A. stones

B. words

C. coins

D. boats

Key: B (words)

113. [mc · inference · DOK 2] What does this passage most clearly show? "Let the things be illusions or not, after all I would then also be an illusion" (Govinda, paragraph 30)

A. His sense of kinship with all things

B. His fear of illusions

C. His wish to prove that things are real

D. His contempt for Govinda

Key: A (His sense of kinship with all things)

114. [mc · inference · DOK 2] In this chapter, which theme does the following most directly develop? Siddhartha says each stone "prays the Om in its own way" (Govinda, paragraph 23).

A. The worthlessness of matter

B. The power of prayer

C. The cruelty of nature

D. The holiness of every thing

Key: D (The holiness of every thing)

115. [short · inference · DOK 3] What does Siddhartha claim about the world? “The world, my friend Govinda, is not imperfect, or on a slow path towards perfection: no, it is perfect in every moment, all sin already carries the divine forgiveness in itself” (Govinda, paragraph 21) Answer by connecting it to one earlier chapter: quote a second passage and explain how the two passages together develop the idea.
Sample answer: Siddhartha claims that the world is already whole and needs no improving. The evidence is “The world, my friend Govinda, is not imperfect, or on a slow path towards perfection: no, it is perfect in every moment, all sin already carries the divine forgiveness in itself” (Govinda, paragraph 21). The phrase “perfect in every moment” rejects the idea of a slow climb to holiness, and “sin already carries the divine forgiveness” joins opposites in one thing. By the river he learned this through his own life: “I had to sin, to be able to live again.” (By the River, paragraph 42). Together the passages show that the sins he once hated in himself are now part of the perfection he sees everywhere.

116. [short · inference · DOK 3] What is Siddhartha's main claim to Govinda, and how does it echo what he once told the Buddha? “wisdom cannot be passed on. Wisdom which a wise man tries to pass on to someone always sounds like foolishness.” (Govinda, paragraph 17) Answer by connecting it to one earlier chapter: quote a second passage and explain how the two passages together develop the idea.
Sample answer: “wisdom cannot be passed on. Wisdom which a wise man tries to pass on to someone always sounds like foolishness.” (Govinda, paragraph 17). Siddhartha claims that wisdom can only be reached, never received. In Gotama he praised the Buddha for exactly this: “You have found salvation from death. It has come to you in the course of your own search, on your own path” (Gotama, paragraph 37). Together the passages show that what Siddhartha once saw in the Buddha’s life, a salvation found “on your own path,” has become the rule he now lives and tells Govinda.

117. [short · inference · DOK 3] Whom does Siddhartha name as a teacher, and what does that show? Use this line. “Here on this ferryboat, for instance, a man has been my predecessor and teacher, a holy man, who has for many years simply believed in the river, nothing else.” (Govinda, paragraph 28) Answer by connecting it to one earlier chapter: quote a second passage and explain how the two passages together develop the idea.
Sample answer: Siddhartha names Vasudeva, a simple ferryman, as his teacher. The evidence is “Here on this ferryboat, for instance, a man has been my predecessor and teacher, a holy man, who has for many years simply believed in the river, nothing else.” (Govinda, paragraph 28). The words “simply believed” and “nothing else” show that Vasudeva’s holiness came from faith and listening, not from learning. Vasudeva himself said where his wisdom came from: “The river has taught me to listen, from it you will learn it as well.” (The Ferryman, paragraph 27). Together the passages show that the novel’s highest teacher taught nothing in words; he passed on only the habit of listening.

118. [mc · analysis · DOK 3] Which literary element does this describe in “Govinda”? The stone Siddhartha picks up and weighs in his hand stands for the whole world he now loves.

A. Rhyme
B. Symbolism
C. Alliteration
D. Hyperbole

Key: B (Symbolism)

119. [mc · analysis · DOK 3] How does Siddhartha answer Govinda’s last plea?

A. With a long and learned lecture
B. With silence and a quiet smile
C. With a gift of money
D. With an angry rebuke

Key: B (With silence and a quiet smile)

120. [short · synthesis · DOK 4] Synthesis: trace how Gotama's smile develops from Gotama to Govinda. Use one quotation from each. Address one competing reading and answer it.
Sample answer: Gotama's smile moves from a sign of one man's peace to the sign of all perfected ones. In Gotama, "With a hidden smile, quiet, calm, somewhat resembling a healthy child, the Buddha walked" (Gotama, paragraph 12). In Govinda, Siddhartha smiles "precisely as he used to smile, the exalted one." (Govinda, paragraph 42). A competing reading says Siddhartha merely imitates the Buddha. Yet he rejected Gotama's teaching, so the smile shows the same goal reached by his own path.

121. [fill · recall · DOK 1] Fill in the blank with the word that fits: "a passionately painful confession of _____" Word bank: wealth, victory, comfort, transitoriness
Key: transitoriness

122. [fill · recall · DOK 1] Fill in the blank with the word that fits: "feeling in his innermost self as if he had been wounded by a divine _____" Word bank: arrow, spoon, ladder, pillow
Key: arrow

123. [mc · recall · DOK 1] In the line "Would you like to tell me something, O honourable one?", what does "honourable" most nearly mean?

A. deserving respect
B. very old
C. very rich
D. easily fooled

Key: A (deserving respect)

124. [fill · recall · DOK 1] Fill in the blank with the word that fits: "and see worth and purpose in each of its veins and cavities, in the yellow, in the gray, in the _____, in the sound it makes when I knock at it" Word bank: hardness, laughter, singing, hunger
Key: hardness

125. [mc · recall · DOK 1] What does Siddhartha say he needed in order to learn to love the world?

A. A strict teacher
B. Sin, lust and despair
C. Long years of fasting
D. The Buddha's rules

Key: B (Sin, lust and despair)

126. [mc · recall · DOK 1] Once the vision closes, how does Siddhartha's face, a symbol of the whole, look?

A. Old and tired
B. Angry and stern
C. Weeping softly in grief and in pain
D. Unchanged, smiling quietly

Key: D (Unchanged, smiling quietly)

127. [mc · recall · DOK 1] Which word completes this sentence from Govinda, paragraph 24? "Govinda listened _____."

A. angrily
B. proudly

C. silently

D. loudly

Key: C (silently)

128. [mc · inference · DOK 2] What does this passage most clearly show? "I have a better opinion of things." (Govinda, paragraph 28)

A. His preference for things over ideas

B. His love of possessions

C. His wish to become rich and powerful again

D. His trust in teachers

Key: A (His preference for things over ideas)

129. [mc · inference · DOK 2] In this chapter, which theme does the following most directly develop? Siddhartha says, "But I cannot love words." (Govinda, paragraph 26)

A. Hatred of reading

B. A love of silence

C. Fear of speaking in front of others

D. Distrust of words and teachings

Key: D (Distrust of words and teachings)

130. [short · inference · DOK 3] Why does Siddhartha say Vasudeva knew as much as Gotama? Use this line. "he knew what is necessary just as well as Gotama, he was a perfect man, a saint" (Govinda, paragraph 15) Connect it to a second quotation from another chapter.

Sample answer: Siddhartha believes that wisdom comes from living, not from thinking. The evidence is "he knew what is necessary just as well as Gotama, he was a perfect man, a saint" (Govinda, paragraph 15). In The Ferryman, Vasudeva says of himself: "All I'm able to do is to listen and to be godly, I have learned nothing else." (The Ferryman, paragraph 29). Together the passages show that a simple listener can equal the Buddha.

131. [short · inference · DOK 3] What does Siddhartha's view of love show about how he has changed? Use this line. "love, O Govinda, seems to me to be the most important thing of all" (Govinda, paragraph 30) Connect it to a second quotation from another chapter.

Sample answer: Siddhartha has moved from cool detachment to love of the world. The evidence is "love, O Govinda, seems to me to be the most important thing of all" (Govinda, paragraph 30). In With the Childlike People, Kamala told him: "and yet you do not love me, you love nobody" (With the Childlike People, paragraph 46). Together the passages show that the man who could not love now calls love the highest thing.

132. [short · inference · DOK 3] How does Siddhartha see Gotama's love for people? Use this line. "and yet loved people thus much, to use a long, laborious life only to help them, to teach them!" (Govinda, paragraph 32) Connect it to a second quotation from another chapter.

Sample answer: Siddhartha sees Gotama's whole life as an act of love. The evidence is "and yet loved people thus much, to use a long, laborious life only to help them, to teach them!" (Govinda, paragraph 32). In Gotama, the Buddha meets even a doubter "With half of a smile, with an unwavering openness and kindness" (Gotama, paragraph 41). Together the passages show that Gotama's kindness, not his doctrine, proves his love.

133. [mc · analysis · DOK 3] Which literary element does this describe in "Govinda"? The chapter shifts to Govinda's point of view to show Siddhartha from outside.

A. Rhyme

B. Point of view

C. Hyperbole

D. Foreshadowing

Key: B (Point of view)

134. [mc · analysis · DOK 3] What does Govinda's deep bow at the end show?

A. Exhaustion from travel

B. Humble reverence for Siddhartha

C. Shame at his robe

D. A wish to leave the hut very quickly

Key: B (Humble reverence for Siddhartha)

135. [short · synthesis · DOK 4] Synthesis: trace how Govinda's search develops from Gotama to Govinda. Use one quotation from each. Address one competing reading and answer it.

Sample answer: Govinda's search moves from taking refuge to admitting he has not found peace. In Gotama, "Govinda has heard the teachings, he has taken refuge in it." (Gotama, paragraph 20). In Govinda, "the eternal search was visible in his look, eternal not-finding." (Govinda, paragraph 37). A competing reading says Govinda failed by following a teacher. Yet his final vision comes through love for his friend, so his search is answered after all.

Rigor version	Items (in order)	Mix
HS Sophomore	1, 2, 3, 4, 5, 6, 7, 8, 9, 10, 11, 12, 13, 14, 15	recall 11, inference 3, analysis 0, synthesis 1
HS Junior	16, 17, 18, 19, 20, 21, 22, 23, 24, 25, 26, 27, 28, 29, 30	recall 10, inference 3, analysis 1, synthesis 1
HS Senior	31, 32, 33, 34, 35, 36, 37, 38, 39, 40, 41, 42, 43, 44, 45	recall 8, inference 3, analysis 3, synthesis 1
AP	46, 47, 48, 49, 50, 51, 52, 53, 54, 55, 56, 57, 58, 59, 60	recall 7, inference 4, analysis 2, synthesis 2
College Freshman	61, 62, 63, 64, 65, 66, 67, 68, 69, 70, 71, 72, 73, 74, 75	recall 7, inference 4, analysis 3, synthesis 1
College Sophomore	76, 77, 78, 79, 80, 81, 82, 83, 84, 85, 86, 87, 88, 89, 90	recall 7, inference 4, analysis 2, synthesis 2
College Junior	91, 92, 93, 94, 95, 96, 97, 98, 99, 100, 101, 102, 103, 104, 105	recall 7, inference 3, analysis 3, synthesis 2
College Senior	106, 107, 108, 109, 110, 111, 112, 113, 114, 115, 116, 117, 118, 119, 120	recall 7, inference 5, analysis 2, synthesis 1
Graduate / PhD	121, 122, 123, 124, 125, 126, 127, 128, 129, 130, 131, 132, 133, 134, 135	recall 7, inference 5, analysis 2, synthesis 1

Writing prompts (eleven rigor levels)

HS Sophomore (450 words; Dual Credit (Indiana College Core): ICC-WC-1.1, ICC-WC-1.3, ICC-WC-1.4, ICC-WC-1.5): Analyze how Govinda develops the idea that wisdom cannot be taught. Make a precise claim, support it with at least three pieces of textual evidence, and explain how the author's use of theme and characterization shapes that idea. Address one possible counterclaim. (You are reading the English translation by Gunther Olesch, Anke Dreher, Amy Coulter, Stefan Langer and Semyon Chaichenets, so word-choice evidence is the translators' English.)

HS Junior (550 words; Dual Credit (Indiana College Core): ICC-WC-1.1, ICC-WC-1.3, ICC-WC-1.4, ICC-WC-1.5): Analyze how the structure of Govinda (where it begins, turns and ends) and its theme shape the reader's understanding of the idea that wisdom cannot be taught. Identify one place where the text leaves matters uncertain and explain how that uncertainty adds to its meaning.

HS Senior (600 words; Dual Credit (Indiana College Core): ICC-WC-1.1, ICC-WC-1.3, ICC-WC-1.4, ICC-WC-1.5): Two readers disagree about what Govinda suggests about the idea that wisdom cannot be taught. Lay out two plausible interpretations, weigh the evidence for each (including the chapter's theme and characterization), and argue for the stronger one in a sustained, well-organized essay.

AP (650 words; Dual Credit (Indiana College Core): ICC-WC-1.1, ICC-WC-1.3, ICC-WC-1.4, ICC-WC-1.5): Write a literary argument in which you analyze how Hermann Hesse uses theme in Govinda to complicate the reader's understanding of the idea that wisdom cannot be taught. Develop a defensible thesis, select evidence purposefully, and explain how specific choices of diction and syntax create meaning.

College Freshman (1000 words; Dual Credit (Indiana College Core): ICC-WC-1.3, ICC-WC-1.5, ICC-WC-1.1): Situate Govinda within its historical and literary context and argue how the chapter's treatment of the idea that wisdom cannot be taught responds to that context. Engage with at least one secondary perspective (a critic, historian or the author's own statements), integrate quotations smoothly, and cite in APA style.

College Sophomore (1250 words; Dual Credit (Indiana College Core): ICC-WC-1.1, ICC-WC-1.3, ICC-WC-1.4, ICC-WC-1.5): Read Govinda alongside the conventions of its genre and period. Argue how the chapter's handling of the idea that wisdom cannot be taught follows or bends those conventions, using the theme as evidence, and test your reading against one published critic. Document two secondary sources in APA.

College Junior (1500 words; Dual Credit (Indiana College Core): ICC-WC-1.1, ICC-WC-1.3, ICC-WC-1.4, ICC-WC-1.5): Apply a named critical approach (for example formalist, historicist, feminist, psychoanalytic or ecocritical) to Govinda and its treatment of the idea that wisdom cannot be taught. State your method, show what it reveals in the chapter's theme and characterization, and identify where the text resists it.

College Senior (2000 words; Dual Credit (Indiana College Core): ICC-WC-1.1, ICC-WC-1.3, ICC-WC-1.4, ICC-WC-1.5): Develop a research argument that reads Govinda as evidence for a larger claim about the idea that wisdom cannot be taught in Siddhartha. Connect close reading of the chapter to the whole novel, engage at least four scholarly sources, and state precisely where your reading departs from theirs (Chicago style).

Graduate / PhD (2500 words; Dual Credit (Indiana College Core): ICC-WC-1.1, ICC-WC-1.3, ICC-WC-1.4, ICC-WC-1.5): Develop an original argument that reads Govinda as a hinge in the novel's larger treatment of the idea that wisdom cannot be taught. Position your reading within a named critical conversation (for example formalist, historicist, psychoanalytic, feminist or postcolonial approaches), account for the textual history where relevant, and articulate the stakes of your intervention for scholarship on Siddhartha.

SAT-style questions

1. That's like this: any truth can only be expressed and put into words when it is one-sided. Everything is one-sided which can be thought with thoughts and said with words, it's all one-sided, all just one half, all lacks completeness, roundness, oneness.

   As used in the text, what does the word "one-sided" most nearly mean?

   A. showing only one part of the whole
   B. very angry and unfair
   C. written on one page
   D. agreed on by all

2. That's like this: any truth can only be expressed and put into words when it is one-sided. Everything is one-sided which can be thought with thoughts and said with words, it's all one-sided, all just one half, all lacks completeness, roundness, oneness.

   Which choice best states the central idea of this passage?

   A. Words can show only part of a truth, never the whole
   B. Gotama's teachings were simply false
   C. Truth can never be spoken at all
   D. Siddhartha wants to become a teacher

SAT key: 1. A (showing only one part of the whole); 2. A (Words can show only part of a truth, never the whole)

Unit test

Siddhartha: unit test · 90 minutes · 50 questions per rigor version (multiple choice, fill in the blank, short answer). The class rigor level picks the version; student auto-adjust applies.

Short-answer scoring guides

Scaffolded support and HS Freshman (2 points): correct answer in a complete sentence with a detail from the text. HS Sophomore to HS Senior (3 points): claim, one accurate quotation, one sentence of explanation. AP to College Sophomore (4 points): precise claim, two embedded quotations, commentary on word choice or structure, link to theme. College Junior to Graduate (5 points): nuanced thesis, close reading of two passages, synthesis across sections, a competing reading answered. Each item lists a sample answer; partial credit is described in the app.

Unit test: item bank (all eleven rigor versions)

1. [fill · recall · DOK 1] Complete the quotation from The Son of the Brahmin, paragraph 8: “But where, where was this self, this _____ part, this ultimate part”

   Key: innermost

2. [mc · recall · DOK 1] In the line “Not proper it is for a Brahmin to speak harsh and angry words.”, what does “harsh” most nearly mean?

   A. rough and unkind

   B. soft and gentle

   C. quick and clever

   D. quiet and shy

   Key: A (rough and unkind)

3. [mc · recall · DOK 1] All the people around the Brahmin’s son take joy in him. In whom does he find no pleasure?

   A. His father

   B. Govinda

   C. Himself

   D. His mother

   Key: C (Himself)

4. [fill · recall · DOK 1] Fill in the blank with the word that fits: “He was a source of joy for everybody, he was a _____ for them all.” Word bank: burden, delight, stranger, warning

   Key: delight

5. [mc · recall · DOK 1] How does Siddhartha win his father's permission?

   A. By running away

   B. By fasting for a month

   C. By standing silently all night

   D. By arguing loudly with his father for days

   Key: C (By standing silently all night)

6. [mc · recall · DOK 1] Who is waiting by the last hut to join Siddhartha as he leaves the town at dawn?
   A. Govinda, the Brahmin's son
   B. Vasudeva, a quiet man
   C. Kamaswami, the merchant
   D. Gotama, the teacher in the grove

   Key: A (Govinda, the Brahmin's son)

7. [mc · recall · DOK 1] In the line "long nails grew slowly on his parched fingers and a dry, shaggy beard grew on his chin", what does "parched" most nearly mean?
   A. very wet
   B. very cold
   C. very dry
   D. very clean

   Key: C (very dry)

8. [mc · recall · DOK 1] As he wakes renewed by the river, what does Siddhartha feel singing in his chest?
   A. A drum
   B. A bell
   C. A bird
   D. A flute

   Key: C (A bird)

9. [fill · recall · DOK 1] Fill in the blank with the word that fits. Looking back on his "stupidity" and "errors," Siddhartha thinks: "I had to become a _____, to find Atman in me again. I had to sin, to be able to live again." Word bank: saint, fool, king, priest

   Key: fool

10. [fill · recall · DOK 1] Fill in the blank with the word that fits: "Dead was the singing bird, he had _____ of. Dead was the bird in his heart." Word bank: eaten, dreamt, sold, built

    Key: dreamt

11. [mc · recall · DOK 1] After the boy takes the boat, what do Siddhartha and Vasudeva build to cross the river?
    A. A bridge of stones
    B. A rope across the water
    C. A second ferry boat
    D. A raft of bamboo

    Key: D (A raft of bamboo)

12. [mc · recall · DOK 1] What does the new Siddhartha feel for the rushing water when he wakes?
    A. A deep love that keeps him near it
    B. Fear that it will carry him off
    C. Disgust at its muddy colour
    D. Indifference, since he means to leave

    Key: A (A deep love that keeps him near it)

13. [mc · recall · DOK 1] In the line "There, where I ran away from, there everything smelled of ointments, of spices, of wine, of excess, of sloth.", what does "ointments" most nearly mean?

    A. tricks; false appearances

    B. perfumed oils and creams

    C. a person who has run away

    D. steadiness of mind under stress

    Key: B (perfumed oils and creams)

14. [mc · recall · DOK 1] Where does Govinda sleep the night he stays at the ferry?

    A. In a guest house in the town

    B. On the bed that used to be Vasudeva's

    C. Under a tree beside the river

    D. In the ferryboat by the bank

    Key: B (On the bed that used to be Vasudeva's)

15. [mc · recall · DOK 1] In the line "my river has been nothing but an obstacle on their travels.", what does "obstacle" most nearly mean?

    A. a person left stranded after a shipwreck

    B. a trait of dignified seriousness

    C. something that blocks the way

    D. people who punish themselves for their sins

    Key: C (something that blocks the way)

16. [mc · recall · DOK 1] In the line "And do you, sir, intend to continue travelling without clothes?", what does "intend" most nearly mean?

    A. forget

    B. plan; mean

    C. refuse

    D. pretend

    Key: B (plan; mean)

17. [fill · recall · DOK 1] Complete the quotation from The Ferryman, paragraph 35: "Nothing was, nothing will be; everything is, everything has existence and is _____."

    Key: present

18. [fill · recall · DOK 1] Fill in the blank with the word that fits: "With a smile, the man at the _____ moved from side to side:" Word bank: oar, kettle, ladder, pebble

    Key: oar

19. [mc · recall · DOK 1] What does Kamala tell Siddhartha about the boy's eyes?

    A. That the boy has his mother's eyes

    B. That the boy's eyes are failing

    C. That in the eyes the boy is like him

    D. That the boy's eyes are full of anger

    Key: C (That in the eyes the boy is like him)

20. [fill · recall · DOK 1] Complete the quotation from By the River, paragraph 48: “his self had retreated, there it sat firmly and grew, while he thought he would kill it by fasting and _____.” Word bank: penance, laughter, velvet, harvest

    Key: penance

21. [mc · recall · DOK 1] In By the River, what does Siddhartha realise had been his sickness before?

    A. That he could not love anybody or anything

    B. That he had eaten too little as a Samana

    C. That he trusted Kamaswami too much

    D. That he had left Govinda behind

    Key: A (That he could not love anybody or anything)

22. [mc · recall · DOK 1] In the line “and again he knew about Brahman, knew about the indestructibility of life”, what does “indestructibility” most nearly mean?

    A. the quality of being impossible to destroy

    B. a prayer asking God's help as part of a religious service

    C. a person left stranded after a shipwreck

    D. a message informing of danger

    Key: A (the quality of being impossible to destroy)

23. [mc · recall · DOK 2] Kamala lists many ways love can be obtained (Kamala, paragraph 37). What is the one way it cannot be obtained?

    A. By begging for it

    B. By stealing it

    C. By buying it

    D. By finding it in the street

    Key: B (By stealing it)

24. [mc · inference · DOK 2] What does Siddhartha discover about his Samana exercises of leaving the self?

    A. Every path away from it ended where it began.

    B. The self can be destroyed for good by enough fasting and pain.

    C. Only the oldest Samana has escaped the self.

    D. The self is best found through obedience.

    Key: A (Every path away from it ended where it began.)

25. [short · inference · DOK 2] What can you infer from this line? “You’ve heard the teachings, O son of a Brahmin, and good for you that you’ve thought about it thus deeply” (Gotama, paragraph 36) Answer in two or three sentences with one detail.

    Sample answer: Gotama meets the young man’s challenge with courtesy, not defensiveness. The formal address “O son of a Brahmin” and the praise “good for you” show a teacher secure enough to honour doubt, though in the same paragraph he warns against arguing about words. The evidence is “You’ve heard the teachings, O son of a Brahmin, and good for you that you’ve thought about it thus deeply” (Gotama, paragraph 36).

26. [mc · inference · DOK 2] What does this passage most clearly show? “I want to learn from myself, want to be my student, want to get to know myself, the secret of Siddhartha.” (Awakening, paragraph 6)

    A. He plans to return to the Buddha and become one of his pupils after all.

B. He turns from outside teachers to his own experience.

C. He wants to teach the Samanas what he has found.

D. He longs to go back to his father's house.

Key: B (He turns from outside teachers to his own experience.)

27. [short · inference · DOK 2] What can you infer from this line? "This too, I have learned from the river: everything is coming back" (Kamala, paragraph 11) Answer in two or three sentences with one detail.
Sample answer: Vasudeva already treats the river as his teacher and quietly predicts that Siddhartha will return. The evidence is "This too, I have learned from the river: everything is coming back" (Kamala, paragraph 11). The phrase "everything is coming back" hints that Siddhartha's journey into the city is not the end of his search, and the novel later proves him right.

28. [mc · inference · DOK 2] What does this passage most clearly show? "I was a rich man and am no rich man any more, and what I'll be tomorrow, I don't know." (By the River, paragraph 33)

A. He accepts his loss without knowing what comes next.

B. He plans to win back his wealth in the city.

C. He fears that Govinda will now reject him.

D. He wants the monks to tell him his future.

Key: A (He accepts his loss without knowing what comes next.)

29. [short · inference · DOK 2] What can you infer from this line? "He had died, a new Siddhartha had woken up from the sleep." (By the River, paragraph 48) Answer in two or three sentences with one detail.
Sample answer: Siddhartha feels reborn: "He had died, a new Siddhartha had woken up from the sleep." (By the River, paragraph 48). The words "died" and "new" show that his sleep ended the old, worldly self, so the man who wakes can begin again.

30. [short · inference · DOK 2] What can you infer from this line? "he wanted to learn from it, he wanted to listen to it." (The Ferryman, paragraph 2) Answer in two or three sentences with one detail.
Sample answer: Siddhartha comes to the river as a pupil: "he wanted to learn from it, he wanted to listen to it." (The Ferryman, paragraph 2). Pairing "learn" with "listen" shows that his new learning will come from attention, not from teachers or books.

31. [mc · inference · DOK 2] What does this passage most clearly show? "Even bad people, even thieves and robbers have children and love them, and are being loved by them, all except for me." (Om, paragraph 1)

A. His scorn for thieves and robbers who pass by.

B. His plan to steal back his son from the city.

C. His relief that he no longer has to love.

D. His grief makes him envy the plainest of parents.

Key: D (His grief makes him envy the plainest of parents.)

32. [short · inference · DOK 2] What can you infer from this line? "everything came back, which had not been suffered and solved up to its end" (Om, paragraph 6) Answer in two or three sentences with one detail.
Sample answer: Siddhartha sees his pain repeat: "everything came back, which had not been suffered and solved up to its end" (Om, paragraph 6). "Came back" and "up to its end" suggest suffering returns until it is fully lived through, so he must accept it rather than flee it.

33. [mc · inference · DOK 2] What does this passage most clearly show? “In this pointless cycle he ran, growing tired, growing old, growing ill.” (Sansara, paragraph 7)

    A. His business is growing faster than ever.

    B. His worldly life has become a wearing, empty loop.

    C. He has found peace in his garden at last.

    D. His illness comes from a fever caught by the river.

    Key: B (His worldly life has become a wearing, empty loop.)

34. [short · inference · DOK 2] What can you infer from this line? “Kamala owned a small, rare singing bird in a golden cage.” (Sansara, paragraph 10) Answer in two or three sentences with one detail.

    Sample answer: The caged songbird mirrors something in Siddhartha that his rich life has trapped. Because the bird is caged and, in the dream, dead, the line suggests his inner voice has died in the city, which pushes him to leave. The evidence is “Kamala owned a small, rare singing bird in a golden cage.” (Sansara, paragraph 10).

35. [mc · inference · DOK 2] What does this passage most clearly show? “But today I think: this stone is a stone, it is also animal, it is also god, it is also Buddha” (Govinda, paragraph 23)

    A. Everything holds the divine within it at once.

    B. He has lost his faith in the Buddha.

    C. He wants Govinda to worship stones.

    D. He thinks stones are worth more than people.

    Key: A (Everything holds the divine within it at once.)

36. [short · analysis · DOK 3] Analyze the word choice in “What I’ve learned, being among the Samanas, up to this day, this, O Govinda, I could have learned more quickly and by simpler means” (With the Samanas, paragraph 11). Pick two words and explain what they suggest.

    Sample answer: “What I’ve learned, being among the Samanas, up to this day, this, O Govinda, I could have learned more quickly and by simpler means” (With the Samanas, paragraph 11). “Quickly” suggests that his years of discipline were largely wasted time. “Simpler” suggests that the Samanas' hard methods add nothing that an ordinary escape could not give, which is his whole critique of them.

37. [mc · analysis · DOK 3] Which literary element does this describe in “Gotama”? The Buddha’s alms-dish and yellow robe stand for a life of begging and giving things up.

    A. Simile

    B. Characterization

    C. Alliteration

    D. Symbolism

    Key: D (Symbolism)

38. [mc · analysis · DOK 3] Which literary element does this describe in “Awakening”? Siddhartha calls the world a book whose colours and forms are letters he must learn to read.

    A. Foreshadowing

    B. Conflict

    C. Metaphor

    D. Plot

    Key: C (Metaphor)

39. [mc · analysis · DOK 3] Which literary element does this describe in "Kamala"? Kamala arranges for him to meet Kamaswami, the richest merchant, the first step into trade.

    A. Symbolism

    B. Foreshadowing

    C. Conflict

    D. Personification

    Key: B (Foreshadowing)

40. [mc · analysis · DOK 3] Which literary element does this describe in "With the Childlike People"? Siddhartha handles his deals as a ballplayer handles his balls, tossing them about for amusement.

    A. Alliteration

    B. Simile

    C. Hyperbole

    D. Theme

    Key: B (Simile)

41. [mc · analysis · DOK 3] Which literary element does this describe in "By the River"? Despair, sleep, awakening: the chapter repeats the pattern of 'Awakening' (an ending followed by a new beginning), now as rebirth from despair.

    A. Imagery

    B. Structure

    C. Simile

    D. Conflict

    Key: B (Structure)

42. [mc · analysis · DOK 3] Which literary element does this describe in "Govinda"? In place of Siddhartha's face, Govinda sees the faces of a dying fish, a newborn child and a murderer flow past him.

    A. Imagery

    B. Structure

    C. Point of view

    D. Alliteration

    Key: A (Imagery)

43. [mc · analysis · DOK 3] In this chapter, which theme does the following most directly develop? Siddhartha feels the indestructibility of every life and the eternity of every moment.

    A. The search for self-knowledge

    B. Experience versus teaching

    C. Wealth and its cost

    D. The oneness of every being

    Key: D (The oneness of every being)

44. [short · analysis · DOK 3] Analyze the word choice in "He said nothing and waited; daily, he began the mute struggle of friendliness, the silent war of patience." (The Son, paragraph 16). Pick two words and explain what they suggest.

    Sample answer: "He said nothing and waited; daily, he began the mute struggle of friendliness, the silent war of patience."

(The Son, paragraph 16) joins peace and conflict. “Struggle” and “war” show that his kindness is a battle, while “mute” and “silent” show he fights only by waiting; love has become a siege.

45. [short · synthesis · DOK 4] Synthesis: trace how the search for the self develops from the opening of “The Son of the Brahmin” to its ending. Use one quotation from each part.

    Sample answer: The chapter moves from a borrowed certainty to a departure his father blesses. At the opening he seems to have it already: “He already knew to feel Atman in the depths of his being, indestructible, one with the universe.” (The Son of the Brahmin, paragraph 1). At the end, his father says, “When you’ll have found blissfulness in the forest, then come back and teach me to be blissful” (The Son of the Brahmin, paragraph 49). The search that begins as a borrowed certainty ends as a shared hope, “teach me,” so the self he seeks is something he must find beyond his father's house.

46. [short · synthesis · DOK 4] Close reading: how do the diction and syntax of “filled his heart with anger, filled his heart with unrest, filled his heart with anguish” (The Son of the Brahmin, paragraph 31) shape its meaning? Consider a second, competing reading.

    Sample answer: The father’s feelings come in three parallel clauses: “filled his heart with anger, filled his heart with unrest, filled his heart with anguish” (The Son of the Brahmin, paragraph 31). The repeated “filled his heart with” makes each emotion pour into the same space, and the list moves from “anger” to “unrest” to “anguish,” from a flash of temper to deep pain. The syntax shows the father’s resistance giving way to grief. A competing reading sees only stubborn anger; but the climb to “anguish” shows a man who already fears losing his son, which prepares his blessing at dawn.

47. [short · synthesis · DOK 4] Synthesis: trace how Siddhartha’s trust in himself develops from Awakening to By the River. Use one quotation from each. Address one competing reading and answer it.

    Sample answer: In Awakening he resolves to be his own teacher: “I want to learn from myself, want to be my student, want to get to know myself, the secret of Siddhartha.” (Awakening, paragraph 6). The repeated “want to” shows confident self-reliance. In By the River he judges that confidence: “Full of arrogance, he had been, always the smartest” (By the River, paragraph 48). The same self that he trusted is now named as arrogance. A competing reading says he has simply failed; but the river chapter shows that only by seeing his pride could he find Atman again, so the self-trust was a necessary stage, not an error.

48. [short · synthesis · DOK 4] Close reading: how do the diction and syntax of “And now, they had abandoned him, none of them was his any more, neither fasting, nor waiting, nor thinking.” (By the River, paragraph 38) shape its meaning? Consider a second, competing reading.

    Sample answer: The sentence reverses his old boast: “And now, they had abandoned him, none of them was his any more, neither fasting, nor waiting, nor thinking.” (By the River, paragraph 38). The skills become actors that “abandoned him,” and the triple “neither… nor… nor” strips them away one by one. A competing reading blames only the city; but the plain list shows the loss as complete and his own, which is why he reaches despair.

49. [short · synthesis · DOK 4] Close reading: how do the diction and syntax of “I have transported many, thousands; and to all of them, my river has been nothing but an obstacle on their travels.” (The Ferryman, paragraph 29) shape its meaning? Consider a second, competing reading.

    Sample answer: Vasudeva contrasts numbers with meaning: “I have transported many, thousands; and to all of them, my river has been nothing but an obstacle on their travels.” (The Ferryman, paragraph 29). “Many thousands” and “all of them” stress how common blindness is, while “nothing but an obstacle” reduces the river to a barrier. A competing reading hears scorn for travellers; but his calm tone suggests patience: the river waits for the few who will listen.

50. [short · synthesis · DOK 4] Synthesis: trace how Vasudeva’s patient silence develops from The Ferryman to The Son. Use one quotation from each. Address one competing reading and answer it.

    Sample answer: Vasudeva’s silence grows from a quiet habit into a way of teaching. In The Ferryman, “Vasudeva was no friend of words; rarely, Siddhartha succeeded in persuading him to speak.” (The Ferryman, paragraph 31). The word “rarely” shows how little he speaks. In The Son his silence becomes patient care: "Vasudeva also said nothing and waited, friendly, knowing, patient." (The Son, paragraph 16). Here he chooses silence so that Siddhartha can learn for himself what he will not hear in words. A competing reading calls this silence cold or unhelpful; but the warm words "friendly" and "patient" show that the silence is a gift, not a lack of care.

51. [mc · recall · DOK 1] What does Siddhartha's father do several times during the night?

    A. Prays alone at the temple

    B. Sleeps soundly until the morning comes

    C. Checks if his son still stands

    D. Sends a servant for Govinda

    Key: C (Checks if his son still stands)

52. [mc · recall · DOK 1] Who loves Siddhartha more than all the others, according to the opening?

    A. His parents

    B. The teachers of the temple

    C. Govinda, his friend

    D. The Samanas

    Key: C (Govinda, his friend)

53. [mc · recall · DOK 1] What does Siddhartha read in Govinda's soul when he announces his plan?

    A. Fear and submission

    B. Joy and pride

    C. Anger and envy

    D. Boredom and a wish to sleep

    Key: A (Fear and submission)

54. [fill · recall · DOK 1] Fill in the blank with the word that fits: "To reach this place, the self, myself, the Atman, there was another way, which was _____ looking for?" Word bank: rusty, worthwhile, muddy, wooden

    Key: worthwhile

55. [fill · recall · DOK 1] Complete the quotation from The Son of the Brahmin, paragraph 1: "In the mango grove, _____ poured into his black eyes, when playing as a boy." Word bank: shade, bread, stones, chairs

    Key: shade

56. [mc · recall · DOK 1] Where does Govinda spend the time of rest between pilgrimages in the last chapter?

    A. In the hut of the ferryman by the river

    B. In the pleasure-grove Kamala gave to Gotama's followers

    C. In his father's house in the Brahmin town

    D. In a cave among the Samanas in the forest

    Key: B (In the pleasure-grove Kamala gave to Gotama's followers)

57. [mc · recall · DOK 1] What does Siddhartha now see that the secret voice had been right about?

    A. That he should have stayed with Kamala

    B. That no teacher would ever have been able to bring about his salvation

    C. That Govinda would return

    D. That wealth was his true goal

    Key: B (That no teacher would ever have been able to bring about his salvation)

58. [mc · recall · DOK 1] Where does Govinda say he is going when he leaves the sleeper?

    A. To catch up with his brothers

    B. Back to the city to beg for his food

    C. To Kamala's grove

    D. To the ferry

    Key: A (To catch up with his brothers)

59. [mc · recall · DOK 1] In the line "The wheel of physical manifestations is turning quickly, Govinda.", what does "manifestations" most nearly mean?

    A. hidden thoughts

    B. visible forms or appearances

    C. spoken prayers

    D. long journeys on foot to holy places

    Key: B (visible forms or appearances)

60. [mc · recall · DOK 1] Which word completes this sentence from The Ferryman, paragraph 44? "They had been, so it seemed to him, proud and _____ words; with a smile, he remembered them."

    A. waterlogged

    B. precocious

    C. timid

    D. silent

    Key: B (precocious)

61. [mc · recall · DOK 1] In the line "Pain distorted her face", what does "distorted" most nearly mean?

    A. made calm

    B. made beautiful

    C. twisted out of shape

    D. hid from everyone's view

    Key: C (twisted out of shape)

62. [mc · recall · DOK 1] What does Vasudeva say the river knows?

    A. Only the way to the sea

    B. Nothing of people

    C. Everything

    D. Only the weather

    Key: C (Everything)

63. [fill · recall · DOK 1] Fill in the blank with the word that fits: "Happily, Vasudeva's face was smiling, he bent over to Siddhartha and spoke the holy _____ into his ear." Word bank: price, Om, debt, fare

    Key: Om

64. [mc · recall · DOK 1] What does Vasudeva say he has no special skill in?

    A. Rowing a boat

    B. Listening

    C. Building boats from bamboo

D. Speaking and thinking

Key: D (Speaking and thinking)

65. [fill · recall · DOK 1] Fill in the blank with the word that fits: “now he was again facing the world void and naked and _____” Word bank: wealthy, stupid, golden, learned

Key: stupid

66. [mc · recall · DOK 1] In the line “whose word and breath was enough to heal everyone who had been infected with the pestilence”, what does “pestilence” most nearly mean?

A. a heavy rain

B. a royal order

C. a deadly spreading disease

D. a band of thieves

Key: C (a deadly spreading disease)

67. [mc · recall · DOK 1] In the line “But indignation is in my heart. I wish not to hear this request for a second time”, what does “indignation” most nearly mean?

A. anger at something felt to be unjust

B. a woman paid to be the companion of wealthy men

C. tricks; false appearances

D. a boat that carries people across water

Key: A (anger at something felt to be unjust)

68. [fill · recall · DOK 1] Fill in the blank with the word that fits: “Govinda had aged, he too, but still his face bore the same features, expressed zeal, faithfulness, searching, _____.” Word bank: timidness, cruelty, greed, laziness

Key: timidness

69. [fill · recall · DOK 1] Complete the quotation from The Ferryman, paragraph 25: “Now, you shall live with me, there is space and food for _____.”

Key: both

70. [mc · recall · DOK 1] In the line “Oh how good is it to have fled, to have become free!”, what does “fled” most nearly mean?

A. run away

B. returned

C. stayed

D. fought

Key: A (run away)

71. [mc · inference · DOK 2] What does this passage most clearly show? “Everything else was searching, was a detour, was getting lost.” (The Son of the Brahmin, paragraph 9)

A. Only the inner source matters to him

B. He enjoys long travels

C. He fears getting lost in the deep forest

D. He loves the temple rituals

Key: A (Only the inner source matters to him)

72. [mc · inference · DOK 2] What does this passage most clearly show? “He ate only once a day, and never something cooked.” (With the Samanas, paragraph 2)

    A. The harsh discipline of Samana life

    B. His love of fine food

    C. His poverty in the city

    D. His slow recovery from a long illness

    Key: A (The harsh discipline of Samana life)

73. [short · inference · DOK 2] What can you infer from this line? “This man, this Buddha was truthful down to the gesture of his last finger.” (Gotama, paragraph 15) Answer in two or three sentences with one detail.

    Sample answer: Siddhartha sees that the Buddha’s holiness shows in everything he does. The evidence is “This man, this Buddha was truthful down to the gesture of his last finger.” (Gotama, paragraph 15). The detail of “his last finger” shows that even his smallest movement matches his teaching.

74. [mc · inference · DOK 2] What does this passage most clearly show? “He realized that he was no youth any more, but had turned into a man.” (Awakening, paragraph 2)

    A. He feels old and weak

    B. He has grown up by leaving Gotama

    C. He wants to be young again

    D. He regrets leaving home

    Key: B (He has grown up by leaving Gotama)

75. [short · inference · DOK 2] What can you infer from this line? “Smiling, Siddhartha was happy about the friendship and the kindness of the ferryman.” (Kamala, paragraph 12) Answer in two or three sentences with one detail.

    Sample answer: Siddhartha is touched by Vasudeva’s simple goodness. The evidence is “Smiling, Siddhartha was happy about the friendship and the kindness of the ferryman.” (Kamala, paragraph 12). The words “friendship” and “kindness” show that the ferryman’s warmth makes an impression that will draw Siddhartha back later.

76. [short · inference · DOK 2] What can you infer from this line? “Then, Siddhartha knew that the game was over, that he could not play it any more.” (Sansara, paragraph 13) Answer in two or three sentences with one detail.

    Sample answer: Siddhartha realizes that his worldly life has lost all meaning. The evidence is “Then, Siddhartha knew that the game was over, that he could not play it any more.” (Sansara, paragraph 13). Calling his life a “game” shows that it was never serious to him, and “over” shows that he is ready to leave.

77. [mc · inference · DOK 2] What does this passage most clearly show? “With sadness, and yet also with a smile, he thought of that time.” (By the River, paragraph 38)

    A. He looks back calmly on his past

    B. He wants to go back to life in the city

    C. He is angry at himself

    D. He has forgotten his past

    Key: A (He looks back calmly on his past)

78. [short · inference · DOK 2] What can you infer from this line? “But more than Vasudeva could teach him, he was taught by the river.” (The Ferryman, paragraph 30) Answer in two or three sentences with one detail.

    Sample answer: The river, not any person, is Siddhartha’s real teacher at the ferry. The evidence is “But more than Vasudeva could teach him, he was taught by the river." (The Ferryman, paragraph 30). Ranking the river above Vasudeva shows that wisdom now comes from nature and experience rather than from teachings.

79. [mc · inference · DOK 2] Which choice best states what the river teaches Siddhartha first of all?

    A. To row against the strongest current

    B. To charge travellers a fair price

    C. To hear with a quiet, open heart

    D. To forget Kamala and the city

    Key: C (To hear with a quiet, open heart)

80. [short · inference · DOK 2] What can you infer from this line? "He's doing what you've failed to do yourself. He's taking care of himself" (The Son, paragraph 25) Answer in two or three sentences with one detail.

    Sample answer: Vasudeva turns the boy's flight into a lesson: "He's doing what you've failed to do yourself. He's taking care of himself" (The Son, paragraph 25). "Failed" suggests Siddhartha, absorbed in his son, has stopped attending to his own path, while the boy is following his.

81. [short · inference · DOK 2] What can you infer from this line? "Vasudeva's listening gave Siddhartha a stronger sensation than ever before" (Om, paragraph 10) Answer in two or three sentences with one detail.

    Sample answer: Being truly heard begins to heal Siddhartha. The evidence is "Vasudeva's listening gave Siddhartha a stronger sensation than ever before" (Om, paragraph 10). The phrase "than ever before" shows that this listening is deeper than any he has known, preparing his final insight.

82. [short · inference · DOK 2] What can you infer from this line? "Never before had Siddhartha venerated a person so much, never before had he loved a person as much as this one" (Gotama, paragraph 15) Answer in two or three sentences with one detail.

    Sample answer: Siddhartha deeply honours Gotama, which makes his decision not to follow him all the more striking. The evidence is "Never before had Siddhartha venerated a person so much, never before had he loved a person as much as this one" (Gotama, paragraph 15). The repeated "never before" stresses how strong this love is, so his refusal is not contempt but a choice to find his own way.

83. [short · analysis · DOK 3] Analyze the word choice in "He went the way of self-denial by means of pain, through voluntarily suffering and overcoming pain, hunger, thirst, tiredness." (With the Samanas, paragraph 7). Pick two words and explain what they suggest.

    Sample answer: Siddhartha is using suffering as a tool. The evidence is "He went the way of self-denial by means of pain, through voluntarily suffering and overcoming pain, hunger, thirst, tiredness." (With the Samanas, paragraph 7). "Voluntarily" shows that the pain is chosen, and "overcoming" shows that he treats it as a battle to win.

84. [mc · analysis · DOK 3] Which literary element does this describe in "Gotama"? The grove of Jetavana, with yellow-robed monks resting under the trees and walking its paths, is where the friends find the Buddha.

    A. Setting

    B. Personification

    C. Plot

    D. Hyperbole

    Key: A (Setting)

85. [short · analysis · DOK 3] Analyze the word choice in "Everything was difficult, toilsome, and ultimately hopeless, when I was still a Samana. Now, everything is easy" (Kamala, paragraph 63). Pick two words and explain what they suggest.

    Sample answer: "Everything was difficult, toilsome, and ultimately hopeless, when I was still a Samana. Now, everything is easy" (Kamala, paragraph 63) contrasts two lives. "Toilsome" and "hopeless" make the Samana years sound like hard labour without reward, while "easy" is short and light, showing how quickly the city seems to give. The word choice hints at the danger: what comes easily may hold him less deeply.

86. [mc · analysis · DOK 3] Which literary element does this describe in "With the Childlike People"? Kamaswami is described with very intelligent, cautious eyes and a greedy mouth.

    A. Allusion

    B. Characterization

    C. Hyperbole

    D. Flashback

    Key: B (Characterization)

87. [mc · analysis · DOK 3] Which literary element does this describe in "Sansara"? Tiredness settles on him like a veil, like a thin mist, a little denser and murkier every day.

    A. Conflict

    B. Imagery

    C. Allusion

    D. Alliteration

    Key: B (Imagery)

88. [mc · analysis · DOK 3] Which literary element does this describe in "By the River"? Waking under the tree, Siddhartha looks at the world with new eyes and senses that his old self has died.

    A. Simile

    B. Characterization

    C. Metaphor

    D. Setting

    Key: B (Characterization)

89. [mc · analysis · DOK 3] Which literary element does this describe in "The Son"? The man who once looked down on the childlike people now runs after his son to the city, foolish with love.

    A. Allusion

    B. Tone / mood

    C. Irony

    D. Point of view

    Key: C (Irony)

90. [short · analysis · DOK 3] Analyze the word choice in "less smart, less proud, but instead warmer, more curious, more involved." (Om, paragraph 2). Pick two words and explain what they suggest.

    Sample answer: "less smart, less proud, but instead warmer, more curious, more involved." (Om, paragraph 2) shows his new view of people. "Less proud" admits his old arrogance, while "warmer" shows feeling replacing judgement; his grief has made him closer to others.

91. [mc · analysis · DOK 3] Which literary element does this describe in "Om"? Siddhartha, who once left his own father, now grieves for a son who has left him.

    A. Irony

    B. Onomatopoeia

C. Alliteration

D. Metaphor

Key: A (Irony)

92. [mc · analysis · DOK 3] Which literary element does this describe in "Govinda"? Govinda privately thinks Siddhartha's teachings sound bizarre and foolish, yet he bows deeply before him.

A. Simile

B. Setting

C. Alliteration

D. Characterization

Key: D (Characterization)

93. [short · analysis · DOK 3] Analyze the word choice in "He commands benevolence, clemency, sympathy, tolerance, but not love" (Govinda, paragraph 31). Pick two words and explain what they suggest.

Sample answer: "He commands benevolence, clemency, sympathy, tolerance, but not love" (Govinda, paragraph 31) contrasts duty with feeling. "Commands" makes the Buddha's virtues rules to obey, and "but not love" sets love apart as what cannot be ordered, which Siddhartha now values most.

94. [mc · analysis · DOK 3] Quote identification: in which section does this passage appear? "Siddhartha had started to nurse discontent in himself"

A. Om

B. The Ferryman

C. The Son

D. The Son of the Brahmin

Key: D (The Son of the Brahmin)

95. [short · synthesis · DOK 4] Synthesis: trace how Siddhartha's relationship with his father develops from the opening of "The Son of the Brahmin" to its ending. Use one quotation from each part.

Sample answer: Siddhartha's relationship with his father moves from reverence to a respectful parting. At the opening, "Siddhartha knew many venerable Brahmins, chiefly his father, the pure one, the scholar, the most venerable one." (The Son of the Brahmin, paragraph 9). At the ending, the father says: "When you'll have found blissfulness in the forest, then come back and teach me to be blissful." (The Son of the Brahmin, paragraph 49). The first passage looks up to the father; the second shows the father ready to learn from his son.

96. [short · synthesis · DOK 4] Evaluate this claim about the chapter: "Siddhartha's father lets him go because he is defeated, not because he understands." Is it fully persuasive? Argue with evidence, including a passage that complicates it.

Sample answer: The claim is partly persuasive. After a sleepless night the father gives way: "Then his father realized that even now Siddhartha no longer dwelt with him" (The Son of the Brahmin, paragraph 47) sounds like defeat. But his parting words complicate it, since "When you'll have found blissfulness in the forest, then come back and teach me to be blissful." (The Son of the Brahmin, paragraph 49) shows him blessing the search rather than merely yielding, even hoping to learn from it. The fairer conclusion is that defeat forces the decision, but understanding shapes how he lets his son go.

97. [short · synthesis · DOK 4] Synthesis: trace how Govinda's faithfulness develops from With the Samanas to By the River. Use one quotation from each. Address one competing reading and answer it.

Sample answer: Govinda's faithfulness moves from shadowing his friend to loving him from a distance. In With the Samanas, "By his side lived Govinda, his shadow, walked the same paths, undertook the same efforts." (With the Samanas, paragraph 8). In By the River, Siddhartha watches him go: "he loved him still, this faithful man, this fearful man." (By the River, paragraph 37). A competing reading says Govinda is weak for always following. Yet his faithfulness lasts through years apart, which makes it a kind of strength.

98. [short · synthesis · DOK 4] Close reading: how do the diction and syntax of "As a youth, I had only to do with asceticism, with thinking and meditation, was searching for Brahman, worshipped the eternal in the Atman." (By the River, paragraph 42) shape its meaning? Consider a second, competing reading.
Sample answer: Siddhartha surveys his youth in one long sentence: "As a youth, I had only to do with asceticism, with thinking and meditation, was searching for Brahman, worshipped the eternal in the Atman." (By the River, paragraph 42). The phrase "had only to do with" narrows his whole youth to spiritual exercise, and the chain of clauses makes it sound full but one-sided. A competing reading hears pride in that devotion; but "only" marks what was missing, the life he later lived in the city.

99. [short · synthesis · DOK 4] Close reading: how do the diction and syntax of "With a thousand eyes, the river looked at him, with green ones, with white ones, with crystal ones, with sky-blue ones." (The Ferryman, paragraph 2) shape its meaning? Consider a second, competing reading.
Sample answer: The river becomes a living watcher: "With a thousand eyes, the river looked at him, with green ones, with white ones, with crystal ones, with sky-blue ones." (The Ferryman, paragraph 2). "A thousand eyes" personifies it, and the list of colours slows the sentence to match his wonder. A competing reading treats the list of colours as decoration, a pretty picture of water. Yet the river is the one doing the looking, "with a thousand eyes," so the personification turns the river into a watcher and prepares its role as Siddhartha's teacher.

100. [short · synthesis · DOK 4] Synthesis: trace how Siddhartha's distrust of teachers develops from With the Samanas to The Ferryman. Use one quotation from each. Address one competing reading and answer it.
Sample answer: Siddhartha's distrust of teachers lasts, but it loses its bitterness. In With the Samanas he complains, "I have asked the Brahmins, year after year, and I have asked the holy Vedas, year after year, and I have asked the devoted Samanas, year after year." (With the Samanas, paragraph 22). The repeated "year after year" shows his tired frustration. In The Ferryman the distrust remains, but calmly: "For a long time he knew that there was nothing standing between Gotama and him any more, though he was still unable to accept his teachings." (The Ferryman, paragraph 44). He now feels close to the Buddha himself while still refusing the teachings. A competing reading says he has simply become stubborn; but the phrase "nothing standing between" shows peace, not pride, so his distrust has become a settled way of learning.

101. [mc · recall · DOK 1] How does Govinda react when Siddhartha says he will go to the Samanas?
A. He laughs aloud
B. He grows angry
C. He turns pale
D. He runs away home

Key: C (He turns pale)

102. [mc · recall · DOK 1] When Siddhartha tells Govinda he will go to the Samanas, what does Govinda ask?
A. Whether his father will permit it
B. Whether he may come along at once
C. Whether the Samanas will accept a boy
D. Whether he has told his mother yet

Key: A (Whether his father will permit it)

103. [fill · recall · DOK 1] Complete the quotation from The Son of the Brahmin, paragraph 20: "Siddhartha looked over as if he was just _____ up."
Key: waking

104. [mc · recall · DOK 1] In the line "Siddhartha, strong, handsome, he who was walking on slender legs, greeting her with perfect respect", what does "slender" most nearly mean?

A. thick and heavy

B. short and bent

C. thin and graceful

D. weak and shaking

Key: C (thin and graceful)

105. [mc · recall · DOK 1] What does Siddhartha hear rumbling as he praises himself by the river?

A. His hungry stomach

B. Distant thunder

C. The river's rapids

D. A cart passing on the road

Key: A (His hungry stomach)

106. [mc · recall · DOK 1] How does Siddhartha explain to Govinda why he is wearing a rich man's clothes?

A. He stole them from a merchant

B. Kamala gave them to him that morning

C. He has been a rich man himself

D. They are a disguise for his pilgrimage

Key: C (He has been a rich man himself)

107. [fill · recall · DOK 1] Fill in the blank with the word that fits: "Cheerfully, he looked into the _____ river, never before he had like a water so well as this one." Word bank: frozen, rushing, painted, dry

Key: rushing

108. [mc · recall · DOK 1] In the line "Kamala often had to take a rest with him, he was accustomed to having his way against her", what does "accustomed" most nearly mean?

A. afraid of

B. tired of

C. in the habit of

D. ashamed of

Key: C (in the habit of)

109. [fill · recall · DOK 1] Fill in the blank with the word that fits: "Vasudeva's _____ was filled with a bright smile."

Word bank: boat, house, face, basket

Key: face

110. [mc · recall · DOK 1] What does Siddhartha offer Vasudeva instead of money for the crossing?

A. His sandals

B. A year of labour

C. A golden ring

D. His clothes

Key: D (His clothes)

111. [fill · recall · DOK 1] Complete the quotation from The Ferryman, paragraph 12: "For you must know, I have no money to pay your _____."

Key: fare

112. [mc · recall · DOK 1] In the line "Siddhartha sat upright and learned to breathe sparingly", what does "sparingly" most nearly mean?

A. using no care at all

B. using great speed

C. using as little as possible

D. using all his strength

Key: C (using as little as possible)

113. [mc · recall · DOK 1] What does the word Om awaken in Siddhartha as he hangs over the river?

A. His hunger

B. His old fear of water

C. His dormant spirit

D. His love for Kamala

Key: C (His dormant spirit)

114. [fill · recall · DOK 1] Fill in the blank with the word that fits: "I was a rich man and am no rich man any more, and what I'll be _____, I don't know." Word bank: tomorrow, silver, pepper, ankle

Key: tomorrow

115. [mc · recall · DOK 1] In the line "Things were going downhill with him", what does "going downhill" most nearly mean?

A. getting richer

B. getting worse

C. climbing higher

D. growing calmer

Key: B (getting worse)

116. [mc · inference · DOK 2] What does this passage most clearly show? "Were the gods not creations, created like me and you, subject to time, mortal?" (The Son of the Brahmin, paragraph 8)

A. His doubt about the gods' power

B. His wish to become a god

C. His fear of growing old and weak

D. His love of sacrifice

Key: A (His doubt about the gods' power)

117. [mc · inference · DOK 2] By the end of "With the Samanas," what does Siddhartha conclude about the Samanas' path?

A. It numbs the self for a while but never frees it.

B. It leads surely and quickly to the Atman, as the Samanas promise.

C. It is the path his father wanted for him.

D. It is easier than the way of the Brahmins.

Key: A (It numbs the self for a while but never frees it.)

118. [short · inference · DOK 2] What can you infer from this line? “I always thirsted for knowledge, I have always been full of questions.” (With the Samanas, paragraph 22) Answer in two or three sentences with one detail.

Sample answer: Siddhartha’s hunger to know has never changed: “I always thirsted for knowledge, I have always been full of questions.” (With the Samanas, paragraph 22). The word “always,” said twice, shows that years of Samana discipline have not quieted his questions, so the Samanas cannot satisfy him.

119. [short · inference · DOK 2] What can you infer from this line? “He saw him, a simple man in a yellow robe, bearing the alms-dish in his hand, walking silently.” (Gotama, paragraph 9) Answer in two or three sentences with one detail.

Sample answer: Siddhartha recognizes the Buddha through his humility, not his fame. The evidence is “He saw him, a simple man in a yellow robe, bearing the alms-dish in his hand, walking silently.” (Gotama, paragraph 9). The words “simple” and “silently” show that his holiness lies in quiet bearing.

120. [mc · inference · DOK 2] What does this passage most clearly show? “The purpose and the essential properties were not somewhere behind the things, they were in them, in everything.” (Awakening, paragraph 7)

A. The whole world is an illusion to escape

B. Meaning lies in the visible world itself

C. Only Atman is truly real

D. Things hide their meaning

Key: B (Meaning lies in the visible world itself)

121. [short · inference · DOK 2] What can you infer from this line? “All of this had always existed, and he had not seen it; he had not been with it.” (Kamala, paragraph 2) Answer in two or three sentences with one detail.

Sample answer: Siddhartha now sees the world as if for the first time: “All of this had always existed, and he had not seen it; he had not been with it.” (Kamala, paragraph 2). The phrase “had always existed” shows nothing in the world has changed; he has, so his awakening is a change of seeing, not of place.

122. [mc · inference · DOK 2] Which choice best states what the merchant cannot understand about Siddhartha?

A. He has no skill in reading or writing.

B. He meets gains and losses with the same calm.

C. He wants to marry into the merchant’s family and inherit his wealth.

D. He secretly plans to take over the firm.

Key: B (He meets gains and losses with the same calm.)

123. [short · inference · DOK 2] What can you infer from this line? “I am without possessions” (With the Childlike People, paragraph 6) Answer in two or three sentences with one detail.

Sample answer: Siddhartha answers the merchant calmly: “I am without possessions” (With the Childlike People, paragraph 6). He states his poverty without shame, which suggests he does not measure himself by wealth; the merchant’s world has no hold on him yet.

124. [mc · inference · DOK 2] What does this passage most clearly show? “It happened that he laughed just too loud, when he lost a game of dice.” (Sansara, paragraph 4)

A. He is a skilled gambler

B. He is becoming like the childlike people

C. He enjoys losing money

D. He has drunk far too much wine at dinner

Key: B (He is becoming like the childlike people)

125. [short · inference · DOK 2] What can you infer from this line? “And now, so it seemed, now he had really become a childlike person.” (By the River, paragraph 38) Answer in two or three sentences with one detail.
Sample answer: Siddhartha sees that he has become one of the people he once looked down on. The evidence is “And now, so it seemed, now he had really become a childlike person.” (By the River, paragraph 38). The hesitant “so it seemed” and the word “really” show him admitting, without bitterness, that his pride is gone, which prepares the fresh start he makes by the river.

126. [short · inference · DOK 2] What can you infer from this line? “He worked calmly, his eyes fixed in on the front of the boat, with brawny arms.” (The Ferryman, paragraph 21) Answer in two or three sentences with one detail.
Sample answer: Vasudeva is shown at work: “He worked calmly, his eyes fixed in on the front of the boat, with brawny arms.” (The Ferryman, paragraph 21). “Calmly” and “fixed” suggest a man at peace with simple labour, whose strength serves a quiet purpose rather than ambition.

127. [mc · inference · DOK 2] What does this passage most clearly show? “Through all this, he talked incessantly.” (Om, paragraph 10)

A. His anger at Vasudeva
B. His wish to hide his pain from his friend
C. His fear of silence
D. His need to pour out what he feels

Key: D (His need to pour out what he feels)

128. [mc · inference · DOK 2] What does this passage most clearly show? “Siddhartha said nothing and looked at him with the ever unchanged, quiet smile.” (Govinda, paragraph 37)

A. He answers with presence, not words
B. He is too tired to speak
C. He is angry at Govinda
D. He has not heard what Govinda asked him

Key: A (He answers with presence, not words)

129. [short · inference · DOK 2] What can you infer from this line? “Only for myself, for myself alone, I must decide, I must choose, I must refuse.” (Gotama, paragraph 40) Answer in two or three sentences with one detail.
Sample answer: Siddhartha insists on finding his own way, even before the Buddha. The evidence is “Only for myself, for myself alone, I must decide, I must choose, I must refuse.” (Gotama, paragraph 40). The repeated “for myself” and the three verbs show that he takes full responsibility for his path.

130. [short · analysis · DOK 3] Analyze the word choice in “We find comfort, we find numbness, we learn feats, to deceive others.” (With the Samanas, paragraph 20). Pick two words and explain what they suggest.
Sample answer: Siddhartha is harsh in judging the Samana practices. The evidence is “We find comfort, we find numbness, we learn feats, to deceive others.” (With the Samanas, paragraph 20). “Numbness” suggests escape rather than wisdom, and “deceive” suggests that the Samanas’ skills are only tricks.

131. [mc · analysis · DOK 3] Which literary element does this describe in “Gotama”? In the town of Savathi, every household fills the begging bowls of the silent pilgrims.

A. Simile
B. Setting

C. Hyperbole

D. Rhyme

Key: B (Setting)

132. [mc · analysis · DOK 3] Which literary element does this describe in "Awakening"? Siddhartha stops suddenly on the path, as if there was a snake lying in front of him.

A. Allusion

B. Flashback

C. Simile

D. Irony

Key: C (Simile)

133. [short · analysis · DOK 3] Analyze the word choice in "going through life in a childlike or animallike manner, which he loved and also despised at the same time." (With the Childlike People, paragraph 37). Pick two words and explain what they suggest.

Sample answer: "going through life in a childlike or animallike manner, which he loved and also despised at the same time." (With the Childlike People, paragraph 37) shows his mixed view of ordinary people. "Animallike" sets them below him, ruled by instinct, while "loved" and "despised" together reveal that he is drawn to their passion even as he looks down on it.

134. [short · analysis · DOK 3] Claim: Siddhartha's detachment in the city is a strength in business but a failure in love. Explain how this evidence supports the claim: "And yet, my dear, you've remained a Samana, and yet you do not love me, you love nobody." (With the Childlike People, paragraph 46).

Sample answer: Kamala's words support the claim: "And yet, my dear, you've remained a Samana, and yet you do not love me, you love nobody." (With the Childlike People, paragraph 46). She links his staying "a Samana" directly to his not loving, so the same detachment that keeps him calm in trade keeps him apart from her. The repeated "and yet" shows her disappointment growing.

135. [short · analysis · DOK 3] In this chapter, which theme does the following most directly develop? The more Siddhartha comes to resemble the childlike people, the more he envies them. Name the theme and explain in two or three sentences, quoting the text.

Sample answer: The theme is the cycle of desire. The text says "And yet, he envied them, envied them just the more, the more similar he became to them." (Sansara, paragraph 4). The repeated "envied them" and the doubled "the more" show desire feeding on itself: each step closer brings more craving, not satisfaction.

136. [mc · analysis · DOK 3] Which literary element does this describe in "By the River"? Govinda, now an old monk, still worries about a sleeper's safety and keeps watch.

A. Rhyme

B. Characterization

C. Hyperbole

D. Allusion

Key: B (Characterization)

137. [mc · analysis · DOK 3] Which literary element does this describe in "The Ferryman"? On the way to the ferry, a small black snake bites Kamala, and the dying woman is carried to Siddhartha's hut.

A. Plot

B. Hyperbole

C. Rhyme

D. Simile

Key: A (Plot)

138. [mc · analysis · DOK 3] Which literary element does this describe in "Om"? Siddhartha's burning wound of longing for his lost son pulls against what the laughing river is teaching him.

A. Imagery

B. Conflict

C. Diction / vocabulary

D. Hyperbole

Key: B (Conflict)

139. [mc · analysis · DOK 3] Which literary element does this describe in "The Son"? Vasudeva points to the missing oar to show what the boy has done.

A. Rhyme

B. Hyperbole

C. Symbolism

D. Allusion

Key: C (Symbolism)

140. [short · analysis · DOK 3] Analyze the word choice in "Timid and weeping, the boy had attended his mother's funeral" (The Son, paragraph 1). Pick two words and explain what they suggest.

Sample answer: The boy is shown as frightened and grieving. The evidence is "Timid and weeping, the boy had attended his mother's funeral" (The Son, paragraph 1). "Timid" shows his fear of the strangers around him, and "weeping" shows his grief, which explains his later hostility.

141. [mc · analysis · DOK 3] Which literary element does this describe in "Om"? Vasudeva says he has long waited for this hour, then walks into the forest, bright and at peace.

A. Plot

B. Hyperbole

C. Alliteration

D. Metaphor

Key: A (Plot)

142. [short · synthesis · DOK 4] Synthesis: trace how Govinda's devotion to Siddhartha develops from the opening of "The Son of the Brahmin" to its ending. Use one quotation from each part.

Sample answer: Govinda's devotion moves from love to action. At the opening, "But more than all the others he was loved by Govinda, his friend, the son of a Brahmin." (The Son of the Brahmin, paragraph 5). At the ending, "a shadow rose near the last hut, who had crouched there, and joined the pilgrim—Govinda." (The Son of the Brahmin, paragraph 51). The first passage describes his love; the second shows him leaving home to follow his friend.

143. [short · synthesis · DOK 4] Close reading: how do the diction and syntax of "Pale shimmered his bright robe." (The Son of the Brahmin, paragraph 29) shape its meaning? Consider a second, competing reading.

Sample answer: The short, inverted sentence makes Siddhartha seem almost unreal: "Pale shimmered his bright robe." (The Son of the Brahmin, paragraph 29). Putting "Pale shimmered" first stresses the ghostly light, and "bright robe" marks his purity. A competing reading sees only a description of moonlight. Yet through the father's anxious eyes, the shimmering robe makes his son look already distant, like a stranger.

144. [short · synthesis · DOK 4] Synthesis: trace how Siddhartha's thirst develops from The Son of the Brahmin to With the Samanas. Use one quotation from each. Address one competing reading and answer it.

Sample answer: At home, his teachers "had already filled his expecting vessel with their richness, and the vessel was not full" (The Son of the Brahmin, paragraph 8): the Brahmins' teaching leaves him empty. Among the Samanas, he tells Govinda "I'm suffering of thirst, O Govinda, and on this long path of a Samana, my thirst has remained as strong as ever." (With the Samanas, paragraph 22). The image moves from an unfilled vessel to an unquenched thirst, so the lack is the same in both places. A competing reading says the Samanas brought him closer, since he learned to leave his self; but "as strong as ever" shows the thirst unchanged, so neither teaching nor discipline can satisfy it.

145. [short · synthesis · DOK 4] Evaluate this claim about the chapter: "Siddhartha enters the city still a Samana at heart; underneath the new clothes, nothing has changed." Is it fully persuasive? Argue with evidence, including a passage that complicates it.

Sample answer: The claim is partly persuasive. Early on he thinks "I am still a Samana, he thought, I am still an ascetic and beggar." (Kamala, paragraph 19) and later he offers Kamala only Samana skills. But the chapter complicates this, because "Everything was difficult, toilsome, and ultimately hopeless, when I was still a Samana. Now, everything is easy" (Kamala, paragraph 63) puts his Samana life in the past tense and shows him enjoying the ease of the city. The better conclusion is that his skills stay Samana skills while his desires begin to change.

146. [short · synthesis · DOK 4] Close reading: how do the diction and syntax of "This too, I have learned from the river: everything is coming back" (Kamala, paragraph 11) shape its meaning? Consider a second, competing reading.

Sample answer: The colon makes the prophecy a lesson the ferryman has learned: "This too, I have learned from the river: everything is coming back" (Kamala, paragraph 11). "This too" places it in a long series of lessons, so the river is already a teacher. A competing reading treats the line as a ferryman's polite small talk to a passing stranger. But it comes true: Siddhartha returns to this very river, where "kindly he smiled at the river" (By the River, paragraph 41), and stays to learn from it. The plain words carry the structure of the whole novel.

147. [short · synthesis · DOK 4] Close reading: how do the diction and syntax of "And yet, this path has been very good; and yet, the bird in my chest has not died." (By the River, paragraph 42) shape its meaning? Consider a second, competing reading.

Sample answer: The repeated "and yet" turns regret into gratitude: "And yet, this path has been very good; and yet, the bird in my chest has not died." (By the River, paragraph 42). The semicolon balances the two claims, and the bird stands for his inner voice. A competing reading hears self-justification, a man excusing his wasted years. Yet the chapter backs the claim: he "listened to the bird, as it sang for joy" (By the River, paragraph 47), so the repeated "and yet" marks a discovery he can check against his own renewed joy.

148. [short · synthesis · DOK 4] Synthesis: trace how Vasudeva's kindness develops from Kamala to The Ferryman. Use one quotation from each. Address one competing reading and answer it.

Sample answer: Vasudeva's kindness moves from a passing favour to a shared life. In Kamala, "Smiling, Siddhartha was happy about the friendship and the kindness of the ferryman." (Kamala, paragraph 12). In The Ferryman, Vasudeva says: "Now, you shall live with me, there is space and food for both." (The Ferryman, paragraph 25). A competing reading says Vasudeva simply needs a helper. Yet he offers his home before any work is done, so his kindness is freely given.

149. [short · synthesis · DOK 4] Synthesis: trace how the image of the caged bird develops from Sansara to The Son. Use one quotation from each. Address one competing reading and answer it.

Sample answer: The bird moves from a symbol of Kamala's freedom to a picture of the boy. In Sansara, Kamala "opened the door of the cage, took the bird out and let it fly." (Sansara, paragraph 17). In The Son, Vasudeva says: "That young bird is accustomed to a different life, to a different nest." (The Son, paragraph 5). A competing reading treats the dead bird of Sansara and the boy of The Son as unrelated images. Yet Kamala opens the cage and lets her bird fly, and Vasudeva calls the boy a "young bird" used to "a different nest," so the two images together suggest that Siddhartha, like Kamala, must let what he loves go free.

150. [short · synthesis · DOK 4] Close reading: how do the diction and syntax of "But this was a knowledge he could not act upon, stronger than the knowledge was his love for the boy, stronger was his tenderness, his fear to lose him." (The Son, paragraph 15) shape its meaning? Consider a second, competing reading.
Sample answer: The syntax sets knowledge against love: "But this was a knowledge he could not act upon, stronger than the knowledge was his love for the boy, stronger was his tenderness, his fear to lose him." (The Son, paragraph 15). Repeating "stronger" piles up the feelings that outweigh his understanding, ending on "fear to lose him." A competing reading calls Siddhartha weak for knowing the right course and not taking it. Yet the repeated "stronger" sets love against knowledge as two real forces, and the novel has already shown that knowledge without experience is empty, so the sentence marks a lesson he can learn only by living it.

151. [mc · recall · DOK 1] In the line "moonlight reflecting from his bare shins", what does "shins" most nearly mean?
A. the fronts of the lower legs
B. the backs of the hands
C. the tops of the shoulders
D. the soles of the feet
Key: A (the fronts of the lower legs)

152. [mc · recall · DOK 1] What does Govinda not want to become?
A. A wandering Samana who lives deep in the forest
B. A rich merchant in the city
C. An ordinary Brahmin like thousands of others
D. A warrior serving a king
Key: C (An ordinary Brahmin like thousands of others)

153. [mc · recall · DOK 1] How does Govinda feel about Siddhartha in the opening chapter?
A. He envies him and secretly resents him
B. He fears and avoids him
C. He loves and wants to follow him
D. He pities and scorns him
Key: C (He loves and wants to follow him)

154. [mc · recall · DOK 1] What does Govinda call the woman in Savathi who tells them where the Buddha is?
A. Mother of the pilgrims
B. Wise one of the town
C. Servant of the exalted one
D. Daughter of the Brahmins
Key: A (Mother of the pilgrims)

155. [mc · recall · DOK 1] In the line "never before he had perceived the voice and the parable of the moving water thus strongly and beautifully", what does "parable" most nearly mean?
A. a simple story that teaches a lesson

B. a loud and sudden noise

C. a narrow wooden bridge

D. a song sung at a wedding

Key: A (a simple story that teaches a lesson)

156. [fill · recall · DOK 1] Complete the quotation from Sansara, paragraph 14: “He still sat there, when the night had _____.” Word bank: fallen, eaten, sung, written

Key: fallen

157. [mc · recall · DOK 1] In the line “Siddhartha spoke with ecstasy”, what does “ecstasy” most nearly mean?

A. deep sorrow

B. cold anger

C. overwhelming joy

D. great fear

Key: C (overwhelming joy)

158. [fill · recall · DOK 1] Fill in the blank with the word that fits: “But more than Vasudeva could _____ him, he was taught by the river.” Word bank: pay, teach, fear, sell

Key: teach

159. [mc · recall · DOK 1] What does Siddhartha believe vanishes once time is overcome?

A. The river itself

B. His memory of Kamala and the city

C. All suffering and fear

D. His need for food

Key: C (All suffering and fear)

160. [mc · recall · DOK 1] In the line “Behind them blew a hot scent of quiet passion, of destructive service, of merciless self-denial.”, what does “merciless” most nearly mean?

A. showing no pity

B. gentle and kind

C. slow and careful

D. loud and proud

Key: A (showing no pity)

161. [mc · recall · DOK 1] What does Siddhartha do after his father refuses?

A. Leaves at once in anger

B. Goes quietly to bed

C. Stands silently with folded arms

D. Begs his friend Govinda to help him

Key: C (Stands silently with folded arms)

162. [fill · recall · DOK 1] Complete the quotation from The Son of the Brahmin, paragraph 47: “The Brahmin saw that Siddhartha was trembling softly in his _____.”

Key: knees

163. [mc · inference · DOK 2] What does this passage most clearly show? “Alas, and nobody showed this way, nobody knew it, not the father, and not the teachers and wise men, not the holy sacrificial songs!” (The Son of the Brahmin, paragraph 8)

A. His father has hidden the path from him on purpose.

B. The holy songs are the guide he must follow.

C. No one around him can lead him to what he seeks.

D. Govinda alone knows the answer but keeps it to himself out of fear.

Key: C (No one around him can lead him to what he seeks.)

164. [mc · inference · DOK 2] What does this passage most clearly show? “And so I’m starting to believe that this knowledge has no worser enemy than the desire to know it, than learning.” (With the Samanas, paragraph 22)

A. He believes the Samanas will soon show him all he needs.

B. He wants Govinda to study harder with the old Samana.

C. He fears he has forgotten what the Brahmins taught.

D. He suspects that study itself blocks real knowledge.

Key: D (He suspects that study itself blocks real knowledge.)

165. [mc · inference · DOK 2] What does this passage most clearly show? “Truly, if you had stayed there, you would soon have learned to walk on water.” (With the Samanas, paragraph 42)

A. Govinda’s awe at what Siddhartha has just done

B. Govinda’s plan to return to the Samanas

C. Govinda’s fear of the deep river they must still cross

D. Govinda’s anger that they left the forest

Key: A (Govinda’s awe at what Siddhartha has just done)

166. [mc · inference · DOK 2] What does this passage most clearly show? “He has lived for sixty years and has not reached the nirvana.” (With the Samanas, paragraph 20)

A. Even the oldest ascetic has not reached the goal.

B. The old Samana is close to perfect peace.

C. Siddhartha admires the old man’s long patience.

D. The goal can be won only after many decades.

Key: A (Even the oldest ascetic has not reached the goal.)

167. [short · inference · DOK 3] What can you infer from this line? “But tell me: Have you seen the multitude of my Samanas, my many brothers, who have taken refuge in the teachings?” (Gotama, paragraph 39) Answer by connecting it to one other chapter: quote a second passage and explain how the two passages together develop the idea.

Sample answer: Gotama answers Siddhartha’s refusal by pointing to the many his teaching serves: he measures a path by whether it helps the crowd of seekers, not by whether it satisfies one brilliant doubter. The evidence is “But tell me: Have you seen the multitude of my Samanas, my many brothers, who have taken refuge in the teachings?” (Gotama, paragraph 39). Years later one of those brothers, Govinda, still has no rest: “but I haven’t stopped searching. Never I’ll stop searching, this seems to be my destiny” (Govinda, paragraph 4). Together the passages test Gotama’s question: the refuge the multitude takes does not end every search, which is why Siddhartha would not take it.

168. [mc · inference · DOK 2] What does this passage most clearly show? “All are thankful, though they are the ones who would have a right to receive thanks.” (Kamala, paragraph 12)

A. He resents that no one ever thanks him.

B. He is grateful to the ferryman for the free crossing.

C. He fears that people will ask him for money.

D. He feels superior to the humble people he meets.

Key: D (He feels superior to the humble people he meets.)

169. [short · inference · DOK 3] What can you infer from this line? “It was my resolution to learn love from this most beautiful woman.” (Kamala, paragraph 70) Answer by connecting it to one other chapter: quote a second passage and explain how the two passages together develop the idea.

Sample answer: Siddhartha treats love as a new discipline: “It was my resolution to learn love from this most beautiful woman.” (Kamala, paragraph 70). The word “resolution” is the language of his Samana vows, so he approaches love as another goal to master. It connects to another chapter: “Perhaps people of our kind can’t love. The childlike people can; that’s their secret.” (With the Childlike People, paragraph 47): love approached as a skill to learn is mastered as a craft but never felt.

170. [short · inference · DOK 3] What can you infer from this line? “Most people, Kamala, are like a falling leaf, which is blown and is turning around through the air, and wavers, and tumbles to the ground” (With the Childlike People, paragraph 42) Answer by connecting it to one other chapter: quote a second passage and explain how the two passages together develop the idea.

Sample answer: Siddhartha uses the falling-leaf simile to set most people below himself, as drifting and without inner direction. The evidence is “Most people, Kamala, are like a falling leaf, which is blown and is turning around through the air, and wavers, and tumbles to the ground” (With the Childlike People, paragraph 42). Later he loses this superiority, saying he needed his path “in order to learn how to love the world” (Govinda, paragraph 21). Together the passages show his distance from the childlike people turning into love.

171. [mc · inference · DOK 2] What does this passage most clearly show? “He always seems to be merely playing with our business affairs” (With the Childlike People, paragraph 30)

A. Siddhartha is a poor trader who loses money.

B. His heart is not in the trade he does so well.

C. Kamala has spoiled him for any real work with her endless pleasures.

D. Siddhartha plans to take over the firm.

Key: B (His heart is not in the trade he does so well.)

172. [mc · inference · DOK 2] What does this passage most clearly show? “Permit me to ask, sir, from where do you know my name?” (By the River, paragraph 21)

A. Govinda does not recognise his friend

B. Govinda is angry at being followed

C. Govinda wants to hide his name

D. Govinda knows who Siddhartha is Key: A (Govinda does not recognise his friend)

173. [mc · inference · DOK 2] What does Vasudeva do when Siddhartha shares his insight about time?

A. Argues against him

B. Laughs at him

C. Smiles brightly and nods

D. Walks away in silence to the boat

Key: C (Smiles brightly and nods)

174. [mc · inference · DOK 2] What does this passage most clearly show? “It also happened that curious people came, who had been told that there were two wise men, or sorcerers, or holy men living by that ferry.” (The Ferryman, paragraph 42)

A. Vasudeva wants every traveller to stay by the river.

B. The two ferrymen have grown rich and proud.

C. The ferrymen’s quiet wisdom has become a rumour.

D. Vasudeva fears the river’s floods each year.

Key: C (The ferrymen’s quiet wisdom has become a rumour.)

175. [mc · inference · DOK 2] What does this passage most clearly show? “that the river is everywhere at once, at the source and at the mouth, at the waterfall, at the ferry, at the rapids, in the sea, in the mountains, everywhere at once” (The Ferryman, paragraph 34)

A. The river's danger to those who cross it.

B. The river's lesson about time.

C. The river's worth as a source of fares.

D. The river's role as a road to the city.

Key: B (The river's lesson about time.)

176. [mc · inference · DOK 2] What does this passage most clearly show? “His wound blossomed, his suffering was shining, his self had flown into the oneness.” (Om, paragraph 19)

A. His wound has become infected

B. He has fainted from grief

C. He is boasting to Vasudeva about his wisdom

D. His pain has turned into peace

Key: D (His pain has turned into peace)

177. [mc · inference · DOK 2] What does this passage most clearly show? “But all this is over, all of this is no longer alongside my path.” (Awakening, paragraph 10)

A. He has become a famous teacher

B. He has left his old life behind for good

C. He belongs again to his family and his father

D. He has joined Gotama’s monks

Key: B (He has left his old life behind for good)

178. [short · inference · DOK 3] What can you infer from this line? “A heron flew over the bamboo forest” (With the Samanas, paragraph 6) Answer by connecting it to one other chapter: quote a second passage and explain how the two passages together develop the idea.

Sample answer: The heron opens Siddhartha’s Samana practice of leaving his self: he takes the bird into his soul and lives and dies as it. The detail shows how the Samanas try to escape the self by becoming other things, an escape that later proves only temporary. The evidence is “A heron flew over the bamboo forest” (With the Samanas, paragraph 6). Later he sees why such escapes failed: “Now Siddhartha also got some idea of why he had fought this self in vain as a Brahmin, as a penitent.”

(By the River, paragraph 48). Together the passages show that leaving the self by becoming a heron was one more way of fighting it.

179. [mc · inference · DOK 2] What does Siddhartha eat while living in the merchant's house?

A. Rich meals twice every day

B. One meal a day, with no meat or wine

C. Only fruit and bread

D. Whatever Kamala sends from her garden

Key: B (One meal a day, with no meat or wine)

180. [short · inference · DOK 2] What can you infer from this line? "But I am so voluntarily, and therefore I am not destitute." (With the Childlike People, paragraph 6) Answer in two or three sentences with one detail.

Sample answer: Siddhartha sees poverty that is chosen as a kind of freedom. The evidence is "But I am so voluntarily, and therefore I am not destitute." (With the Childlike People, paragraph 6). The word "voluntarily" shows that his lack of possessions is a decision, not a misfortune, so the merchant's pity misses the point.

181. [short · inference · DOK 2] What can you infer from this line? "he was able to say everything, even the most embarrassing parts" (Om, paragraph 9) Answer in two or three sentences with one detail.

Sample answer: Siddhartha opens himself fully to Vasudeva: "he was able to say everything, even the most embarrassing parts" (Om, paragraph 9). "Everything" and "most embarrassing" show the trust Vasudeva's listening creates, letting Siddhartha set down his pride.

182. [short · inference · DOK 2] What can you infer from this line? "Searching means: having a goal. But finding means: being free, being open, having no goal" (Govinda, paragraph 7) Answer in two or three sentences with one detail.

Sample answer: Govinda has spent his life searching and, for that very reason, has not found peace. The evidence is "Searching means: having a goal. But finding means: being free, being open, having no goal" (Govinda, paragraph 7). By setting "searching" against "finding," Siddhartha suggests that fixing on a goal can blind a seeker to what is in front of him.

183. [mc · analysis · DOK 3] Which literary element does this describe in "The Son of the Brahmin"? The opening is a lush, ordered world: the riverbank, the fig tree, the Brahmins' rituals. Repetition ('in the shade of') makes it feel timeless and sheltered.

A. Alliteration

B. Irony

C. Plot

D. Setting

Key: D (Setting)

184. [short · analysis · DOK 3] Analyze the word choice in "Silent and motionless stood the son with his arms folded, silent and motionless sat the father on the mat" (The Son of the Brahmin, paragraph 24). Pick two words and explain what they suggest.

Sample answer: "Silent and motionless stood the son with his arms folded, silent and motionless sat the father on the mat" (The Son of the Brahmin, paragraph 24) stages the standoff. The repeated "silent and motionless" makes father and son mirror each other, so neither holds more power. "Stood" against "sat" sets the son's readiness to leave against the father's settled place. Together the words show a contest of wills fought without a word.

185. [short · analysis · DOK 3] Claim: Siddhartha leaves home not because his life is bad but because no one around him has found what he seeks. Explain how this evidence supports the claim: "But where were the Brahmins, where the priests, where the wise men or penitents, who had succeeded in not just knowing this deepest of all knowledge but also to live it?" (The Son of the Brahmin, paragraph 9).

Sample answer: The evidence supports the claim: "But where were the Brahmins, where the priests, where the wise men or penitents, who had succeeded in not just knowing this deepest of all knowledge but also to live it?" (The Son of the Brahmin, paragraph 9). The repeated "where" searches every kind of wise man around him and finds none who lives the knowledge. The contrast between "knowing" and living it shows his complaint is not about comfort but about the lack of a living example, so he must look elsewhere.

186. [mc · analysis · DOK 3] Quote identification: in which section does this passage appear? "Never before had Siddhartha venerated a person so much, never before had he loved a person as much as this one"

A. Gotama

B. Om

C. Awakening

D. The Ferryman

Key: A (Gotama)

187. [short · analysis · DOK 3] Analyze the word choice in "Siddhartha learned something new on every step of his path, for the world was transformed, and his heart was enchanted." (Kamala, paragraph 1). Pick two words and explain what they suggest.

Sample answer: The world seems new to Siddhartha after his awakening. The evidence is "Siddhartha learned something new on every step of his path, for the world was transformed, and his heart was enchanted." (Kamala, paragraph 1). "Transformed" shows that the change lies in his seeing, and "enchanted" suggests a spell of delight.

188. [mc · analysis · DOK 3] Quote identification: in which section does this passage appear? "Kamala owned a small, rare singing bird in a golden cage. Of this bird he dreamt"

A. Sansara

B. The Ferryman

C. The Son

D. Awakening

Key: A (Sansara)

189. [short · analysis · DOK 3] Analyze the word choice in "greed. Property, possessions, and riches also had finally captured him" (Sansara, paragraph 6). Pick two words and explain what they suggest.

Sample answer: "greed. Property, possessions, and riches also had finally captured him" (Sansara, paragraph 6) turns wealth into a hunter. "Captured" makes Siddhartha a prisoner rather than an owner, and "finally" shows a slow defeat after years of thinking money was only a game.

190. [mc · analysis · DOK 3] Which literary element does this describe in "By the River"? Siddhartha laughs at himself and at the strange, foolish world after losing everything.

A. Rhyme

B. Allusion

C. Onomatopoeia

D. Tone

Key: D (Tone)

191. [short · analysis · DOK 3] Claim: Siddhartha's despair at the river becomes the condition for his rebirth. Explain how this evidence supports the claim: "he became aware of himself in his misery and in his error." (By the River, paragraph 7).

Sample answer: The evidence supports the claim: “he became aware of himself in his misery and in his error.” (By the River, paragraph 7). “Aware” marks the start of change: only by seeing his “misery” and “error” clearly can he leave them behind.

192. [short · analysis · DOK 3] Claim: Siddhartha's love for his son repeats his father's love for him, showing the cycle of attachment. Explain how this evidence supports the claim: “And could you in any way protect your son from Sansara?” (The Son, paragraph 14).

Sample answer: The evidence supports the claim: Vasudeva asks “And could you in any way protect your son from Sansara?” (The Son, paragraph 14). Siddhartha’s own father could not keep him from the world, and the question implies Siddhartha cannot either; the attachment repeats across generations.

193. [short · analysis · DOK 3] Analyze the word choice in “Astonished, as if he had been the object of a magic spell, the monk looked into the ferryman’s eyes.” (Govinda, paragraph 10). Pick two words and explain what they suggest.

Sample answer: Govinda is stunned to learn who the ferryman is. The evidence is “Astonished, as if he had been the object of a magic spell, the monk looked into the ferryman’s eyes.” (Govinda, paragraph 10). “Astonished” shows his shock, and “magic spell” suggests that the meeting feels beyond ordinary understanding.

194. [short · analysis · DOK 3] Claim: At the ferry, Siddhartha trades clock time for an eternal present in which his past selves still live. Explain how this evidence supports the claim: “Nothing was, nothing will be; everything is, everything has existence and is present.” (The Ferryman, paragraph 35).

Sample answer: The evidence supports the claim: “Nothing was, nothing will be; everything is, everything has existence and is present.” (The Ferryman, paragraph 35). The paired denials “Nothing was, nothing will be” cancel past and future, and “everything is” leaves only the present, so every stage of his life, from Brahmin to rich man, exists at once.

195. [short · analysis · DOK 3] Claim: The novel ends by claiming that wisdom must be lived, not taught. Explain how this evidence supports the claim: “A beautiful courtesan has been my teacher for a long time, and a rich merchant was my teacher, and some gamblers with dice.” (Govinda, paragraph 15).

Sample answer: The evidence supports the claim: “A beautiful courtesan has been my teacher for a long time, and a rich merchant was my teacher, and some gamblers with dice.” (Govinda, paragraph 15). His “teachers” are people he lived among, not sages, so what he learned came through experience rather than doctrine.

196. [short · synthesis · DOK 4] Close reading: how do the diction and syntax of “For a long time, he stood there, pondering, seeing images, listening to the story of his life.” (The Son, paragraph 32) shape its meaning? Consider a second, competing reading.

Sample answer: The string of participles slows time at the garden gate: “For a long time, he stood there, pondering, seeing images, listening to the story of his life.” (The Son, paragraph 32). “Listening to the story of his life” turns memory into something heard, like the river. A competing reading sees a man frozen and helpless at the gate. Yet the three participles, “pondering, seeing images, listening,” are acts of attention, and what he “listens” to is “the story of his life,” so the pause is a review that begins his acceptance that his son is gone.

197. [short · synthesis · DOK 4] Close reading: how do the diction and syntax of “then the great song of the thousand voices consisted of a single word, which was Om: the perfection” (Om, paragraph 17) shape its meaning? Consider a second, competing reading.

Sample answer: The sentence contracts a “great song of the thousand voices” into “a single word,” and the colon sets the word beside its meaning: “then the great song of the thousand voices consisted of a single word, which was Om: the perfection” (Om, paragraph 17). A competing reading says Om is only the old Brahmin prayer, so he has simply returned to his father's religion. But here he hears Om in the river rather than reciting it, and in the end “His wound blossomed, his suffering was shining, his self had flown into the oneness.” (Om, paragraph 19). It is lived experience, not ritual.

198. [short · synthesis · DOK 4] Close reading: how do the diction and syntax of "With a smiling face, Siddhartha watched him leave, he loved him still, this faithful man, this fearful man." (By the River, paragraph 37) shape its meaning? Consider a second, competing reading.
Sample answer: The paired phrases balance praise and pity: "With a smiling face, Siddhartha watched him leave, he loved him still, this faithful man, this fearful man." (By the River, paragraph 37). "Faithful" and "fearful" differ by only a few letters, showing two sides of Govinda. A competing reading hears condescension. Yet "loved him still" shows warmth, so the judgment is tender.

199. [short · synthesis · DOK 4] Close reading: how do the diction and syntax of "I am no ascetic any more, I am not a priest any more, I am no Brahmin any more." (Awakening, paragraph 10) shape its meaning? Consider a second, competing reading.
Sample answer: Siddhartha lists what he is not: "I am no ascetic any more, I am not a priest any more, I am no Brahmin any more." (Awakening, paragraph 10). Three parallel negations strip away his old roles one by one, and the repeated "any more" marks each as past. The syntax leaves him defined by absence. A competing reading hears liberation; but the next lines show him shiver at his loneliness, so the list is both freedom and loss.

200. [short · synthesis · DOK 4] Close reading: how do the diction and syntax of "Out of this moment, when the world melted away all around him, when he stood alone like a star in the sky, out of this moment of a cold and despair, Siddhartha emerged, more a self than before, more firmly concentrated." (Awakening, paragraph 12) shape its meaning? Consider a second, competing reading.
Sample answer: The sentence makes the reader wait through two "when" clauses and a repeated "out of this moment" before its subject arrives: "Out of this moment, when the world melted away all around him, when he stood alone like a star in the sky, out of this moment of a cold and despair, Siddhartha emerged, more a self than before, more firmly concentrated." (Awakening, paragraph 12). The delayed "Siddhartha emerged" enacts the birth it describes. A competing reading hears only isolation: he has lost Govinda, his father and every teacher. Yet the comparatives "more a self than before, more firmly concentrated" turn the loss into gain, and the next sentence calls the moment "the last struggle of this birth" (Awakening, paragraph 12).

201. [fill · recall · DOK 1 · Dual Credit (Indiana College Core): ICC-WC-1.5] Fill in the blank with the word that fits: "as his friend, his companion, his servant, his spear-carrier, his _____." Word bank: lantern, shadow, river, rival
Key: shadow

202. [mc · recall · DOK 1 · Dual Credit (Indiana College Core): ICC-WC-1.5] At what time of day does Siddhartha leave his town?

A. At noon
B. At midnight
C. At dawn
D. At dusk

Key: C (At dawn)

203. [mc · recall · DOK 1 · Dual Credit (Indiana College Core): ICC-WC-1.5] What trait does Siddhartha show by standing all night until dawn?

A. Fear of his father
B. Weariness and growing doubt
C. Confusion
D. Unbending determination

Key: D (Unbending determination)

204. [mc · recall · DOK 1 · Dual Credit (Indiana College Core): ICC-WC-1.5] What does Siddhartha begin to doubt about his father, the pure scholar?

A. That he loves his son dearly

B. That he still knows the holy verses well

C. That even he has found the inner source

D. That he was born a Brahmin

Key: C (That even he has found the inner source)

205. [mc · recall · DOK 1 · Dual Credit (Indiana College Core): ICC-WC-1.5] What does the river come to mean for the reborn Siddhartha?

A. Death and danger

B. Wealth and trade

C. A new life and a teacher

D. The city he has left behind

Key: C (A new life and a teacher)

206. [mc · recall · DOK 1 · Dual Credit (Indiana College Core): ICC-WC-1.5] What is ironic about the old Samana's reaction when the two friends say they are leaving?

A. He gives them his blessing before they even ask

B. He begs them in tears to stay on in the forest with him

C. He leaves the forest with them to see the Buddha

D. He, who teaches the end of desire, flies into a loud rage

Key: D (He, who teaches the end of desire, flies into a loud rage)

207. [fill · recall · DOK 1 · Dual Credit (Indiana College Core): ICC-WC-1.5] Complete the quotation from The Ferryman, paragraph 41: "Many travellers, seeing the two ferrymen, thought they were _____."

Key: brothers

208. [mc · recall · DOK 1 · Dual Credit (Indiana College Core): ICC-WC-1.5] What do some travellers ask permission to do at the ferry?

A. Buy the old boat

B. Fish in the river

C. Stay a night and listen to the river

D. Learn how to row the heavy ferry boat

Key: C (Stay a night and listen to the river)

209. [mc · recall · DOK 1 · Dual Credit (Indiana College Core): ICC-WC-1.5] In the line "Siddhartha knew many venerable Brahmins", what does "venerable" most nearly mean?

A. worthy of deep respect

B. very young in years

C. poor and humble

D. foreign, strange and unfamiliar

Key: A (worthy of deep respect)

210. [mc · recall · DOK 1 · Dual Credit (Indiana College Core): ICC-WC-1.5] In the line "again and again, the name of Gotama, the Buddha reached the ears of the young men, with good and with bad talk, with praise and with defamation", what does "defamation" most nearly mean?

A. loud singing in praise of someone

B. a promise made before witnesses

C. false talk that harms a good name

D. a gift sent from a distant town

Key: C (false talk that harms a good name)

211. [mc · recall · DOK 1 · Dual Credit (Indiana College Core): ICC-WC-1.5] What does Siddhartha conclude about his long detour through the world?

A. It was good, though foolish and full of loops

B. It was wasted time

C. It was the Buddha's plan for him

D. It brought him lasting wealth and great honour

Key: A (It was good, though foolish and full of loops)

212. [mc · recall · DOK 1 · Dual Credit (Indiana College Core): ICC-WC-1.5] In the line "For the most wretched things, he had given them up, for what fades most quickly", what does "wretched" most nearly mean?

A. bright, cheerful and happy

B. very poor or miserable in quality

C. carefully hidden away from sight

D. newly made by hand

Key: B (very poor or miserable in quality)

213. [short · inference · DOK 2 · Dual Credit (Indiana College Core): ICC-WC-1.5] What can you infer from this line? "He was a source of joy for everybody, he was a delight for them all." (The Son of the Brahmin, paragraph 6) Answer in two or three sentences with one detail.

Sample answer: Siddhartha is admired by everyone: "He was a source of joy for everybody, he was a delight for them all." (The Son of the Brahmin, paragraph 6). The words "everybody" and "all" stress how complete this love is, which makes his inner unhappiness more striking: the problem cannot lie in how others treat him.

214. [short · inference · DOK 2 · Dual Credit (Indiana College Core): ICC-WC-1.5] What can you infer from this line? "But behold, I had not known Govinda well enough, I knew little of his heart." (With the Samanas, paragraph 34) Answer in two or three sentences with one detail.

Sample answer: Siddhartha is surprised, and gently teasing, when Govinda wants to leave the Samanas. The evidence is "But behold, I had not known Govinda well enough, I knew little of his heart." (With the Samanas, paragraph 34). The playful "behold" shows that he is pleased to see his friend choose a path for himself.

215. [mc · inference · DOK 2 · Dual Credit (Indiana College Core): ICC-WC-1.5] What does this passage most clearly show? "O Govinda, I believe out of all the Samanas out there, perhaps not a single one, not a single one, will reach the nirvana." (With the Samanas, paragraph 20)

A. His hope of quick success

B. His love for the old Samana

C. His wish to lead the Samanas himself some day

D. His deep doubt about the Samana path

Key: D (His deep doubt about the Samana path)

216. [short · inference · DOK 2 · Dual Credit (Indiana College Core): ICC-WC-1.5] What can you infer from this line? "Often I have thought: Won't Govinda for once also take a step by himself, without me, out of his own soul?" (Gotama, paragraph 21) Answer in two or three sentences with one detail.

Sample answer: Siddhartha has long wished that Govinda would stop following him. The evidence is "Often I have thought: Won't Govinda for once also take a step by himself, without me, out of his own soul?" (Gotama, paragraph 21). The words "by himself" and "without me" show that he wants his friend to become independent, even if it means parting.

217. [mc · inference · DOK 2 · Dual Credit (Indiana College Core): ICC-WC-1.5] What does this passage most clearly show? "I was afraid of myself, I was fleeing from myself" (Awakening, paragraph 4)

A. His gratitude to the Samanas for all their years of patient teaching.

B. His plan to follow Gotama's eightfold path.

C. His diagnosis: every discipline was a flight from the self.

D. His pride in mastering every discipline.

Key: C (His diagnosis: every discipline was a flight from the self.)

218. [short · inference · DOK 2 · Dual Credit (Indiana College Core): ICC-WC-1.5] What can you infer from this line? "You'll see that I'll learn quickly, Kamala, I have already learned harder things than what you're supposed to teach me." (Kamala, paragraph 32) Answer in two or three sentences with one detail.

Sample answer: Siddhartha is confident that his Samana training will help him in the world. The evidence is "You'll see that I'll learn quickly, Kamala, I have already learned harder things than what you're supposed to teach me." (Kamala, paragraph 32). The phrase "harder things" shows his pride, and it hints that he underestimates the lessons of love.

219. [short · inference · DOK 2 · Dual Credit (Indiana College Core): ICC-WC-1.5] What can you infer from this line? "Siddhartha saw how beautiful she was, and his heart rejoiced." (Kamala, paragraph 17) Answer in two or three sentences with one detail.

Sample answer: Siddhartha, long a Samana, is now open to beauty and desire. The evidence is "Siddhartha saw how beautiful she was, and his heart rejoiced." (Kamala, paragraph 17). The word "rejoiced" shows pure delight, a sign that his senses have woken after years of denial.

220. [mc · inference · DOK 2 · Dual Credit (Indiana College Core): ICC-WC-1.5] How does Kamaswami test Siddhartha's skills at their first meeting?

A. He asks him to count a chest of gold coins

B. He asks him to read and write

C. He asks him to sing a verse

D. He asks him to cook a meal

Key: B (He asks him to read and write)

221. [mc · inference · DOK 2 · Dual Credit (Indiana College Core): ICC-WC-1.5] What does this passage most clearly show? "After all, a merchant also lives off what other people own." (With the Childlike People, paragraph 10)

A. Siddhartha admits that he is a thief

B. Siddhartha turns the charge back on the merchant

C. Kamaswami boasts of his wealth

D. Siddhartha wants to beg

Key: B (Siddhartha turns the charge back on the merchant)

222. [mc · inference · DOK 2 · Dual Credit (Indiana College Core): ICC-WC-1.5] What does this passage most clearly show? “But like this, I’ve had a few good days, I’ve learned, had joy, I’ve neither harmed myself nor others by annoyance and hastiness.” (With the Childlike People, paragraph 35)

A. He regrets the money he lost on the rice.

B. He promises to work harder on the next trip.

C. He blames the villagers and the other merchant for his failed deal.

D. He counts a lost deal as a gain in experience.

Key: D (He counts a lost deal as a gain in experience.)

223. [short · inference · DOK 2 · Dual Credit (Indiana College Core): ICC-WC-1.5] What can you infer from this line? “Badly I have served you, tiredness has overwhelmed me.” (By the River, paragraph 14) Answer in two or three sentences with one detail.

Sample answer: Govinda is humble and strict with himself, even toward a stranger. The evidence is “Badly I have served you, tiredness has overwhelmed me.” (By the River, paragraph 14). He blames himself for falling asleep while guarding a sleeper he does not know, which shows his sense of duty and his humility.

224. [mc · inference · DOK 2 · Dual Credit (Indiana College Core): ICC-WC-1.5] What does this passage most clearly show? “Never I have met such a pilgrim, being a pilgrim myself for many years.” (By the River, paragraph 30)

A. Govinda doubts Siddhartha’s claim to be a pilgrim

B. Govinda admires his rich robes

C. Govinda wants to travel with him

D. Govinda has hardly travelled

Key: A (Govinda doubts Siddhartha’s claim to be a pilgrim)

225. [mc · inference · DOK 2 · Dual Credit (Indiana College Core): ICC-WC-1.5] What does this passage most clearly show? “There was something about this ferry and the two ferrymen which was transmitted to others, which many of the travellers felt.” (The Ferryman, paragraph 42)

A. Travellers fear the ferrymen

B. The ferrymen’s peace touches others

C. The ferry is famous for speed

D. The ferrymen charge high fares

Key: B (The ferrymen’s peace touches others)

226. [mc · inference · DOK 2 · Dual Credit (Indiana College Core): ICC-WC-1.5] How does Siddhartha live at the ferry?

A. He sells fish in the city

B. He teaches travellers about the river for money

C. He works the boat beside Vasudeva

D. He begs in the villages

Key: C (He works the boat beside Vasudeva)

227. [short · inference · DOK 2 · Dual Credit (Indiana College Core): ICC-WC-1.5] What can you infer from this line? “They were both masters of patience.” (The Son, paragraph 16) Answer in two or three sentences with one detail.

Sample answer: Siddhartha and Vasudeva share the same calm strength. The evidence is “They were both masters of patience." (The Son, paragraph 16). The word "masters" shows long practice, so their waiting for the boy is a skill, not weakness.

228. [mc · inference · DOK 2 · Dual Credit (Indiana College Core): ICC-WC-1.5] What does this passage most clearly show? "Would you actually believe that you had committed your foolish acts in order to spare your son from committing them too?" (The Son, paragraph 14)

A. Vasudeva's advice to keep the boy close.

B. Vasudeva's anger at the boy's rudeness.

C. Vasudeva's plan to send the boy to Kamala.

D. Vasudeva's question: each must find his own way.

Key: D (Vasudeva's question: each must find his own way.)

229. [mc · inference · DOK 2 · Dual Credit (Indiana College Core): ICC-WC-1.5] What does this passage most clearly show? "I've been waiting for this hour, my dear." (Om, paragraph 21)

A. Vasudeva is impatient to eat

B. Vasudeva is angry at the delay

C. Vasudeva fears the coming night alone in the forest by the river

D. Vasudeva stayed to see his friend reach peace

Key: D (Vasudeva stayed to see his friend reach peace)

230. [short · inference · DOK 2 · Dual Credit (Indiana College Core): ICC-WC-1.5] What can you infer from this line? "He took Siddhartha's hand, led him to the seat by the bank, sat down with him, smiled at the river." (Om, paragraph 11) Answer in two or three sentences with one detail.

Sample answer: Vasudeva answers Siddhartha's confession with action, not advice. The evidence is "He took Siddhartha's hand, led him to the seat by the bank, sat down with him, smiled at the river." (Om, paragraph 11). The simple verbs "took," "led" and "smiled" show that he guides his friend toward the river, where the real lesson waits.

231. [mc · inference · DOK 2 · Dual Credit (Indiana College Core): ICC-WC-1.5] What does this passage most clearly show? "Quickly, you've learned every exercise, often the old Samanas have admired you." (With the Samanas, paragraph 10)

A. Govinda's admiration for his friend

B. Siddhartha's boredom with the Samana exercises

C. The Samanas' envy of his quick progress

D. Govinda's pride in his own skill

Key: A (Govinda's admiration for his friend)

232. [short · analysis · DOK 3 · Dual Credit (Indiana College Core): ICC-WC-1.5] Analyze the word choice in "The sun tanned his light shoulders by the banks of the river when bathing, performing the sacred ablutions, the sacred offerings." (The Son of the Brahmin, paragraph 1). Pick two words and explain what they suggest.

Sample answer: The opening paints Siddhartha's youth as bright and holy. The evidence is "The sun tanned his light shoulders by the banks of the river when bathing, performing the sacred ablutions, the sacred offerings." (The Son of the Brahmin, paragraph 1). "Sun" and "light" make him shine, and the repeated "sacred" shows a life full of ritual.

233. [mc · analysis · DOK 3 · Dual Credit (Indiana College Core): ICC-WC-1.5] Which literary element does this describe in "With the Samanas"? Siddhartha compares his exercises to the ox-cart driver's wine at the inn, only a short numbing, which shows his restless honesty.

A. Theme

B. Characterization

C. Irony

D. Diction / vocabulary

Key: B (Characterization)

234. [short · analysis · DOK 3 · Dual Credit (Indiana College Core): ICC-WC-1.5] Analyze the word choice in "Deeply, he inhaled, and for a moment, he felt cold and shivered." (Awakening, paragraph 11). Pick two words and explain what they suggest.

Sample answer: "Deeply, he inhaled, and for a moment, he felt cold and shivered." (Awakening, paragraph 11) shows the cost of his freedom. "Inhaled" suggests taking in his new situation fully, and "cold" and "shivered" turn loneliness into a bodily chill: having left every teacher and caste, he feels unsheltered.

235. [short · analysis · DOK 3 · Dual Credit (Indiana College Core): ICC-WC-1.5] Analyze the word choice in "Beautiful was this world, looking at it thus, without searching, thus simply, thus childlike." (Kamala, paragraph 1). Pick two words and explain what they suggest.

Sample answer: Siddhartha delights in the world once he stops searching. The evidence is "Beautiful was this world, looking at it thus, without searching, thus simply, thus childlike." (Kamala, paragraph 1). "Without searching" shows that effort had blinded him, and "childlike" suggests fresh, open eyes.

236. [mc · analysis · DOK 3 · Dual Credit (Indiana College Core): ICC-WC-1.5] Which literary element does this describe in "By the River"? Govinda fails to know his friend here, as he will fail again at the ferry years later.

A. Alliteration

B. Foreshadowing

C. Hyperbole

D. Rhyme

Key: B (Foreshadowing)

237. [short · analysis · DOK 3 · Dual Credit (Indiana College Core): ICC-WC-1.5] Analyze the word choice in "Govinda stared at his face, with fear, with yearning, suffering" (Govinda, paragraph 37). Pick two words and explain what they suggest.

Sample answer: Govinda's face shows the pain of his long search. The evidence is "Govinda stared at his face, with fear, with yearning, suffering" (Govinda, paragraph 37). "Stared" shows his intensity, and "yearning" shows that he still longs for what Siddhartha has found.

238. [mc · analysis · DOK 3 · Dual Credit (Indiana College Core): ICC-WC-1.5] Quote identification: in which section does this passage appear? "Delightedly, Govinda listened and wanted to ask and hear much more."

A. Gotama

B. Kamala

C. The Son

D. Om

Key: A (Gotama)

239. [mc · analysis · DOK 3 · Dual Credit (Indiana College Core): ICC-WC-1.5] Quote identification: in which section does this passage appear? "Alone he stood there and empty like a castaway on the shore."

A. Sansara

B. By the River

C. Govinda

D. Awakening

Key: A (Sansara)

240. [short · analysis · DOK 3 · Dual Credit (Indiana College Core): ICC-WC-1.5] Claim: Siddhartha's doubt grows from his knowledge of the holy texts, not from ignorance. Explain how this evidence supports the claim: "Was it not the Atman, He, the only one, the singular one?" (The Son of the Brahmin, paragraph 8)

Sample answer: The evidence supports the claim because Siddhartha questions the rituals using the texts' own ideas: "Was it not the Atman, He, the only one, the singular one?" (The Son of the Brahmin, paragraph 8). Naming "the Atman" shows that he knows the teachings well, and his question shows that this knowledge makes the offerings seem beside the point.

241. [mc · analysis · DOK 3 · Dual Credit (Indiana College Core): ICC-WC-1.5] Quote identification: in which section does this passage appear? "then the great song of the thousand voices consisted of a single word, which was Om: the perfection"

A. By the River

B. Awakening

C. Gotama

D. Om

Key: D (Om)

242. [short · analysis · DOK 3 · Dual Credit (Indiana College Core): ICC-WC-1.5] Analyze the word choice in "Years passed by; surrounded by the good life, Siddhartha hardly felt them fading away." (Sansara, paragraph 2). Pick two words and explain what they suggest.

Sample answer: Comfort makes time slip away unnoticed. The evidence is "Years passed by; surrounded by the good life, Siddhartha hardly felt them fading away." (Sansara, paragraph 2). "Surrounded" suggests that the good life hems him in, and "fading" shows his years quietly lost.

243. [short · synthesis · DOK 4 · Dual Credit (Indiana College Core): ICC-WC-1.5] Synthesis: trace how Siddhartha's doubt about the rituals develops from the opening of "The Son of the Brahmin" to its ending. Use one quotation from each part.

Sample answer: Doubt about the rituals moves from Siddhartha's private question to his father's open admission. At the opening, "The sacrifices and the invocation of the gods were excellent—but was that all?" (The Son of the Brahmin, paragraph 8). At the ending, the father says: "If you'll find disappointment, then return and let us once again make offerings to the gods together." (The Son of the Brahmin, paragraph 49). The first passage questions the offerings; the second shows that even the father now treats them as a fallback.

244. [short · synthesis · DOK 4 · Dual Credit (Indiana College Core): ICC-WC-1.5] Close reading: how do the diction and syntax of "But others, a few, are like stars, they go on a fixed course, no wind reaches them" (With the Childlike People, paragraph 42) shape its meaning? Consider a second, competing reading.

Sample answer: The second half of his image is short and firm: "But others, a few, are like stars, they go on a fixed course, no wind reaches them" (With the Childlike People, paragraph 42). After the long, tumbling sentence about the leaf, these clipped clauses sound steady, and "fixed course" and "no wind" suggest a life ruled from within. A competing reading hears wisdom about inner direction; but placing himself among "a few" stars shows the pride that keeps him from the people he lives among.

245. [short · synthesis · DOK 4 · Dual Credit (Indiana College Core): ICC-WC-1.5] Close reading: how do the diction and syntax of "Just as a potter's wheel, once it has been set in motion, will keep on turning for a long time and only slowly lose its vigour and come to a stop" (Sansara, paragraph 3) shape its meaning? Consider a second, competing reading.

Sample answer: The simile stretches out like the motion it describes: "Just as a potter's wheel, once it has been set in motion, will keep on turning for a long time and only slowly lose its vigour and come to a stop" (Sansara, paragraph 3). The long chain of clauses, "keep on turning… only slowly… come to a stop," makes his old Samana virtues wind down gradually rather than break. A competing reading sees the wheel as steady strength; but "lose its vigour" shows the force is spent, so his spirit is dying by inertia.

246. [short · synthesis · DOK 4 · Dual Credit (Indiana College Core): ICC-WC-1.5] Close reading: how do the diction and syntax of "Wherever from, he asked his heart, where from did you get this happiness?" (By the River, paragraph 44) shape its meaning? Consider a second, competing reading.

Sample answer: Siddhartha questions his own heart: "Wherever from, he asked his heart, where from did you get this happiness?" (By the River, paragraph 44). The repeated "where from" shows wonder, and addressing his heart as "you" shows him listening inward. A competing reading sees confusion, a man who cannot explain his own mood. Yet the question is rhetorical self-address, and he goes on to answer it: the bird in his chest is still alive, so the question is the first step of an insight, not a sign of bewilderment.

247. [short · synthesis · DOK 4 · Dual Credit (Indiana College Core): ICC-WC-1.5] Close reading: how do the diction and syntax of "Deeply he felt, more deeply than ever before, in this hour, the indestructibility of every life, the eternity of every moment." (The Ferryman, paragraph 65) shape its meaning? Consider a second, competing reading.

Sample answer: The sentence piles intensifiers: "Deeply he felt, more deeply than ever before, in this hour, the indestructibility of every life, the eternity of every moment." (The Ferryman, paragraph 65). "Deeply… more deeply… than ever before" builds to a peak, and the balanced pair "every life… every moment" joins space and time. A competing reading sees comfort in the face of Kamala's death; but the scale of the words points beyond grief to a vision of oneness.

248. [short · synthesis · DOK 4 · Dual Credit (Indiana College Core): ICC-WC-1.5] Close reading: how do the diction and syntax of "because, striving for your goal, there are many things you don't see, which are directly in front of your eyes." (Govinda, paragraph 7) shape its meaning? Consider a second, competing reading.

Sample answer: Siddhartha explains Govinda's blindness: "because, striving for your goal, there are many things you don't see, which are directly in front of your eyes." (Govinda, paragraph 7). The phrase "striving for your goal" is set against "directly in front of your eyes," so effort itself hides what is near. A competing reading takes this as a rebuke; but it is said with love, and it describes Siddhartha's own past searching too.

249. [short · synthesis · DOK 4 · Dual Credit (Indiana College Core): ICC-WC-1.5] Close reading: how do the diction and syntax of "No, this is over, I have awakened, I have indeed awakened and have not been born before this very day." (Awakening, paragraph 8) shape its meaning? Consider a second, competing reading.

Sample answer: The repeated "awakened" sounds like a vow: "No, this is over, I have awakened, I have indeed awakened and have not been born before this very day." (Awakening, paragraph 8). "Not been born before" makes the moment a second birth. A competing reading hears youthful exaggeration. Yet the chapter shows his world truly changing, so the language fits his experience.

250. [short · synthesis · DOK 4 · Dual Credit (Indiana College Core): ICC-WC-1.5] Close reading: how do the diction and syntax of "Everything is one-sided which can be thought with thoughts and said with words" (Govinda, paragraph 19) shape its meaning? Consider a second, competing reading.

Sample answer: Siddhartha questions language itself: "Everything is one-sided which can be thought with thoughts and said with words" (Govinda, paragraph 19). The doubled "thought with thoughts" and "said with words" makes thinking and speaking circle back on themselves, so every statement is "one-sided." A competing reading hears despair of truth: if every statement is one-sided, nothing can be known. Yet Siddhartha goes on to point to the stone, the river and love as things to be lived and loved, so the sentence limits words, not knowledge.

251. [fill · recall · DOK 1] Complete the quotation from The Son of the Brahmin, paragraph 14: “That one should _____ hit.” Word bank: incessantly, sweetly, hungrily, politely

Key: incessantly

252. [mc · recall · DOK 1] What does Govinda decide when he catches up with Siddhartha?

A. To return home

B. To become a merchant

C. To become a Samana too

D. To find the Buddha alone

Key: C (To become a Samana too)

253. [mc · recall · DOK 1] Why does Siddhartha’s father finally let him go?

A. Govinda persuades him to agree

B. The Samanas demand it of him

C. Siddhartha threatens to run away from home that night

D. He sees that his son has already left in spirit

Key: D (He sees that his son has already left in spirit)

254. [mc · recall · DOK 1] If Siddhartha finds disappointment in the forest, what does his father ask him to do?

A. Stay in the forest forever

B. Return and make offerings to the gods with him again

C. Keep silent about the forest

D. Join the Buddha’s monks

Key: B (Return and make offerings to the gods with him again)

255. [mc · recall · DOK 1] In the line “the stars in the small window wandered and changed their relative positions, ere the silence was broken”, what does “ere” most nearly mean?

A. before

B. after

C. because

D. unless

Key: A (before)

256. [mc · recall · DOK 1] In the line “for much longer he could have lived in this soft, well upholstered hell”, what does “upholstered” most nearly mean?

A. padded and covered with soft material

B. burned and blackened

C. sharply pointed

D. left empty and bare

Key: A (padded and covered with soft material)

257. [fill · recall · DOK 1] Complete the quotation from By the River, paragraph 24: “Be _____, Siddhartha, my joy is great to see you again.” Word bank: welcome, wooden, frozen, painted

Key: welcome

258. [mc · recall · DOK 1] Whose face first reminds Siddhartha, like a warning, of something he had forgotten?

A. His friend Govinda’s

B. The young boy's

C. The merchant Kamaswami's

D. The Buddha Gotama's

Key: B (The young boy's)

259. [mc · recall · DOK 1] In the line "Why did he, the irreproachable one, have to wash off sins every day", what does "irreproachable" most nearly mean?

A. blameless; beyond criticism

B. often criticized by many others

C. easily angered

D. newly arrived

Key: A (blameless; beyond criticism)

260. [mc · recall · DOK 1] In the line "we have already ascended many a level", what does "ascended" most nearly mean?

A. fallen down

B. forgotten

C. climbed up

D. counted

Key: C (climbed up)

261. [mc · recall · DOK 1] What do Siddhartha's rich clothes signify when Govinda meets him?

A. His success as a monk

B. A gift from the Buddha

C. The worldly life he has left behind

D. His plan to go back to the city and its pleasures

Key: C (The worldly life he has left behind)

262. [mc · recall · DOK 1] Where does Siddhartha's joy after waking come from, as he sees it?

A. From having fled and become free

B. From Govinda's teaching

C. From the wealth he had in the city

D. From wine and feasting

Key: A (From having fled and become free)

263. [mc · inference · DOK 2] What does this passage most clearly show? "Thus were Siddhartha's thoughts, this was his thirst, this was his suffering." (The Son of the Brahmin, paragraph 10)

A. His spiritual longing causes him pain

B. His body is sick with fever

C. He is thirsty for cool water from the river

D. He enjoys his studies

Key: A (His spiritual longing causes him pain)

264. [mc · inference · DOK 2] Which question about the Brahmin rituals does "The Son of the Brahmin" raise?

A. Whether offerings must be doubled every year

B. Whether only priests may speak to the gods

C. Whether the gods punish a son who doubts

D. Whether offerings lead to the self

Key: D (Whether offerings lead to the self)

265. [short · inference · DOK 2] What can you infer from this line? “It had to be found, the pristine source in one’s own self, it had to be possessed!” (The Son of the Brahmin, paragraph 9) Answer in two or three sentences with one detail.

Sample answer: Siddhartha believes the answer lies within, not in rituals. The evidence is “It had to be found, the pristine source in one’s own self, it had to be possessed!” (The Son of the Brahmin, paragraph 9). The repeated “had to” shows urgency, and “in one’s own self” points to the inward search that drives the novel.

266. [mc · inference · DOK 2] What does this passage most clearly show? “faith in words, which are brought to us by teachers, is small.” (With the Samanas, paragraph 36)

A. His pride in all the holy words he has memorised over the years.

B. His growing distrust of what any teacher can give.

C. His belief that the Buddha’s words will save him.

D. Govinda’s fear of leaving the Samanas.

Key: B (His growing distrust of what any teacher can give.)

267. [short · inference · DOK 2] What can you infer from this line? “in a voice which contained just as much sadness as mockery” (With the Samanas, paragraph 22) Answer in two or three sentences with one detail.

Sample answer: Siddhartha speaks “in a voice which contained just as much sadness as mockery” (With the Samanas, paragraph 22). The balance of “sadness” and “mockery” shows he grieves the years spent on a path he now sees through, while also scorning it, so his break with the Samanas is painful as well as certain.

268. [mc · inference · DOK 2] What does this passage most clearly show? “Everyone can perform magic, everyone can reach his goals, if he is able to think, if he is able to wait, if he is able to fast.” (Kamala, paragraph 72)

A. Kamala’s view that only beauty wins in the city.

B. His fear that the skills of the forest are useless in the rich city.

C. His belief that Samana discipline gives power anywhere.

D. The merchant’s rule for success in trade.

Key: C (His belief that Samana discipline gives power anywhere.)

269. [mc · inference · DOK 2] What does this passage most clearly show? “I have no gift I could give you for your hospitality, my dear, and also no payment for your work.” (Kamala, paragraph 8)

A. Siddhartha’s wish to cheat the ferryman

B. The ferryman’s greed for payment

C. Siddhartha’s hidden store of wealth

D. Siddhartha’s poverty as a Samana

Key: D (Siddhartha’s poverty as a Samana)

270. [short · inference · DOK 2] What can you infer from this line? “Siddhartha got to know many new things, he heard a lot and spoke little.” (With the Childlike People, paragraph 28) Answer in two or three sentences with one detail.

Sample answer: Siddhartha learns the merchant’s world by careful observation. The evidence is “Siddhartha got to know many new things, he heard a lot and spoke little." (With the Childlike People, paragraph 28). Hearing "a lot" while speaking "little" shows the patience of his Samana training at work in the city.

271. [mc · inference · DOK 2] What does this passage most clearly show? "Alone he stood there and empty like a castaway on the shore." (Sansara, paragraph 11)

A. His shipwreck at sea

B. His deep loneliness and emptiness

C. His joy at being free

D. His plan to sail away across the sea

Key: B (His deep loneliness and emptiness)

272. [mc · inference · DOK 2] What does this passage most clearly show? "For a long time, he pondered his transformation, listened to the bird, as it sang for joy." (By the River, paragraph 47)

A. His inner voice, long silent, has come back to life.

B. He is annoyed by the noise around the river.

C. He plans to catch the bird for Kamala.

D. He fears that the change will not last.

Key: A (His inner voice, long silent, has come back to life.)

273. [mc · inference · DOK 2] What does Vasudeva say about the river's voice?

A. It is silent to all but monks

B. It speaks only at night

C. It speaks to Siddhartha as well

D. It frightens travellers who cross it

Key: C (It speaks to Siddhartha as well)

274. [short · inference · DOK 2] What can you infer from this line? "in the robber and dice-gambler, the Buddha is waiting" (Govinda, paragraph 21) Answer in two or three sentences with one detail.

Sample answer: Siddhartha sees the divine in everyone: "in the robber and dice-gambler, the Buddha is waiting" (Govinda, paragraph 21). "Waiting" suggests that even the worst person holds the Buddha within, so no one should be judged by what they are now.

275. [short · inference · DOK 2] What can you infer from this line? "There is nothing to opinions, they may be beautiful or ugly, smart or foolish, everyone can support them or discard them." (Gotama, paragraph 36) Answer in two or three sentences with one detail.

Sample answer: The Buddha cares about salvation, not about winning arguments. The evidence is "There is nothing to opinions, they may be beautiful or ugly, smart or foolish, everyone can support them or discard them." (Gotama, paragraph 36). The pairs of opposites show that he treats opinions as interchangeable, so Siddhartha's objection cannot unsettle him.

276. [mc · inference · DOK 2] What does this passage most clearly show? "Whatever should I do at home and at my father's place?" (Awakening, paragraph 10)

A. He longs to go home soon

B. He fears his father's anger

C. He sees no way back to his old life

D. He has forgotten his home

Key: C (He sees no way back to his old life)

277. [mc · inference · DOK 2] What does this passage most clearly show? "'You cannot love,' she had said to him, and he had agreed with her" (The Son, paragraph 17)

A. Vasudeva's praise of his patience.

B. The boy's love for his father.

C. Kamala's old words haunt him.

D. Kamala's promise of a new life.

Key: C (Kamala's old words haunt him.)

278. [mc · analysis · DOK 3] Quote identification: in which section does this passage appear? "They went to the banyan tree, they sat down, Siddhartha right here, Govinda twenty paces away."

A. Gotama

B. Sansara

C. Om

D. The Son of the Brahmin

Key: D (The Son of the Brahmin)

279. [short · analysis · DOK 3] Analyze the word choice in "Siddhartha gave his garments to a poor Brahmin in the street." (With the Samanas, paragraph 2). Pick two words and explain what they suggest.

Sample answer: Siddhartha begins his new life by giving everything away. The evidence is "Siddhartha gave his garments to a poor Brahmin in the street." (With the Samanas, paragraph 2). "Gave" shows a free act of letting go, and "garments" stands for the rank and comfort he leaves behind.

280. [short · analysis · DOK 3] Claim: Siddhartha leaves the Buddha out of respect for the Buddha's own example. Explain how this evidence supports the claim: "Never before had Siddhartha venerated a person so much, never before had he loved a person as much as this one" (Gotama, paragraph 15).

Sample answer: Although he says he had never "venerated a person so much" he argues the Buddha reached enlightenment by his own search, so following any teaching, even this one, would betray that example. The evidence is "Never before had Siddhartha venerated a person so much, never before had he loved a person as much as this one" (Gotama, paragraph 15), which shows the depth of his respect before his refusal.

281. [short · analysis · DOK 3] Analyze the word choice in "And it was not long before he walked again, walked quickly like a man who knows what he has got to do." (Awakening, paragraph 5). Pick two words and explain what they suggest.

Sample answer: Siddhartha moves with new purpose after his awakening. The evidence is "And it was not long before he walked again, walked quickly like a man who knows what he has got to do." (Awakening, paragraph 5). "Quickly" shows energy, and "knows" shows a certainty he lacked as a Samana.

282. [mc · analysis · DOK 3] Which literary element does this describe in "With the Childlike People"? Siddhartha learns trade from Kamaswami and love from Kamala in the same years.

A. Structure

B. Onomatopoeia

C. Rhyme

D. Allusion

Key: A (Structure)

283. [short · analysis · DOK 3] Analyze the word choice in "Kamaswami entered, a swiftly, smoothly moving man with very gray hair, with very intelligent, cautious eyes, with a greedy mouth." (With the Childlike People, paragraph 2). Pick two words and explain what they suggest.

Sample answer: The merchant is drawn as clever and grasping. The evidence is "Kamaswami entered, a swiftly, smoothly moving man with very gray hair, with very intelligent, cautious eyes, with a greedy mouth." (With the Childlike People, paragraph 2). "Cautious" suggests a careful calculator, and "greedy" reveals his love of gain.

284. [mc · analysis · DOK 3] Quote identification: in which section does this passage appear? "He rose, bid his farewell to the mango tree, his farewell to the pleasure-garden."

A. Sansara

B. Kamala

C. Om

D. The Ferryman

Key: A (Sansara)

285. [mc · analysis · DOK 3] Which literary element does this describe in "By the River"? Siddhartha sees his life as a path that moved in loops, perhaps in a circle.

A. Onomatopoeia

B. Metaphor

C. Flashback

D. Rhyme

Key: B (Metaphor)

286. [short · analysis · DOK 3] Analyze the word choice in "I'm wearing them, because I have been a rich man, and I'm wearing my hair like the worldly and lustful people, for I have been one of them." (By the River, paragraph 31). Pick two words and explain what they suggest.

Sample answer: "I'm wearing them, because I have been a rich man, and I'm wearing my hair like the worldly and lustful people, for I have been one of them." (By the River, paragraph 31) is a frank confession to Govinda. "Wearing" makes his past visible on his body, and "have been" puts that life firmly behind him: he owns his worldly years without hiding them.

287. [short · analysis · DOK 3] Claim: At the ferry, Siddhartha finds relief in being heard rather than in being taught. Explain how this evidence supports the claim: "Siddhartha felt, what a happy fortune it is, to confess to such a listener, to bury in his heart his own life, his own search, his own suffering." (The Ferryman, paragraph 23)

Sample answer: The evidence supports the claim because it calls confession, not instruction, a gift: "Siddhartha felt, what a happy fortune it is, to confess to such a listener, to bury in his heart his own life, his own search, his own suffering." (The Ferryman, paragraph 23). "Happy fortune" names the relief, and "bury in his heart" shows that Vasudeva gives back no lesson, only a place to lay the story down. The triple "his own life, his own search, his own suffering" shows how much Siddhartha has carried alone until now.

288. [short · analysis · DOK 3] Analyze the word choice in "Softly sounded the river, singing in many voices." (Om, paragraph 13). Pick two words and explain what they suggest.

Sample answer: The river now sounds like a living choir. The evidence is "Softly sounded the river, singing in many voices." (Om, paragraph 13). "Softly" sets a gentle tone, and "many voices" prepares the moment when all voices become one.

289. [short · analysis · DOK 3] Analyze the word choice in "Deeply he bowed to him who was calmly sitting." (Govinda, paragraph 35). Pick two words and explain what they suggest.

Sample answer: Govinda shows reverence for his old friend. The evidence is "Deeply he bowed to him who was calmly sitting." (Govinda, paragraph 35). "Deeply" shows humility, and "calmly" contrasts Siddhartha's peace with Govinda's inner conflict.

290. [mc · analysis · DOK 3] Which literary element does this describe in "With the Samanas"? The chapter moves from the friends' long talks in the forest to news of the Buddha, and its last scene, the parting from the old Samana, opens the way to the grove.

A. Irony

B. Structure

C. Symbolism

D. Allusion

Key: B (Structure)

291. [short · synthesis · DOK 4] Close reading: how do the diction and syntax of "But now that you're awake, let me go to catch up with my brothers." (By the River, paragraph 14) shape its meaning? Consider a second, competing reading.

Sample answer: Govinda's polite sentence closes the meeting before it begins: "But now that you're awake, let me go to catch up with my brothers." (By the River, paragraph 14). The phrase "now that you're awake" shows that his duty is done, and "my brothers" shows where his loyalty lies. A competing reading finds him cold for leaving so quickly. Yet he does not know whom he has guarded, so his haste shows humility, not indifference.

292. [short · synthesis · DOK 4] Close reading: how do the diction and syntax of "In his heart he heard the voice talking, which was newly awaking, and it told him: Love this water!" (The Ferryman, paragraph 2) shape its meaning? Consider a second, competing reading.

Sample answer: The command arrives from within: "In his heart he heard the voice talking, which was newly awaking, and it told him: Love this water!" (The Ferryman, paragraph 2). "Newly awaking" links the voice to his rebirth. A competing reading hears only a passing feeling. Yet he obeys it and stays by the river for life, so the voice is his true guide.

293. [short · synthesis · DOK 4] Close reading: how do the diction and syntax of "Instead of the desired goal, which had drawn him here following the runaway son, there was now emptiness." (The Son, paragraph 34) shape its meaning? Consider a second, competing reading.

Sample answer: The sentence ends on its key word: "Instead of the desired goal, which had drawn him here following the runaway son, there was now emptiness." (The Son, paragraph 34). The long build of "desired goal… drawn him… following" collapses into the single noun "emptiness." A competing reading takes "emptiness" as plain defeat: the father has failed and the son is gone. But the emptiness also clears him of the clinging love that drove him to the city, so the collapse prepares his release in "Om."

294. [short · synthesis · DOK 4] Close reading: how do the diction and syntax of "Siddhartha made an effort to listen better." (Om, paragraph 16) shape its meaning? Consider a second, competing reading.

Sample answer: The plain sentence marks a turning point: "Siddhartha made an effort to listen better." (Om, paragraph 16). "Effort" shows that listening is work, and "better" answers Vasudeva's command. A competing reading says effort is the opposite of surrender. Yet the effort is only the first step, and it leads to his letting go.

295. [short · synthesis · DOK 4] Close reading: how do the diction and syntax of "Farewell, hut, farewell, river, farewell, Siddhartha!" (Om, paragraph 21) shape its meaning? Consider a second, competing reading.

Sample answer: Vasudeva's farewell is three short parallel phrases: "Farewell, hut, farewell, river, farewell, Siddhartha!" (Om, paragraph 21). The list moves from his home to the river to his friend, giving each equal weight, so person and place are one in his leave-taking. A competing reading hears sadness; but the bare rhythm and his bright smile make it calm completion, not loss.

296. [short · synthesis · DOK 4] Close reading: how do the diction and syntax of "Never I'll stop searching, this seems to be my destiny." (Govinda, paragraph 4) shape its meaning? Consider a second, competing reading.

Sample answer: Govinda's inverted "Never I'll stop" sounds proud and fixed: "Never I'll stop searching, this seems to be my destiny." (Govinda, paragraph 4). "Seems" softens the claim with doubt. A competing reading admires his persistence. Yet Siddhartha soon shows that endless searching keeps him from finding.

297. [short · synthesis · DOK 4] Close reading: how do the diction and syntax of "It knows everything, the river, everything can be learned from it." (The Ferryman, paragraph 27) shape its meaning? Consider a second, competing reading.

Sample answer: Vasudeva's sentence frames the river with "everything": "It knows everything, the river, everything can be learned from it." (The Ferryman, paragraph 27). Placing "the river" after the verb delays and stresses it. A competing reading calls this simple-minded faith. Yet Siddhartha learns from the river what no teacher gave him, so the claim proves true.

298. [short · synthesis · DOK 4] Close reading: how do the diction and syntax of "Clothes were brought to him, and shoes, and every day a servant prepared a bath for him." (With the Childlike People, paragraph 28) shape its meaning? Consider a second, competing reading.

Sample answer: The passive verbs show comfort arriving without effort: "Clothes were brought to him, and shoes, and every day a servant prepared a bath for him." (With the Childlike People, paragraph 28). "Every day" stresses routine luxury. A competing reading says he is simply enjoying his reward. Yet the ease begins the slow slide into Sansara the next chapters trace.

299. [short · synthesis · DOK 4] Close reading: how do the diction and syntax of "Shivers ran over his body, inside of him, so he felt, something had died." (Sansara, paragraph 13) shape its meaning? Consider a second, competing reading.

Sample answer: The broken rhythm mirrors his shock: "Shivers ran over his body, inside of him, so he felt, something had died." (Sansara, paragraph 13). The pause "so he felt" makes the death inward. A competing reading takes the shiver as a passing chill or illness. Yet "something had died" comes just after the night of gambling and self-disgust, so the death is that of his attachment to the city life, and the next morning he leaves it.

300. [short · synthesis · DOK 4] Close reading: how do the diction and syntax of "He looked around, as if he was seeing the world for the first time." (Awakening, paragraph 7) shape its meaning? Consider a second, competing reading.

Sample answer: The simile turns an ordinary look into discovery: "He looked around, as if he was seeing the world for the first time." (Awakening, paragraph 7). "For the first time" shows how new the world appears once he stops looking past it. A competing reading says nothing has changed but his mood. Yet that change in seeing is exactly the awakening the chapter describes.

301. [mc · recall · DOK 1] Who pass through Siddhartha's town, prompting his decision to leave?

A. A troop of soldiers
B. A merchant caravan
C. Wandering Samanas
D. The Buddha's monks

Key: C (Wandering Samanas)

302. [mc · recall · DOK 1] In the verse Siddhartha recites, what is the arrow?

A. The Brahman
B. Om
C. The soul
D. The target

Key: C (The soul)

303. [mc · recall · DOK 1] What does Siddhartha's father see in Siddhartha's face at first light?

A. No trembling, the eyes fixed far away

B. Tears of regret and deep shame at leaving

C. A smile of victory

D. Anger at his father

Key: A (No trembling, the eyes fixed far away)

304. [mc · recall · DOK 1] How does Siddhartha show respect toward his father while refusing to give in?

A. He argues loudly

B. He leaves without a word

C. He sends Govinda to plead for him

D. He waits without arguing

Key: D (He waits without arguing)

305. [mc · recall · DOK 1] In the line "not a mean, deceitful priest", what does "deceitful" most nearly mean?

A. dishonest and misleading

B. poor and hungry

C. old and tired

D. loud and boastful

Key: A (dishonest and misleading)

306. [fill · recall · DOK 1] Fill in the blank with the word that fits: "For much longer, he could have stayed with Kamaswami, made money, wasted money, filled his stomach, and let his soul die of _____" Word bank: thirst, velvet, ladders, rice

Key: thirst

307. [mc · recall · DOK 1] In the line "Govinda looked at the friend of his youth for a long time, with doubt in his eyes.", what does "doubt" most nearly mean?

A. uncertainty

B. delight

C. anger

D. drowsiness and sleep

Key: A (uncertainty)

308. [mc · recall · DOK 1] Whom does Siddhartha remember with a smile, recalling his proud young words?

A. Kamaswami the merchant

B. His father, the old Brahmin

C. Gotama, the exalted one

D. Vasudeva the ferryman

Key: C (Gotama, the exalted one)

309. [mc · recall · DOK 1] After Kamala's death, what does Vasudeva say about Siddhartha's son?

A. That the boy must go back to the city

B. That the boy shall be welcome to him as well

C. That the boy should become a monk

D. That the boy cannot stay in the hut

Key: B (That the boy shall be welcome to him as well)

310. [mc · recall · DOK 1] In the line "Arrow-fast he read in Govinda's soul", what does "Arrow-fast" most nearly mean?

A. very quickly

B. very slowly

C. very carefully

D. very angrily

Key: A (very quickly)

311. [mc · recall · DOK 1] In the line "Instructed by the oldest of the Samanas, Siddhartha practised self-denial", what does "self-denial" most nearly mean?

A. praising oneself

B. harming others

C. giving up one's own wants

D. teaching others

Key: C (giving up one's own wants)

312. [short · inference · DOK 2] What can you infer from this line? "Siddhartha learned a lot when he was with the Samanas, many ways leading away from the self he learned to go." (With the Samanas, paragraph 7) Answer in two or three sentences with one detail.

Sample answer: The Samana training teaches Siddhartha how to escape himself, not how to find himself. The evidence is "Siddhartha learned a lot when he was with the Samanas, many ways leading away from the self he learned to go." (With the Samanas, paragraph 7). The phrase "leading away from the self" shows that each exercise is a flight.

313. [mc · inference · DOK 2] What does this passage most clearly show? "We are not going around in circles, we are moving up, the circle is a spiral, we have already ascended many a level." (With the Samanas, paragraph 17)

A. Siddhartha's certainty of failure

B. Govinda's wish to go back home to his father

C. The old Samana's anger

D. Govinda's hopeful faith in their progress

Key: D (Govinda's hopeful faith in their progress)

314. [short · inference · DOK 2] What can you infer from this line? "They rarely talked about it, because the oldest one of the Samanas did not like this myth." (With the Samanas, paragraph 32) Answer in two or three sentences with one detail.

Sample answer: The old Samana distrusts the rumours of the Buddha. The evidence is "They rarely talked about it, because the oldest one of the Samanas did not like this myth." (With the Samanas, paragraph 32). Calling the Buddha's story a "myth" shows the Samanas' scorn, which makes the young men's interest a quiet rebellion.

315. [mc · inference · DOK 2] What does this passage most clearly show? "I have not spoken to you like this to argue with you, to argue about words." (Gotama, paragraph 37)

A. His fear of being left alone in the grove.

B. His wish to explain himself, not to win a debate.

C. His decision to join the Buddha's monks.

D. His wish that Govinda would make the hard choice for him instead.

Key: B (His wish to explain himself, not to win a debate.)

316. [mc · inference · DOK 2] What does this passage most clearly show? "I do not want to kill and dissect myself any longer, to find a secret behind the ruins." (Awakening, paragraph 6)

A. He wants to study medicine

B. He rejects self-torment as a path

C. He plans to explore old ruins

D. He fears that he will die very soon

Key: B (He rejects self-torment as a path)

317. [mc · inference · DOK 2] What does this passage most clearly show? "From that moment on when I had made this resolution, I also knew that I would carry it out." (Kamala, paragraph 70)

A. His fear of failing

B. His reliance on Kamala's good advice

C. His confidence in his own will

D. His doubt about his plan

Key: C (His confidence in his own will)

318. [mc · inference · DOK 2] What does this passage most clearly show? "Clothes are what he must have, pretty clothes, and shoes, pretty shoes, and lots of money in his pouch" (Kamala, paragraph 33)

A. Kamala's terms: in the city, love has a price.

B. Siddhartha's plan to rob a rich merchant.

C. Kamala's wish that he return to the forest.

D. Kamala's warning that clothes make no difference.

Key: A (Kamala's terms: in the city, love has a price.)

319. [mc · inference · DOK 2] What does this passage most clearly show? "And full he was, full of the feeling of been sick of it, full of misery, full of death" (By the River, paragraph 1)

A. Repetition stressing his fresh joy.

B. Repetition stressing his calm resolve.

C. Repetition stressing his love for Kamala.

D. Repetition stressing his total despair.

Key: D (Repetition stressing his total despair.)

320. [short · inference · DOK 2] What can you infer from this line? "As a boy, I had only to do with gods and offerings." (By the River, paragraph 42) Answer in two or three sentences with one detail.

Sample answer: Siddhartha sees his childhood religion as only one stage of his life. The evidence is "As a boy, I had only to do with gods and offerings." (By the River, paragraph 42). The word "only" suggests that the rituals were narrow, and placing them in boyhood shows how far he has travelled since.

321. [mc · inference · DOK 2] What does this passage most clearly show? "And yet, this path has been very good; and yet, the bird in my chest has not died." (By the River, paragraph 42)

A. His inner voice survived his worldly years

B. He has bought a new songbird

C. He regrets the steps he took

D. He wants to free Kamala's little caged songbird

Key: A (His inner voice survived his worldly years)

322. [mc · inference · DOK 2] What does this passage most clearly show? "No, there was no teaching a truly searching person, someone who truly wanted to find, could accept." (The Ferryman, paragraph 44)

A. He has found the perfect teaching

B. No teaching can satisfy a true seeker

C. He wants to teach Govinda what he knows

D. He regrets leaving Gotama

Key: B (No teaching can satisfy a true seeker)

323. [mc · inference · DOK 2] What does this passage most clearly show? "it is good to strive downwards, to sink, to seek depth." (The Ferryman, paragraph 27)

A. Vasudeva warns him against the deep river.

B. Wisdom lies in sinking low, not in rising.

C. He should climb back to his old rank.

D. Diving is the ferryman's daily work.

Key: B (Wisdom lies in sinking low, not in rising.)

324. [short · inference · DOK 2] What can you infer from this line? "Many questions he posed to the friend of his youth, many things Siddhartha had to tell him from his life." (Govinda, paragraph 13) Answer in two or three sentences with one detail.

Sample answer: Govinda is still eager to learn from his old friend. The evidence is "Many questions he posed to the friend of his youth, many things Siddhartha had to tell him from his life." (Govinda, paragraph 13). The repeated "many" shows a long night of talk, and "friend of his youth" shows that their bond has survived the years.

325. [mc · inference · DOK 2] What does this passage most clearly show? "It is not possible for any person to see how far another one has already progressed on his path" (Govinda, paragraph 21)

A. No one can judge another's progress

B. Some people stay where they are

C. Only monks make progress

D. Progress can be measured exactly by monks

Key: A (No one can judge another's progress)

326. [mc · inference · DOK 2] What does this passage most clearly show? "Neither Yoga-Veda shall teach me any more, nor Atharva-Veda, nor the ascetics, nor any kind of teachings." (Awakening, paragraph 6)

A. He plans to study the Vedas once again

B. He wants to join the ascetics

C. He rejects all outside teachers

D. He will write a Veda of his own

Key: C (He rejects all outside teachers)

327. [mc · inference · DOK 2] What does Siddhartha lack at home despite all his gifts?

A. Love from his family

B. Learning and skill in debate

C. Good friends

D. A path to the Atman within

Key: D (A path to the Atman within)

328. [short · analysis · DOK 3] Analyze the word choice in "Siddhartha wavered to the side, as he tried to walk." (The Son of the Brahmin, paragraph 50). Pick two words and explain what they suggest.
Sample answer: The long night has cost Siddhartha's body, though not his will. The evidence is "Siddhartha wavered to the side, as he tried to walk." (The Son of the Brahmin, paragraph 50). "Wavered" shows physical weakness, and "tried" shows effort, so his victory is hard won.

329. [mc · analysis · DOK 3] Which literary element does this describe in "With the Samanas"? The friends disagree: Govinda believes the Samanas are making progress, Siddhartha thinks they are going in a circle.

A. Rhyme
B. Conflict
C. Hyperbole
D. Onomatopoeia

Key: B (Conflict)

330. [short · analysis · DOK 3] Analyze the word choice in "Here with Kamala was the worth and purpose of his present life, not with the business of Kamaswami." (With the Childlike People, paragraph 29). Pick two words and explain what they suggest.
Sample answer: Siddhartha's heart lies with Kamala, not with trade. The evidence is "Here with Kamala was the worth and purpose of his present life, not with the business of Kamaswami." (With the Childlike People, paragraph 29). "Worth and purpose" are strong words that show love matters to him, while "business" sounds dull beside them.

331. [mc · analysis · DOK 3] Which literary element does this describe in "With the Childlike People"? Siddhartha plays at trade like a game, unmoved by gains or losses, while his heart stays far away.

A. Imagery
B. Symbolism
C. Setting
D. Characterization

Key: D (Characterization)

332. [short · analysis · DOK 3] Analyze the word choice in "Starting up from this dream, he felt encompassed by a deep sadness." (Sansara, paragraph 11). Pick two words and explain what they suggest.
Sample answer: The dream of the dead bird shocks Siddhartha awake to his own emptiness. The evidence is "Starting up from this dream, he felt encompassed by a deep sadness." (Sansara, paragraph 11). "Starting up" shows sudden alarm, and "encompassed" shows sadness surrounding him on every side.

333. [mc · analysis · DOK 3] Which literary element does this describe in "The Ferryman"? The river is at the source and at the mouth at once, and so stands for a present without past or future.

A. Symbolism
B. Diction / vocabulary
C. Simile
D. Characterization

Key: A (Symbolism)

334. [mc · analysis · DOK 3] Quote identification: in which section does this passage appear? “Love this water! Stay near it! Learn from it”

A. The Son

B. The Ferryman

C. The Son of the Brahmin

D. Om

Key: B (The Ferryman)

335. [short · analysis · DOK 3] Analyze the word choice in “saw his steps full of peace, saw his head full of lustre, saw his body full of light” (Om, paragraph 25). Pick two words and explain what they suggest.

Sample answer: Vasudeva leaves as a figure of perfection. The evidence is “saw his steps full of peace, saw his head full of lustre, saw his body full of light” (Om, paragraph 25). “Lustre” and “light” make him glow, suggesting that he has become one with what he sought.

336. [mc · analysis · DOK 3] Quote identification: in which section does this passage appear? “From my heart, I’m greeting you, Siddhartha;”

A. Kamala

B. Gotama

C. Om

D. Govinda

Key: D (Govinda)

337. [short · analysis · DOK 3] Claim: Siddhartha has found the peace that Govinda still lacks. Explain how this evidence supports the claim: “I see, beloved, that you have found peace.” (Govinda, paragraph 36)

Sample answer: The evidence supports the claim because Govinda himself admits the difference: “I see, beloved, that you have found peace.” (Govinda, paragraph 36). The tender “beloved” shows his love, and “you have found” implies that he has not, which he confirms at once.

338. [short · analysis · DOK 3] Claim: Siddhartha honours the Buddha even while refusing to follow him. Explain how this evidence supports the claim: “This man, this Buddha was truthful down to the gesture of his last finger.” (Gotama, paragraph 15)

Sample answer: The evidence supports the claim because Siddhartha praises the Buddha without reserve: “This man, this Buddha was truthful down to the gesture of his last finger.” (Gotama, paragraph 15). “Truthful” is high praise, and the detail of the “last finger” shows how closely he admires him, even as he chooses his own path.

339. [mc · analysis · DOK 3] Which literary element does this describe in “By the River”? The chapter sets the meeting with Govinda between two scenes of Siddhartha alone by the water.

A. Rhyme

B. Structure

C. Allusion

D. Hyperbole

Key: B (Structure)

340. [mc · analysis · DOK 3] Quote identification: in which section does this passage appear? “From this day on, she received no more visitors and kept her house locked.”

A. Sansara

B. The Son

C. With the Samanas

D. Gotama

Key: A (Sansara)

341. [mc · analysis · DOK 3] Quote identification: in which section does this passage appear? “The sun tanned his light shoulders by the banks of the river when bathing”

A. By the River

B. The Ferryman

C. Om

D. The Son of the Brahmin

Key: D (The Son of the Brahmin)

342. [short · synthesis · DOK 4] Close reading: how do the diction and syntax of “had already filled his expecting vessel with their richness, and the vessel was not full” (The Son of the Brahmin, paragraph 8) shape its meaning? Consider a second, competing reading.

Sample answer: The metaphor turns Siddhartha into a container: his teachers “had already filled his expecting vessel with their richness, and the vessel was not full” (The Son of the Brahmin, paragraph 8). “Expecting” makes him an eager receiver, and “richness” honours what they gave; the turn on “and the vessel was not full” arrives flatly after that praise, so the syntax enacts the disappointment. A competing reading blames the teachers for giving too little; but “richness” says they gave much, so the lack lies in what teaching itself can do.

343. [short · synthesis · DOK 4] Close reading: how do the diction and syntax of “Beautiful and lovely it was, thus to walk through the world, thus childlike, thus awoken, thus open to what is near, thus without distrust.” (Kamala, paragraph 1) shape its meaning? Consider a second, competing reading.

Sample answer: The repeated “thus” builds a chant of delight: “Beautiful and lovely it was, thus to walk through the world, thus childlike, thus awoken, thus open to what is near, thus without distrust.” (Kamala, paragraph 1). The list moves from “childlike” to “without distrust,” showing a new openness. A competing reading sees naivety: a man so open to the world that the city will swallow him. Yet the repeated “thus” praises the openness itself, and he must recover this same childlike, awoken way of seeing at the river, so the passage names a gift as well as a risk.

344. [short · synthesis · DOK 4] Close reading: how do the diction and syntax of “The warrior gives strength, the merchant gives merchandise, the teacher teachings, the farmer rice, the fisher fish.” (With the Childlike People, paragraph 14) shape its meaning? Consider a second, competing reading.

Sample answer: The balanced list makes trade sound natural: “The warrior gives strength, the merchant gives merchandise, the teacher teachings, the farmer rice, the fisher fish.” (With the Childlike People, paragraph 14). Dropping the verb after the first clauses speeds the list. A competing reading takes it as Kamaswami’s narrow view that everything is exchange. Yet Siddhartha answers that he too has gifts, so the list sets up his claim.

345. [short · synthesis · DOK 4] Close reading: how do the diction and syntax of “At times he felt, deep in his chest, a dying, quiet voice, which admonished him quietly, lamented quietly” (With the Childlike People, paragraph 39) shape its meaning? Consider a second, competing reading.

Sample answer: The inner voice is described in soft, repeated words: “At times he felt, deep in his chest, a dying, quiet voice, which admonished him quietly, lamented quietly” (With the Childlike People, paragraph 39). “Dying” and the triple “quiet/quietly” make the voice nearly inaudible, and the commas slow the sentence to a whisper. The syntax shows his deepest self fading under city life. A competing reading hears peace; but “admonished” and “lamented” show the voice warning and grieving, a sign of what he is losing.

346. [short · synthesis · DOK 4] Close reading: how do the diction and syntax of "Vasudeva's smile flourished more warmly." (The Son, paragraph 8) shape its meaning? Consider a second, competing reading.
Sample answer: The short sentence answers worry with warmth: "Vasudeva's smile flourished more warmly." (The Son, paragraph 8). "Flourished" compares the smile to a growing plant, and "more warmly" shows deepening care. A competing reading sees Vasudeva taking Siddhartha's pain lightly. Yet his smile comes before honest advice, so it is compassion, not dismissal.

347. [short · synthesis · DOK 4] Close reading: how do the diction and syntax of "Many an hour he crouched, listening, saw no images any more, fell into emptiness, let himself fall, without seeing a path." (The Son, paragraph 34) shape its meaning? Consider a second, competing reading.
Sample answer: The sentence sinks step by step: "Many an hour he crouched, listening, saw no images any more, fell into emptiness, let himself fall, without seeing a path." (The Son, paragraph 34). The verbs "fell" and "let himself fall" move from accident to consent. A competing reading sees the bottom of despair, a man with "no goal" left. Yet "let himself fall" is something he does, not something done to him, and it ends when Vasudeva comes to lead him home, so the surrender prepares the healing of Om.

348. [short · synthesis · DOK 4] Close reading: how do the diction and syntax of "he felt, that he had now finished learning to listen" (Om, paragraph 17) shape its meaning? Consider a second, competing reading.
Sample answer: The comma after "felt" slows the sentence before its claim: "he felt, that he had now finished learning to listen" (Om, paragraph 17). "Finished" marks the end of a long apprenticeship. A competing reading says no one finishes learning. Yet in this moment he hears all voices as one, so his learning is complete.

349. [short · synthesis · DOK 4] Close reading: how do the diction and syntax of "In the same hour of the night, Siddhartha left his garden, left the city, and never came back." (Sansara, paragraph 16) shape its meaning? Consider a second, competing reading.
Sample answer: The repeated "left" makes the departure swift and final: "In the same hour of the night, Siddhartha left his garden, left the city, and never came back." (Sansara, paragraph 16). "Never came back" closes the sentence like a door. A competing reading calls it cruel to Kamala. Yet the chapter shows he must leave to save his spirit.

350. [short · synthesis · DOK 4] Close reading: how do the diction and syntax of "But I was not able to overcome it, could only deceive it, could only flee from it, only hide from it." (Awakening, paragraph 3) shape its meaning? Consider a second, competing reading.
Sample answer: The list of verbs shrinks as it goes: "But I was not able to overcome it, could only deceive it, could only flee from it, only hide from it." (Awakening, paragraph 3). Each "only" admits a smaller failure. A competing reading hears self-pity in the string of failures. Yet the list moves from "overcome" to "hide" with complete honesty, and the very next thought names the cause, "I was afraid of myself," so the confession is what frees him to stop fleeing.

351. [mc · recall · DOK 1] What does the father ask Siddhartha to do if he finds blissfulness in the forest?
A. Come back and teach him
B. Stay away for good
C. Send word to him by Govinda
D. Forget his family
Key: A (Come back and teach him)

352. [mc · recall · DOK 1] In the line "The sun tanned his light shoulders", what does "tanned" most nearly mean?
A. darkened by the sun
B. burned by fire
C. washed clean

D. rubbed with sweet oil

Key: A (darkened by the sun)

353. [mc · recall · DOK 1] In the line “strangers and lank jackals in the realm of humans”, what does “lank” most nearly mean?

A. thin and bony

B. fat and lazy

C. loud and wild

D. tame and gentle

Key: A (thin and bony)

354. [mc · recall · DOK 1] In the line “a hot scent of quiet passion, of destructive service”, what does “destructive” most nearly mean?

A. causing great harm

B. building up

C. pleasant and mild

D. plain and very ordinary

Key: A (causing great harm)

355. [mc · recall · DOK 1] What happens in the father’s heart as the night goes on?

A. Calm slowly turns into cold indifference

B. Joy grows steadily

C. Boredom sets in

D. Anger gives way to anxiety and worry

Key: D (Anger gives way to anxiety and worry)

356. [mc · recall · DOK 1] How far from Siddhartha does Govinda sit during meditation?

A. Right beside him

B. Across the river

C. Twenty paces away

D. In another grove nearby

Key: C (Twenty paces away)

357. [mc · recall · DOK 1] In the line “Permit me to ask, sir, from where do you know my name?”, what does “Permit” most nearly mean?

A. allow

B. forbid

C. hurry

D. force

Key: A (allow)

358. [fill · recall · DOK 1] Complete the quotation from The Ferryman, paragraph 65: “For a long time, he sat and looked at her peacefully _____ face.” Word bank: dead, angry, hungry, frightened

Key: dead

359. [mc · recall · DOK 1] In the line "his mouth twitched with contempt when he walked through a city of nicely dressed people", what does "contempt" most nearly mean?

A. pity

B. fear

C. scorn

D. joy

Key: C (scorn)

360. [mc · recall · DOK 1] How long ago does Siddhartha feel it was that he meant to drown himself in the river?

A. Only yesterday, before he fell asleep

B. A hundred years ago, or perhaps only in a dream

C. Ten years ago, when he left the city

D. Last spring, during the long rains

Key: B (A hundred years ago, or perhaps only in a dream)

361. [mc · recall · DOK 1] In the line "he loved him still, this faithful man", what does "faithful" most nearly mean?

A. false, fickle and untrue

B. loyal and devoted

C. cruel and cold

D. rich and proud

Key: B (loyal and devoted)

362. [mc · inference · DOK 2] What does this passage most clearly show? "Slowly the disease of the soul, which rich people have, grabbed hold of him." (Sansara, paragraph 4)

A. He has caught a fever

B. Wealth is slowly corrupting his spirit

C. Rich people are often ill

D. He wants to train as a physician in the city

Key: B (Wealth is slowly corrupting his spirit)

363. [mc · inference · DOK 2] In "I went and learned the art of love with Kamala, learned trading with Kamaswami, piled up money, wasted money" (By the River, paragraph 42), what does the pairing "piled up money, wasted money" suggest about his years in the city?

A. His wealth grew steadily until the day he left.

B. He wasted only the money Kamaswami lent him.

C. He regrets learning the art of love from Kamala.

D. Gain and loss cancel out, leaving him with nothing.

Key: D (Gain and loss cancel out, leaving him with nothing.)

364. [mc · inference · DOK 2] What does this passage most clearly show? "And when he felt the wound burning, he silently spoke the Om, filled himself with Om." (The Son, paragraph 34)

A. He curses his son

B. He forgets his son

C. He turns to the Om to bear his pain

D. He decides to leave the river behind

Key: C (He turns to the Om to bear his pain)

365. [mc · inference · DOK 2] What does this passage most clearly show? “Never before has this happened to me, that a Samana comes to me with long hair and an old, torn loincloth!” (Kamala, paragraph 31)

A. Kamala’s fear of the wild stranger

B. Kamala’s anger at his rudeness

C. Kamala’s boredom with yet another visitor

D. Kamala’s amused surprise

Key: D (Kamala’s amused surprise)

366. [mc · inference · DOK 2] What does this passage most clearly show? “There is little which is still missing in me, O excellent one: fine clothes, fine shoes, money in my pouch.” (Kamala, paragraph 32)

A. His deep shame at poverty

B. His greed for riches

C. His playful confidence before Kamala

D. His wish to go back to the forest at once

Key: C (His playful confidence before Kamala)

367. [short · analysis · DOK 3] Analyze the word choice in “saw the young man standing there, who seemed tall and like a stranger to him” (The Son of the Brahmin, paragraph 32). Pick two words and explain what they suggest.

Sample answer: The father sees that his son has already grown away from him. The evidence is “saw the young man standing there, who seemed tall and like a stranger to him” (The Son of the Brahmin, paragraph 32). “Tall” suggests that Siddhartha has grown in stature, and “stranger” shows the distance now between them.

368. [short · analysis · DOK 3] Analyze the word choice in “Or do we perhaps live in a circle—we, who have thought we were escaping the cycle?” (With the Samanas, paragraph 16). Pick two words and explain what they suggest.

Sample answer: Siddhartha fears that the Samanas are trapped. The evidence is “Or do we perhaps live in a circle—we, who have thought we were escaping the cycle?” (With the Samanas, paragraph 16). “Circle” suggests effort that leads nowhere, and “escaping” shows how the goal of freedom has turned into its opposite.

369. [mc · analysis · DOK 3] Which literary element does this describe in “With the Samanas”? Siddhartha says he could have learned the same lessons in any tavern among gamblers.

A. Rhyme

B. Irony

C. Flashback

D. Onomatopoeia

Key: B (Irony)

370. [short · analysis · DOK 3] Analyze the word choice in “For many years, he had been without home and had felt nothing.” (Awakening, paragraph 11). Pick two words and explain what they suggest.

Sample answer: Siddhartha only now feels the loneliness of his path. The evidence is “For many years, he had been without home and had felt nothing.” (Awakening, paragraph 11). “Without home” names his rootlessness, and “felt nothing” shows how the Samana years numbed him.

371. [short · analysis · DOK 3] Analyze the word choice in "When a person has nothing to eat, fasting is the smartest thing he could do." (With the Childlike People, paragraph 20). Pick two words and explain what they suggest.

Sample answer: Siddhartha turns a Samana practice into worldly wisdom. The evidence is "When a person has nothing to eat, fasting is the smartest thing he could do." (With the Childlike People, paragraph 20). "Fasting" recasts hunger as a choice, and "smartest" shows the dry wit with which he answers the merchant.

372. [mc · analysis · DOK 3] Which literary element does this describe in "With the Childlike People"? Siddhartha eats once a day and drinks no wine while living among the rich.

A. Rhyme
B. Flashback
C. Onomatopoeia
D. Characterization

Key: D (Characterization)

373. [mc · analysis · DOK 3] Which literary element does this describe in "By the River"? Talking aloud to himself, Siddhartha mocks and praises himself by turns, showing a new humour about his own past.

A. Hyperbole
B. Characterization
C. Rhyme
D. Onomatopoeia

Key: B (Characterization)

374. [mc · analysis · DOK 3] Which literary element does this describe in "The Ferryman"? Siddhartha asks to stay as Vasudeva's helper and learns to work the boat and weave baskets.

A. Rhyme
B. Onomatopoeia
C. Simile
D. Plot

Key: D (Plot)

375. [short · analysis · DOK 3] Analyze the word choice in "a few, four or five, the river has stopped being an obstacle" (The Ferryman, paragraph 29). Pick two words and explain what they suggest.

Sample answer: "a few, four or five, the river has stopped being an obstacle" (The Ferryman, paragraph 29) measures wisdom in small numbers. "Few" shows how rare true listeners are among the thousands he ferries. "Obstacle" names what the river is for everyone else, so "stopped being an obstacle" marks the change from barrier to teacher for those who hear it.

376. [short · analysis · DOK 3] Claim: Siddhartha's joy in his son turns to suffering. Explain how this evidence supports the claim: "Rich and happy, he had called himself, when the boy had come to him." (The Son, paragraph 3)

Sample answer: The evidence supports the claim because the joy is placed in the past: "Rich and happy, he had called himself, when the boy had come to him." (The Son, paragraph 3). The past perfect "had called" shows that the happiness no longer holds, and the boy's coldness has turned those riches into pain.

377. [short · analysis · DOK 3] Analyze the word choice in "Unchanged and flourishing was only the joy and the cheerful benevolence of his face." (Om, paragraph 8). Pick two words and explain what they suggest.

Sample answer: Vasudeva's spirit stays young while his body ages. The evidence is "Unchanged and flourishing was only the joy and the cheerful benevolence of his face." (Om, paragraph 8). "Unchanged" shows its constancy, and "flourishing" compares his joy to a growing plant.

378. [short · analysis · DOK 3] Analyze the word choice in "tears he knew nothing of ran down his old face" (Govinda, paragraph 43). Pick two words and explain what they suggest.

Sample answer: Govinda is overcome by feeling beyond his control. The evidence is "tears he knew nothing of ran down his old face" (Govinda, paragraph 43). "Knew nothing of" shows that the feeling comes before thought, and "old" shows that his breakthrough comes late in life.

379. [mc · analysis · DOK 3] Quote identification: in which section does this passage appear? "Was it really Prajapati who had created the world?"

A. Gotama

B. Kamala

C. Sansara

D. The Son of the Brahmin

Key: D (The Son of the Brahmin)

380. [short · synthesis · DOK 4] Close reading: how do the diction and syntax of "But though the ways led away from the self, their end nevertheless always led back to the self." (With the Samanas, paragraph 7) shape its meaning? Consider a second, competing reading.

Sample answer: The sentence turns on a concession: "But though the ways led away from the self, their end nevertheless always led back to the self." (With the Samanas, paragraph 7). It opens with "though the ways led away," then reverses with "nevertheless always led back," so its shape is a circle that returns to the word "self" where it began. "Always" makes the return certain. A competing reading sees the escapes as progress; but the closing echo of "the self" shows each exercise ends where it started.

381. [short · synthesis · DOK 4] Close reading: how do the diction and syntax of "and that I am just as far removed from wisdom, from salvation, as a child in the mother's womb" (With the Samanas, paragraph 15) shape its meaning? Consider a second, competing reading.

Sample answer: Siddhartha judges his years of discipline: "and that I am just as far removed from wisdom, from salvation, as a child in the mother's womb" (With the Samanas, paragraph 15). The phrase "wisdom, from salvation" piles two goals together, and the simile of "a child in the mother's womb" measures the distance as total: he has not even been born into wisdom. A competing reading hears humility, a sign of growth; but the phrase "just as far" insists nothing has been gained, which is why he leaves.

382. [short · synthesis · DOK 4] Close reading: how do the diction and syntax of "I am deprived by the Buddha, thought Siddhartha, I am deprived, and even more he has given to me." (Gotama, paragraph 46) shape its meaning? Consider a second, competing reading.

Sample answer: Siddhartha weighs his loss: "I am deprived by the Buddha, thought Siddhartha, I am deprived, and even more he has given to me." (Gotama, paragraph 46). The repeated "I am deprived" stresses the loss of Govinda, then "and even more he has given to me" turns the sentence, so the loss is outweighed by what the meeting taught him. A competing reading hears bitterness toward the Buddha; but the final clause turns that complaint into gratitude, since the Buddha's example shows him he must find his own way.

383. [short · synthesis · DOK 4] Close reading: how do the diction and syntax of "Now, he was nothing but Siddhartha, the awoken one, nothing else was left." (Awakening, paragraph 11) shape its meaning? Consider a second, competing reading.

Sample answer: The sentence strips away every title: "Now, he was nothing but Siddhartha, the awoken one, nothing else was left." (Awakening, paragraph 11). "Nothing but" and "nothing else" frame his name alone. A competing reading sees only loss: caste, home and father are gone, leaving a lonely man. Yet the appositive "the awoken one" names what is left as a gain, and the next paragraph has him walk on "more a self than before," so the stripping-away is also a birth.

384. [short · synthesis · DOK 4] Close reading: how do the diction and syntax of "And there is no thing in this world I know less about than about me, about Siddhartha!" (Awakening, paragraph 3) shape its meaning? Consider a second, competing reading.

Sample answer: The exclamation turns knowledge upside down: "And there is no thing in this world I know less about than about me, about Siddhartha!" (Awakening, paragraph 3). Repeating "me, about Siddhartha" shows his surprise at his own ignorance. A competing reading hears despair. Yet the admission becomes the start of a new search, now turned inward.

385. [short · synthesis · DOK 4] Close reading: how do the diction and syntax of "Light and shadow ran through his eyes, stars and moon ran through his heart." (Kamala, paragraph 2) shape its meaning? Consider a second, competing reading.

Sample answer: The sentence is built of two balanced halves: "Light and shadow ran through his eyes, stars and moon ran through his heart." (Kamala, paragraph 2). Pairs of opposites, "light and shadow," "stars and moon," flow through "eyes" and then "heart," so the world moves from sight into feeling. The repeated "ran through" makes him a channel the world passes through. A competing reading treats it as mere decoration; but the move from eyes to heart marks the awakening of his senses that leads him to Kamala.

386. [short · synthesis · DOK 4] Close reading: how do the diction and syntax of "You are like me, you are different from most people." (With the Childlike People, paragraph 40) shape its meaning? Consider a second, competing reading.

Sample answer: The sentence is a mirror: "You are like me, you are different from most people." (With the Childlike People, paragraph 40). Its two clauses join Siddhartha and Kamala and, in the same breath, set them apart from everyone else, so likeness is defined by distance from the crowd. A competing reading hears tenderness, the first kinship Siddhartha admits since Govinda. Yet the chapter closes on the cost of this likeness: "Perhaps people of our kind can't love" (With the Childlike People, paragraph 47), so the bond that separates them from most people also separates them from love.

387. [short · synthesis · DOK 4] Close reading: how do the diction and syntax of "And there were many who came to him, many to do business with him, many to cheat him, many to draw some secret out of him, many to appeal to his sympathy, many to get his advice." (With the Childlike People, paragraph 38) shape its meaning? Consider a second, competing reading.

Sample answer: The repeated "many" piles up six visitors and six motives: "And there were many who came to him, many to do business with him, many to cheat him, many to draw some secret out of him, many to appeal to his sympathy, many to get his advice." (With the Childlike People, paragraph 38). Every clause makes Siddhartha the object ("to him," "with him," "out of him"), so the crowd's wants define him while he stays still at the centre. A competing reading hears success: the former beggar is now sought out by the whole town. Yet the list gives cheating and advice the same flat rhythm, so the sentence shows a man surrounded by people and touched by none of them.

388. [short · synthesis · DOK 4] Close reading: how do the diction and syntax of "She opened the door of the cage, took the bird out and let it fly." (Sansara, paragraph 17) shape its meaning? Consider a second, competing reading.

Sample answer: Three simple verbs set the bird free: "She opened the door of the cage, took the bird out and let it fly." (Sansara, paragraph 17). "Let it fly" mirrors Siddhartha's departure. A competing reading sees bitterness: Kamala freeing the bird because the man she loved has left her. Yet the calm series of three verbs shows no anger, and the bird recalls Siddhartha's own dream, so she lets it go as she lets him go, out of understanding.

389. [short · synthesis · DOK 4] Close reading: how do the diction and syntax of "he had tasted riches, had tasted lust, had tasted power" (Sansara, paragraph 1) shape its meaning? Consider a second, competing reading.

Sample answer: The sentence is a plain list built on one verb: "he had tasted riches, had tasted lust, had tasted power" (Sansara, paragraph 1). Repeating "had tasted" makes each pleasure a sample, never a meal, so the syntax enacts the sameness of desire. A competing reading hears mastery: he has had it all; but "tasted" suggests he has only sampled the world, never been nourished by it.

390. [short · synthesis · DOK 4] Close reading: how do the diction and syntax of "Deep was his sleep and without dreams, for a long time he had not known such a sleep any more." (By the River, paragraph 10) shape its meaning? Consider a second, competing reading.

Sample answer: The inverted opening stresses depth: "Deep was his sleep and without dreams, for a long time he had not known such a sleep any more." (By the River, paragraph 10). "Without dreams" suggests a clean break from his old life. A competing reading sees mere exhaustion after a night of despair. Yet he wakes "thus refreshed, thus renewed, thus rejuvenated" (By the River, paragraph 11) and feels his old life is a "previous incarnation," so the dreamless sleep works as a rebirth.

391. [short · synthesis · DOK 4] Close reading: how do the diction and syntax of "It is foolish, this path, it moves in loops, perhaps it is going around in a circle." (By the River, paragraph 42) shape its meaning? Consider a second, competing reading.

Sample answer: The sentence itself loops back on "this path": "It is foolish, this path, it moves in loops, perhaps it is going around in a circle." (By the River, paragraph 42). "Foolish" admits error, while "perhaps" softens the charge. A competing reading hears regret: the loops are years wasted. Yet in the same speech he says "this path has been very good" (By the River, paragraph 42), so the circle becomes part of his growth rather than a failure.

392. [short · synthesis · DOK 4] Close reading: how do the diction and syntax of "In a friendly manner, he lived side by side with Vasudeva, and occasionally they exchanged some words, few and at length thought about words." (The Ferryman, paragraph 31) shape its meaning? Consider a second, competing reading.

Sample answer: The sentence is built like the friendship it describes: an easy opening, "In a friendly manner, he lived side by side with Vasudeva," then a slowed, halting close, "few and at length thought about words" (The Ferryman, paragraph 31). "Side by side" makes the two men equals rather than master and pupil, and the inverted "at length thought about words" makes each word cost something. A competing reading sees two lonely men with little to say to each other. Yet the next sentence says "Vasudeva was no friend of words" (The Ferryman, paragraph 31), so the silence is a chosen, shared discipline of listening, not an absence of closeness.

393. [short · synthesis · DOK 4] Close reading: how do the diction and syntax of "Siddhartha spoke with ecstasy; deeply, this enlightenment had delighted him." (The Ferryman, paragraph 36) shape its meaning? Consider a second, competing reading.

Sample answer: The semicolon divides speech from feeling: "Siddhartha spoke with ecstasy; deeply, this enlightenment had delighted him." (The Ferryman, paragraph 36). "Ecstasy" and "delighted" stress his joy. A competing reading finds him carried away by words. Yet Vasudeva's silent nod confirms the insight, so the joy is earned.

394. [short · synthesis · DOK 4] Close reading: how do the diction and syntax of "With deep joy, with deep solemnity he watched him leave" (Om, paragraph 25) shape its meaning? Consider a second, competing reading.

Sample answer: The repeated "with deep" pairs two feelings: "With deep joy, with deep solemnity he watched him leave" (Om, paragraph 25). "Joy" and "solemnity" balance gladness and reverence. A competing reading expects grief at losing his friend. Yet Siddhartha now shares Vasudeva's peace, so joy is fitting.

395. [short · synthesis · DOK 4] Close reading: how do the diction and syntax of "In this hour, Siddhartha stopped fighting his fate, stopped suffering." (Om, paragraph 20) shape its meaning? Consider a second, competing reading.

Sample answer: The repeated "stopped" marks the end of a long struggle: "In this hour, Siddhartha stopped fighting his fate, stopped suffering." (Om, paragraph 20). "In this hour" fixes the moment exactly. A competing reading calls this mere resignation. Yet the next sentences speak of cheerfulness and sympathy, so it is acceptance, not defeat.

396. [short · synthesis · DOK 4] Close reading: how do the diction and syntax of "Time is not real, Govinda, I have experienced this often and often again." (Govinda, paragraph 19) shape its meaning? Consider a second, competing reading.

Sample answer: The claim rests on experience, not argument: "Time is not real, Govinda, I have experienced this often and often again." (Govinda, paragraph 19). The repeated "often" adds weight. A competing reading calls this mystical nonsense. Yet the river taught him the present moment, so the claim fits his life.

397. [short · synthesis · DOK 4] Close reading: how do the diction and syntax of "I know that I am in agreement with Gotama." (Govinda, paragraph 32) shape its meaning? Consider a second, competing reading.

Sample answer: The short, firm sentence resolves a seeming quarrel: "I know that I am in agreement with Gotama." (Govinda, paragraph 32). "I know" claims certainty, and "agreement" answers Govinda's charge of contradiction. A competing reading says Siddhartha simply ignores the Buddha's words. Yet he looks to Gotama's life, where love is plain, so the agreement is real.

398. [short · synthesis · DOK 4] Synthesis: trace how the search for the self develops from the opening of "The Son of the Brahmin" to its ending. Use one quotation from each part. Address one competing reading and answer it.

Sample answer: The chapter moves from received knowledge to a departure his father blesses. At the opening he seems to have it already: "He already knew to feel Atman in the depths of his being, indestructible, one with the universe." (The Son of the Brahmin, paragraph 1). At the end, his father says, "When you'll have found blissfulness in the forest, then come back and teach me to be blissful" (The Son of the Brahmin, paragraph 49). A competing reading calls the ending a rebellion won by stubbornness, since he stands all night until his father gives in. But the father's words make the search a shared hope, "teach me," not a defeat. The search for the self begins in received knowledge and ends with his father's blessing.

399. [short · synthesis · DOK 4] Close reading: how do the diction and syntax of "Were the gods not creations, created like me and you, subject to time, mortal?" (The Son of the Brahmin, paragraph 8) shape its meaning? Consider a second, competing reading.

Sample answer: The question piles up words of limitation: "Were the gods not creations, created like me and you, subject to time, mortal?" (The Son of the Brahmin, paragraph 8). "Created" and "mortal" bring the gods down to human level. A competing reading hears disbelief. Yet Siddhartha is seeking something higher, the Atman, so his doubt is part of devotion.

400. [short · synthesis · DOK 4] Close reading: how do the diction and syntax of "his glance and half of a smile remained forever etched in Siddhartha's memory." (Gotama, paragraph 43) shape its meaning? Consider a second, competing reading.

Sample answer: The farewell is reduced to a small detail: "his glance and half of a smile remained forever etched in Siddhartha's memory." (Gotama, paragraph 43). "Half of a smile" is modest, yet "forever etched" makes it permanent, as if cut in stone; the sentence holds the greatest teacher in a single look rather than in words. A competing reading says Siddhartha keeps only an image because he rejected the teaching; but that is the point: what stays is the lived presence, not the doctrine.

401. [mc · recall · DOK 1] What does Siddhartha's father keep asking him during the night?

A. Why he hates his whole family

B. Where Govinda has gone

C. Whether he is hungry

D. What he is waiting for

Key: D (What he is waiting for)

402. [fill · recall · DOK 1] Complete the quotation from By the River, paragraph 9: “By the foot of the coconut tree, Siddhartha _____” Word bank: galloped, swam, collapsed, flew

Key: collapsed

403. [mc · recall · DOK 1] In the line “Govinda had aged, he too, but still his face bore the same features, expressed zeal, faithfulness, searching, timidness.”, what does “zeal” most nearly mean?

A. eager devotion

B. cold, quiet anger

C. deep, heavy sleep

D. idle boredom

Key: A (eager devotion)

404. [mc · recall · DOK 1] In the line “How did I hate this world of the rich, of those who revel in fine food, of the gamblers!”, what does “revel” most nearly mean?

A. take great delight

B. refuse firmly

C. complain loudly

D. work hard at

Key: A (take great delight)

405. [mc · recall · DOK 1] Siddhartha applies the river’s lesson about time to his own life in The Ferryman. What does he conclude?

A. He has wasted the years he spent in the city.

B. Only the future can still be changed by him.

C. He must hurry before his life runs out.

D. His boyhood, manhood and old age were never truly apart.

Key: D (His boyhood, manhood and old age were never truly apart.)

406. [mc · recall · DOK 1] In the line “With a thousand eyes, the river looked at him, with green ones, with white ones, with crystal ones”, what does “crystal” most nearly mean?

A. muddy and brown

B. dark and deep

C. clear and sparkling

D. hot, red and burning

Key: C (clear and sparkling)

407. [fill · recall · DOK 1] Fill in the blank with the word that fits. Vasudeva has just said, “You will, so I hope, be my guest today as well and sleep in my hut.” Then: “Gratefully, he accepted Vasudeva’s _____.” Word bank: money, invitation, warning, river

Key: invitation

408. [fill · recall · DOK 1] Complete the quotation from The Son of the Brahmin, paragraph 47: “Then his father realized that even now Siddhartha no longer _____ with him in his home, that he had already left him.”

Key: dwelt

409. [mc · recall · DOK 1] In the line "almost naked, scorched by the sun, surrounded by loneliness", what does "scorched" most nearly mean?

A. burned on the surface

B. soaked through

C. frozen stiff

D. worn thin

Key: A (burned on the surface)

410. [mc · recall · DOK 1] What does Siddhartha ask about the gods in the opening chapter?

A. Whether they will grant him wealth

B. Whether they live in the river

C. Whether they too are created and mortal

D. Whether they speak through his own father

Key: C (Whether they too are created and mortal)

411. [mc · inference · DOK 2] What does the wording of this passage suggest about Siddhartha's resolve? "Early tomorrow morning, my friend, Siddhartha will go to the Samanas. He will become a Samana." (The Son of the Brahmin, paragraph 17)

A. He is asking Govinda for advice before he decides.

B. He doubts that he can endure the Samanas' hard life.

C. The flat future tense treats leaving as already settled.

D. He plans to come back home within a few days.

Key: C (The flat future tense treats leaving as already settled.)

412. [mc · inference · DOK 2] What does this passage most clearly show? "Siddhartha has always obeyed his father." (The Son of the Brahmin, paragraph 44)

A. He plans to stay at home

B. He is afraid of his father

C. He presents his leaving as obedience

D. He has given up his plan to leave home

Key: C (He presents his leaving as obedience)

413. [mc · inference · DOK 2] What does this passage most clearly show? "Govinda had become a monk, and a thousand monks were his brothers" (Awakening, paragraph 11)

A. Govinda has become the leader of the Buddha's monks.

B. Others belong somewhere, while Siddhartha stands alone.

C. Siddhartha regrets that he did not join the thousand monks himself.

D. The monks have turned Govinda against his friend.

Key: B (Others belong somewhere, while Siddhartha stands alone.)

414. [short · inference · DOK 4] What can you infer from this line? "He was a feared gambler, few dared to take him on" (Sansara, paragraph 6) Build a short argument from it: trace the idea across at least three chapters, weigh one competing reading, and defend your position with evidence from each.

Sample answer: Gambling shows how far he has fallen into the game of the world. The evidence is "He was a feared gambler, few dared to take him on" (Sansara, paragraph 6). Earlier business was only "a game, the rules of which he tried hard to learn precisely" (With the Childlike People, paragraph 28). Together the passages show the light game of his first years hardening into the compulsive game of the gambler. By the River ends the game: "I went and learned the art of love with Kamala, learned trading with Kamaswami, piled up money, wasted money" (By the River, paragraph 42). A competing reading treats his gambling as mastery, since he is feared and wins. But across With the Childlike People, Sansara and By the River the game moves from detachment to compulsion to loss, so his fearsome skill is a sign of capture.

415. [mc · inference · DOK 2] What does this passage most clearly show? "Things were going downhill with him, and now he was again facing the world void and naked and stupid." (By the River, paragraph 40)

A. He must begin again from nothing

B. He is ashamed and wants to hide

C. He plans to return to Kamala

D. He blames Govinda for his downfall

Key: A (He must begin again from nothing)

416. [short · inference · DOK 4] What can you infer from this line? "that the river is everywhere at once, at the source and at the mouth, at the waterfall, at the ferry, at the rapids, in the sea, in the mountains, everywhere at once" (The Ferryman, paragraph 34) Build a short argument from it: trace the idea across at least three chapters, weigh one competing reading, and defend your position with evidence from each.

Sample answer: Siddhartha learns from the river that time is not real. The evidence is "that the river is everywhere at once, at the source and at the mouth, at the waterfall, at the ferry, at the rapids, in the sea, in the mountains, everywhere at once" (The Ferryman, paragraph 34). Later Siddhartha turns this into a teaching for Govinda: "The opposite of every truth is just as true!" (Govinda, paragraph 19). Together the passages show the river's unity of places growing into his belief in the unity of opposites. In Om the same oneness appears in a face: "harmony, knowledge of the eternal perfection of the world, smiling, oneness" (Om, paragraph 3). A competing reading takes the river passage as plain geography, a list of where the water runs. But across The Ferryman, Om and Govinda the river's spread in space becomes the oneness of a face and then the unity of opposites, so the line is about time and unity, not places.

417. [mc · inference · DOK 2] What does this passage most clearly show? "the same pain was suffered over and over again" (Om, paragraph 6)

A. Pain soon fades on its own

B. The river cures pain at once

C. Suffering belongs to the old and the weary

D. Unresolved suffering keeps returning

Key: D (Unresolved suffering keeps returning)

418. [short · inference · DOK 3] What can you infer from this line? "Nevertheless, he felt at the same time, it was not worthless, it was necessary, came from the essence of his own being." (The Son, paragraph 18) Answer by connecting it to one other chapter: quote a second passage and explain how the two passages together develop the idea.

Sample answer: Even his foolish love seems right to him: "Nevertheless, he felt at the same time, it was not worthless, it was necessary, came from the essence of his own being." (The Son, paragraph 18). "Necessary" suggests the pain is part of his path. It connects to Om: "His wound blossomed, his suffering was shining, his self had flown into the oneness." (Om, paragraph 19): the necessary wound finally blossoms into understanding.

419. [mc · inference · DOK 2] What does this passage most clearly show? "Aren't you able to do anything else but thinking, fasting, making poetry?" (Kamala, paragraph 53)

A. Kamala praises his poems

B. Kamala wants to be a Samana

C. Kamala doubts his skills are of use

D. Kamala is angry at his rudeness to her

Key: C (Kamala doubts his skills are of use)

420. [mc · analysis · DOK 3] Which literary element does this describe in "With the Samanas"? Siddhartha's doubts grow while he practises; he argues that each exercise is only a flight from the self.

A. Imagery

B. Conflict

C. Setting

D. Allusion

Key: B (Conflict)

421. [short · analysis · DOK 3] Claim: Siddhartha rejects the Samanas because their techniques escape the self rather than understanding it. Explain how this evidence supports the claim: "find only a short numbing of the senses in my exercises" (With the Samanas, paragraph 15).

Sample answer: The evidence supports the claim: Siddhartha says he can "find only a short numbing of the senses in my exercises" (With the Samanas, paragraph 15). "Numbing" means dulling the senses, not seeing more clearly, and "short" shows the escape does not last. The exercises only switch the self off for a while, so they cannot lead him to understand it.

422. [short · analysis · DOK 3] Analyze the word choice in "He pondered about this sensation, which filled him completely, as he was slowly walking along." (Awakening, paragraph 1). Pick two words and explain what they suggest.

Sample answer: Siddhartha is absorbed by a new feeling after leaving the Buddha. The evidence is "He pondered about this sensation, which filled him completely, as he was slowly walking along." (Awakening, paragraph 1). "Pondered" shows careful thought, and "completely" shows that the feeling takes over his whole being.

423. [short · analysis · DOK 3] Claim: Siddhartha brings his Samana calm into the world of trade. Explain how this evidence supports the claim: "It seemed indeed, as if he did not care about the business." (With the Childlike People, paragraph 33)

Sample answer: The evidence supports the claim because Siddhartha meets trade without anxiety: "It seemed indeed, as if he did not care about the business." (With the Childlike People, paragraph 33). The phrase "did not care" shows the detachment he learned as a Samana, which lets him stay calm where others worry.

424. [mc · analysis · DOK 3] Which literary element does this describe in "With the Childlike People"? Kamala's supple body is compared to a jaguar and to the bow of a hunter.

A. Simile

B. Flashback

C. Irony

D. Onomatopoeia

Key: A (Simile)

425. [short · analysis · DOK 3] Analyze the word choice in "Wonderful hours he spent with the beautiful and smart artist, became her student, her lover, her friend." (With the Childlike People, paragraph 29). Pick two words and explain what they suggest.

Sample answer: Kamala becomes everything to Siddhartha in the city. The evidence is "Wonderful hours he spent with the beautiful and smart artist, became her student, her lover, her friend." (With the Childlike People, paragraph 29). Calling her an "artist" honours her skill in love, and the rising list from "student" to "friend" shows their bond deepening.

426. [short · analysis · DOK 3] Analyze the word choice in "He smiled tiredly, shook himself, and bid his farewell to these things." (Sansara, paragraph 15). Pick two words and explain what they suggest.
Sample answer: Siddhartha leaves his riches with weary calm. The evidence is "He smiled tiredly, shook himself, and bid his farewell to these things." (Sansara, paragraph 15). "Tiredly" shows exhaustion with his worldly life, and "shook himself" suggests throwing off something that clung to him.

427. [mc · analysis · DOK 3] Which literary element does this describe in "By the River"? The river where he meant to end his life becomes the place of his rebirth.

A. Rhyme
B. Irony
C. Onomatopoeia
D. Alliteration

Key: B (Irony)

428. [short · analysis · DOK 3] Analyze the word choice in "I'm wearing a rich man's clothes, you've seen this quite right." (By the River, paragraph 31). Pick two words and explain what they suggest.
Sample answer: Siddhartha admits his worldly past without shame. The evidence is "I'm wearing a rich man's clothes, you've seen this quite right." (By the River, paragraph 31). "Rich man's clothes" names the life he has left, and "quite right" shows calm honesty toward Govinda.

429. [short · analysis · DOK 3] Claim: Vasudeva's wisdom lies in listening, not in learning. Explain how this evidence supports the claim: "See, I'm no learned man, I have no special skill in speaking, I also have no special skill in thinking." (The Ferryman, paragraph 29)
Sample answer: The evidence supports the claim because Vasudeva denies the usual signs of wisdom: "See, I'm no learned man, I have no special skill in speaking, I also have no special skill in thinking." (The Ferryman, paragraph 29). By rejecting "speaking" and "thinking," he leaves listening as his true gift.

430. [mc · analysis · DOK 3] Which literary element does this describe in "The Ferryman"? Kamala's wound has turned black and her body is swollen as the poison works.

A. Flashback
B. Rhyme
C. Allusion
D. Imagery

Key: D (Imagery)

431. [short · analysis · DOK 3] Analyze the word choice in "And he sat and listened, in the dust of the road, listened to his heart, beating tiredly and sadly, waited for a voice." (The Son, paragraph 34). Pick two words and explain what they suggest.
Sample answer: Siddhartha turns his grief into patient listening. The evidence is "And he sat and listened, in the dust of the road, listened to his heart, beating tiredly and sadly, waited for a voice." (The Son, paragraph 34). "Dust" shows how low he has sunk, and "tiredly and sadly" give his heartbeat the rhythm of mourning.

432. [short · analysis · DOK 3] Analyze the word choice in "they have no hardness, no softness, no colours, no edges, no smell, no taste, they have nothing but words" (Govinda, paragraph 26). Pick two words and explain what they suggest.
Sample answer: Siddhartha finds teachings empty compared with things. The evidence is "they have no hardness, no softness, no colours, no edges, no smell, no taste, they have nothing but words" (Govinda, paragraph 26). "Hardness" and "taste" name physical qualities, and "nothing but words" shows how thin teachings seem beside the world.

433. [short · synthesis · DOK 4] Close reading: how do the diction and syntax of "Arrow-fast he read in Govinda's soul, read the fear, read the submission." (The Son of the Brahmin, paragraph 20) shape its meaning? Consider a second, competing reading.

Sample answer: The repeated verb shows how easily Siddhartha sees into his friend: "Arrow-fast he read in Govinda's soul, read the fear, read the submission." (The Son of the Brahmin, paragraph 20). "Arrow-fast" links his insight to the arrow of the Om verse, and the list moves from "fear" to "submission." A competing reading finds Siddhartha cold, judging his friend. Yet the moment also shows that Govinda depends on him, which explains why he will follow.

434. [short · synthesis · DOK 4] Synthesis: trace how Siddhartha's determination develops from the opening of "The Son of the Brahmin" to its ending. Use one quotation from each part. Address one competing reading and answer it.

Sample answer: Siddhartha's determination moves from a stated plan to a carried-out act. At the opening he says: "Tomorrow, at daybreak I will begin the life of the Samanas." (The Son of the Brahmin, paragraph 21). At the ending, "He put his limbs back under control, bowed to his father, and went to his mother to do as his father had said." (The Son of the Brahmin, paragraph 50). A competing reading says the night of standing was mere stubbornness. Yet his final bow shows respect, so his will is firm without being cruel.

435. [short · synthesis · DOK 4] Close reading: how do the diction and syntax of "But the most important thing, the path of paths, we will not find." (With the Samanas, paragraph 20) shape its meaning? Consider a second, competing reading.

Sample answer: The phrase "the path of paths" names the highest goal: "But the most important thing, the path of paths, we will not find." (With the Samanas, paragraph 20). Placing "we will not find" at the end makes the failure final. A competing reading calls this impatience. Yet his doubt drives him to seek the Buddha, so it moves the story forward.

436. [short · synthesis · DOK 4] Close reading: how do the diction and syntax of "Siddhartha sat upright and learned to breathe sparingly, learned to get along with only few breaths, learned to stop breathing." (With the Samanas, paragraph 5) shape its meaning? Consider a second, competing reading.

Sample answer: The repeated "learned" shows mastery growing step by step: "Siddhartha sat upright and learned to breathe sparingly, learned to get along with only few breaths, learned to stop breathing." (With the Samanas, paragraph 5). The list ends in "stop breathing," the edge of life itself. A competing reading admires the skill. Yet the chapter shows such feats lead away from, not toward, the self.

437. [short · synthesis · DOK 4] Close reading: how do the diction and syntax of "I do not want to lower my glance before any other, not before any other." (Gotama, paragraph 45) shape its meaning? Consider a second, competing reading.

Sample answer: The repetition makes a vow: "I do not want to lower my glance before any other, not before any other." (Gotama, paragraph 45). Lowering the glance stands for submission, and the doubled "not before any other" closes every exception. A competing reading sees pride, a young man refusing all teachers out of self-regard. Yet the sentence before it gives the reason: "I saw a man, Siddhartha thought, a single man, before whom I would have to lower my glance" (Gotama, paragraph 45). The vow comes from reverence for Gotama, and the next sentence, "No teachings will entice me any more," shows that he refuses teachings, not the man.

438. [short · synthesis · DOK 4] Close reading: how do the diction and syntax of "Delightedly, Govinda listened and wanted to ask and hear much more." (Gotama, paragraph 7) shape its meaning? Consider a second, competing reading.

Sample answer: The opening adverb sets Govinda's eager mood: "Delightedly, Govinda listened and wanted to ask and hear much more." (Gotama, paragraph 7). "Ask and hear much more" shows hunger for teaching. A competing reading admires his openness. Yet it also foreshadows his choice to take refuge in a teacher, the path Siddhartha refuses.

439. [short · synthesis · DOK 4] Close reading: how do the diction and syntax of "He felt: This had been the last tremor of the awakening, the last struggle of this birth." (Awakening, paragraph 12) shape its meaning? Consider a second, competing reading.

Sample answer: The colon introduces his own judgment: "He felt: This had been the last tremor of the awakening, the last struggle of this birth." (Awakening, paragraph 12). "Tremor" and "struggle" make awakening sound physical, like an earthquake or labour. A competing reading says the pain of loneliness has only begun. Yet calling it the "last" shows that he sees it as the end of a birth, not a defeat.

440. [short · synthesis · DOK 4] Close reading: how do the diction and syntax of "Never again I want to turn my eyes to the ground, when I'm coming across a beautiful woman." (Kamala, paragraph 27) shape its meaning? Consider a second, competing reading.

Sample answer: Siddhartha's vow reverses his Samana habit: "Never again I want to turn my eyes to the ground, when I'm coming across a beautiful woman." (Kamala, paragraph 27). The emphatic "Never again" opens the sentence, and lowered eyes stand for self-denial. A competing reading sees only lust in the vow. Yet it answers his old Samana habit of turning his eyes to the ground, so the line also marks a choice to meet the world of the senses openly instead of fleeing it.

441. [short · synthesis · DOK 4] Close reading: how do the diction and syntax of "Kamala loudly clapped her hands, so that the golden bracelets clanged." (Kamala, paragraph 48) shape its meaning? Consider a second, competing reading.

Sample answer: Sound and gold show Kamala's delight: "Kamala loudly clapped her hands, so that the golden bracelets clanged." (Kamala, paragraph 48). "Loudly" and "clanged" make her joy noisy, and "golden" marks her wealth. A competing reading sees vanity, Kamala showing off her gold. Yet she claps in answer to his poem, and the noisy "clanged" breaks the formal mood with real pleasure, so the gesture shows delight in his gift, not display.

442. [short · synthesis · DOK 4] Close reading: how do the diction and syntax of "I haven't learned to think from you, my dear Kamaswami, you ought to be the one seeking to learn from me." (With the Childlike People, paragraph 36) shape its meaning? Consider a second, competing reading.

Sample answer: The sentence reverses master and servant: "I haven't learned to think from you, my dear Kamaswami, you ought to be the one seeking to learn from me." (With the Childlike People, paragraph 36). The polite "my dear Kamaswami" softens a blunt claim of superiority, and the shift from "learned" to "seeking to learn" turns the merchant into the would-be pupil. A competing reading hears arrogance from a guest who lives in Kamaswami's house. Yet in paragraph 35 Siddhartha has just shown that hurry and annoyance would have lost both "time and money," so the boast rests on a real difference in temper, not on pride alone.

443. [short · synthesis · DOK 4] Close reading: how do the diction and syntax of "For a long time, Siddhartha had lived the life of the world and of lust, though without being a part of it." (Sansara, paragraph 1) shape its meaning? Consider a second, competing reading.

Sample answer: The final clause holds back the whole sentence: "For a long time, Siddhartha had lived the life of the world and of lust, though without being a part of it." (Sansara, paragraph 1). "Though without being a part" shows his detachment. A competing reading praises this distance. Yet the chapter shows the distance slowly failing as the world takes hold of him.

444. [short · synthesis · DOK 4] Close reading: how do the diction and syntax of "I had to spend many years losing my spirit, to unlearn thinking again, to forget the oneness." (By the River, paragraph 42) shape its meaning? Consider a second, competing reading.

Sample answer: The series of infinitives makes loss sound necessary: "I had to spend many years losing my spirit, to unlearn thinking again, to forget the oneness." (By the River, paragraph 42). "Had to" presents the worldly years as required, and

"unlearn" reverses his old training. A competing reading says he is excusing his failures. Yet the chapter shows that only after forgetting could he find oneness anew.

445. [short · synthesis · DOK 4] Close reading: how do the diction and syntax of "He understood and grasped it not, only felt some idea of it stirring, a distant memory, divine voices." (The Ferryman, paragraph 3) shape its meaning? Consider a second, competing reading.

Sample answer: The inverted "grasped it not" admits the limits of thought: "He understood and grasped it not, only felt some idea of it stirring, a distant memory, divine voices." (The Ferryman, paragraph 3). "Felt" and "stirring" replace knowing with sensing. A competing reading sees confusion: he "grasped it not." Yet the sentence moves from not grasping to feeling "a distant memory, divine voices," which is the felt, wordless understanding the river will go on to teach him.

446. [short · synthesis · DOK 4] Close reading: how do the diction and syntax of "Alas, Siddhartha, I see you suffering, but you're suffering a pain at which one would like to laugh, at which you'll soon laugh for yourself." (The Son, paragraph 25) shape its meaning? Consider a second, competing reading.

Sample answer: Vasudeva's sentence moves from sympathy to promise: "Alas, Siddhartha, I see you suffering, but you're suffering a pain at which one would like to laugh, at which you'll soon laugh for yourself." (The Son, paragraph 25). "Alas" shows pity, while "soon laugh" looks ahead. A competing reading calls this mockery. Yet the river's laughter in Om proves him right.

447. [short · synthesis · DOK 4] Close reading: how do the diction and syntax of "Not by itself, this flame would go out." (Om, paragraph 4) shape its meaning? Consider a second, competing reading.

Sample answer: The inverted "Not by itself" stresses that the pain needs help: "Not by itself, this flame would go out." (Om, paragraph 4). The "flame" image makes his longing burn. A competing reading sees hopelessness: the flame of pain will burn forever. Yet "Not by itself" leaves room for help from outside, and the chapter brings it when he confesses to Vasudeva and hears the river's voices, so the line prepares healing through listening.

448. [short · synthesis · DOK 4] Close reading: how do the diction and syntax of "Alas, the wound was not blossoming yet, his heart was still fighting his fate" (Om, paragraph 7) shape its meaning? Consider a second, competing reading.

Sample answer: The sigh "Alas" opens on unfinished healing: "Alas, the wound was not blossoming yet, his heart was still fighting his fate" (Om, paragraph 7). "Not yet" and "still" both point forward in time. A competing reading takes the wound as proof that grief has beaten him, since "his heart was still fighting his fate." Yet the sentence names the fight itself as the obstacle, and "not blossoming yet" promises an end to it: later in the chapter, when he stops fighting, "His wound blossomed" (Om, paragraph 19), so the image turns suffering into the ground of wisdom.

449. [short · synthesis · DOK 4] Close reading: how do the diction and syntax of "There is no thing which would be Nirvana; there is just the word Nirvana." (Govinda, paragraph 26) shape its meaning? Consider a second, competing reading.

Sample answer: The semicolon sets thing against word: "There is no thing which would be Nirvana; there is just the word Nirvana." (Govinda, paragraph 26). Repeating "Nirvana" on both sides shows the name without the thing. A competing reading hears denial of the Buddha's goal. Yet Siddhartha attacks only words, so the line points to experience beyond them.

450. [short · synthesis · DOK 4] Close reading: how do the diction and syntax of "The world, my friend Govinda, is not imperfect, or on a slow path towards perfection: no, it is perfect in every moment" (Govinda, paragraph 21) shape its meaning? Consider a second, competing reading.

Sample answer: The colon and the "no" reverse a common view: "The world, my friend Govinda, is not imperfect, or on a slow path towards perfection: no, it is perfect in every moment" (Govinda, paragraph 21). "Every moment" replaces progress with presence. A competing reading says this excuses evil: if the world is already perfect, the robber needs no change. Yet the same paragraph answers the objection: "all sin already carries the divine forgiveness in itself" and "in the robber and dice-gambler, the Buddha is waiting" (Govinda, paragraph 21). Siddhartha does not deny that sin is sin; he denies that anyone can judge how far another has come, so the claim asks for reverence toward the sinner, not approval of the sin.

Rigor version	Items (in order)	Mix
HS Sophomore	1, 2, 3, 4, 5, 6, 7, 8, 9, 10, 11, 12, 13, 14, 15, 16, 17, 18, 19, 20, 21, 22, 23, 24, 25, 26, 27, 28, 29, 30, 31, 32, 33, 34, 35, 36, 37, 38, 39, 40, 41, 42, 43, 44, 45, 46, 47, 48, 49, 50	recall 22, inference 13, analysis 9, synthesis 6
HS Junior	51, 52, 53, 54, 55, 56, 57, 58, 59, 60, 61, 62, 63, 64, 65, 66, 67, 68, 69, 70, 71, 72, 73, 74, 75, 76, 77, 78, 79, 80, 81, 82, 83, 84, 85, 86, 87, 88, 89, 90, 91, 92, 93, 94, 95, 96, 97, 98, 99, 100	recall 20, inference 12, analysis 12, synthesis 6
HS Senior	101, 102, 103, 104, 105, 106, 107, 108, 109, 110, 111, 112, 113, 114, 115, 116, 117, 118, 119, 120, 121, 122, 123, 124, 125, 126, 127, 128, 129, 130, 131, 132, 133, 134, 135, 136, 137, 138, 139, 140, 141, 142, 143, 144, 145, 146, 147, 148, 149, 150	recall 15, inference 14, analysis 12, synthesis 9
AP	151, 152, 153, 154, 155, 156, 157, 158, 159, 160, 161, 162, 163, 164, 165, 166, 167, 168, 169, 170, 171, 172, 173, 174, 175, 176, 177, 178, 179, 180, 181, 182, 183, 184, 185, 186, 187, 188, 189, 190, 191, 192, 193, 194, 195, 196, 197, 198, 199, 200	recall 12, inference 20, analysis 13, synthesis 5
College Freshman	201, 202, 203, 204, 205, 206, 207, 208, 209, 210, 211, 212, 213, 214, 215, 216, 217, 218, 219, 220, 221, 222, 223, 224, 225, 226, 227, 228, 229, 230, 231, 232, 233, 234, 235, 236, 237, 238, 239, 240, 241, 242, 243, 244, 245, 246, 247, 248, 249, 250	recall 12, inference 19, analysis 11, synthesis 8
College Sophomore	251, 252, 253, 254, 255, 256, 257, 258, 259, 260, 261, 262, 263, 264, 265, 266, 267, 268, 269, 270, 271, 272, 273, 274, 275, 276, 277, 278, 279, 280, 281, 282, 283, 284, 285, 286, 287, 288, 289, 290, 291, 292, 293, 294, 295, 296, 297, 298, 299, 300	recall 12, inference 15, analysis 13, synthesis 10
College Junior	301, 302, 303, 304, 305, 306, 307, 308, 309, 310, 311, 312, 313, 314, 315, 316, 317, 318, 319, 320, 321, 322, 323, 324, 325, 326, 327, 328, 329, 330, 331, 332, 333, 334, 335, 336, 337, 338, 339, 340, 341, 342, 343, 344, 345, 346, 347, 348, 349, 350	recall 11, inference 16, analysis 14, synthesis 9
College Senior	351, 352, 353, 354, 355, 356, 357, 358, 359, 360, 361, 362, 363, 364, 365, 366, 367, 368, 369, 370, 371, 372, 373, 374, 375, 376, 377, 378, 379, 380, 381, 382, 383, 384, 385, 386, 387, 388, 389, 390, 391, 392, 393, 394, 395, 396, 397, 398, 399, 400	recall 11, inference 5, analysis 13, synthesis 21
Graduate / PhD	401, 402, 403, 404, 405, 406, 407, 408, 409, 410, 411, 412, 413, 414, 415, 416, 417, 418, 419, 420, 421, 422, 423, 424, 425, 426, 427, 428, 429, 430, 431, 432, 433, 434, 435, 436, 437, 438, 439, 440, 441, 442, 443, 444, 445, 446, 447, 448, 449, 450	recall 10, inference 9, analysis 13, synthesis 18

Final paper

Siddhartha: final paper (formal literary analysis). Choose one prompt.

1. Analyze how Hermann Hesse develops the search for self-knowledge across Siddhartha. Trace the idea through at least three moments (beginning, middle and end) and argue what the ending finally suggests.
2. Choose one recurring symbol, image or motif in Siddhartha and argue how its meaning changes over the novel and why that change matters to experience versus teaching.
3. Analyze a central character's choices in Siddhartha. Argue whether the novel judges that character, and how its structure or point of view shapes your answer.
4. Two readers disagree about whether the novel finally endorses Siddhartha's vision of the unity of all things or presents it as one man's experience. Weigh both readings and argue for one, answering the strongest objection.

Length: Scaffolded support 500-700 words; HS Freshman 700-900 words; HS Sophomore 900-1,100 words; HS Junior 1,000-1,300 words; HS Senior 1,200-1,500 words; AP 1,300-1,600 words; College Freshman 1,500-2,000 words; College Sophomore 2,000-2,500 words; College Junior 2,500-3,000 words; College Senior 3,000-4,000 words; Graduate / PhD 4,000-6,000 words Evidence requirement: at least 6 quotations from at least three sections, from the beginning, middle and end. Quote the reading text exactly and cite the chapter and paragraph (APA style, as in the lesson references). HS Senior and above: one scholarly or historical source; College Sophomore and above: two, cited in APA.

Criterion	Points	Descriptor	Exemplary	Proficient	Developing	Beginning
Thesis	20	A specific, arguable claim that answers the prompt and organizes the paper.	Specific, arguable and precise; it organizes every section.	Clear and arguable, but broad in places.	States a topic or a summary more than an argument.	Missing, or restates the prompt.
Evidence	25	Well-chosen, accurately quoted and cited passages from across the work, meeting the evidence requirement.	Accurate, well-chosen quotations from across the work, all cited; meets the requirement.	Accurate and cited, but clustered in one part of the work.	Too few quotations, or some inaccurate or uncited.	Little or no quoted evidence.
Analysis	30	Explains how language, structure and literary elements create meaning; goes beyond summary.	Explains how specific words, structure and devices create meaning; weighs a competing reading.	Explains the evidence, with some close reading.	Mostly summary; the link to the claim is asserted, not shown.	Summary only.

Organization	15	Logical progression, clear topic sentences and transitions; introduction and conclusion frame the argument.	Each paragraph advances the argument; transitions show logic.	Logical order with minor jumps.	Order is loose; paragraphs repeat or drift.	No discernible structure.
Style and conventions	10	Formal academic voice, present tense for literature, correct grammar and APA format.	Formal, precise, present tense; APA format; virtually error-free.	Formal with a few errors that do not obscure meaning.	Informal or error-prone in ways that distract.	Errors obscure meaning.

Exemplar paragraph: Hesse makes Siddhartha's departure grow out of a hunger inside a life that lacks nothing, so the novel's search begins as a question no outside teacher can answer. Everyone loves the Brahmin's son, yet the narrator turns at once to what that love cannot reach: "But where, where was this self, this innermost part, this ultimate part?" (The Son of the Brahmin, paragraph 8). The doubled "where, where" makes the question urgent rather than scholarly, and the three nouns narrow from "self" to "innermost" to "ultimate," as if each answer the Brahmins offer only pushes the goal further in. Even his father, who "knew so much," is in Siddhartha's eyes "just a searching man, a thirsty man" (The Son of the Brahmin, paragraph 9). The search that will carry him through the Samanas, Gotama and Kamala is therefore set up as a search for what no teacher has, which is why, at the end of the novel, it can be answered only by experience.

Critical voice: "He has literally, once and more than once, stood on the magic borderland where everything is affirmed, where not only the remotest thought is true, but also the contrary of such thought." (Hermann Hesse, author (essay written 1919, while Siddhartha was in progress), Hermann Hesse, "Gedanken über Dostojewskis Idiot," in Blick ins Chaos (1920); English: "Thoughts on The Idiot of Dostoevsky," trans. Stephen Hudson, The Dial 73.2 (August 1922), pp. 199-204 (on Prince Myshkin); public domain). Author's-own-lens: Hesse says this of Dostoevsky's Myshkin, but it is the creed of "Govinda" ("the opposite of every truth is just as true"). Does the novel present this borderland as wisdom, or only as one man's experience? Objective: Final paper Prompt 4: weigh whether the novel endorses or criticizes its society's view of the unity of all things. Standards: Dual Credit (Indiana College Core): ICC-WC-1.1, ICC-WC-1.3, ICC-WC-1.4, ICC-WC-1.5

Critical voice: "Whosoever considers Spirit and Nature, Spirit and Freedom, Good and Evil as interchangeable, if only for a moment, is the deadliest foe of every order of civilization." (Hermann Hesse, author (essay written 1919, while Siddhartha was in progress), Hermann Hesse, "Gedanken über Dostojewskis Idiot," in Blick ins Chaos (1920); English: "Thoughts on The Idiot of Dostoevsky," trans. Stephen Hudson, The Dial 73.2 (August 1922), pp. 199-204; public domain). Objection to answer: Hesse states the society's fear himself. Does Siddhartha's final vision (the river, Govinda's kiss) make him civilization's "foe," or does the novel reject that charge? A ready-made counter-argument paragraph. Objective: Final paper Prompt 4: answer the strongest objection, namely that unity dissolves moral order. Standards: Dual Credit (Indiana College Core): ICC-WC-1.1, ICC-WC-1.3, ICC-WC-1.4, ICC-WC-1.5

Essay assignments

Essay: The search for self-knowledge

Scaffolded support (600 words; Dual Credit (Indiana College Core): ICC-WC-1.1, ICC-WC-1.3, ICC-WC-1.4, ICC-WC-1.5): Supported track: write a five-paragraph essay explaining what Siddhartha teaches about the search for self-knowledge. Use at least three quotations from passages your teacher selects from different parts of the book.

HS Freshman (800 words; Dual Credit (Indiana College Core): ICC-WC-1.1, ICC-WC-1.3, ICC-WC-1.4, ICC-WC-1.5): Write a multi-paragraph essay explaining how Hermann Hesse develops the search for self-knowledge in Siddhartha. Use evidence from the beginning, middle and end of the book.

HS Sophomore (1000 words; Dual Credit (Indiana College Core): ICC-WC-1.1, ICC-WC-1.3, ICC-WC-1.4, ICC-WC-1.5): Write an argumentative essay analyzing how Hermann Hesse develops the search for self-knowledge across Siddhartha. Trace the idea through at least three chapters and address a counterclaim.

HS Junior (1100 words; Dual Credit (Indiana College Core): ICC-WC-1.1, ICC-WC-1.3, ICC-WC-1.4, ICC-WC-1.5): Write an analytical essay on how the structure of Siddhartha (its order, turns and ending) shapes the meaning of the search for self-knowledge. Discuss at least one place where the book leaves the question open.

HS Senior (1200 words; Dual Credit (Indiana College Core): ICC-WC-1.1, ICC-WC-1.3, ICC-WC-1.4, ICC-WC-1.5): Write a sustained argument comparing two interpretations of the search for self-knowledge in Siddhartha. Weigh the evidence for each and defend the stronger reading in a mature, well-organized essay.

AP (1300 words; Dual Credit (Indiana College Core): ICC-WC-1.1, ICC-WC-1.3, ICC-WC-1.4, ICC-WC-1.5): Write a literary argument: develop a defensible thesis about how Hermann Hesse's choices in Siddhartha (a recurring element, structure and narration) shape a complex understanding of the search for self-knowledge, weigh at least one competing reading, and sustain commentary on well-chosen evidence. Do not merely summarize.

College Freshman (1600 words; Dual Credit (Indiana College Core): ICC-WC-1.5, ICC-WC-1.4, ICC-WC-1.7): Write a researched essay (4–6 pages) that places Siddhartha's treatment of the search for self-knowledge in its historical context, using at least two scholarly sources.

College Sophomore (2200 words; Dual Credit (Indiana College Core): ICC-WC-1.1, ICC-WC-1.3, ICC-WC-1.4, ICC-WC-1.5): Write a contextual essay (6–8 pages) on the search for self-knowledge in Siddhartha that reads the novel against its genre and period and engages two published critics. At this level students write ONE of the unit's essays (choose one theme), not all five.

College Junior (2800 words; Dual Credit (Indiana College Core): ICC-WC-1.1, ICC-WC-1.3, ICC-WC-1.4, ICC-WC-1.5): Write a theoretically informed essay (8–10 pages) on the search for self-knowledge in Siddhartha. Name your critical method, apply it closely, and acknowledge its limits. At this level students write ONE of the unit's essays (choose one theme), not all five.

College Senior (4000 words; Dual Credit (Indiana College Core): ICC-WC-1.1, ICC-WC-1.3, ICC-WC-1.4, ICC-WC-1.5): Write a research paper (12–15 pages) with an original argument about the search for self-knowledge in Siddhartha, engaging at least four scholarly sources in Chicago style. At this level students write ONE of the unit's essays (choose one theme), not all five.

Graduate / PhD (6000 words; Dual Credit (Indiana College Core): ICC-WC-1.1, ICC-WC-1.3, ICC-WC-1.4, ICC-WC-1.5): Write a seminar paper (15–20 pages) that intervenes in the critical conversation on the search for self-knowledge in Siddhartha, engaging the relevant scholarship and textual history. At this level students write ONE of the unit's essays (choose one theme), not all five.

Rubric: Claim · Evidence · Analysis · Organization · Conventions

Essay: Experience versus teaching

Scaffolded support (600 words; Dual Credit (Indiana College Core): ICC-WC-1.1, ICC-WC-1.3, ICC-WC-1.4, ICC-WC-1.5): Supported track: write a five-paragraph essay explaining what Siddhartha teaches about experience versus teaching. Use at least three quotations from passages your teacher selects from different parts of the book.

HS Freshman (800 words; Dual Credit (Indiana College Core): ICC-WC-1.1, ICC-WC-1.3, ICC-WC-1.4, ICC-WC-1.5): Write a multi-paragraph essay explaining how Hermann Hesse develops experience versus teaching in Siddhartha. Use evidence from the beginning, middle and end of the book.

HS Sophomore (1000 words; Dual Credit (Indiana College Core): ICC-WC-1.1, ICC-WC-1.3, ICC-WC-1.4, ICC-WC-1.5): Write an argumentative essay analyzing how Hermann Hesse develops experience versus teaching across Siddhartha. Trace the idea through at least three chapters and address a counterclaim.

HS Junior (1100 words; Dual Credit (Indiana College Core): ICC-WC-1.1, ICC-WC-1.3, ICC-WC-1.4, ICC-WC-1.5): Write an analytical essay on how the structure of Siddhartha (its order, turns and ending) shapes the meaning of experience versus teaching. Discuss at least one place where the book leaves the question open.

HS Senior (1200 words; Dual Credit (Indiana College Core): ICC-WC-1.1, ICC-WC-1.3, ICC-WC-1.4, ICC-WC-1.5): Write a sustained argument comparing two interpretations of experience versus teaching in Siddhartha. Weigh the evidence for each and defend the stronger reading in a mature, well-organized essay.

AP (1300 words; Dual Credit (Indiana College Core): ICC-WC-1.1, ICC-WC-1.3, ICC-WC-1.4, ICC-WC-1.5): Write a literary argument: develop a defensible thesis about how Hermann Hesse's choices in Siddhartha (a recurring element, structure and narration) shape a complex understanding of experience versus teaching, weigh at least one competing reading, and sustain commentary on well-chosen evidence. Do not merely summarize.

College Freshman (1600 words; Dual Credit (Indiana College Core): ICC-WC-1.5, ICC-WC-1.4, ICC-WC-1.7): Write a researched essay (4–6 pages) that places Siddhartha's treatment of experience versus teaching in its historical context, using at least two scholarly sources.

College Sophomore (2200 words; Dual Credit (Indiana College Core): ICC-WC-1.1, ICC-WC-1.3, ICC-WC-1.4, ICC-WC-1.5): Write a contextual essay (6–8 pages) on experience versus teaching in Siddhartha that reads the novel against its genre and period and engages two published critics. At this level students write ONE of the unit's essays (choose one theme), not all five.

College Junior (2800 words; Dual Credit (Indiana College Core): ICC-WC-1.1, ICC-WC-1.3, ICC-WC-1.4, ICC-WC-1.5): Write a theoretically informed essay (8–10 pages) on experience versus teaching in Siddhartha. Name your critical method, apply it closely, and acknowledge its limits. At this level students write ONE of the unit's essays (choose one theme), not all five.

College Senior (4000 words; Dual Credit (Indiana College Core): ICC-WC-1.1, ICC-WC-1.3, ICC-WC-1.4, ICC-WC-1.5): Write a research paper (12–15 pages) with an original argument about experience versus teaching in Siddhartha, engaging at least four scholarly sources in Chicago style. At this level students write ONE of the unit's essays (choose one theme), not all five.

Graduate / PhD (6000 words; Dual Credit (Indiana College Core): ICC-WC-1.1, ICC-WC-1.3, ICC-WC-1.4, ICC-WC-1.5): Write a seminar paper (15–20 pages) that intervenes in the critical conversation on experience versus teaching in Siddhartha, engaging the relevant scholarship and textual history. At this level students write ONE of the unit's essays (choose one theme), not all five.

Rubric: Claim · Evidence · Analysis · Organization · Conventions

Essay: The unity of all things

Scaffolded support (600 words; Dual Credit (Indiana College Core): ICC-WC-1.1, ICC-WC-1.3, ICC-WC-1.4, ICC-WC-1.5): Supported track: write a five-paragraph essay explaining what Siddhartha teaches about the unity of all things. Use at least three quotations from passages your teacher selects from different parts of the book.

HS Freshman (800 words; Dual Credit (Indiana College Core): ICC-WC-1.1, ICC-WC-1.3, ICC-WC-1.4, ICC-WC-1.5): Write a multi-paragraph essay explaining how Hermann Hesse develops the unity of all things in Siddhartha. Use evidence from the beginning, middle and end of the book.

HS Sophomore (1000 words; Dual Credit (Indiana College Core): ICC-WC-1.1, ICC-WC-1.3, ICC-WC-1.4, ICC-WC-1.5): Write an argumentative essay analyzing how Hermann Hesse develops the unity of all things across Siddhartha. Trace the idea through at least three chapters and address a counterclaim.

HS Junior (1100 words; Dual Credit (Indiana College Core): ICC-WC-1.1, ICC-WC-1.3, ICC-WC-1.4, ICC-WC-1.5): Write an analytical essay on how the structure of Siddhartha (its order, turns and ending) shapes the meaning of the unity of all things. Discuss at least one place where the book leaves the question open.

HS Senior (1200 words; Dual Credit (Indiana College Core): ICC-WC-1.1, ICC-WC-1.3, ICC-WC-1.4, ICC-WC-1.5): Write a sustained argument comparing two interpretations of the unity of all things in Siddhartha. Weigh the evidence for each and defend the stronger reading in a mature, well-organized essay.

AP (1300 words; Dual Credit (Indiana College Core): ICC-WC-1.1, ICC-WC-1.3, ICC-WC-1.4, ICC-WC-1.5): Write a literary argument: develop a defensible thesis about how Hermann Hesse's choices in Siddhartha (a recurring element, structure and narration) shape a complex understanding of the unity of all things, weigh at least one competing reading, and sustain commentary on well-chosen evidence. Do not merely summarize.

College Freshman (1600 words; Dual Credit (Indiana College Core): ICC-WC-1.5, ICC-WC-1.4, ICC-WC-1.7): Write a researched essay (4–6 pages) that places Siddhartha's treatment of the unity of all things in its historical context, using at least two scholarly sources.

College Sophomore (2200 words; Dual Credit (Indiana College Core): ICC-WC-1.1, ICC-WC-1.3, ICC-WC-1.4, ICC-WC-1.5): Write a contextual essay (6–8 pages) on the unity of all things in Siddhartha that reads the novel against its genre and period and engages two published critics. At this level students write ONE of the unit's essays (choose one theme), not all five.

College Junior (2800 words; Dual Credit (Indiana College Core): ICC-WC-1.1, ICC-WC-1.3, ICC-WC-1.4, ICC-WC-1.5): Write a theoretically informed essay (8–10 pages) on the unity of all things in Siddhartha. Name your critical method, apply it closely, and acknowledge its limits. At this level students write ONE of the unit's essays (choose one theme), not all five.

College Senior (4000 words; Dual Credit (Indiana College Core): ICC-WC-1.1, ICC-WC-1.3, ICC-WC-1.4, ICC-WC-1.5): Write a research paper (12–15 pages) with an original argument about the unity of all things in Siddhartha, engaging at least four scholarly sources in Chicago style. At this level students write ONE of the unit's essays (choose one theme), not all five.

Graduate / PhD (6000 words; Dual Credit (Indiana College Core): ICC-WC-1.1, ICC-WC-1.3, ICC-WC-1.4, ICC-WC-1.5): Write a seminar paper (15–20 pages) that intervenes in the critical conversation on the unity of all things in Siddhartha, engaging the relevant scholarship and textual history. At this level students write ONE of the unit's essays (choose one theme), not all five.

Rubric: Claim · Evidence · Analysis · Organization · Conventions

Essay: The river and time

Scaffolded support (600 words; Dual Credit (Indiana College Core): ICC-WC-1.1, ICC-WC-1.3, ICC-WC-1.4, ICC-WC-1.5): Supported track: write a five-paragraph essay explaining what Siddhartha teaches about the river and time. Use at least three quotations from passages your teacher selects from different parts of the book.

HS Freshman (800 words; Dual Credit (Indiana College Core): ICC-WC-1.1, ICC-WC-1.3, ICC-WC-1.4, ICC-WC-1.5): Write a multi-paragraph essay explaining how Hermann Hesse develops the river and time in Siddhartha. Use evidence from the beginning, middle and end of the book.

HS Sophomore (1000 words; Dual Credit (Indiana College Core): ICC-WC-1.1, ICC-WC-1.3, ICC-WC-1.4, ICC-WC-1.5): Write an argumentative essay analyzing how Hermann Hesse develops the river and time across Siddhartha. Trace the idea through at least three chapters and address a counterclaim.

HS Junior (1100 words; Dual Credit (Indiana College Core): ICC-WC-1.1, ICC-WC-1.3, ICC-WC-1.4, ICC-WC-1.5): Write an analytical essay on how the structure of Siddhartha (its order, turns and ending) shapes the meaning of the river and time. Discuss at least one place where the book leaves the question open.

HS Senior (1200 words; Dual Credit (Indiana College Core): ICC-WC-1.1, ICC-WC-1.3, ICC-WC-1.4, ICC-WC-1.5): Write a sustained argument comparing two interpretations of the river and time in Siddhartha. Weigh the evidence for each and defend the stronger reading in a mature, well-organized essay.

AP (1300 words; Dual Credit (Indiana College Core): ICC-WC-1.1, ICC-WC-1.3, ICC-WC-1.4, ICC-WC-1.5): Write a literary argument: develop a defensible thesis about how Hermann Hesse's choices in Siddhartha (a recurring element, structure and narration) shape a complex understanding of the river and time, weigh at least one competing reading, and sustain commentary on well-chosen evidence. Do not merely summarize.

College Freshman (1600 words; Dual Credit (Indiana College Core): ICC-WC-1.5, ICC-WC-1.4, ICC-WC-1.7): Write a researched essay (4–6 pages) that places Siddhartha's treatment of the river and time in its historical context, using at least two scholarly sources.

College Sophomore (2200 words; Dual Credit (Indiana College Core): ICC-WC-1.1, ICC-WC-1.3, ICC-WC-1.4, ICC-WC-1.5): Write a contextual essay (6–8 pages) on the river and time in Siddhartha that reads the novel against its genre and period and engages two published critics. At this level students write ONE of the unit's essays (choose one theme), not all five.

College Junior (2800 words; Dual Credit (Indiana College Core): ICC-WC-1.1, ICC-WC-1.3, ICC-WC-1.4, ICC-WC-1.5): Write a theoretically informed essay (8–10 pages) on the river and time in Siddhartha. Name your critical method, apply it closely, and acknowledge its limits. At this level students write ONE of the unit's essays (choose one theme), not all five.

College Senior (4000 words; Dual Credit (Indiana College Core): ICC-WC-1.1, ICC-WC-1.3, ICC-WC-1.4, ICC-WC-1.5): Write a research paper (12–15 pages) with an original argument about the river and time in Siddhartha, engaging at least four scholarly sources in Chicago style. At this level students write ONE of the unit's essays (choose one theme), not all five.

Graduate / PhD (6000 words; Dual Credit (Indiana College Core): ICC-WC-1.1, ICC-WC-1.3, ICC-WC-1.4, ICC-WC-1.5): Write a seminar paper (15–20 pages) that intervenes in the critical conversation on the river and time in Siddhartha, engaging the relevant scholarship and textual history. At this level students write ONE of the unit's essays (choose one theme), not all five.

Rubric: Claim · Evidence · Analysis · Organization · Conventions

Essay: Love and attachment

Scaffolded support (600 words; Dual Credit (Indiana College Core): ICC-WC-1.1, ICC-WC-1.3, ICC-WC-1.4, ICC-WC-1.5): Supported track: write a five-paragraph essay explaining what Siddhartha teaches about love and attachment. Use at least three quotations from passages your teacher selects from different parts of the book.

HS Freshman (800 words; Dual Credit (Indiana College Core): ICC-WC-1.1, ICC-WC-1.3, ICC-WC-1.4, ICC-WC-1.5): Write a multi-paragraph essay explaining how Hermann Hesse develops love and attachment in Siddhartha. Use evidence from the beginning, middle and end of the book.

HS Sophomore (1000 words; Dual Credit (Indiana College Core): ICC-WC-1.1, ICC-WC-1.3, ICC-WC-1.4, ICC-WC-1.5): Write an argumentative essay analyzing how Hermann Hesse develops love and attachment across Siddhartha. Trace the idea through at least three chapters and address a counterclaim.

HS Junior (1100 words; Dual Credit (Indiana College Core): ICC-WC-1.1, ICC-WC-1.3, ICC-WC-1.4, ICC-WC-1.5): Write an analytical essay on how the structure of Siddhartha (its order, turns and ending) shapes the meaning of love and attachment. Discuss at least one place where the book leaves the question open.

HS Senior (1200 words; Dual Credit (Indiana College Core): ICC-WC-1.1, ICC-WC-1.3, ICC-WC-1.4, ICC-WC-1.5): Write a sustained argument comparing two interpretations of love and attachment in Siddhartha. Weigh the evidence for each and defend the stronger reading in a mature, well-organized essay.

AP (1300 words; Dual Credit (Indiana College Core): ICC-WC-1.1, ICC-WC-1.3, ICC-WC-1.4, ICC-WC-1.5): Write a literary argument: develop a defensible thesis about how Hermann Hesse's choices in Siddhartha (a recurring element, structure and narration) shape a complex understanding of love and attachment, weigh at least one competing reading, and sustain commentary on well-chosen evidence. Do not merely summarize.

College Freshman (1600 words; Dual Credit (Indiana College Core): ICC-WC-1.5, ICC-WC-1.4, ICC-WC-1.7): Write a researched essay (4–6 pages) that places Siddhartha's treatment of love and attachment in its historical context, using at least two scholarly sources.

College Sophomore (2200 words; Dual Credit (Indiana College Core): ICC-WC-1.1, ICC-WC-1.3, ICC-WC-1.4, ICC-WC-1.5): Write a contextual essay (6–8 pages) on love and attachment in Siddhartha that reads the novel against its genre and period and engages two published critics. At this level students write ONE of the unit's essays (choose one theme), not all five.

College Junior (2800 words; Dual Credit (Indiana College Core): ICC-WC-1.1, ICC-WC-1.3, ICC-WC-1.4, ICC-WC-1.5): Write a theoretically informed essay (8–10 pages) on love and attachment in Siddhartha. Name your critical method, apply it closely, and acknowledge its limits. At this level students write ONE of the unit's essays (choose one theme), not all five.

College Senior (4000 words; Dual Credit (Indiana College Core): ICC-WC-1.1, ICC-WC-1.3, ICC-WC-1.4, ICC-WC-1.5): Write a research paper (12–15 pages) with an original argument about love and attachment in Siddhartha, engaging at least four scholarly sources in Chicago style. At this level students write ONE of the unit's essays (choose one theme), not all five.

Graduate / PhD (6000 words; Dual Credit (Indiana College Core): ICC-WC-1.1, ICC-WC-1.3, ICC-WC-1.4, ICC-WC-1.5): Write a seminar paper (15–20 pages) that intervenes in the critical conversation on love and attachment in Siddhartha, engaging the relevant scholarship and textual history. At this level students write ONE of the unit's essays (choose one theme), not all five.

Rubric: Claim · Evidence · Analysis · Organization · Conventions

References

Bauer, M. (2025). Siddhartha (1922). In A. Bartl & A. Honold (Eds.), Hermann Hesse-Handbuch (pp. 163–170). J. B. Metzler. https://doi.org/10.1007/978-3-476-06008-2_23

Common Core State Standards Initiative. (2010). English language arts standards. Retrieved October 22, 2026, from https://www.thecorestandards.org/ELA-Literacy/

Emerson, R. W. (n.d.). Brahma. In Poems. Project Gutenberg. https://www.gutenberg.org/ebooks/12843 (Original work published 1857)

Hesse, H. (1922). Thoughts on The Idiot of Dostoevsky (S. Hudson, Trans.). The Dial, 73(2), 199–204. (Original work published 1920 as "Gedanken über Dostojewskis Idiot," in Blick ins Chaos) Summary (our own): Hesse argues that Dostoevsky's Prince Myshkin is set apart less by his goodness than by how he thinks. In rare moments he has stood on a "magic borderland" where every thought and its opposite are equally true. Because every culture, law and morality rests on dividing good from evil, such a person, however gentle, threatens all order, so both the respectable and the radicals turn against him. Hesse reads the novel as prophecy: Europe must pass through this chaos, each person alone, to reach a new and higher order.

Hesse, H. (1969). Hermann Hesse – Biographical. In H. Frenz (Ed.), Nobel lectures, literature 1901–1967. Elsevier. https://www.nobelprize.org/prizes/literature/1946/hesse/biographical/ (Original work published 1946)

Hesse, H. (2001a). Siddhartha: Eine indische Dichtung. Project Gutenberg. https://www.gutenberg.org/ebooks/2499 (Original work published 1922)

Hesse, H. (2001b). Siddhartha: An Indian tale (G. Olesch, A. Dreher, A. Coulter, S. Langer, & S. Chaichenets, Trans.). Project Gutenberg. https://www.gutenberg.org/ebooks/2500 (Original work published 1922)

Hesse, H. (2015). Siddhartha (G. Olesch, A. Dreher, A. Coulter, S. Langer, & S. Chaichenets, Trans.; Standard Ebooks ed.). Standard Ebooks. https://standardebooks.org/ebooks/hermann-hesse/siddhartha/various-translators (Original work published 1922)

Hsia, A. (2009). Siddhartha. In I. Cornils (Ed.), A companion to the works of Hermann Hesse (pp. 149–170). Camden House. https://doi.org/10.1017/9781571137296.007

Hughes, J. (2015). »Der Fluß des Geschehens«: Time and experience in Hermann Hesse's Demian and Siddhartha. literatur für leser, 38(1), 17–30. https://blog.studiumdigitale.uni-frankfurt.de/literatur-fuer-leser-innen/files/2022/11/lfl_38_15_1_Hughes.pdf

Manthripragada, A. (2014). »Siddhartha«, the paradox, and the counterculture. Textpraxis, 9. https://www.textpraxis.net/ashwin-manthripragada-siddhartha-the-paradox-and-the-counterculture

Müller, F. M. (Trans.). (1999). The Dhammapada. Project Gutenberg. https://www.gutenberg.org/ebooks/2017 (Original work published 1881)

New Directions. (n.d.). Siddhartha [Publisher page with review excerpts]. Retrieved October 22, 2026, from https://www.ndbooks.com/book/siddhartha/

Nobel Prize Outreach. (n.d.). Hermann Hesse – Facts. Retrieved October 21, 2026, from https://www.nobelprize.org/prizes/literature/1946/hesse/facts/

Paramananda, S. (Trans.). (2002). The Upanishads. Project Gutenberg. https://www.gutenberg.org/ebooks/3283 (Original work published 1919)

Plato. (1999). Cratylus (B. Jowett, Trans.). Project Gutenberg. https://www.gutenberg.org/ebooks/1616 (Original work published ca. 360 B.C.E.)

Project Gutenberg. (2002). Siddhartha, by Herman Hesse [EBook #2500, edition 10 file header]. https://www.gutenberg.org/files/2500/old/siddh10.txt

Project Gutenberg. (2021). Siddhartha by Hermann Hesse [EBook #2500 landing page]. Retrieved October 21, 2026, from https://www.gutenberg.org/ebooks/2500

Standard Ebooks. (2015). Siddhartha: Colophon. https://standardebooks.org/ebooks/hermann-hesse/siddhartha/various-translators/text/colophon

United States Holocaust Memorial Museum. (n.d.). The Weimar Republic. Holocaust Encyclopedia. Retrieved October 21, 2026, from https://encyclopedia.ushmm.org/content/en/article/the-weimar-republic

W. W. Norton UK. (n.d.). Siddhartha [Distributor page with review excerpts]. Retrieved October 22, 2026, from https://wwnorton.co.uk/books/9780811219761-siddhartha

Österling, A. (1946). Award ceremony speech: The Nobel Prize in Literature 1946. Nobel Prize Outreach. https://www.nobelprize.org/prizes/literature/1946/ceremony-speech/

Original Liber et Libri curriculum. Quotations from the public-domain text. Vocabulary definitions are modern and contextual (curated; based on Princeton WordNet 3.0). Word histories appear only where verified: short origin notes in our own words, with the facts (language, form, meaning) checked against the Online Etymology Dictionary or Wiktionary; no dictionary text is reproduced, and unverified ones are left out. AP and Cambridge entries are our own summaries with links, not College Board or Cambridge text; ICC-WC and LeL IDs are Liber et Libri labels. Included with every curriculum purchase and with Classroom Pro.

Built from siddhartha-idiot-nolink-2026-11-04 (bdf093a4).