Lesson 1: Introduction to The Goophered Grapevine

Author biography

Charles W. Chesnutt was born in Cleveland, Ohio, on 20 June 1858 to free Black parents from North Carolina and grew up in Fayetteville, where he became a teacher and school principal. He returned to Cleveland, passed the Ohio bar and ran a successful court-reporting business while writing. His conjure stories, the first of which was "The Goophered Grapevine" in The Atlantic Monthly (1887), were collected in The Conjure Woman (1899); his story The Marrow of Tradition (1901) depicts the 1898 Wilmington massacre. He received the NAACP's Spingarn Medal in 1928 and died on 15 November 1932.

Historical and cultural context

Set in North Carolina after Reconstruction, when Northern investors were buying up Southern land. The storyteller, Uncle Julius, is a formerly enslaved man who recounts plantation days in dialect. White writers of the period such as Joel Chandler Harris used similar storytellers to romanticize slavery; Chesnutt reworks the form to expose its cruelty and to show Julius's own shrewdness.

Publication and reception, then and now

First published in The Atlantic Monthly in August 1887, making Chesnutt one of the first African American writers published there; collected in The Conjure Woman (1899).

Then: Most readers did not know Chesnutt was Black; his race was publicized only later.

Now: Recognized as a landmark of African American literature and a subtle critique of the plantation tradition.

Overview (spoiler-free)

A Northern businessman, John, considers buying a run-down vineyard in North Carolina. Uncle Julius warns him that the vines are "goophered" (bewitched) and tells the story of Henry, an enslaved man whose life became tied to the vines.

Main themes

- the economics of slavery.
- storytelling as resistance.
- exploitation.

Why it matters

Students learn to read layered narration and to see how dialect and frame stories can carry hidden critique.

Spoilers · teacher only

John buys the vineyard anyway, and reveals that Julius had been profiting from the grapes himself; the tale was partly a strategy to protect his livelihood.

Flags (verify before teaching):

- Content note: the dialect passages include a racial slur used by and about enslaved characters. Teaching note: the dialect reflects nineteenth-century conventions; prepare students for it and discuss why Chesnutt used it.

Lesson 2: The Goophered Grapevine

Focus: a story told to protect a livelihood

Content note (slavery, heavy dialect, a racial slur used by the characters): Sensitive content: Slavery; heavy dialect; a racial slur used by the characters. Preview the story, tell students in advance, and allow a pass on reading aloud. Keep discussion on how the writer uses these elements, not on graphic detail. The text quotes racial slurs in period dialogue: decide in advance that no one reads them aloud, and name why the author records them.
Student preview: Heads-up: this story includes slavery; heavy dialect; a racial slur used by the characters.
Suggested language: "Why does the writer include this, and what does it make us notice?"

Teacher only · spoilers

A white Northerner, John, considers buying a run-down North Carolina vineyard. Julius McAdoo, a formerly enslaved man, tells him it is 'goophered' (conjured): before the war, an enslaved man named Henry ate its grapes, and his life rose and fell with the vines until he died. John buys anyway and later suspects Julius told the tale because he profited from the grapes; he hires Julius as coachman.

Background: Published in The Atlantic Monthly in 1887, the first story by an African American writer in that magazine; collected in The Conjure Woman (1899).

Significance: Chesnutt reworks the 'plantation tradition' frame to expose slavery's cruelty and Black economic agency.

   Answer guidance: A defensible line of argument: Julius's tale is both entertainment and an act of resistance. Useful evidence: “goophered” (The Goophered Grapevine, paragraph 17): The bewitchment. Theme link: Henry is treated as property whose value rises and falls with the vines. Credit any position that is supported by quotation and reasoning; push one-sided answers to address the strongest counterpoint.
4. In the passage that begins “We found the weather delightful at that season, the end of summer, and were hospitably entertained.”, why might Chesnutt have chosen these particular words? Pick two and explain their connotations. [DOK 2 · followUp · wait 5 s · RL.7.4, SL.7.1, RL.9-10.4] Look for: Diction analysis of two words in the anchor passage.

Writing prompts (eleven rigor levels)

Middle School (250 words; Common Core: RL.7.6, W.7.1): Excerpt-based (Middle School support track; this story is above the grades 6–8 complexity band, so work from the passage your teacher selects). In "The Goophered Grapevine," how does Chesnutt show a story told to protect a livelihood? Write a paragraph that states your claim, quotes two details from the passage, and explains how each detail supports your idea. Use the point of view you noticed as one piece of evidence.

HS Freshman (350 words; Common Core: RL.9-10.6, W.9-10.1): In The Goophered Grapevine, how does Chesnutt develop the idea of a story told to protect a livelihood? State a clear claim, support it with two or three quotations, and explain how the point of view in the story helps build that idea.

HS Sophomore (450 words; Common Core: RL.9-10.6, W.9-10.1): Analyze how The Goophered Grapevine develops the idea of a story told to protect a livelihood. Make a precise claim, support it with at least three pieces of textual evidence, and explain how the author's use of point of view and diction / vocabulary shapes that idea. Address one possible counterclaim.

HS Junior (550 words; Common Core: RL.11-12.5, RL.11-12.1, W.11-12.1): Analyze how the structure of The Goophered Grapevine (where it begins, turns and ends) and its point of view shape the reader's understanding of a story told to protect a livelihood. Identify one place where the text leaves matters uncertain and explain how that uncertainty adds to its meaning. Distinguish what is directly stated from what is really meant.

HS Senior (600 words; Common Core: RL.11-12.6, W.11-12.1): Two readers disagree about what The Goophered Grapevine suggests about a story told to protect a livelihood. Lay out two plausible interpretations, weigh the evidence for each (including the story's point of view and diction / vocabulary), and argue for the stronger one in a sustained, well-organized essay. Distinguish what is directly stated from what is really meant.

AP (650 words; Common Core: RL.11-12.6, W.11-12.1): Write a literary argument in which you analyze how Charles W. Chesnutt uses point of view in The Goophered Grapevine to complicate the reader's understanding of a story told to protect a livelihood. Develop a defensible thesis, select evidence purposefully, and explain how specific choices of diction and syntax create meaning.

College Freshman (1000 words; Common Core: ICC-WC-1.3, ICC-WC-1.5, ICC-WC-1.1): Situate The Goophered Grapevine within its historical and literary context and argue how the story's treatment of a story told to protect a livelihood responds to that context. Engage with at least one secondary perspective (a critic, historian or the author's own statements), integrate quotations smoothly, and cite in MLA style.

College Sophomore (1250 words; Common Core: LeL-C2-LIT-1, LeL-C2-W-1): Read The Goophered Grapevine alongside the conventions of its genre and period. Argue how the story's handling of a story told to protect a livelihood follows or bends those conventions, using the point of view as evidence, and test your reading against one published critic. Document two secondary sources in MLA.

College Junior (1500 words; Common Core: LeL-C3-LIT-1, LeL-C3-W-1): Apply a named critical approach (for example formalist, historicist, feminist, psychoanalytic or ecocritical) to The Goophered Grapevine and its treatment of a story told to protect a livelihood. State your method, show what it reveals in the story's point of view and diction / vocabulary, and identify where the text resists it.

College Senior (2000 words; Common Core: LeL-C4-LIT-1, LeL-C4-W-1): Develop a research argument that reads The Goophered Grapevine as evidence for a larger claim about a story told to protect a livelihood in The Goophered Grapevine. Connect close reading of the story to the whole story, engage at least four scholarly sources, and state precisely where your reading departs from theirs (Chicago style).

Graduate / PhD (2500 words; Common Core: LeL-GR-LIT-1, LeL-GR-W-1): Develop an original argument that reads The Goophered Grapevine as a hinge in the story's larger treatment of a story told to protect a livelihood. Position your reading within a named critical conversation (for example formalist, historicist, psychoanalytic, feminist or postcolonial approaches), account for the textual history where relevant, and articulate the stakes of your intervention for scholarship on The Goophered Grapevine.

SAT-style questions

1. The estate had been for years involved in litigation between disputing heirs, during which period shiftless cultivation had well-nigh exhausted the soil.

   As used in the text, what does the word "shiftless" most nearly mean?

   A. lazy and lacking ambition
   B. in a warm, welcoming way toward guests
   C. richly sweet and delicious
   D. the process of taking a dispute to court

2. We found the weather delightful at that season, the end of summer, and were hospitably entertained. Our host was a man of means and evidently regarded our visit as a pleasure, and we were therefore correspondingly at our ease, and in a position to act with the coolness of judgment desirable in making so radical a change in our lives. My cousin placed a horse and buggy at our disposal, and himself acted as our guide until I became somewhat familiar with the country.

   Which choice best states a central concern of "The Goophered Grapevine"?

   A. A story told to protect a livelihood
   B. Superstition used against a credulous man
   C. The cost of wanting to seem richer than you are
