Lesson 1: Introduction to The Black Cat

Author biography

Edgar Allan Poe was born in Boston on 19 January 1809 to touring actors; orphaned before he was three, he was raised in Richmond, Virginia, by the merchant John Allan, with whom he later quarrelled bitterly. He attended the University of Virginia, served in the U.S. Army and was dismissed from West Point, then lived by his pen as a poet, critic and magazine editor (the Southern Literary Messenger, Graham's Magazine) in Richmond, Philadelphia and New York. He married his young cousin Virginia Clemm, who died of tuberculosis in 1847. "The Raven" (1845) made him famous but never prosperous. He is credited with inventing the modern detective story ("The Murders in the Rue Morgue," 1841) and argued that a short story should create a single "unity of effect." He died in Baltimore on 7 October 1849; the cause of his death is unknown.

Historical and cultural context

The temperance movement was strong in 1840s America, and stories of men ruined by drink were a popular genre; Poe, who struggled with alcohol himself, gives the genre a psychological twist. The cat's name, Pluto, is that of the Roman god of the underworld, and black cats carried old folk associations with witchcraft.

Publication and reception, then and now

First published in the United States Saturday Post (Philadelphia) on 19 August 1843.

Then: Popular with readers of sensational fiction.

Now: Read alongside "The Tell-Tale Heart" as a study of guilt, perversity and the unreliable narrator.

Overview (spoiler-free)

On the night before his execution, a narrator tells how he went from a gentle animal lover to a violent drunk, and how his cruelty toward his cat Pluto led to worse crimes.

Main themes

- perversity: the urge to do wrong "for the wrong's sake."
- guilt and self-betrayal: as in "Tell-Tale," he exposes himself.
- alcohol and violence: domestic abuse is presented without excuse.

Why it matters

Students examine how a narrator excuses himself, and how a story can show the progression of abuse.

Spoilers · teacher only

He hangs Pluto, a second cat with a gallows-shaped mark appears, and when he tries to kill it he murders his wife instead and walls her up in the cellar; the cat, walled in with her, screams and betrays him to the police.

On the night before his execution, the narrator recounts how drink turned him from a gentle animal-lover into a violent man. He blinds and then hangs his cat Pluto; his house burns, leaving the image of a cat on a wall. A second, similar cat appears, with a white patch that slowly takes the shape of a gallows. Trying to kill it, he murders his wife with an axe and walls her body up in the cellar. When police search, he raps on the wall, and the cat's howl reveals the corpse; he had walled the cat in with her.

Background: Published in 1843 in the Saturday Evening Post, it appeared amid the temperance movement, which blamed alcohol for domestic violence.

Significance: Poe's idea of 'perverseness', the urge to do wrong because it is wrong, anticipates later psychology.

Published in 1843 in the Saturday Evening Post, it appeared amid the temperance movement, which blamed alcohol for domestic violence. Poe's idea of 'perverseness', the urge to do wrong because it is wrong, anticipates later psychology. Point of view: A condemned man narrates; he calls the events "homely," yet they are monstrous, and he blames forces outside himself. Foreshadowing: The wife's mention of witches who take the form of cats, and the gallows-shaped white patch, foreshadow his end. Irony: His boastful rapping on the wall that hides the corpse summons the cat's cry. Watch for the cat: conscience and retribution; Pluto, god of the dead.

   Answer guidance: A defensible line of argument: The narrator blames outside forces, but the story shows his crimes come from his own choices. Useful evidence: “And then came, as if to my final and irrevocable overthrow, the spirit of Perverseness” (The Black Cat, paragraph 9): His theory of motive. Theme link: he names "the spirit of PERVERSENESS" as a basic human impulse. Credit any position that is supported by quotation and reasoning; push one-sided answers to address the strongest counterpoint.
4. In the passage that begins “I married early, and was happy to find in my wife a disposition not uncongenial with my own.”, why might Poe have chosen these particular words? Pick two and explain their connotations. [DOK 2 · followUp · wait 5 s · RL.7.4, SL.7.1, RL.9-10.4] Look for: Diction analysis of two words in the anchor passage.
5. What causes the main turn in “The Black Cat”, and what effect is it likely to have on what follows? [DOK 2 · followUp · wait 5 s · RL.7.3, SL.7.1, RL.9-10.3] Look for: On the night before his execution, the narrator recounts how drink turned him from a gentle animal-lover into a violent man. He blinds and then hangs his cat Pluto; his house burns, leaving the image of a cat on a wall. A second, similar cat appears, with a white patch that slowly takes the shape…

6. As the opening story, what does “The Black Cat” set up that the rest of The Black Cat will need? [DOK 3 · thinkPairShare · wait 8 s · RL.7.3, SL.7.1, RL.9-10.5] Look for: A causal or structural link between this and the previous story.

   Answer guidance: A defensible line of argument: The narrator blames outside forces, but the story shows his crimes come from his own choices. Useful evidence: “I had walled the monster up within the tomb” (The Black Cat, paragraph 32): The final line. Theme link: he names "the spirit of PERVERSENESS" as a basic human impulse. Credit any position that is supported by quotation and reasoning; push one-sided answers to address the strongest counterpoint.
7. What can we infer about a character's motives from what they say and do here, as opposed to what they claim? [DOK 3 · followUp · wait 8 s · RL.7.3, SL.7.1, RL.9-10.3] Look for: An inference about motive supported by a quoted line.

   Answer guidance: A defensible line of argument: The narrator blames outside forces, but the story shows his crimes come from his own choices. Useful evidence: “the hideous beast whose craft had seduced me into murder” (The Black Cat, paragraph 32): He blames the cat for his own crime. Theme link: he names "the spirit of PERVERSENESS" as a basic human impulse. Credit any position that is supported by quotation and reasoning; push one-sided answers to address the strongest counterpoint.
8. The bell-ringer asked: “Why do people sometimes do things they know are wrong?” Now that we have read closely, how would you revise your first answer, and which line changed your mind? [DOK 2 · thinkPairShare · wait 5 s · RL.7.2, SL.7.1, RL.9-10.2] Look for: A revised answer anchored in the text.
9. Where does irony appear, and how does it connect this story to the larger concern with guilt and perversity? [DOK 3 · followUp · wait 8 s · RL.7.6, SL.7.1, RL.9-10.6] Look for: Look for gaps between what characters expect or say and what is true.

   Answer guidance: A defensible line of argument: The narrator blames outside forces, but the story shows his crimes come from his own choices. Useful evidence: “And then came, as if to my final and irrevocable overthrow, the spirit of Perverseness” (The Black Cat, paragraph 9): His theory of motive. On irony: His boastful rapping on the wall that hides the corpse summons the cat's cry. Credit any position that is supported by quotation and reasoning; push one-sided answers to address the strongest counterpoint.
10. Background: Published in 1843 in the Saturday Evening Post, it appeared amid the temperance movement, which blamed alcohol for domestic violence. How does knowing this change the way you read one moment in the story? [DOK 3 · thinkPairShare · wait 8 s · RL.7.3, SL.7.1, RL.9-10.3] Look for: A specific moment reread in light of the context.

    Answer guidance: A defensible line of argument: The narrator blames outside forces, but the story shows his crimes come from his own choices. Useful evidence: “I had walled the monster up within the tomb” (The Black Cat, paragraph 32): The final line. Theme link: he names "the spirit of PERVERSENESS" as a basic human impulse. Credit any position that is supported by quotation and reasoning; push one-sided answers to address the strongest counterpoint.

Evaluative / synthesis / creative

1. A critic might argue: “Poe's idea of 'perverseness', the urge to do wrong because it is wrong, anticipates later psychology.” How far do you agree? Take a stand and defend it with two lines from the story. [DOK 3 · fourCorners · wait 8 s · RL.7.2, SL.7.1, RL.9-10.2] Look for: A defended position with evidence and one counterpoint.

   Answer guidance: A defensible line of argument: The narrator blames outside forces, but the story shows his crimes come from his own choices. Useful evidence: “the hideous beast whose craft had seduced me

Writing prompts (eleven rigor levels)

Middle School (250 words; Common Core: RL.7.6, W.7.1): Excerpt-based (Middle School support track; this story is above the grades 6–8 complexity band, so work from the passage your teacher selects). In “The Black Cat,” how does Poe show self-destruction and the urge to do wrong? Write a paragraph that states your claim, quotes two details from the passage, and explains how each detail supports your idea. Use the point of view you noticed as one piece of evidence.

HS Freshman (350 words; Common Core: RL.9-10.6, W.9-10.1): In The Black Cat, how does Poe develop the idea of self-destruction and the urge to do wrong? State a clear claim, support it with two or three quotations, and explain how the point of view in the story helps build that idea.

HS Sophomore (450 words; Common Core: RL.9-10.6, W.9-10.1): Analyze how The Black Cat develops the idea of self-destruction and the urge to do wrong. Make a precise claim, support it with at least three pieces of textual evidence, and explain how the author's use of point of view and symbolism shapes that idea. Address one possible counterclaim.

HS Junior (550 words; Common Core: RL.11-12.5, RL.11-12.1, W.11-12.1): Analyze how the structure of The Black Cat (where it begins, turns and ends) and its point of view shape the reader's understanding of self-destruction and the urge to do wrong. Identify one place where the text leaves matters uncertain and explain how that uncertainty adds to its meaning. Distinguish what is directly stated from what is really meant.

HS Senior (600 words; Common Core: RL.11-12.6, W.11-12.1): Two readers disagree about what The Black Cat suggests about self-destruction and the urge to do wrong. Lay out two plausible interpretations, weigh the evidence for each (including the story's point of view and symbolism), and argue for the stronger one in a sustained, well-organized essay. Distinguish what is directly stated from what is really meant.

AP (650 words; Common Core: RL.11-12.6, W.11-12.1): Write a literary argument in which you analyze how Edgar Allan Poe uses point of view in The Black Cat to complicate the reader's understanding of self-destruction and the urge to do wrong. Develop a defensible thesis, select evidence purposefully, and explain how specific choices of diction and syntax create meaning.

College Freshman (1000 words; Common Core: ICC-WC-1.3, ICC-WC-1.5, ICC-WC-1.1): Situate The Black Cat within its historical and literary context and argue how the story's treatment of self-destruction and the urge to do wrong responds to that context. Engage with at least one secondary perspective (a critic, historian or the author's own statements), integrate quotations smoothly, and cite in MLA style.

College Sophomore (1250 words; Common Core: LeL-C2-LIT-1, LeL-C2-W-1): Read The Black Cat alongside the conventions of its genre and period. Argue how the story's handling of self-destruction and the urge to do wrong follows or bends those conventions, using the point of view as evidence, and test your reading against one published critic. Document two secondary sources in MLA.

College Junior (1500 words; Common Core: LeL-C3-LIT-1, LeL-C3-W-1): Apply a named critical approach (for example formalist, historicist, feminist, psychoanalytic or ecocritical) to The Black Cat and its treatment of self-destruction and the urge to do wrong. State your method, show what it reveals in the story's point of view and symbolism, and identify where the text resists it.

College Senior (2000 words; Common Core: LeL-C4-LIT-1, LeL-C4-W-1): Develop a research argument that reads The Black Cat as evidence for a larger claim about self-destruction and the urge to do wrong in The Black Cat. Connect close reading of the story to the whole story, engage at least four scholarly sources, and state precisely where your reading departs from theirs (Chicago style).

Graduate / PhD (2500 words; Common Core: LeL-GR-LIT-1, LeL-GR-W-1): Develop an original argument that reads The Black Cat as a hinge in the story's larger treatment of self-destruction and the urge to do wrong. Position your reading within a named critical conversation (for example formalist, historicist, psychoanalytic, feminist or postcolonial approaches), account for the textual history where relevant, and articulate the stakes of your intervention for scholarship on The Black Cat.

SAT-style questions

1. "Gentlemen," I said at last, as the party ascended the steps, "I delight to have allayed your suspicions.

   As used in the text, what does the word “allayed” most nearly mean?

   A. lessen the intensity of or calm

   B. treat badly

   C. get by special effort

   D. explained point by point

2. I married early, and was happy to find in my wife a disposition not uncongenial with my own. Observing my partiality for domestic pets, she lost no opportunity of procuring those of the most agreeable kind. We had birds, gold-fish, a fine dog, rabbits, a small monkey, and a cat.

   Which choice best states a central concern of “The Black Cat”?

   A. Science that poisons love

   B. Self-destruction and the urge to do wrong

   C. A girl choosing nature over a stranger's approval

   D. The loss of faith in human goodness

SAT key: 1. A (lessen the intensity of or calm); 2. B (Self-destruction and the urge to do wrong)

Essay assignments

Essay: Guilt and perversity

Middle School (600 words; Common Core: W.7.1, RL.7.2): Excerpt-based (Middle School support track): write a five-paragraph essay explaining what The Black Cat teaches about guilt and perversity. Use at least three quotations from passages your teacher selects from different parts of the book.

HS Freshman (800 words; Common Core: W.9-10.1, RL.9-10.2): Write a multi-paragraph essay explaining how Edgar Allan Poe develops guilt and perversity in The Black Cat. Use evidence from the beginning, middle and end of the book.

HS Sophomore (1000 words; Common Core: W.9-10.1, RL.9-10.2): Write an argumentative essay analyzing how Edgar Allan Poe develops guilt and perversity across The Black Cat. Trace the idea through at least three parts of the story and address a counterclaim.

HS Junior (1100 words; Common Core: W.11-12.1, RL.11-12.5): Write an analytical essay on how the structure of The Black Cat (its order, turns and ending) shapes the meaning of guilt and perversity. Discuss at least one place where the book leaves the question open.

HS Senior (1200 words; Common Core: W.11-12.1, RL.11-12.2): Write a sustained argument comparing two interpretations of guilt and perversity in The Black Cat. Weigh the evidence for each and defend the stronger reading in a mature, well-organized essay.

AP (1300 words; Common Core: W.11-12.1, RL.11-12.2): Write a literary argument: develop a defensible thesis about how Edgar Allan Poe's choices in The Black Cat (a recurring element, structure and narration) shape a complex understanding of guilt and perversity, weigh at least one competing reading, and sustain commentary on well-chosen evidence. Do not merely summarize.

College Freshman (1600 words; Common Core: ICC-WC-1.5, ICC-WC-1.4, ICC-WC-1.7): Write a researched essay (4–6 pages) that places The Black Cat's treatment of guilt and perversity in its historical context, using at least two scholarly sources.

College Sophomore (2200 words; Common Core: LeL-C2-W-1, LeL-C2-LIT-1): Write a contextual essay (6–8 pages) on guilt and perversity in The Black Cat that reads the story against its genre and period and engages two published critics. At this level students write ONE of the unit's essays (choose one theme), not all five.

College Junior (2800 words; Common Core: LeL-C3-W-1, LeL-C3-LIT-1): Write a theoretically informed essay (8–10 pages) on guilt and perversity in The Black Cat. Name your critical method, apply it closely, and acknowledge its limits. At this level students write ONE of the unit's essays (choose one theme), not all five.

College Senior (4000 words; Common Core: LeL-C4-W-1, LeL-C4-LIT-1): Write a research paper (12–15 pages) with an original argument about guilt and perversity in The Black Cat, engaging at least four scholarly sources in Chicago style. At this level students write ONE of the unit's essays (choose one theme), not all five.

Graduate / PhD (6000 words; Common Core: LeL-GR-W-1, LeL-GR-LIT-1): Write a seminar paper (15–20 pages) that intervenes in the critical conversation on guilt and perversity in The Black Cat, engaging the relevant scholarship and textual history. At this level students write ONE of the unit's essays (choose one theme), not all five.

Essay: Confession

Middle School (600 words; Common Core: W.7.1, RL.7.2): Excerpt-based (Middle School support track): write a five-paragraph essay explaining what The Black Cat teaches about confession. Use at least three quotations from passages your teacher selects from different parts of the book.

HS Freshman (800 words; Common Core: W.9-10.1, RL.9-10.2): Write a multi-paragraph essay explaining how Edgar Allan Poe develops confession in The Black Cat. Use evidence from the beginning, middle and end of the book.

HS Sophomore (1000 words; Common Core: W.9-10.1, RL.9-10.2): Write an argumentative essay analyzing how Edgar Allan Poe develops confession across The Black Cat. Trace the idea through at least three parts of the story and address a counterclaim.

HS Junior (1100 words; Common Core: W.11-12.1, RL.11-12.5): Write an analytical essay on how the structure of The Black Cat (its order, turns and ending) shapes the meaning of confession. Discuss at least one place where the book leaves the question open.

HS Senior (1200 words; Common Core: W.11-12.1, RL.11-12.2): Write a sustained argument comparing two interpretations of confession in The Black Cat. Weigh the evidence for each and defend the stronger reading in a mature, well-organized essay.

AP (1300 words; Common Core: W.11-12.1, RL.11-12.2): Write a literary argument: develop a defensible thesis about how Edgar Allan Poe's choices in The Black Cat (a recurring element, structure and narration) shape a complex understanding of confession, weigh at least one competing reading, and sustain commentary on well-chosen evidence. Do not merely summarize.
