Lesson 1: Introduction to Araby

Author biography

James Joyce was born in Dublin on 2 February 1882 and educated by Jesuits. He left Ireland in 1904 with Nora Barnacle and lived in Trieste, Zurich and Paris, but wrote almost entirely about Dublin. Dubliners (1914), a collection of fifteen stories, was delayed for years by publishers' fears of libel and obscenity; it was followed by A Portrait of the Artist as a Young Man (1916), Ulysses (1922) and Finnegans Wake (1939). He died in Zurich on 13 January 1941.

Historical and cultural context

Dublin around 1895 was a city under British rule, shaped by the Catholic Church and economic stagnation. Araby was a real bazaar held in Dublin in May 1894.

Publication and reception, then and now

Published in Dubliners (1914), a collection Joyce completed by 1907 that publishers rejected for years.

Then: Dubliners sold poorly.

Now: A landmark of modernist short fiction and the "epiphany."

Overview (spoiler-free)

A boy on North Richmond Street is infatuated with his friend's older sister. When she mentions the Araby bazaar, he promises to bring her a gift.

Main themes

- disillusionment.
- romantic idealism.
- paralysis.

Why it matters

Students recognize the experience of a crush and the moment idealism breaks.

Spoilers · teacher only

His uncle comes home late; the boy reaches the bazaar as it closes and finds it shabby; he realizes his romantic dream was vanity.

A boy on North Richmond Street, Dublin, is infatuated with his friend Mangan's sister. When she mentions the Araby bazaar, he promises to bring her a gift. His uncle comes home late and drunk, and the boy reaches the bazaar as it closes. Seeing a shop girl flirt idly, he feels himself 'a creature driven and derided by vanity.'

Background: Collected in Dubliners (1914). The Araby bazaar was a real 1894 Dublin event; Joyce's stories show the 'paralysis' he saw in Irish life.

Significance: A central modernist text for epiphany; in Gale's Short Stories for Students vol. 1.

Then start your writing prompt at your assigned level (HS Sophomore: Analyze how Araby develops the idea of a boy's romantic quest ending in disillusion. Make a precise claim, support it with at least three pieces of textual evidence, and explain how the author's use of imagery and point of view shapes that idea. Address one possible counterclaim.) Exemplar: The boy's quest ends in a painful realization of his own illusion. When the text says "I imagined that I bore my chalice safely through a throng of foes" (Araby, paragraph 5), it shows this directly. He imagines himself bearing a "chalice safely through a throng of foes," but at the bazaar he sees himself "as a creature driven and derided by vanity."

   Answer guidance: A defensible line of argument: The boy's quest ends in a painful realization of his own illusion. Useful evidence: “Gazing up into the darkness I saw myself as a creature driven and derided by vanity” (Araby, paragraph 37): Epiphany. On point of view: An older narrator looks back on his younger self. Credit any position that is supported by quotation and reasoning; push one-sided answers to address the strongest counterpoint.

4. Write three questions of your own about “Araby”: one recall, one “why/how”, and one “should/what if”. Trade with a partner and answer theirs. [DOK 3 · studentGenerated · wait 8 s · AP-LIT.LAN, AP-LIT.LAN] Look for: Student-generated questions at three levels.

   Answer guidance: A defensible line of argument: The boy's quest ends in a painful realization of his own illusion. Useful evidence: “North Richmond Street, being blind, was a quiet street” (Araby, paragraph 1): Paralysis. Theme link: his quest collapses. Credit any position that is supported by quotation and reasoning; push one-sided answers to address the strongest counterpoint.

5. Connect this story to coming of age: is the link strong or weak so far? What would Joyce need to show next to strengthen it? [DOK 4 · socraticCircle · wait 8 s · AP-LIT.LAN, AP-LIT.LAN] Look for: A judgment of thematic development across the work.

   Answer guidance: A defensible line of argument: The boy's quest ends in a painful realization of his own illusion. Useful evidence: “I imagined that I bore my chalice safely through a throng of foes” (Araby, paragraph 5): Romantic quest. Theme link: his quest collapses. Credit any position that is supported by quotation and reasoning; push one-sided answers to address the strongest counterpoint.

6. Is the imagery in this story effective, or does it feel heavy-handed? Evaluate it as a reader would in a review. [DOK 3 · fourCorners · wait 8 s · AP-LIT.FIG, AP-LIT.LAN] Look for: An evaluative judgment with criteria and evidence.

   Answer guidance: A defensible line of argument: The boy's quest ends in a painful realization of his own illusion. Useful evidence: “Gazing up into the darkness I saw myself as a creature driven and derided by vanity” (Araby, paragraph 37): Epiphany. On imagery: Light and darkness; religious imagery ("chalice"). Credit any position that is supported by quotation and reasoning; push one-sided answers to address the strongest counterpoint.

7. Compare how “Araby” treats a boy's romantic quest ending in disillusion with how another text, film or event you know treats a similar idea. What does Araby see that the other misses? [DOK 4 · socraticCircle · wait 8 s · AP-LIT.LAN, AP-LIT.LAN] Look for: A cross-text synthesis.

   Answer guidance: A defensible line of argument: The boy's quest ends in a painful realization of his own illusion. Writing prompts (eleven rigor levels)

Middle School (250 words; AP: see unit standards): Excerpt-based (Middle School support track; this story is above the grades 6–8 complexity band, so work from the passage your teacher selects). In “Araby,” how does Joyce show a boy's romantic quest ending in disillusion? Write a paragraph that states your claim, quotes two details from the passage, and explains how each detail supports your idea. Use the imagery you noticed as one piece of evidence.

HS Freshman (350 words; AP: see unit standards): In Araby, how does Joyce develop the idea of a boy's romantic quest ending in disillusion? State a clear claim, support it with two or three quotations, and explain how the imagery in the story helps build that idea.

HS Sophomore (450 words; AP: see unit standards): Analyze how Araby develops the idea of a boy's romantic quest ending in disillusion. Make a precise claim, support it with at least three pieces of textual evidence, and explain how the author's use of imagery and point of view shapes that idea. Address one possible counterclaim.

HS Junior (550 words; AP: see unit standards): Analyze how the structure of Araby (where it begins, turns and ends) and its imagery shape the reader's understanding of a boy's romantic quest ending in disillusion. Identify one place where the text leaves matters uncertain and explain how that uncertainty adds to its meaning.

HS Senior (600 words; AP: see unit standards): Two readers disagree about what Araby suggests about a boy's romantic quest ending in disillusion. Lay out two plausible interpretations, weigh the evidence for each (including the story's imagery and point of view), and argue for the stronger one in a sustained, well-organized essay.

AP (650 words; AP: AP-LIT.FIG, AP-LIT.LAN): Write a literary argument in which you analyze how James Joyce uses imagery in Araby to complicate the reader's understanding of a boy's romantic quest ending in disillusion. Develop a defensible thesis, select evidence purposefully, and explain how specific choices of diction and syntax create meaning.

College Freshman (1000 words; AP: see unit standards): Situate Araby within its historical and literary context and argue how the story's treatment of a boy's romantic quest ending in disillusion responds to that context. Engage with at least one secondary perspective (a critic, historian or the author's own statements), integrate quotations smoothly, and cite in MLA style.

College Sophomore (1250 words; AP: see unit standards): Read Araby alongside the conventions of its genre and period. Argue how the story's handling of a boy's romantic quest ending in disillusion follows or bends those conventions, using the imagery as evidence, and test your reading against one published critic. Document two secondary sources in MLA.

College Junior (1500 words; AP: see unit standards): Apply a named critical approach (for example formalist, historicist, feminist, psychoanalytic or ecocritical) to Araby and its treatment of a boy's romantic quest ending in disillusion. State your method, show what it reveals in the story's imagery and point of view, and identify where the text resists it.

College Senior (2000 words; AP: see unit standards): Develop a research argument that reads Araby as evidence for a larger claim about a boy's romantic quest ending in disillusion in Araby. Connect close reading of the story to the whole story, engage at least four scholarly sources, and state precisely where your reading departs from theirs (Chicago style).

Graduate / PhD (2500 words; AP: see unit standards): Develop an original argument that reads Araby as a hinge in the story's larger treatment of a boy's romantic quest ending in disillusion. Position your reading within a named critical conversation (for example formalist, historicist, psychoanalytic, feminist or postcolonial approaches), account for the textual history where relevant, and articulate the stakes of your intervention for scholarship on Araby.
