Lesson 1: Introduction to Blood-Burning Moon

Author biography

Jean Toomer was born Nathan Pinchback Toomer in Washington, D.C., on 26 December 1894, the grandson of P. B. S. Pinchback, a Reconstruction-era governor of Louisiana. In 1921 he spent two months as a substitute school principal in Sparta, Georgia, an experience that inspired Cane (1923), a mixture of stories, poems and drama that became a landmark of the Harlem Renaissance. He later resisted being classified by race, became a follower of the mystic G. I. Gurdjieff and later a Quaker, and died on 30 March 1967.

Historical and cultural context

Set in a Georgia mill town in the early 1920s, the story reflects the Jim Crow South, where racial terror, including lynching, enforced segregation. Toomer wrote Cane after working as a substitute school principal in Sparta, Georgia, in 1921.

Publication and reception, then and now

Published in Cane (1923), a mix of stories, poems and drama; it had appeared earlier in the magazine Prairie (1923).

Then: Cane was praised by critics and fellow writers but sold poorly.

Now: Cane is a landmark of the Harlem Renaissance and modernism; this story is one of its most powerful sections.

Overview (spoiler-free)

Louisa, a young Black woman who works in a white family's kitchen, is loved by two men: Tom Burwell, a Black field worker, and Bob Stone, the son of the white family she works for. Under a blood-red moon, the rivalry turns violent.

Main themes

- racial violence and injustice.
- love and possession.
- fate and omen.

Why it matters

The story confronts the history of lynching and its roots in the economics and sexual politics of the post-slavery South.

Spoilers · teacher only

Tom kills Bob in a knife fight; a white mob lynches Tom by burning him alive in the old factory, and Louisa, dazed, sings at her doorstep.

Flags (verify before teaching):

- Content note: lynching and racial slurs appear in the text, including in the song. Preview and plan carefully. The Prairie magazine prior publication should be checked against a scholarly edition of Cane.

Lesson 2: Blood-Burning Moon

Focus: love and rivalry destroyed by racial violence

Content note (graphic lynching, racial slurs, knife killing. strongly recommend teacher preview): Sensitive content: Graphic lynching; racial slurs; knife killing. Strongly recommend teacher preview. Preview the story, tell students in advance, and allow a pass on reading aloud. Keep discussion on how the writer uses these elements, not on graphic detail. The text quotes racial slurs in period dialogue: decide in advance that no one reads them aloud, and name why the author records them.
Student preview: Heads-up: this story includes graphic lynching; racial slurs; knife killing. Strongly recommend teacher preview.
Suggested language: "Why does the writer include this, and what does it make us notice?"

Louisa, a Black woman in a Georgia factory town, is loved by Tom Burwell, a Black field worker, and Bob Stone, the son of the white family she works for. Under a full moon that the women read as an omen, Bob confronts Tom and is killed by Tom's knife. A white mob lynches Tom, burning him at the old factory. Louisa, unaware, sings to the moon.

Background: Published in Cane (1923), Toomer's experimental book of stories, poems and sketches rooted in rural Georgia; US copyright term has expired.

Significance: A major Harlem Renaissance and modernist text; its lyric repetition ties folk song to violence.

Independent annotation and a claim-evidence-reasoning paragraph (exemplar given).

Annotate the story for refrain, imagery (three marks with a margin note each), then write one claim-evidence-reasoning paragraph: what does this story suggest about love and rivalry destroyed by racial violence? Then start your writing prompt at your assigned level (HS Sophomore: Analyze how Blood-Burning Moon develops the idea of love and rivalry destroyed by racial violence. Make a precise claim, support it with at least three pieces of textual evidence, and explain how the author's use of imagery and symbolism shapes that idea. Address one possible counterclaim.) Exemplar: Toomer's refrain makes the violence feel fated and communal. When the text says “Blue flash, a steel blade slashed across Bob Stone's throat” (Blood-Burning Moon, paragraph 55), it shows this directly. The song "Blood-burning moon. Sinner!" recurs as the conflict builds, so when "a steel blade slashed across Bob Stone's throat," the reader feels the omen fulfilled.

Writing prompts (eleven rigor levels)

Middle School (250 words; Common Core: RL.7.4, W.7.1): Excerpt-based (Middle School support track; this story is above the grades 6–8 complexity band, so work from the passage your teacher selects). In "Blood-Burning Moon," how does Toomer show love and rivalry destroyed by racial violence? Write a paragraph that states your claim, quotes two details from the passage, and explains how each detail supports your idea. Use the imagery you noticed as one piece of evidence.

HS Freshman (350 words; Common Core: RL.9-10.4, W.9-10.1): In Blood-Burning Moon, how does Toomer develop the idea of love and rivalry destroyed by racial violence? State a clear claim, support it with two or three quotations, and explain how the imagery in the story helps build that idea.

HS Sophomore (450 words; Common Core: RL.9-10.4, W.9-10.1): Analyze how Blood-Burning Moon develops the idea of love and rivalry destroyed by racial violence. Make a precise claim, support it with at least three pieces of textual evidence, and explain how the author's use of imagery and symbolism shapes that idea. Address one possible counterclaim.

HS Junior (550 words; Common Core: RL.11-12.5, RL.11-12.1, W.11-12.1): Analyze how the structure of Blood-Burning Moon (where it begins, turns and ends) and its imagery shape the reader's understanding of love and rivalry destroyed by racial violence. Identify one place where the text leaves matters uncertain and explain how that uncertainty adds to its meaning.

HS Senior (600 words; Common Core: RL.11-12.4, W.11-12.1): Two readers disagree about what Blood-Burning Moon suggests about love and rivalry destroyed by racial violence. Lay out two plausible interpretations, weigh the evidence for each (including the story's imagery and symbolism), and argue for the stronger one in a sustained, well-organized essay.

AP (650 words; Common Core: RL.11-12.4, W.11-12.1): Write a literary argument in which you analyze how Jean Toomer uses imagery in Blood-Burning Moon to complicate the reader's understanding of love and rivalry destroyed by racial violence. Develop a defensible thesis, select evidence purposefully, and explain how specific choices of diction and syntax create meaning.

College Freshman (1000 words; Common Core: ICC-WC-1.3, ICC-WC-1.5, ICC-WC-1.1): Situate Blood-Burning Moon within its historical and literary context and argue how the story's treatment of love and rivalry destroyed by racial violence responds to that context. Engage with at least one secondary perspective (a critic, historian or the author's own statements), integrate quotations smoothly, and cite in MLA style.

College Sophomore (1250 words; Common Core: LeL-C2-LIT-1, LeL-C2-W-1): Read Blood-Burning Moon alongside the conventions of its genre and period. Argue how the story's handling of love and rivalry destroyed by racial violence follows or bends those conventions, using the imagery as evidence, and test your reading against one published critic. Document two secondary sources in MLA.

College Junior (1500 words; Common Core: LeL-C3-LIT-1, LeL-C3-W-1): Apply a named critical approach (for example formalist, historicist, feminist, psychoanalytic or ecocritical) to Blood-Burning Moon and its treatment of love and rivalry destroyed by racial violence. State your method, show what it reveals in the story's imagery and symbolism, and identify where the text resists it.

College Senior (2000 words; Common Core: LeL-C4-LIT-1, LeL-C4-W-1): Develop a research argument that reads Blood-Burning Moon as evidence for a larger claim about love and rivalry destroyed by racial violence in Blood-Burning Moon. Connect close reading of the story to the whole story, engage at least four scholarly sources, and state precisely where your reading departs from theirs (Chicago style).

Graduate / PhD (2500 words; Common Core: LeL-GR-LIT-1, LeL-GR-W-1): Develop an original argument that reads Blood-Burning Moon as a hinge in the story's larger treatment of love and rivalry destroyed by racial violence. Position your reading within a named critical conversation (for example formalist, historicist, psychoanalytic, feminist or postcolonial approaches), account for the textual history where relevant, and articulate the stakes of your intervention for scholarship on Blood-Burning Moon.

SAT-style questions

1. But for some reason, they jumbled when her eyes gazed vacantly at the rising moon.

   As used in the text, what does the word “jumbled” most nearly mean?

   B. walking at a slow, easy pace

   C. the act of preparing something (as food) by the application of heat

   D. mixed up in a confused way

2. Up from the skeleton stone walls, up from the rotting floor boards and the solid hand-hewn beams of oak of the pre-war cotton factory, dusk came. Up from the dusk the full moon came. Glowing like a fired pine-knot, it illumined the great door and soft showered the Negro shanties aligned along the single street of factory town. The full moon in the great door was an omen. Negro women improvised songs against its spell.

   Which choice best states a central concern of “Blood-Burning Moon”?

   A. The art of the deadpan tall tale

   B. Love and rivalry destroyed by racial violence

   C. Revenge carried out with perfect control

   D. A choice the reader must make
