Lesson 1: Introduction to Désirée's Baby

Author biography

Kate Chopin was born Katherine O'Flaherty in St. Louis on 8 February 1850. She married the Louisiana cotton trader Oscar Chopin and lived in New Orleans and Cloutierville among Creole and Cajun communities. Widowed in 1882 with six children, she returned to St. Louis and began writing; her stories appeared in Vogue and other magazines and were collected in Bayou Folk (1894). Her story The Awakening (1899), about a married woman's desire for independence, was condemned by reviewers. She died on 22 August 1904; her work was rediscovered in the 1960s.

Historical and cultural context

Set in antebellum Louisiana among the French Creole planter class, where racial categories and "one drop" ideas of ancestry determined status, and enslaved people were property.

Publication and reception, then and now

First published as "The Father of Désirée's Baby" in Vogue on 14 January 1893; collected in Bayou Folk (1894).

Then: Praised as local-colour fiction.

Now: Read as a sharp critique of racism and patriarchy, with one of the most famous twist endings.

Overview (spoiler-free)

Désirée, a foundling adopted by a wealthy family, marries the proud planter Armand Aubigny and has a son.

Main themes

- racism and identity.
- pride and power.
- irony.

Why it matters

It shows how racism destroys even those who enforce it.

Spoilers · teacher only

When the baby appears to be of mixed race, Armand rejects her; she walks into the bayou with the baby. Armand then finds a letter revealing that his own mother was Black.

Lesson 2: Désirée's Baby

Focus: racial pride destroying love

Content note (slavery and racism, racial slurs absent but racial hierarchy central, implied suicide, suicide): Sensitive content: Slavery and racism; racial slurs absent but racial hierarchy central; implied suicide. Preview the story, tell students in advance, and allow a pass on reading aloud. Keep discussion on how the writer uses these elements, not on graphic detail. The text quotes racial slurs in period dialogue: decide in advance that no one reads them aloud, and name why the author records them.
Student preview: Heads-up: this story includes slavery and racism; racial slurs absent but racial hierarchy central; implied suicide. Support is available if this is hard to read.
Suggested language: "Why does the writer include this, and what does it make us notice?"
Safe messaging: Discuss the character's despair and what the text does with it; do not dwell on methods. Before the lesson, remind students that support is available and how to reach the counselor. Check in privately with any student who seems affected and follow your school's referral protocol. Share with students: If you or someone you know is struggling or thinking about suicide, call or text 988 (Suicide & Crisis Lifeline, U.S.) or talk with a school counselor today. Let a counselor know in advance that this story is being taught.

Désirée, a foundling raised by the Valmondés, marries the proud planter Armand Aubigny. When their baby begins to show African ancestry, Armand turns cold and sends her away; she walks with the baby into the bayou and does not return. Burning her things, Armand finds a letter from his own mother, revealing that she belonged to 'the race that is cursed with the brand of slavery.'

Background: Published in Vogue in 1893 and set in antebellum Louisiana, where Creole society enforced rigid racial classification.

Significance: Its final reversal exposes the arbitrariness of racial categories.

Writing prompts (eleven rigor levels)

Middle School (250 words; AP: see unit standards): Excerpt-based (Middle School support track; this story is above the grades 6–8 complexity band, so work from the passage your teacher selects). In “Désirée's Baby,” how does Chopin show racial pride destroying love? Write a paragraph that states your claim, quotes two details from the passage, and explains how each detail supports your idea. Use the irony you noticed as one piece of evidence.

HS Freshman (350 words; AP: see unit standards): In Désirée's Baby, how does Chopin develop the idea of racial pride destroying love? State a clear claim, support it with two or three quotations, and explain how the irony in the story helps build that idea.

HS Sophomore (450 words; AP: see unit standards): Analyze how Désirée's Baby develops the idea of racial pride destroying love. Make a precise claim, support it with at least three pieces of textual evidence, and explain how the author's use of irony and symbolism shapes that idea. Address one possible counterclaim.

HS Junior (550 words; AP: see unit standards): Analyze how the structure of Désirée's Baby (where it begins, turns and ends) and its irony shape the reader's understanding of racial pride destroying love. Identify one place where the text leaves matters uncertain and explain how that uncertainty adds to its meaning. Distinguish what is directly stated from what is really meant.

HS Senior (600 words; AP: see unit standards): Two readers disagree about what Désirée's Baby suggests about racial pride destroying love. Lay out two plausible interpretations, weigh the evidence for each (including the story's irony and symbolism), and argue for the stronger one in a sustained, well-organized essay. Distinguish what is directly stated from what is really meant.

AP (650 words; AP: AP-LIT.NAR, AP-LIT.LAN): Write a literary argument in which you analyze how Kate Chopin uses irony in Désirée's Baby to complicate the reader's understanding of racial pride destroying love. Develop a defensible thesis, select evidence purposefully, and explain how specific choices of diction and syntax create meaning.

College Freshman (1000 words; AP: see unit standards): Situate Désirée's Baby within its historical and literary context and argue how the story's treatment of racial pride destroying love responds to that context. Engage with at least one secondary perspective (a critic, historian or the author's own statements), integrate quotations smoothly, and cite in MLA style.

College Sophomore (1250 words; AP: see unit standards): Read Désirée's Baby alongside the conventions of its genre and period. Argue how the story's handling of racial pride destroying love follows or bends those conventions, using the irony as evidence, and test your reading against one published critic. Document two secondary sources in MLA.

College Junior (1500 words; AP: see unit standards): Apply a named critical approach (for example formalist, historicist, feminist, psychoanalytic or ecocritical) to Désirée's Baby and its treatment of racial pride destroying love. State your method, show what it reveals in the story's irony and symbolism, and identify where the text resists it.

College Senior (2000 words; AP: see unit standards): Develop a research argument that reads Désirée's Baby as evidence for a larger claim about racial pride destroying love in Désirée's Baby. Connect close reading of the story to the whole story, engage at least four scholarly sources, and state precisely where your reading departs from theirs (Chicago style).

Graduate / PhD (2500 words; AP: see unit standards): Develop an original argument that reads Désirée's Baby as a hinge in the story's larger treatment of racial pride destroying love. Position your reading within a named critical conversation (for example formalist, historicist, psychoanalytic, feminist or postcolonial approaches), account for the textual history where relevant, and articulate the stakes of your intervention for scholarship on Désirée's Baby.

SAT-style questions

1. She was thanking God for the blessing of her husband's love:--

   As used in the text, what does the word “thanking” most nearly mean?

   A. something immaterial that stands in the way and must be circumvented or surmounted

   B. expressing gratitude to

   C. regaining self-control

   D. in an unjust manner

2. The little one awoke in his arms and began to cry for "Dada." That was as much as she could do or say. Some people thought she might have strayed there of her own accord, for she was of the toddling age. The prevailing belief was that she had been purposely left by a party of Texans, whose canvas-covered wagon, late in the day, had crossed the ferry that Coton Mais kept, just below the plantation. In time Madame Valmondé abandoned every speculation but the one that Désirée had been sent to her by a beneficent Providence to be the child of her > affection, seeing that she was without child of the flesh. For the girl grew to be beautiful and gentle, affectionate and sincere,--the idol of Valmondé.

Which choice best states a central concern of "Désirée's Baby"?

A. Racial pride destroying love

B. The closing of the frontier

C. Superstition used against a credulous man

D. The cost of wanting to seem richer than you are

SAT key: 1. B (expressing gratitude to); 2. A (Racial pride destroying love)
