Lesson 1: Introduction to The Garden Party

Author biography

Katherine Mansfield was born Kathleen Mansfield Beauchamp in Wellington, New Zealand, on 14 October 1888, into a wealthy family. She moved to London at nineteen, lived among modernist writers including Virginia Woolf and D. H. Lawrence, and married the critic John Middleton Murry. Her collections Bliss (1920) and The Garden Party (1922) helped create the modern plotless, impressionistic short story. She died of tuberculosis near Fontainebleau, France, on 9 January 1923, aged 34.

Historical and cultural context

Set in a wealthy suburb of Wellington, New Zealand, modelled on Mansfield's childhood home on Tinakori Road. Colonial New Zealand society kept sharp class divisions; the workmen's cottages lay just below the big houses.

Publication and reception, then and now

First published in the Westminster Gazette (Saturday edition) in February 1922; collected in The Garden Party and Other Stories (1922).

Then: The collection was a critical success in the last year of Mansfield's life.

Now: A classic of modernist short fiction, taught for its shifting point of view, class critique and unresolved epiphany.

Overview (spoiler-free)

The Sheridan family prepares for a lavish garden party. Laura, the youngest daughter, learns that a working man who lived in the cottages nearby has been killed in an accident, and wants to cancel the party.

Main themes

- class and privilege.
- life and death.
- coming of age.

Why it matters

The story asks what we owe neighbours whose lives we don't see.

Spoilers · teacher only

Her mother refuses; after the party Laura takes leftover food to the widow, sees the dead man, and is moved by his peaceful beauty; she can only stammer to her brother, "Isn't life—".

Focus: a girl's first encounter with death across the class line

Content note (death of a working man, viewing a body): Sensitive content: Death of a working man; viewing a body. Preview the story, tell students in advance, and allow a pass on reading aloud. Keep discussion on how the writer uses these elements, not on graphic detail.
Student preview: Heads-up: this story includes death of a working man; viewing a body.
Suggested language: "Why does the writer include this, and what does it make us notice?"

Teacher only · spoilers

The wealthy Sheridans prepare a garden party. Laura learns that a young carter from the poor cottages below, Scott, has been killed, and wants to cancel; her mother and sister refuse. After the party, Laura takes a basket of leftovers to the widow and is led to see the dead man, who looks peaceful and beautiful. She apologizes for her hat and, sobbing, tries to tell her brother Laurie what life is.

Background: Published in 1922 in the Westminster Gazette; Mansfield drew on her childhood in Wellington, New Zealand.

Significance: A modernist story of free indirect discourse and epiphany.

Mini-lecture (read or adapt the script).
Published in 1922 in the Westminster Gazette; Mansfield drew on her childhood in Wellington, New Zealand. A modernist story of free indirect discourse and epiphany. Point of view: Free indirect discourse slips into Laura's (and others') voices. Symbolism: Laura's hat, a gift of luxury, marks her class even at the cottage. Irony: The family calls her "absurd" for wanting to cancel. Watch for the hat: class privilege.

Annotate the story for point of view, symbolism (three marks with a margin note each), then write one claim-evidence-reasoning paragraph: what does this story suggest about a girl's first encounter with death across the class line? Then start your writing prompt at your assigned level (HS Sophomore: Analyze how The Garden Party develops the idea of a girl's first encounter with death across the class line. Make a precise claim, support it with at least three pieces of textual evidence, and explain how the author's use of point of view and imagery shapes that idea. Address one possible counterclaim.) Exemplar: Laura's encounter with death shakes, but does not fully break, her class view. When the text says "You are being very absurd, Laura" (The Garden Party, paragraph 123), it shows this directly. Her mother says "You are being very absurd, Laura," yet at the cottage Laura says "Forgive my hat," aware of her privilege; she finds the dead man "wonderful, beautiful" and cannot express what she has learned.

Writing prompts (eleven rigor levels)

Middle School (250 words; Common Core: RL.7.6, W.7.1): Excerpt-based (Middle School support track; this story is above the grades 6–8 complexity band, so work from the passage your teacher selects). In “The Garden Party,” how does Mansfield show a girl's first encounter with death across the class line? Write a paragraph that states your claim, quotes two details from the passage, and explains how each detail supports your idea. Use the point of view you noticed as one piece of evidence.

HS Freshman (350 words; Common Core: RL.9-10.6, W.9-10.1): In The Garden Party, how does Mansfield develop the idea of a girl's first encounter with death across the class line? State a clear claim, support it with two or three quotations, and explain how the point of view in the story helps build that idea.

HS Sophomore (450 words; Common Core: RL.9-10.6, W.9-10.1): Analyze how The Garden Party develops the idea of a girl's first encounter with death across the class line. Make a precise claim, support it with at least three pieces of textual evidence, and explain how the author's use of point of view and imagery shapes that idea. Address one possible counterclaim.

HS Junior (550 words; Common Core: RL.11-12.5, RL.11-12.1, W.11-12.1): Analyze how the structure of The Garden Party (where it begins, turns and ends) and its point of view shape the reader's understanding of a girl's first encounter with death across the class line. Identify one place where the text leaves matters uncertain and explain how that uncertainty adds to its meaning. Distinguish what is directly stated from what is really meant.

HS Senior (600 words; Common Core: RL.11-12.6, W.11-12.1): Two readers disagree about what The Garden Party suggests about a girl's first encounter with death across the class line. Lay out two plausible interpretations, weigh the evidence for each (including the story's point of view and imagery), and argue for the stronger one in a sustained, well-organized essay. Distinguish what is directly stated from what is really meant.

AP (650 words; Common Core: RL.11-12.6, W.11-12.1): Write a literary argument in which you analyze how Katherine Mansfield uses point of view in The Garden Party to complicate the reader's understanding of a girl's first encounter with death across the class line. Develop a defensible thesis, select evidence purposefully, and explain how specific choices of diction and syntax create meaning.

College Freshman (1000 words; Common Core: ICC-WC-1.3, ICC-WC-1.5, ICC-WC-1.1): Situate The Garden Party within its historical and literary context and argue how the story's treatment of a girl's first encounter with death across the class line responds to that context. Engage with at least one secondary perspective (a critic, historian or the author's own statements), integrate quotations smoothly, and cite in MLA style.

College Sophomore (1250 words; Common Core: LeL-C2-LIT-1, LeL-C2-W-1): Read The Garden Party alongside the conventions of its genre and period. Argue how the story's handling of a girl's first encounter with death across the class line follows or bends those conventions, using the point of view as evidence, and test your reading against one published critic. Document two secondary sources in MLA.

College Junior (1500 words; Common Core: LeL-C3-LIT-1, LeL-C3-W-1): Apply a named critical approach (for example formalist, historicist, feminist, psychoanalytic or ecocritical) to The Garden Party and its treatment of a girl's first encounter with death across the class line. State your method, show what it reveals in the story's point of view and imagery, and identify where the text resists it.

College Senior (2000 words; Common Core: LeL-C4-LIT-1, LeL-C4-W-1): Develop a research argument that reads The Garden Party as evidence for a larger claim about a girl's first encounter with death across the class line in The Garden Party. Connect close reading of the story to the whole story, engage at least four scholarly sources, and state precisely where your reading departs from theirs (Chicago style).

Graduate / PhD (2500 words; Common Core: LeL-GR-LIT-1, LeL-GR-W-1): Develop an original argument that reads The Garden Party as a hinge in the story's larger treatment of a girl's first encounter with death across the class line. Position your reading within a named critical conversation (for example formalist, historicist, psychoanalytic, feminist or postcolonial approaches), account for the textual history where relevant, and articulate the stakes of your intervention for scholarship on The Garden Party.

SAT-style questions

1. But Meg could not possibly go and supervise the men.

   As used in the text, what does the word “supervise” most nearly mean?

   A. to watch over and direct work

   B. put into a proper or systematic order

   C. a daily or weekly publication on folded sheets; contains news and articles and advertisements

   D. called on (someone)

2. And after all the weather was ideal. They could not have had a more perfect day for a garden-party if they had ordered it. Windless, warm, the sky without a cloud. Only the blue was veiled with a haze of light gold, as it is sometimes in early summer. The gardener had been up since dawn, mowing the lawns and sweeping them, until the grass and the dark flat rosettes where the daisy plants had been seemed to shine. As for the roses, you could not help feeling they understood that roses are the only flowers that impress people at garden-parties; the only flowers that everybody is certain of knowing. Hundreds, yes, literally hundreds, had come out in a single night; the green bushes bowed down as though they had been visited by archangels.

   Which choice best states a central concern of “The Garden Party”?

   A. Courage in defense of home

   B. Endurance turning to justice

   C. A girl's first encounter with death across the class line

   D. Racial pride destroying love

SAT key: 1. A (to watch over and direct work); 2. C (A girl's first encounter with death across the class line)

Original Liber et Libri curriculum. Quotations from the public-domain text. Vocabulary definitions are modern and contextual (curated; based on Princeton WordNet 3.0). Word histories appear only where verified (Online Etymology Dictionary, 2026-10-20); other words are student look-ups. AP and Cambridge entries are our own summaries with links, not College Board or Cambridge text; ICC-WC and LeL IDs are Liber et Libri labels. Included with every curriculum purchase and with Classroom Pro.
