Lesson 1: Introduction to The Last Leaf

Author biography

O. Henry was the pen name of William Sydney Porter, born on 11 September 1862 in Greensboro, North Carolina. He trained as a pharmacist, moved to Texas, and worked as a draftsman, bank teller and humorous journalist. Convicted of embezzling from the Austin bank where he had worked (he maintained his innocence), he served about three years in the Ohio Penitentiary (1898–1901), where he began publishing stories as O. Henry. In New York he wrote a story a week for the New York World and produced hundreds of tales of ordinary city people, famous for their warmth, wordplay and twist endings. He died in New York on 5 June 1910.

Historical and cultural context

Greenwich Village around 1900 was a cheap neighbourhood of artists; pneumonia was a leading cause of death before antibiotics (penicillin was not used until the 1940s).

Publication and reception, then and now

Collected in The Trimmed Lamp (1907); it may have appeared first in a newspaper.

Then: A popular sentimental tale.

Now: Widely taught for its personification, theme of hope, and twist.

Overview (spoiler-free)

In a Greenwich Village studio, young artist Johnsy falls ill with pneumonia and decides she will die when the last ivy leaf falls from the vine outside.

Main themes

- hope and the will to live.
- sacrifice.
- art and its purpose.

Why it matters

It asks what art is for and how much hope matters in illness.

Spoilers · teacher only

One leaf never falls, and Johnsy recovers; old Behrman, a failed painter, had painted it on the wall during a storm, caught pneumonia and died. It was his masterpiece.

In Greenwich Village, young artist Johnsy is dying of pneumonia and believes she will die when the last ivy leaf falls outside her window. Her friend Sue tells their neighbor, the old failed painter Behrman. Through a stormy night one leaf survives, and Johnsy regains her will to live. Then they learn Behrman died of pneumonia after painting the leaf on the wall in the storm: his masterpiece.

Background: Published in 1907. Pneumonia was a leading cause of death in crowded New York tenements before antibiotics.

Significance: It links art, hope and sacrifice through a single symbol.

Published in 1907. Pneumonia was a leading cause of death in crowded New York tenements before antibiotics. It links art, hope and sacrifice through a single symbol. Personification: Pneumonia is "Mr. Pneumonia," a cold stranger with an icy finger. Symbolism: The leaf stands for life and hope. Dialect: Behrman's German accent marks him as gruff but loving. Watch for the last leaf: endurance and hope.

Then start your writing prompt at your assigned level (HS Sophomore: Analyze how The Last Leaf develops the idea of hope created by an act of sacrifice. Make a precise claim, support it with at least three pieces of textual evidence, and explain how the author's use of symbolism and irony shapes that idea. Address one possible counterclaim.) Exemplar: Behrman's leaf proves that true art serves people. When the text says "it's Behrman's masterpiece—he painted it there the night that the last leaf fell" (The Last Leaf, paragraph 55), it shows this directly. Behrman, who never painted a masterpiece, paints one leaf, and Sue says "it's Behrman's masterpiece—he painted it there the night that the last leaf fell"; its value is that it saved Johnsy.

Writing prompts (eleven rigor levels)

Middle School (250 words; Common Core: RL.7.4, W.7.1): Excerpt-based (Middle School support track; this story is above the grades 6–8 complexity band, so work from the passage your teacher selects). In “The Last Leaf,” how does Henry show hope created by an act of sacrifice? Write a paragraph that states your claim, quotes two details from the passage, and explains how each detail supports your idea. Use the symbolism you noticed as one piece of evidence.

HS Freshman (350 words; Common Core: RL.9-10.4, W.9-10.1): In The Last Leaf, how does Henry develop the idea of hope created by an act of sacrifice? State a clear claim, support it with two or three quotations, and explain how the symbolism in the story helps build that idea.

HS Sophomore (450 words; Common Core: RL.9-10.4, W.9-10.1): Analyze how The Last Leaf develops the idea of hope created by an act of sacrifice. Make a precise claim, support it with at least three pieces of textual evidence, and explain how the author's use of symbolism and irony shapes that idea. Address one possible counterclaim.

HS Junior (550 words; Common Core: RL.11-12.5, RL.11-12.1, W.11-12.1): Analyze how the structure of The Last Leaf (where it begins, turns and ends) and its symbolism shape the reader's understanding of hope created by an act of sacrifice. Identify one place where the text leaves matters uncertain and explain how that uncertainty adds to its meaning.

HS Senior (600 words; Common Core: RL.11-12.4, W.11-12.1): Two readers disagree about what The Last Leaf suggests about hope created by an act of sacrifice. Lay out two plausible interpretations, weigh the evidence for each (including the story's symbolism and irony), and argue for the stronger one in a sustained, well-organized essay.

AP (650 words; Common Core: RL.11-12.4, W.11-12.1): Write a literary argument in which you analyze how O. Henry uses symbolism in The Last Leaf to complicate the reader's understanding of hope created by an act of sacrifice. Develop a defensible thesis, select evidence purposefully, and explain how specific choices of diction and syntax create meaning.

College Freshman (1000 words; Common Core: ICC-WC-1.3, ICC-WC-1.5, ICC-WC-1.1): Situate The Last Leaf within its historical and literary context and argue how the story's treatment of hope created by an act of sacrifice responds to that context. Engage with at least one secondary perspective (a critic, historian or the author's own statements), integrate quotations smoothly, and cite in MLA style.

College Sophomore (1250 words; Common Core: LeL-C2-LIT-1, LeL-C2-W-1): Read The Last Leaf alongside the conventions of its genre and period. Argue how the story's handling of hope created by an act of sacrifice follows or bends those conventions, using the symbolism as evidence, and test your reading against one published critic. Document two secondary sources in MLA.

College Junior (1500 words; Common Core: LeL-C3-LIT-1, LeL-C3-W-1): Apply a named critical approach (for example formalist, historicist, feminist, psychoanalytic or ecocritical) to The Last Leaf and its treatment of hope created by an act of sacrifice. State your method, show what it reveals in the story's symbolism and irony, and identify where the text resists it.

College Senior (2000 words; Common Core: LeL-C4-LIT-1, LeL-C4-W-1): Develop a research argument that reads The Last Leaf as evidence for a larger claim about hope created by an act of sacrifice in The Last Leaf. Connect close reading of the story to the whole story, engage at least four scholarly sources, and state precisely where your reading departs from theirs (Chicago style).

Graduate / PhD (2500 words; Common Core: LeL-GR-LIT-1, LeL-GR-W-1): Develop an original argument that reads The Last Leaf as a hinge in the story's larger treatment of hope created by an act of sacrifice. Position your reading within a named critical conversation (for example formalist, historicist, psychoanalytic, feminist or postcolonial approaches), account for the textual history where relevant, and articulate the stakes of your intervention for scholarship on The Last Leaf.

SAT-style questions

1. Still dark green near its stem, but with its serrated edges tinted with the yellow of dissolution and decay, it hung bravely from a branch some twenty feet above the ground.

   A. with anxious care for someone

   B. one who destroys or lays waste

   C. relating to the gallant, protective code of knights

   D. having a jagged, saw-toothed edge

2. IN a little district west of Washington Square the streets have run crazy and broken themselves into small strips called "places." These "places" make strange angles and curves. One street crosses itself a time or two. An artist once discovered a valuable possibility in this street. Suppose a collector with a bill for paints, paper and canvas should, in traversing this route, suddenly meet himself coming back, without a cent having been paid on account!

   Which choice best states a central concern of "The Last Leaf"?

   A. A boy's romantic quest ending in disillusion

   B. Waking into a changed nation

   C. A story told to protect a livelihood

   D. Hope created by an act of sacrifice
