Lesson 1: Introduction to Rip Van Winkle

Author biography

Washington Irving was born in New York City on 3 April 1783, the youngest of eleven children of a merchant family, and named after George Washington. He won fame with a comic History of New York (1809) by "Diedrich Knickerbocker" and lived in England from 1815, where he published The Sketch Book of Geoffrey Crayon, Gent. (1819–20), containing "Rip Van Winkle" and "The Legend of Sleepy Hollow." He was among the first American writers admired in Europe; he later served as U.S. minister to Spain and died at Sunnyside, his home in Tarrytown, New York, on 28 November 1859.

Historical and cultural context

Set in a Dutch village in New York's Catskill Mountains before and after the American Revolution. Irving wrote it in England in 1818–19, drawing on German folk tales (one about a goatherd named Peter Klaus). Rip sleeps through the Revolution and wakes to a republic.

Publication and reception, then and now

Published in The Sketch Book of Geoffrey Crayon, Gent., first American part, 1819, under Irving's pseudonym.

Then: A transatlantic success; The Sketch Book made Irving the first American writer with an international reputation.

Now: A foundational American story; "Rip Van Winkle" has become a byword for someone out of touch with change.

Overview (spoiler-free)

Rip, a good-natured, idle villager henpecked by his wife, wanders into the mountains, drinks with a strange company of old Dutchmen playing ninepins, and falls asleep.

Main themes

- change and continuity.
- escape from responsibility.
- American identity.

Why it matters

It asks what changes in a revolution and what stays the same.

Spoilers · teacher only

He wakes twenty years later; his wife is dead, the Revolution has happened, and King George's picture on the inn sign has become George Washington's. He settles in as a village storyteller.

Then start your writing prompt at your assigned level (HS Sophomore: Analyze how Rip Van Winkle develops the idea of waking into a changed nation. Make a precise claim, support it with at least three pieces of textual evidence, and explain how the author's use of setting and irony shapes that idea. Address one possible counterclaim.) Exemplar: Irving suggests the Revolution changed the surface more than the people. When the text says "petticoat government" (Rip Van Winkle, paragraph 74), it shows this directly. Rip, still free of "petticoat government," wonders "I'm not myself--I'm somebody else," yet he soon settles back exactly as before.

Writing prompts (eleven rigor levels)

Middle School (250 words; Cambridge International: see unit standards): Excerpt-based (Middle School support track; this story is above the grades 6–8 complexity band, so work from the passage your teacher selects). In “Rip Van Winkle,” how does Irving show waking into a changed nation? Write a paragraph that states your claim, quotes two details from the passage, and explains how each detail supports your idea. Use the setting you noticed as one piece of evidence.

HS Freshman (350 words; Cambridge International: see unit standards): In Rip Van Winkle, how does Irving develop the idea of waking into a changed nation? State a clear claim, support it with two or three quotations, and explain how the setting in the story helps build that idea.

HS Sophomore (450 words; Cambridge International: see unit standards): Analyze how Rip Van Winkle develops the idea of waking into a changed nation. Make a precise claim, support it with at least three pieces of textual evidence, and explain how the author's use of setting and irony shapes that idea. Address one possible counterclaim.

HS Junior (550 words; Cambridge International: CAIE-9695.AO2, CAIE-9695.AO3): Analyze how the structure of Rip Van Winkle (where it begins, turns and ends) and its setting shape the reader's understanding of waking into a changed nation. Identify one place where the text leaves matters uncertain and explain how that uncertainty adds to its meaning.

HS Senior (600 words; Cambridge International: CAIE-9695.AO3, CAIE-9695.AO5): Two readers disagree about what Rip Van Winkle suggests about waking into a changed nation. Lay out two plausible interpretations, weigh the evidence for each (including the story's setting and irony), and argue for the stronger one in a sustained, well-organized essay.

AP (650 words; Cambridge International: CAIE-9695.AO2, CAIE-9695.AO4): Write a literary argument in which you analyze how Washington Irving uses setting in Rip Van Winkle to complicate the reader's understanding of waking into a changed nation. Develop a defensible thesis, select evidence purposefully, and explain how specific choices of diction and syntax create meaning.

College Freshman (1000 words; Cambridge International: see unit standards): Situate Rip Van Winkle within its historical and literary context and argue how the story's treatment of waking into a changed nation responds to that context. Engage with at least one secondary perspective (a critic, historian or the author's own statements), integrate quotations smoothly, and cite in MLA style.

College Sophomore (1250 words; Cambridge International: see unit standards): Read Rip Van Winkle alongside the conventions of its genre and period. Argue how the story's handling of waking into a changed nation follows or bends those conventions, using the setting as evidence, and test your reading against one published critic. Document two secondary sources in MLA.

College Junior (1500 words; Cambridge International: see unit standards): Apply a named critical approach (for example formalist, historicist, feminist, psychoanalytic or ecocritical) to Rip Van Winkle and its treatment of waking into a changed nation. State your method, show what it reveals in the story's setting and irony, and identify where the text resists it.

College Senior (2000 words; Cambridge International: see unit standards): Develop a research argument that reads Rip Van Winkle as evidence for a larger claim about waking into a changed nation in Rip Van Winkle. Connect close reading of the story to the whole story, engage at least four scholarly sources, and state precisely where your reading departs from theirs (Chicago style).

Graduate / PhD (2500 words; Cambridge International: see unit standards): Develop an original argument that reads Rip Van Winkle as a hinge in the story's larger treatment of waking into a changed nation. Position your reading within a named critical conversation (for example formalist, historicist, psychoanalytic, feminist or postcolonial approaches), account for the textual history where relevant, and articulate the stakes of your intervention for scholarship on Rip Van Winkle.

SAT-style questions

1. In old times, say the Indian traditions, there was a kind of Manitou or Spirit, who kept about the wildest recesses of the Catskill mountains, and took a mischievous pleasure in wreaking all kind of evils and vexations upon the red men.

As used in the text, what does the word “vexations” most nearly mean?

A. a very steep cliff

B. an event that happens

C. provide commentary for a film, for example

D. annoyances; worries

2. On waking, he found himself on the green knoll whence he had first seen the old man of the glen. He rubbed his eyes--it was a bright sunny morning. The birds were hopping and twittering among the bushes, and the eagle was wheeling aloft, and breasting the pure mountain breeze. "Surely," thought Rip, "I have not slept here all night." He recalled the occurrences before he fell asleep. The strange man with the keg of liquor--the mountain ravine--the wild retreat among the rocks--the woe-begone party at ninepins--the flagon--"Oh! that flagon! that wicked flagon!" thought Rip--"what excuse shall I make to Dame Van Winkle?"

Which choice best states a central concern of “Rip Van Winkle”?

A. Racial pride destroying love

B. Waking into a changed nation

C. Accepting one's place in nature's cycle

D. Greed that grasps more than a person needs

SAT key: 1. D (annoyances; worries); 2. B (Waking into a changed nation)
