Lesson 1: Introduction to Spunk

Author biography

Zora Neale Hurston was born in Notasulga, Alabama, on 7 January 1891 and grew up in Eatonville, Florida, one of the first incorporated all-Black towns in the United States. She studied at Howard University and at Barnard College under the anthropologist Franz Boas, collected African American folklore in the South and the Caribbean (Mules and Men, 1935), and became a central figure of the Harlem Renaissance. Their Eyes Were Watching God (1937) is her best-known story. She died in poverty in Fort Pierce, Florida, on 28 January 1960; Alice Walker's 1975 essay "In Search of Zora Neale Hurston" led to her rediscovery.

Historical and cultural context

Set in an all-Black Florida town modelled on Eatonville, where Hurston grew up; the story is told through the voices of men on a store porch.

Publication and reception, then and now

Published in Opportunity magazine in June 1925; included in The New Negro (1925).

Then: Won second prize in Opportunity's 1925 literary contest.

Now: A Harlem Renaissance classic of folk voice and community storytelling.

Overview (spoiler-free)

Spunk Banks, the strongest man in town, openly takes Lena from her husband, Joe Kanty, whom the porch men think a coward.

Main themes

- courage and manhood.
- the supernatural.
- community judgment.

Why it matters

It shows how a community's talk shapes reputation.

Spoilers · teacher only

Joe attacks Spunk and is shot; a black bobcat appears, and Spunk dies at the sawmill, saying Joe pushed him.

In an Eatonville store, men watch big Spunk Banks walk off with Lena, wife of timid Joe Kanty. Shamed, Joe attacks Spunk with a razor and is shot dead. A black bobcat haunts Spunk, who believes it is Joe. At the sawmill Spunk is pushed onto the saw and dies, saying Joe pushed him. The town gossips about who will court Lena next.

Background: Published in Opportunity in June 1925 and reprinted in Alain Locke's The New Negro (1925).

Significance: Hurston's early prize-winning story, built around a chorus of community voices.

Mini-lecture (read or adapt the script).
Published in Opportunity in June 1925 and reprinted in Alain Locke's The New Negro (1925). Hurston's early prize-winning story, built around a chorus of community voices. Point of view: Most of the story is told through the talk of men at the village store, especially Elijah Mosely; they act like a Greek chorus, judging and spreading the story, and their opinion of Joe shifts from contempt to respect. Dialect: Hurston, trained as an anthropologist, records the speech of rural Black Florida faithfully, treating it as a rich, expressive language rather than a joke. Supernatural: The black bob-cat that appears after Joe's death, and Spunk's claim that he was pushed at the saw, suggest Joe's spirit returning; Hurston never confirms it. Watch for the black bob-cat: Joe's returning spirit, watching Spunk.

Independent annotation and a claim-evidence-reasoning paragraph (exemplar given).

Annotate the story for point of view, dialect (three marks with a margin note each), then write one claim-evidence-reasoning paragraph: what does this story suggest about courage and guilt in a small community? Then start your writing prompt at your assigned level (HS Sophomore: Analyze how Spunk develops the idea of courage and guilt in a small community. Make a precise claim, support it with at least three pieces of textual evidence, and explain how the author's use of diction / vocabulary and characterization shapes that idea. Address one possible counterclaim.) Exemplar: Hurston leaves the supernatural open but shows the community's belief in Joe's courage. When the text says “Den he claimed somebody pushed 'im but 'twant nobody close to 'im” (Spunk, paragraph 44), it shows this directly. Spunk "claimed somebody pushed 'im but 'twant nobody close," and the speaker says "Ah b'leeve Joe pushed 'im mahself."

Writing prompts (eleven rigor levels)

Middle School (250 words; Cambridge International: see unit standards): Excerpt-based (Middle School support track; this story is above the grades 6–8 complexity band, so work from the passage your teacher selects). In “Spunk,” how does Hurston show courage and guilt in a small community? Write a paragraph that states your claim, quotes two details from the passage, and explains how each detail supports your idea. Use the diction / vocabulary you noticed as one piece of evidence.

HS Freshman (350 words; Cambridge International: see unit standards): In Spunk, how does Hurston develop the idea of courage and guilt in a small community? State a clear claim, support it with two or three quotations, and explain how the diction / vocabulary in the story helps build that idea.

HS Sophomore (450 words; Cambridge International: see unit standards): Analyze how Spunk develops the idea of courage and guilt in a small community. Make a precise claim, support it with at least three pieces of textual evidence, and explain how the author's use of diction / vocabulary and characterization shapes that idea. Address one possible counterclaim.

HS Junior (550 words; Cambridge International: CAIE-9695.AO2, CAIE-9695.AO3): Analyze how the structure of Spunk (where it begins, turns and ends) and its diction / vocabulary shape the reader's understanding of courage and guilt in a small community. Identify one place where the text leaves matters uncertain and explain how that uncertainty adds to its meaning.

HS Senior (600 words; Cambridge International: CAIE-9695.AO3, CAIE-9695.AO5): Two readers disagree about what Spunk suggests about courage and guilt in a small community. Lay out two plausible interpretations, weigh the evidence for each (including the story's diction / vocabulary and characterization), and argue for the stronger one in a sustained, well-organized essay.

AP (650 words; Cambridge International: CAIE-9695.AO2, CAIE-9695.AO4): Write a literary argument in which you analyze how Zora Neale Hurston uses diction / vocabulary in Spunk to complicate the reader's understanding of courage and guilt in a small community. Develop a defensible thesis, select evidence purposefully, and explain how specific choices of diction and syntax create meaning.

College Freshman (1000 words; Cambridge International: see unit standards): Situate Spunk within its historical and literary context and argue how the story's treatment of courage and guilt in a small community responds to that context. Engage with at least one secondary perspective (a critic, historian or the author's own statements), integrate quotations smoothly, and cite in MLA style.

College Sophomore (1250 words; Cambridge International: see unit standards): Read Spunk alongside the conventions of its genre and period. Argue how the story's handling of courage and guilt in a small community follows or bends those conventions, using the diction / vocabulary as evidence, and test your reading against one published critic. Document two secondary sources in MLA.

College Junior (1500 words; Cambridge International: see unit standards): Apply a named critical approach (for example formalist, historicist, feminist, psychoanalytic or ecocritical) to Spunk and its treatment of courage and guilt in a small community. State your method, show what it reveals in the story's diction / vocabulary and characterization, and identify where the text resists it.

College Senior (2000 words; Cambridge International: see unit standards): Develop a research argument that reads Spunk as evidence for a larger claim about courage and guilt in a small community in Spunk. Connect close reading of the story to the whole story, engage at least four scholarly sources, and state precisely where your reading departs from theirs (Chicago style).

Graduate / PhD (2500 words; Cambridge International: see unit standards): Develop an original argument that reads Spunk as a hinge in the story's larger treatment of courage and guilt in a small community. Position your reading within a named critical conversation (for example formalist, historicist, psychoanalytic, feminist or postcolonial approaches), account for the textual history where relevant, and articulate the stakes of your intervention for scholarship on Spunk.
