Lesson 1: Introduction to Sweat

Author biography

Zora Neale Hurston was born in Notasulga, Alabama, on 7 January 1891 and grew up in Eatonville, Florida, one of the first incorporated all-Black towns in the United States. She studied at Howard University and at Barnard College under the anthropologist Franz Boas, collected African American folklore in the South and the Caribbean (Mules and Men, 1935), and became a central figure of the Harlem Renaissance. Their Eyes Were Watching God (1937) is her best-known story. She died in poverty in Fort Pierce, Florida, on 28 January 1960; Alice Walker's 1975 essay "In Search of Zora Neale Hurston" led to her rediscovery.

Historical and cultural context

Set in a Florida town in the 1920s; Black washerwomen did white families' laundry.

Publication and reception, then and now

Published in Fire!! (1926), a Harlem Renaissance magazine.

Then: Fire!! had limited circulation.

Now: A classic of Hurston's dialect fiction, domestic violence and justice.

Overview (spoiler-free)

Delia, a washerwoman, has supported her abusive husband Sykes for fifteen years; he tries to drive her out.

Delia Jones, a washerwoman in Eatonville, Florida, has supported her abusive husband Sykes for fifteen years. Sykes wants her out of the house for his mistress and terrorizes her with a rattlesnake he keeps in a box. One night the snake gets loose; Sykes, in the dark, is bitten. Delia, hearing his cries, does not help, and waits under the Chinaberry tree as he dies.

Background: Published in 1926 in Fire!!, the one-issue Harlem Renaissance magazine edited by Wallace Thurman. Its US copyright term has expired (1926 publication).

Significance: A central Harlem Renaissance story that uses Eatonville dialect and biblical symbolism.

Published in 1926 in Fire!!, the one-issue Harlem Renaissance magazine edited by Wallace Thurman. Its US copyright term has expired (1926 publication). A central Harlem Renaissance story that uses Eatonville dialect and biblical symbolism. Irony: Sykes brings the rattlesnake to kill Delia, who fears snakes, and it kills him instead; his weapon recoils on him. Symbolism: The snake (and the bullwhip Sykes throws on her, which "looks just like a snake") stands for Sykes's cruelty and, biblically, for evil in the home. Dialect: Characters speak rural Black Florida dialect, which Hurston presents with respect; the porch men offer a chorus that condemns Sykes. Watch for sweat: Delia's labor, which pays for the house she claims as her own.

Independent annotation and a claim-evidence-reasoning paragraph (exemplar given).

Annotate the story for irony, symbolism (three marks with a margin note each), then write one claim-evidence-reasoning paragraph: what does this story suggest about endurance turning to justice? Then start your writing prompt at your assigned level (HS Sophomore: Analyze how Sweat develops the idea of endurance turning to justice. Make a precise claim, support it with at least three pieces of textual evidence, and explain how the author's use of symbolism and characterization shapes that idea. Address one possible counterclaim.) Exemplar: Delia's labor gives her a moral claim to the home that Sykes tries to take. When the text says "Mah tub of suds is filled yo' belly with vittles more times than yo' hands is filled it" (Sweat, paragraph 20), it shows this directly. She tells him "Mah tub of suds is filled yo' belly with vittles more times than yo' hands is filled it," and sums up fifteen years as "Sweat, sweat, sweat!"; when Sykes's own snake kills him, the story lets her keep what she earned.

10. Background: Published in 1926 in Fire!!, the one-issue Harlem Renaissance magazine edited by Wallace Thurman. Its US copyright term has expired (1926 publication). How does knowing this change the way you read one moment in the story? [DOK 3 · thinkPairShare · wait 8 s · AP-LIT.SET] Look for: A specific moment reread in light of the context.

    Answer guidance: A defensible line of argument: Delia's labor gives her a moral claim to the home that Sykes tries to take. Useful evidence: “Mah tub of suds is filled yo' belly with vittles more times than yo' hands is filled it” (Sweat, paragraph 20): Delia's claim. Theme link: Sykes reaps what he sows; the story asks whether Delia's choice not to help is justice, revenge or survival. Credit any position that is supported by quotation and reasoning; push one-sided answers to address the strongest counterpoint.

Evaluative / synthesis / creative

1. A critic might argue: “A central Harlem Renaissance story that uses Eatonville dialect and biblical symbolism.” How far do you agree? Take a stand and defend it with two lines from the story. [DOK 3 · fourCorners · wait 8 s · AP-LIT.LAN, AP-LIT.LAN] Look for: A defended position with evidence and one counterpoint.

    Answer guidance: A defensible line of argument: Delia's labor gives her a moral claim to the home that Sykes tries to take. Useful evidence: “It was eleven o'clock of a Spring night in Florida” (Sweat, paragraph 1): The opening. Theme link: Sykes reaps what he sows; the story asks whether Delia's choice not to help is justice, revenge or survival. Credit any position that is supported by quotation and reasoning; push one-sided answers to address the strongest counterpoint.

2. Which character in this story acts most wisely, and which least? Judge them by a standard you name. [DOK 3 · thinkPairShare · wait 8 s · AP-LIT.CHR, AP-LIT.LAN] Look for: An evaluation using an explicit criterion and evidence.

    Answer guidance: A defensible line of argument: Delia's labor gives her a moral claim to the home that Sykes tries to take. Useful evidence: “Sweat, sweat, sweat! Writing prompts (eleven rigor levels)

Middle School (250 words; AP: see unit standards): Excerpt-based (Middle School support track; this story is above the grades 6–8 complexity band, so work from the passage your teacher selects). In "Sweat," how does Hurston show endurance turning to justice? Write a paragraph that states your claim, quotes two details from the passage, and explains how each detail supports your idea. Use the symbolism you noticed as one piece of evidence.

HS Freshman (350 words; AP: see unit standards): In Sweat, how does Hurston develop the idea of endurance turning to justice? State a clear claim, support it with two or three quotations, and explain how the symbolism in the story helps build that idea.

HS Sophomore (450 words; AP: see unit standards): Analyze how Sweat develops the idea of endurance turning to justice. Make a precise claim, support it with at least three pieces of textual evidence, and explain how the author's use of symbolism and characterization shapes that idea. Address one possible counterclaim.

HS Junior (550 words; AP: see unit standards): Analyze how the structure of Sweat (where it begins, turns and ends) and its symbolism shape the reader's understanding of endurance turning to justice. Identify one place where the text leaves matters uncertain and explain how that uncertainty adds to its meaning.

HS Senior (600 words; AP: see unit standards): Two readers disagree about what Sweat suggests about endurance turning to justice. Lay out two plausible interpretations, weigh the evidence for each (including the story's symbolism and characterization), and argue for the stronger one in a sustained, well-organized essay.

AP (650 words; AP: AP-LIT.FIG, AP-LIT.LAN): Write a literary argument in which you analyze how Zora Neale Hurston uses symbolism in Sweat to complicate the reader's understanding of endurance turning to justice. Develop a defensible thesis, select evidence purposefully, and explain how specific choices of diction and syntax create meaning.

College Freshman (1000 words; AP: see unit standards): Situate Sweat within its historical and literary context and argue how the story's treatment of endurance turning to justice responds to that context. Engage with at least one secondary perspective (a critic, historian or the author's own statements), integrate quotations smoothly, and cite in MLA style.

College Sophomore (1250 words; AP: see unit standards): Read Sweat alongside the conventions of its genre and period. Argue how the story's handling of endurance turning to justice follows or bends those conventions, using the symbolism as evidence, and test your reading against one published critic. Document two secondary sources in MLA.

College Junior (1500 words; AP: see unit standards): Apply a named critical approach (for example formalist, historicist, feminist, psychoanalytic or ecocritical) to Sweat and its treatment of endurance turning to justice. State your method, show what it reveals in the story's symbolism and characterization, and identify where the text resists it.

College Senior (2000 words; AP: see unit standards): Develop a research argument that reads Sweat as evidence for a larger claim about endurance turning to justice in Sweat. Connect close reading of the story to the whole story, engage at least four scholarly sources, and state precisely where your reading departs from theirs (Chicago style).

Graduate / PhD (2500 words; AP: see unit standards): Develop an original argument that reads Sweat as a hinge in the story's larger treatment of endurance turning to justice. Position your reading within a named critical conversation (for example formalist, historicist, psychoanalytic, feminist or postcolonial approaches), account for the textual history where relevant, and articulate the stakes of your intervention for scholarship on Sweat.
