Grades: Grades 9–12 (accessible text, well suited to the scaffolded-support track; scales to graduate via rigor levels). Short story: read whole in one 90-minute lesson (assign longer stories as pre-reading). The scaffolded-support track works from the full text with scaffolds. Weeks: 1. Class days: 2 × 90 minutes (1 chapter lessons plus seminar, test and essay days).

Essential questions

- What does The Most Dangerous Game suggest about hunter and hunted?
- What does The Most Dangerous Game suggest about civilization and savagery?
- What does The Most Dangerous Game suggest about survival?

Objectives

- Students will cite at least 2 quotations, with locations, to support each written claim about what the text says explicitly and implicitly (scored on the writing-prompt rubric).
- Students will trace one theme across at least 3 sections of the story in the final paper, earning at least 70 of 100 rubric points.
- Students will explain how characters, setting and point of view interact in at least 3 exit tickets, each meeting the claim-evidence-reasoning criteria.
- Students will determine the in-context meaning of taught vocabulary, scoring at least 80% on the vocabulary items of the story quizzes.
- Students will write an argument with a clear claim, reasons and relevant evidence, scoring at least 80% on the unit test's short-answer scoring guides.

Author biography

Richard Connell was born in Poughkeepsie, New York, on 17 October 1893. He reported for newspapers as a teenager, graduated from Harvard, worked in advertising and served in France in the First World War. He became a prolific magazine writer and Hollywood screenwriter; his story for Meet John Doe (1941) earned an Academy Award nomination. He died in Beverly Hills on 22 November 1949.

Historical and cultural context

Written after the First World War, in which Connell served, and at the height of the fashion for big-game hunting safaris among wealthy Americans and Europeans. General Zaroff is a Cossack aristocrat who fled the Russian Revolution of 1917.

Publication and reception, then and now

First published in Collier's on 19 January 1924; it won the O. Henry Memorial Award.

Then: An instant popular success, filmed in 1932.

Now: One of the most-taught stories in American schools, the model of suspense and the source of countless "human hunt" plots.

Overview (spoiler-free)

Rainsford, a famous big-game hunter, falls overboard near the mysterious Ship-Trap Island and finds the château of General Zaroff, who has grown bored with hunting animals.

Main themes

- hunter and hunted.
- civilization versus savagery.
- reason and instinct.

Why it matters

It asks students to think about empathy and violence, and teaches suspense and conflict.

Spoilers · teacher only

Zaroff hunts shipwrecked men; he hunts Rainsford for three days. Rainsford escapes by leaping into the sea, ambushes Zaroff in his bedroom, and the story ends with Rainsford sleeping in Zaroff's bed, implying he killed him.

First, meaning. I read "The world is made up of two classes—the hunters and the huntees" slowly and put it in my own words: Rainsford claims the world is made up of two classes, the hunters and the huntees. Next, craft. I notice the confident, simple claim, stated as if it were a law of nature. The strongest word is "classes": it sorts living things into fixed ranks, the same logic Zaroff uses to justify hunting men. Then, effect. How does Rainsford's line set up the irony of the whole story? My answer: Rainsford's own belief will be turned against him when Zaroff decides humans are fair prey; the line forces him to face what his attitude means once he becomes the hunted.

Lesson 2: The Most Dangerous Game

Focus: the hunter becoming the hunted

Objective: Students will analyze how conflict develops in "The Most Dangerous Game" by writing a claim-evidence-reasoning paragraph that cites at least 2 quotations from the section, and will score at least 80% on the section quiz.

Content note (killing of humans for sport, violence, zaroff's racist hierarchy of victims (racist language), alcohol or drugs (mentioned)): Sensitive content: Killing of humans for sport; violence; Zaroff's racist hierarchy of victims (racist language). Preview the story, tell students in advance, and allow a pass on reading aloud. Keep discussion on how the writer uses these elements, not on graphic detail. This section mentions drinking or a drug ("… le the general was sitting, alone. "You'll have a cocktail, Mr. Rainsford," he suggested. The cock…"). Treat it as period custom or plot detail; name it plainly and don't glamorize it.

First, meaning. I read "The world is made up of two classes—the hunters and the huntees" slowly and put it in my own words: On the yacht, Rainsford tells Whitney that the world is made up of two classes, hunters and huntees. Next, craft. I notice the neat two-part division and the made-up joking word "huntees," which makes the hunted sound unimportant. The strongest word is "huntees": the comic word shows he gives no thought to how the hunted animal feels. Then, effect. What does Rainsford's view of the world show about him at the start? My answer: Rainsford is confident that he will always be the hunter; the story will reverse this by making him Zaroff's prey, so he learns what the "huntees" feel.

Writing prompts (eleven rigor levels)

Scaffolded support (250 words; Common Core: RL.9-10.3, W.9-10.1): Supported track (work from the passage your teacher selects). In “The Most Dangerous Game,” how does Connell show the hunter becoming the hunted? Write a paragraph that states your claim, quotes two details from the passage, and explains how each detail supports your idea. Use the conflict you noticed as one piece of evidence.

HS Freshman (350 words; Common Core: RL.9-10.3, W.9-10.1): In The Most Dangerous Game, how does Connell develop the idea of the hunter becoming the hunted? State a clear claim, support it with two or three quotations, and explain how the conflict in the story helps build that idea.

HS Sophomore (450 words; Common Core: RL.9-10.3, W.9-10.1): Analyze how The Most Dangerous Game develops the idea of the hunter becoming the hunted. Make a precise claim, support it with at least three pieces of textual evidence, and explain how the author's use of conflict and foreshadowing shapes that idea. Address one possible counterclaim.

HS Junior (550 words; Common Core: RL.11-12.5, RL.11-12.1, W.11-12.1, RL.11-12.9): Analyze how the structure of The Most Dangerous Game (where it begins, turns and ends) and its conflict shape the reader's understanding of the hunter becoming the hunted. Identify one place where the text leaves matters uncertain and explain how that uncertainty adds to its meaning.

HS Senior (600 words; Common Core: RL.11-12.3, W.11-12.1, RL.11-12.9): Two readers disagree about what The Most Dangerous Game suggests about the hunter becoming the hunted. Lay out two plausible interpretations, weigh the evidence for each (including the story's conflict and foreshadowing), and argue for the stronger one in a sustained, well-organized essay.

AP (650 words; Common Core: RL.11-12.3, W.11-12.1): Write a literary argument in which you analyze how Richard Connell uses conflict in The Most Dangerous Game to complicate the reader's understanding of the hunter becoming the hunted. Develop a defensible thesis, select evidence purposefully, and explain how specific choices of diction and syntax create meaning.

College Freshman (1000 words; Common Core: ICC-WC-1.3, ICC-WC-1.5, ICC-WC-1.1): Situate The Most Dangerous Game within its historical and literary context and argue how the story's treatment of the hunter becoming the hunted responds to that context. Engage with at least one secondary perspective (a critic, historian or the author's own statements), integrate quotations smoothly, and cite in MLA style.

College Sophomore (1250 words; Common Core: LeL-C2-LIT-1, LeL-C2-W-1): Read The Most Dangerous Game alongside the conventions of its genre and period. Argue how the story's handling of the hunter becoming the hunted follows or bends those conventions, using the conflict as evidence, and test your reading against one published critic. Document two secondary sources in MLA.

College Junior (1500 words; Common Core: LeL-C3-LIT-1, LeL-C3-W-1): Apply a named critical approach (for example formalist, historicist, feminist, psychoanalytic or ecocritical) to The Most Dangerous Game and its treatment of the hunter becoming the hunted. State your method, show what it reveals in the story's conflict and foreshadowing, and identify where the text resists it.

College Senior (2000 words; Common Core: LeL-C4-LIT-1, LeL-C4-W-1): Develop a research argument that reads The Most Dangerous Game as evidence for a larger claim about the hunter becoming the hunted in The Most Dangerous Game. Connect close reading of the story to the whole story, engage at least four scholarly sources, and state precisely where your reading departs from theirs (Chicago style).

Graduate / PhD (2500 words; Common Core: LeL-GR-LIT-1, LeL-GR-W-1): Develop an original argument that reads The Most Dangerous Game as a hinge in the story's larger treatment of the hunter becoming the hunted. Position your reading within a named critical conversation (for example formalist, historicist, psychoanalytic, feminist or postcolonial approaches), account for the textual history where relevant, and articulate the stakes of your intervention for scholarship on The Most Dangerous Game.

   As used in the text, what does the word “wrestled” most nearly mean?

   A. interlace by or as if by weaving

   B. a pain in the head

   C. struggled with effort (out of something)

   D. utter words of protest

2. He struggled up to the surface and tried to cry out, but the wash from the speeding yacht slapped him in the face and the salt water in his open mouth made him gag and strangle. Desperately he struck out with strong strokes after the receding lights of the yacht, but he stopped before he had swum fifty feet. A certain cool-headedness had come to him; it was not the first time he had been in a tight place. There was a chance that his cries could be heard by someone aboard the yacht, but that chance was slender, and grew more slender as the yacht raced on. He wrestled himself out of his clothes, and shouted with all his power. The lights of the yacht became faint and ever-vanishing fireflies; then they were blotted out entirely by the night.

   Which choice best states a central concern of “The Most Dangerous Game”?

Final paper

The Most Dangerous Game: final paper (formal literary analysis). Choose one prompt.

1. Analyze how Richard Connell develops hunter and hunted across The Most Dangerous Game. Trace the idea through at least three moments (beginning, middle and end) and argue what the ending finally suggests.
2. Choose one recurring symbol, image or motif in The Most Dangerous Game and argue how its meaning changes over the story and why that change matters to civilization and savagery.
3. Analyze a central character's choices in The Most Dangerous Game. Argue whether the story judges that character, and how its structure or point of view shapes your answer.
4. Two readers disagree about whether The Most Dangerous Game finally endorses or criticizes its society's view of survival. Weigh both readings and argue for one, answering the strongest objection.

Length: Scaffolded support 500-700 words; HS Freshman 700-900 words; HS Sophomore 900-1,100 words; HS Junior 1,000-1,300 words; HS Senior 1,200-1,500 words; AP 1,300-1,600 words; College Freshman 1,500-2,000 words; College Sophomore 2,000-2,500 words; College Junior 2,500-3,000 words; College Senior 3,000-4,000 words; Graduate / PhD 4,000-6,000 words Evidence requirement: at least 4 quotations from at least two parts of the story. Quote the reading text exactly and cite the paragraph (MLA style). HS Senior and above: one scholarly or historical source; College Sophomore and above: two, cited in MLA.

Criterion	Points	Descriptor
Thesis	20	A specific, arguable claim that answers the prompt and organizes the paper.
Evidence	25	Well-chosen, accurately quoted and cited passages from across the work, meeting the evidence requirement.
Analysis	30	Explains how language, structure and literary elements create meaning; goes beyond summary.
Organization	15	Logical progression, clear topic sentences and transitions; introduction and conclusion frame the argument.
Style and conventions	10	Formal academic voice, present tense for literature, correct grammar and MLA format.
