Lesson 1: Introduction to The Bet

Author biography

Anton Chekhov was born on 29 January 1860 in Taganrog, Russia, the grandson of a serf. He trained as a doctor in Moscow and supported his family by writing comic sketches for magazines, then turned to serious stories and plays; he called medicine his wife and literature his mistress. His plays The Seagull, Uncle Vanya, Three Sisters and The Cherry Orchard changed modern drama. He died of tuberculosis in Badenweiler, Germany, on 15 July 1904.

Historical and cultural context

In 1880s Russia, educated people debated the death penalty and life imprisonment; Russia also exiled prisoners to Siberia. Chekhov was a doctor and visited the prison island of Sakhalin in 1890.

Publication and reception, then and now

First published in the newspaper Novoye Vremya (New Times) in 1889 under the title "A Tale"; Chekhov later shortened the ending and retitled it "The Bet."

Then: A minor work in its day.

Now: A classic for discussing values, freedom and the meaning of life.

Overview (spoiler-free)

At a party, a banker bets a young lawyer two million rubles that he cannot endure fifteen years of solitary confinement. The lawyer accepts and is locked in a garden lodge with books.

Main themes

- the value of life and freedom.
- greed.
- knowledge and wisdom.

Why it matters

It asks what really matters in a life, and whether knowledge leads to happiness.

Spoilers · teacher only

On the eve of his release, the ruined banker plans to kill him but finds a letter renouncing the money and all worldly things. The lawyer escapes five minutes early, losing the bet deliberately.

At a party a banker bets a young lawyer two million rubles that he cannot stay fifteen years in solitary confinement. The lawyer reads everything, from stories to languages and theology. On the eve of the end the ruined banker plans to kill him, but finds a letter renouncing the money and all worldly goods as vanity. The lawyer escapes five hours early, forfeiting; the banker locks the letter in his safe.

Background: Written 1889. Translation used: S. Koteliansky and J. M. Murry, The Bet and Other Stories (1915), public domain in the US.

Significance: Raises the capital punishment versus life imprisonment debate and the meaning of knowledge; on Glencoe grade 9 lesson plans.

Writing prompts (eleven rigor levels)

Middle School (250 words; Common Core: RL.7.6, W.7.1): Excerpt-based (Middle School support track; this story is above the grades 6–8 complexity band, so work from the passage your teacher selects). In "The Bet," how does Chekhov show what fifteen years of solitude teach? Write a paragraph that states your claim, quotes two details from the passage, and explains how each detail supports your idea. Use the irony you noticed as one piece of evidence.

HS Freshman (350 words; Common Core: RL.9-10.6, W.9-10.1): In The Bet, how does Chekhov develop the idea of what fifteen years of solitude teach? State a clear claim, support it with two or three quotations, and explain how the irony in the story helps build that idea. Read in the public-domain translation by S. S. Koteliansky and J. M. Murry.

HS Sophomore (450 words; Common Core: RL.9-10.6, W.9-10.1): Analyze how The Bet develops the idea of what fifteen years of solitude teach. Make a precise claim, support it with at least three pieces of textual evidence, and explain how the author's use of irony and structure shapes that idea. Address one possible counterclaim. Read in the public-domain translation by S. S. Koteliansky and J. M. Murry.

HS Junior (550 words; Common Core: RL.11-12.5, RL.11-12.1, W.11-12.1): Analyze how the structure of The Bet (where it begins, turns and ends) and its irony shape the reader's understanding of what fifteen years of solitude teach. Identify one place where the text leaves matters uncertain and explain how that uncertainty adds to its meaning. Distinguish what is directly stated from what is really meant.

HS Senior (600 words; Common Core: RL.11-12.6, W.11-12.1): Two readers disagree about what The Bet suggests about what fifteen years of solitude teach. Lay out two plausible interpretations, weigh the evidence for each (including the story's irony and structure), and argue for the stronger one in a sustained, well-organized essay. Distinguish what is directly stated from what is really meant.

AP (650 words; Common Core: RL.11-12.6, W.11-12.1): Write a literary argument in which you analyze how Anton Chekhov uses irony in The Bet to complicate the reader's understanding of what fifteen years of solitude teach. Develop a defensible thesis, select evidence purposefully, and explain how specific choices of diction and syntax create meaning.

College Freshman (1000 words; Common Core: ICC-WC-1.3, ICC-WC-1.5, ICC-WC-1.1): Situate The Bet within its historical and literary context and argue how the story's treatment of what fifteen years of solitude teach responds to that context. Engage with at least one secondary perspective (a critic, historian or the author's own statements), integrate quotations smoothly, and cite in MLA style.

College Sophomore (1250 words; Common Core: LeL-C2-LIT-1, LeL-C2-W-1): Read The Bet alongside the conventions of its genre and period. Argue how the story's handling of what fifteen years of solitude teach follows or bends those conventions, using the irony as evidence, and test your reading against one published critic. Document two secondary sources in MLA.

College Junior (1500 words; Common Core: LeL-C3-LIT-1, LeL-C3-W-1): Apply a named critical approach (for example formalist, historicist, feminist, psychoanalytic or ecocritical) to The Bet and its treatment of what fifteen years of solitude teach. State your method, show what it reveals in the story's irony and structure, and identify where the text resists it.

College Senior (2000 words; Common Core: LeL-C4-LIT-1, LeL-C4-W-1): Develop a research argument that reads The Bet as evidence for a larger claim about what fifteen years of solitude teach in The Bet. Connect close reading of the story to the whole story, engage at least four scholarly sources, and state precisely where your reading departs from theirs (Chicago style).

Graduate / PhD (2500 words; Common Core: LeL-GR-LIT-1, LeL-GR-W-1): Develop an original argument that reads The Bet as a hinge in the story's larger treatment of what fifteen years of solitude teach. Position your reading within a named critical conversation (for example formalist, historicist, psychoanalytic, feminist or postcolonial approaches), account for the textual history where relevant, and articulate the stakes of your intervention for scholarship on The Bet.

SAT-style questions

1. So do I marvel at you, who have bartered heaven for earth.

   As used in the text, what does the word “bartered” most nearly mean?

   A. a tendency to change one's mind suddenly

   B. traded goods or things of value instead of using money

   C. called on (someone)

   D. transmit information

2. "Why did I make this bet? What's the good? The lawyer loses fifteen years of his life and I throw away two millions. Will it convince people that capital punishment is worse or better than imprisonment for life. No, No! All stuff and rubbish. On my part, it was the caprice of a well-fed man; on the lawyer's, pure greed of gold."

   Which choice best states a central concern of “The Bet”?

   A. Greed that grasps more than a person needs

   B. A story so convincing it becomes real

   C. What fifteen years of solitude teach

   D. Confinement driving a woman into madness

SAT key: 1. B (traded goods or things of value instead of using money); 2. C (What fifteen years of solitude teach)
