Lesson 1: Introduction to The Outcasts of Poker Flat

Author biography

Bret Harte was born in Albany, New York, on 25 August 1836 and went to California as a teenager in 1854, during the years after the Gold Rush, working as a teacher, miner's assistant, printer and journalist. As editor of the Overland Monthly he published "The Luck of Roaring Camp" (1868) and "The Outcasts of Poker Flat" (1869), which made him for a time the most famous writer in America. His popularity faded; he served as U.S. consul in Germany and Scotland and died in England on 5 May 1902.

Historical and cultural context

Set in the California Gold Rush mining camps of 1850, where towns formed overnight and vigilance committees expelled or hanged people they considered undesirable.

Publication and reception, then and now

First published in the Overland Monthly in January 1869, which Harte edited.

Then: A sensation; it and "The Luck of Roaring Camp" made Harte famous across the country.

Now: A founding work of Western local-colour fiction, now also discussed for its sentimental view of outcasts.

Overview (spoiler-free)

Poker Flat expels a gambler, John Oakhurst, a prostitute called the Duchess, Mother Shipton and Uncle Billy. They meet two young runaways, Tom Simson (the Innocent) and Piney Woods, and are trapped by snow in the Sierras.

Main themes

- redemption.
- hypocrisy of respectability.
- fate and chance.

Why it matters

The story asks who decides who is respectable.

Spoilers · teacher only

Uncle Billy steals the mules; Mother Shipton starves herself to save Piney; Tom goes for help; the Duchess and Piney die in each other's arms; Oakhurst shoots himself, leaving a note on a playing card.

In 1850, a vigilance committee in the mining camp of Poker Flat expels gambler John Oakhurst, 'The Duchess', Mother Shipton and drunken Uncle Billy. On the trail they meet innocent young Tom Simson and his fiancée Piney. Snowed in, Uncle Billy steals the mules. Mother Shipton starves herself to save food for Piney; Tom goes for help. Oakhurst shoots himself under a pine; the Duchess and Piney die in each other's arms.

Background: Published in the Overland Monthly in 1869, set in California's 1850 Gold Rush camps, where vigilance committees administered rough justice.

Significance: A key local-color story that made Harte famous.

Writing prompts (eleven rigor levels)

Middle School (250 words; AP: see unit standards): Excerpt-based (Middle School support track; this story is above the grades 6–8 complexity band, so work from the passage your teacher selects). In “The Outcasts of Poker Flat,” how does Harte show moral worth found among those society rejects? Write a paragraph that states your claim, quotes two details from the passage, and explains how each detail supports your idea. Use the characterization you noticed as one piece of evidence.

HS Freshman (350 words; AP: see unit standards): In The Outcasts of Poker Flat, how does Harte develop the idea of moral worth found among those society rejects? State a clear claim, support it with two or three quotations, and explain how the characterization in the story helps build that idea.

HS Sophomore (450 words; AP: see unit standards): Analyze how The Outcasts of Poker Flat develops the idea of moral worth found among those society rejects. Make a precise claim, support it with at least three pieces of textual evidence, and explain how the author's use of characterization and irony shapes that idea. Address one possible counterclaim.

HS Junior (550 words; AP: see unit standards): Analyze how the structure of The Outcasts of Poker Flat (where it begins, turns and ends) and its characterization shape the reader's understanding of moral worth found among those society rejects. Identify one place where the text leaves matters uncertain and explain how that uncertainty adds to its meaning.

HS Senior (600 words; AP: see unit standards): Two readers disagree about what The Outcasts of Poker Flat suggests about moral worth found among those society rejects. Lay out two plausible interpretations, weigh the evidence for each (including the story's characterization and irony), and argue for the stronger one in a sustained, well-organized essay.

AP (650 words; AP: AP-LIT.CHR, AP-LIT.LAN): Write a literary argument in which you analyze how Bret Harte uses characterization in The Outcasts of Poker Flat to complicate the reader's understanding of moral worth found among those society rejects. Develop a defensible thesis, select evidence purposefully, and explain how specific choices of diction and syntax create meaning.

College Freshman (1000 words; AP: see unit standards): Situate The Outcasts of Poker Flat within its historical and literary context and argue how the story's treatment of moral worth found among those society rejects responds to that context. Engage with at least one secondary perspective (a critic, historian or the author's own statements), integrate quotations smoothly, and cite in MLA style.

College Sophomore (1250 words; AP: see unit standards): Read The Outcasts of Poker Flat alongside the conventions of its genre and period. Argue how the story's handling of moral worth found among those society rejects follows or bends those conventions, using the characterization as evidence, and test your reading against one published critic. Document two secondary sources in MLA.

College Junior (1500 words; AP: see unit standards): Apply a named critical approach (for example formalist, historicist, feminist, psychoanalytic or ecocritical) to The Outcasts of Poker Flat and its treatment of moral worth found among those society rejects. State your method, show what it reveals in the story's characterization and irony, and identify where the text resists it.

College Senior (2000 words; AP: see unit standards): Develop a research argument that reads The Outcasts of Poker Flat as evidence for a larger claim about moral worth found among those society rejects in The Outcasts of Poker Flat. Connect close reading of the story to the whole story, engage at least four scholarly sources, and state precisely where your reading departs from theirs (Chicago style).

Graduate / PhD (2500 words; AP: see unit standards): Develop an original argument that reads The Outcasts of Poker Flat as a hinge in the story's larger treatment of moral worth found among those society rejects. Position your reading within a named critical conversation (for example formalist, historicist, psychoanalytic, feminist or postcolonial approaches), account for the textual history where relevant, and articulate the stakes of your intervention for scholarship on The Outcasts of Poker Flat.

SAT-style questions

1. He dropped a warning to the Duchess and Mother Shipton, who of course knew the facts of their associate's defection. "They'll find out the truth about us all when they find out anything," he added, significantly, "and there's no good frightening them now."

   As used in the text, what does the word “defection” most nearly mean?

   A. an activity that diverts or amuses or stimulates

   B. leaving one person or side for another

   C. become part of; become a member of a group or organization

   D. steadiness of mind under stress

2. Mr. Oakhurst was right in supposing that he was included in this category. A few of the committee had urged hanging him as a possible example, and a sure method of reimbursing themselves from his pockets of the sums he had won from them. "It's agin justice," said Jim Wheeler, "to let this yer young man from Roaring Camp —an entire stranger—carry away our money." But a crude sentiment of equity residing in the breasts of those who had been fortunate enough to win from Mr. Oakhurst overruled this narrower local prejudice.

   Which choice best states a central concern of “The Outcasts of Poker Flat”?

   A. Moral worth found among those society rejects

   B. A woman's brief taste of freedom

   C. Greed that grasps more than a person needs

   D. Self-destruction and the urge to do wrong

SAT key: 1. B (leaving one person or side for another); 2. A (Moral worth found among those society rejects)
