Lesson 1: Introduction to The Story of an Hour

Author biography

Kate Chopin was born Katherine O'Flaherty in St. Louis on 8 February 1850. She married the Louisiana cotton trader Oscar Chopin and lived in New Orleans and Cloutierville among Creole and Cajun communities. Widowed in 1882 with six children, she returned to St. Louis and began writing; her stories appeared in Vogue and other magazines and were collected in Bayou Folk (1894). Her story The Awakening (1899), about a married woman's desire for independence, was condemned by reviewers. She died on 22 August 1904; her work was rediscovered in the 1960s.

Historical and cultural context

In the 1890s, married American women had limited legal identities; the "new woman" debate about women's independence was intense.

Publication and reception, then and now

Written on 19 April 1894 and first published as "The Dream of an Hour" in Vogue on 6 December 1894.

Then: Little noticed.

Now: A brief, widely taught feminist classic with a famous ironic ending.

Overview (spoiler-free)

Louise Mallard, who has a heart condition, learns that her husband has been killed in a railroad accident.

Main themes

- freedom and marriage.
- irony.
- self-assertion.

Why it matters

It asks how social roles limit people, even in loving relationships.

Spoilers · teacher only

Alone, she realizes she is free; then her husband walks in alive, and she dies, the doctors say, "of the joy that kills."

Lesson 2: The Story of an Hour

Focus: a woman's brief taste of freedom

Content note (death, marriage as constraint): Sensitive content: Death; marriage as constraint. Preview the story, tell students in advance, and allow a pass on reading aloud. Keep discussion on how the writer uses these elements, not on graphic detail.
Student preview: Heads-up: this story includes death; marriage as constraint.
Suggested language: "Why does the writer include this, and what does it make us notice?"

Teacher only · spoilers

Told gently that her husband Brently has died in a railroad accident, Louise Mallard weeps, then alone in her room feels a growing, monstrous joy: 'Free, free, free!' She looks ahead to years that will belong to herself. Leaving the room, she sees Brently walk in the door, unharmed; he had not been on the train. She dies, and the doctors say of 'the joy that kills'.

Background: Published in Vogue in 1894, when married women's legal identity was still largely bound up in their husbands'.

Significance: Very widely anthologized; its last line is a famous case of dramatic irony.

Annotate the story for irony, imagery (three marks with a margin note each), then write one claim-evidence-reasoning paragraph: what does this story suggest about a woman's brief taste of freedom? Then start your writing prompt at your assigned level (HS Sophomore: Analyze how The Story of an Hour develops the idea of a woman's brief taste of freedom. Make a precise claim, support it with at least three pieces of textual evidence, and explain how the author's use of irony and imagery shapes that idea. Address one possible counterclaim.) Exemplar: Chopin uses irony to show that Louise's death comes from lost freedom, not joy. When the text says “of the joy that kills” (The Story of an Hour, paragraph 19), it shows this directly. She whispers "Free! Body and soul free!", and when her husband returns the doctors say she died "of the joy that kills," a diagnosis the reader knows is wrong.

Evaluative / synthesis / creative

1. A critic might argue: “Very widely anthologized; its last line is a famous case of dramatic irony.” How far do you agree? Take a stand and defend it with two lines from the story. [DOK 3 · fourCorners · wait 8 s · RL.7.2, SL.7.1, RL.9-10.2] Look for: A defended position with evidence and one counterpoint.
   Answer guidance: A defensible line of argument: Chopin uses irony to show that Louise's death comes from lost freedom, not joy. Useful evidence: “of the joy that kills” (The Story of an Hour, paragraph 19): The ironic end. Theme link: she does not hate her husband but loves her freedom. Credit any position that is supported by quotation and reasoning; push one-sided answers to address the strongest counterpoint.
2. Which character in this story acts most wisely, and which least? Judge them by a standard you name. [DOK 3 · thinkPairShare · wait 8 s · RL.7.3, SL.7.1, RL.9-10.3] Look for: An evaluation using an explicit criterion and evidence.
   Answer guidance: A defensible line of argument: Chopin uses irony to show that Louise's death comes from lost freedom, not joy. Useful evidence: “Free! Body and soul free” (The Story of an Hour, paragraph 12): Realization. On characterization: Her "heart trouble" is literal and figurative. Credit any position that is supported by quotation and reasoning; push one-sided answers to address the strongest counterpoint.
3. Rewrite one moment of “The Story of an Hour” from the point of view of a different character. What does the new angle reveal or hide about a woman's brief taste of freedom? [DOK 4 · thinkPairShare · wait 8 s · RL.7.6, SL.7.1, RL.9-10.6] Look for: A creative product with a rationale tied to the text.
   Answer guidance: A defensible line of argument: Chopin uses irony to show that Louise's death comes from lost freedom, not joy. Useful evidence: “afflicted with a heart trouble” (The Story of an Hour, paragraph 1): Literal and symbolic. Theme link: she does not hate her husband but loves her freedom. Credit any position that is supported by quotation and reasoning; push one-sided answers to address the strongest counterpoint.
4. Write three questions of your own about “The Story of an Hour”: one recall, one “why/how”, and one “should/what if”. Trade with a partner and answer theirs. [DOK 3 · studentGenerated · wait 8 s · RL.7.2, SL.7.1, RL.9-10.2] Look for: Student-generated questions at three levels.
   Answer guidance: A defensible line of argument: Chopin uses irony to show that Louise's death comes from lost freedom, not joy. Credit any position that is supported by quotation and reasoning; push one-sided answers to address the strongest counterpoint.
5. Connect this story to identity: is the link strong or weak so far? What would Chopin need to show next to strengthen it? [DOK 4 · socraticCircle · wait 8 s · RL.7.2, SL.7.1, RL.9-10.2] Look for: A judgment of thematic development across the work.
   Answer guidance: A defensible line of argument: Chopin uses irony to show that Louise's death comes from lost freedom, not joy. Useful evidence: “Free! Body and soul free” (The Story of an Hour, paragraph 12): Realization. Theme link: she does not hate her husband but loves her freedom. Credit any position that is supported by quotation and reasoning; push one-sided answers to address the strongest counterpoint.
6. Is the irony in this story effective, or does it feel heavy-handed? Evaluate it as a reader would in a review. [DOK 3 · fourCorners · wait 8 s · RL.7.6, SL.7.1, RL.9-10.6] Look for: An evaluative judgment with criteria and evidence.
   Answer guidance: A defensible line of argument: Chopin uses irony to show that Louise's death comes from lost freedom, not joy. Useful evidence: “afflicted with a heart trouble” (The Story of an Hour, paragraph 1): Literal and symbolic. On irony: The doctors misread her death. Credit any position that is supported by quotation and reasoning; push one-sided answers to address the strongest counterpoint.

7. Compare how “The Story of an Hour” treats a woman's brief taste of freedom with how another text, film or event you know treats a similar idea. What does The Story of an Hour see that the other misses? [DOK 4 · socraticCircle · wait 8 s · RL.7.2, SL.7.1, RL.9-10.2] Look for: A cross-text synthesis.

   Answer guidance: A defensible line of argument: Chopin uses irony to show that Louise's death comes from lost freedom, not joy. Writing prompts (eleven rigor levels)

Middle School (250 words; Common Core: RL.7.6, W.7.1): Excerpt-based (Middle School support track; this story is above the grades 6–8 complexity band, so work from the passage your teacher selects). In "The Story of an Hour," how does Chopin show a woman's brief taste of freedom? Write a paragraph that states your claim, quotes two details from the passage, and explains how each detail supports your idea. Use the irony you noticed as one piece of evidence.

HS Freshman (350 words; Common Core: RL.9-10.6, W.9-10.1): In The Story of an Hour, how does Chopin develop the idea of a woman's brief taste of freedom? State a clear claim, support it with two or three quotations, and explain how the irony in the story helps build that idea.

HS Sophomore (450 words; Common Core: RL.9-10.6, W.9-10.1): Analyze how The Story of an Hour develops the idea of a woman's brief taste of freedom. Make a precise claim, support it with at least three pieces of textual evidence, and explain how the author's use of irony and imagery shapes that idea. Address one possible counterclaim.

HS Junior (550 words; Common Core: RL.11-12.5, RL.11-12.1, W.11-12.1): Analyze how the structure of The Story of an Hour (where it begins, turns and ends) and its irony shape the reader's understanding of a woman's brief taste of freedom. Identify one place where the text leaves matters uncertain and explain how that uncertainty adds to its meaning. Distinguish what is directly stated from what is really meant.

HS Senior (600 words; Common Core: RL.11-12.6, W.11-12.1): Two readers disagree about what The Story of an Hour suggests about a woman's brief taste of freedom. Lay out two plausible interpretations, weigh the evidence for each (including the story's irony and imagery), and argue for the stronger one in a sustained, well-organized essay. Distinguish what is directly stated from what is really meant.

AP (650 words; Common Core: RL.11-12.6, W.11-12.1): Write a literary argument in which you analyze how Kate Chopin uses irony in The Story of an Hour to complicate the reader's understanding of a woman's brief taste of freedom. Develop a defensible thesis, select evidence purposefully, and explain how specific choices of diction and syntax create meaning.

College Freshman (1000 words; Common Core: ICC-WC-1.3, ICC-WC-1.5, ICC-WC-1.1): Situate The Story of an Hour within its historical and literary context and argue how the story's treatment of a woman's brief taste of freedom responds to that context. Engage with at least one secondary perspective (a critic, historian or the author's own statements), integrate quotations smoothly, and cite in MLA style.

College Sophomore (1250 words; Common Core: LeL-C2-LIT-1, LeL-C2-W-1): Read The Story of an Hour alongside the conventions of its genre and period. Argue how the story's handling of a woman's brief taste of freedom follows or bends those conventions, using the irony as evidence, and test your reading against one published critic. Document two secondary sources in MLA.

College Junior (1500 words; Common Core: LeL-C3-LIT-1, LeL-C3-W-1): Apply a named critical approach (for example formalist, historicist, feminist, psychoanalytic or ecocritical) to The Story of an Hour and its treatment of a woman's brief taste of freedom. State your method, show what it reveals in the story's irony and imagery, and identify where the text resists it.

College Senior (2000 words; Common Core: LeL-C4-LIT-1, LeL-C4-W-1): Develop a research argument that reads The Story of an Hour as evidence for a larger claim about a woman's brief taste of freedom in The Story of an Hour. Connect close reading of the story to the whole story, engage at least four scholarly sources, and state precisely where your reading departs from theirs (Chicago style).

Graduate / PhD (2500 words; Common Core: LeL-GR-LIT-1, LeL-GR-W-1): Develop an original argument that reads The Story of an Hour as a hinge in the story's larger treatment of a woman's brief taste of freedom. Position your reading within a named critical conversation (for example formalist, historicist, psychoanalytic, feminist or postcolonial approaches), account for the textual history where relevant, and articulate the stakes of your intervention for scholarship on The Story of an Hour.

SAT-style questions

1. It was Brently Mallard who entered, a little travel-stained, composedly carrying his grip-sack and umbrella.

   As used in the text, what does the word “composedly” most nearly mean?

   A. without knowing or intending

   B. sudden understanding; a flash of insight

   C. continuing firmly in spite of difficulty

   D. in a self-collected or self-possessed manner

2. She was young, with a fair, calm face, whose lines bespoke repression and even a certain strength. But now there was a dull stare in her eyes, whose gaze was fixed away off yonder on one of those patches of blue sky. It was not a glance of reflection, but rather indicated a suspension of intelligent thought.

   Which choice best states a central concern of “The Story of an Hour”?

   A. A woman's brief taste of freedom

   B. A family and a house collapsing together

   C. Endurance turning to justice

   D. Love and rivalry destroyed by racial violence

SAT key: 1. D (in a self-collected or self-possessed manner); 2. A (A woman's brief taste of freedom)
