Lesson 1: Introduction to The City of Refuge

Author biography

Rudolph Fisher was born in Washington, D.C., on 9 May 1897 and grew up in Providence, Rhode Island. He graduated from Brown University and Howard University's medical school and practised in Harlem as a physician and radiologist while writing fiction. "The City of Refuge" (1925) was his first published story; his stories The Walls of Jericho (1928) and The Conjure-Man Dies (1932), one of the first detective stories by a Black American writer, made him a leading wit of the Harlem Renaissance. He died on 26 December 1934, aged 37.

Historical and cultural context

The Great Migration (about 1916–1970) brought millions of Black Southerners north. Harlem in the 1920s was the cultural capital of Black America. The title alludes to the biblical cities of refuge (Numbers 35), where a man who had killed could find sanctuary.

Publication and reception, then and now

First published in The Atlantic Monthly in February 1925, and included in Alain Locke's anthology The New Negro (1925).

Then: Praised; it established Fisher as a Harlem Renaissance writer.

Now: An important Harlem Renaissance story about migration and exploitation.

Overview (spoiler-free)

King Solomon Gillis arrives in Harlem from North Carolina, fleeing after shooting a white man, and is amazed to see Black policemen. A fellow migrant, Mouse Uggam, befriends him.

Main themes

- migration and hope.
- exploitation.
- freedom and the law.

Why it matters

It shows the promise and the traps of the Great Migration.

Spoilers · teacher only

Mouse uses Gillis to sell drugs; Gillis is arrested by a Black policeman and, oddly happy, says "Cullud policemans!"

Lesson 2: The City of Refuge

Focus: Harlem as promised refuge and trap

Content note (racial slurs in dialogue, drugs, violence): Sensitive content: Racial slurs in dialogue; drugs; violence. Preview the story, tell students in advance, and allow a pass on reading aloud. Keep discussion on how the writer uses these elements, not on graphic detail. The text quotes racial slurs in period dialogue: decide in advance that no one reads them aloud, and name why the author records them.
Student preview: Heads-up: this story includes racial slurs in dialogue; drugs; violence.
Suggested language: "Why does the writer include this, and what does it make us notice?"

Then start your writing prompt at your assigned level (HS Sophomore: Analyze how The City of Refuge develops the idea of Harlem as promised refuge and trap. Make a precise claim, support it with at least three pieces of textual evidence, and explain how the author's use of setting and irony shapes that idea. Address one possible counterclaim.) Exemplar: Fisher shows Harlem as both refuge and trap. When the text says "Harlem. Land of plenty. City of refuge-city of refuge" (The City of Refuge, paragraph 255), it shows this directly. Gillis dreams of "Harlem. Land of plenty. City of refuge," but his friend exploits him; yet even arrested he marvels "Cullud policemans," seeing the dignity he hoped for.

Writing prompts (eleven rigor levels)

Middle School (250 words; Common Core: RL.7.3, W.7.1): Excerpt-based (Middle School support track; this story is above the grades 6–8 complexity band, so work from the passage your teacher selects). In “The City of Refuge,” how does Fisher show Harlem as promised refuge and trap? Write a paragraph that states your claim, quotes two details from the passage, and explains how each detail supports your idea. Use the setting you noticed as one piece of evidence.

HS Freshman (350 words; Common Core: RL.9-10.3, W.9-10.1): In The City of Refuge, how does Fisher develop the idea of Harlem as promised refuge and trap? State a clear claim, support it with two or three quotations, and explain how the setting in the story helps build that idea.

HS Sophomore (450 words; Common Core: RL.9-10.3, W.9-10.1): Analyze how The City of Refuge develops the idea of Harlem as promised refuge and trap. Make a precise claim, support it with at least three pieces of textual evidence, and explain how the author's use of setting and irony shapes that idea. Address one possible counterclaim.

HS Junior (550 words; Common Core: RL.11-12.5, RL.11-12.1, W.11-12.1): Analyze how the structure of The City of Refuge (where it begins, turns and ends) and its setting shape the reader's understanding of Harlem as promised refuge and trap. Identify one place where the text leaves matters uncertain and explain how that uncertainty adds to its meaning.

HS Senior (600 words; Common Core: RL.11-12.3, W.11-12.1): Two readers disagree about what The City of Refuge suggests about Harlem as promised refuge and trap. Lay out two plausible interpretations, weigh the evidence for each (including the story's setting and irony), and argue for the stronger one in a sustained, well-organized essay.

AP (650 words; Common Core: RL.11-12.3, W.11-12.1): Write a literary argument in which you analyze how Rudolph Fisher uses setting in The City of Refuge to complicate the reader's understanding of Harlem as promised refuge and trap. Develop a defensible thesis, select evidence purposefully, and explain how specific choices of diction and syntax create meaning.

College Freshman (1000 words; Common Core: ICC-WC-1.3, ICC-WC-1.5, ICC-WC-1.1): Situate The City of Refuge within its historical and literary context and argue how the story's treatment of Harlem as promised refuge and trap responds to that context. Engage with at least one secondary perspective (a critic, historian or the author's own statements), integrate quotations smoothly, and cite in MLA style.

College Sophomore (1250 words; Common Core: LeL-C2-LIT-1, LeL-C2-W-1): Read The City of Refuge alongside the conventions of its genre and period. Argue how the story's handling of Harlem as promised refuge and trap follows or bends those conventions, using the setting as evidence, and test your reading against one published critic. Document two secondary sources in MLA.

College Junior (1500 words; Common Core: LeL-C3-LIT-1, LeL-C3-W-1): Apply a named critical approach (for example formalist, historicist, feminist, psychoanalytic or ecocritical) to The City of Refuge and its treatment of Harlem as promised refuge and trap. State your method, show what it reveals in the story's setting and irony, and identify where the text resists it.

College Senior (2000 words; Common Core: LeL-C4-LIT-1, LeL-C4-W-1): Develop a research argument that reads The City of Refuge as evidence for a larger claim about Harlem as promised refuge and trap in The City of Refuge. Connect close reading of the story to the whole story, engage at least four scholarly sources, and state precisely where your reading departs from theirs (Chicago style).

Graduate / PhD (2500 words; Common Core: LeL-GR-LIT-1, LeL-GR-W-1): Develop an original argument that reads The City of Refuge as a hinge in the story's larger treatment of Harlem as promised refuge and trap. Position your reading within a named critical conversation (for example formalist, historicist, psychoanalytic, feminist or postcolonial approaches), account for the textual history where relevant, and articulate the stakes of your intervention for scholarship on The City of Refuge.

SAT-style questions

1. Yet most of the vehicles that leaped or crouched at his bidding carried white passengers.

   As used in the text, what does the word “crouched” most nearly mean?

   A. changing

B. several time

C. given something good in return

D. bend one's back forward from the waist on down

2. Uggam stepped over and opened the door. King Solomon's apprehensive eyes saw framed therein, instead of a gigantic officer, calling for him, a little blot of a creature, quite black against even the darkness of the hallway, except for a dirty, wide-striped silk shirt, collarless, with the sleeves rolled up. "Ah hahve bill fo' Mr. Gillis." A high, strongly accented Jamaican voice, with its characteristic singsong intonation, interrupted King Solomon's sigh of relief.

Which choice best states a central concern of "The City of Refuge"?

A. A reversal that punishes a change of heart

B. Harlem as promised refuge and trap

C. A story so convincing it becomes real

D. Refusal as a mystery the narrator cannot solve

SAT key: 1. D (bend one's back forward from the waist on down); 2. B (Harlem as promised refuge and trap)
