Lesson 1: Introduction to The Bride Comes to Yellow Sky

Author biography

Stephen Crane was born in Newark, New Jersey, on 1 November 1871, the fourteenth child of a Methodist minister. He worked as a journalist in New York and wrote The Red Badge of Courage (1895), a Civil War story, without having seen war. As a correspondent he survived the sinking of the steamer Commodore off Florida in January 1897, spending some thirty hours in a dinghy, the basis of "The Open Boat." He reported on the Greco-Turkish and Spanish-American wars and died of tuberculosis in Germany on 5 June 1900, aged 28.

Historical and cultural context

By the 1890s the American frontier was closing (the 1890 Census declared it closed), and railroads brought Eastern manners west. Dime stories romanticized gunfighters.

Publication and reception, then and now

Published in McClure's Magazine in February 1898.

Then: Read as a western humour piece.

Now: A parody of the western and a study of the end of the frontier.

Overview (spoiler-free)

Marshal Jack Potter returns by train with his new bride, worried about how the town will take the news. Meanwhile, the drunken gunman Scratchy Wilson is terrorizing the town.

Main themes

- the closing of the frontier: marriage, domesticity and the railroad replace the gunfight.
- civilization versus the Wild West.
- marriage and change.

Why it matters

It shows how a genre (the western) changes with history, and teaches students to recognize parody and anticlimax.

Spoilers · teacher only

Scratchy confronts the unarmed Potter, learns he is married, and walks away: "I s'pose it's all off now."

Marshal Jack Potter rides a Pullman car home to Yellow Sky with his new bride, anxious because he married without telling the town. Meanwhile drunken Scratchy Wilson terrorizes the empty street with revolvers, looking for his old enemy Potter. Scratchy confronts the unarmed marshal, hears he is married, says 'I s'pose it's all off now,' and walks away.

Background: Published in 1898. The railroad and Eastern manners reached the Southwest as the 'frontier' was declared closed (1890 census).

Significance: A parody of the Western showdown; often taught with The Open Boat.

Mini-lecture (read or adapt the script).
Published in 1898. The railroad and Eastern manners reached the Southwest as the 'frontier' was declared closed (1890 census). A parody of the Western showdown; often taught with The Open Boat. Irony: The story builds to the classic western showdown, and it ends without a shot: Potter is unarmed and Scratchy is defeated by the word "married." Setting: The Pullman car, with its plush and its condescending porter, brings Eastern manners into the West; Yellow Sky is a town where the old ritual still plays out. Characterization: Scratchy, in a flashy shirt from New York, is "a child of the earlier plains" who plays the gunman like a game; Potter is a lawman embarrassed by his own happiness. Watch for the funnel-shaped tracks: Scratchy leaves traces that narrow and vanish, like the Old West itself.

1. A critic might argue: “A parody of the Western showdown; often taught with The Open Boat.” How far do you agree? Take a stand and defend it with two lines from the story. [DOK 3 · fourCorners · wait 8 s · AP-LIT.LAN, AP-LIT.LAN] Look for: A defended position with evidence and one counterpoint.
   Answer guidance: A defensible line of argument: The marriage ends the Wild West. Useful evidence: “His feet made funnel-shaped tracks in the heavy sand” (The Bride Comes to Yellow Sky, paragraph 90): The image. Theme link: marriage, domesticity and the railroad replace the gunfight. Credit any position that is supported by quotation and reasoning; push one-sided answers to address the strongest counterpoint.
2. Which character in this story acts most wisely, and which least? Judge them by a standard you name. [DOK 3 · thinkPairShare · wait 8 s · AP-LIT.CHR, AP-LIT.LAN] Look for: An evaluation using an explicit criterion and evidence.
   Answer guidance: A defensible line of argument: The marriage ends the Wild West. Useful evidence: “A newly married pair had boarded this coach at San Antonio” (The Bride Comes to Yellow Sky, paragraph 2): Opening. On characterization: Scratchy, in a flashy shirt from New York, is "a child of the earlier plains" who plays the gunman like a game; Potter is a lawman embarrassed by his own happiness. Credit any position that is supported by quotation and reasoning; push one-sided answers to address the strongest counterpoint.
3. Rewrite one moment of “The Bride Comes to Yellow Sky” from the point of view of a different character. What does the new angle reveal or hide about the closing of the frontier? [DOK 4 · thinkPairShare · wait 8 s · AP-LIT.NAR, AP-LIT.LAN] Look for: A creative product with a rationale tied to the text.
   Answer guidance: A defensible line of argument: The marriage ends the Wild West. Useful evidence: “I s'pose it's all off now” (The Bride Comes to Yellow Sky, paragraph 88): The ending. Writing prompts (eleven rigor levels)

Middle School (250 words; AP: see unit standards): Excerpt-based (Middle School support track; this story is above the grades 6–8 complexity band, so work from the passage your teacher selects). In “The Bride Comes to Yellow Sky,” how does Crane show the closing of the frontier? Write a paragraph that states your claim, quotes two details from the passage, and explains how each detail supports your idea. Use the irony you noticed as one piece of evidence.

HS Freshman (350 words; AP: see unit standards): In The Bride Comes to Yellow Sky, how does Crane develop the idea of the closing of the frontier? State a clear claim, support it with two or three quotations, and explain how the irony in the story helps build that idea.

HS Sophomore (450 words; AP: see unit standards): Analyze how The Bride Comes to Yellow Sky develops the idea of the closing of the frontier. Make a precise claim, support it with at least three pieces of textual evidence, and explain how the author's use of irony and setting shapes that idea. Address one possible counterclaim.

HS Junior (550 words; AP: see unit standards): Analyze how the structure of The Bride Comes to Yellow Sky (where it begins, turns and ends) and its irony shape the reader's understanding of the closing of the frontier. Identify one place where the text leaves matters uncertain and explain how that uncertainty adds to its meaning. Distinguish what is directly stated from what is really meant.

HS Senior (600 words; AP: see unit standards): Two readers disagree about what The Bride Comes to Yellow Sky suggests about the closing of the frontier. Lay out two plausible interpretations, weigh the evidence for each (including the story's irony and setting), and argue for the stronger one in a sustained, well-organized essay. Distinguish what is directly stated from what is really meant.

AP (650 words; AP: AP-LIT.NAR, AP-LIT.LAN): Write a literary argument in which you analyze how Stephen Crane uses irony in The Bride Comes to Yellow Sky to complicate the reader's understanding of the closing of the frontier. Develop a defensible thesis, select evidence purposefully, and explain how specific choices of diction and syntax create meaning.

College Freshman (1000 words; AP: see unit standards): Situate The Bride Comes to Yellow Sky within its historical and literary context and argue how the story's treatment of the closing of the frontier responds to that context. Engage with at least one secondary perspective (a critic, historian or the author's own statements), integrate quotations smoothly, and cite in MLA style.

College Sophomore (1250 words; AP: see unit standards): Read The Bride Comes to Yellow Sky alongside the conventions of its genre and period. Argue how the story's handling of the closing of the frontier follows or bends those conventions, using the irony as evidence, and test your reading against one published critic. Document two secondary sources in MLA.

College Junior (1500 words; AP: see unit standards): Apply a named critical approach (for example formalist, historicist, feminist, psychoanalytic or ecocritical) to The Bride Comes to Yellow Sky and its treatment of the closing of the frontier. State your method, show what it reveals in the story's irony and setting, and identify where the text resists it.

College Senior (2000 words; AP: see unit standards): Develop a research argument that reads The Bride Comes to Yellow Sky as evidence for a larger claim about the closing of the frontier in The Bride Comes to Yellow Sky. Connect close reading of the story to the whole story, engage at least four scholarly sources, and state precisely where your reading departs from theirs (Chicago style).

Graduate / PhD (2500 words; AP: see unit standards): Develop an original argument that reads The Bride Comes to Yellow Sky as a hinge in the story's larger treatment of the closing of the frontier. Position your reading within a named critical conversation (for example formalist, historicist, psychoanalytic, feminist or postcolonial approaches), account for the textual history where relevant, and articulate the stakes of your intervention for scholarship on The Bride Comes to Yellow Sky.

SAT-style questions

1. Two rows of negro waiters, in glowing white suits, surveyed their entrance with the interest and also the equanimity of men who had been forewarned.

   As used in the text, what does the word “equanimity” most nearly mean?

   A. steadiness of mind under stress

   B. direct toward itself or oneself by means of some psychological power or physical attributes

   C. a courteous expression (by word or deed) of esteem or regard

   D. a man who has recently been married

2. The bride was not pretty, nor was she very young. She wore a dress of blue cashmere, with small reservations of velvet here and there and with steel buttons abounding. She continually twisted her head to regard her puff sleeves, very stiff, straight, and high. They embarrassed her. It was quite apparent that she had cooked, and that she expected to cook, dutifully. The blushes caused by the careless scrutiny of some passengers as she had entered the car were strange to see upon this plain, under-class countenance, which was drawn in placid, almost emotionless lines.

   Which choice best states a central concern of “The Bride Comes to Yellow Sky”?

   A. Brotherhood against an indifferent sea

   B. The closing of the frontier

   C. A woman's brief taste of freedom

   D. A story so convincing it becomes real

SAT key: 1. A (steadiness of mind under stress); 2. B (The closing of the frontier)
