

Pride and Prejudice

Jane Austen · 1813

Standard Ebooks edition (from the Project Gutenberg transcription); first published 1813 by Thomas Egerton, London

TEACHER EDITION · CURRICULUM UNIT

AP edition (standards shown for this framework only)

61 chapter lessons plus 6 seminar day(s), a test day and an essay day: 71 class days of 90 minutes, 5 a week (block schedule), 15 weeks
Syllabus · 90-minute lesson plans · lecture scripts · vocabulary · quizzes with keys · writing prompts at eleven rigor levels · SAT-style items · whole-book test · essays

Liber et Libri · Lux et Libri LLC
Cover: John Constable, Wivenhoe Park, Essex (1816). Public domain (Wikimedia Commons).

Contents and unit overview

1. Unit overview and the 90-minute lesson
2. Syllabus (weekly pacing)
3. Lesson 1: introduction (author, context, reception, overview)
4. Lesson plans and lecture scripts (chapters 1–61), each with vocabulary, discussion questions, annotation focus, quiz and key, writing prompts and SAT-style items
5. Unit test (eleven rigor versions) with answer keys and scoring guides
6. Final paper
7. Essay assignments at eleven rigor levels

Edition: Reading text: https://standardebooks.org/ebooks/jane-austen/pride-and-prejudice. Chapter numbers follow the continuous 61-chapter numbering of modern editions (the 1813 first edition numbered chapters within three volumes).

Content note for teachers: Recurring themes need framing: marriage as economic survival for women, class contempt (Cheapside, "trade"), and Mr. Bennet's mockery of his wife and daughters.

Grades: Grades 9–12 (scales to graduate via rigor levels). Scaffolded-support track (grade-9 floor): students work from teacher-selected passages with scaffolds, sentence starters and partial-credit probes. Weeks: 15. Class days: 71 × 90 minutes (61 chapter lessons plus seminar, test and essay days).

Essential questions

- What does Pride and Prejudice suggest about first impressions and prejudice?
- What does Pride and Prejudice suggest about pride and self-knowledge?
- What does Pride and Prejudice suggest about marriage and money?
- What does Pride and Prejudice suggest about class and social mobility?
- What does Pride and Prejudice suggest about women's limited choices?

Objectives

- Students will cite at least 2 quotations, with locations, to support each written claim about what the text says explicitly and implicitly (scored on the writing-prompt rubric).
- Students will trace one theme across at least 3 sections of the novel in the final paper, earning at least 70 of 100 rubric points.
- Students will explain how characters, setting and point of view interact in at least 3 exit tickets, each meeting the claim-evidence-reasoning criteria.
- Students will determine the in-context meaning of taught vocabulary, scoring at least 80% on the vocabulary items of the chapter quizzes.

- Students will write an argument with a clear claim, reasons and relevant evidence, scoring at least 80% on the unit test's short-answer scoring guides.

Standards: AP

AP-LIT.CHR, AP-LIT.SET, AP-LIT.STR, AP-LIT.NAR, AP-LIT.FIG, AP-LIT.LAN

AP English Literature and Composition big ideas (our summaries; apcentral.collegeboard.org)

Assessments: Daily chapter quizzes (auto-graded); Weekly writing prompt (rubric); Socratic seminars (scheduled days); Whole-book test (scheduled day); Final essay (scheduled day); College Sophomore and above write one essay of the five Differentiation: Every prompt and quiz has eleven rigor levels (Scaffolded support through Graduate / PhD); the app applies student override, then class standard, then the automatic level. Each prompt is tagged for Common Core, Indiana 2023, Dual Credit (Indiana College Core), AP and Cambridge where they apply.
Materials: Liber et Libri reader; Annotation journal; Chapter lecture slides or script

The 90-minute lesson

#	Segment	Mode	Minutes	Clock
1	Bell-ringer	You do	8	0–8
2	Vocabulary with etymology notes	I do	10	8–18
3	Background and context	I do	10	18–28
4	I do: modeled close reading	I do	12	28–40
5	We do: guided annotation	We do	15	40–55
6	You do: independent annotation	You do	15	55–70
7	Discussion	We do	10	70–80
8	Exit ticket / chapter quiz	You do	7	80–87
9	Closure	I do	3	87–90
	Total		90

Syllabus

Week	Chapters	Lessons	Focus and activities	Assessment
1	Introduction: author, context and reception Chapter I Chapter II Chapter III Chapter IV	5 × 90 min (450 min)	first impressions and prejudice • Daily 90-minute lesson: bell-ringer, vocabulary and word histories, background, I do / We do / You do, discussion, exit ticket, closure • Chapter quizzes in the app • Introduction: author, context and reception • Writing prompt at assigned rigor (one graded per week)	Quiz average plus one graded writing prompt
2	Chapter V Socratic seminar on first impressions and prejudice Chapter VI Chapter VII Chapter VIII	5 × 90 min (450 min)	pride and self-knowledge • Daily 90-minute lesson: bell-ringer, vocabulary and word histories, background, I do / We do / You do, discussion, exit ticket, closure • Chapter quizzes in the app • Socratic seminar on first impressions and prejudice • Writing prompt at assigned rigor (one graded per week)	Quiz average plus one graded writing prompt
3	Chapter IX Chapter X Chapter XI Chapter XII Chapter XIII	5 × 90 min (450 min)	marriage and money • Daily 90-minute lesson: bell-ringer, vocabulary and word histories, background, I do / We do / You do, discussion, exit ticket, closure • Chapter quizzes in the app • Writing prompt at assigned rigor (one graded per week)	Quiz average plus one graded writing prompt
4	Chapter XIV Chapter XV Socratic seminar on pride and self-knowledge Chapter XVI Chapter XVII	5 × 90 min (450 min)	class and social mobility • Daily 90-minute lesson: bell-ringer, vocabulary and word histories, background, I do / We do / You do, discussion, exit ticket, closure • Chapter quizzes in the app • Socratic seminar on pride and self-knowledge • Writing prompt at assigned rigor (one graded per week)	Quiz average plus one graded writing prompt
5	Chapter XVIII Chapter XIX	5 × 90 min	women's limited choices • Daily 90-minute lesson: bell-ringer,

	Chapter XX Chapter XXI Chapter XXII	(450 min)	vocabulary and word histories, background, I do / We do / You do, discussion, exit ticket, closure • Chapter quizzes in the app • Writing prompt at assigned rigor (one graded per week)	Quiz average plus one graded writing prompt
6	Chapter XXIII Chapter XXIV Chapter XXV Socratic seminar on marriage and money Chapter XXVI	5 × 90 min (450 min)	first impressions and prejudice • Daily 90-minute lesson: bell-ringer, vocabulary and word histories, background, I do / We do / You do, discussion, exit ticket, closure • Chapter quizzes in the app • Socratic seminar on marriage and money • Writing prompt at assigned rigor (one graded per week)	Quiz average plus one graded writing prompt
7	Chapter XXVII Chapter XXVIII Chapter XXIX Chapter XXX Chapter XXXI	5 × 90 min (450 min)	pride and self-knowledge • Daily 90-minute lesson: bell-ringer, vocabulary and word histories, background, I do / We do / You do, discussion, exit ticket, closure • Chapter quizzes in the app • Writing prompt at assigned rigor (one graded per week)	Quiz average plus one graded writing prompt
8	Chapter XXXII Chapter XXXIII Chapter XXXIV Chapter XXXV Socratic seminar on class and social mobility	5 × 90 min (450 min)	marriage and money • Daily 90-minute lesson: bell-ringer, vocabulary and word histories, background, I do / We do / You do, discussion, exit ticket, closure • Chapter quizzes in the app • Socratic seminar on class and social mobility • Writing prompt at assigned rigor (one graded per week)	Quiz average plus one graded writing prompt
9	Chapter XXXVI Chapter XXXVII Chapter XXXVIII Chapter XXXIX Chapter XL	5 × 90 min (450 min)	class and social mobility • Daily 90-minute lesson: bell-ringer, vocabulary and word histories, background, I do / We do / You do, discussion, exit ticket, closure • Chapter quizzes in the app • Writing prompt at assigned rigor (one graded per week)	Quiz average plus one graded writing prompt
10	Chapter XLI Chapter XLII Chapter XLIII	5 × 90 min (450 min)	women's limited choices • Daily 90-minute lesson: bell-ringer, vocabulary and word histories, background, I do / We do / You do,	Quiz average plus one graded writing prompt

	Chapter XLIV Chapter XLV		discussion, exit ticket, closure • Chapter quizzes in the app • Writing prompt at assigned rigor (one graded per week)
11	Socratic seminar on women's limited choices Chapter XLVI Chapter XLVII Chapter XLVIII Chapter XLIX	5 × 90 min (450 min)	first impressions and prejudice • Daily 90-minute lesson: bell-ringer, vocabulary and word histories, background, I do / We do / You do, discussion, exit ticket, closure • Chapter quizzes in the app • Socratic seminar on women's limited choices • Writing prompt at assigned rigor (one graded per week)	Quiz average plus one graded writing prompt
12	Chapter L Chapter LI Chapter LII Chapter LIII Chapter LIV	5 × 90 min (450 min)	pride and self-knowledge • Daily 90-minute lesson: bell-ringer, vocabulary and word histories, background, I do / We do / You do, discussion, exit ticket, closure • Chapter quizzes in the app • Writing prompt at assigned rigor (one graded per week)	Quiz average plus one graded writing prompt
13	Chapter LV Socratic seminar on first impressions and prejudice Chapter LVI Chapter LVII Chapter LVIII	5 × 90 min (450 min)	marriage and money • Daily 90-minute lesson: bell-ringer, vocabulary and word histories, background, I do / We do / You do, discussion, exit ticket, closure • Chapter quizzes in the app • Socratic seminar on first impressions and prejudice • Writing prompt at assigned rigor (one graded per week)	Quiz average plus one graded writing prompt
14	Chapter LIX Chapter LX Chapter LXI Whole-book test (90 minutes) Final paper writing workshop (drafting in class; finish the draft as homework)	5 × 90 min (450 min)	class and social mobility • Daily 90-minute lesson: bell-ringer, vocabulary and word histories, background, I do / We do / You do, discussion, exit ticket, closure • Chapter quizzes in the app • Whole-book test (90 minutes) • Final paper writing workshop (drafting in class; finish the draft as homework) • Writing prompt at assigned rigor (one graded per week)	Whole-book test and final essay
15	Final paper: peer review, revision and submission		women's limited choices • Daily 90-minute lesson: bell-ringer,	Whole-book test and final essay

		1 × 90 min (90 min)	vocabulary and word histories, background, I do / We do / You do, discussion, exit ticket, closure • Chapter quizzes in the app • Final paper: peer review, revision and submission • Writing prompt at assigned rigor (one graded per week)

Lesson plans and lecture scripts

Each chapter is one 90-minute class. Scripts are a starting point; adapt them to your students. Teacher summaries contain spoilers.

Lesson 1: Introduction to Pride and Prejudice

Objective: Students will explain, in a 3-sentence exit ticket, how one fact about Jane Austen's life or times connects to first impressions and prejudice in “Pride and Prejudice”, and will set up a reading journal with a prediction and a question for each of 3 themes (first impressions and prejudice, pride and self-knowledge, marriage and money).

Standards: AP: see the unit standards

Author biography

Jane Austen was born on 16 December 1775 at Steventon rectory in Hampshire, the seventh of eight children of the Reverend George Austen and Cassandra Leigh Austen. Apart from brief schooling she was educated at home, in a lively family that read novels aloud and staged plays; two of her brothers became admirals in the Royal Navy. She wrote comic pieces as a teenager and drafted the novel that became Pride and Prejudice, then called "First Impressions," in 1796–97. After years in Bath and Southampton she settled in 1809 at Chawton, Hampshire, where she revised and published her novels anonymously: Sense and Sensibility (1811), Pride and Prejudice (1813), Mansfield Park (1814) and Emma (1815). She never married (in 1802 she accepted a proposal from Harris Bigg-Wither and withdrew her acceptance the next day). She died in Winchester on 18 July 1817, aged 41, and is buried in Winchester Cathedral; Northanger Abbey and Persuasion appeared after her death.

Historical and cultural context

The novel is set among the English landed gentry around the turn of the nineteenth century, during the long wars with Revolutionary and Napoleonic France; that is why a militia regiment is quartered at Meryton. Wealth came mainly from land, and estates were often "entailed": settled so that they passed down the male line. Mr. Bennet's estate is entailed on his nearest male relative, so his five daughters will lose their home when he dies. Respectable women of this class could not enter professions, so marriage was the main route to financial security; the novel's money figures (Darcy's £10,000 a year, Elizabeth's expected £1,000 capital) were real stakes. Austen writes in the tradition of the novel of manners, where small social behaviours (who dances with whom, who calls on whom) reveal character and class.

Publication and reception, then and now

Austen's father offered "First Impressions" to the publisher Thomas Cadell in 1797; it was declined by return of post without being read. Revised and retitled, it was sold to Thomas Egerton for £110 and published on 28 January 1813 in three volumes, "By the Author of Sense and Sensibility." Austen called it "my own darling child" in a letter to her sister Cassandra the next day.

Then: The book was well received: reviews in The British Critic and The Critical Review in 1813 praised its characterization, especially Elizabeth, and the first edition sold out within months, with a second that autumn. Not every later writer was charmed: Charlotte Brontë, in an 1848 letter to G. H. Lewes, found it "a carefully fenced, highly cultivated garden" with "no open country."

Now: Pride and Prejudice is one of the best-loved novels in English, continuously in print and adapted many times, most famously in the 1995 BBC series and the 2005 film. Critics read it as a comedy of manners, a study of economic pressure on women, and a novel about how we judge other people; its opening sentence is among the most quoted in literature. Austen's portrait appeared on the Bank of England £10 note in 2017, the bicentenary of her death.

Overview (spoiler-free)

Mrs. Bennet is determined to marry off her five daughters; when wealthy Mr. Bingley and his proud friend Mr. Darcy arrive in the neighbourhood, the second daughter, the quick-witted Elizabeth, forms a strong opinion of Darcy at their first meeting. The novel follows the Bennet sisters through balls, visits, letters, a charming officer and a ridiculous clergyman, as Elizabeth learns how much her first impressions were worth.

Main themes

- pride and prejudice: both main characters show both faults; watch who judges whom, and on what evidence.
- marriage and money: count the incomes; ask what each marriage is for.
- first impressions: the novel's original title; test every early judgment against later evidence.
- family and reputation: one sister's behaviour can damage all five.
- women's choices: what can a woman without a fortune actually do?

Why it matters

The novel is about judging people too quickly, something social media has made more relevant, not less. It also shows clearly how money and law shaped women's lives, and its comedy shows students that serious ideas can be very funny.

Spoilers · teacher only

Darcy proposes and is refused; his letter reveals Wickham's true character and Darcy's role in separating Bingley from Jane. Elizabeth realizes her prejudice; at Pemberley she sees a changed Darcy. Lydia elopes with Wickham; Darcy secretly pays to make them marry. Bingley returns and marries Jane; Lady Catherine's attempt to prevent a match backfires, and Darcy and Elizabeth marry.

Lesson plan (90 minutes)

> 0–8 min · Bell-ringer · You do (8 min)
> Students write to the bell-ringer, then pair-share.
> Before we open Pride and Prejudice: Have you ever judged someone at first meeting and been completely wrong? What made you change your mind?
> Prompt: Before we open Pride and Prejudice: Have you ever judged someone at first meeting and been completely wrong? What made you change your mind?

8–18 min · Key terms · I do (10 min)

Key literary terms for the unit.

entail (a legal arrangement that passes an estate down the male line); gentry (landowning families below the nobility); novel of manners (a novel about social behaviour and class); free indirect discourse (third-person narration that slips into a character's thoughts); irony (saying one thing and meaning another).

18–28 min · Mini-lecture: author, context, reception · I do (10 min)

Mini-lecture on the author, the historical context and the reception (read or adapt the script).

About the author. Jane Austen was born on 16 December 1775 at Steventon rectory in Hampshire, the seventh of eight children of the Reverend George Austen and Cassandra Leigh Austen. Apart from brief schooling she was educated at home, in a lively family that read novels aloud and staged plays; two of her brothers became admirals in the Royal Navy. She wrote comic pieces as a teenager and drafted the novel that became Pride and Prejudice, then called "First Impressions," in 1796–97. After years in Bath and Southampton she settled in 1809 at Chawton, Hampshire, where she revised and published her novels anonymously: Sense and Sensibility (1811), Pride and Prejudice (1813), Mansfield Park (1814) and Emma (1815). She never married (in 1802 she accepted a proposal from Harris Bigg-Wither and withdrew her acceptance the next day). She died in Winchester on 18 July 1817, aged 41, and is buried in Winchester Cathedral; Northanger Abbey and Persuasion appeared after her death. The world of the book. The novel is set among the English landed gentry around the turn of the nineteenth century, during the long wars with Revolutionary and Napoleonic France; that is why a militia regiment is quartered at Meryton. Wealth came mainly from land, and estates were often "entailed": settled so that they passed down the male line. Mr. Bennet's estate is entailed on his nearest male relative, so his five daughters will lose their home when he dies. Respectable women of this class could not enter professions, so marriage was the main route to financial security; the novel's money figures (Darcy's £10,000 a year, Elizabeth's expected £1,000 capital) were real stakes. Austen writes in the tradition of the novel of manners, where small social behaviours (who dances with whom, who calls on whom) reveal character and class. Publication and reception. Austen's father offered "First Impressions" to the publisher Thomas Cadell in 1797; it was declined by return of post without being read. Revised and retitled, it was sold to Thomas Egerton for £110 and published on 28 January 1813 in three volumes, "By the Author of Sense and Sensibility." Austen called it "my own darling child" in a letter to her sister Cassandra the next day. Then: The book was well received: reviews in The British Critic and The Critical Review in 1813 praised its characterization, especially Elizabeth, and the first edition sold out within months, with a second that autumn. Not every later writer was charmed: Charlotte Brontë, in an 1848 letter to G. H. Lewes, found it "a carefully fenced, highly cultivated garden" with "no open country." Now: Pride and Prejudice is one of the best-loved novels in English, continuously in print and adapted many times, most famously in the 1995 BBC series and the 2005 film. Critics read it as a comedy of manners, a study of economic pressure on women, and a novel about how we judge other people; its opening sentence is among the most quoted in literature. Austen's portrait appeared on the Bank of England £10 note in 2017, the bicentenary of her death.

28–40 min · I do: the book in one passage · I do (12 min)
Model a close reading of one passage using the written think-aloud below.
First, meaning. I read "It is a truth universally acknowledged, that a single man in possession of a good fortune, must be in want of a wife" slowly and put it in my own words: The narrator announces that everyone agrees a rich single man must want a wife. Next, craft. I notice the grand, philosophical phrase "a truth universally acknowledged" attached to local gossip, which is irony: the claim is the reverse of the truth. The strongest word is "universally": it pretends the idea is shared by all the world, when it is really the hope of mothers with daughters. Then, effect. What does Austen's famous first sentence really mean? My answer: It is really the families of unmarried daughters who "want" the rich man; Austen opens by mocking a society where marriage is a matter of money, which is the world the Bennet sisters must survive in.

> It is a truth universally acknowledged, that a single man in possession of a good fortune, must be in want of a wife (Chapter I, paragraph 1)

Think-aloud: First, meaning. I read "It is a truth universally acknowledged, that a single man in possession of a good fortune, must be in want of a wife" slowly and put it in my own words: The narrator announces that everyone agrees a rich single man must want a wife. Next, craft. I notice the grand, philosophical phrase "a truth universally acknowledged" attached to local gossip, which is irony: the claim is the reverse of the truth. The strongest word is "universally": it pretends the idea is shared by all the world, when it is really the hope of mothers with daughters. Then, effect. What does Austen's famous first sentence really mean? My answer: It is really the families of unmarried daughters who "want" the rich man; Austen opens by mocking a society where marriage is a matter of money, which is the world the Bennet sisters must survive in.

40–55 min · We do: overview and themes · We do (15 min)
Read the spoiler-free overview together and name the themes to track.
What the book is about (no spoilers): Mrs. Bennet is determined to marry off her five daughters; when wealthy Mr. Bingley and his proud friend Mr. Darcy arrive in the neighbourhood, the second daughter, the quick-witted Elizabeth, forms a strong opinion of Darcy at their first meeting. The novel follows the Bennet sisters through balls, visits, letters, a charming officer and a ridiculous clergyman, as Elizabeth learns how much her first impressions were worth. Themes to track: pride and prejudice: both main characters show both faults; watch who judges whom, and on what evidence. marriage and money: count the incomes; ask what each marriage is for. first impressions: the novel's original title; test every early judgment against later evidence. family and reputation: one sister's behaviour can damage all five. women's choices: what can a woman without a fortune actually do?

55–70 min · You do: reading journal · You do (15 min)
Set up a reading journal: one page per theme, with a prediction and a question (example given).
Set up a reading journal: one page per theme with a prediction and a question. Theme page "first impressions": Prediction: someone who seems pleasant at first will turn out badly. Question: will Elizabeth ever admit she was wrong?
Task: Set up a reading journal for Pride and Prejudice: one page per theme, each with a prediction and a question.
Exemplar: Theme page "first impressions": Prediction: someone who seems pleasant at first will turn out badly. Question: will Elizabeth ever admit she was wrong?

70–80 min · Discussion · We do (10 min)
Whole-class discussion: why the book is still taught.
Why does Pride and Prejudice still matter? The novel is about judging people too quickly, something social media has made more relevant, not less. It also shows clearly how money and law shaped women's lives, and its comedy shows students that serious ideas can be very funny.
Anchor question: Why might Pride and Prejudice still be taught today?
Facilitation: The novel is about judging people too quickly, something social media has made more relevant, not less. It also shows clearly how money and law shaped women's lives, and its comedy shows students that serious ideas can be very funny.

80–87 min · Exit ticket · You do (7 min)
Exit ticket on the author and context (answer given).
Austen published Pride and Prejudice in 1813, in a Regency England where estates like Longbourn were often entailed to male heirs, so a gentleman's daughters could be left with little money. Why would marriage matter so much to women in Austen's world? Answer: Accept answers such as: women could rarely own property or work in professions; marriage was the main path to security; the Longbourn entail to Mr. Collins could leave the Bennet daughters with nothing.
Exit ticket: Austen published Pride and Prejudice in 1813, in a Regency England where estates like Longbourn were often entailed to male heirs, so a gentleman's daughters could be left with little money. Why would marriage matter so much to women in Austen's world?
Answer: Accept answers such as: women could rarely own property or work in professions; marriage was the main path to security; the Longbourn entail to Mr. Collins could leave the Bennet daughters with nothing.

87–90 min · Closure · I do (3 min)
Preview the first reading.
Tomorrow we begin reading: Chapter I.

Teacher notes · sources: Britannica, "Jane Austen" (https://www.britannica.com/biography/Jane-Austen); Jane Austen's House, Chawton (biography and publication history) (https://janeaustens.house/jane-austen/); British Library, "Pride and Prejudice" (publication, Cadell refusal, Egerton) (https://www.bl.uk/romantics-and-victorians/articles/an-introduction-to-pride-and-prejudice); Austen to Cassandra, 29 January 1813 ("my own darling child") in Deirdre Le Faye, ed., Jane Austen's Letters (https://www.worldcat.org/); Charlotte Brontë to G. H. Lewes, 12 January 1848 (https://www.bl.uk/collection-items/letter-from-charlotte-bronte-to-g-h-lewes); Bank of England, Jane Austen £10 note (2017) (https://www.bankofengland.co.uk/banknotes/polymer-10-pound-note)

Flags (verify before teaching):

- The exact year the story is set is uncertain: the draft dates from 1796–97, while the 1813 text's dates fit calendars of 1811–12. Say "around 1800–1812."
- The first-edition print run is usually estimated at about 1,500 copies; treat as an estimate.

Critical voice: "Also read again, and for the third time at least, Miss Austen's very finely written novel of _Pride and Prejudice_. That young lady had a talent for describing the involvements and feelings and characters of ordinary life, which is to me the most wonderful I ever met with. The Big Bow-wow strain I can do myself like any now going; but the exquisite touch, which renders ordinary commonplace things and characters interesting, from the truth of the description and the sentiment, is denied to me. What a pity such a gifted creature died so early!" (Walter Scott, novelist, The Journal of Sir Walter Scott, entry for 14 March 1826, entry of 14 March 1826; public domain). Bell-ringer: the bestselling novelist of his age says he cannot do what Austen does. What is the "Big Bow-wow strain," and why might "ordinary commonplace things" be harder to write? Objective: Describe Austen's reception and what makes "ordinary life" a subject for great fiction. Standards: AP: see the unit standards

Critical voice: "Jane Austen's books, too, are absent from this library. Just that one omission alone would make a fairly good library out of a library that hadn't a book in it." (Mark Twain, novelist and humorist, Following the Equator (1897), Chapter LXII, Chapter LXII; public domain). Four-corners debate with Scott (journal), Brontë and Macaulay: rank the four verdicts and defend the ranking with one passage from Chapter I. Objective: Weigh dissenting views of Austen (then and now). Standards: AP: see the unit standards

Lesson 2: Chapter I

Focus: marriage as a social goal

Objective: Students will analyze how irony develops in “Chapter I” by writing a claim-evidence-reasoning paragraph that cites at least 2 quotations from the section, and will score at least 80% on the section quiz.

Standards: AP: see the unit standards

Critical voice: “Slender, and Shallow, and Aguecheek, as Shakespeare has painted them, though equally fools, resemble one another no more than "Richard," and "Macbeth," and "Julius Caesar"; and Miss Austin's "Mrs. Bennet," "Mr. Rushworth," and "Miss Bates," are no more alike than her "Darcy," "Knightley," and "Edmund Bertram."” (Richard Whately (attrib.; the review is unsigned), logician and later Archbishop of Dublin, Review of Northanger Abbey and Persuasion, The Quarterly Review (January 1821), reprinted in Famous Reviews, ed. R. Brimley Johnson (1914), "Archbishop Whately on Jane Austen"; public domain). Whately on Austen's method: this 1821 review discusses Northanger Abbey and Persuasion, and "her" is Persuasion's Anne Elliot, not Elizabeth Bennet. Use it as a period critic's general principle about prudence in Austen's marriages, not as a comment on this novel. Character study: what makes Mrs. Bennet a particular fool rather than a type? Students list three lines only she could say. ("Austin" is Whately's spelling.) Objective: Analyze Austen's characterization of Mr. and Mrs. Bennet in the opening dialogue. Standards: AP: see the unit standards

Teacher only · spoilers

The novel opens with its famous ironic line about a single man in possession of a good fortune. Mrs. Bennet excitedly tells Mr. Bennet that a wealthy young man, Mr. Bingley, has rented Netherfield Park; Mr. Bennet teases her.

Background: In Regency England, daughters of gentry families depended on marriage for security; the Bennet estate is entailed away from daughters.

Significance: The opening sentence is among the most quoted in English and models Austen's irony: it means the reverse of what it seems to say.

Lesson plan and lecture script (90 minutes)

> 0–8 min · Bell-ringer · You do (8 min)
> Students write to the bell-ringer, then pair-share.
> What does the first sentence really suggest about who wants the marriage? Write for five minutes. Starters: I think... because... / This connects to marriage and money because....
> Prompt: What does the first sentence really suggest about who wants the marriage?
> Sentence starters: I think… because… · This connects to marriage and money because…
> Strong response: A strong response takes a position and anticipates this: marriage is introduced as a transaction ("a single man in possession of a good fortune").

8–18 min · Vocabulary with etymology notes · I do (10 min)
Four key words in context, with verified word histories.
Today's words: newcomers — people who have recently arrived; caprice — a tendency to change one's mind suddenly; tiresome — annoying; wearying; compassion — a deep awareness of and sympathy for another's suffering. "newcomers": Origin of "newcomer": an English formation from new- + comer. "tiresome": Origin: an English formation from tire + -some.
Words: newcomers: people who have recently arrived · caprice: a tendency to change one's mind suddenly · tiresome: annoying; wearying · compassion: a deep awareness of and sympathy for another's suffering

18–28 min · Background and context · I do (10 min)
Mini-lecture (read or adapt the script).
In Regency England, daughters of gentry families depended on marriage for security; the Bennet estate is entailed away from daughters. The opening sentence is among the most quoted in English and models Austen's irony: it means the reverse of what it seems to say. Irony: The opening "truth universally acknowledged" is really the belief of mothers hunting husbands; the narrator mocks it while stating it. Characterization: Mr. and Mrs. Bennet are drawn almost entirely through dialogue: his dry teasing, her nerves. The final paragraph sums them up with Austen's authority. Watch for silence and reserve: What characters leave unsaid (Darcy's reserve, Jane's composure, Elizabeth's secrets) drives misunderstanding. In this chapter: "was so odd a mixture of quick parts, sarcastic humour, reserve, and caprice, that the experience of three and twenty years had" (Chapter I, paragraph 34).

28–40 min · I do: modeled close reading · I do (12 min)
Model the close reading of the anchor quotation using the written think-aloud below.
First, meaning. I read "You take delight in vexing me. You have no compassion on my poor nerves" slowly and put it in my own words: After Mr. Bennet calls their daughters silly, Mrs. Bennet protests that he enjoys teasing her and has no pity for her nerves. Next, craft. I notice her exaggerated self-pity, "my poor nerves," as if her nerves were a separate patient. The strongest word is "vexing": it shows she knows he is teasing her on purpose, even though she never understands his jokes. Then, effect. What does Mrs. Bennet's complaint show about her marriage? My answer: The Bennets are badly matched: he mocks her, and she answers with complaints; Austen shows a marriage without respect, which matters for what Elizabeth will want.

> You take delight in vexing me. You have no compassion on my poor nerves (Chapter I, paragraph 28)

Think-aloud: First, meaning. I read "You take delight in vexing me. You have no compassion on my poor nerves" slowly and put it in my own words: After Mr. Bennet calls their daughters silly, Mrs. Bennet protests that he enjoys teasing her and has no pity for her nerves. Next, craft. I notice her exaggerated self-pity, "my poor nerves," as if her nerves were a separate patient. The strongest word is "vexing": it shows she knows he is teasing her on purpose, even though she never understands his jokes. Then, effect. What does Mrs. Bennet's complaint show about her marriage? My answer: The Bennets are badly matched: he mocks her, and she answers with complaints; Austen shows a marriage without respect, which matters for what Elizabeth will want.

40–55 min · We do: guided annotation · We do (15 min)
Guided analysis of a second quotation; expected answers given.
Ask: What words in this line stand out, and what do they suggest? Expected: "Universally" exaggerates; "must be in want" pretends to be the man's need. The real meaning is that families want his money, introducing marriage and money. Ask: How does this line connect to marriage and money? Expected: Marriage is introduced as a transaction ("a single man in possession of a good fortune"). (Verbal irony: it is the families who want the rich man, not the man who wants a wife.)

> It is a truth universally acknowledged, that a single man in possession of a good fortune, must be in want of a wife (Chapter I, paragraph 1)

Ask: What words in this line stand out, and what do they suggest?
Expected answer: "Universally" exaggerates; "must be in want" pretends to be the man's need. The real meaning is that families want his money, introducing marriage and money.
Ask: How does this line connect to marriage and money?
Expected answer: Marriage is introduced as a transaction ("a single man in possession of a good fortune"). (Verbal irony: it is the families who want the rich man, not the man who wants a wife.)

55–70 min · You do: independent annotation · You do (15 min)
Independent annotation and a claim-evidence-reasoning paragraph (exemplar given).
Annotate the chapter for irony, characterization (three marks with a margin note each), then write one claim-evidence-reasoning paragraph: what does this chapter suggest about marriage as a social goal? Then start your writing prompt at your assigned level (HS Sophomore: Analyze how Chapter I develops the idea of marriage as a social goal. Make a precise claim, support it with at least three pieces of textual evidence, and explain how the author's use of irony and characterization shapes that idea. Address one possible counterclaim.) Exemplar: The novel's opening sentence uses irony to show that marriage in this society is driven by money. When the text says “It is a truth universally acknowledged, that a single man in possession of a good fortune, must be in want of a wife” (Chapter I, paragraph 1), it shows this directly. It claims every rich man "must be in want of a wife," but the next paragraph shows it is the neighbourhood families who regard him as "the rightful property" of their daughters; the "truth" is their desire, not his.
Task: Annotate the chapter for irony, characterization (three marks with a margin note each), then write one claim-evidence-reasoning paragraph: what does this chapter suggest about marriage as a social goal? Then start your writing prompt at your assigned level (HS Sophomore: Analyze how Chapter I develops the idea of marriage as a social goal. Make a precise claim, support it with at least three pieces of textual evidence, and explain how the author's use of irony and characterization shapes that idea. Address one possible counterclaim.)
Exemplar: The novel's opening sentence uses irony to show that marriage in this society is driven by money. When the text says “It is a truth universally acknowledged, that a single man in possession of a good fortune, must be in want of a wife” (Chapter I, paragraph 1), it shows this directly. It claims every rich man "must be in want of a wife," but the next paragraph shows it is the neighbourhood families who regard him as "the rightful property" of their daughters; the "truth" is their desire, not his.

70–80 min · Discussion · We do (10 min)
Structured discussion from the 30 tiered questions, with facilitation notes.
Anchor question: What does the first sentence really suggest about who wants the marriage? Read the first sentence aloud twice, once straight and once ironically. Ask which reading the second paragraph supports.
Anchor question: What does the first sentence really suggest about who wants the marriage?
Facilitation: Read the first sentence aloud twice, once straight and once ironically. Ask which reading the second paragraph supports.

80–87 min · Exit ticket / chapter quiz · You do (7 min)
Chapter quiz in the app and an exit ticket (answer given).
Chapter quiz in the app, then: In one sentence, what does this chapter suggest about marriage as a social goal? Support it with one short quotation. Model answer: The novel's opening sentence uses irony to show that marriage in this society is driven by money. ("It is a truth universally acknowledged, that a single man in possession of a good fortune, must be in want of a wife", Chapter I, paragraph 1). Accept any defensible claim backed by a quotation from the chapter; the answer key for the quiz is in the Quiz section.
Exit ticket: In one sentence, what does this chapter suggest about marriage as a social goal? Support it with one short quotation.
Answer: Model answer: The novel's opening sentence uses irony to show that marriage in this society is driven by money. ("It is a truth universally acknowledged, that a single man in possession of a good fortune, must be in want of a wife", Chapter I, paragraph 1). Accept any defensible claim backed by a quotation from the chapter; the answer key for the quiz is in the Quiz section.

87–90 min · Closure · I do (3 min)
Summarize the lesson and preview the next reading.
Today we saw how irony shapes marriage as a social goal. Key takeaway: marriage is introduced as a transaction ("a single man in possession of a good fortune").

Total: 90 minutes.

Teacher analysis (spoilers)

Literary elements

- Irony: The opening "truth universally acknowledged" is really the belief of mothers hunting husbands; the narrator mocks it while stating it.
- Characterization: Mr. and Mrs. Bennet are drawn almost entirely through dialogue: his dry teasing, her nerves. The final paragraph sums them up with Austen's authority.

Themes and how they develop

- marriage and money: marriage is introduced as a transaction ("a single man in possession of a good fortune").

Symbols and motifs

- silence and reserve: What characters leave unsaid (Darcy's reserve, Jane's composure, Elizabeth's secrets) drives misunderstanding. In this chapter: “was so odd a mixture of quick parts, sarcastic humour, reserve, and caprice, that the experience of three and twenty years had” (Chapter I, paragraph 34).
- marriage and money: Incomes, entails and fortunes are stated precisely; marriage is always also an economic question. In this chapter: “acknowledged, that a single man in possession of a good fortune, must be in want of a wife” (Chapter I, paragraph 1).

Key quotations (checked against the reading text)

- “It is a truth universally acknowledged, that a single man in possession of a good fortune, must be in want of a wife” (Chapter I, paragraph 1) Verbal irony: it is the families who want the rich man, not the man who wants a wife.
- “You take delight in vexing me. You have no compassion on my poor nerves” (Chapter I, paragraph 28) Mrs. Bennet's self-dramatizing; comic characterization.
- “She was a woman of mean understanding, little information, and uncertain temper” (Chapter I, paragraph 34) The narrator's blunt judgment of Mrs. Bennet, in three balanced phrases.

Model claim-evidence-reasoning

Claim: The novel's opening sentence uses irony to show that marriage in this society is driven by money.
Evidence: “It is a truth universally acknowledged, that a single man in possession of a good fortune, must be in want of a wife” (Chapter I, paragraph 1)
Reasoning: It claims every rich man "must be in want of a wife," but the next paragraph shows it is the neighbourhood families who regard him as "the rightful property" of their daughters; the "truth" is their desire, not his.

Vocabulary with etymology notes

Word	Definition (in this sentence)	In context	Word history
newcomers (noun)	people who have recently arrived	Sir William and Lady Lucas are determined to go, merely on that account, for in general you know they visit no newcomers.	“newcomers”: Origin of “newcomer”: an English formation from new- + comer. (Liber et Libri origin note, https://en.wiktionary.org/wiki/newcomer#Etymology)
caprice (noun)	a tendency to change one's mind suddenly	Bennet was so odd a mixture of quick parts, sarcastic humour, reserve, and caprice, that the experience of three and twenty years had been insufficient to make his wife understand his character.

tiresome (adjective)	annoying; wearying	Bennet," replied his wife, "how can you be so tiresome!	"tiresome": Origin: an English formation from tire + -some. (Liber et Libri origin note, https://en.wiktionary.org/wiki/tiresome#Etymology)
compassion (noun)	a deep awareness of and sympathy for another's suffering	You have no compassion on my poor nerves."

Discussion questions

1. What does the first sentence really suggest about who wants the marriage?
2. Where does irony appear in this chapter, and what effect does it have? Point to one passage.
3. How does this chapter connect to the book's larger concern with first impressions and prejudice?

Classroom discussion questions (30, tiered)

Wait time after every question (3 s for DOK 1, 5 s for DOK 2, 8 to 10 s for DOK 3 and 4); think-pair-share on DOK 3 and 4; answer each response with a follow-up probe; close with student-generated questions. Focus sets by rigor level: Scaffolded support: 1, 2, 3, 4, 5, 6, 11, 12, 13, 14, 21, 22; HS Freshman: 1, 2, 3, 4, 5, 12, 13, 14, 15, 22, 23, 24; HS Sophomore: 1, 2, 3, 4, 13, 14, 15, 16, 17, 23, 24, 25; HS Junior: 1, 2, 3, 14, 15, 16, 17, 18, 24, 25, 26, 27; HS Senior: 1, 2, 3, 15, 16, 17, 18, 25, 26, 27, 28, 29; AP: 1, 2, 16, 17, 18, 19, 20, 26, 27, 28, 29, 30; College Freshman: 1, 2, 17, 18, 19, 20, 21, 22, 27, 28, 29, 30; College Sophomore: 1, 2, 11, 18, 19, 20, 21, 22, 23, 28, 29, 30; College Junior: 1, 11, 12, 19, 20, 21, 22, 23, 24, 25, 29, 30; College Senior: 1, 11, 12, 13, 20, 21, 22, 23, 24, 25, 26, 30; Graduate / PhD: 1, 11, 12, 13, 21, 22, 23, 24, 25, 26, 27, 28

Literal / recall

1. Who has rented Netherfield Park? [DOK 1 · coldCallWithSupport · wait 3 s · AP: unit standards] Look for: Mr. Bingley
2. How does Mr. Bennet treat his wife's excitement? [DOK 1 · turnAndTalk · wait 3 s · AP: unit standards] Look for: He teases her dryly
3. What is the tone of the opening sentence? [DOK 1 · coldCallWithSupport · wait 3 s · AP: unit standards] Look for: Ironic
4. What is Mrs. Bennet's main goal? [DOK 1 · turnAndTalk · wait 3 s · AP: unit standards] Look for: Marrying off her daughters
5. How many daughters do the Bennets have? [DOK 1 · coldCallWithSupport · wait 3 s · AP: unit standards] Look for: Five
6. Retell the three most important events of "Chapter I" in order, in one sentence each. [DOK 1 · turnAndTalk · wait 3 s · AP: unit standards] Look for: The novel opens with its famous ironic line about a single man in possession of a good fortune. Mrs. Bennet excitedly tells Mr. Bennet that a wealthy young man, Mr. Bingley, has rented Netherfield Park; Mr. Bennet teases her.
7. Which characters appear or are mentioned in "Chapter I"? Name two and one thing each says or does. [DOK 1 · coldCallWithSupport · wait 3 s · AP: unit standards] Look for: Names and actions taken from the chapter; check against the teacher summary.
8. Where and when does "Chapter I" take place? Point to the line that tells you. [DOK 1 · turnAndTalk · wait 3 s · AP: unit standards] Look for: A place/time detail quoted from the chapter.

9. Reread: “Sir William and Lady Lucas are determined to go, merely on that account, for in general you know they visit no newcomers.” What does “newcomers” mean here, and what is literally happening in this line? [DOK 1 · turnAndTalk · wait 3 s · AP: unit standards] Look for: newcomers: people who have recently arrived.
10. Reread: “Bennet was so odd a mixture of quick parts, sarcastic humour, reserve, and caprice, that the experience of three and twenty years had been insufficient to make his wife understand his character.” What does “caprice” mean here, and what is literally happening in this line? [DOK 1 · turnAndTalk · wait 3 s · AP: unit standards] Look for: caprice: a tendency to change one's mind suddenly.

Inferential / analytical

1. What does “Chapter I” suggest about marriage as a social goal? State the inference and the line that supports it. [DOK 2 · thinkPairShare · wait 5 s · AP-LIT.LAN] Look for: The opening sentence is among the most quoted in English and models Austen's irony: it means the reverse of what it seems to say.
2. Find one example of irony in this chapter. What does it reveal that a plain statement would not? [DOK 2 · followUp · wait 5 s · AP-LIT.NAR] Look for: Look for gaps between what characters expect or say and what is true.
3. How does the characterization in this chapter shape what we understand about marriage as a social goal? [DOK 3 · thinkPairShare · wait 8 s · AP-LIT.CHR] Look for: Look for what characters say, do and think, and how others react to them.
   Answer guidance: A defensible line of argument: The novel's opening sentence uses irony to show that marriage in this society is driven by money. Useful evidence: “It is a truth universally acknowledged, that a single man in possession of a good fortune, must be in want of a wife” (Chapter I, paragraph 1): Verbal irony: it is the families who want the rich man, not the man who wants a wife. On characterization: Mr. and Mrs. Bennet are drawn almost entirely through dialogue: his dry teasing, her nerves. The final paragraph sums them up with Austen's authority. Credit any position that is supported by quotation and reasoning; push one-sided answers to address the strongest counterpoint.
4. In the passage that begins ““But consider your daughters.”, why might Austen have chosen these particular words? Pick two and explain their connotations. [DOK 2 · followUp · wait 5 s · AP-LIT.FIG] Look for: Diction analysis of two words in the anchor passage.
5. What causes the main turn in “Chapter I”, and what effect is it likely to have on what follows? [DOK 2 · followUp · wait 5 s · AP-LIT.STR] Look for: The novel opens with its famous ironic line about a single man in possession of a good fortune. Mrs. Bennet excitedly tells Mr. Bennet that a wealthy young man, Mr. Bingley, has rented Netherfield Park; Mr. Bennet teases her.
6. As the opening chapter, what does “Chapter I” set up that the rest of Pride and Prejudice will need? [DOK 3 · thinkPairShare · wait 8 s · AP-LIT.STR] Look for: A causal or structural link between this and the previous chapter.
   Answer guidance: A defensible line of argument: The novel's opening sentence uses irony to show that marriage in this society is driven by money. Useful evidence: “You take delight in vexing me. You have no compassion on my poor nerves” (Chapter I, paragraph 28): Mrs. Bennet's self-dramatizing; comic characterization. Theme link: marriage is introduced as a transaction ("a single man in possession of a good fortune"). Credit any position that is supported by quotation and reasoning; push one-sided answers to address the strongest counterpoint.
7. What can we infer about a character's motives from what they say and do here, as opposed to what they claim? [DOK 3 · followUp · wait 8 s · AP-LIT.CHR] Look for: An inference about motive supported by a quoted line.
   Answer guidance: A defensible line of argument: The novel's opening sentence uses irony to show that marriage in this society is driven by money. Useful evidence: “She was a woman of mean understanding, little information, and uncertain temper" (Chapter I, paragraph 34): The narrator's blunt judgment of Mrs. Bennet, in three balanced phrases. On characterization: Mr. and Mrs. Bennet are drawn almost entirely through dialogue: his dry teasing, her nerves. The final paragraph sums them up with Austen's authority. Credit any position that is supported by quotation and reasoning; push one-sided answers to address the strongest counterpoint.

8. The bell-ringer asked: "What does the first sentence really suggest about who wants the marriage?" Now that we have read closely, how would you revise your first answer, and which line changed your mind? [DOK 2 · thinkPairShare · wait 5 s · AP-LIT.LAN] Look for: A revised answer anchored in the text.
9. Where does tone / mood appear, and how does it connect this chapter to the larger concern with first impressions and prejudice? [DOK 3 · followUp · wait 8 s · AP-LIT.FIG] Look for: Look for word choices that reveal the narrator's attitude or the scene's feeling.

   Answer guidance: A defensible line of argument: The novel's opening sentence uses irony to show that marriage in this society is driven by money. Useful evidence: "It is a truth universally acknowledged, that a single man in possession of a good fortune, must be in want of a wife" (Chapter I, paragraph 1): Verbal irony: it is the families who want the rich man, not the man who wants a wife. Theme link: marriage is introduced as a transaction ("a single man in possession of a good fortune"). Credit any position that is supported by quotation and reasoning; push one-sided answers to address the strongest counterpoint.
10. Background: In Regency England, daughters of gentry families depended on marriage for security; the Bennet estate is entailed away from daughters. How does knowing this change the way you read one moment in the chapter? [DOK 3 · thinkPairShare · wait 8 s · AP-LIT.SET] Look for: A specific moment reread in light of the context.

    Answer guidance: A defensible line of argument: The novel's opening sentence uses irony to show that marriage in this society is driven by money. Useful evidence: "You take delight in vexing me. You have no compassion on my poor nerves" (Chapter I, paragraph 28): Mrs. Bennet's self-dramatizing; comic characterization. Theme link: marriage is introduced as a transaction ("a single man in possession of a good fortune"). Credit any position that is supported by quotation and reasoning; push one-sided answers to address the strongest counterpoint.

Evaluative / synthesis / creative

1. A critic might argue: "The opening sentence is among the most quoted in English and models Austen's irony: it means the reverse of what it seems to say." How far do you agree? Take a stand and defend it with two lines from the chapter. [DOK 3 · fourCorners · wait 8 s · AP-LIT.LAN] Look for: A defended position with evidence and one counterpoint.

   Answer guidance: A defensible line of argument: The novel's opening sentence uses irony to show that marriage in this society is driven by money. Useful evidence: "She was a woman of mean understanding, little information, and uncertain temper" (Chapter I, paragraph 34): The narrator's blunt judgment of Mrs. Bennet, in three balanced phrases. Theme link: marriage is introduced as a transaction ("a single man in possession of a good fortune"). Credit any position that is supported by quotation and reasoning; push one-sided answers to address the strongest counterpoint.
2. Which character in this chapter acts most wisely, and which least? Judge them by a standard you name. [DOK 3 · thinkPairShare · wait 8 s · AP-LIT.CHR, AP-LIT.LAN] Look for: An evaluation using an explicit criterion and evidence.

   Answer guidance: A defensible line of argument: The novel's opening sentence uses irony to show that marriage in this society is driven by money. Useful evidence: “It is a truth universally acknowledged, that a single man in possession of a good fortune, must be in want of a wife” (Chapter I, paragraph 1): Verbal irony: it is the families who want the rich man, not the man who wants a wife. On characterization: Mr. and Mrs. Bennet are drawn almost entirely through dialogue: his dry teasing, her nerves. The final paragraph sums them up with Austen's authority. Credit any position that is supported by quotation and reasoning; push one-sided answers to address the strongest counterpoint.

3. Rewrite one moment of “Chapter I” from the point of view of a different character. What does the new angle reveal or hide about marriage as a social goal? [DOK 4 · thinkPairShare · wait 8 s · AP-LIT.LAN, AP-LIT.NAR] Look for: A creative product with a rationale tied to the text.

   Answer guidance: A defensible line of argument: The novel's opening sentence uses irony to show that marriage in this society is driven by money. Useful evidence: “You take delight in vexing me. You have no compassion on my poor nerves” (Chapter I, paragraph 28): Mrs. Bennet's self-dramatizing; comic characterization. Theme link: marriage is introduced as a transaction ("a single man in possession of a good fortune"). Credit any position that is supported by quotation and reasoning; push one-sided answers to address the strongest counterpoint.

4. Write three questions of your own about “Chapter I”: one recall, one “why/how”, and one “should/what if”. Trade with a partner and answer theirs. [DOK 3 · studentGenerated · wait 8 s · AP-LIT.LAN] Look for: Student-generated questions at three levels.

   Answer guidance: A defensible line of argument: The novel's opening sentence uses irony to show that marriage in this society is driven by money. Useful evidence: “She was a woman of mean understanding, little information, and uncertain temper” (Chapter I, paragraph 34): The narrator's blunt judgment of Mrs. Bennet, in three balanced phrases. Theme link: marriage is introduced as a transaction ("a single man in possession of a good fortune"). Credit any position that is supported by quotation and reasoning; push one-sided answers to address the strongest counterpoint.

5. Connect this chapter to pride and self-knowledge: is the link strong or weak so far? What would Austen need to show next to strengthen it? [DOK 4 · socraticCircle · wait 8 s · AP-LIT.LAN] Look for: A judgment of thematic development across the work.

   Answer guidance: A defensible line of argument: The novel's opening sentence uses irony to show that marriage in this society is driven by money. Useful evidence: “It is a truth universally acknowledged, that a single man in possession of a good fortune, must be in want of a wife” (Chapter I, paragraph 1): Verbal irony: it is the families who want the rich man, not the man who wants a wife. Theme link: marriage is introduced as a transaction ("a single man in possession of a good fortune"). Credit any position that is supported by quotation and reasoning; push one-sided answers to address the strongest counterpoint.

6. Is the irony in this chapter effective, or does it feel heavy-handed? Evaluate it as a reader would in a review. [DOK 3 · fourCorners · wait 8 s · AP-LIT.LAN, AP-LIT.NAR] Look for: An evaluative judgment with criteria and evidence.

   Answer guidance: A defensible line of argument: The novel's opening sentence uses irony to show that marriage in this society is driven by money. Useful evidence: “You take delight in vexing me. You have no compassion on my poor nerves” (Chapter I, paragraph 28): Mrs. Bennet's self-dramatizing; comic characterization. On irony: The opening "truth universally acknowledged" is really the belief of mothers hunting husbands; the narrator mocks it while stating it. Credit any position that is supported by quotation and reasoning; push one-sided answers to address the strongest counterpoint.

7. Compare how “Chapter I” treats marriage as a social goal with how another text, film or event you know treats a similar idea. What does Pride and Prejudice see that the other misses? [DOK 4 · socraticCircle · wait 8 s

· AP-LIT.LAN] Look for: A cross-text synthesis.

Answer guidance: A defensible line of argument: The novel's opening sentence uses irony to show that marriage in this society is driven by money. Useful evidence: “She was a woman of mean understanding, little information, and uncertain temper” (Chapter I, paragraph 34): The narrator's blunt judgment of Mrs. Bennet, in three balanced phrases. Theme link: marriage is introduced as a transaction ("a single man in possession of a good fortune"). Credit any position that is supported by quotation and reasoning; push one-sided answers to address the strongest counterpoint.

8. Predict what “Chapter II” will bring, using two clues from this chapter. After reading, evaluate your prediction. [DOK 3 · thinkPairShare · wait 8 s · AP-LIT.LAN, AP-LIT.STR] Look for: A prediction or judgment justified with textual clues.

   Answer guidance: A defensible line of argument: The novel's opening sentence uses irony to show that marriage in this society is driven by money. Useful evidence: “It is a truth universally acknowledged, that a single man in possession of a good fortune, must be in want of a wife” (Chapter I, paragraph 1): Verbal irony: it is the families who want the rich man, not the man who wants a wife. Theme link: marriage is introduced as a transaction ("a single man in possession of a good fortune"). Credit any position that is supported by quotation and reasoning; push one-sided answers to address the strongest counterpoint.

9. Design a one-paragraph modern adaptation of this chapter (setting, characters, conflict). What must stay the same for it to still be about marriage as a social goal? [DOK 4 · thinkPairShare · wait 8 s · AP-LIT.LAN] Look for: A creative transfer that keeps the core idea.

   Answer guidance: A defensible line of argument: The novel's opening sentence uses irony to show that marriage in this society is driven by money. Useful evidence: “You take delight in vexing me. You have no compassion on my poor nerves” (Chapter I, paragraph 28): Mrs. Bennet's self-dramatizing; comic characterization. Theme link: marriage is introduced as a transaction ("a single man in possession of a good fortune"). Credit any position that is supported by quotation and reasoning; push one-sided answers to address the strongest counterpoint.

10. What question would you most like to ask Jane Austen about this chapter, and what answer do you think the text itself gives? [DOK 4 · studentGenerated · wait 8 s · AP-LIT.LAN] Look for: A student-generated question answered from evidence.

    Answer guidance: A defensible line of argument: The novel's opening sentence uses irony to show that marriage in this society is driven by money. Useful evidence: “She was a woman of mean understanding, little information, and uncertain temper” (Chapter I, paragraph 34): The narrator's blunt judgment of Mrs. Bennet, in three balanced phrases. Theme link: marriage is introduced as a transaction ("a single man in possession of a good fortune"). Credit any position that is supported by quotation and reasoning; push one-sided answers to address the strongest counterpoint.

Annotation focus

- Irony: look for gaps between what characters expect or say and what is true (anchor passage in the We do segment)
- Also notice Characterization: what characters say, do and think, and how others react to them
- Also notice Tone / mood: word choices that reveal the narrator's attitude or the scene's feeling

Chapter quiz: item bank (all eleven rigor versions)

1. [mc · recall · DOK 1] What is the tone of the opening sentence?
   A. Angry
   B. Tragic
   C. Ironic
   D. Mysterious

   Key: C (Ironic)
2. [fill · recall · DOK 1] Complete the quotation from Chapter I, paragraph 34: “She was a woman of mean _____, little information, and uncertain temper”

   Key: understanding
3. [mc · recall · DOK 1] How does Mr. Bennet treat his wife's excitement?
   A. He teases her dryly
   B. He shares it
   C. He scolds her angrily
   D. He ignores her entirely

   Key: A (He teases her dryly)
4. [mc · recall · DOK 1] What is Mrs. Bennet's main goal?
   A. Buying a new house
   B. Marrying off her daughters
   C. Educating her daughters
   D. Travelling to London

   Key: B (Marrying off her daughters)
5. [mc · recall · DOK 1] In the line “Bennet,’ replied his wife, ‘how can you be so tiresome!”, what does “tiresome” most nearly mean?
   A. annoyances; worries
   B. never tiring
   C. annoying; wearying
   D. an emergency; a sudden difficulty (older usage)

   Key: C (annoying; wearying)
6. [fill · recall · DOK 1] Complete the quotation from Chapter I, paragraph 33: “Depend upon it, my dear, that when there are _____, I will visit them all.” Word bank: preference, twenty, engage, consideration

   Key: twenty
7. [mc · recall · DOK 1] In the line “You have no compassion on my poor nerves.”, what does “compassion” most nearly mean?
   A. giving; providing
   B. a deep awareness of and sympathy for another's suffering
   C. slightly ill
   D. a single word or sound (here, "a syllable said" = a word said)

   Key: B (a deep awareness of and sympathy for another's suffering)

8. [fill · recall · DOK 1] Complete the quotation from Chapter I, paragraph 28: “You take delight in vexing me. You have no _____ on my poor nerves”

   Key: compassion

9. [fill · recall · DOK 1] Fill in the blank with the vocabulary word that fits: “Sir William and Lady Lucas are determined to go, merely on that account, for in general you know they visit no _____.” Word bank: newcomers, tiresome, compassion, caprice

   Key: newcomers

10. [mc · recall · DOK 1] Which word completes this sentence from Chapter I, paragraph 20? “I certainly have had my share of beauty, but I do not pretend to be anything _____ now.”

    A. engage

    B. extraordinary

    C. impossible

    D. thousand

    Key: B (extraordinary)

11. [short · inference · DOK 2] What does this passage from Chapter I, paragraph 22 reveal about the character or situation? “But, my dear, you must indeed go and see Mr. Bingley when he comes into the neighbourhood.” Answer in two or three sentences with one detail.

    Sample answer: The passage (Chapter I, paragraph 22) shows the situation turning on first impressions and prejudice: marriage is introduced as a transaction ("a single man in possession of a good fortune"). The words “neighbourhood” and “indeed” are the proof, because they show how the moment looks to the people in it. They suggest more than the narrator states outright.

12. [mc · inference · DOK 2] Which of these passages comes earliest in Chapter I?

    A. “But it is very likely that he may fall in love with one of them, and therefore you must visit him as soon as he comes.”

    B. “A single man of large fortune; four or five thousand a year.”

    C. “You and the girls may go, or you may send them by themselves, which perhaps will be still better, for as you are as handsome as any of…”

    D. “You must know that I am thinking of his marrying one of them.”

    Key: B (“A single man of large fortune; four or five thousand a year.”)

13. [mc · inference · DOK 2] Which choice best states a central concern of “Chapter I”?

    A. Marriage as a social goal

    B. Trusted relatives

    C. Endings and futures

    D. Letters of judgment

    Key: A (Marriage as a social goal)

14. [mc · analysis · DOK 3] Which literary element does this describe in “Chapter I”? Mr. and Mrs. Bennet are drawn almost entirely through dialogue: his dry teasing, her nerves. The final paragraph sums them up with Austen's authority.

    A. Characterization

    B. Alliteration

    C. Setting

D. Diction / vocabulary

Key: A (Characterization)

15. [short · analysis · DOK 3] Claim: The novel's opening sentence uses irony to show that marriage in this society is driven by money. Explain how this evidence supports the claim: “It is a truth universally acknowledged, that a single man in possession of a good fortune, must be in want of a wife” (Chapter I, paragraph 1).
    Sample answer: It claims every rich man "must be in want of a wife," but the next paragraph shows it is the neighbourhood families who regard him as "the rightful property" of their daughters; the "truth" is their desire, not his. The evidence is “It is a truth universally acknowledged, that a single man in possession of a good fortune, must be in want of a wife” (Chapter I, paragraph 1) — Verbal irony: it is the families who want the rich man, not the man who wants a wife. This develops marriage and money: marriage is introduced as a transaction ("a single man in possession of a good fortune").
16. [short · synthesis · DOK 4] Synthesis: trace how marriage and money develops from the opening of “Chapter I” to its ending. Use one quotation from each part.
    Sample answer: Near the start, “It is a truth universally acknowledged, that a single man in possession of a good fortune, must be in want of a wife” (Chapter I, paragraph 1) — Verbal irony: it is the families who want the rich man, not the man who wants a wife. Later, “She was a woman of mean understanding, little information, and uncertain temper” (Chapter I, paragraph 34), which shows the narrator's blunt judgment of Mrs. Bennet, in three balanced phrases. Marriage is introduced as a transaction ("a single man in possession of a good fortune").
17. [fill · recall · DOK 1] Complete the quotation from Chapter I, paragraph 8: “You want to tell me, and I have no _____ to hearing it.” Word bank: extraordinary, impossible, objection, neighbourhood
    Key: objection
18. [mc · recall · DOK 1] Who has rented Netherfield Park?

    A. Mr. Darcy

    B. Mr. Bingley

    C. Mr. Wickham

    D. Mr. Collins

    Key: B (Mr. Bingley)
19. [fill · recall · DOK 1] Fill in the blank with the vocabulary word that fits: “Bennet was so odd a mixture of quick parts, sarcastic humour, reserve, and _____, that the experience of three and twenty years had been insufficient to make his wife understand his character.” Word bank: newcomers, tiresome, compassion, caprice
    Key: caprice
20. [short · inference · DOK 2] What can you infer from this line? “You take delight in vexing me. You have no compassion on my poor nerves” (Chapter I, paragraph 28) Answer in two or three sentences with one detail.
    Sample answer: Mrs. Bennet's self-dramatizing; comic characterization. The evidence is “You take delight in vexing me. You have no compassion on my poor nerves” (Chapter I, paragraph 28). This develops marriage and money: marriage is introduced as a transaction ("a single man in possession of a good fortune").
21. [mc · analysis · DOK 3] In this chapter, which theme does the following most directly develop? Marriage is introduced as a transaction (‘a single man in possession of a good fortune’).

    A. Pride and self-knowledge

    B. First impressions and prejudice

    C. Marriage and money

    D. Class and social mobility

Key: C (Marriage and money)

22. [short · analysis · DOK 3] Analyze how the word choice in this passage from Chapter I, paragraph 30 shapes its tone: “Ah! you do not know what I suffer.” Pick two words and explain their effect.
    Sample answer: The words “suffer” (Chapter I, paragraph 30) make the tone heavy and deliberate rather than neutral. That weight points the reader to pride and self-knowledge: marriage is introduced as a transaction ("a single man in possession of a good fortune"). The author chooses them so the moment feels significant instead of passing.
23. [fill · recall · DOK 1] Complete the quotation from Chapter I, paragraph 24: “Indeed you must go, for it will be _____ for us to visit him, if you do not.” Word bank: impossible, objection, beauty, children
    Key: impossible
24. [mc · recall · DOK 1] How many daughters do the Bennets have?
    A. Three
    B. Seven
    C. Two
    D. Five

    Key: D (Five)
25. [short · inference · DOK 2] What can you infer from this line? “It is a truth universally acknowledged, that a single man in possession of a good fortune, must be in want of a wife” (Chapter I, paragraph 1) Answer in two or three sentences with one detail.
    Sample answer: Verbal irony: it is the families who want the rich man, not the man who wants a wife. The evidence is “It is a truth universally acknowledged, that a single man in possession of a good fortune, must be in want of a wife” (Chapter I, paragraph 1).
26. [mc · analysis · DOK 3] Which literary element does this describe in “Chapter I”? The opening ‘truth universally acknowledged’ is really the belief of mothers hunting husbands; the narrator mocks it while stating it.
    A. Tone / mood
    B. Irony
    C. Metaphor
    D. Imagery

    Key: B (Irony)
27. [short · analysis · DOK 3] Analyze the word choice in “She was a woman of mean understanding, little information, and uncertain temper” (Chapter I, paragraph 34). Pick two words and explain what they suggest.
    Sample answer: The narrator's blunt judgment of Mrs. Bennet, in three balanced phrases. The evidence is “She was a woman of mean understanding, little information, and uncertain temper” (Chapter I, paragraph 34). This develops marriage and money: marriage is introduced as a transaction ("a single man in possession of a good fortune"). The words “understanding” and “information” carry that meaning: they are the charged choices in the line, and changing either would soften the effect.
28. [short · analysis · DOK 3] Analyze how the word choice in this passage from Chapter I, paragraph 26 shapes its tone: “Lizzy is not a bit better than the others; and I am sure she is not half so handsome as Jane, nor half so good humoured as Lydia.” Pick two words and explain their effect.
    Sample answer: The words “humoured” and “handsome” (Chapter I, paragraph 26) make the tone heavy and deliberate rather than neutral. That weight points the reader to class and social mobility: marriage is introduced as a transaction ("a single man in possession of a good fortune"). The author chooses them so the moment feels significant instead of passing.

29. [short · synthesis · DOK 4] Close reading: how do the diction and syntax of “You take delight in vexing me. You have no compassion on my poor nerves” (Chapter I, paragraph 28) shape its meaning? Consider a second, competing reading.

    Sample answer: Mrs. Bennet's self-dramatizing; comic characterization. The evidence is “You take delight in vexing me. You have no compassion on my poor nerves” (Chapter I, paragraph 28). This develops marriage and money: marriage is introduced as a transaction ("a single man in possession of a good fortune"). The words “compassion” and “delight” carry that meaning: they are the charged choices in the line, and changing either would soften the effect. It claims every rich man "must be in want of a wife," but the next paragraph shows it is the neighbourhood families who regard him as "the rightful property" of their daughters; the "truth" is their desire, not his.

30. [mc · recall · DOK 1 · AP: AP-LIT.FIG] Which word completes this sentence from Chapter I, paragraph 28? “Mr. Bennet, how can you abuse your own _____ in such a way?”

    A. children

    B. twenty

    C. consideration

    D. neighbourhood

    Key: A (children)

31. [short · synthesis · DOK 4 · AP: AP-LIT.LAN] Connect this passage from Chapter I, paragraph 16 to the story's treatment of marriage and money: “You must know that I am thinking of his marrying one of them.” Use one other moment from the story as well.

    Sample answer: This passage (Chapter I, paragraph 16) develops marriage and money: marriage is introduced as a transaction ("a single man in possession of a good fortune"). Its words “marrying” and “thinking” carry that idea into this moment. The same concern returns in “You and the girls may go, or you may send them by themselves, which perhaps will be still better, for as you are as…” (Chapter I, paragraph 19), so the two passages read as a pattern, not a single moment. Together they show the story treating marriage and money as central.

32. [mc · inference · DOK 2 · AP: AP-LIT.LAN] What does this passage most clearly show? “It is a truth universally acknowledged, that a single man in possession of a good fortune, must be in want of a wife” (Chapter I, paragraph 1)

    A. Elizabeth deflates the household's awe of rank with a joke.

    B. Mrs. Gardiner's sharper version.

    C. Verbal irony: it is the families who want the rich man, not the man who wants a wife.

    D. Darcy's resistance to his own feelings.

    Key: C (Verbal irony: it is the families who want the rich man, not the man who wants a wife.)

33. [mc · inference · DOK 2 · AP: AP-LIT.LAN] What does this passage most clearly show? “She was a woman of mean understanding, little information, and uncertain temper” (Chapter I, paragraph 34)

    A. Collins's refusal of novels, written in a novel; Austen's joke at his expense.

    B. The dramatic irony stated directly.

    C. The narrator's blunt judgment of Mrs. Bennet, in three balanced phrases.

    D. Wickham's charm consoles the family; irony in hindsight.

    Key: C (The narrator's blunt judgment of Mrs. Bennet, in three balanced phrases.)

34. [fill · recall · DOK 1 · Program outcome: LeL-C3-LIT-1] Complete the quotation from Chapter I, paragraph 1: “It is a truth universally _____, that a single man in possession of a good fortune, must be in want of a wife”
    Key: acknowledged
35. [short · synthesis · DOK 4 · Program outcome: LeL-C4-LIT-1] Close reading: how do the diction and syntax of “It is a truth universally acknowledged, that a single man in possession of a good fortune, must be in want of a wife” (Chapter I, paragraph 1) shape its meaning? Consider a second, competing reading.
    Sample answer: Verbal irony: it is the families who want the rich man, not the man who wants a wife. The evidence is “It is a truth universally acknowledged, that a single man in possession of a good fortune, must be in want of a wife” (Chapter I, paragraph 1). This develops marriage and money: marriage is introduced as a transaction ("a single man in possession of a good fortune"). The words “acknowledged” and “universally” carry that meaning: they are the charged choices in the line, and changing either would soften the effect. It claims every rich man "must be in want of a wife," but the next paragraph shows it is the neighbourhood families who regard him as "the rightful property" of their daughters; the "truth" is their desire, not his.

Rigor version	Items (in order)	Mix
Scaffolded support	1, 2, 3, 4, 5, 6, 7, 8, 9, 10, 11, 12, 13, 14, 15, 16	recall 10, inference 3, analysis 2, synthesis 1
HS Freshman	4, 10, 3, 1, 17, 2, 18, 19, 12, 13, 20, 11, 14, 21, 22, 16	recall 8, inference 4, analysis 3, synthesis 1
HS Sophomore	23, 17, 6, 7, 10, 19, 24, 11, 12, 13, 25, 26, 27, 28, 29, 16	recall 7, inference 4, analysis 3, synthesis 2
HS Junior	30, 9, 3, 5, 17, 10, 12, 11, 25, 13, 28, 26, 14, 22, 16, 31	recall 6, inference 4, analysis 4, synthesis 2
HS Senior	1, 19, 9, 5, 4, 24, 12, 11, 13, 20, 22, 27, 14, 21, 31, 16	recall 6, inference 4, analysis 4, synthesis 2
AP	24, 8, 4, 2, 32, 33, 13, 11, 12, 26, 28, 14, 22, 21, 16, 31	recall 4, inference 5, analysis 5, synthesis 2
College Freshman	18, 9, 2, 8, 11, 12, 32, 13, 27, 26, 21, 14, 22, 28, 31, 16	recall 4, inference 4, analysis 6, synthesis 2
College Sophomore	10, 23, 24, 17, 12, 11, 20, 13, 27, 14, 28, 21, 22, 26, 16, 31	recall 4, inference 4, analysis 6, synthesis 2
College Junior	4, 9, 30, 34, 8, 11, 12, 13, 27, 21, 22, 14, 26, 28, 16, 31	recall 5, inference 3, analysis 6, synthesis 2
College Senior	8, 3, 7, 17, 12, 11, 13, 27, 14, 22, 26, 28, 21, 31, 35, 16	recall 4, inference 3, analysis 6, synthesis 3
Graduate / PhD	7, 5, 2, 34, 23, 13, 12, 11, 28, 26, 27, 22, 21, 14, 16, 31	recall 5, inference 3, analysis 6, synthesis 2

Writing prompts (eleven rigor levels)

Scaffolded support (250 words; AP: see unit standards): Supported track (work from the passage your teacher selects). In “Chapter I,” how does Austen show marriage as a social goal? Write a paragraph that states your claim, quotes two details from the passage, and explains how each detail supports your idea. Use the irony you noticed as one piece of evidence.

HS Freshman (350 words; AP: see unit standards): In Chapter I, how does Austen develop the idea of marriage as a social goal? State a clear claim, support it with two or three quotations, and explain how the irony in the chapter helps build that idea.

HS Sophomore (450 words; AP: see unit standards): Analyze how Chapter I develops the idea of marriage as a social goal. Make a precise claim, support it with at least three pieces of textual evidence, and explain how the author's use of irony and characterization shapes that idea. Address one possible counterclaim.

HS Junior (550 words; AP: see unit standards): Analyze how the structure of Chapter I (where it begins, turns and ends) and its irony shape the reader's understanding of marriage as a social goal. Identify one place where the text leaves matters uncertain and explain how that uncertainty adds to its meaning. Distinguish what is directly stated from what is really meant.

HS Senior (600 words; AP: see unit standards): Two readers disagree about what Chapter I suggests about marriage as a social goal. Lay out two plausible interpretations, weigh the evidence for each (including the chapter's irony and characterization), and argue for the stronger one in a sustained, well-organized essay. Distinguish what is directly stated from what is really meant.

AP (650 words; AP: AP-LIT.NAR, AP-LIT.LAN): Write a literary argument in which you analyze how Jane Austen uses irony in Chapter I to complicate the reader's understanding of marriage as a social goal. Develop a defensible thesis, select evidence purposefully, and explain how specific choices of diction and syntax create meaning.

College Freshman (1000 words; AP: see unit standards): Situate Chapter I within its historical and literary context and argue how the chapter's treatment of marriage as a social goal responds to that context. Engage with at least one secondary perspective (a critic, historian or the author's own statements), integrate quotations smoothly, and cite in MLA style.

College Sophomore (1250 words; AP: see unit standards): Read Chapter I alongside the conventions of its genre and period. Argue how the chapter's handling of marriage as a social goal follows or bends those conventions, using the irony as evidence, and test your reading against one published critic. Document two secondary sources in MLA.

College Junior (1500 words; AP: see unit standards): Apply a named critical approach (for example formalist, historicist, feminist, psychoanalytic or ecocritical) to Chapter I and its treatment of marriage as a social goal. State your method, show what it reveals in the chapter's irony and characterization, and identify where the text resists it.

College Senior (2000 words; AP: see unit standards): Develop a research argument that reads Chapter I as evidence for a larger claim about marriage as a social goal in Pride and Prejudice. Connect close reading of the chapter to the whole novel, engage at least four scholarly sources, and state precisely where your reading departs from theirs (Chicago style).

Graduate / PhD (2500 words; AP: see unit standards): Develop an original argument that reads Chapter I as a hinge in the novel's larger treatment of marriage as a social goal. Position your reading within a named critical conversation (for example formalist, historicist, psychoanalytic, feminist or postcolonial approaches), account for the textual history where relevant, and articulate the stakes of your intervention for scholarship on Pride and Prejudice.

SAT-style questions

1. Sir William and Lady Lucas are determined to go, merely on that account, for in general you know they visit no newcomers.

   As used in the text, what does the word "newcomers" most nearly mean?

   A. a tendency to change one's mind suddenly
   B. a deep awareness of and sympathy for another's suffering
   C. annoying; wearying
   D. people who have recently arrived

2. "But consider your daughters. Only think what an establishment it would be for one of them. Sir William and Lady Lucas are determined to go, merely on that account, for in general you know they visit no newcomers. Indeed you must go, for it will be impossible for us to visit him, if you do not."

   Which choice best states a central concern of "Chapter I"?

   A. Trusted relatives
   B. Marriage as a social goal
   C. Music, wit and manners
   D. The second proposal

SAT key: 1. D (people who have recently arrived); 2. B (Marriage as a social goal)

Lesson 3: Chapter II

Focus: family dynamics and anticipation

Objective: Students will analyze how characterization develops in "Chapter II" by writing a claim-evidence-reasoning paragraph that cites at least 2 quotations from the section, and will score at least 80% on the section quiz.

Standards: AP: see the unit standards

Teacher only · spoilers

Mr. Bennet reveals he has already visited Mr. Bingley, delighting his wife and daughters after teasing them. The sisters guess when Bingley will come to the next ball.

Background: Social custom required the father to call on a newcomer before the family could be introduced.

Significance: Mr. Bennet's playful withholding shows both wit and a certain irresponsibility as a parent.

Lesson plan and lecture script (90 minutes)

> 0–8 min · Bell-ringer · You do (8 min)
> Students write to the bell-ringer, then pair-share.
> Is Mr. Bennet's teasing harmless fun or a sign of a deeper problem? Write for five minutes. Starters: I think... because... / This connects to family and reputation because....
> Prompt: Is Mr. Bennet's teasing harmless fun or a sign of a deeper problem?
> Sentence starters: I think… because… · This connects to family and reputation because…
> Strong response: A strong response takes a position and anticipates this: the parents' mismatch shapes the daughters' prospects.

> 8–18 min · Vocabulary with etymology notes · I do (10 min)
> Five key words in context, with verified word histories.
> Today's words: fretfully — in an irritable, complaining way; conjecturing — guessing; extracts — passages copied out of a book; deigned — do something that one considers to be below one's dignity; teasing — annoying; trying. "conjecturing": Origin of "conjecture": Latin coniectūra ("a guess"). "teasing": Origin: an English formation from tease + -ing.
> Words: fretfully: in an irritable, complaining way · conjecturing: guessing · extracts: passages copied out of a book · deigned: do something that one considers to be below one's dignity · teasing: annoying; trying

18–28 min · Background and context · I do (10 min)
Mini-lecture (read or adapt the script).
Social custom required the father to call on a newcomer before the family could be introduced. Mr. Bennet's playful withholding shows both wit and a certain irresponsibility as a parent. Characterization: Mr. Bennet enjoys teasing his wife by hiding that he has already called on Bingley. Tone / mood: Comic; the scene is almost a short play, with little narration. Watch for first impressions and judgment: Characters judge quickly and must revise; the novel's working title was First Impressions. In this chapter: "She is a selfish, hypocritical woman, and I have no opinion of her" (Chapter II, paragraph 5).

28–40 min · I do: modeled close reading · I do (12 min)
Model the close reading of the anchor quotation using the written think-aloud below.
First, meaning. I read "Mr. Bennet was among the earliest of those who waited on Mr. Bingley" slowly and put it in my own words: Mr. Bennet was one of the first to call on Bingley, though he told his wife he would not go. Next, craft. I notice the narrator reports the visit calmly, then reveals the joke: he kept it secret till the evening after. The strongest word is "earliest": it shows he wanted the connection as much as his wife but enjoyed teasing her. Then, effect. Why does Mr. Bennet hide that he has visited Bingley? My answer: Mr. Bennet hides that he has visited Bingley as a prank on his wife; the secret shows his cleverness and his habit of using his wit at her expense.

> Mr. Bennet was among the earliest of those who waited on Mr. Bingley (Chapter II, paragraph 1)

Think-aloud: First, meaning. I read "Mr. Bennet was among the earliest of those who waited on Mr. Bingley" slowly and put it in my own words: Mr. Bennet was one of the first to call on Bingley, though he told his wife he would not go. Next, craft. I notice the narrator reports the visit calmly, then reveals the joke: he kept it secret till the evening after. The strongest word is "earliest": it shows he wanted the connection as much as his wife but enjoyed teasing her. Then, effect. Why does Mr. Bennet hide that he has visited Bingley? My answer: Mr. Bennet hides that he has visited Bingley as a prank on his wife; the secret shows his cleverness and his habit of using his wit at her expense.

40–55 min · We do: guided annotation · We do (15 min)
Guided analysis of a second quotation; expected answers given.
Ask: What words in this line stand out, and what do they suggest? Expected: She says she is "sick" of him moments before learning of the visit; comic irony, and it shows Mr. Bennet's pleasure in teasing. Ask: How does this line connect to family and reputation? Expected: The parents' mismatch shapes the daughters' prospects. (Mrs. Bennet swears off Bingley moments before her husband reveals he has already visited him.)

> I am sick of Mr. Bingley (Chapter II, paragraph 21)

Ask: What words in this line stand out, and what do they suggest?
Expected answer: She says she is "sick" of him moments before learning of the visit; comic irony, and it shows Mr. Bennet's pleasure in teasing.
Ask: How does this line connect to family and reputation?
Expected answer: The parents' mismatch shapes the daughters' prospects. (Mrs. Bennet swears off Bingley moments before her husband reveals he has already visited him.)

55–70 min · You do: independent annotation · You do (15 min)

Independent annotation and a claim-evidence-reasoning paragraph (exemplar given).

Annotate the chapter for characterization, tone / mood (three marks with a margin note each), then write one claim-evidence-reasoning paragraph: what does this chapter suggest about family dynamics and anticipation? Then start your writing prompt at your assigned level (HS Sophomore: Analyze how Chapter II develops the idea of family dynamics and anticipation. Make a precise claim, support it with at least three pieces of textual evidence, and explain how the author's use of characterization and irony shapes that idea. Address one possible counterclaim.) Exemplar: Mr. Bennet's teasing shows affection for his daughters but a habit of amusing himself at his family's expense. When the text says "Mr. Bennet was among the earliest of those who waited on Mr. Bingley" (Chapter II, paragraph 1), it shows this directly. He has secretly "waited on Mr. Bingley" yet lets his wife complain she is "sick of Mr. Bingley" before revealing it, choosing the joke over plain kindness.

Task: Annotate the chapter for characterization, tone / mood (three marks with a margin note each), then write one claim-evidence-reasoning paragraph: what does this chapter suggest about family dynamics and anticipation? Then start your writing prompt at your assigned level (HS Sophomore: Analyze how Chapter II develops the idea of family dynamics and anticipation. Make a precise claim, support it with at least three pieces of textual evidence, and explain how the author's use of characterization and irony shapes that idea. Address one possible counterclaim.)

Exemplar: Mr. Bennet's teasing shows affection for his daughters but a habit of amusing himself at his family's expense. When the text says "Mr. Bennet was among the earliest of those who waited on Mr. Bingley" (Chapter II, paragraph 1), it shows this directly. He has secretly "waited on Mr. Bingley" yet lets his wife complain she is "sick of Mr. Bingley" before revealing it, choosing the joke over plain kindness.

70–80 min · Discussion · We do (10 min)

Structured discussion from the 30 tiered questions, with facilitation notes.

Anchor question: Is Mr. Bennet's teasing harmless fun or a sign of a deeper problem? Ask: is Mr. Bennet a good father? Hold the question open; it returns in Chapter XLII.

Anchor question: Is Mr. Bennet's teasing harmless fun or a sign of a deeper problem?

Facilitation: Ask: is Mr. Bennet a good father? Hold the question open; it returns in Chapter XLII.

80–87 min · Exit ticket / chapter quiz · You do (7 min)

Chapter quiz in the app and an exit ticket (answer given).

Chapter quiz in the app, then: In one sentence, what does this chapter suggest about family dynamics and anticipation? Support it with one short quotation. Model answer: Mr. Bennet's teasing shows affection for his daughters but a habit of amusing himself at his family's expense. ("Mr. Bennet was among the earliest of those who waited on Mr. Bingley", Chapter II, paragraph 1). Accept any defensible claim backed by a quotation from the chapter; the answer key for the quiz is in the Quiz section.

Exit ticket: In one sentence, what does this chapter suggest about family dynamics and anticipation? Support it with one short quotation.

Answer: Model answer: Mr. Bennet's teasing shows affection for his daughters but a habit of amusing himself at his family's expense. ("Mr. Bennet was among the earliest of those who waited on Mr. Bingley", Chapter II, paragraph 1). Accept any defensible claim backed by a quotation from the chapter; the answer key for the quiz is in the Quiz section.

> 87–90 min · Closure · I do (3 min)
> Summarize the lesson and preview the next reading.
> Today we saw how characterization shapes family dynamics and anticipation. Key takeaway: the parents' mismatch shapes the daughters' prospects.

Total: 90 minutes.

Teacher analysis (spoilers)

Literary elements

- Characterization: Mr. Bennet enjoys teasing his wife by hiding that he has already called on Bingley.
- Tone / mood: Comic; the scene is almost a short play, with little narration.

Themes and how they develop

- family and reputation: the parents' mismatch shapes the daughters' prospects.

Symbols and motifs

- first impressions and judgment: Characters judge quickly and must revise; the novel's working title was First Impressions. In this chapter: “She is a selfish, hypocritical woman, and I have no opinion of her” (Chapter II, paragraph 5).
- dancing and social performance: Balls are where judgments are formed in public. In this chapter: “When is your next ball to be, Lizzy” (Chapter II, paragraph 11).

Key quotations (checked against the reading text)

- “Mr. Bennet was among the earliest of those who waited on Mr. Bingley” (Chapter II, paragraph 1) Opening reversal: he has done what he pretended to refuse.
- “Kitty has no discretion in her coughs” (Chapter II, paragraph 9) Mrs. Bennet vents her frustration about Bingley on Kitty's harmless coughing.
- “I am sick of Mr. Bingley” (Chapter II, paragraph 21) Mrs. Bennet swears off Bingley moments before her husband reveals he has already visited him.

Model claim-evidence-reasoning

Claim: Mr. Bennet's teasing shows affection for his daughters but a habit of amusing himself at his family's expense.
Evidence: “Mr. Bennet was among the earliest of those who waited on Mr. Bingley” (Chapter II, paragraph 1)
Reasoning: He has secretly "waited on Mr. Bingley" yet lets his wife complain she is "sick of Mr. Bingley" before revealing it, choosing the joke over plain kindness.

Vocabulary with etymology notes

Word	Definition (in this sentence)	In context	Word history

fretfully (adverb)	in an irritable, complaining way	"I do not cough for my own amusement," replied Kitty fretfully.
conjecturing (verb)	guessing	The rest of the evening was spent in conjecturing how soon he would return Mr.	"conjecturing": Origin of "conjecture": Latin coniectūra ("a guess"). (Liber et Libri origin note, https://en.wiktionary.org/wiki/conjecture#Etymology)
extracts (noun)	passages copied out of a book	What say you, Mary? for you are a young lady of deep reflection I know, and read great books, and make extracts."
deigned (verb)	do something that one considers to be below one's dignity	Bennet deigned not to make any reply; but unable to contain herself, began scolding one of her daughters.
teasing (adjective)	annoying; trying	Bennet, impossible, when I am not acquainted with him myself; how can you be so teasing?"	"teasing": Origin: an English formation from tease + -ing. (Liber et Libri origin note, https://en.wiktionary.org/wiki/teasing#Etymology)
raptures (noun)	great excitement and delight	Bennet; and, as he spoke, he left the room, fatigued with the raptures of his wife.	"raptures": Origin of "rapture": Middle French rapture; earlier Latin raptūra. (Liber et Libri origin note, https://en.wiktionary.org/wiki/rapture#Etymology)
fatigued (adjective)	tired out	Bennet; and, as he spoke, he left the room, fatigued with the raptures of his wife.
fortnight (noun)	a period of fourteen consecutive days	A fortnight's acquaintance is certainly very little.

Discussion questions

1. Is Mr. Bennet's teasing harmless fun or a sign of a deeper problem?
2. Where does characterization appear in this chapter, and what effect does it have? Point to one passage.
3. How does this chapter connect to the book's larger concern with pride and self-knowledge?

Classroom discussion questions (30, tiered)

Wait time after every question (3 s for DOK 1, 5 s for DOK 2, 8 to 10 s for DOK 3 and 4); think-pair-share on DOK 3 and 4; answer each response with a follow-up probe; close with student-generated questions. Focus sets by rigor level: Scaffolded support: 1, 2, 3, 4, 5, 6, 11, 12, 13, 14, 21, 22; HS Freshman: 1, 2, 3, 4, 5, 12, 13, 14, 15, 22, 23, 24; HS Sophomore: 1, 2, 3, 4, 13, 14, 15, 16, 17, 23, 24, 25; HS Junior: 1, 2, 3, 14, 15, 16, 17, 18, 24, 25, 26, 27; HS Senior: 1, 2, 3, 15, 16, 17, 18, 25, 26, 27, 28, 29; AP: 1, 2, 16, 17, 18, 19, 20, 26, 27, 28, 29, 30; College Freshman: 1, 2, 17, 18, 19, 20, 21, 22, 27, 28, 29, 30; College Sophomore: 1, 2, 11, 18, 19, 20, 21, 22, 23, 28, 29, 30; College Junior: 1, 11, 12, 19, 20, 21, 22, 23, 24, 25, 29, 30; College Senior: 1, 11, 12, 13, 20, 21, 22, 23, 24, 25, 26, 30; Graduate / PhD: 1, 11, 12, 13, 21, 22, 23, 24, 25, 26, 27, 28

Literal / recall

1. What has Mr. Bennet secretly done? [DOK 1 · coldCallWithSupport · wait 3 s · AP: unit standards] Look for: Visited Mr. Bingley
2. Why did a father need to call on a newcomer? [DOK 1 · turnAndTalk · wait 3 s · AP: unit standards] Look for: Social custom required it before introductions
3. How does Mrs. Bennet react to the news? [DOK 1 · coldCallWithSupport · wait 3 s · AP: unit standards] Look for: With delight
4. Which sister is teased for coughing? [DOK 1 · turnAndTalk · wait 3 s · AP: unit standards] Look for: Kitty
5. What trait does Mr. Bennet show here? [DOK 1 · coldCallWithSupport · wait 3 s · AP: unit standards] Look for: Dry wit
6. Retell the three most important events of "Chapter II" in order, in one sentence each. [DOK 1 · turnAndTalk · wait 3 s · AP: unit standards] Look for: Mr. Bennet reveals he has already visited Mr. Bingley, delighting his wife and daughters after teasing them. The sisters guess when Bingley will come to the next ball.
7. Which characters appear or are mentioned in "Chapter II"? Name two and one thing each says or does. [DOK 1 · coldCallWithSupport · wait 3 s · AP: unit standards] Look for: Names and actions taken from the chapter; check against the teacher summary.
8. Where and when does "Chapter II" take place? Point to the line that tells you. [DOK 1 · turnAndTalk · wait 3 s · AP: unit standards] Look for: A place/time detail quoted from the chapter.
9. Reread: ""I do not cough for my own amusement," replied Kitty fretfully." What does "fretfully" mean here, and what is literally happening in this line? [DOK 1 · turnAndTalk · wait 3 s · AP: unit standards] Look for: fretfully: in an irritable, complaining way.
10. Reread: "The rest of the evening was spent in conjecturing how soon he would return Mr." What does "conjecturing" mean here, and what is literally happening in this line? [DOK 1 · turnAndTalk · wait 3 s · AP: unit standards] Look for: conjecturing: guessing.

Inferential / analytical

1. What does "Chapter II" suggest about family dynamics and anticipation? State the inference and the line that supports it. [DOK 2 · thinkPairShare · wait 5 s · AP-LIT.LAN] Look for: Mr. Bennet's playful withholding shows both wit and a certain irresponsibility as a parent.
2. Find one example of characterization in this chapter. What does it reveal that a plain statement would not? [DOK 2 · followUp · wait 5 s · AP-LIT.CHR] Look for: Look for what characters say, do and think, and how others react to them.
3. How does the irony in this chapter shape what we understand about family dynamics and anticipation? [DOK 3 · thinkPairShare · wait 8 s · AP-LIT.NAR] Look for: Look for gaps between what characters expect or say and what is true.

   Answer guidance: A defensible line of argument: Mr. Bennet's teasing shows affection for his daughters but a habit of amusing himself at his family's expense. Useful evidence: "Mr. Bennet was among the earliest of those who waited on Mr. Bingley" (Chapter II, paragraph 1): Opening reversal: he has done what he pretended to refuse. Theme link: the parents' mismatch shapes the daughters' prospects. Credit any position that is supported by quotation and reasoning; push one-sided answers to address the strongest counterpoint.

4. In the passage that begins ““I honour your circumspection.”, why might Austen have chosen these particular words? Pick two and explain their connotations. [DOK 2 · followUp · wait 5 s · AP-LIT.FIG] Look for: Diction analysis of two words in the anchor passage.
5. What causes the main turn in “Chapter II”, and what effect is it likely to have on what follows? [DOK 2 · followUp · wait 5 s · AP-LIT.STR] Look for: Mr. Bennet reveals he has already visited Mr. Bingley, delighting his wife and daughters after teasing them. The sisters guess when Bingley will come to the next ball.
6. How does “Chapter II” build on “Chapter I”? Name one link of cause and effect. [DOK 3 · thinkPairShare · wait 8 s · AP-LIT.STR] Look for: A causal or structural link between this and the previous chapter.
   Answer guidance: A defensible line of argument: Mr. Bennet's teasing shows affection for his daughters but a habit of amusing himself at his family's expense. Useful evidence: “Kitty has no discretion in her coughs” (Chapter II, paragraph 9): Mrs. Bennet vents her frustration about Bingley on Kitty's harmless coughing. Theme link: the parents' mismatch shapes the daughters' prospects. Credit any position that is supported by quotation and reasoning; push one-sided answers to address the strongest counterpoint.
7. What can we infer about a character's motives from what they say and do here, as opposed to what they claim? [DOK 3 · followUp · wait 8 s · AP-LIT.CHR] Look for: An inference about motive supported by a quoted line.
   Answer guidance: A defensible line of argument: Mr. Bennet's teasing shows affection for his daughters but a habit of amusing himself at his family's expense. Useful evidence: “I am sick of Mr. Bingley” (Chapter II, paragraph 21): Mrs. Bennet swears off Bingley moments before her husband reveals he has already visited him. On characterization: Mr. Bennet enjoys teasing his wife by hiding that he has already called on Bingley. Credit any position that is supported by quotation and reasoning; push one-sided answers to address the strongest counterpoint.
8. The bell-ringer asked: “Is Mr. Bennet's teasing harmless fun or a sign of a deeper problem?” Now that we have read closely, how would you revise your first answer, and which line changed your mind? [DOK 2 · thinkPairShare · wait 5 s · AP-LIT.LAN] Look for: A revised answer anchored in the text.
9. Where does tone / mood appear, and how does it connect this chapter to the larger concern with pride and self-knowledge? [DOK 3 · followUp · wait 8 s · AP-LIT.FIG] Look for: Look for word choices that reveal the narrator's attitude or the scene's feeling.
   Answer guidance: A defensible line of argument: Mr. Bennet's teasing shows affection for his daughters but a habit of amusing himself at his family's expense. Useful evidence: “Mr. Bennet was among the earliest of those who waited on Mr. Bingley” (Chapter II, paragraph 1): Opening reversal: he has done what he pretended to refuse. On tone / mood: Comic; the scene is almost a short play, with little narration. Credit any position that is supported by quotation and reasoning; push one-sided answers to address the strongest counterpoint.
10. Background: Social custom required the father to call on a newcomer before the family could be introduced. How does knowing this change the way you read one moment in the chapter? [DOK 3 · thinkPairShare · wait 8 s · AP-LIT.SET] Look for: A specific moment reread in light of the context.
    Answer guidance: A defensible line of argument: Mr. Bennet's teasing shows affection for his daughters but a habit of amusing himself at his family's expense. Useful evidence: “Kitty has no discretion in her coughs” (Chapter II, paragraph 9): Mrs. Bennet vents her frustration about Bingley on Kitty's harmless coughing. Theme link: the parents' mismatch shapes the daughters' prospects. Credit any position that is supported by quotation and reasoning; push one-sided answers to address the strongest counterpoint.

Evaluative / synthesis / creative

1. A critic might argue: “Mr. Bennet's playful withholding shows both wit and a certain irresponsibility as a parent.” How far do you agree? Take a stand and defend it with two lines from the chapter. [DOK 3 · fourCorners · wait 8 s · AP-LIT.LAN] Look for: A defended position with evidence and one counterpoint.
   Answer guidance: A defensible line of argument: Mr. Bennet's teasing shows affection for his daughters but a habit of amusing himself at his family's expense. Useful evidence: “I am sick of Mr. Bingley” (Chapter II, paragraph 21): Mrs. Bennet swears off Bingley moments before her husband reveals he has already visited him. Theme link: the parents' mismatch shapes the daughters' prospects. Credit any position that is supported by quotation and reasoning; push one-sided answers to address the strongest counterpoint.
2. Which character in this chapter acts most wisely, and which least? Judge them by a standard you name. [DOK 3 · thinkPairShare · wait 8 s · AP-LIT.CHR, AP-LIT.LAN] Look for: An evaluation using an explicit criterion and evidence.
   Answer guidance: A defensible line of argument: Mr. Bennet's teasing shows affection for his daughters but a habit of amusing himself at his family's expense. Useful evidence: “Mr. Bennet was among the earliest of those who waited on Mr. Bingley” (Chapter II, paragraph 1): Opening reversal: he has done what he pretended to refuse. On characterization: Mr. Bennet enjoys teasing his wife by hiding that he has already called on Bingley. Credit any position that is supported by quotation and reasoning; push one-sided answers to address the strongest counterpoint.
3. Rewrite one moment of “Chapter II” from the point of view of a different character. What does the new angle reveal or hide about family dynamics and anticipation? [DOK 4 · thinkPairShare · wait 8 s · AP-LIT.LAN, AP-LIT.NAR] Look for: A creative product with a rationale tied to the text.
   Answer guidance: A defensible line of argument: Mr. Bennet's teasing shows affection for his daughters but a habit of amusing himself at his family's expense. Useful evidence: “Kitty has no discretion in her coughs” (Chapter II, paragraph 9): Mrs. Bennet vents her frustration about Bingley on Kitty's harmless coughing. Theme link: the parents' mismatch shapes the daughters' prospects. Credit any position that is supported by quotation and reasoning; push one-sided answers to address the strongest counterpoint.
4. Write three questions of your own about “Chapter II”: one recall, one “why/how”, and one “should/what if”. Trade with a partner and answer theirs. [DOK 3 · studentGenerated · wait 8 s · AP-LIT.LAN] Look for: Student-generated questions at three levels.
   Answer guidance: A defensible line of argument: Mr. Bennet's teasing shows affection for his daughters but a habit of amusing himself at his family's expense. Useful evidence: “I am sick of Mr. Bingley” (Chapter II, paragraph 21): Mrs. Bennet swears off Bingley moments before her husband reveals he has already visited him. Theme link: the parents' mismatch shapes the daughters' prospects. Credit any position that is supported by quotation and reasoning; push one-sided answers to address the strongest counterpoint.
5. Connect this chapter to marriage and money: is the link strong or weak so far? What would Austen need to show next to strengthen it? [DOK 4 · socraticCircle · wait 8 s · AP-LIT.LAN] Look for: A judgment of thematic development across the work.
   Answer guidance: A defensible line of argument: Mr. Bennet's teasing shows affection for his daughters but a habit of amusing himself at his family's expense. Useful evidence: “Mr. Bennet was among the earliest of those who waited on Mr. Bingley” (Chapter II, paragraph 1): Opening reversal: he has done what he pretended to refuse. Theme link: the parents' mismatch shapes the daughters' prospects. Credit any position that is supported by quotation and reasoning; push one-sided answers to address the strongest counterpoint.

6. Is the characterization in this chapter effective, or does it feel heavy-handed? Evaluate it as a reader would in a review. [DOK 3 · fourCorners · wait 8 s · AP-LIT.CHR, AP-LIT.LAN] Look for: An evaluative judgment with criteria and evidence.

   Answer guidance: A defensible line of argument: Mr. Bennet's teasing shows affection for his daughters but a habit of amusing himself at his family's expense. Useful evidence: “Kitty has no discretion in her coughs” (Chapter II, paragraph 9): Mrs. Bennet vents her frustration about Bingley on Kitty's harmless coughing. On characterization: Mr. Bennet enjoys teasing his wife by hiding that he has already called on Bingley. Credit any position that is supported by quotation and reasoning; push one-sided answers to address the strongest counterpoint.

7. Compare how “Chapter II” treats family dynamics and anticipation with how another text, film or event you know treats a similar idea. What does Pride and Prejudice see that the other misses? [DOK 4 · socraticCircle · wait 8 s · AP-LIT.LAN] Look for: A cross-text synthesis.

   Answer guidance: A defensible line of argument: Mr. Bennet's teasing shows affection for his daughters but a habit of amusing himself at his family's expense. Useful evidence: “I am sick of Mr. Bingley” (Chapter II, paragraph 21): Mrs. Bennet swears off Bingley moments before her husband reveals he has already visited him. Theme link: the parents' mismatch shapes the daughters' prospects. Credit any position that is supported by quotation and reasoning; push one-sided answers to address the strongest counterpoint.

8. Predict what “Chapter III” will bring, using two clues from this chapter. After reading, evaluate your prediction. [DOK 3 · thinkPairShare · wait 8 s · AP-LIT.LAN, AP-LIT.STR] Look for: A prediction or judgment justified with textual clues.

   Answer guidance: A defensible line of argument: Mr. Bennet's teasing shows affection for his daughters but a habit of amusing himself at his family's expense. Useful evidence: “Mr. Bennet was among the earliest of those who waited on Mr. Bingley” (Chapter II, paragraph 1): Opening reversal: he has done what he pretended to refuse. Theme link: the parents' mismatch shapes the daughters' prospects. Credit any position that is supported by quotation and reasoning; push one-sided answers to address the strongest counterpoint.

9. Design a one-paragraph modern adaptation of this chapter (setting, characters, conflict). What must stay the same for it to still be about family dynamics and anticipation? [DOK 4 · thinkPairShare · wait 8 s · AP-LIT.LAN] Look for: A creative transfer that keeps the core idea.

   Answer guidance: A defensible line of argument: Mr. Bennet's teasing shows affection for his daughters but a habit of amusing himself at his family's expense. Useful evidence: “Kitty has no discretion in her coughs” (Chapter II, paragraph 9): Mrs. Bennet vents her frustration about Bingley on Kitty's harmless coughing. Theme link: the parents' mismatch shapes the daughters' prospects. Credit any position that is supported by quotation and reasoning; push one-sided answers to address the strongest counterpoint.

10. What question would you most like to ask Jane Austen about this chapter, and what answer do you think the text itself gives? [DOK 4 · studentGenerated · wait 8 s · AP-LIT.LAN] Look for: A student-generated question answered from evidence.

    Answer guidance: A defensible line of argument: Mr. Bennet's teasing shows affection for his daughters but a habit of amusing himself at his family's expense. Useful evidence: “I am sick of Mr. Bingley” (Chapter II, paragraph 21): Mrs. Bennet swears off Bingley moments before her husband reveals he has already visited him. Theme link: the parents' mismatch shapes the daughters' prospects. Credit any position that is supported by quotation and reasoning; push one-sided answers to address the strongest counterpoint.

Annotation focus

- Characterization: look for what characters say, do and think, and how others react to them (anchor passage in the We do segment)
- Also notice Irony: gaps between what characters expect or say and what is true
- Also notice Tone / mood: word choices that reveal the narrator's attitude or the scene's feeling

Chapter quiz: item bank (all eleven rigor versions)

1. [mc · recall · DOK 1] Which sister is teased for coughing?

   A. Mary
   B. Kitty
   C. Elizabeth
   D. Jane

   Key: B (Kitty)

2. [fill · recall · DOK 1] Complete the quotation from Chapter II, paragraph 1: "Mr. Bennet was among the _____ of those who waited on Mr. Bingley"

   Key: earliest

3. [fill · recall · DOK 1] Complete the quotation from Chapter II, paragraph 9: "Kitty has no _____ in her coughs"

   Key: discretion

4. [mc · recall · DOK 1] In the line "What say you, Mary? for you are a young lady of deep reflection I know, and read great books, and make extracts.", what does "extracts" most nearly mean?

   A. criticizing strongly
   B. passages copied out of a book
   C. leads into a wrong idea
   D. a man who has recently been married

   Key: B (passages copied out of a book)

5. [mc · recall · DOK 1] What has Mr. Bennet secretly done?

   A. Sold Longbourn
   B. Invited Darcy
   C. Written to Mr. Collins
   D. Visited Mr. Bingley

   Key: D (Visited Mr. Bingley)

6. [fill · recall · DOK 1] Fill in the blank with the vocabulary word that fits: "A _____'s acquaintance is certainly very little." Word bank: conjecturing, extracts, fortnight, fretfully

   Key: fortnight

7. [fill · recall · DOK 1] Fill in the blank with the vocabulary word that fits: "Bennet; and, as he spoke, he left the room, _____ with the raptures of his wife." Word bank: fatigued, extracts, fretfully, conjecturing

   Key: fatigued

8. [fill · recall · DOK 1] Fill in the blank with the vocabulary word that fits: "Bennet, impossible, when I am not acquainted with him myself; how can you be so _____?" Word bank: conjecturing, fretfully, teasing, extracts

   Key: teasing

9. [mc · recall · DOK 1] In the line “Bennet deigned not to make any reply; but unable to contain herself, began scolding one of her daughters.”, what does “deigned” most nearly mean?

   A. worthy of often limited commendation

   B. react verbally

   C. open and bold, without any attempt to hide

   D. do something that one considers to be below one's dignity

   Key: D (do something that one considers to be below one's dignity)

10. [mc · recall · DOK 1] How does Mrs. Bennet react to the news?

    A. With fear

    B. With boredom

    C. With anger

    D. With delight

    Key: D (With delight)

11. [short · inference · DOK 2] What can you infer from this line? “Mr. Bennet was among the earliest of those who waited on Mr. Bingley” (Chapter II, paragraph 1) Answer in two or three sentences with one detail.

    Sample answer: Opening reversal: he has done what he pretended to refuse. The evidence is “Mr. Bennet was among the earliest of those who waited on Mr. Bingley” (Chapter II, paragraph 1).

12. [mc · inference · DOK 2] Which choice best states a central concern of “Chapter II”?

    A. An unhappy marriage observed

    B. Family dynamics and anticipation

    C. Sisters and judgment

    D. Self-recognition

    Key: B (Family dynamics and anticipation)

13. [short · inference · DOK 2] What can you infer from this line? “Kitty has no discretion in her coughs” (Chapter II, paragraph 9) Answer in two or three sentences with one detail.

    Sample answer: Mrs. Bennet vents her frustration about Bingley on Kitty's harmless coughing. The evidence is “Kitty has no discretion in her coughs” (Chapter II, paragraph 9). This develops family and reputation: the parents' mismatch shapes the daughters' prospects.

14. [mc · analysis · DOK 3] Which literary element does this describe in “Chapter II”? Comic; the scene is almost a short play, with little narration.

    A. Irony

    B. Tone / mood

    C. Personification

    D. Theme

    Key: B (Tone / mood)

15. [short · analysis · DOK 3] Analyze the word choice in “I am sick of Mr. Bingley” (Chapter II, paragraph 21). Pick two words and explain what they suggest.

    Sample answer: Mrs. Bennet swears off Bingley moments before her husband reveals he has already visited him. The evidence is “I am sick of Mr. Bingley” (Chapter II, paragraph 21). This develops family and reputation: the parents' mismatch shapes the daughters' prospects.

16. [short · synthesis · DOK 4] Evaluate this claim about the chapter: “Mr. Bennet's teasing shows affection for his daughters but a habit of amusing himself at his family's expense.” Is it fully persuasive? Argue with evidence, including a passage that complicates it.
    Sample answer: The claim is persuasive in part. “Mr. Bennet was among the earliest of those who waited on Mr. Bingley” (Chapter II, paragraph 1) supports it: He has secretly "waited on Mr. Bingley" yet lets his wife complain she is "sick of Mr. Bingley" before revealing it, choosing the joke over plain kindness. But “Kitty has no discretion in her coughs” (Chapter II, paragraph 9) complicates it: Mrs. Bennet vents her frustration about Bingley on Kitty's harmless coughing, and its “no” marks a limit or reversal the claim passes over. Weighing the two passages, the claim survives, but only once it admits the tension the second passage creates.
17. [mc · recall · DOK 1] In the line “The rest of the evening was spent in conjecturing how soon he would return Mr.”, what does “conjecturing” most nearly mean?
    A. be a witness to
    B. able to exist and perform in harmonious or agreeable combination
    C. supervised; directed
    D. guessing

    Key: D (guessing)
18. [mc · recall · DOK 1] What trait does Mr. Bennet show here?
    A. Shyness
    B. Greed
    C. Cruelty
    D. Dry wit

    Key: D (Dry wit)
19. [fill · recall · DOK 1] Fill in the blank with the vocabulary word that fits: “Bennet; and, as he spoke, he left the room, fatigued with the _____ of his wife.” Word bank: fretfully, conjecturing, raptures, extracts
    Key: raptures
20. [mc · recall · DOK 1] Why did a father need to call on a newcomer?
    A. Social custom required it before introductions
    B. To collect rent
    C. To ask for money
    D. To deliver mail

    Key: A (Social custom required it before introductions)
21. [mc · recall · DOK 1] In the line “‘I do not cough for my own amusement,’ replied Kitty fretfully.”, what does “fretfully” most nearly mean?
    A. be or come between
    B. get or find back; recover the use of
    C. make one's home in a particular place or community
    D. in an irritable, complaining way

    Key: D (in an irritable, complaining way)
22. [short · analysis · DOK 3] Claim: Mr. Bennet's teasing shows affection for his daughters but a habit of amusing himself at his family's expense. Explain how this evidence supports the claim: “Mr. Bennet was among the earliest of those who waited on Mr. Bingley" (Chapter II, paragraph 1).

Sample answer: He has secretly "waited on Mr. Bingley" yet lets his wife complain she is "sick of Mr. Bingley" before revealing it, choosing the joke over plain kindness. The evidence is "Mr. Bennet was among the earliest of those who waited on Mr. Bingley" (Chapter II, paragraph 1) — Opening reversal: he has done what he pretended to refuse. This develops family and reputation: the parents' mismatch shapes the daughters' prospects.

23. [short · synthesis · DOK 4] Synthesis: trace how family and reputation develops from Chapter I to Chapter II. Use one quotation from each.

    Sample answer: Earlier, in Chapter I, paragraph 1, the text reads "It is a truth universally acknowledged, that a single man in possession of a good fortune, must be in want of a wife" — Verbal irony: it is the families who want the rich man, not the man who wants a wife. In Chapter II, "Mr. Bennet was among the earliest of those who waited on Mr. Bingley" (Chapter II, paragraph 1) — Opening reversal: he has done what he pretended to refuse. The parents' mismatch shapes the daughters' prospects.

24. [mc · recall · DOK 1] Which word completes this sentence from Chapter II, paragraph 22? "It is very unlucky; but as I have actually paid the visit, we cannot escape the _____ now."

    A. knowledge

    B. serving

    C. acquaintance

    D. something

    Key: C (acquaintance)

25. [fill · recall · DOK 1] Complete the quotation from Chapter II, paragraph 1: "He had always intended to visit him, though to the last always assuring his wife that he should not go; and till the evening after the visit was paid, she had no _____ of it." Word bank: before, therefore, youngest, knowledge

    Key: knowledge

26. [short · inference · DOK 2] What does this passage from Chapter II, paragraph 1 reveal about the character or situation? "It was then disclosed in the following manner." Answer in two or three sentences with one detail.

    Sample answer: The passage (Chapter II, paragraph 1) shows the situation turning on first impressions and prejudice: the parents' mismatch shapes the daughters' prospects. The words "following" and "disclosed" are the proof, because they show how the moment looks to the people in it. They suggest more than the narrator states outright.

27. [short · analysis · DOK 3] Analyze how the word choice in this passage from Chapter II, paragraph 5 shapes its tone: "She is a selfish, hypocritical woman, and I have no opinion of her." Pick two words and explain their effect.

    Sample answer: The words "hypocritical" and "opinion" (Chapter II, paragraph 5) make the tone heavy and deliberate rather than neutral. That weight points the reader to class and social mobility: the parents' mismatch shapes the daughters' prospects. The author chooses them so the moment feels significant instead of passing.

28. [short · analysis · DOK 3] Analyze how the word choice in this passage from Chapter II, paragraph 16 shapes its tone: "One cannot know what a man really is by the end of a fortnight." Pick two words and explain their effect.

    Sample answer: The words "fortnight" and "really" (Chapter II, paragraph 16) make the tone heavy and deliberate rather than neutral. That weight points the reader to pride and self-knowledge: the parents' mismatch shapes the daughters' prospects. The author chooses them so the moment feels significant instead of passing.

29. [mc · recall · DOK 1 · AP: AP-LIT.FIG] Which word completes this sentence from Chapter II, paragraph 5? “I do not _____ Mrs. Long will do any such thing.”

    A. believe

    B. addressed

    C. serving

    D. kindness

    Key: A (believe)

30. [short · synthesis · DOK 4 · AP: AP-LIT.LAN] Connect this passage from Chapter II, paragraph 22 to the story's treatment of women's limited choices: “If I had known as much this morning, I certainly would not have called on him.” Use one other moment from the story as well.

    Sample answer: This passage (Chapter II, paragraph 22) develops women's limited choices: the parents' mismatch shapes the daughters' prospects. Its words “certainly” and “morning” carry that idea into this moment. The same concern returns in “The astonishment of the ladies was just what he wished; that of Mrs. Bennet perhaps surpassing the rest; though when…” (Chapter II, paragraph 23), so the two passages read as a pattern, not a single moment. Together they show the story treating women's limited choices as central.

31. [fill · recall · DOK 1 · AP: AP-LIT.FIG] Complete the quotation from Chapter II, paragraph 26: “Lydia, my love, though you are the _____, I dare say Mr. Bingley will dance with you at the next ball.” Word bank: youngest, kindness, acquaintance, therefore

    Key: youngest

32. [mc · analysis · DOK 3 · AP: AP-LIT.CHR] Which literary element does this describe in “Chapter II”? Mr. Bennet enjoys teasing his wife by hiding that he has already called on Bingley.

    A. Simile

    B. Characterization

    C. Setting

    D. Alliteration

    Key: B (Characterization)

33. [short · synthesis · DOK 4 · AP: AP-LIT.FIG] Close reading: how do the diction and syntax of “Kitty has no discretion in her coughs” (Chapter II, paragraph 9) shape its meaning? Consider a second, competing reading.

    Sample answer: Mrs. Bennet vents her frustration about Bingley on Kitty's harmless coughing. The evidence is “Kitty has no discretion in her coughs” (Chapter II, paragraph 9). This develops family and reputation: the parents' mismatch shapes the daughters' prospects. The words “discretion” and “coughs” carry that meaning: they are the charged choices in the line, and changing either would soften the effect. He has secretly "waited on Mr. Bingley" yet lets his wife complain she is "sick of Mr. Bingley" before revealing it, choosing the joke over plain kindness.

34. [short · synthesis · DOK 4 · AP: AP-LIT.LAN] Connect this passage from Chapter II, paragraph 24 to the story's treatment of marriage and money: “Well, how pleased I am! and it is such a good joke, too, that you should have gone this morning, and never said a word about it till now.” Use one other moment from the story as well.

    Sample answer: This passage (Chapter II, paragraph 24) develops marriage and money: the parents' mismatch shapes the daughters' prospects. Its words “morning” and “pleased” carry that idea into this moment. The same concern returns in “At our time of life, it is not so pleasant, I can tell you, to be making new acquaintance every day; but for your…” (Chapter II, paragraph 26), so the two passages read as a pattern, not a single moment. Together they show the story treating marriage and money as central.

35. [mc · inference · DOK 2 · AP: AP-LIT.LAN] What does this passage most clearly show? “I am sick of Mr. Bingley” (Chapter II, paragraph 21)

    A. Lady Catherine on the departure: she treats everything as about her.

    B. Mrs. Bennet swears off Bingley moments before her husband reveals he has already visited him.

    C. Darcy's reply suggests kinship between them.

    D. Darcy's account: love as a gradual process.

    Key: B (Mrs. Bennet swears off Bingley moments before her husband reveals he has already visited him.)

36. [mc · inference · DOK 2 · Dual Credit (Indiana College Core): ICC-WC-1.5] What does this passage most clearly show? “Kitty has no discretion in her coughs” (Chapter II, paragraph 9)

    A. Elizabeth's mother is "satisfied" with a visit the reader can see has gone badly: the irony is in the gap.

    B. Darcy's addition: values mind.

    C. Mrs. Bennet vents her frustration about Bingley on Kitty's harmless coughing.

    D. The chapter opens with the letter she asked for.

    Key: C (Mrs. Bennet vents her frustration about Bingley on Kitty's harmless coughing.)

37. [mc · inference · DOK 2 · Program outcome: LeL-C3-LIT-1] What does this passage most clearly show? “Mr. Bennet was among the earliest of those who waited on Mr. Bingley” (Chapter II, paragraph 1)

    A. Darcy's reply; it is the more accurate judgment.

    B. Her vanity in the title.

    C. Opening reversal: he has done what he pretended to refuse.

    D. The Wickhams wear out their welcome.

    Key: C (Opening reversal: he has done what he pretended to refuse.)

Rigor version	Items (in order)	Mix
Scaffolded support	1, 2, 3, 4, 5, 6, 7, 8, 9, 10, 11, 12, 13, 14, 15, 16	recall 10, inference 3, analysis 2, synthesis 1
HS Freshman	6, 17, 18, 19, 8, 1, 4, 20, 9, 21, 12, 13, 22, 15, 14, 23	recall 10, inference 2, analysis 3, synthesis 1
HS Sophomore	24, 21, 20, 6, 10, 25, 9, 7, 1, 26, 12, 15, 27, 28, 16, 23	recall 9, inference 2, analysis 3, synthesis 2
HS Junior	17, 3, 7, 5, 29, 10, 9, 26, 11, 12, 14, 27, 15, 28, 23, 30	recall 7, inference 3, analysis 4, synthesis 2
HS Senior	2, 10, 31, 7, 21, 4, 17, 26, 12, 32, 22, 14, 27, 16, 33, 34	recall 7, inference 2, analysis 4, synthesis 3
AP	8, 3, 24, 35, 12, 26, 27, 32, 28, 22, 14, 16, 33, 30, 34, 23	recall 3, inference 3, analysis 5, synthesis 5
College Freshman	8, 7, 17, 11, 26, 36, 12, 27, 32, 28, 14, 15, 16, 34, 30, 23	recall 3, inference 4, analysis 5, synthesis 4
College Sophomore	31, 8, 1, 35, 12, 26, 13, 32, 14, 28, 27, 22, 34, 30, 16, 23	recall 3, inference 4, analysis 5, synthesis 4
College Junior	8, 25, 10, 36, 37, 35, 26, 12, 14, 28, 32, 27, 30, 34, 23, 16	recall 3, inference 5, analysis 4, synthesis 4
College Senior	8, 31, 1, 26, 37, 12, 35, 27, 32, 14, 28, 16, 33, 34, 30, 23	recall 3, inference 4, analysis 4, synthesis 5

Graduate / PhD	8, 24, 19, 26, 36, 12, 11, 14, 32, 28, 15, 27, 23, 16, 30, 34	recall 3, inference 4, analysis 5, synthesis 4

Writing prompts (eleven rigor levels)

Scaffolded support (250 words; AP: see unit standards): Supported track (work from the passage your teacher selects). In “Chapter II,” how does Austen show family dynamics and anticipation? Write a paragraph that states your claim, quotes two details from the passage, and explains how each detail supports your idea. Use the characterization you noticed as one piece of evidence.

HS Freshman (350 words; AP: see unit standards): In Chapter II, how does Austen develop the idea of family dynamics and anticipation? State a clear claim, support it with two or three quotations, and explain how the characterization in the chapter helps build that idea.

HS Sophomore (450 words; AP: see unit standards): Analyze how Chapter II develops the idea of family dynamics and anticipation. Make a precise claim, support it with at least three pieces of textual evidence, and explain how the author's use of characterization and irony shapes that idea. Address one possible counterclaim.

HS Junior (550 words; AP: see unit standards): Analyze how the structure of Chapter II (where it begins, turns and ends) and its characterization shape the reader's understanding of family dynamics and anticipation. Identify one place where the text leaves matters uncertain and explain how that uncertainty adds to its meaning.

HS Senior (600 words; AP: see unit standards): Two readers disagree about what Chapter II suggests about family dynamics and anticipation. Lay out two plausible interpretations, weigh the evidence for each (including the chapter's characterization and irony), and argue for the stronger one in a sustained, well-organized essay.

AP (650 words; AP: AP-LIT.CHR, AP-LIT.LAN): Write a literary argument in which you analyze how Jane Austen uses characterization in Chapter II to complicate the reader's understanding of family dynamics and anticipation. Develop a defensible thesis, select evidence purposefully, and explain how specific choices of diction and syntax create meaning.

College Freshman (1000 words; AP: see unit standards): Situate Chapter II within its historical and literary context and argue how the chapter's treatment of family dynamics and anticipation responds to that context. Engage with at least one secondary perspective (a critic, historian or the author's own statements), integrate quotations smoothly, and cite in MLA style.

College Sophomore (1250 words; AP: see unit standards): Read Chapter II alongside the conventions of its genre and period. Argue how the chapter's handling of family dynamics and anticipation follows or bends those conventions, using the characterization as evidence, and test your reading against one published critic. Document two secondary sources in MLA.

College Junior (1500 words; AP: see unit standards): Apply a named critical approach (for example formalist, historicist, feminist, psychoanalytic or ecocritical) to Chapter II and its treatment of family dynamics and anticipation. State your method, show what it reveals in the chapter's characterization and irony, and identify where the text resists it.

College Senior (2000 words; AP: see unit standards): Develop a research argument that reads Chapter II as evidence for a larger claim about family dynamics and anticipation in Pride and Prejudice. Connect close reading of the chapter to the whole novel, engage at least four scholarly sources, and state precisely where your reading departs from theirs (Chicago style).

Graduate / PhD (2500 words; AP: see unit standards): Develop an original argument that reads Chapter II as a hinge in the novel's larger treatment of family dynamics and anticipation. Position your reading within a named critical conversation (for example formalist, historicist, psychoanalytic, feminist or postcolonial approaches), account for the textual history where relevant, and articulate the stakes of your intervention for scholarship on Pride and Prejudice.

SAT-style questions

1. What say you, Mary? for you are a young lady of deep reflection I know, and read great books, and make extracts."

   As used in the text, what does the word "extracts" most nearly mean?

   A. a period of fourteen consecutive days

   B. great excitement and delight

   C. tired out

   D. passages copied out of a book

2. "I honour your circumspection. A fortnight's acquaintance is certainly very little. One cannot know what a man really is by the end of a fortnight. But if we do not venture, somebody else will; and after all, Mrs. Long and her nieces must stand their chance; and therefore, as she will think it an act of kindness, if you decline the office, I will take it on myself."

   Which choice best states a central concern of "Chapter II"?

   A. A ridiculous proposal

   B. Family dynamics and anticipation

   C. A misguided warning

   D. The second proposal

SAT key: 1. D (passages copied out of a book); 2. B (Family dynamics and anticipation)

Lesson 4: Chapter III

Focus: first impressions at the ball

Objective: Students will analyze how characterization develops in “Chapter III” by writing a claim-evidence-reasoning paragraph that cites at least 2 quotations from the section, and will score at least 80% on the section quiz.

Standards: AP: see the unit standards

Teacher only · spoilers

At the Meryton assembly, Bingley is lively and dances with Jane twice. His friend Mr. Darcy, though richer, is judged proud and disagreeable; he refuses to dance with Elizabeth, calling her 'tolerable' within her hearing.

Background: Public assemblies were key places for courtship; dancing twice signaled interest.

Significance: Darcy's insult launches the central conflict and the theme of first impressions (Austen's original title).

Lesson plan and lecture script (90 minutes)

0–8 min · Bell-ringer · You do (8 min)
Students write to the bell-ringer, then pair-share.
Why does the town change its opinion of Darcy so quickly? Write for five minutes. Starters: I think... because... / This connects to first impressions because....
Prompt: Why does the town change its opinion of Darcy so quickly?
Sentence starters: I think… because… · This connects to first impressions because…
Strong response: A strong response takes a position and anticipates this: Elizabeth's view of Darcy is formed in one overheard insult.

8–18 min · Vocabulary with etymology notes · I do (10 min)
Five key words in context, with verified word histories.
Today's words: sprained — injured by a sudden twist; suiting — pleasing; being right for; barefaced — open and bold, without any attempt to hide; surmises — guesses; overhear — hear, usually without the knowledge of the speakers. “surmises”: Origin of “surmise”: Old French surmis.
Words: sprained: injured by a sudden twist · suiting: pleasing; being right for · barefaced: open and bold, without any attempt to hide · surmises: guesses · overhear: hear, usually without the knowledge of the speakers

18–28 min · Background and context · I do (10 min)
Mini-lecture (read or adapt the script).
Public assemblies were key places for courtship; dancing twice signaled interest. Darcy's insult launches the central conflict and the theme of first impressions (Austen's original title). Characterization: Darcy's pride is shown through his refusal to dance and his overheard remark; Bingley's openness through his dancing every dance. Point of view: The narrator reports the room's opinion, which swings with Darcy's income and manners. Watch for pride: Pride is discussed openly and shown in action; who is proud, and whether pride is a fault, keeps shifting. In this chapter: "tide of his popularity; for he was discovered to be proud, to be above his company, and above being pleased; and not" (Chapter III, paragraph 5).

28–40 min · I do: modeled close reading · I do (12 min)
Model the close reading of the anchor quotation using the written think-aloud below.
First, meaning. I read "his manners gave a disgust which turned the tide of his popularity" slowly and put it in my own words: Darcy's proud manners disgust the room and turn his popularity around. Next, craft. I notice the image of a turning tide, which shows how fast public opinion changes. The strongest word is "disgust": it is a strong word that shows the crowd's verdict is total. Then, effect. What turns the crowd against Darcy at the ball? My answer: The crowd turns against Darcy at the ball because his proud, disagreeable manners offend them, despite his wealth; he is judged in one evening, which shows how first impressions drive the plot.

> his manners gave a disgust which turned the tide of his popularity (Chapter III, paragraph 5)

Think-aloud: First, meaning. I read "his manners gave a disgust which turned the tide of his popularity" slowly and put it in my own words: Darcy's proud manners disgust the room and turn his popularity around. Next, craft. I notice the image of a turning tide, which shows how fast public opinion changes. The strongest word is "disgust": it is a strong word that shows the crowd's verdict is total. Then, effect. What turns the crowd against Darcy at the ball? My answer: The crowd turns against Darcy at the ball because his proud, disagreeable manners offend them, despite his wealth; he is judged in one evening, which shows how first impressions drive the plot.

40–55 min · We do: guided annotation · We do (15 min)
Guided analysis of a second quotation; expected answers given.
Ask: What words in this line stand out, and what do they suggest? Expected: "Tolerable" is faint praise and "tempt" makes Elizabeth an object of choice; the insult creates her first impression. Ask: How does this line connect to first impressions? Expected: Elizabeth's view of Darcy is formed in one overheard insult. (Darcy's insult; the source of Elizabeth's prejudice.)

> She is tolerable; but not handsome enough to tempt me (Chapter III, paragraph 13)

Ask: What words in this line stand out, and what do they suggest?
Expected answer: "Tolerable" is faint praise and "tempt" makes Elizabeth an object of choice; the insult creates her first impression.
Ask: How does this line connect to first impressions?
Expected answer: Elizabeth's view of Darcy is formed in one overheard insult. (Darcy's insult; the source of Elizabeth's prejudice.)

55–70 min · You do: independent annotation · You do (15 min)

Independent annotation and a claim-evidence-reasoning paragraph (exemplar given).

Annotate the chapter for characterization, point of view (three marks with a margin note each), then write one claim-evidence-reasoning paragraph: what does this chapter suggest about first impressions at the ball? Then start your writing prompt at your assigned level (HS Sophomore: Analyze how Chapter III develops the idea of first impressions at the ball. Make a precise claim, support it with at least three pieces of textual evidence, and explain how the author's use of characterization and theme shapes that idea. Address one possible counterclaim.) Exemplar: The ball shows that the neighbourhood judges character by income and manners. When the text says "his manners gave a disgust which turned the tide of his popularity" (Chapter III, paragraph 5), it shows this directly. Darcy is admired for "ten thousand a year" until his manners turn "the tide of his popularity," so the crowd's judgment moves with surface impressions.

Task: Annotate the chapter for characterization, point of view (three marks with a margin note each), then write one claim-evidence-reasoning paragraph: what does this chapter suggest about first impressions at the ball? Then start your writing prompt at your assigned level (HS Sophomore: Analyze how Chapter III develops the idea of first impressions at the ball. Make a precise claim, support it with at least three pieces of textual evidence, and explain how the author's use of characterization and theme shapes that idea. Address one possible counterclaim.)

Exemplar: The ball shows that the neighbourhood judges character by income and manners. When the text says "his manners gave a disgust which turned the tide of his popularity" (Chapter III, paragraph 5), it shows this directly. Darcy is admired for "ten thousand a year" until his manners turn "the tide of his popularity," so the crowd's judgment moves with surface impressions.

70–80 min · Discussion · We do (10 min)

Structured discussion from the 30 tiered questions, with facilitation notes.

Anchor question: Why does the town change its opinion of Darcy so quickly? Ask students whether Darcy is rude or shy. Is there evidence for shyness?

Anchor question: Why does the town change its opinion of Darcy so quickly?

Facilitation: Ask students whether Darcy is rude or shy. Is there evidence for shyness?

80–87 min · Exit ticket / chapter quiz · You do (7 min)

Chapter quiz in the app and an exit ticket (answer given).

Chapter quiz in the app, then: In one sentence, what does this chapter suggest about first impressions at the ball? Support it with one short quotation. Model answer: The ball shows that the neighbourhood judges character by income and manners. ("his manners gave a disgust which turned the tide of his popularity", Chapter III, paragraph 5). Accept any defensible claim backed by a quotation from the chapter; the answer key for the quiz is in the Quiz section.

Exit ticket: In one sentence, what does this chapter suggest about first impressions at the ball? Support it with one short quotation.

Answer: Model answer: The ball shows that the neighbourhood judges character by income and manners. ("his manners gave a disgust which turned the tide of his popularity", Chapter III, paragraph 5). Accept any defensible claim backed by a quotation from the chapter; the answer key for the quiz is in the Quiz section.

> 87–90 min · Closure · I do (3 min)
> Summarize the lesson and preview the next reading.
> Today we saw how characterization shapes first impressions at the ball. Key takeaway: Elizabeth's view of Darcy is formed in one overheard insult.

Total: 90 minutes.

Teacher analysis (spoilers)

Literary elements

- Characterization: Darcy's pride is shown through his refusal to dance and his overheard remark; Bingley's openness through his dancing every dance.
- Point of view: The narrator reports the room's opinion, which swings with Darcy's income and manners.

Themes and how they develop

- first impressions: Elizabeth's view of Darcy is formed in one overheard insult.

Symbols and motifs

- pride: Pride is discussed openly and shown in action; who is proud, and whether pride is a fault, keeps shifting. In this chapter: “tide of his popularity; for he was discovered to be proud, to be above his company, and above being pleased; and not” (Chapter III, paragraph 5).
- marriage and money: Incomes, entails and fortunes are stated precisely; marriage is always also an economic question. In this chapter: “Bennet to her husband, “and all the others equally well married, I shall have nothing to wish for” (Chapter III, paragraph 2).

Key quotations (checked against the reading text)

- “She is tolerable; but not handsome enough to tempt me” (Chapter III, paragraph 13) Darcy's insult; the source of Elizabeth's prejudice.
- “his manners gave a disgust which turned the tide of his popularity” (Chapter III, paragraph 5) Public opinion shifts on manners, not character.
- “ten thousand a year” (Chapter III, paragraph 5) The room first admires him for his income.

Model claim-evidence-reasoning

Claim: The ball shows that the neighbourhood judges character by income and manners.
Evidence: “his manners gave a disgust which turned the tide of his popularity” (Chapter III, paragraph 5)
Reasoning: Darcy is admired for "ten thousand a year" until his manners turn "the tide of his popularity," so the crowd's judgment moves with surface impressions.

Vocabulary with etymology notes

Word		In context	Word history

	Definition (in this sentence)
sprained (verb)	injured by a sudden twist	Oh! that he had sprained his ankle in the first dance!"
suiting (verb)	pleasing; being right for	"But I can assure you," she added, "that Lizzy does not lose much by not suiting his fancy; for he is a most disagreeable, horrid man, not at all worth pleasing.
barefaced (adjective)	open and bold, without any attempt to hide	They attacked him in various ways; with barefaced questions, ingenious suppositions, and distant surmises; but he eluded the skill of them all; and they were at last obliged to accept the secondhand intelligence of their neighbour Lady Lucas.
surmises (noun)	guesses	They attacked him in various ways; with barefaced questions, ingenious suppositions, and distant surmises; but he eluded the skill of them all; and they were at last obliged to accept the secondhand intelligence of their neighbour Lady Lucas.	"surmises": Origin of "surmise": Old French surmis. (Liber et Libri origin note, https://en.wiktionary.org/wiki/surmise#Etymology)
overhear (verb)	hear, usually without the knowledge of the speakers	Darcy had been standing near enough for her to overhear a conversation between him and Mr.
insupportable (adjective)	unbearable	At such an assembly as this, it would be insupportable.	"insupportable": Origin: Middle French insupportable; earlier Late Latin insupportabilis. (Liber et Libri origin note, https://en.wiktionary.org/wiki/insupportable#Etymology)
ascertaining (verb)	finding out for certain	The ladies were somewhat more fortunate, for they had the advantage of ascertaining from an upper window, that he wore a blue coat and rode a black horse.	"ascertaining": Origin of "ascertain": Middle English acerteynen; earlier Old French acertener. (Liber et Libri origin note, https://en.wiktionary.org/wiki/ascertain#Etymology)
quieted (verb)	calmed	Lady Lucas quieted her fears a little by starting the idea of his being gone to London only to get a large party for the ball; and a report soon followed that Mr.

fastidious (adjective)	giving careful attention to detail; hard to please; excessively concerned with cleanliness	"I would not be so fastidious as you are," cried Bingley, "for a kingdom!
conceited (adjective)	characteristic of false pride; having an exaggerated sense of self-importance	So high and so conceited that there was no enduring him!

Discussion questions

1. Why does the town change its opinion of Darcy so quickly?
2. Where does characterization appear in this chapter, and what effect does it have? Point to one passage.
3. How does this chapter connect to the book's larger concern with marriage and money?

Classroom discussion questions (30, tiered)

Wait time after every question (3 s for DOK 1, 5 s for DOK 2, 8 to 10 s for DOK 3 and 4); think-pair-share on DOK 3 and 4; answer each response with a follow-up probe; close with student-generated questions. Focus sets by rigor level: Scaffolded support: 1, 2, 3, 4, 5, 6, 11, 12, 13, 14, 21, 22; HS Freshman: 1, 2, 3, 4, 5, 12, 13, 14, 15, 22, 23, 24; HS Sophomore: 1, 2, 3, 4, 13, 14, 15, 16, 17, 23, 24, 25; HS Junior: 1, 2, 3, 14, 15, 16, 17, 18, 24, 25, 26, 27; HS Senior: 1, 2, 3, 15, 16, 17, 18, 25, 26, 27, 28, 29; AP: 1, 2, 16, 17, 18, 19, 20, 26, 27, 28, 29, 30; College Freshman: 1, 2, 17, 18, 19, 20, 21, 22, 27, 28, 29, 30; College Sophomore: 1, 2, 11, 18, 19, 20, 21, 22, 23, 28, 29, 30; College Junior: 1, 11, 12, 19, 20, 21, 22, 23, 24, 25, 29, 30; College Senior: 1, 11, 12, 13, 20, 21, 22, 23, 24, 25, 26, 30; Graduate / PhD: 1, 11, 12, 13, 21, 22, 23, 24, 25, 26, 27, 28

Literal / recall

1. Whom does Bingley dance with twice? [DOK 1 · coldCallWithSupport · wait 3 s · AP: unit standards] Look for: Jane
2. What word does Darcy use about Elizabeth? [DOK 1 · turnAndTalk · wait 3 s · AP: unit standards] Look for: Tolerable
3. How does Elizabeth react to the insult? [DOK 1 · coldCallWithSupport · wait 3 s · AP: unit standards] Look for: She laughs and tells the story to friends
4. Why does the town turn against Darcy? [DOK 1 · turnAndTalk · wait 3 s · AP: unit standards] Look for: He seems proud and disagreeable
5. Background (not in the text): what was the novel's working title? [DOK 1 · coldCallWithSupport · wait 3 s · AP: unit standards] Look for: First Impressions
6. Retell the three most important events of "Chapter III" in order, in one sentence each. [DOK 1 · turnAndTalk · wait 3 s · AP: unit standards] Look for: At the Meryton assembly, Bingley is lively and dances with Jane twice. His friend Mr. Darcy, though richer, is judged proud and disagreeable; he refuses to dance with Elizabeth, calling her 'tolerable' within her hearing.
7. Which characters appear or are mentioned in "Chapter III"? Name two and one thing each says or does. [DOK 1 · coldCallWithSupport · wait 3 s · AP: unit standards] Look for: Names and actions taken from the chapter; check against the teacher summary.

8. Where and when does “Chapter III” take place? Point to the line that tells you. [DOK 1 · turnAndTalk · wait 3 s · AP: unit standards] Look for: A place/time detail quoted from the chapter.
9. Reread: “Oh! that he had sprained his ankle in the first dance!”” What does “sprained” mean here, and what is literally happening in this line? [DOK 1 · turnAndTalk · wait 3 s · AP: unit standards] Look for: sprained: injured by a sudden twist.
10. Reread: ““But I can assure you,” she added, “that Lizzy does not lose much by not suiting his fancy; for he is a most disagreeable, horrid man, not at all worth pleasing.” What does “suiting” mean here, and what is literally happening in this line? [DOK 1 · turnAndTalk · wait 3 s · AP: unit standards] Look for: suiting: pleasing; being right for.

Inferential / analytical

1. What does “Chapter III” suggest about first impressions at the ball? State the inference and the line that supports it. [DOK 2 · thinkPairShare · wait 5 s · AP-LIT.LAN] Look for: Darcy's insult launches the central conflict and the theme of first impressions (Austen's original title).
2. Find one example of characterization in this chapter. What does it reveal that a plain statement would not? [DOK 2 · followUp · wait 5 s · AP-LIT.CHR] Look for: Look for what characters say, do and think, and how others react to them.
3. How does the theme in this chapter shape what we understand about first impressions at the ball? [DOK 3 · thinkPairShare · wait 8 s · AP-LIT.LAN] Look for: Look for statements or moments that connect to the book's big ideas.
   Answer guidance: A defensible line of argument: The ball shows that the neighbourhood judges character by income and manners. Useful evidence: “She is tolerable; but not handsome enough to tempt me” (Chapter III, paragraph 13): Darcy's insult; the source of Elizabeth's prejudice. Theme link: Elizabeth's view of Darcy is formed in one overheard insult. Credit any position that is supported by quotation and reasoning; push one-sided answers to address the strongest counterpoint.
4. In the passage that begins “Not all that Mrs.”, why might Austen have chosen these particular words? Pick two and explain their connotations. [DOK 2 · followUp · wait 5 s · AP-LIT.FIG] Look for: Diction analysis of two words in the anchor passage.
5. What causes the main turn in “Chapter III”, and what effect is it likely to have on what follows? [DOK 2 · followUp · wait 5 s · AP-LIT.STR] Look for: At the Meryton assembly, Bingley is lively and dances with Jane twice. His friend Mr. Darcy, though richer, is judged proud and disagreeable; he refuses to dance with Elizabeth, calling her 'tolerable' within her hearing.
6. How does “Chapter III” build on “Chapter II”? Name one link of cause and effect. [DOK 3 · thinkPairShare · wait 8 s · AP-LIT.STR] Look for: A causal or structural link between this and the previous chapter.
   Answer guidance: A defensible line of argument: The ball shows that the neighbourhood judges character by income and manners. Useful evidence: “his manners gave a disgust which turned the tide of his popularity” (Chapter III, paragraph 5): Public opinion shifts on manners, not character. Theme link: Elizabeth's view of Darcy is formed in one overheard insult. Credit any position that is supported by quotation and reasoning; push one-sided answers to address the strongest counterpoint.
7. What can we infer about a character's motives from what they say and do here, as opposed to what they claim? [DOK 3 · followUp · wait 8 s · AP-LIT.CHR] Look for: An inference about motive supported by a quoted line.
   Answer guidance: A defensible line of argument: The ball shows that the neighbourhood judges character by income and manners. Useful evidence: “ten thousand a year” (Chapter III, paragraph 5): The room first admires him for his income. On characterization: Darcy's pride is shown through his refusal to dance and his overheard remark; Bingley's openness through his dancing every dance. Credit any position that is supported by quotation and reasoning; push one-sided answers to address the strongest counterpoint.

8. The bell-ringer asked: "Why does the town change its opinion of Darcy so quickly?" Now that we have read closely, how would you revise your first answer, and which line changed your mind? [DOK 2 · thinkPairShare · wait 5 s · AP-LIT.LAN] Look for: A revised answer anchored in the text.
9. Where does irony appear, and how does it connect this chapter to the larger concern with marriage and money? [DOK 3 · followUp · wait 8 s · AP-LIT.NAR] Look for: Look for gaps between what characters expect or say and what is true.

   Answer guidance: A defensible line of argument: The ball shows that the neighbourhood judges character by income and manners. Useful evidence: "She is tolerable; but not handsome enough to tempt me" (Chapter III, paragraph 13): Darcy's insult; the source of Elizabeth's prejudice. Theme link: Elizabeth's view of Darcy is formed in one overheard insult. Credit any position that is supported by quotation and reasoning; push one-sided answers to address the strongest counterpoint.
10. Background: Public assemblies were key places for courtship; dancing twice signaled interest. How does knowing this change the way you read one moment in the chapter? [DOK 3 · thinkPairShare · wait 8 s · AP-LIT.SET] Look for: A specific moment reread in light of the context.

    Answer guidance: A defensible line of argument: The ball shows that the neighbourhood judges character by income and manners. Useful evidence: "his manners gave a disgust which turned the tide of his popularity" (Chapter III, paragraph 5): Public opinion shifts on manners, not character. Theme link: Elizabeth's view of Darcy is formed in one overheard insult. Credit any position that is supported by quotation and reasoning; push one-sided answers to address the strongest counterpoint.

Evaluative / synthesis / creative

1. A critic might argue: "Darcy's insult launches the central conflict and the theme of first impressions (Austen's original title)." How far do you agree? Take a stand and defend it with two lines from the chapter. [DOK 3 · fourCorners · wait 8 s · AP-LIT.LAN] Look for: A defended position with evidence and one counterpoint.

   Answer guidance: A defensible line of argument: The ball shows that the neighbourhood judges character by income and manners. Useful evidence: "ten thousand a year" (Chapter III, paragraph 5): The room first admires him for his income. Theme link: Elizabeth's view of Darcy is formed in one overheard insult. Credit any position that is supported by quotation and reasoning; push one-sided answers to address the strongest counterpoint.
2. Which character in this chapter acts most wisely, and which least? Judge them by a standard you name. [DOK 3 · thinkPairShare · wait 8 s · AP-LIT.CHR, AP-LIT.LAN] Look for: An evaluation using an explicit criterion and evidence.

   Answer guidance: A defensible line of argument: The ball shows that the neighbourhood judges character by income and manners. Useful evidence: "She is tolerable; but not handsome enough to tempt me" (Chapter III, paragraph 13): Darcy's insult; the source of Elizabeth's prejudice. On characterization: Darcy's pride is shown through his refusal to dance and his overheard remark; Bingley's openness through his dancing every dance. Credit any position that is supported by quotation and reasoning; push one-sided answers to address the strongest counterpoint.
3. Rewrite one moment of "Chapter III" from the point of view of a different character. What does the new angle reveal or hide about first impressions at the ball? [DOK 4 · thinkPairShare · wait 8 s · AP-LIT.LAN, AP-

LIT.NAR] Look for: A creative product with a rationale tied to the text.

Answer guidance: A defensible line of argument: The ball shows that the neighbourhood judges character by income and manners. Useful evidence: “his manners gave a disgust which turned the tide of his popularity” (Chapter III, paragraph 5): Public opinion shifts on manners, not character. On point of view: The narrator reports the room's opinion, which swings with Darcy's income and manners. Credit any position that is supported by quotation and reasoning; push one-sided answers to address the strongest counterpoint.

4. Write three questions of your own about “Chapter III”: one recall, one “why/how”, and one “should/what if”. Trade with a partner and answer theirs. [DOK 3 · studentGenerated · wait 8 s · AP-LIT.LAN] Look for: Student-generated questions at three levels.

   Answer guidance: A defensible line of argument: The ball shows that the neighbourhood judges character by income and manners. Useful evidence: “ten thousand a year” (Chapter III, paragraph 5): The room first admires him for his income. Theme link: Elizabeth's view of Darcy is formed in one overheard insult. Credit any position that is supported by quotation and reasoning; push one-sided answers to address the strongest counterpoint.

5. Connect this chapter to class and social mobility: is the link strong or weak so far? What would Austen need to show next to strengthen it? [DOK 4 · socraticCircle · wait 8 s · AP-LIT.LAN] Look for: A judgment of thematic development across the work.

   Answer guidance: A defensible line of argument: The ball shows that the neighbourhood judges character by income and manners. Useful evidence: “She is tolerable; but not handsome enough to tempt me” (Chapter III, paragraph 13): Darcy's insult; the source of Elizabeth's prejudice. Theme link: Elizabeth's view of Darcy is formed in one overheard insult. Credit any position that is supported by quotation and reasoning; push one-sided answers to address the strongest counterpoint.

6. Is the characterization in this chapter effective, or does it feel heavy-handed? Evaluate it as a reader would in a review. [DOK 3 · fourCorners · wait 8 s · AP-LIT.CHR, AP-LIT.LAN] Look for: An evaluative judgment with criteria and evidence.

   Answer guidance: A defensible line of argument: The ball shows that the neighbourhood judges character by income and manners. Useful evidence: “his manners gave a disgust which turned the tide of his popularity” (Chapter III, paragraph 5): Public opinion shifts on manners, not character. On characterization: Darcy's pride is shown through his refusal to dance and his overheard remark; Bingley's openness through his dancing every dance. Credit any position that is supported by quotation and reasoning; push one-sided answers to address the strongest counterpoint.

7. Compare how “Chapter III” treats first impressions at the ball with how another text, film or event you know treats a similar idea. What does Pride and Prejudice see that the other misses? [DOK 4 · socraticCircle · wait 8 s · AP-LIT.LAN] Look for: A cross-text synthesis.

   Answer guidance: A defensible line of argument: The ball shows that the neighbourhood judges character by income and manners. Useful evidence: “ten thousand a year” (Chapter III, paragraph 5): The room first admires him for his income. Theme link: Elizabeth's view of Darcy is formed in one overheard insult. Credit any position that is supported by quotation and reasoning; push one-sided answers to address the strongest counterpoint.

8. Predict what “Chapter IV” will bring, using two clues from this chapter. After reading, evaluate your prediction. [DOK 3 · thinkPairShare · wait 8 s · AP-LIT.LAN, AP-LIT.STR] Look for: A prediction or judgment justified with textual clues.

Answer guidance: A defensible line of argument: The ball shows that the neighbourhood judges character by income and manners. Useful evidence: “She is tolerable; but not handsome enough to tempt me” (Chapter III, paragraph 13): Darcy's insult; the source of Elizabeth's prejudice. Theme link: Elizabeth's view of Darcy is formed in one overheard insult. Credit any position that is supported by quotation and reasoning; push one-sided answers to address the strongest counterpoint.

9. Design a one-paragraph modern adaptation of this chapter (setting, characters, conflict). What must stay the same for it to still be about first impressions at the ball? [DOK 4 · thinkPairShare · wait 8 s · AP-LIT.LAN] Look for: A creative transfer that keeps the core idea.

   Answer guidance: A defensible line of argument: The ball shows that the neighbourhood judges character by income and manners. Useful evidence: “his manners gave a disgust which turned the tide of his popularity” (Chapter III, paragraph 5): Public opinion shifts on manners, not character. Theme link: Elizabeth's view of Darcy is formed in one overheard insult. Credit any position that is supported by quotation and reasoning; push one-sided answers to address the strongest counterpoint.

10. What question would you most like to ask Jane Austen about this chapter, and what answer do you think the text itself gives? [DOK 4 · studentGenerated · wait 8 s · AP-LIT.LAN] Look for: A student-generated question answered from evidence.

    Answer guidance: A defensible line of argument: The ball shows that the neighbourhood judges character by income and manners. Useful evidence: “ten thousand a year” (Chapter III, paragraph 5): The room first admires him for his income. Theme link: Elizabeth's view of Darcy is formed in one overheard insult. Credit any position that is supported by quotation and reasoning; push one-sided answers to address the strongest counterpoint.

Annotation focus

- Characterization: look for what characters say, do and think, and how others react to them (anchor passage in the We do segment)
- Also notice Theme: statements or moments that connect to the book's big ideas
- Also notice Irony: gaps between what characters expect or say and what is true

Chapter quiz: item bank (all eleven rigor versions)

1. [fill · recall · DOK 1] Complete the quotation from Chapter III, paragraph 5: “His _____ were fine women, with an air of decided fashion.” Word bank: disposition, sisters, disagreeable, contrast

   Key: sisters

2. [mc · recall · DOK 1] Whom does Bingley dance with twice?

   A. Jane

   B. Lydia

   C. Elizabeth

   D. Charlotte

   Key: A (Jane)

3. [mc · recall · DOK 1] In the line “But I can assure you,’ she added, ‘that Lizzy does not lose much by not suiting his fancy; for he is a most disagreeable, horrid man, not at all worth pleasing.”, what does “suiting” most nearly mean?

   A. an abrupt excited utterance

B. kept from leaving

C. pleasing; being right for

D. very small portrait paintings

Key: C (pleasing; being right for)

4. [fill · recall · DOK 1] Complete the quotation from Chapter III, paragraph 13: “She is _____; but not handsome enough to tempt me”

   Key: tolerable

5. [fill · recall · DOK 1] Fill in the blank with the vocabulary word that fits: “Darcy had been standing near enough for her to _____ a conversation between him and Mr.” Word bank: overhear, suiting, sprained, barefaced

   Key: overhear

6. [mc · recall · DOK 1] Why does the town turn against Darcy?

   A. He insults Bingley

   B. He is poor

   C. He dances too much

   D. He seems proud and disagreeable

   Key: D (He seems proud and disagreeable)

7. [mc · recall · DOK 1] Which word completes this sentence from Chapter III, paragraph 4? “An invitation to dinner was soon afterwards dispatched; and already had Mrs. Bennet planned the courses that were to do credit to her _____, when an answer arrived which deferred it all.”

   A. particularly

   B. altogether

   C. housekeeping

   D. returned

   Key: C (housekeeping)

8. [mc · recall · DOK 1] Which word completes this sentence from Chapter III, paragraph 9? “You know how I detest it, unless I am _____ acquainted with my partner.”

   A. particularly

   B. returned

   C. contrast

   D. uncommonly

   Key: A (particularly)

9. [fill · recall · DOK 1] Fill in the blank with the vocabulary word that fits: “The ladies were somewhat more fortunate, for they had the advantage of _____ from an upper window, that he wore a blue coat and rode a black horse.” Word bank: ascertaining, suiting, sprained, barefaced

   Key: ascertaining

10. [mc · inference · DOK 2] Which choice best states a central concern of “Chapter III”?

    A. Character flaws examined

    B. Visit to Hunsford

    C. First impressions at the ball

    D. Too late

Key: C (First impressions at the ball)

11. [short · inference · DOK 2] What does this passage from Chapter III, paragraph 19 reveal about the character or situation? “She was therefore obliged to seek another branch of the subject, and related, with much bitterness of spirit and some exaggeration, the shocking rudeness of Mr. Darcy.” Answer in two or three sentences with one detail.

    Sample answer: The passage (Chapter III, paragraph 19) shows the situation turning on first impressions and prejudice: Elizabeth's view of Darcy is formed in one overheard insult. The words “exaggeration” and “bitterness” are the proof, because they show how the moment looks to the people in it. They suggest more than the narrator states outright.

12. [short · inference · DOK 2] What does this passage from Chapter III, paragraph 9 reveal about the character or situation? “Your sisters are engaged, and there is not another woman in the room whom it would not be a punishment to me to stand up with.” Answer in two or three sentences with one detail.

    Sample answer: The passage (Chapter III, paragraph 9) shows the situation turning on first impressions and prejudice: Elizabeth's view of Darcy is formed in one overheard insult. The words “punishment” and “another” are the proof, because they show how the moment looks to the people in it. They suggest more than the narrator states outright.

13. [mc · inference · DOK 2] Which of these passages comes earliest in Chapter III?

    A. “To be fond of dancing was a certain step towards falling in love; and very lively hopes of Mr. Bingley’s heart were entertained.”

    B. “He was quite young, wonderfully handsome, extremely agreeable, and to crown the whole, he meant to be at the next assembly with a large…”

    C. “If I can but see one of my daughters happily settled at Netherfield,’ said Mrs. Bennet to her husband, ‘and all the others equally well…”

    D. “Not all that Mrs. Bennet, however, with the assistance of her five daughters, could ask on the subject was sufficient to draw from her…”

    Key: D (“Not all that Mrs. Bennet, however, with the assistance of her five daughters, could ask on the subject was sufficient to draw from her…”)

14. [short · analysis · DOK 3] Analyze how the word choice in this passage from Chapter III, paragraph 14 shapes its tone: “Mr. Darcy walked off; and Elizabeth remained with no very cordial feelings towards him.” Pick two words and explain their effect.

    Sample answer: The words “feelings” and “remained” (Chapter III, paragraph 14) make the tone heavy and deliberate rather than neutral. That weight points the reader to class and social mobility: Elizabeth's view of Darcy is formed in one overheard insult. The author chooses them so the moment feels significant instead of passing.

15. [short · analysis · DOK 3] Analyze the word choice in “ten thousand a year” (Chapter III, paragraph 5). Pick two words and explain what they suggest.

    Sample answer: The room first admires him for his income. The evidence is “ten thousand a year” (Chapter III, paragraph 5). This develops first impressions: Elizabeth's view of Darcy is formed in one overheard insult. The words “thousand” and “year” carry that meaning: they are the charged choices in the line, and changing either would soften the effect.

16. [short · synthesis · DOK 4] Synthesis: trace how first impressions develops from Chapter II to Chapter III. Use one quotation from each.

    Sample answer: Earlier, in Chapter II, paragraph 1, the text reads “Mr. Bennet was among the earliest of those who waited on Mr. Bingley” — Opening reversal: he has done what he pretended to refuse. In Chapter III, “She is tolerable; but not handsome enough to tempt me” (Chapter III, paragraph 13) — Darcy's insult; the source of Elizabeth's prejudice. Elizabeth's view of Darcy is formed in one overheard insult.

17. [fill · recall · DOK 1] Fill in the blank with the vocabulary word that fits: “At such an assembly as this, it would be _____.” Word bank: sprained, insupportable, suiting, barefaced

    Key: insupportable

18. [mc · recall · DOK 1] What word does Darcy use about Elizabeth?

    A. Ugly

    B. Tolerable

    C. Charming

    D. Beautiful

    Key: B (Tolerable)

19. [mc · recall · DOK 1] Background (not in the text): what was the novel's working title?

    A. The Watsons

    B. Lady Susan

    C. Elinor and Marianne

    D. First Impressions

    Key: D (First Impressions)

20. [fill · recall · DOK 1] Complete the quotation from Chapter III, paragraph 13: “You had better return to your _____ and enjoy her smiles, for you are wasting your time with me.” Word bank: daughter, partner, agreeable, uncommonly

    Key: partner

21. [short · inference · DOK 2] What can you infer from this line? “She is tolerable; but not handsome enough to tempt me” (Chapter III, paragraph 13) Answer in two or three sentences with one detail.

    Sample answer: Darcy's insult; the source of Elizabeth's prejudice. The evidence is “She is tolerable; but not handsome enough to tempt me” (Chapter III, paragraph 13). This develops first impressions: Elizabeth's view of Darcy is formed in one overheard insult.

22. [mc · analysis · DOK 3] Which literary element does this describe in “Chapter III”? The narrator reports the room's opinion, which swings with Darcy's income and manners.

    A. Point of view

    B. Plot

    C. Imagery

    D. Simile

    Key: A (Point of view)

23. [mc · analysis · DOK 3] Which literary element does this describe in “Chapter III”? Darcy's pride is shown through his refusal to dance and his overheard remark; Bingley's openness through his dancing every dance.

    A. Irony

    B. Allusion

    C. Characterization

    D. Tone / mood

    Key: C (Characterization)

24. [fill · recall · DOK 1] Fill in the blank with the vocabulary word that fits: “Lady Lucas _____ her fears a little by starting the idea of his being gone to London only to get a large party for the ball; and a report soon followed that Mr.” Word bank: quieted, barefaced, sprained, suiting

    Key: quieted

25. [mc · recall · DOK 1] In the line “Oh! that he had sprained his ankle in the first dance!”, what does “sprained” most nearly mean?

    A. worthy of often limited commendation

    B. to express pleasure at someone's good fortune

    C. with appreciation; in a grateful manner

    D. injured by a sudden twist

    Key: D (injured by a sudden twist)

26. [short · analysis · DOK 3] Analyze how the word choice in this passage from Chapter III, paragraph 2 shapes its tone: “If I can but see one of my daughters happily settled at Netherfield,’ said Mrs. Bennet to her husband, ‘and all the others equally well married, I shall have nothing to wish for.” Pick two words and explain their effect.

    Sample answer: The words “daughters” and “equally” (Chapter III, paragraph 2) make the tone heavy and deliberate rather than neutral. That weight points the reader to pride and self-knowledge: Elizabeth's view of Darcy is formed in one overheard insult. The author chooses them so the moment feels significant instead of passing.

27. [short · analysis · DOK 3] Analyze how the word choice in this passage from Chapter III, paragraph 15 shapes its tone: “The evening altogether passed off pleasantly to the whole family.” Pick two words and explain their effect.

    Sample answer: The words “pleasantly” and “altogether” (Chapter III, paragraph 15) make the tone heavy and deliberate rather than neutral. That weight points the reader to pride and self-knowledge: Elizabeth's view of Darcy is formed in one overheard insult. The author chooses them so the moment feels significant instead of passing.

28. [short · synthesis · DOK 4] Connect this passage from Chapter III, paragraph 6 to the story's treatment of marriage and money: “Mr. Bingley had soon made himself acquainted with all the principal people in the room; he was lively and unreserved, danced every dance, was angry that the ball closed so early, and talked of giving one himself at Netherfield.” Use one other moment from the story as well.

    Sample answer: This passage (Chapter III, paragraph 6) develops marriage and money: Elizabeth's view of Darcy is formed in one overheard insult. Its words “unreserved” and “acquainted” carry that idea into this moment. The same concern returns in “Mr. Darcy danced only once with Mrs. Hurst and once with Miss Bingley, declined being introduced to any other lady, and…” (Chapter III, paragraph 6), so the two passages read as a pattern, not a single moment. Together they show the story treating marriage and money as central.

29. [short · synthesis · DOK 4] Connect this passage from Chapter III, paragraph 17 to the story's treatment of marriage and money: “For God’s sake, say no more of his partners.” Use one other moment from the story as well.

    Sample answer: This passage (Chapter III, paragraph 17) develops marriage and money: Elizabeth's view of Darcy is formed in one overheard insult. Its words “partners” carry that idea into this moment. The same concern returns in “He is so excessively handsome! and his sisters are charming women.” (Chapter III, paragraph 18), so the two passages read as a pattern, not a single moment. Together they show the story treating marriage and money as central.

30. [short · inference · DOK 2 · AP: AP-LIT.CHR] What can you infer from this line? “his manners gave a disgust which turned the tide of his popularity” (Chapter III, paragraph 5) Answer in two or three sentences with one detail.

Sample answer: Public opinion shifts on manners, not character. The evidence is “his manners gave a disgust which turned the tide of his popularity” (Chapter III, paragraph 5). This develops first impressions: Elizabeth's view of Darcy is formed in one overheard insult.

31. [short · synthesis · DOK 4 · AP: AP-LIT.LAN] Connect this passage from Chapter III, paragraph 16 to the story's treatment of women's limited choices: “I was so vexed to see him stand up with her; but, however, he did not admire her at all: indeed, nobody can, you know; and he seemed quite struck with Jane as she was going down the dance.” Use one other moment from the story as well.
    Sample answer: This passage (Chapter III, paragraph 16) develops women's limited choices: Elizabeth's view of Darcy is formed in one overheard insult. Its words “however” and “seemed” carry that idea into this moment. The same concern returns in “Oh! my dear Mr. Bennet,’ as she entered the room, ‘we have had a most delightful evening, a most excellent ball.” (Chapter III, paragraph 16), so the two passages read as a pattern, not a single moment. Together they show the story treating women's limited choices as central.
32. [short · synthesis · DOK 4 · AP: AP-LIT.FIG] Close reading: how do the diction and syntax of “She is tolerable; but not handsome enough to tempt me” (Chapter III, paragraph 13) shape its meaning? Consider a second, competing reading.
    Sample answer: Darcy's insult; the source of Elizabeth's prejudice. The evidence is “She is tolerable; but not handsome enough to tempt me” (Chapter III, paragraph 13). This develops first impressions: Elizabeth's view of Darcy is formed in one overheard insult. The words “tolerable” and “handsome” carry that meaning: they are the charged choices in the line, and changing either would soften the effect. Darcy is admired for "ten thousand a year" until his manners turn "the tide of his popularity," so the crowd's judgment moves with surface impressions.
33. [mc · inference · DOK 2 · AP: AP-LIT.LAN] What does this passage most clearly show? “She is tolerable; but not handsome enough to tempt me” (Chapter III, paragraph 13)
    A. Class is not character: a man in trade is a gentleman in manners.
    B. Mrs. Bennet's delight: the name matters, not the man.
    C. Darcy's insult; the source of Elizabeth's prejudice.
    D. Ironic "pitiable": she suffers only for herself.

    Key: C (Darcy's insult; the source of Elizabeth's prejudice.)
34. [short · synthesis · DOK 4 · AP: AP-LIT.FIG] Close reading: how do the diction and syntax of “his manners gave a disgust which turned the tide of his popularity” (Chapter III, paragraph 5) shape its meaning? Consider a second, competing reading.
    Sample answer: Public opinion shifts on manners, not character. The evidence is “his manners gave a disgust which turned the tide of his popularity” (Chapter III, paragraph 5). This develops first impressions: Elizabeth's view of Darcy is formed in one overheard insult. The words “popularity” and “manners” carry that meaning: they are the charged choices in the line, and changing either would soften the effect. Darcy is admired for "ten thousand a year" until his manners turn "the tide of his popularity," so the crowd's judgment moves with surface impressions.
35. [short · synthesis · DOK 4 · AP: AP-LIT.LAN] Connect this passage from Chapter III, paragraph 4 to the story's treatment of women's limited choices: “The girls grieved over such a number of ladies; but were comforted the day before the ball by hearing, that instead of twelve, he had brought only six with him from London, his five sisters and a cousin.” Use one other moment from the story as well.
    Sample answer: This passage (Chapter III, paragraph 4) develops women's limited choices: Elizabeth's view of Darcy is formed in one overheard insult. Its words “comforted” and “hearing” carry that idea into this moment. The same concern returns in “Mr. Bingley was good looking and gentleman-like; he had a pleasant countenance, and easy, unaffected manners." (Chapter III, paragraph 5), so the two passages read as a pattern, not a single moment. Together they show the story treating women's limited choices as central.

36. [mc · inference · DOK 2 · Dual Credit (Indiana College Core): ICC-WC-1.5] What does this passage most clearly show? "ten thousand a year" (Chapter III, paragraph 5)
    A. The room first admires him for his income.
    B. Elizabeth's letter to Mrs. Gardiner echoes Jane's joy.
    C. The colonel's easy manners make Darcy's stiffness look worse by contrast.
    D. Her vanity in the title.

    Key: A (The room first admires him for his income.)

Rigor version	Items (in order)	Mix
Scaffolded support	1, 2, 3, 4, 5, 6, 7, 8, 9, 10, 11, 12, 13, 14, 15, 16	recall 9, inference 4, analysis 2, synthesis 1
HS Freshman	3, 5, 17, 2, 4, 18, 19, 20, 10, 21, 13, 11, 22, 14, 23, 16	recall 8, inference 4, analysis 3, synthesis 1
HS Sophomore	24, 5, 1, 25, 7, 6, 8, 13, 10, 12, 11, 22, 26, 27, 28, 29	recall 7, inference 4, analysis 3, synthesis 2
HS Junior	19, 20, 6, 2, 5, 10, 11, 12, 13, 30, 26, 27, 14, 23, 31, 32	recall 5, inference 5, analysis 4, synthesis 2
HS Senior	5, 17, 3, 7, 10, 21, 13, 11, 12, 15, 14, 23, 27, 28, 16, 31	recall 4, inference 5, analysis 4, synthesis 3
AP	9, 5, 3, 12, 13, 33, 10, 22, 15, 27, 14, 23, 31, 28, 34, 35	recall 3, inference 4, analysis 5, synthesis 4
College Freshman	5, 25, 17, 10, 36, 33, 13, 23, 14, 22, 26, 27, 28, 29, 34, 16	recall 3, inference 4, analysis 5, synthesis 4
College Sophomore	1, 4, 2, 12, 30, 33, 14, 23, 27, 22, 26, 16, 29, 28, 31, 35	recall 3, inference 3, analysis 5, synthesis 5
College Junior	5, 4, 13, 11, 33, 22, 15, 27, 23, 14, 26, 16, 35, 31, 28, 29	recall 2, inference 3, analysis 6, synthesis 5
College Senior	5, 17, 13, 11, 36, 33, 27, 14, 23, 22, 26, 16, 29, 35, 28, 31	recall 2, inference 4, analysis 5, synthesis 5
Graduate / PhD	5, 17, 33, 11, 10, 36, 27, 22, 14, 23, 26, 28, 31, 35, 16, 29	recall 2, inference 4, analysis 5, synthesis 5

Writing prompts (eleven rigor levels)

Scaffolded support (250 words; AP: see unit standards): Supported track (work from the passage your teacher selects). In "Chapter III," how does Austen show first impressions at the ball? Write a paragraph that states your claim, quotes two details from the passage, and explains how each detail supports your idea. Use the characterization you noticed as one piece of evidence.

HS Freshman (350 words; AP: see unit standards): In Chapter III, how does Austen develop the idea of first impressions at the ball? State a clear claim, support it with two or three quotations, and explain how the characterization in the chapter helps build that idea.

HS Sophomore (450 words; AP: see unit standards): Analyze how Chapter III develops the idea of first impressions at the ball. Make a precise claim, support it with at least three pieces of textual evidence, and explain how the author's use of characterization and theme shapes that idea. Address one possible counterclaim.

HS Junior (550 words; AP: see unit standards): Analyze how the structure of Chapter III (where it begins, turns and ends) and its characterization shape the reader's understanding of first impressions at the ball. Identify one place where the text leaves matters uncertain and explain how that uncertainty adds to its meaning.

HS Senior (600 words; AP: see unit standards): Two readers disagree about what Chapter III suggests about first impressions at the ball. Lay out two plausible interpretations, weigh the evidence for each (including the chapter's characterization and theme), and argue for the stronger one in a sustained, well-organized essay.

AP (650 words; AP: AP-LIT.CHR, AP-LIT.LAN): Write a literary argument in which you analyze how Jane Austen uses characterization in Chapter III to complicate the reader's understanding of first impressions at the ball. Develop a defensible thesis, select evidence purposefully, and explain how specific choices of diction and syntax create meaning.

College Freshman (1000 words; AP: see unit standards): Situate Chapter III within its historical and literary context and argue how the chapter's treatment of first impressions at the ball responds to that context. Engage with at least one secondary perspective (a critic, historian or the author's own statements), integrate quotations smoothly, and cite in MLA style.

College Sophomore (1250 words; AP: see unit standards): Read Chapter III alongside the conventions of its genre and period. Argue how the chapter's handling of first impressions at the ball follows or bends those conventions, using the characterization as evidence, and test your reading against one published critic. Document two secondary sources in MLA.

College Junior (1500 words; AP: see unit standards): Apply a named critical approach (for example formalist, historicist, feminist, psychoanalytic or ecocritical) to Chapter III and its treatment of first impressions at the ball. State your method, show what it reveals in the chapter's characterization and theme, and identify where the text resists it.

College Senior (2000 words; AP: see unit standards): Develop a research argument that reads Chapter III as evidence for a larger claim about first impressions at the ball in Pride and Prejudice. Connect close reading of the chapter to the whole novel, engage at least four scholarly sources, and state precisely where your reading departs from theirs (Chicago style).

Graduate / PhD (2500 words; AP: see unit standards): Develop an original argument that reads Chapter III as a hinge in the novel's larger treatment of first impressions at the ball. Position your reading within a named critical conversation (for example formalist, historicist, psychoanalytic, feminist or postcolonial approaches), account for the textual history where relevant, and articulate the stakes of your intervention for scholarship on Pride and Prejudice.

SAT-style questions

1. They attacked him in various ways; with barefaced questions, ingenious suppositions, and distant surmises; but he eluded the skill of them all; and they were at last obliged to accept the secondhand intelligence of their neighbour Lady Lucas.

   As used in the text, what does the word "barefaced" most nearly mean?

   A. characteristic of false pride; having an exaggerated sense of self-importance

   B. giving careful attention to detail; hard to please; excessively concerned with cleanliness

   C. calmed

   D. open and bold, without any attempt to hide

2. Not all that Mrs. Bennet, however, with the assistance of her five daughters, could ask on the subject was sufficient to draw from her husband any satisfactory description of Mr. Bingley. They attacked him in various ways; with barefaced questions, ingenious suppositions, and distant surmises; but he eluded the skill of them all; and they were at last obliged to accept the secondhand intelligence of their neighbour Lady Lucas. Her report was highly favourable. Sir William had been delighted with him. He was quite young, wonderfully handsome, extremely agreeable, and to crown the whole, he meant to be at the next assembly with a large party. Nothing could be more delightful! To be fond of dancing was a certain step towards falling in love; and very lively hopes of Mr. Bingley's heart were entertained.

   Which choice best states a central concern of "Chapter III"?

   A. First impressions at the ball

   B. Disappointment and philosophy

   C. Confiding and consent

   D. Shameless return

SAT key: 1. D (open and bold, without any attempt to hide); 2. A (First impressions at the ball)

Lesson 5: Chapter IV

Focus: sisters and judgment

Objective: Students will analyze how characterization develops in “Chapter IV” by writing a claim-evidence-reasoning paragraph that cites at least 2 quotations from the section, and will score at least 80% on the section quiz.

Standards: AP: see the unit standards

Teacher only · spoilers

Jane confides her admiration of Bingley; Elizabeth praises Jane's habit of seeing good in everyone. The narrator contrasts Bingley's easy temper with Darcy's cleverness and reserve, and introduces Bingley's sisters as proud.

Background: Bingley's fortune came from trade, which the gentry viewed as less respectable than inherited land.

Significance: Elizabeth prides herself on judging character—setting up her later mistakes.

Lesson plan and lecture script (90 minutes)

0–8 min · Bell-ringer · You do (8 min)
Students write to the bell-ringer, then pair-share.
Is Jane's generosity in judging people a strength or a weakness? Write for five minutes. Starters: I think... because... / This connects to pride and prejudice because....
Prompt: Is Jane's generosity in judging people a strength or a weakness?
Sentence starters: I think… because… · This connects to pride and prejudice because…
Strong response: A strong response takes a position and anticipates this: Elizabeth names Jane's "candour" as a fault, foreshadowing her own errors.

8–18 min · Vocabulary with etymology notes · I do (10 min)
Five key words in context, with verified word histories.
Today's words: censuring — criticizing strongly; easiness — an easygoing, relaxed manner; endeared — made loved or liked; openness — frankness; honesty; preside — to act as host; to be in charge. “censuring”: Origin of “censure”: Latin censūra (“censor's office or assessment”). “openness”: Origin: an English formation from open + -ness.
Words: censuring: criticizing strongly · easiness: an easygoing, relaxed manner · endeared: made loved or liked · openness: frankness; honesty · preside: to act as host; to be in charge

18–28 min · Background and context · I do (10 min)
Mini-lecture (read or adapt the script).
Bingley's fortune came from trade, which the gentry viewed as less respectable than inherited land. Elizabeth prides herself on judging character—setting up her later mistakes. Characterization: Jane assumes the best of everyone; Elizabeth is sharper, but her sharpness can become prejudice. Irony: The narrator's account of the Bingley sisters ("very fine ladies") undercuts their pretensions. Watch for rank and condescension: Rank is displayed and enforced, above all at Rosings by Lady Catherine; Elizabeth refuses to be cowed. In this chapter: "more than they ought, and of associating with people of rank; and were therefore in every respect entitled to think well of" (Chapter IV, paragraph 11).

28–40 min · I do: modeled close reading · I do (12 min)
Model the close reading of the anchor quotation using the written think-aloud below.
First, meaning. I read "You never see a fault in anybody" slowly and put it in my own words: Elizabeth tells Jane that she likes everyone and never sees anyone's faults. Next, craft. I notice the sweeping "never" and "anybody," which exaggerate Jane's kindness. The strongest word is "fault": it names what Jane refuses to see. Then, effect. What is Elizabeth teasing Jane about here? My answer: Jane's goodness can be blindness; Elizabeth sees it, but she will learn she has her own blind spot in judging people.

> You never see a fault in anybody (Chapter IV, paragraph 7)

Think-aloud: First, meaning. I read "You never see a fault in anybody" slowly and put it in my own words: Elizabeth tells Jane that she likes everyone and never sees anyone's faults. Next, craft. I notice the sweeping "never" and "anybody," which exaggerate Jane's kindness. The strongest word is "fault": it names what Jane refuses to see. Then, effect. What is Elizabeth teasing Jane about here? My answer: Jane's goodness can be blindness; Elizabeth sees it, but she will learn she has her own blind spot in judging people.

40–55 min · We do: guided annotation · We do (15 min)
Guided analysis of a second quotation; expected answers given.
Ask: What words in this line stand out, and what do they suggest? Expected: The narrator's praise is ironic: "fine ladies" who are proud and conceited. This develops the theme of judging by appearances. Ask: How does this line connect to pride and prejudice? Expected: Elizabeth names Jane's "candour" as a fault, foreshadowing her own errors. (Ironic praise of the Bingley sisters.)

> They were in fact very fine ladies (Chapter IV, paragraph 11)

Ask: What words in this line stand out, and what do they suggest?
Expected answer: The narrator's praise is ironic: "fine ladies" who are proud and conceited. This develops the theme of judging by appearances.
Ask: How does this line connect to pride and prejudice?
Expected answer: Elizabeth names Jane's "candour" as a fault, foreshadowing her own errors. (Ironic praise of the Bingley sisters.)

55–70 min · You do: independent annotation · You do (15 min)
Independent annotation and a claim-evidence-reasoning paragraph (exemplar given).
Annotate the chapter for characterization, irony (three marks with a margin note each), then write one claim-evidence-reasoning paragraph: what does this chapter suggest about sisters and judgment? Then start your writing prompt at your assigned level (HS Sophomore: Analyze how Chapter IV develops the idea of sisters and judgment. Make a precise claim, support it with at least three pieces of textual evidence, and explain how the author's use of characterization and point of view shapes that idea. Address one possible counterclaim.) Exemplar: The contrast between Jane and Elizabeth introduces the novel's interest in how we judge others. When the text says "You never see a fault in anybody" (Chapter IV, paragraph 7), it shows this directly. Elizabeth teases that Jane will "never see a fault in anybody," implying her own judgment is more reliable; the novel will test that confidence.
Task: Annotate the chapter for characterization, irony (three marks with a margin note each), then write one claim-evidence-reasoning paragraph: what does this chapter suggest about sisters and judgment? Then start your writing prompt at your assigned level (HS Sophomore: Analyze how Chapter IV develops the idea of sisters and judgment. Make a precise claim, support it with at least three pieces of textual evidence, and explain how the author's use of characterization and point of view shapes that idea. Address one possible counterclaim.)
Exemplar: The contrast between Jane and Elizabeth introduces the novel's interest in how we judge others. When the text says "You never see a fault in anybody" (Chapter IV, paragraph 7), it shows this directly. Elizabeth teases that Jane will "never see a fault in anybody," implying her own judgment is more reliable; the novel will test that confidence.

70–80 min · Discussion · We do (10 min)
Structured discussion from the 30 tiered questions, with facilitation notes.
Anchor question: Is Jane's generosity in judging people a strength or a weakness? Ask which sister's way of judging people is better, and whether it depends on the situation.
Anchor question: Is Jane's generosity in judging people a strength or a weakness?
Facilitation: Ask which sister's way of judging people is better, and whether it depends on the situation.

80–87 min · Exit ticket / chapter quiz · You do (7 min)
Chapter quiz in the app and an exit ticket (answer given).
Chapter quiz in the app, then: In one sentence, what does this chapter suggest about sisters and judgment? Support it with one short quotation. Model answer: The contrast between Jane and Elizabeth introduces the novel's interest in how we judge others. ("You never see a fault in anybody", Chapter IV, paragraph 7). Accept any defensible claim backed by a quotation from the chapter; the answer key for the quiz is in the Quiz section.
Exit ticket: In one sentence, what does this chapter suggest about sisters and judgment? Support it with one short quotation.
Answer: Model answer: The contrast between Jane and Elizabeth introduces the novel's interest in how we judge others. ("You never see a fault in anybody", Chapter IV, paragraph 7). Accept any defensible claim backed by a quotation from the chapter; the answer key for the quiz is in the Quiz section.

> 87–90 min · Closure · I do (3 min)
> Summarize the lesson and preview the next reading.
> Today we saw how characterization shapes sisters and judgment. Key takeaway: Elizabeth names Jane's "candour" as a fault, foreshadowing her own errors.

Total: 90 minutes.

Teacher analysis (spoilers)

Literary elements

- Characterization: Jane assumes the best of everyone; Elizabeth is sharper, but her sharpness can become prejudice.
- Irony: The narrator's account of the Bingley sisters ("very fine ladies") undercuts their pretensions.

Themes and how they develop

- pride and prejudice: Elizabeth names Jane's "candour" as a fault, foreshadowing her own errors.

Symbols and motifs

- rank and condescension: Rank is displayed and enforced, above all at Rosings by Lady Catherine; Elizabeth refuses to be cowed. In this chapter: “more than they ought, and of associating with people of rank; and were therefore in every respect entitled to think well of” (Chapter IV, paragraph 11).
- silence and reserve: What characters leave unsaid (Darcy's reserve, Jane's composure, Elizabeth's secrets) drives misunderstanding. In this chapter: “Elizabeth listened in silence, but was not convinced; their behaviour at the assembly had not” (Chapter IV, paragraph 11).

Key quotations (checked against the reading text)

- “You never see a fault in anybody” (Chapter IV, paragraph 7) Elizabeth on Jane: a criticism and a compliment.
- “They were in fact very fine ladies” (Chapter IV, paragraph 11) Ironic praise of the Bingley sisters.
- “Between him and Darcy there was a very steady friendship, in spite of a great opposition of character” (Chapter IV, paragraph 14) Contrast of Bingley and Darcy.

Model claim-evidence-reasoning

Claim: The contrast between Jane and Elizabeth introduces the novel's interest in how we judge others.
Evidence: “You never see a fault in anybody” (Chapter IV, paragraph 7)
Reasoning: Elizabeth teases that Jane will "never see a fault in anybody," implying her own judgment is more reliable; the novel will test that confidence.

Vocabulary with etymology notes

Word		In context	Word history

	Definition (in this sentence)
censuring (verb)	criticizing strongly	"I would wish not to be hasty in censuring anyone; but I always speak what I think."	"censuring": Origin of "censure": Latin censūra ("censor's office or assessment"). (Liber et Libri origin note, https://en.wiktionary.org/wiki/censure#Etymology)
easiness (noun)	an easygoing, relaxed manner	Bingley was endeared to Darcy by the easiness, openness, ductility of his temper, though no disposition could offer a greater contrast to his own, and though with his own he never appeared dissatisfied.
endeared (verb)	made loved or liked	Bingley was endeared to Darcy by the easiness, openness, ductility of his temper, though no disposition could offer a greater contrast to his own, and though with his own he never appeared dissatisfied.
openness (noun)	frankness; honesty	Bingley was endeared to Darcy by the easiness, openness, ductility of his temper, though no disposition could offer a greater contrast to his own, and though with his own he never appeared dissatisfied.	"openness": Origin: an English formation from open + -ness. (Liber et Libri origin note, https://en.wiktionary.org/wiki/openness#Etymology) preside (verb)	to act as host; to be in charge	His sisters were very anxious for his having an estate of his own; but though he was now established only as a tenant, Miss Bingley was by no means unwilling to preside at his table, nor was Mrs.
deficient (adjective)	inadequate in amount or degree	They were in fact very fine ladies; not deficient in good humour when they were pleased, nor in the power of being agreeable where they chose it; but proud and conceited.	"deficient": Origin: Latin deficiens. (Liber et Libri origin note, https://en.wiktionary.org/wiki/deficient#Etymology)
gallantry (noun)	polite attention to women	No thanks to his gallantry for that.
dissatisfied (adjective)	not pleased	Bingley was endeared to Darcy by the easiness, openness, ductility of his temper, though no disposition could offer a greater contrast to his own, and though with his own he never appeared dissatisfied.
accidental (adjective)	happening by chance	Bingley had not been of age two years, when he was tempted by an accidental	"accidental": Origin: Anglo-Norman accidentel; earlier Late Latin recommendation to look at Netherfield House.	accidēntālis. (Liber et Libri origin note, https://en.wiktionary.org/wiki/accidental#Etymology)

breeding (noun)	manners shown by one's upbringing	"He is just what a young man ought to be," said she, "sensible, good humoured, lively; and I never saw such happy manners!—so much ease, with such perfect good breeding!"	"breeding": Origin: an English formation from breed + -ing. (Liber et Libri origin note, https://en.wiktionary.org/wiki/breeding#Etymology)

Discussion questions

1. Is Jane's generosity in judging people a strength or a weakness?
2. Where does characterization appear in this chapter, and what effect does it have? Point to one passage.
3. How does this chapter connect to the book's larger concern with class and social mobility?

Classroom discussion questions (30, tiered)

Wait time after every question (3 s for DOK 1, 5 s for DOK 2, 8 to 10 s for DOK 3 and 4); think-pair-share on DOK 3 and 4; answer each response with a follow-up probe; close with student-generated questions. Focus sets by rigor level: Scaffolded support: 1, 2, 3, 4, 5, 6, 11, 12, 13, 14, 21, 22; HS Freshman: 1, 2, 3, 4, 5, 12, 13, 14, 15, 22, 23, 24; HS Sophomore: 1, 2, 3, 4, 13, 14, 15, 16, 17, 23, 24, 25; HS Junior: 1, 2, 3, 14, 15, 16, 17, 18, 24, 25, 26, 27; HS Senior: 1, 2, 3, 15, 16, 17, 18, 25, 26, 27, 28, 29; AP: 1, 2, 16, 17, 18, 19, 20, 26, 27, 28, 29, 30; College Freshman: 1, 2, 17, 18, 19, 20, 21, 22, 27, 28, 29, 30; College Sophomore: 1, 2, 11, 18, 19, 20, 21, 22, 23, 28, 29, 30; College Junior: 1, 11, 12, 19, 20, 21, 22, 23, 24, 25, 29, 30; College Senior: 1, 11, 12, 13, 20, 21, 22, 23, 24, 25, 26, 30; Graduate / PhD: 1, 11, 12, 13, 21, 22, 23, 24, 25, 26, 27, 28

Literal / recall

1. What is Jane's habit in judging others? [DOK 1 · coldCallWithSupport · wait 3 s · AP: unit standards] Look for: She sees good in everyone
2. Where did Bingley's family fortune come from? [DOK 1 · turnAndTalk · wait 3 s · AP: unit standards] Look for: Trade
3. How does the narrator describe Darcy's mind? [DOK 1 · coldCallWithSupport · wait 3 s · AP: unit standards] Look for: Clever but reserved
4. How are Bingley's sisters portrayed? [DOK 1 · turnAndTalk · wait 3 s · AP: unit standards] Look for: Proud and conceited
5. What does Elizabeth pride herself on? [DOK 1 · coldCallWithSupport · wait 3 s · AP: unit standards] Look for: Judging character
6. Retell the three most important events of "Chapter IV" in order, in one sentence each. [DOK 1 · turnAndTalk · wait 3 s · AP: unit standards] Look for: Jane confides her admiration of Bingley; Elizabeth praises Jane's habit of seeing good in everyone. The narrator contrasts Bingley's easy temper with Darcy's cleverness and reserve, and introduces Bingley's sisters as proud.
7. Which characters appear or are mentioned in "Chapter IV"? Name two and one thing each says or does. [DOK 1 · coldCallWithSupport · wait 3 s · AP: unit standards] Look for: Names and actions taken from the chapter; check against the teacher summary.
8. Where and when does "Chapter IV" take place? Point to the line that tells you. [DOK 1 · turnAndTalk · wait 3 s · AP: unit standards] Look for: A place/time detail quoted from the chapter.

9. Reread: ""I would wish not to be hasty in censuring anyone; but I always speak what I think."" What does "censuring" mean here, and what is literally happening in this line? [DOK 1 · turnAndTalk · wait 3 s · AP: unit standards] Look for: censuring: criticizing strongly.
10. Reread: "Bingley was endeared to Darcy by the easiness, openness, ductility of his temper, though no disposition could offer a greater contrast to his own, and though with his own he never appeared dissatisfied." What does "easiness" mean here, and what is literally happening in this line? [DOK 1 · turnAndTalk · wait 3 s · AP: unit standards] Look for: easiness: an easygoing, relaxed manner.

Inferential / analytical

1. What does "Chapter IV" suggest about sisters and judgment? State the inference and the line that supports it. [DOK 2 · thinkPairShare · wait 5 s · AP-LIT.LAN] Look for: Elizabeth prides herself on judging character—setting up her later mistakes.
2. Find one example of characterization in this chapter. What does it reveal that a plain statement would not? [DOK 2 · followUp · wait 5 s · AP-LIT.CHR] Look for: Look for what characters say, do and think, and how others react to them.
3. How does the point of view in this chapter shape what we understand about sisters and judgment? [DOK 3 · thinkPairShare · wait 8 s · AP-LIT.NAR] Look for: Look for who is telling the story and what that narrator can and cannot know.
   Answer guidance: A defensible line of argument: The contrast between Jane and Elizabeth introduces the novel's interest in how we judge others. Useful evidence: "You never see a fault in anybody" (Chapter IV, paragraph 7): Elizabeth on Jane: a criticism and a compliment. Theme link: Elizabeth names Jane's "candour" as a fault, foreshadowing her own errors. Credit any position that is supported by quotation and reasoning; push one-sided answers to address the strongest counterpoint.
4. In the passage that begins ""Did not you?", why might Austen have chosen these particular words? Pick two and explain their connotations. [DOK 2 · followUp · wait 5 s · AP-LIT.FIG] Look for: Diction analysis of two words in the anchor passage.
5. What causes the main turn in "Chapter IV", and what effect is it likely to have on what follows? [DOK 2 · followUp · wait 5 s · AP-LIT.STR] Look for: Jane confides her admiration of Bingley; Elizabeth praises Jane's habit of seeing good in everyone. The narrator contrasts Bingley's easy temper with Darcy's cleverness and reserve, and introduces Bingley's sisters as proud.
6. How does "Chapter IV" build on "Chapter III"? Name one link of cause and effect. [DOK 3 · thinkPairShare · wait 8 s · AP-LIT.STR] Look for: A causal or structural link between this and the previous chapter.
   Answer guidance: A defensible line of argument: The contrast between Jane and Elizabeth introduces the novel's interest in how we judge others. Useful evidence: "They were in fact very fine ladies" (Chapter IV, paragraph 11): Ironic praise of the Bingley sisters. Theme link: Elizabeth names Jane's "candour" as a fault, foreshadowing her own errors. Credit any position that is supported by quotation and reasoning; push one-sided answers to address the strongest counterpoint.
7. What can we infer about a character's motives from what they say and do here, as opposed to what they claim? [DOK 3 · followUp · wait 8 s · AP-LIT.CHR] Look for: An inference about motive supported by a quoted line.
   Answer guidance: A defensible line of argument: The contrast between Jane and Elizabeth introduces the novel's interest in how we judge others. Useful evidence: "Between him and Darcy there was a very steady friendship, in spite of a great opposition of character" (Chapter IV, paragraph 14): Contrast of Bingley and Darcy. On characterization: Jane assumes the best of everyone; Elizabeth is sharper, but her sharpness can become prejudice. Credit any position that is supported by quotation and reasoning; push one-sided answers to address the strongest counterpoint.

8. The bell-ringer asked: “Is Jane's generosity in judging people a strength or a weakness?” Now that we have read closely, how would you revise your first answer, and which line changed your mind? [DOK 2 · thinkPairShare · wait 5 s · AP-LIT.LAN] Look for: A revised answer anchored in the text.
9. Where does theme appear, and how does it connect this chapter to the larger concern with class and social mobility? [DOK 3 · followUp · wait 8 s · AP-LIT.LAN] Look for: Look for statements or moments that connect to the book's big ideas.

   Answer guidance: A defensible line of argument: The contrast between Jane and Elizabeth introduces the novel's interest in how we judge others. Useful evidence: “You never see a fault in anybody” (Chapter IV, paragraph 7): Elizabeth on Jane: a criticism and a compliment. Theme link: Elizabeth names Jane's "candour" as a fault, foreshadowing her own errors. Credit any position that is supported by quotation and reasoning; push one-sided answers to address the strongest counterpoint.
10. Background: Bingley's fortune came from trade, which the gentry viewed as less respectable than inherited land. How does knowing this change the way you read one moment in the chapter? [DOK 3 · thinkPairShare · wait 8 s · AP-LIT.SET] Look for: A specific moment reread in light of the context.

    Answer guidance: A defensible line of argument: The contrast between Jane and Elizabeth introduces the novel's interest in how we judge others. Useful evidence: “They were in fact very fine ladies” (Chapter IV, paragraph 11): Ironic praise of the Bingley sisters. Theme link: Elizabeth names Jane's "candour" as a fault, foreshadowing her own errors. Credit any position that is supported by quotation and reasoning; push one-sided answers to address the strongest counterpoint.

Evaluative / synthesis / creative

1. A critic might argue: “Elizabeth prides herself on judging character—setting up her later mistakes.” How far do you agree? Take a stand and defend it with two lines from the chapter. [DOK 3 · fourCorners · wait 8 s · AP-LIT.LAN] Look for: A defended position with evidence and one counterpoint.

   Answer guidance: A defensible line of argument: The contrast between Jane and Elizabeth introduces the novel's interest in how we judge others. Useful evidence: “Between him and Darcy there was a very steady friendship, in spite of a great opposition of character” (Chapter IV, paragraph 14): Contrast of Bingley and Darcy. Theme link: Elizabeth names Jane's "candour" as a fault, foreshadowing her own errors. Credit any position that is supported by quotation and reasoning; push one-sided answers to address the strongest counterpoint.
2. Which character in this chapter acts most wisely, and which least? Judge them by a standard you name. [DOK 3 · thinkPairShare · wait 8 s · AP-LIT.CHR, AP-LIT.LAN] Look for: An evaluation using an explicit criterion and evidence.

   Answer guidance: A defensible line of argument: The contrast between Jane and Elizabeth introduces the novel's interest in how we judge others. Useful evidence: “You never see a fault in anybody” (Chapter IV, paragraph 7): Elizabeth on Jane: a criticism and a compliment. On characterization: Jane assumes the best of everyone; Elizabeth is sharper, but her sharpness can become prejudice. Credit any position that is supported by quotation and reasoning; push one-sided answers to address the strongest counterpoint.
3. Rewrite one moment of “Chapter IV” from the point of view of a different character. What does the new angle reveal or hide about sisters and judgment? [DOK 4 · thinkPairShare · wait 8 s · AP-LIT.LAN, AP-LIT.NAR] Look for: A creative product with a rationale tied to the text.

Answer guidance: A defensible line of argument: The contrast between Jane and Elizabeth introduces the novel's interest in how we judge others. Useful evidence: “They were in fact very fine ladies” (Chapter IV, paragraph 11): Ironic praise of the Bingley sisters. Theme link: Elizabeth names Jane's "candour" as a fault, foreshadowing her own errors. Credit any position that is supported by quotation and reasoning; push one-sided answers to address the strongest counterpoint.

4. Write three questions of your own about “Chapter IV”: one recall, one “why/how”, and one “should/what if”. Trade with a partner and answer theirs. [DOK 3 · studentGenerated · wait 8 s · AP-LIT.LAN] Look for: Student-generated questions at three levels.

   Answer guidance: A defensible line of argument: The contrast between Jane and Elizabeth introduces the novel's interest in how we judge others. Useful evidence: “Between him and Darcy there was a very steady friendship, in spite of a great opposition of character” (Chapter IV, paragraph 14): Contrast of Bingley and Darcy. Theme link: Elizabeth names Jane's "candour" as a fault, foreshadowing her own errors. Credit any position that is supported by quotation and reasoning; push one-sided answers to address the strongest counterpoint.

5. Connect this chapter to women's limited choices: is the link strong or weak so far? What would Austen need to show next to strengthen it? [DOK 4 · socraticCircle · wait 8 s · AP-LIT.LAN] Look for: A judgment of thematic development across the work.

   Answer guidance: A defensible line of argument: The contrast between Jane and Elizabeth introduces the novel's interest in how we judge others. Useful evidence: “You never see a fault in anybody” (Chapter IV, paragraph 7): Elizabeth on Jane: a criticism and a compliment. Theme link: Elizabeth names Jane's "candour" as a fault, foreshadowing her own errors. Credit any position that is supported by quotation and reasoning; push one-sided answers to address the strongest counterpoint.

6. Is the characterization in this chapter effective, or does it feel heavy-handed? Evaluate it as a reader would in a review. [DOK 3 · fourCorners · wait 8 s · AP-LIT.CHR, AP-LIT.LAN] Look for: An evaluative judgment with criteria and evidence.

   Answer guidance: A defensible line of argument: The contrast between Jane and Elizabeth introduces the novel's interest in how we judge others. Useful evidence: “They were in fact very fine ladies” (Chapter IV, paragraph 11): Ironic praise of the Bingley sisters. On characterization: Jane assumes the best of everyone; Elizabeth is sharper, but her sharpness can become prejudice. Credit any position that is supported by quotation and reasoning; push one-sided answers to address the strongest counterpoint.

7. Compare how “Chapter IV” treats sisters and judgment with how another text, film or event you know treats a similar idea. What does Pride and Prejudice see that the other misses? [DOK 4 · socraticCircle · wait 8 s · AP-LIT.LAN] Look for: A cross-text synthesis.

   Answer guidance: A defensible line of argument: The contrast between Jane and Elizabeth introduces the novel's interest in how we judge others. Useful evidence: “Between him and Darcy there was a very steady friendship, in spite of a great opposition of character” (Chapter IV, paragraph 14): Contrast of Bingley and Darcy. Theme link: Elizabeth names Jane's "candour" as a fault, foreshadowing her own errors. Credit any position that is supported by quotation and reasoning; push one-sided answers to address the strongest counterpoint.

8. Predict what “Chapter V” will bring, using two clues from this chapter. After reading, evaluate your prediction. [DOK 3 · thinkPairShare · wait 8 s · AP-LIT.LAN, AP-LIT.STR] Look for: A prediction or judgment justified with textual clues.

   Answer guidance: A defensible line of argument: The contrast between Jane and Elizabeth introduces the novel's interest in how we judge others. Useful evidence: “You never see a fault in anybody” (Chapter IV, paragraph 7): Elizabeth on Jane: a criticism and a compliment. Theme link: Elizabeth names Jane's "candour" as a fault, foreshadowing her own errors. Credit any position that is supported by quotation and reasoning; push one-sided answers to address the strongest counterpoint.

9. Design a one-paragraph modern adaptation of this chapter (setting, characters, conflict). What must stay the same for it to still be about sisters and judgment? [DOK 4 · thinkPairShare · wait 8 s · AP-LIT.LAN] Look for: A creative transfer that keeps the core idea.

   Answer guidance: A defensible line of argument: The contrast between Jane and Elizabeth introduces the novel's interest in how we judge others. Useful evidence: “They were in fact very fine ladies” (Chapter IV, paragraph 11): Ironic praise of the Bingley sisters. Theme link: Elizabeth names Jane's "candour" as a fault, foreshadowing her own errors. Credit any position that is supported by quotation and reasoning; push one-sided answers to address the strongest counterpoint.

10. What question would you most like to ask Jane Austen about this chapter, and what answer do you think the text itself gives? [DOK 4 · studentGenerated · wait 8 s · AP-LIT.LAN] Look for: A student-generated question answered from evidence.

    Answer guidance: A defensible line of argument: The contrast between Jane and Elizabeth introduces the novel's interest in how we judge others. Useful evidence: “Between him and Darcy there was a very steady friendship, in spite of a great opposition of character” (Chapter IV, paragraph 14): Contrast of Bingley and Darcy. Theme link: Elizabeth names Jane's "candour" as a fault, foreshadowing her own errors. Credit any position that is supported by quotation and reasoning; push one-sided answers to address the strongest counterpoint.

Annotation focus

- Characterization: look for what characters say, do and think, and how others react to them (anchor passage in the We do segment)
- Also notice Point of view: who is telling the story and what that narrator can and cannot know
- Also notice Theme: statements or moments that connect to the book's big ideas

Chapter quiz: item bank (all eleven rigor versions)

1. [fill · recall · DOK 1] Complete the quotation from Chapter IV, paragraph 14: “Between him and Darcy there was a very steady _____, in spite of a great opposition of character”
   Key: friendship
2. [fill · recall · DOK 1] Fill in the blank with the vocabulary word that fits: “No thanks to his _____ for that.”
   Word bank: endeared, easiness, gallantry, censuring
   Key: gallantry
3. [fill · recall · DOK 1] Fill in the blank with the vocabulary word that fits: “Bingley was endeared to Darcy by the easiness, openness, ductility of his temper, though no disposition could offer a greater contrast to his own, and though with his own he never appeared _____.” Word bank: endeared, censuring, dissatisfied, easiness
   Key: dissatisfied
4. [mc · recall · DOK 1] What is Jane's habit in judging others?
   A. She judges by wealth
   B. She sees good in everyone

C. She distrusts everyone

D. She gossips

Key: B (She sees good in everyone)

5. [mc · recall · DOK 1] How are Bingley's sisters portrayed?

   A. Kind to all

   B. Proud and conceited

   C. Shy and modest

   D. Poor

   Key: B (Proud and conceited)

6. [mc · recall · DOK 1] Where did Bingley's family fortune come from?

   A. Trade

   B. Military service

   C. Gambling

   D. Land

   Key: A (Trade)

7. [mc · recall · DOK 1] What does Elizabeth pride herself on?

   A. Judging character

   B. Her beauty

   C. Her wealth

   D. Her music

   Key: A (Judging character)

8. [mc · recall · DOK 1] How does the narrator describe Darcy's mind?

   A. Foolish

   B. Simple

   C. Clever but reserved

   D. Lazy

   Key: C (Clever but reserved)

9. [mc · recall · DOK 1] In the line "I would wish not to be hasty in censuring anyone; but I always speak what I think.", what does "censuring" most nearly mean?

   A. helped; given an advantage

   B. criticizing strongly

   C. politely, with good manners

   D. looking at; regarding

   Key: B (criticizing strongly)

10. [fill · recall · DOK 1] Fill in the blank with the vocabulary word that fits: "His sisters were very anxious for his having an estate of his own; but though he was now established only as a tenant, Miss Bingley was by no means unwilling to _____ at his table, nor was Mrs." Word bank: preside, endeared, censuring, easiness

    Key: preside

11. [short · inference · DOK 2] What can you infer from this line? “They were in fact very fine ladies” (Chapter IV, paragraph 11) Answer in two or three sentences with one detail.
    Sample answer: Ironic praise of the Bingley sisters. The evidence is “They were in fact very fine ladies” (Chapter IV, paragraph 11). This develops pride and prejudice: Elizabeth names Jane's "candour" as a fault, foreshadowing her own errors.
12. [mc · inference · DOK 2] Which choice best states a central concern of “Chapter IV”?
    A. Self-recognition
    B. Family uproar
    C. Sisters and judgment
    D. Music, wit and manners

    Key: C (Sisters and judgment)
13. [mc · analysis · DOK 3] Which literary element does this describe in “Chapter IV”? Jane assumes the best of everyone; Elizabeth is sharper, but her sharpness can become prejudice.
    A. Characterization
    B. Alliteration
    C. Metaphor
    D. Theme

    Key: A (Characterization)
14. [mc · analysis · DOK 3] Which literary element does this describe in “Chapter IV”? The narrator's account of the Bingley sisters (‘very fine ladies’) undercuts their pretensions.
    A. Diction / vocabulary
    B. Irony
    C. Setting
    D. Symbolism

    Key: B (Irony)
15. [short · analysis · DOK 3] Claim: The contrast between Jane and Elizabeth introduces the novel's interest in how we judge others. Explain how this evidence supports the claim: “You never see a fault in anybody” (Chapter IV, paragraph 7).
    Sample answer: Elizabeth teases that Jane will "never see a fault in anybody," implying her own judgment is more reliable; the novel will test that confidence. The evidence is “You never see a fault in anybody” (Chapter IV, paragraph 7) — Elizabeth on Jane: a criticism and a compliment. This develops pride and prejudice: Elizabeth names Jane's "candour" as a fault, foreshadowing her own errors.
16. [short · synthesis · DOK 4] Synthesis: trace how pride and prejudice develops from Chapter III to Chapter IV. Use one quotation from each.
    Sample answer: Earlier, in Chapter III, paragraph 13, the text reads “She is tolerable; but not handsome enough to tempt me” — Darcy's insult; the source of Elizabeth's prejudice. In Chapter IV, “You never see a fault in anybody” (Chapter IV, paragraph 7) — Elizabeth on Jane: a criticism and a compliment. Elizabeth names Jane's "candour" as a fault, foreshadowing her own errors.
17. [fill · recall · DOK 1] Complete the quotation from Chapter IV, paragraph 1: “When Jane and Elizabeth were alone, the former, who had been cautious in her praise of Mr. Bingley before, _____ to her sister how very much she admired him." Word bank: ostentation, collection, seeing, expressed

Key: expressed

18. [fill · recall · DOK 1] Complete the quotation from Chapter IV, paragraph 9: "But to be candid without _____ or design—to take the good of everybody's character and make it still better, and say nothing of the bad—belongs to you alone." Word bank: pleasing, ostentation, immediately, collection

    Key: ostentation

19. [mc · recall · DOK 1] Which word completes this sentence from Chapter IV, paragraph 5? "He could not help _____ that you were about five times as pretty as every other woman in the room."

    A. collection
    B. pleasing
    C. seeing
    D. general

    Key: C (seeing)

20. [fill · recall · DOK 1] Complete the quotation from Chapter IV, paragraph 14: "In that respect his friend had greatly the _____." Word bank: advantage, immediately, flattered, pleasing

    Key: advantage

21. [mc · recall · DOK 1] Which word completes this sentence from Chapter IV, paragraph 12? "Mr. Bingley _____ property to the amount of nearly a hundred thousand pounds from his father, who had intended to purchase an estate, but did not live to do it."

    A. seeing
    B. characteristic
    C. immediately
    D. inherited

    Key: D (inherited)

22. [short · inference · DOK 2] What can you infer from this line? "You never see a fault in anybody" (Chapter IV, paragraph 7) Answer in two or three sentences with one detail.

    Sample answer: Elizabeth on Jane: a criticism and a compliment. The evidence is "You never see a fault in anybody" (Chapter IV, paragraph 7). This develops pride and prejudice: Elizabeth names Jane's "candour" as a fault, foreshadowing her own errors.

23. [mc · inference · DOK 2] Which of these passages comes earliest in Chapter IV?

    A. "But that is one great difference between us."
    B. "When Jane and Elizabeth were alone, the former, who had been cautious in her praise of Mr. Bingley before, expressed to her sister how very…"
    C. "I was very much flattered by his asking me to dance a second time."
    D. "He is also handsome,' replied Elizabeth, 'which a young man ought likewise to be, if he possibly can."

    Key: B ("When Jane and Elizabeth were alone, the former, who had been cautious in her praise of Mr. Bingley before, expressed to her sister how very…")

24. [short · inference · DOK 2] What does this passage from Chapter IV, paragraph 12 reveal about the character or situation? "Mr. Bingley intended it likewise, and sometimes made choice of his county" Answer in two or three sentences with one detail.

    Sample answer: The passage (Chapter IV, paragraph 12) shows the situation turning on first impressions and prejudice:

Elizabeth names Jane's "candour" as a fault, foreshadowing her own errors. The words “sometimes” and “intended” are the proof, because they show how the moment looks to the people in it. They suggest more than the narrator states outright.

25. [short · analysis · DOK 3] Analyze how the word choice in this passage from Chapter IV, paragraph 5 shapes its tone: “But that is one great difference between us.” Pick two words and explain their effect.
    Sample answer: The words “difference” and “between” (Chapter IV, paragraph 5) make the tone heavy and deliberate rather than neutral. That weight points the reader to pride and self-knowledge: Elizabeth names Jane's "candour" as a fault, foreshadowing her own errors. The author chooses them so the moment feels significant instead of passing.

26. [short · analysis · DOK 3] Analyze how the word choice in this passage from Chapter IV, paragraph 14 shapes its tone: “On the strength of Darcy’s regard Bingley had the firmest reliance, and of his judgment the highest opinion.” Pick two words and explain their effect.
    Sample answer: The words “reliance” and “strength” (Chapter IV, paragraph 14) make the tone heavy and deliberate rather than neutral. That weight points the reader to class and social mobility: Elizabeth names Jane's "candour" as a fault, foreshadowing her own errors. The author chooses them so the moment feels significant instead of passing.

27. [short · analysis · DOK 3] Analyze how the word choice in this passage from Chapter IV, paragraph 16 shapes its tone: “Miss Bennet was therefore established as a sweet girl, and their brother felt authorised by such commendation to think of her as he chose.” Pick two words and explain their effect.
    Sample answer: The words “commendation” and “established” (Chapter IV, paragraph 16) make the tone heavy and deliberate rather than neutral. That weight points the reader to pride and self-knowledge: Elizabeth names Jane's "candour" as a fault, foreshadowing her own errors. The author chooses them so the moment feels significant instead of passing.

28. [short · synthesis · DOK 4] Connect this passage from Chapter IV, paragraph 7 to the story's treatment of women's limited choices: “All the world are good and agreeable in your eyes.” Use one other moment from the story as well.
    Sample answer: This passage (Chapter IV, paragraph 7) develops women's limited choices: Elizabeth names Jane's "candour" as a fault, foreshadowing her own errors. Its words “agreeable” carry that idea into this moment. The same concern returns in “Affectation of candour is common enough;—one meets it everywhere.” (Chapter IV, paragraph 9), so the two passages read as a pattern, not a single moment. Together they show the story treating women's limited choices as central.

29. [short · synthesis · DOK 4] Connect this passage from Chapter IV, paragraph 9 to the story's treatment of marriage and money: “I know you do; and it is that which makes the wonder.” Use one other moment from the story as well.
    Sample answer: This passage (Chapter IV, paragraph 9) develops marriage and money: Elizabeth names Jane's "candour" as a fault, foreshadowing her own errors. Its words “wonder” carry that idea into this moment. The same concern returns in “Miss Bingley is to live with her brother and keep his house; and I am much mistaken if we shall not find a very…” (Chapter IV, paragraph 10), so the two passages read as a pattern, not a single moment. Together they show the story treating marriage and money as central.

30. [fill · recall · DOK 1 · AP: AP-LIT.STR] Complete the quotation from Chapter IV, paragraph 11: “They were in fact very fine _____”
    Key: ladies

31. [short · analysis · DOK 3 · AP: AP-LIT.FIG] Analyze the word choice in “Between him and Darcy there was a very steady friendship, in spite of a great opposition of character” (Chapter IV, paragraph 14). Pick two words and explain what they suggest.
    Sample answer: Contrast of Bingley and Darcy. The evidence is “Between him and Darcy there was a very steady friendship, in spite of a great opposition of character” (Chapter IV, paragraph 14). This develops pride and prejudice: Elizabeth names

Jane's "candour" as a fault, foreshadowing her own errors. The words “opposition” and “friendship” carry that meaning: they are the charged choices in the line, and changing either would soften the effect.

32. [fill · recall · DOK 1 · AP: AP-LIT.STR] Complete the quotation from Chapter IV, paragraph 7: “You never see a fault in _____”

    Key: anybody

33. [short · synthesis · DOK 4 · AP: AP-LIT.FIG] Close reading: how do the diction and syntax of “They were in fact very fine ladies” (Chapter IV, paragraph 11) shape its meaning? Consider a second, competing reading.

    Sample answer: Ironic praise of the Bingley sisters. The evidence is “They were in fact very fine ladies” (Chapter IV, paragraph 11). This develops pride and prejudice: Elizabeth names Jane's "candour" as a fault, foreshadowing her own errors. The words “ladies” and “fact” carry that meaning: they are the charged choices in the line, and changing either would soften the effect. Elizabeth teases that Jane will "never see a fault in anybody," implying her own judgment is more reliable; the novel will test that confidence.

34. [short · synthesis · DOK 4 · Dual Credit (Indiana College Core): ICC-WC-1.5] Close reading: how do the diction and syntax of “You never see a fault in anybody” (Chapter IV, paragraph 7) shape its meaning? Consider a second, competing reading.

    Sample answer: Elizabeth on Jane: a criticism and a compliment. The evidence is “You never see a fault in anybody” (Chapter IV, paragraph 7). This develops pride and prejudice: Elizabeth names Jane's "candour" as a fault, foreshadowing her own errors. The words “anybody” and “never” carry that meaning: they are the charged choices in the line, and changing either would soften the effect. Elizabeth teases that Jane will "never see a fault in anybody," implying her own judgment is more reliable; the novel will test that confidence.

35. [mc · inference · DOK 2 · Program outcome: LeL-C3-LIT-1] What does this passage most clearly show? “Between him and Darcy there was a very steady friendship, in spite of a great opposition of character” (Chapter IV, paragraph 14)

    A. Public opinion shifts on manners, not character.
    B. Collins's letter: hypocrisy dressed as piety.
    C. Contrast of Bingley and Darcy.
    D. The chapter opens with the letter she asked for.

    Key: C (Contrast of Bingley and Darcy.)

36. [mc · inference · DOK 2 · Program outcome: LeL-C4-LIT-1] What does this passage most clearly show? “They were in fact very fine ladies” (Chapter IV, paragraph 11)

    A. Opening reversal: he has done what he pretended to refuse.
    B. The chapter opens by clearing the stage for new arrivals.
    C. Jane's letter: the fear that Wickham will not marry Lydia, which would ruin her.
    D. Ironic praise of the Bingley sisters.

    Key: D (Ironic praise of the Bingley sisters.)

37. [mc · recall · DOK 1 · Program outcome: LeL-GR-LIT-1] In the line “Bingley was endeared to Darcy by the easiness, openness, ductility of his temper, though no disposition could offer a greater contrast to his own, and though with his own he never appeared dissatisfied.”, what does “openness” most nearly mean?

    A. made loved or liked
    B. an easygoing, relaxed manner
    C. criticizing strongly

D. frankness; honesty

Key: D (frankness; honesty)

Rigor version	Items (in order)	Mix
Scaffolded support	1, 2, 3, 4, 5, 6, 7, 8, 9, 10, 11, 12, 13, 14, 15, 16	recall 10, inference 2, analysis 3, synthesis 1
HS Freshman	17, 5, 8, 18, 19, 9, 20, 21, 22, 12, 23, 24, 25, 14, 26, 16	recall 8, inference 4, analysis 3, synthesis 1
HS Sophomore	21, 5, 19, 18, 4, 9, 2, 7, 23, 24, 12, 14, 27, 13, 28, 29	recall 8, inference 3, analysis 3, synthesis 2
HS Junior	8, 30, 5, 4, 20, 7, 6, 24, 12, 23, 26, 25, 27, 14, 29, 28	recall 7, inference 3, analysis 4, synthesis 2
HS Senior	8, 19, 6, 30, 20, 9, 12, 24, 23, 25, 13, 31, 27, 28, 29, 16	recall 6, inference 3, analysis 4, synthesis 3
AP	32, 6, 18, 5, 12, 24, 23, 26, 14, 25, 27, 13, 33, 28, 29, 16	recall 4, inference 3, analysis 5, synthesis 4
College Freshman	2, 17, 20, 12, 24, 23, 25, 26, 13, 27, 14, 29, 33, 16, 34, 28	recall 3, inference 3, analysis 5, synthesis 5
College Sophomore	10, 7, 19, 2, 12, 24, 23, 26, 25, 13, 15, 14, 27, 28, 29, 16	recall 4, inference 3, analysis 6, synthesis 3
College Junior	10, 21, 17, 23, 12, 24, 35, 27, 14, 25, 13, 26, 29, 16, 28, 34	recall 3, inference 4, analysis 5, synthesis 4
College Senior	10, 2, 23, 22, 12, 36, 24, 27, 31, 26, 25, 14, 13, 16, 29, 28	recall 2, inference 5, analysis 6, synthesis 3
Graduate / PhD	10, 2, 37, 6, 12, 24, 23, 31, 13, 25, 27, 14, 26, 28, 16, 29	recall 4, inference 3, analysis 6, synthesis 3

Writing prompts (eleven rigor levels)

Scaffolded support (250 words; AP: see unit standards): Supported track (work from the passage your teacher selects). In “Chapter IV,” how does Austen show sisters and judgment? Write a paragraph that states your claim, quotes two details from the passage, and explains how each detail supports your idea. Use the characterization you noticed as one piece of evidence.

HS Freshman (350 words; AP: see unit standards): In Chapter IV, how does Austen develop the idea of sisters and judgment? State a clear claim, support it with two or three quotations, and explain how the characterization in the chapter helps build that idea.

HS Sophomore (450 words; AP: see unit standards): Analyze how Chapter IV develops the idea of sisters and judgment. Make a precise claim, support it with at least three pieces of textual evidence, and explain how the author's use of characterization and point of view shapes that idea. Address one possible counterclaim.

HS Junior (550 words; AP: see unit standards): Analyze how the structure of Chapter IV (where it begins, turns and ends) and its characterization shape the reader's understanding of sisters and judgment. Identify one place where the text leaves matters uncertain and explain how that uncertainty adds to its meaning.

HS Senior (600 words; AP: see unit standards): Two readers disagree about what Chapter IV suggests about sisters and judgment. Lay out two plausible interpretations, weigh the evidence for each (including the chapter's characterization and point of view), and argue for the stronger one in a sustained, well-organized essay.

AP (650 words; AP: AP-LIT.CHR, AP-LIT.LAN): Write a literary argument in which you analyze how Jane Austen uses characterization in Chapter IV to complicate the reader's understanding of sisters and judgment. Develop a defensible thesis, select evidence purposefully, and explain how specific choices of diction and syntax create meaning.

College Freshman (1000 words; AP: see unit standards): Situate Chapter IV within its historical and literary context and argue how the chapter's treatment of sisters and judgment responds to that context. Engage with at least one secondary perspective (a critic, historian or the author's own statements), integrate quotations smoothly, and cite in MLA style.

College Sophomore (1250 words; AP: see unit standards): Read Chapter IV alongside the conventions of its genre and period. Argue how the chapter's handling of sisters and judgment follows or bends those conventions, using the characterization as evidence, and test your reading against one published critic. Document two secondary sources in MLA.

College Junior (1500 words; AP: see unit standards): Apply a named critical approach (for example formalist, historicist, feminist, psychoanalytic or ecocritical) to Chapter IV and its treatment of sisters and judgment. State your method, show what it reveals in the chapter's characterization and point of view, and identify where the text resists it.

College Senior (2000 words; AP: see unit standards): Develop a research argument that reads Chapter IV as evidence for a larger claim about sisters and judgment in Pride and Prejudice. Connect close reading of the chapter to the whole novel, engage at least four scholarly sources, and state precisely where your reading departs from theirs (Chicago style).

Graduate / PhD (2500 words; AP: see unit standards): Develop an original argument that reads Chapter IV as a hinge in the novel's larger treatment of sisters and judgment. Position your reading within a named critical conversation (for example formalist, historicist, psychoanalytic, feminist or postcolonial approaches), account for the textual history where relevant, and articulate the stakes of your intervention for scholarship on Pride and Prejudice.

SAT-style questions

1. Bingley was endeared to Darcy by the easiness, openness, ductility of his temper, though no disposition could offer a greater contrast to his own, and though with his own he never appeared dissatisfied.

   As used in the text, what does the word “endeared” most nearly mean?

   A. happening by chance

B. manners shown by one's upbringing

C. made loved or liked

D. not pleased

2. "Did not you? I did for you. But that is one great difference between us. Compliments always take you by surprise, and me never. What could be more natural than his asking you again? He could not help seeing that you were about five times as pretty as every other woman in the room. No thanks to his gallantry for that. Well, he certainly is very agreeable, and I give you leave to like him. You have liked many a stupider person."

Which choice best states a central concern of "Chapter IV"?

A. Sisters and judgment

B. A ridiculous proposal

C. A misguided warning

D. Happiness for Jane

SAT key: 1. C (made loved or liked); 2. A (Sisters and judgment)

Lesson 6: Chapter V

Focus: neighbors and gossip

Objective: Students will analyze how characterization develops in "Chapter V" by writing a claim-evidence-reasoning paragraph that cites at least 2 quotations from the section, and will score at least 80% on the section quiz.

Standards: AP: see the unit standards

Content note (alcohol or drugs (mentioned)): This section mentions drinking or a drug ("…roud I was. I would keep a pack of foxhounds, and drink a bottle of wine every day." "Then you…"). Treat it as period custom or plot detail; name it plainly and don't glamorize it.
Student preview: This section mentions drinking or a drug.
Suggested language: "What does this detail add to the scene?"

Teacher only · spoilers

The Bennets discuss the ball with the Lucases. Charlotte Lucas, Elizabeth's practical friend, excuses Darcy's pride; Mary moralizes about pride and vanity.

Background: Sir William Lucas had been knighted after a career in trade, illustrating social climbing.

Significance: Mary's definition separating pride from vanity directly states one of the novel's themes.

Lesson plan and lecture script (90 minutes)

0–8 min · Bell-ringer · You do (8 min)
Students write to the bell-ringer, then pair-share.
How does Mary distinguish pride from vanity, and do you agree? Write for five minutes. Starters: I think... because... / This connects to pride and prejudice because.... Content note before we start: This section mentions drinking or a drug.
Prompt: How does Mary distinguish pride from vanity, and do you agree?
Sentence starters: I think… because… · This connects to pride and prejudice because…
Strong response: A strong response takes a position and anticipates this: Mary's speech distinguishes pride from vanity, a definition the novel tests.

8–18 min · Vocabulary with etymology notes · I do (10 min)
Five key words in context, with verified word histories.
Today's words: inoffensive — harmless; not likely to upset anyone; supercilious — behaving as if superior to others; mortified — hurt the pride of; humiliated; relates — is connected to; tolerable — fairly good; moderate. "supercilious": Origin: Latin superciliōsus ("haughty"). "tolerable": Origin: Middle French tolerable; earlier Latin tolerābilis.
Words: inoffensive: harmless; not likely to upset anyone · supercilious: behaving as if superior to others · mortified: hurt the pride of; humiliated · relates: is connected to · tolerable: fairly good; moderate

18–28 min · Background and context · I do (10 min)
Mini-lecture (read or adapt the script).
Sir William Lucas had been knighted after a career in trade, illustrating social climbing. Mary's definition separating pride from vanity directly states one of the novel's themes. Characterization: Charlotte Lucas is introduced as practical; her views on marriage foreshadow Chapter XXII. Dialogue: The neighbourhood talks over the ball, replaying the gossip. Watch for rank and condescension: Rank is displayed and enforced, above all at Rosings by Lady Catherine; Elizabeth refuses to be cowed. In this chapter: "civil to all the world. For though elated by his rank, it did not render him supercilious; on the contrary, he was" (Chapter V, paragraph 1).

28–40 min · I do: modeled close reading · I do (12 min)
Model the close reading of the anchor quotation using the written think-aloud below.
First, meaning. I read "I could easily forgive his pride, if he had not mortified mine" slowly and put it in my own words: Elizabeth says she could forgive Darcy's pride if he had not hurt her own. Next, craft. I notice the balanced sentence, his pride against hers, which turns the joke on herself. The strongest word is "mortified": it means wounded, humiliated, which shows her dislike starts with a personal insult. Then, effect. What does Elizabeth's joke show about why she dislikes Darcy? My answer: Elizabeth's joke that she could forgive Darcy's pride if he had not mortified hers shows that she dislikes Darcy from wounded pride, not fairness; it names both title faults in one speaker.

> I could easily forgive his pride, if he had not mortified mine (Chapter V, paragraph 19)

Think-aloud: First, meaning. I read "I could easily forgive his pride, if he had not mortified mine" slowly and put it in my own words: Elizabeth says she could forgive Darcy's pride if he had not hurt her own. Next, craft. I notice the balanced sentence, his pride against hers, which turns the joke on herself. The strongest word is "mortified": it means wounded, humiliated, which shows her dislike starts with a personal insult. Then, effect. What does Elizabeth's joke show about why she dislikes Darcy? My answer: Elizabeth's joke that she could forgive Darcy's pride if he had not mortified hers shows that she dislikes Darcy from wounded pride, not fairness; it names both title faults in one speaker.

40–55 min · We do: guided annotation · We do (15 min)
Guided analysis of a second quotation; expected answers given.
Ask: What words in this line stand out, and what do they suggest? Expected: Mary separates pride (self-opinion) from vanity (seeking others' opinion). Darcy may be proud; Elizabeth's reaction shows vanity. Ask: How does this line connect to pride and prejudice? Expected: Mary's speech distinguishes pride from vanity, a definition the novel tests. (Mary's distinction; useful for the title.)

> Pride relates more to our opinion of ourselves, vanity to what we would have others think of us (Chapter V, paragraph 20)

Ask: What words in this line stand out, and what do they suggest?
Expected answer: Mary separates pride (self-opinion) from vanity (seeking others' opinion). Darcy may be proud; Elizabeth's reaction shows vanity.
Ask: How does this line connect to pride and prejudice?
Expected answer: Mary's speech distinguishes pride from vanity, a definition the novel tests. (Mary's distinction; useful for the title.)

55–70 min · You do: independent annotation · You do (15 min)

Independent annotation and a claim-evidence-reasoning paragraph (exemplar given).

Annotate the chapter for characterization, dialogue (three marks with a margin note each), then write one claim-evidence-reasoning paragraph: what does this chapter suggest about neighbors and gossip? Then start your writing prompt at your assigned level (HS Sophomore: Analyze how Chapter V develops the idea of neighbors and gossip. Make a precise claim, support it with at least three pieces of textual evidence, and explain how the author's use of characterization and tone / mood shapes that idea. Address one possible counterclaim.) Exemplar: Elizabeth's dislike of Darcy rests partly on her own wounded pride. When the text says "I could easily forgive his pride, if he had not mortified mine" (Chapter V, paragraph 19), it shows this directly. She jokes that she could forgive his pride "if he had not mortified mine," admitting that the insult to herself shapes her judgment.

Task: Annotate the chapter for characterization, dialogue (three marks with a margin note each), then write one claim-evidence-reasoning paragraph: what does this chapter suggest about neighbors and gossip? Then start your writing prompt at your assigned level (HS Sophomore: Analyze how Chapter V develops the idea of neighbors and gossip. Make a precise claim, support it with at least three pieces of textual evidence, and explain how the author's use of characterization and tone / mood shapes that idea. Address one possible counterclaim.)

Exemplar: Elizabeth's dislike of Darcy rests partly on her own wounded pride. When the text says "I could easily forgive his pride, if he had not mortified mine" (Chapter V, paragraph 19), it shows this directly. She jokes that she could forgive his pride "if he had not mortified mine," admitting that the insult to herself shapes her judgment.

70–80 min · Discussion · We do (10 min)

Structured discussion from the 30 tiered questions, with facilitation notes.

Anchor question: How does Mary distinguish pride from vanity, and do you agree? Use Mary's definition: who in the novel so far is proud, and who is vain?

Anchor question: How does Mary distinguish pride from vanity, and do you agree?

Facilitation: Use Mary's definition: who in the novel so far is proud, and who is vain?

80–87 min · Exit ticket / chapter quiz · You do (7 min)

Chapter quiz in the app and an exit ticket (answer given).

Chapter quiz in the app, then: In one sentence, what does this chapter suggest about neighbors and gossip? Support it with one short quotation. Model answer: Elizabeth's dislike of Darcy rests partly on her own wounded pride. ("I could easily forgive his pride, if he had not mortified mine", Chapter V, paragraph 19). Accept any defensible claim backed by a quotation from the chapter; the answer key for the quiz is in the Quiz section.

Exit ticket: In one sentence, what does this chapter suggest about neighbors and gossip? Support it with one short quotation.

Answer: Model answer: Elizabeth's dislike of Darcy rests partly on her own wounded pride. ("I could easily forgive his pride, if he had not mortified mine", Chapter V, paragraph 19). Accept any defensible claim backed by a quotation from the chapter; the answer key for the quiz is in the Quiz section.

> 87–90 min · Closure · I do (3 min)
> Summarize the lesson and preview the next reading.
> Today we saw how characterization shapes neighbors and gossip. Key takeaway: Mary's speech distinguishes pride from vanity, a definition the novel tests.

Total: 90 minutes.

Teacher analysis (spoilers)

Literary elements

- Characterization: Charlotte Lucas is introduced as practical; her views on marriage foreshadow Chapter XXII.
- Dialogue: The neighbourhood talks over the ball, replaying the gossip.

Themes and how they develop

- pride and prejudice: Mary's speech distinguishes pride from vanity, a definition the novel tests.

Symbols and motifs

- rank and condescension: Rank is displayed and enforced, above all at Rosings by Lady Catherine; Elizabeth refuses to be cowed. In this chapter: “civil to all the world. For though elated by his rank, it did not render him supercilious; on the contrary, he was” (Chapter V, paragraph 1).
- pride: Pride is discussed openly and shown in action; who is proud, and whether pride is a fault, keeps shifting. In this chapter: “it was; everybody says that he is ate up with pride, and I dare say he had heard somehow that Mrs. Long” (Chapter V, paragraph 14).

Key quotations (checked against the reading text)

- “Pride relates more to our opinion of ourselves, vanity to what we would have others think of us” (Chapter V, paragraph 20) Mary's distinction; useful for the title.
- “I could easily forgive his pride, if he had not mortified mine” (Chapter V, paragraph 19) Elizabeth admits her wounded pride; self-revealing.
- “One cannot wonder that so very fine a young man, with family, fortune, everything in his favour, should think highly of himself” (Chapter V, paragraph 18) Charlotte's tolerance of Darcy's pride.

Model claim-evidence-reasoning

> Claim: Elizabeth's dislike of Darcy rests partly on her own wounded pride.
> Evidence: “I could easily forgive his pride, if he had not mortified mine” (Chapter V, paragraph 19)
> Reasoning: She jokes that she could forgive his pride "if he had not mortified mine," admitting that the insult to herself shapes her judgment.

Vocabulary with etymology notes

Word		In context	Word history

	Definition (in this sentence)
inoffensive (adjective)	harmless; not likely to upset anyone	By nature inoffensive, friendly and obliging, his presentation at St.
supercilious (adjective)	behaving as if superior to others	For though elated by his rank, it did not render him supercilious; on the contrary, he was all attention to everybody.	"supercilious": Origin: Latin superciliōsus ("haughty"). (Liber et Libri origin note, https://en.wiktionary.org/wiki/supercilious#Etymology)
mortified (verb)	hurt the pride of; humiliated	"That is very true," replied Elizabeth, "and I could easily forgive his pride, if he had not mortified mine."
relates (verb)	is connected to	Pride relates more to our opinion of ourselves, vanity to what we would have others think of us."
tolerable (adjective)	fairly good; moderate	Sir William Lucas had been formerly in trade in Meryton, where he had made a tolerable fortune and risen to the honour of knighthood by an address to the King, during his mayoralty.	"tolerable": Origin: Middle French tolerable; earlier Latin tolerābilis. (Liber et Libri origin note, https://en.wiktionary.org/wiki/tolerable#Etymology) admired (verb)	feel admiration for	To be sure that did seem as if he admired her—indeed I rather believe he did—I heard something about it—but I hardly know what—something about Mr.

Discussion questions

1. How does Mary distinguish pride from vanity, and do you agree?
2. Where does characterization appear in this chapter, and what effect does it have? Point to one passage.
3. How does this chapter connect to the book's larger concern with women's limited choices?

Classroom discussion questions (30, tiered)

Wait time after every question (3 s for DOK 1, 5 s for DOK 2, 8 to 10 s for DOK 3 and 4); think-pair-share on DOK 3 and 4; answer each response with a follow-up probe; close with student-generated questions. Focus sets by rigor level: Scaffolded support: 1, 2, 3, 4, 5, 6, 11, 12, 13, 14, 21, 22; HS Freshman: 1, 2, 3, 4, 5, 12, 13, 14, 15, 22, 23, 24; HS Sophomore: 1, 2, 3, 4, 13, 14, 15, 16, 17, 23, 24, 25; HS Junior: 1, 2, 3, 14, 15, 16, 17, 18, 24, 25, 26, 27; HS Senior: 1, 2, 3, 15, 16, 17, 18, 25, 26, 27, 28, 29; AP: 1, 2, 16, 17, 18, 19, 20, 26, 27, 28, 29, 30; College Freshman: 1, 2, 17, 18, 19, 20, 21, 22, 27, 28, 29, 30; College Sophomore: 1, 2, 11, 18, 19, 20, 21, 22, 23, 28, 29, 30; College Junior: 1, 11, 12, 19, 20, 21, 22, 23, 24, 25, 29, 30; College Senior: 1, 11, 12, 13, 20, 21, 22, 23, 24, 25, 26, 30; Graduate / PhD: 1, 11, 12, 13, 21, 22, 23, 24, 25, 26, 27, 28

Literal / recall

1. Who is Charlotte Lucas? [DOK 1 · coldCallWithSupport · wait 3 s · AP: unit standards] Look for: Elizabeth's practical friend
2. How did Sir William Lucas rise socially? [DOK 1 · turnAndTalk · wait 3 s · AP: unit standards] Look for: He was knighted after trade
3. Which sister lectures on pride and vanity? [DOK 1 · coldCallWithSupport · wait 3 s · AP: unit standards] Look for: Mary
4. How does Charlotte view Darcy's pride? [DOK 1 · turnAndTalk · wait 3 s · AP: unit standards] Look for: As somewhat excusable given his rank
5. What is the main activity of this chapter? [DOK 1 · coldCallWithSupport · wait 3 s · AP: unit standards] Look for: Discussing the ball
6. Retell the three most important events of "Chapter V" in order, in one sentence each. [DOK 1 · turnAndTalk · wait 3 s · AP: unit standards] Look for: The Bennets discuss the ball with the Lucases. Charlotte Lucas, Elizabeth's practical friend, excuses Darcy's pride; Mary moralizes about pride and vanity.
7. Which characters appear or are mentioned in "Chapter V"? Name two and one thing each says or does. [DOK 1 · coldCallWithSupport · wait 3 s · AP: unit standards] Look for: Names and actions taken from the chapter; check against the teacher summary.
8. Where and when does "Chapter V" take place? Point to the line that tells you. [DOK 1 · turnAndTalk · wait 3 s · AP: unit standards] Look for: A place/time detail quoted from the chapter.
9. Reread: "By nature inoffensive, friendly and obliging, his presentation at St." What does "inoffensive" mean here, and what is literally happening in this line? [DOK 1 · turnAndTalk · wait 3 s · AP: unit standards] Look for: inoffensive: harmless; not likely to upset anyone.
10. Reread: "For though elated by his rank, it did not render him supercilious; on the contrary, he was all attention to everybody." What does "supercilious" mean here, and what is literally happening in this line? [DOK 1 · turnAndTalk · wait 3 s · AP: unit standards] Look for: supercilious: behaving as if superior to others.

Inferential / analytical

1. What does "Chapter V" suggest about neighbors and gossip? State the inference and the line that supports it. [DOK 2 · thinkPairShare · wait 5 s · AP-LIT.LAN] Look for: Mary's definition separating pride from vanity directly states one of the novel's themes.
2. Find one example of characterization in this chapter. What does it reveal that a plain statement would not? [DOK 2 · followUp · wait 5 s · AP-LIT.CHR] Look for: Look for what characters say, do and think, and how others react to them.
3. How does the tone / mood in this chapter shape what we understand about neighbors and gossip? [DOK 3 · thinkPairShare · wait 8 s · AP-LIT.FIG] Look for: Look for word choices that reveal the narrator's attitude or the scene's feeling.

   Answer guidance: A defensible line of argument: Elizabeth's dislike of Darcy rests partly on her own wounded pride. Useful evidence: "Pride relates more to our opinion of ourselves, vanity to what we would have others think of us" (Chapter V, paragraph 20): Mary's distinction; useful for the title. Theme link: Mary's speech distinguishes pride from vanity, a definition the novel tests. Credit any position that is supported by quotation and reasoning; push one-sided answers to address the strongest counterpoint.

4. In the passage that begins ““Pride,””, why might Austen have chosen these particular words? Pick two and explain their connotations. [DOK 2 · followUp · wait 5 s · AP-LIT.FIG] Look for: Diction analysis of two words in the anchor passage.
5. What causes the main turn in “Chapter V”, and what effect is it likely to have on what follows? [DOK 2 · followUp · wait 5 s · AP-LIT.STR] Look for: The Bennets discuss the ball with the Lucases. Charlotte Lucas, Elizabeth's practical friend, excuses Darcy's pride; Mary moralizes about pride and vanity.
6. How does “Chapter V” build on “Chapter IV”? Name one link of cause and effect. [DOK 3 · thinkPairShare · wait 8 s · AP-LIT.STR] Look for: A causal or structural link between this and the previous chapter.
   Answer guidance: A defensible line of argument: Elizabeth's dislike of Darcy rests partly on her own wounded pride. Useful evidence: “I could easily forgive his pride, if he had not mortified mine” (Chapter V, paragraph 19): Elizabeth admits her wounded pride; self-revealing. Theme link: Mary's speech distinguishes pride from vanity, a definition the novel tests. Credit any position that is supported by quotation and reasoning; push one-sided answers to address the strongest counterpoint.
7. What can we infer about a character's motives from what they say and do here, as opposed to what they claim? [DOK 3 · followUp · wait 8 s · AP-LIT.CHR] Look for: An inference about motive supported by a quoted line.
   Answer guidance: A defensible line of argument: Elizabeth's dislike of Darcy rests partly on her own wounded pride. Useful evidence: “One cannot wonder that so very fine a young man, with family, fortune, everything in his favour, should think highly of himself” (Chapter V, paragraph 18): Charlotte's tolerance of Darcy's pride. On characterization: Charlotte Lucas is introduced as practical; her views on marriage foreshadow Chapter XXII. Credit any position that is supported by quotation and reasoning; push one-sided answers to address the strongest counterpoint.
8. The bell-ringer asked: “How does Mary distinguish pride from vanity, and do you agree?” Now that we have read closely, how would you revise your first answer, and which line changed your mind? [DOK 2 · thinkPairShare · wait 5 s · AP-LIT.LAN] Look for: A revised answer anchored in the text.
9. Where does theme appear, and how does it connect this chapter to the larger concern with women's limited choices? [DOK 3 · followUp · wait 8 s · AP-LIT.LAN] Look for: Look for statements or moments that connect to the book's big ideas.
   Answer guidance: A defensible line of argument: Elizabeth's dislike of Darcy rests partly on her own wounded pride. Useful evidence: “Pride relates more to our opinion of ourselves, vanity to what we would have others think of us” (Chapter V, paragraph 20): Mary's distinction; useful for the title. Theme link: Mary's speech distinguishes pride from vanity, a definition the novel tests. Credit any position that is supported by quotation and reasoning; push one-sided answers to address the strongest counterpoint.
10. Background: Sir William Lucas had been knighted after a career in trade, illustrating social climbing. How does knowing this change the way you read one moment in the chapter? [DOK 3 · thinkPairShare · wait 8 s · AP-LIT.SET] Look for: A specific moment reread in light of the context.
    Answer guidance: A defensible line of argument: Elizabeth's dislike of Darcy rests partly on her own wounded pride. Useful evidence: “I could easily forgive his pride, if he had not mortified mine” (Chapter V, paragraph 19): Elizabeth admits her wounded pride; self-revealing. Theme link: Mary's speech distinguishes pride from vanity, a definition the novel tests. Credit any position that is supported by quotation and reasoning; push one-sided answers to address the strongest counterpoint.

Evaluative / synthesis / creative

1. A critic might argue: “Mary's definition separating pride from vanity directly states one of the novel's themes.” How far do you agree? Take a stand and defend it with two lines from the chapter. [DOK 3 · fourCorners · wait 8 s · AP-LIT.LAN] Look for: A defended position with evidence and one counterpoint.
   Answer guidance: A defensible line of argument: Elizabeth's dislike of Darcy rests partly on her own wounded pride. Useful evidence: “One cannot wonder that so very fine a young man, with family, fortune, everything in his favour, should think highly of himself” (Chapter V, paragraph 18): Charlotte's tolerance of Darcy's pride. Theme link: Mary's speech distinguishes pride from vanity, a definition the novel tests. Credit any position that is supported by quotation and reasoning; push one-sided answers to address the strongest counterpoint.
2. Which character in this chapter acts most wisely, and which least? Judge them by a standard you name. [DOK 3 · thinkPairShare · wait 8 s · AP-LIT.CHR, AP-LIT.LAN] Look for: An evaluation using an explicit criterion and evidence.
   Answer guidance: A defensible line of argument: Elizabeth's dislike of Darcy rests partly on her own wounded pride. Useful evidence: “Pride relates more to our opinion of ourselves, vanity to what we would have others think of us” (Chapter V, paragraph 20): Mary's distinction; useful for the title. On characterization: Charlotte Lucas is introduced as practical; her views on marriage foreshadow Chapter XXII. Credit any position that is supported by quotation and reasoning; push one-sided answers to address the strongest counterpoint.
3. Rewrite one moment of “Chapter V” from the point of view of a different character. What does the new angle reveal or hide about neighbors and gossip? [DOK 4 · thinkPairShare · wait 8 s · AP-LIT.LAN, AP-LIT.NAR] Look for: A creative product with a rationale tied to the text.
   Answer guidance: A defensible line of argument: Elizabeth's dislike of Darcy rests partly on her own wounded pride. Useful evidence: “I could easily forgive his pride, if he had not mortified mine” (Chapter V, paragraph 19): Elizabeth admits her wounded pride; self-revealing. Theme link: Mary's speech distinguishes pride from vanity, a definition the novel tests. Credit any position that is supported by quotation and reasoning; push one-sided answers to address the strongest counterpoint.
4. Write three questions of your own about “Chapter V”: one recall, one “why/how”, and one “should/what if”. Trade with a partner and answer theirs. [DOK 3 · studentGenerated · wait 8 s · AP-LIT.LAN] Look for: Student-generated questions at three levels.
   Answer guidance: A defensible line of argument: Elizabeth's dislike of Darcy rests partly on her own wounded pride. Useful evidence: “One cannot wonder that so very fine a young man, with family, fortune, everything in his favour, should think highly of himself” (Chapter V, paragraph 18): Charlotte's tolerance of Darcy's pride. Theme link: Mary's speech distinguishes pride from vanity, a definition the novel tests. Credit any position that is supported by quotation and reasoning; push one-sided answers to address the strongest counterpoint.
5. Connect this chapter to first impressions and prejudice: is the link strong or weak so far? What would Austen need to show next to strengthen it? [DOK 4 · socraticCircle · wait 8 s · AP-LIT.LAN] Look for: A judgment of thematic development across the work.
   Answer guidance: A defensible line of argument: Elizabeth's dislike of Darcy rests partly on her own wounded pride. Useful evidence: “Pride relates more to our opinion of ourselves, vanity to what we would have others think of us” (Chapter V, paragraph 20): Mary's distinction; useful for the title. Theme link:

Mary's speech distinguishes pride from vanity, a definition the novel tests. Credit any position that is supported by quotation and reasoning; push one-sided answers to address the strongest counterpoint.

6. Is the characterization in this chapter effective, or does it feel heavy-handed? Evaluate it as a reader would in a review. [DOK 3 · fourCorners · wait 8 s · AP-LIT.CHR, AP-LIT.LAN] Look for: An evaluative judgment with criteria and evidence.

   Answer guidance: A defensible line of argument: Elizabeth's dislike of Darcy rests partly on her own wounded pride. Useful evidence: “I could easily forgive his pride, if he had not mortified mine” (Chapter V, paragraph 19): Elizabeth admits her wounded pride; self-revealing. On characterization: Charlotte Lucas is introduced as practical; her views on marriage foreshadow Chapter XXII. Credit any position that is supported by quotation and reasoning; push one-sided answers to address the strongest counterpoint.

7. Compare how “Chapter V” treats neighbors and gossip with how another text, film or event you know treats a similar idea. What does Pride and Prejudice see that the other misses? [DOK 4 · socraticCircle · wait 8 s · AP-LIT.LAN] Look for: A cross-text synthesis.

   Answer guidance: A defensible line of argument: Elizabeth's dislike of Darcy rests partly on her own wounded pride. Useful evidence: “One cannot wonder that so very fine a young man, with family, fortune, everything in his favour, should think highly of himself” (Chapter V, paragraph 18): Charlotte's tolerance of Darcy's pride. Theme link: Mary's speech distinguishes pride from vanity, a definition the novel tests. Credit any position that is supported by quotation and reasoning; push one-sided answers to address the strongest counterpoint.

8. Predict what “Chapter VI” will bring, using two clues from this chapter. After reading, evaluate your prediction. [DOK 3 · thinkPairShare · wait 8 s · AP-LIT.LAN, AP-LIT.STR] Look for: A prediction or judgment justified with textual clues.

   Answer guidance: A defensible line of argument: Elizabeth's dislike of Darcy rests partly on her own wounded pride. Useful evidence: “Pride relates more to our opinion of ourselves, vanity to what we would have others think of us” (Chapter V, paragraph 20): Mary's distinction; useful for the title. Theme link: Mary's speech distinguishes pride from vanity, a definition the novel tests. Credit any position that is supported by quotation and reasoning; push one-sided answers to address the strongest counterpoint.

9. Design a one-paragraph modern adaptation of this chapter (setting, characters, conflict). What must stay the same for it to still be about neighbors and gossip? [DOK 4 · thinkPairShare · wait 8 s · AP-LIT.LAN] Look for: A creative transfer that keeps the core idea.

   Answer guidance: A defensible line of argument: Elizabeth's dislike of Darcy rests partly on her own wounded pride. Useful evidence: “I could easily forgive his pride, if he had not mortified mine” (Chapter V, paragraph 19): Elizabeth admits her wounded pride; self-revealing. Theme link: Mary's speech distinguishes pride from vanity, a definition the novel tests. Credit any position that is supported by quotation and reasoning; push one-sided answers to address the strongest counterpoint.

10. What question would you most like to ask Jane Austen about this chapter, and what answer do you think the text itself gives? [DOK 4 · studentGenerated · wait 8 s · AP-LIT.LAN] Look for: A student-generated question answered from evidence.

    Answer guidance: A defensible line of argument: Elizabeth's dislike of Darcy rests partly on her own wounded pride. Useful evidence: “One cannot wonder that so very fine a young man, with family, fortune, everything in his favour, should think highly of himself” (Chapter V, paragraph 18): Charlotte's tolerance of Darcy's pride. Theme link: Mary's speech distinguishes pride from vanity, a definition the novel tests.

Credit any position that is supported by quotation and reasoning; push one-sided answers to address the strongest counterpoint.

Annotation focus

- Characterization: look for what characters say, do and think, and how others react to them (anchor passage in the We do segment)
- Also notice Tone / mood: word choices that reveal the narrator's attitude or the scene's feeling
- Also notice Theme: statements or moments that connect to the book's big ideas

Chapter quiz: item bank (all eleven rigor versions)

1. [mc · recall · DOK 1] In the line "For though elated by his rank, it did not render him supercilious; on the contrary, he was all attention to everybody.", what does "supercilious" most nearly mean?

   A. something immaterial that stands in the way and must be circumvented or surmounted

   B. the quality of having an inferior or less favorable position

   C. to give up

   D. behaving as if superior to others

   Key: D (behaving as if superior to others)

2. [mc · recall · DOK 1] Which word completes this sentence from Chapter V, paragraph 14? "But I can guess how it was; _____ says that he is ate up with pride, and I dare say he had heard somehow that Mrs. Long does not keep a carriage, and had come to the ball in a hack chaise."

   A. believe

   B. intelligent

   C. everybody

   D. listening

   Key: C (everybody)

3. [fill · recall · DOK 1] Complete the quotation from Chapter V, paragraph 20: "Pride,' observed Mary, who piqued herself upon the solidity of her _____, 'is a very common failing I believe." Word bank: believe, reflections, overheard, particularly

   Key: reflections

4. [fill · recall · DOK 1] Complete the quotation from Chapter V, paragraph 10: "Mrs. Long told me last night that he sat close to her for half an hour _____ once opening his lips." Word bank: without, because, listening, protested

   Key: without

5. [fill · recall · DOK 1] Fill in the blank with the vocabulary word that fits: "To be sure that did seem as if he _____ her—indeed I rather believe he did—I heard something about it—but I hardly know what—something about Mr." Word bank: mortified, inoffensive, supercilious, admired

   Key: admired

6. [mc · recall · DOK 1] How did Sir William Lucas rise socially?

   A. He inherited land

   B. He won a lottery

   C. He was knighted after trade

D. He married a duchess

Key: C (He was knighted after trade)

7. [mc · recall · DOK 1] Which word completes this sentence from Chapter V, paragraph 5? “Yes;—but he _____ to like his second better.”

   A. seemed

   B. listening

   C. overheard

   D. because

   Key: A (seemed)

8. [mc · recall · DOK 1] What is the main activity of this chapter?

   A. A wedding

   B. Discussing the ball

   C. A journey

   D. A dinner at Netherfield

   Key: B (Discussing the ball)

9. [mc · recall · DOK 1] In the line “By nature inoffensive, friendly and obliging, his presentation at St.”, what does “inoffensive” most nearly mean?

   A. an affront to one's dignity or self-esteem

   B. happening by chance

   C. harmless; not likely to upset anyone

   D. to act as host; to be in charge

   Key: C (harmless; not likely to upset anyone)

10. [mc · recall · DOK 1] Which word completes this sentence from Chapter V, paragraph 23? “The boy _____ that she should not; she continued to declare that she would, and the argument ended only with the visit.”

    A. mother

    B. answering

    C. protested

    D. because

    Key: C (protested)

11. [mc · recall · DOK 1] Which sister lectures on pride and vanity?

    A. Kitty

    B. Lydia

    C. Jane

    D. Mary

    Key: D (Mary)

12. [mc · inference · DOK 2] Which choice best states a central concern of “Chapter V”?

    A. Neighbors and gossip

    B. A changed Darcy

    C. Strategy in courtship

D. Happiness for Jane

Key: A (Neighbors and gossip)

13. [short · inference · DOK 2] What does this passage from Chapter V, paragraph 1 reveal about the character or situation? “The distinction had perhaps been felt too strongly.” Answer in two or three sentences with one detail.

    Sample answer: The passage (Chapter V, paragraph 1) shows the situation turning on first impressions and prejudice: Mary's speech distinguishes pride from vanity, a definition the novel tests. The words “distinction” and “strongly” are the proof, because they show how the moment looks to the people in it. They suggest more than the narrator states outright.

14. [mc · analysis · DOK 3] Which literary element does this describe in “Chapter V”? Charlotte Lucas is introduced as practical; her views on marriage foreshadow Chapter XXII.

    A. Irony

    B. Theme

    C. Characterization

    D. Metaphor

    Key: C (Characterization)

15. [mc · analysis · DOK 3] Which literary element does this describe in “Chapter V”? The neighbourhood talks over the ball, replaying the gossip.

    A. Symbolism

    B. Irony

    C. Dialogue

    D. Plot

    Key: C (Dialogue)

16. [short · synthesis · DOK 4] Connect this passage from Chapter V, paragraph 15 to the story's treatment of women's limited choices: “I do not mind his not talking to Mrs. Long,’ said Miss Lucas, ‘but I wish he had danced with Eliza.” Use one other moment from the story as well.

    Sample answer: This passage (Chapter V, paragraph 15) develops women's limited choices: Mary's speech distinguishes pride from vanity, a definition the novel tests. Its words “talking” and “danced” carry that idea into this moment. The same concern returns in “I believe, Ma’am, I may safely promise you never to dance with him.” (Chapter V, paragraph 17), so the two passages read as a pattern, not a single moment. Together they show the story treating women's limited choices as central.

17. [fill · recall · DOK 1] Complete the quotation from Chapter V, paragraph 18: “One cannot wonder that so very fine a young man, with family, fortune, _____ in his favour, should think highly of himself”

    Key: everything

18. [mc · recall · DOK 1] In the line “That is very true,’ replied Elizabeth, ‘and I could easily forgive his pride, if he had not mortified mine.”, what does “mortified” most nearly mean?

    A. hurt the pride of; humiliated

    B. a man who has recently been married

    C. sons of one's brother or sister

    D. an expert; a skilled person

    Key: A (hurt the pride of; humiliated)

19. [fill · recall · DOK 1] Fill in the blank with the vocabulary word that fits: “Sir William Lucas had been formerly in trade in Meryton, where he had made a _____ fortune and risen to the honour of knighthood by an address to the King, during his mayoralty.” Word bank: supercilious, mortified, inoffensive, tolerable
    Key: tolerable
20. [short · analysis · DOK 3] Analyze how the word choice in this passage from Chapter V, paragraph 6 shapes its tone: “Oh!—you mean Jane, I suppose—because he danced with her twice.” Pick two words and explain their effect.
    Sample answer: The words “suppose” and “because” (Chapter V, paragraph 6) make the tone heavy and deliberate rather than neutral. That weight points the reader to class and social mobility: Mary's speech distinguishes pride from vanity, a definition the novel tests. The author chooses them so the moment feels significant instead of passing.
21. [short · synthesis · DOK 4] Close reading: how do the diction and syntax of “Pride relates more to our opinion of ourselves, vanity to what we would have others think of us” (Chapter V, paragraph 20) shape its meaning? Consider a second, competing reading.
    Sample answer: Mary's distinction; useful for the title. The evidence is “Pride relates more to our opinion of ourselves, vanity to what we would have others think of us” (Chapter V, paragraph 20). This develops pride and prejudice: Mary's speech distinguishes pride from vanity, a definition the novel tests. The words “ourselves” and “opinion” carry that meaning: they are the charged choices in the line, and changing either would soften the effect. She jokes that she could forgive his pride "if he had not mortified mine," admitting that the insult to herself shapes her judgment.
22. [fill · recall · DOK 1] Complete the quotation from Chapter V, paragraph 1: “Within a short walk of Longbourn lived a family with whom the Bennets were _____ intimate.” Word bank: residence, particularly, overheard, intelligent
    Key: particularly
23. [short · analysis · DOK 3] Analyze how the word choice in this passage from Chapter V, paragraph 11 shapes its tone: “I certainly saw Mr. Darcy speaking to her.” Pick two words and explain their effect.
    Sample answer: The words “certainly” and “speaking” (Chapter V, paragraph 11) make the tone heavy and deliberate rather than neutral. That weight points the reader to pride and self-knowledge: Mary's speech distinguishes pride from vanity, a definition the novel tests. The author chooses them so the moment feels significant instead of passing.
24. [short · synthesis · DOK 4] Synthesis: trace how pride and prejudice develops from Chapter IV to Chapter V. Use one quotation from each.
    Sample answer: Earlier, in Chapter IV, paragraph 7, the text reads “You never see a fault in anybody” — Elizabeth on Jane: a criticism and a compliment. In Chapter V, “Pride relates more to our opinion of ourselves, vanity to what we would have others think of us” (Chapter V, paragraph 20) — Mary's distinction; useful for the title. Mary's speech distinguishes pride from vanity, a definition the novel tests.
25. [short · synthesis · DOK 4] Connect this passage from Chapter V, paragraph 20 to the story's treatment of marriage and money: “Vanity and pride are different things, though the words are often used synonymously.” Use one other moment from the story as well.
    Sample answer: This passage (Chapter V, paragraph 20) develops marriage and money: Mary's speech distinguishes pride from vanity, a definition the novel tests. Its words “synonymously” and “different” carry that idea into this moment. The same concern returns in “If I were as rich as Mr. Darcy,’ cried a young Lucas who came with his sisters, ‘I should not care how proud I was.” (Chapter V, paragraph 21), so the two passages read as a pattern, not a single moment. Together they show the story treating marriage and money as central.

26. [fill · recall · DOK 1 · AP: AP-LIT.STR] Complete the quotation from Chapter V, paragraph 20: “Pride relates more to our opinion of _____, vanity to what we would have others think of us”

    Key: ourselves

27. [mc · recall · DOK 1 · AP: AP-LIT.CHR] Who is Charlotte Lucas?

    A. Bingley's sister

    B. A servant

    C. Elizabeth's practical friend

    D. Darcy's sister

    Key: C (Elizabeth's practical friend)

28. [mc · recall · DOK 1 · AP: AP-LIT.CHR] How does Charlotte view Darcy's pride?

    A. As charming

    B. As monstrous

    C. As somewhat excusable given his rank

    D. As fake

    Key: C (As somewhat excusable given his rank)

29. [short · analysis · DOK 3 · AP: AP-LIT.FIG] Analyze the word choice in “One cannot wonder that so very fine a young man, with family, fortune, everything in his favour, should think highly of himself” (Chapter V, paragraph 18). Pick two words and explain what they suggest.

    Sample answer: Charlotte's tolerance of Darcy's pride. The evidence is “One cannot wonder that so very fine a young man, with family, fortune, everything in his favour, should think highly of himself” (Chapter V, paragraph 18). This develops pride and prejudice: Mary's speech distinguishes pride from vanity, a definition the novel tests. The words “everything” and “fortune” carry that meaning: they are the charged choices in the line, and changing either would soften the effect.

30. [short · synthesis · DOK 4 · AP: AP-LIT.LAN] Evaluate this claim about the chapter: “Elizabeth's dislike of Darcy rests partly on her own wounded pride.” Is it fully persuasive? Argue with evidence, including a passage that complicates it.

    Sample answer: The claim is persuasive in part. “I could easily forgive his pride, if he had not mortified mine” (Chapter V, paragraph 19) supports it: She jokes that she could forgive his pride "if he had not mortified mine," admitting that the insult to herself shapes her judgment. But “One cannot wonder that so very fine a young man, with family, fortune, everything in his favour, should think highly of himself” (Chapter V, paragraph 18) complicates it: Charlotte's tolerance of Darcy's pride, and its “cannot” marks a limit or reversal the claim passes over. So the claim stands only in a qualified form: true of the chapter's main pattern, but not of every moment in it.

31. [short · synthesis · DOK 4 · AP: AP-LIT.FIG] Close reading: how do the diction and syntax of “I could easily forgive his pride, if he had not mortified mine” (Chapter V, paragraph 19) shape its meaning? Consider a second, competing reading.

    Sample answer: Elizabeth admits her wounded pride; self-revealing. The evidence is “I could easily forgive his pride, if he had not mortified mine” (Chapter V, paragraph 19). This develops pride and prejudice: Mary's speech distinguishes pride from vanity, a definition the novel tests. The words “mortified” and “forgive” carry that meaning: they are the charged choices in the line, and changing either would soften the effect. She jokes that she could forgive his pride "if he had not mortified mine," admitting that the insult to herself shapes her judgment.

32. [mc · inference · DOK 2 · Dual Credit (Indiana College Core): ICC-WC-1.5] What does this passage most clearly show? “One cannot wonder that so very fine a young man, with family, fortune, everything in his favour, should think highly of himself” (Chapter V, paragraph 18)

    A. Mrs. Gardiner's sharper version.

    B. Mrs. Bennet's excitement: repetition is her voice.

    C. Wickham judged on appearance.

    D. Charlotte's tolerance of Darcy's pride.

    Key: D (Charlotte's tolerance of Darcy's pride.)

33. [short · analysis · DOK 3 · Dual Credit (Indiana College Core): ICC-WC-1.5] Claim: Elizabeth's dislike of Darcy rests partly on her own wounded pride. Explain how this evidence supports the claim: “I could easily forgive his pride, if he had not mortified mine” (Chapter V, paragraph 19).

    Sample answer: She jokes that she could forgive his pride "if he had not mortified mine," admitting that the insult to herself shapes her judgment. The evidence is “I could easily forgive his pride, if he had not mortified mine” (Chapter V, paragraph 19) — Elizabeth admits her wounded pride; self-revealing. This develops pride and prejudice: Mary's speech distinguishes pride from vanity, a definition the novel tests.

34. [short · inference · DOK 2 · Program outcome: LeL-C2-LIT-1] What can you infer from this line? “Pride relates more to our opinion of ourselves, vanity to what we would have others think of us” (Chapter V, paragraph 20) Answer in two or three sentences with one detail.

    Sample answer: Mary's distinction; useful for the title. The evidence is “Pride relates more to our opinion of ourselves, vanity to what we would have others think of us” (Chapter V, paragraph 20).

35. [fill · recall · DOK 1 · Program outcome: LeL-C3-LIT-1] Complete the quotation from Chapter V, paragraph 19: “I could easily forgive his pride, if he had not _____ mine”

    Key: mortified

36. [mc · inference · DOK 2 · Program outcome: LeL-C3-LIT-1] What does this passage most clearly show? “Pride relates more to our opinion of ourselves, vanity to what we would have others think of us” (Chapter V, paragraph 20)

    A. Mary's distinction; useful for the title.

    B. The narrator's gently ironic picture of the lost ideal.

    C. Direct evidence that Darcy's manners have changed; note the list of what has vanished.

    D. The Wickhams wear out their welcome.

    Key: A (Mary's distinction; useful for the title.)

37. [short · inference · DOK 2 · Program outcome: LeL-C4-LIT-1] What can you infer from this line? “I could easily forgive his pride, if he had not mortified mine” (Chapter V, paragraph 19) Answer in two or three sentences with one detail.

    Sample answer: Elizabeth admits her wounded pride; self-revealing. The evidence is “I could easily forgive his pride, if he had not mortified mine” (Chapter V, paragraph 19). This develops pride and prejudice: Mary's speech distinguishes pride from vanity, a definition the novel tests.

38. [mc · inference · DOK 2 · Program outcome: LeL-GR-LIT-1] What does this passage most clearly show? “I could easily forgive his pride, if he had not mortified mine” (Chapter V, paragraph 19)

    A. The dramatic irony stated directly.

    B. Mrs. Bennet swears off Bingley moments before her husband reveals he has already visited him.

    C. The narrator steps in to defend a love based on esteem rather than "first sight."

D. Elizabeth admits her wounded pride; self-revealing.

Key: D (Elizabeth admits her wounded pride; self-revealing.)

Rigor version	Items (in order)	Mix
Scaffolded support	1, 2, 3, 4, 5, 6, 7, 8, 9, 10, 11, 12, 13, 14, 15, 16	recall 11, inference 2, analysis 2, synthesis 1
HS Freshman	17, 1, 9, 6, 4, 18, 7, 2, 19, 5, 12, 13, 14, 20, 15, 21	recall 10, inference 2, analysis 3, synthesis 1
HS Sophomore	1, 22, 7, 10, 11, 5, 3, 2, 6, 12, 13, 23, 15, 20, 24, 25	recall 9, inference 2, analysis 3, synthesis 2
HS Junior	26, 7, 19, 4, 27, 28, 10, 3, 13, 12, 20, 14, 23, 29, 30, 16	recall 8, inference 2, analysis 4, synthesis 2
HS Senior	3, 18, 6, 8, 28, 5, 1, 12, 13, 14, 15, 23, 20, 30, 25, 24	recall 7, inference 2, analysis 4, synthesis 3
AP	9, 6, 19, 26, 13, 12, 23, 14, 15, 29, 20, 16, 30, 24, 25, 31	recall 4, inference 2, analysis 5, synthesis 5
College Freshman	5, 19, 1, 13, 12, 32, 23, 14, 33, 15, 20, 21, 16, 25, 24, 30	recall 3, inference 3, analysis 5, synthesis 5
College Sophomore	22, 5, 9, 7, 17, 12, 13, 34, 23, 20, 15, 14, 30, 24, 16, 25	recall 5, inference 3, analysis 4, synthesis 4
College Junior	8, 35, 18, 22, 13, 36, 12, 15, 23, 29, 14, 20, 16, 30, 24, 25	recall 4, inference 3, analysis 5, synthesis 4
College Senior	19, 5, 9, 2, 12, 13, 37, 23, 15, 29, 14, 20, 16, 25, 30, 24	recall 4, inference 3, analysis 5, synthesis 4
Graduate / PhD	19, 11, 9, 18, 26, 38, 13, 12, 20, 14, 23, 15, 24, 16, 25, 30	recall 5, inference 3, analysis 4, synthesis 4

Writing prompts (eleven rigor levels)

Scaffolded support (250 words; AP: see unit standards): Supported track (work from the passage your teacher selects). In “Chapter V,” how does Austen show neighbors and gossip? Write a paragraph that states your claim, quotes two details from the passage, and explains how each detail supports your idea. Use the characterization you noticed as one piece of evidence.

HS Freshman (350 words; AP: see unit standards): In Chapter V, how does Austen develop the idea of neighbors and gossip? State a clear claim, support it with two or three quotations, and explain how the characterization in the chapter helps build that idea.

HS Sophomore (450 words; AP: see unit standards): Analyze how Chapter V develops the idea of neighbors and gossip. Make a precise claim, support it with at least three pieces of textual evidence, and explain how the author's use of characterization and tone / mood shapes that idea. Address one possible counterclaim.

HS Junior (550 words; AP: see unit standards): Analyze how the structure of Chapter V (where it begins, turns and ends) and its characterization shape the reader's understanding of neighbors and gossip. Identify one place where the text leaves matters uncertain and explain how that uncertainty adds to its meaning.

HS Senior (600 words; AP: see unit standards): Two readers disagree about what Chapter V suggests about neighbors and gossip. Lay out two plausible interpretations, weigh the evidence for each (including the chapter's characterization and tone / mood), and argue for the stronger one in a sustained, well-organized essay.

AP (650 words; AP: AP-LIT.CHR, AP-LIT.LAN): Write a literary argument in which you analyze how Jane Austen uses characterization in Chapter V to complicate the reader's understanding of neighbors and gossip. Develop a defensible thesis, select evidence purposefully, and explain how specific choices of diction and syntax create meaning.

College Freshman (1000 words; AP: see unit standards): Situate Chapter V within its historical and literary context and argue how the chapter's treatment of neighbors and gossip responds to that context. Engage with at least one secondary perspective (a critic, historian or the author's own statements), integrate quotations smoothly, and cite in MLA style.

College Sophomore (1250 words; AP: see unit standards): Read Chapter V alongside the conventions of its genre and period. Argue how the chapter's handling of neighbors and gossip follows or bends those conventions, using the characterization as evidence, and test your reading against one published critic. Document two secondary sources in MLA.

College Junior (1500 words; AP: see unit standards): Apply a named critical approach (for example formalist, historicist, feminist, psychoanalytic or ecocritical) to Chapter V and its treatment of neighbors and gossip. State your method, show what it reveals in the chapter's characterization and tone / mood, and identify where the text resists it.

College Senior (2000 words; AP: see unit standards): Develop a research argument that reads Chapter V as evidence for a larger claim about neighbors and gossip in Pride and Prejudice. Connect close reading of the chapter to the whole novel, engage at least four scholarly sources, and state precisely where your reading departs from theirs (Chicago style).

Graduate / PhD (2500 words; AP: see unit standards): Develop an original argument that reads Chapter V as a hinge in the novel's larger treatment of neighbors and gossip. Position your reading within a named critical conversation (for example formalist, historicist, psychoanalytic, feminist or postcolonial approaches), account for the textual history where relevant, and articulate the stakes of your intervention for scholarship on Pride and Prejudice.

SAT-style questions

1. "That is very true," replied Elizabeth, "and I could easily forgive his pride, if he had not mortified mine."

   As used in the text, what does the word "mortified" most nearly mean?

   A. hurt the pride of; humiliated

   B. feel admiration for

   C. is connected to

   D. fairly good; moderate

2. "Pride," observed Mary, who piqued herself upon the solidity of her reflections, "is a very common failing I believe. By all that I have ever read, I am convinced that it is very common indeed, that human nature is particularly prone to it, and that there are very few of us who do not cherish a feeling of self-complacency on the score of some quality or other, real or imaginary. Vanity and pride are different things, though the words are often used synonymously. A person may be proud without being vain. Pride relates more to our opinion of ourselves, vanity to what we would have others think of us."

Which choice best states a central concern of "Chapter V"?

A. Endings and futures

B. Marriage as a social goal

C. Neighbors and gossip

D. Puzzling visits

SAT key: 1. A (hurt the pride of; humiliated); 2. C (Neighbors and gossip)

Lesson 7: Chapter VI

Focus: strategy in courtship

Objective: Students will analyze how characterization develops in “Chapter VI” by writing a claim-evidence-reasoning paragraph that cites at least 2 quotations from the section, and will score at least 80% on the section quiz.

Standards: AP: see the unit standards

Teacher only · spoilers

Charlotte argues Jane should show more affection to secure Bingley, since 'happiness in marriage is entirely a matter of chance.' Darcy begins to admire Elizabeth's 'fine eyes,' and Miss Bingley teases him about it.

Background: Women could not propose; they had to signal interest within strict propriety.

Significance: Charlotte's pragmatic view of marriage foreshadows her own choice later; Darcy's interest is the novel's first reversal.

Lesson plan and lecture script (90 minutes)

0–8 min · Bell-ringer · You do (8 min)
Students write to the bell-ringer, then pair-share.
Do you agree with Charlotte that happiness in marriage is a matter of chance? Write for five minutes. Starters: I think... because... / This connects to marriage and money because....
Prompt: Do you agree with Charlotte that happiness in marriage is a matter of chance?
Sentence starters: I think… because… · This connects to marriage and money because…
Strong response: A strong response takes a position and anticipates this: Charlotte's realism: "Happiness in marriage is entirely a matter of chance."

8–18 min · Vocabulary with etymology notes · I do (10 min)
Five key words in context, with verified word histories.
Today's words: complaisance — willingness to please others; performs — plays or sings for others; conceals — hides; porridge — soft food made by boiling oatmeal or other meal or legumes in water or milk until thick; simpleton — a person lacking intelligence or common sense.
Words: complaisance: willingness to please others · performs: plays or sings for others · conceals: hides · porridge: soft food made by boiling oatmeal or other meal or legumes in water or milk until thick · simpleton: a person lacking intelligence or common sense

18–28 min · Background and context · I do (10 min)
Mini-lecture (read or adapt the script).
Women could not propose; they had to signal interest within strict propriety. Charlotte's pragmatic view of marriage foreshadows her own choice later; Darcy's interest is the novel's first reversal. Characterization: Charlotte advises that a woman should show more affection than she feels to secure a man; Elizabeth disagrees. Point of view: For the first time we see Darcy's growing attraction, which Elizabeth cannot. Watch for silence and reserve: What characters leave unsaid (Darcy's reserve, Jane's composure, Elizabeth's secrets) drives misunderstanding. In this chapter: "Mr. Darcy stood near them in silent indignation at such a mode of passing the evening, to the" (Chapter VI, paragraph 25).

28–40 min · I do: modeled close reading · I do (12 min)
Model the close reading of the anchor quotation using the written think-aloud below.
First, meaning. I read "Happiness in marriage is entirely a matter of chance" slowly and put it in my own words: Charlotte tells Elizabeth that happiness in marriage depends on chance. Next, craft. I notice the flat, practical tone that treats love like a game of luck. The strongest word is "chance": it means not choice or knowledge, which makes careful judgment seem useless. Then, effect. What does Charlotte believe about marriage? My answer: Charlotte thinks marriage is a practical bargain; this explains her later choice to marry Mr. Collins.

> Happiness in marriage is entirely a matter of chance (Chapter VI, paragraph 10)

Think-aloud: First, meaning. I read "Happiness in marriage is entirely a matter of chance" slowly and put it in my own words: Charlotte tells Elizabeth that happiness in marriage depends on chance. Next, craft. I notice the flat, practical tone that treats love like a game of luck. The strongest word is "chance": it means not choice or knowledge, which makes careful judgment seem useless. Then, effect. What does Charlotte believe about marriage? My answer: Charlotte thinks marriage is a practical bargain; this explains her later choice to marry Mr. Collins.

40–55 min · We do: guided annotation · We do (15 min)
Guided analysis of a second quotation; expected answers given.
Ask: What words in this line stand out, and what do they suggest? Expected: Dramatic irony: we know what Elizabeth doesn't. It complicates first impressions. Ask: How does this line connect to marriage and money? Expected: Charlotte's realism: "Happiness in marriage is entirely a matter of chance." (Elizabeth's rejection of Charlotte's view.)

> You know it is not sound, and that you would never act in this way yourself (Chapter VI, paragraph 11)

Ask: What words in this line stand out, and what do they suggest?
Expected answer: Dramatic irony: we know what Elizabeth doesn't. It complicates first impressions.
Ask: How does this line connect to marriage and money?
Expected answer: Charlotte's realism: "Happiness in marriage is entirely a matter of chance." (Elizabeth's rejection of Charlotte's view.)

55–70 min · You do: independent annotation · You do (15 min)

Independent annotation and a claim-evidence-reasoning paragraph (exemplar given).

Annotate the chapter for characterization, point of view (three marks with a margin note each), then write one claim-evidence-reasoning paragraph: what does this chapter suggest about strategy in courtship? Then start your writing prompt at your assigned level (HS Sophomore: Analyze how Chapter VI develops the idea of strategy in courtship. Make a precise claim, support it with at least three pieces of textual evidence, and explain how the author's use of characterization and foreshadowing shapes that idea. Address one possible counterclaim.) Exemplar: The novel lets the reader see Darcy's attraction before Elizabeth does, creating dramatic irony. When the text says "he began to find it was rendered uncommonly intelligent by the beautiful expression of her dark eyes" (Chapter VI, paragraph 12), it shows this directly. Darcy finds her face "uncommonly intelligent by the beautiful expression of her dark eyes," while Elizabeth still believes he despises her.

Task: Annotate the chapter for characterization, point of view (three marks with a margin note each), then write one claim-evidence-reasoning paragraph: what does this chapter suggest about strategy in courtship? Then start your writing prompt at your assigned level (HS Sophomore: Analyze how Chapter VI develops the idea of strategy in courtship. Make a precise claim, support it with at least three pieces of textual evidence, and explain how the author's use of characterization and foreshadowing shapes that idea. Address one possible counterclaim.)

Exemplar: The novel lets the reader see Darcy's attraction before Elizabeth does, creating dramatic irony. When the text says "he began to find it was rendered uncommonly intelligent by the beautiful expression of her dark eyes" (Chapter VI, paragraph 12), it shows this directly. Darcy finds her face "uncommonly intelligent by the beautiful expression of her dark eyes," while Elizabeth still believes he despises her.

70–80 min · Discussion · We do (10 min)

Structured discussion from the 30 tiered questions, with facilitation notes.

Anchor question: Do you agree with Charlotte that happiness in marriage is a matter of chance? Ask: is Charlotte right? Students often side with her more than they expect.

Anchor question: Do you agree with Charlotte that happiness in marriage is a matter of chance?

Facilitation: Ask: is Charlotte right? Students often side with her more than they expect.

80–87 min · Exit ticket / chapter quiz · You do (7 min)

Chapter quiz in the app and an exit ticket (answer given).

Chapter quiz in the app, then: In one sentence, what does this chapter suggest about strategy in courtship? Support it with one short quotation. Model answer: The novel lets the reader see Darcy's attraction before Elizabeth does, creating dramatic irony. ("he began to find it was rendered uncommonly intelligent by the beautiful expression of her dark eyes", Chapter VI, paragraph 12). Accept any defensible claim backed by a quotation from the chapter; the answer key for the quiz is in the Quiz section.

Exit ticket: In one sentence, what does this chapter suggest about strategy in courtship? Support it with one short quotation.

Answer: Model answer: The novel lets the reader see Darcy's attraction before Elizabeth does, creating dramatic irony. ("he began to find it was rendered uncommonly intelligent by the beautiful expression of her dark eyes", Chapter VI, paragraph 12). Accept any defensible claim backed by a quotation from the chapter; the answer key for the quiz is in the Quiz section.

> 87–90 min · Closure · I do (3 min)
> Summarize the lesson and preview the next reading.
> Today we saw how characterization shapes strategy in courtship. Key takeaway: Charlotte's realism: "Happiness in marriage is entirely a matter of chance."

Total: 90 minutes.

Teacher analysis (spoilers)

Literary elements

- Characterization: Charlotte advises that a woman should show more affection than she feels to secure a man; Elizabeth disagrees.
- Point of view: For the first time we see Darcy's growing attraction, which Elizabeth cannot.

Themes and how they develop

- marriage and money: Charlotte's realism: "Happiness in marriage is entirely a matter of chance."

Symbols and motifs

- silence and reserve: What characters leave unsaid (Darcy's reserve, Jane's composure, Elizabeth's secrets) drives misunderstanding. In this chapter: “Mr. Darcy stood near them in silent indignation at such a mode of passing the evening, to the” (Chapter VI, paragraph 25).
- marriage and money: Incomes, entails and fortunes are stated precisely; marriage is always also an economic question. In this chapter: “nothing is in question but the desire of being well married; and if I were determined to get a rich husband, or” (Chapter VI, paragraph 7).

Key quotations (checked against the reading text)

- “Happiness in marriage is entirely a matter of chance” (Chapter VI, paragraph 10) Charlotte's cynical realism, foreshadowing her choice.
- “he began to find it was rendered uncommonly intelligent by the beautiful expression of her dark eyes” (Chapter VI, paragraph 12) Darcy's attraction, revealed to the reader.
- “You know it is not sound, and that you would never act in this way yourself” (Chapter VI, paragraph 11) Elizabeth's rejection of Charlotte's view.

Model claim-evidence-reasoning

Claim: The novel lets the reader see Darcy's attraction before Elizabeth does, creating dramatic irony.
Evidence: “he began to find it was rendered uncommonly intelligent by the beautiful expression of her dark eyes” (Chapter VI, paragraph 12)
Reasoning: Darcy finds her face "uncommonly intelligent by the beautiful expression of her dark eyes," while Elizabeth still believes he despises her.

Vocabulary with etymology notes

Word	Definition (in this sentence)	In context	Word history
complaisance (noun)	willingness to please others	"He is indeed—but considering the inducement, my dear Miss Eliza, we cannot wonder at his complaisance; for who would object to such a partner?"
performs (verb)	plays or sings for others	"Your friend performs delightfully;" he continued after a pause, on seeing Bingley join the group;—"and I doubt not that you are an adept in the science yourself, Mr.
conceals (verb)	hides	If a woman conceals her affection with the same skill from the object of it, she may lose the opportunity of fixing him; and it will then be but poor consolation to believe the world equally in the dark.
porridge (noun)	soft food made by boiling oatmeal or other meal or legumes in water or milk until thick	Darcy, "There is a fine old saying, which everybody here is of course familiar with—'Keep your breath to cool your porridge,'—and I shall keep mine to swell my song."
simpleton (noun)	a person lacking intelligence or common sense	If I can perceive her regard for him, he must be a simpleton indeed not to discover it too."
accosted (verb)	approached and spoken to	Her resistance had not injured her with the gentleman, and he was thinking of her with some complacency, when thus accosted by Miss Bingley—	"accosted": Origin of "accost": Middle French accoster; earlier Old French acoster ("to stand beside"). (Liber et Libri origin note, https://en.wiktionary.org/wiki/accost#Etymology)
engrossed (verb)	devote (oneself) fully to	Darcy stood near them in silent indignation at such a mode of passing the evening, to the exclusion of all conversation, and was too much engrossed by his own thoughts to perceive that Sir William Lucas was his neighbour, till Sir William thus began.
		I have been meditating on the very great pleasure which a pair of fine

meditating (verb)	reflect deeply on a subject	eyes in the face of a pretty woman can bestow."
unfolded (verb)	explained; revealed	"Yes; these four evenings have enabled them to ascertain that they both like Vingt-un better than Commerce; but with respect to any other leading characteristic, I do not imagine that much has been unfolded."	"unfolded": Origin of "unfold": an English formation from un- + fold. (Liber et Libri origin note, https://en.wiktionary.org/wiki/unfold#Etymology)
disadvantage (noun)	the quality of having an inferior or less favorable position	"It may perhaps be pleasant," replied Charlotte, "to be able to impose on the public in such a case; but it is sometimes a disadvantage to be so very guarded.	"disadvantage": Origin: Old French desavantage. (Liber et Libri origin note, https://en.wiktionary.org/wiki/disadvantage#Etymology)

Discussion questions

1. Do you agree with Charlotte that happiness in marriage is a matter of chance?
2. Where does characterization appear in this chapter, and what effect does it have? Point to one passage.
3. How does this chapter connect to the book's larger concern with first impressions and prejudice?

Classroom discussion questions (30, tiered)

Wait time after every question (3 s for DOK 1, 5 s for DOK 2, 8 to 10 s for DOK 3 and 4); think-pair-share on DOK 3 and 4; answer each response with a follow-up probe; close with student-generated questions. Focus sets by rigor level: Scaffolded support: 1, 2, 3, 4, 5, 6, 11, 12, 13, 14, 21, 22; HS Freshman: 1, 2, 3, 4, 5, 12, 13, 14, 15, 22, 23, 24; HS Sophomore: 1, 2, 3, 4, 13, 14, 15, 16, 17, 23, 24, 25; HS Junior: 1, 2, 3, 14, 15, 16, 17, 18, 24, 25, 26, 27; HS Senior: 1, 2, 3, 15, 16, 17, 18, 25, 26, 27, 28, 29; AP: 1, 2, 16, 17, 18, 19, 20, 26, 27, 28, 29, 30; College Freshman: 1, 2, 17, 18, 19, 20, 21, 22, 27, 28, 29, 30; College Sophomore: 1, 2, 11, 18, 19, 20, 21, 22, 23, 28, 29, 30; College Junior: 1, 11, 12, 19, 20, 21, 22, 23, 24, 25, 29, 30; College Senior: 1, 11, 12, 13, 20, 21, 22, 23, 24, 25, 26, 30; Graduate / PhD: 1, 11, 12, 13, 21, 22, 23, 24, 25, 26, 27, 28

Literal / recall

1. What advice does Charlotte give about Jane? [DOK 1 · coldCallWithSupport · wait 3 s · AP: unit standards] Look for: She should show more affection
2. What does Charlotte say about happiness in marriage? [DOK 1 · turnAndTalk · wait 3 s · AP: unit standards] Look for: It is entirely a matter of chance
3. What does Darcy begin to admire in Elizabeth? [DOK 1 · coldCallWithSupport · wait 3 s · AP: unit standards] Look for: Her fine eyes
4. Who teases Darcy about Elizabeth? [DOK 1 · turnAndTalk · wait 3 s · AP: unit standards] Look for: Miss Bingley
5. What does Charlotte's view foreshadow? [DOK 1 · coldCallWithSupport · wait 3 s · AP: unit standards] Look for: Her own practical marriage
6. Retell the three most important events of "Chapter VI" in order, in one sentence each. [DOK 1 · turnAndTalk · wait 3 s · AP: unit standards] Look for: Charlotte argues Jane should show more affection to secure Bingley, since 'happiness in marriage is entirely a matter of chance.' Darcy begins to admire Elizabeth's 'fine eyes,' and Miss Bingley teases him about it.

7. Which characters appear or are mentioned in “Chapter VI”? Name two and one thing each says or does. [DOK 1 · coldCallWithSupport · wait 3 s · AP: unit standards] Look for: Names and actions taken from the chapter; check against the teacher summary.
8. Where and when does “Chapter VI” take place? Point to the line that tells you. [DOK 1 · turnAndTalk · wait 3 s · AP: unit standards] Look for: A place/time detail quoted from the chapter.
9. Reread: ““He is indeed—but considering the inducement, my dear Miss Eliza, we cannot wonder at his complaisance; for who would object to such a partner?”” What does “complaisance” mean here, and what is literally happening in this line? [DOK 1 · turnAndTalk · wait 3 s · AP: unit standards] Look for: complaisance: willingness to please others.
10. Reread: ““Your friend performs delightfully;” he continued after a pause, on seeing Bingley join the group; —“and I doubt not that you are an adept in the science yourself, Mr.” What does “performs” mean here, and what is literally happening in this line? [DOK 1 · turnAndTalk · wait 3 s · AP: unit standards] Look for: performs: plays or sings for others.

Inferential / analytical

1. What does “Chapter VI” suggest about strategy in courtship? State the inference and the line that supports it. [DOK 2 · thinkPairShare · wait 5 s · AP-LIT.LAN] Look for: Charlotte's pragmatic view of marriage foreshadows her own choice later; Darcy's interest is the novel's first reversal.
2. Find one example of characterization in this chapter. What does it reveal that a plain statement would not? [DOK 2 · followUp · wait 5 s · AP-LIT.CHR] Look for: Look for what characters say, do and think, and how others react to them.
3. How does the foreshadowing in this chapter shape what we understand about strategy in courtship? [DOK 3 · thinkPairShare · wait 8 s · AP-LIT.STR] Look for: Look for hints, warnings or images that point to later events.
   Answer guidance: A defensible line of argument: The novel lets the reader see Darcy's attraction before Elizabeth does, creating dramatic irony. Useful evidence: “Happiness in marriage is entirely a matter of chance” (Chapter VI, paragraph 10): Charlotte's cynical realism, foreshadowing her choice. Theme link: Charlotte's realism: "Happiness in marriage is entirely a matter of chance." Credit any position that is supported by quotation and reasoning; push one-sided answers to address the strongest counterpoint.
4. In the passage that begins ““You are a very strange creature by way of a friend!—always wanting me to play and sing before anybody and everybody!—If my vanity had taken a musical turn, you would have been…”, why might Austen have chosen these particular words? Pick two and explain their connotations. [DOK 2 · followUp · wait 5 s · AP-LIT.FIG] Look for: Diction analysis of two words in the anchor passage.
5. What causes the main turn in “Chapter VI”, and what effect is it likely to have on what follows? [DOK 2 · followUp · wait 5 s · AP-LIT.STR] Look for: Charlotte argues Jane should show more affection to secure Bingley, since 'happiness in marriage is entirely a matter of chance.' Darcy begins to admire Elizabeth's 'fine eyes,' and Miss Bingley teases him about it.
6. How does “Chapter VI” build on “Chapter V”? Name one link of cause and effect. [DOK 3 · thinkPairShare · wait 8 s · AP-LIT.STR] Look for: A causal or structural link between this and the previous chapter.
   Answer guidance: A defensible line of argument: The novel lets the reader see Darcy's attraction before Elizabeth does, creating dramatic irony. Useful evidence: “he began to find it was rendered uncommonly intelligent by the beautiful expression of her dark eyes” (Chapter VI, paragraph 12): Darcy's attraction, revealed to the reader. Theme link: Charlotte's realism: "Happiness in marriage is entirely a matter of chance." Credit any position that is supported by quotation and reasoning; push one-sided answers to address the strongest counterpoint.

7. What can we infer about a character's motives from what they say and do here, as opposed to what they claim? [DOK 3 · followUp · wait 8 s · AP-LIT.CHR] Look for: An inference about motive supported by a quoted line.
   Answer guidance: A defensible line of argument: The novel lets the reader see Darcy's attraction before Elizabeth does, creating dramatic irony. Useful evidence: “You know it is not sound, and that you would never act in this way yourself” (Chapter VI, paragraph 11): Elizabeth's rejection of Charlotte's view. On characterization: Charlotte advises that a woman should show more affection than she feels to secure a man; Elizabeth disagrees. Credit any position that is supported by quotation and reasoning; push one-sided answers to address the strongest counterpoint.
8. The bell-ringer asked: “Do you agree with Charlotte that happiness in marriage is a matter of chance?” Now that we have read closely, how would you revise your first answer, and which line changed your mind? [DOK 2 · thinkPairShare · wait 5 s · AP-LIT.LAN] Look for: A revised answer anchored in the text.
9. Where does irony appear, and how does it connect this chapter to the larger concern with first impressions and prejudice? [DOK 3 · followUp · wait 8 s · AP-LIT.NAR] Look for: Look for gaps between what characters expect or say and what is true.
   Answer guidance: A defensible line of argument: The novel lets the reader see Darcy's attraction before Elizabeth does, creating dramatic irony. Useful evidence: “Happiness in marriage is entirely a matter of chance” (Chapter VI, paragraph 10): Charlotte's cynical realism, foreshadowing her choice. Theme link: Charlotte's realism: "Happiness in marriage is entirely a matter of chance." Credit any position that is supported by quotation and reasoning; push one-sided answers to address the strongest counterpoint.
10. Background: Women could not propose; they had to signal interest within strict propriety. How does knowing this change the way you read one moment in the chapter? [DOK 3 · thinkPairShare · wait 8 s · AP-LIT.SET] Look for: A specific moment reread in light of the context.
    Answer guidance: A defensible line of argument: The novel lets the reader see Darcy's attraction before Elizabeth does, creating dramatic irony. Useful evidence: “he began to find it was rendered uncommonly intelligent by the beautiful expression of her dark eyes” (Chapter VI, paragraph 12): Darcy's attraction, revealed to the reader. Theme link: Charlotte's realism: "Happiness in marriage is entirely a matter of chance." Credit any position that is supported by quotation and reasoning; push one-sided answers to address the strongest counterpoint.

Evaluative / synthesis / creative

1. A critic might argue: “Charlotte's pragmatic view of marriage foreshadows her own choice later; Darcy's interest is the novel's first reversal.” How far do you agree? Take a stand and defend it with two lines from the chapter. [DOK 3 · fourCorners · wait 8 s · AP-LIT.LAN] Look for: A defended position with evidence and one counterpoint.
   Answer guidance: A defensible line of argument: The novel lets the reader see Darcy's attraction before Elizabeth does, creating dramatic irony. Useful evidence: “You know it is not sound, and that you would never act in this way yourself” (Chapter VI, paragraph 11): Elizabeth's rejection of Charlotte's view. Theme link: Charlotte's realism: "Happiness in marriage is entirely a matter of chance." Credit any position that is supported by quotation and reasoning; push one-sided answers to address the strongest counterpoint.
2. Which character in this chapter acts most wisely, and which least? Judge them by a standard you name. [DOK 3 · thinkPairShare · wait 8 s · AP-LIT.CHR, AP-LIT.LAN] Look for: An evaluation using an explicit criterion and evidence.

Answer guidance: A defensible line of argument: The novel lets the reader see Darcy's attraction before Elizabeth does, creating dramatic irony. Useful evidence: “Happiness in marriage is entirely a matter of chance” (Chapter VI, paragraph 10): Charlotte's cynical realism, foreshadowing her choice. On characterization: Charlotte advises that a woman should show more affection than she feels to secure a man; Elizabeth disagrees. Credit any position that is supported by quotation and reasoning; push one-sided answers to address the strongest counterpoint.

3. Rewrite one moment of “Chapter VI” from the point of view of a different character. What does the new angle reveal or hide about strategy in courtship? [DOK 4 · thinkPairShare · wait 8 s · AP-LIT.LAN, AP-LIT.NAR] Look for: A creative product with a rationale tied to the text.

   Answer guidance: A defensible line of argument: The novel lets the reader see Darcy's attraction before Elizabeth does, creating dramatic irony. Useful evidence: “he began to find it was rendered uncommonly intelligent by the beautiful expression of her dark eyes” (Chapter VI, paragraph 12): Darcy's attraction, revealed to the reader. On point of view: For the first time we see Darcy's growing attraction, which Elizabeth cannot. Credit any position that is supported by quotation and reasoning; push one-sided answers to address the strongest counterpoint.

4. Write three questions of your own about “Chapter VI”: one recall, one “why/how”, and one “should/what if”. Trade with a partner and answer theirs. [DOK 3 · studentGenerated · wait 8 s · AP-LIT.LAN] Look for: Student-generated questions at three levels.

   Answer guidance: A defensible line of argument: The novel lets the reader see Darcy's attraction before Elizabeth does, creating dramatic irony. Useful evidence: “You know it is not sound, and that you would never act in this way yourself” (Chapter VI, paragraph 11): Elizabeth's rejection of Charlotte's view. Theme link: Charlotte's realism: "Happiness in marriage is entirely a matter of chance." Credit any position that is supported by quotation and reasoning; push one-sided answers to address the strongest counterpoint.

5. Connect this chapter to pride and self-knowledge: is the link strong or weak so far? What would Austen need to show next to strengthen it? [DOK 4 · socraticCircle · wait 8 s · AP-LIT.LAN] Look for: A judgment of thematic development across the work.

   Answer guidance: A defensible line of argument: The novel lets the reader see Darcy's attraction before Elizabeth does, creating dramatic irony. Useful evidence: “Happiness in marriage is entirely a matter of chance” (Chapter VI, paragraph 10): Charlotte's cynical realism, foreshadowing her choice. Theme link: Charlotte's realism: "Happiness in marriage is entirely a matter of chance." Credit any position that is supported by quotation and reasoning; push one-sided answers to address the strongest counterpoint.

6. Is the characterization in this chapter effective, or does it feel heavy-handed? Evaluate it as a reader would in a review. [DOK 3 · fourCorners · wait 8 s · AP-LIT.CHR, AP-LIT.LAN] Look for: An evaluative judgment with criteria and evidence.

   Answer guidance: A defensible line of argument: The novel lets the reader see Darcy's attraction before Elizabeth does, creating dramatic irony. Useful evidence: “he began to find it was rendered uncommonly intelligent by the beautiful expression of her dark eyes” (Chapter VI, paragraph 12): Darcy's attraction, revealed to the reader. On characterization: Charlotte advises that a woman should show more affection than she feels to secure a man; Elizabeth disagrees. Credit any position that is supported by quotation and reasoning; push one-sided answers to address the strongest counterpoint.

7. Compare how “Chapter VI” treats strategy in courtship with how another text, film or event you know treats a similar idea. What does Pride and Prejudice see that the other misses? [DOK 4 · socraticCircle · wait 8 s

· AP-LIT.LAN] Look for: A cross-text synthesis.

Answer guidance: A defensible line of argument: The novel lets the reader see Darcy's attraction before Elizabeth does, creating dramatic irony. Useful evidence: “You know it is not sound, and that you would never act in this way yourself” (Chapter VI, paragraph 11): Elizabeth's rejection of Charlotte's view. Theme link: Charlotte's realism: "Happiness in marriage is entirely a matter of chance." Credit any position that is supported by quotation and reasoning; push one-sided answers to address the strongest counterpoint.

8. Predict what “Chapter VII” will bring, using two clues from this chapter. After reading, evaluate your prediction. [DOK 3 · thinkPairShare · wait 8 s · AP-LIT.LAN, AP-LIT.STR] Look for: A prediction or judgment justified with textual clues.

   Answer guidance: A defensible line of argument: The novel lets the reader see Darcy's attraction before Elizabeth does, creating dramatic irony. Useful evidence: “Happiness in marriage is entirely a matter of chance” (Chapter VI, paragraph 10): Charlotte's cynical realism, foreshadowing her choice. Theme link: Charlotte's realism: "Happiness in marriage is entirely a matter of chance." Credit any position that is supported by quotation and reasoning; push one-sided answers to address the strongest counterpoint.

9. Design a one-paragraph modern adaptation of this chapter (setting, characters, conflict). What must stay the same for it to still be about strategy in courtship? [DOK 4 · thinkPairShare · wait 8 s · AP-LIT.LAN] Look for: A creative transfer that keeps the core idea.

   Answer guidance: A defensible line of argument: The novel lets the reader see Darcy's attraction before Elizabeth does, creating dramatic irony. Useful evidence: “he began to find it was rendered uncommonly intelligent by the beautiful expression of her dark eyes” (Chapter VI, paragraph 12): Darcy's attraction, revealed to the reader. Theme link: Charlotte's realism: "Happiness in marriage is entirely a matter of chance." Credit any position that is supported by quotation and reasoning; push one-sided answers to address the strongest counterpoint.

10. What question would you most like to ask Jane Austen about this chapter, and what answer do you think the text itself gives? [DOK 4 · studentGenerated · wait 8 s · AP-LIT.LAN] Look for: A student-generated question answered from evidence.

    Answer guidance: A defensible line of argument: The novel lets the reader see Darcy's attraction before Elizabeth does, creating dramatic irony. Useful evidence: “You know it is not sound, and that you would never act in this way yourself” (Chapter VI, paragraph 11): Elizabeth's rejection of Charlotte's view. Theme link: Charlotte's realism: "Happiness in marriage is entirely a matter of chance." Credit any position that is supported by quotation and reasoning; push one-sided answers to address the strongest counterpoint.

Annotation focus

- Characterization: look for what characters say, do and think, and how others react to them (anchor passage in the We do segment)
- Also notice Foreshadowing: hints, warnings or images that point to later events
- Also notice Irony: gaps between what characters expect or say and what is true

Chapter quiz: item bank (all eleven rigor versions)

1. [mc · recall · DOK 1] What does Darcy begin to admire in Elizabeth?

   A. Her family

   B. Her fortune

C. Her fine eyes

D. Her singing

Key: C (Her fine eyes)

2. [fill · recall · DOK 1] Complete the quotation from Chapter VI, paragraph 12: "he began to find it was rendered uncommonly _____ by the beautiful expression of her dark eyes"

   Key: intelligent

3. [mc · recall · DOK 1] In the line "If a woman conceals her affection with the same skill from the object of it, she may lose the opportunity of fixing him; and it will then be but poor consolation to believe the world equally in the dark.", what does "conceals" most nearly mean?

   A. hides

   B. a soldier standing guard

   C. fearful expectation or anticipation

   D. making smaller or less

   Key: A (hides)

4. [fill · recall · DOK 1] Fill in the blank with the vocabulary word that fits: "Her resistance had not injured her with the gentleman, and he was thinking of her with some complacency, when thus _____ by Miss Bingley —" Word bank: conceals, accosted, performs, complaisance

   Key: accosted

5. [mc · recall · DOK 1] What advice does Charlotte give about Jane?

   A. She should hide her feelings

   B. She should marry Darcy

   C. She should leave Meryton

   D. She should show more affection

   Key: D (She should show more affection)

6. [fill · recall · DOK 1] Fill in the blank with the vocabulary word that fits: "Darcy stood near them in silent indignation at such a mode of passing the evening, to the exclusion of all conversation, and was too much _____ by his own thoughts to perceive that Sir William Lucas was his neighbour, till Sir William thus began." Word bank: performs, complaisance, engrossed, conceals

   Key: engrossed

7. [fill · recall · DOK 1] Complete the quotation from Chapter VI, paragraph 10: "Happiness in _____ is entirely a matter of chance"

   Key: marriage

8. [mc · recall · DOK 1] In the line "Your friend performs delightfully;' he continued after a pause, on seeing Bingley join the group;—'and I doubt not that you are an adept in the science yourself, Mr.", what does "performs" most nearly mean?

   A. behaving as if superior to others

   B. plays or sings for others

   C. speed; swiftness

   D. hold back to a later time

   Key: B (plays or sings for others)

9. [mc · recall · DOK 1] Who teases Darcy about Elizabeth?

    A. Jane

    B. Mr. Bennet

    C. Lydia

    D. Miss Bingley

    Key: D (Miss Bingley)

10. [mc · recall · DOK 1] What does Charlotte say about happiness in marriage?

    A. It is impossible

    B. It requires wealth

    C. It is guaranteed by love

    D. It is entirely a matter of chance

    Key: D (It is entirely a matter of chance)

11. [fill · recall · DOK 1] Complete the quotation from Chapter VI, paragraph 11: “You know it is not sound, and that you would never act in this way _____”

    Key: yourself

12. [mc · inference · DOK 2] Which choice best states a central concern of “Chapter VI”?

    A. A revelation from the colonel

    B. Pemberley

    C. The first proposal

    D. Strategy in courtship

    Key: D (Strategy in courtship)

13. [mc · analysis · DOK 3] In this chapter, which theme does the following most directly develop? Charlotte's realism: ‘Happiness in marriage is entirely a matter of chance.’

    A. Class and social mobility

    B. Pride and self-knowledge

    C. Marriage and money

    D. First impressions and prejudice

    Key: C (Marriage and money)

14. [mc · analysis · DOK 3] Which literary element does this describe in “Chapter VI”? For the first time we see Darcy's growing attraction, which Elizabeth cannot.

    A. Plot

    B. Setting

    C. Structure

    D. Point of view

    Key: D (Point of view)

15. [short · synthesis · DOK 4] Close reading: how do the diction and syntax of “Happiness in marriage is entirely a matter of chance” (Chapter VI, paragraph 10) shape its meaning? Consider a second, competing reading.

    Sample answer: Charlotte's cynical realism, foreshadowing her choice. The evidence is “Happiness in marriage is entirely a matter of chance” (Chapter VI, paragraph 10). This develops marriage and money: Charlotte's realism: "Happiness in marriage is entirely a matter of chance.". The words “entirely” and “marriage” carry that meaning: they are the charged choices in the line, and changing either would soften the effect. Darcy finds her face "uncommonly intelligent by the beautiful expression of her dark eyes," while Elizabeth still believes he despises her.

16. [short · synthesis · DOK 4] Synthesis: trace how marriage and money develops from Chapter I to Chapter VI. Use one quotation from each.
    Sample answer: Earlier, in Chapter I, paragraph 1, the text reads “It is a truth universally acknowledged, that a single man in possession of a good fortune, must be in want of a wife” — Verbal irony: it is the families who want the rich man, not the man who wants a wife. In Chapter VI, “Happiness in marriage is entirely a matter of chance” (Chapter VI, paragraph 10) — Charlotte's cynical realism, foreshadowing her choice. Charlotte's realism: "Happiness in marriage is entirely a matter of chance.".

17. [mc · recall · DOK 1] Which word completes this sentence from Chapter VI, paragraph 40? “Elizabeth was _____; nor did Sir William at all shake her purpose by his attempt at persuasion.”
    A. impossible
    B. instrument
    C. advantage
    D. determined

    Key: D (determined)

18. [fill · recall · DOK 1] Complete the quotation from Chapter VI, paragraph 4: “Remember, Eliza, that he does not know Jane’s _____ as you do.” Word bank: instrument, disposition, advantage, companion
    Key: disposition

19. [mc · recall · DOK 1] Which word completes this sentence from Chapter VI, paragraph 7? “But these are not Jane’s _____; she is not acting by design.”
    A. impossible
    B. instrument
    C. impertinent
    D. feelings

    Key: D (feelings)

20. [short · inference · DOK 2] What does this passage from Chapter VI, paragraph 1 reveal about the character or situation? “By Jane this attention was received with the greatest pleasure; but Elizabeth still saw superciliousness in their treatment of everybody, hardly excepting even her sister, and could not like them; though their kindness to Jane, such as it…” Answer in two or three sentences with one detail.
    Sample answer: The passage (Chapter VI, paragraph 1) shows the situation turning on first impressions and prejudice: Charlotte's realism: "Happiness in marriage is entirely a matter of chance.". The words “superciliousness” and “probability” are the proof, because they show how the moment looks to the people in it. They suggest more than the narrator states outright.

21. [short · inference · DOK 2] What does this passage from Chapter VI, paragraph 32 reveal about the character or situation? “Do you not think it would be a proper compliment to the place?” Answer in two or three sentences with one detail.
    Sample answer: The passage (Chapter VI, paragraph 32) shows the situation turning on first impressions and prejudice: Charlotte's realism: "Happiness in marriage is entirely a matter of chance.". The words “compliment” and “proper” are the proof, because they show how the moment looks to the people in it. They suggest more than the narrator states outright.

22. [short · inference · DOK 2] What can you infer from this line? “Happiness in marriage is entirely a matter of chance” (Chapter VI, paragraph 10) Answer in two or three sentences with one detail.

Sample answer: Charlotte's cynical realism, foreshadowing her choice. The evidence is “Happiness in marriage is entirely a matter of chance” (Chapter VI, paragraph 10). This develops marriage and money: Charlotte's realism: "Happiness in marriage is entirely a matter of chance.".

23. [short · analysis · DOK 3] Analyze how the word choice in this passage from Chapter VI, paragraph 40 shapes its tone: “Mr. Darcy with grave propriety requested to be allowed the honour of her hand; but in vain.” Pick two words and explain their effect.
    Sample answer: The words “propriety” and “requested” (Chapter VI, paragraph 40) make the tone heavy and deliberate rather than neutral. That weight points the reader to class and social mobility: Charlotte's realism: "Happiness in marriage is entirely a matter of chance.". The author chooses them so the moment feels significant instead of passing.

24. [short · analysis · DOK 3] Analyze how the word choice in this passage from Chapter VI, paragraph 6 shapes its tone: “Jane should therefore make the most of every half hour in which she can command his attention.” Pick two words and explain their effect.
    Sample answer: The words “attention” and “therefore” (Chapter VI, paragraph 6) make the tone heavy and deliberate rather than neutral. That weight points the reader to class and social mobility: Charlotte's realism: "Happiness in marriage is entirely a matter of chance.". The author chooses them so the moment feels significant instead of passing.

25. [mc · recall · DOK 1] In the line “He is indeed—but considering the inducement, my dear Miss Eliza, we cannot wonder at his complaisance; for who would object to such a partner?”, what does “complaisance” most nearly mean?

    A. willingness to please others

    B. cause to feel resentment or indignation

    C. attached

    D. running about hurriedly

    Key: A (willingness to please others)

26. [fill · recall · DOK 1] Fill in the blank with the vocabulary word that fits: “I have been _____ on the very great pleasure which a pair of fine eyes in the face of a pretty woman can bestow.” Word bank: conceals, complaisance, performs, meditating
    Key: meditating

27. [short · analysis · DOK 3] Analyze how the word choice in this passage from Chapter VI, paragraph 8 shapes its tone: “Had she merely dined with him, she might only have discovered whether he had a good appetite; but you must remember that four evenings have been also spent together—and four evenings may do a great deal.” Pick two words and explain their effect.
    Sample answer: The words “discovered” and “evenings” (Chapter VI, paragraph 8) make the tone heavy and deliberate rather than neutral. That weight points the reader to pride and self-knowledge: Charlotte's realism: "Happiness in marriage is entirely a matter of chance.". The author chooses them so the moment feels significant instead of passing.

28. [short · synthesis · DOK 4] Connect this passage from Chapter VI, paragraph 24 to the story's treatment of marriage and money: “Elizabeth, easy and unaffected, had been listened to with much more pleasure, though not playing half so well; and Mary, at the end of a long concerto, was glad to purchase praise and gratitude by Scotch and Irish airs, at the request of…” Use one other moment from the story as well.
    Sample answer: This passage (Chapter VI, paragraph 24) develops marriage and money: Charlotte's realism: "Happiness in marriage is entirely a matter of chance.". Its words “unaffected” and “gratitude” carry that idea into this moment. The same concern returns in “Mary had neither genius nor taste; and though vanity had given her application, it had given her likewise a pedantic…” (Chapter VI, paragraph 24), so the two passages read as a pattern, not a single moment. Together they show the story treating marriage and money as central.

29. [short · synthesis · DOK 4] Connect this passage from Chapter VI, paragraph 17 to the story's treatment of women's limited choices: “On his approaching them soon afterwards, though without seeming to have any intention of speaking, Miss Lucas defied her friend to mention such a subject to him, which immediately provoking Elizabeth to do it, she turned to him and said—” Use one other moment from the story as well.
Sample answer: This passage (Chapter VI, paragraph 17) develops women's limited choices: Charlotte's realism: "Happiness in marriage is entirely a matter of chance.". Its words “immediately” and “approaching” carry that idea into this moment. The same concern returns in “With great energy;—but it is a subject which always makes a lady energetic.” (Chapter VI, paragraph 19), so the two passages read as a pattern, not a single moment. Together they show the story treating women's limited choices as central.

30. [fill · recall · DOK 1 · AP: AP-LIT.FIG] Complete the quotation from Chapter VI, paragraph 33: “It is a _____ which I never pay to any place if I can avoid it.” Word bank: uncommonly, instrument, compliment, determined
Key: compliment

31. [mc · recall · DOK 1 · AP: AP-LIT.STR] What does Charlotte's view foreshadow?

    A. Her own practical marriage
    B. Darcy's letter
    C. Lydia's elopement
    D. Jane's illness

    Key: A (Her own practical marriage)

32. [short · analysis · DOK 3 · AP: AP-LIT.FIG] Analyze how the word choice in this passage from Chapter VI, paragraph 51 shapes its tone: “How long has she been such a favourite?—and pray when am I to wish you joy?” Pick two words and explain their effect.
Sample answer: The words “favourite” (Chapter VI, paragraph 51) make the tone heavy and deliberate rather than neutral. That weight points the reader to pride and self-knowledge: Charlotte's realism: "Happiness in marriage is entirely a matter of chance.". The author chooses them so the moment feels significant instead of passing.

33. [mc · analysis · DOK 3 · AP: AP-LIT.CHR] Which literary element does this describe in “Chapter VI”? Charlotte advises that a woman should show more affection than she feels to secure a man; Elizabeth disagrees.

    A. Symbolism
    B. Metaphor
    C. Setting
    D. Characterization

    Key: D (Characterization)

34. [short · synthesis · DOK 4 · AP: AP-LIT.LAN] Evaluate this claim about the chapter: “The novel lets the reader see Darcy's attraction before Elizabeth does, creating dramatic irony.” Is it fully persuasive? Argue with evidence, including a passage that complicates it.
Sample answer: The claim is persuasive in part. “he began to find it was rendered uncommonly intelligent by the beautiful expression of her dark eyes” (Chapter VI, paragraph 12) supports it: Darcy finds her face "uncommonly intelligent by the beautiful expression of her dark eyes," while Elizabeth still believes he despises her. But “You know it is not sound, and that you would never act in this way yourself” (Chapter VI, paragraph 11) complicates it: Elizabeth's rejection of Charlotte's view, and its “not” marks a limit or reversal the claim passes over. Weighing the two passages, the claim survives, but only once it admits the tension the second passage creates.

35. [fill · recall · DOK 1 · AP: AP-LIT.FIG] Complete the quotation from Chapter VI, paragraph 14: “What does Mr. Darcy mean,’ said she to Charlotte, ‘by listening to my _____ with Colonel Forster?” Word bank: conversation, companion, amusement, advantage

Key: conversation

36. [short · analysis · DOK 3 · AP: AP-LIT.LAN] Claim: The novel lets the reader see Darcy's attraction before Elizabeth does, creating dramatic irony. Explain how this evidence supports the claim: “he began to find it was rendered uncommonly intelligent by the beautiful expression of her dark eyes” (Chapter VI, paragraph 12).

    Sample answer: Darcy finds her face "uncommonly intelligent by the beautiful expression of her dark eyes," while Elizabeth still believes he despises her. The evidence is “he began to find it was rendered uncommonly intelligent by the beautiful expression of her dark eyes” (Chapter VI, paragraph 12) — Darcy's attraction, revealed to the reader. This develops marriage and money: Charlotte's realism: "Happiness in marriage is entirely a matter of chance.".

37. [fill · recall · DOK 1 · AP: AP-LIT.FIG] Fill in the blank with the vocabulary word that fits: “If I can perceive her regard for him, he must be a _____ indeed not to discover it too.” Word bank: conceals, simpleton, complaisance, performs

    Key: simpleton

38. [mc · recall · DOK 1 · AP: AP-LIT.FIG] In the line “Darcy, ‘There is a fine old saying, which everybody here is of course familiar with—‘Keep your breath to cool your porridge,’—and I shall keep mine to swell my song.’”, what does “porridge” most nearly mean?

    A. hides

    B. plays or sings for others

    C. soft food made by boiling oatmeal or other meal or legumes in water or milk until thick

    D. willingness to please others

    Key: C (soft food made by boiling oatmeal or other meal or legumes in water or milk until thick)

39. [short · analysis · DOK 3 · Dual Credit (Indiana College Core): ICC-WC-1.5] Analyze the word choice in “You know it is not sound, and that you would never act in this way yourself” (Chapter VI, paragraph 11). Pick two words and explain what they suggest.

    Sample answer: Elizabeth's rejection of Charlotte's view. The evidence is “You know it is not sound, and that you would never act in this way yourself” (Chapter VI, paragraph 11). This develops marriage and money: Charlotte's realism: "Happiness in marriage is entirely a matter of chance.". The words “yourself” and “sound” carry that meaning: they are the charged choices in the line, and changing either would soften the effect.

40. [mc · inference · DOK 2 · Program outcome: LeL-C2-LIT-1] What does this passage most clearly show? “Happiness in marriage is entirely a matter of chance” (Chapter VI, paragraph 10)

    A. The narrator's gently ironic picture of the lost ideal.

    B. Lady Catherine's report gave him hope.

    C. Charlotte's cynical realism, foreshadowing her choice.

    D. Ironic "pitiable": she suffers only for herself.

    Key: C (Charlotte's cynical realism, foreshadowing her choice.)

Rigor version	Items (in order)	Mix
Scaffolded support	1, 2, 3, 4, 5, 6, 7, 8, 9, 10, 11, 12, 13, 14, 15, 16	recall 11, inference 1, analysis 2, synthesis 2
HS Freshman	6, 17, 5, 11, 3, 18, 19, 1, 20, 21, 22, 12, 14, 23, 24, 16	recall 8, inference 4, analysis 3, synthesis 1

HS Sophomore	9, 4, 6, 25, 18, 10, 26, 2, 20, 21, 12, 13, 23, 27, 28, 29	recall 8, inference 3, analysis 3, synthesis 2
HS Junior	25, 26, 30, 5, 17, 18, 31, 20, 21, 12, 32, 14, 33, 23, 28, 34	recall 7, inference 3, analysis 4, synthesis 2
HS Senior	5, 6, 4, 35, 30, 9, 12, 20, 21, 13, 24, 36, 23, 29, 34, 16	recall 6, inference 3, analysis 4, synthesis 3
AP	4, 37, 38, 20, 21, 12, 24, 13, 23, 27, 14, 16, 28, 29, 15, 34	recall 3, inference 3, analysis 5, synthesis 5
College Freshman	26, 8, 35, 20, 12, 21, 39, 14, 33, 32, 23, 16, 34, 15, 29, 28	recall 3, inference 3, analysis 5, synthesis 5
College Sophomore	37, 4, 21, 40, 20, 12, 33, 39, 24, 36, 23, 14, 16, 28, 34, 29	recall 2, inference 4, analysis 6, synthesis 4
College Junior	37, 35, 12, 40, 21, 27, 14, 23, 32, 24, 13, 39, 29, 16, 34, 28	recall 2, inference 3, analysis 7, synthesis 4
College Senior	25, 37, 4, 12, 36, 24, 32, 14, 27, 33, 39, 29, 16, 34, 28, 15	recall 3, inference 1, analysis 7, synthesis 5
Graduate / PhD	37, 4, 12, 39, 23, 32, 27, 14, 24, 33, 13, 28, 29, 34, 15, 16	recall 2, inference 1, analysis 8, synthesis 5

Writing prompts (eleven rigor levels)

Scaffolded support (250 words; AP: see unit standards): Supported track (work from the passage your teacher selects). In “Chapter VI,” how does Austen show strategy in courtship? Write a paragraph that states your claim, quotes two details from the passage, and explains how each detail supports your idea. Use the characterization you noticed as one piece of evidence.

HS Freshman (350 words; AP: see unit standards): In Chapter VI, how does Austen develop the idea of strategy in courtship? State a clear claim, support it with two or three quotations, and explain how the characterization in the chapter helps build that idea.

HS Sophomore (450 words; AP: see unit standards): Analyze how Chapter VI develops the idea of strategy in courtship. Make a precise claim, support it with at least three pieces of textual evidence, and explain how the author's use of characterization and foreshadowing shapes that idea. Address one possible counterclaim.

HS Junior (550 words; AP: see unit standards): Analyze how the structure of Chapter VI (where it begins, turns and ends) and its characterization shape the reader's understanding of strategy in courtship. Identify one place where the text leaves matters uncertain and explain how that uncertainty adds to its meaning.

HS Senior (600 words; AP: see unit standards): Two readers disagree about what Chapter VI suggests about strategy in courtship. Lay out two plausible interpretations, weigh the evidence for each (including the chapter's characterization and foreshadowing), and argue for the stronger one in a sustained, well-organized essay.

AP (650 words; AP: AP-LIT.CHR, AP-LIT.LAN): Write a literary argument in which you analyze how Jane Austen uses characterization in Chapter VI to complicate the reader's understanding of strategy in courtship. Develop a defensible thesis, select evidence purposefully, and explain how specific choices of diction and syntax create meaning.

College Freshman (1000 words; AP: see unit standards): Situate Chapter VI within its historical and literary context and argue how the chapter's treatment of strategy in courtship responds to that context. Engage with at least one secondary perspective (a critic, historian or the author's own statements), integrate quotations smoothly, and cite in MLA style.

College Sophomore (1250 words; AP: see unit standards): Read Chapter VI alongside the conventions of its genre and period. Argue how the chapter's handling of strategy in courtship follows or bends those conventions, using the characterization as evidence, and test your reading against one published critic. Document two secondary sources in MLA.

College Junior (1500 words; AP: see unit standards): Apply a named critical approach (for example formalist, historicist, feminist, psychoanalytic or ecocritical) to Chapter VI and its treatment of strategy in courtship. State your method, show what it reveals in the chapter's characterization and foreshadowing, and identify where the text resists it.

College Senior (2000 words; AP: see unit standards): Develop a research argument that reads Chapter VI as evidence for a larger claim about strategy in courtship in Pride and Prejudice. Connect close reading of the chapter to the whole novel, engage at least four scholarly sources, and state precisely where your reading departs from theirs (Chicago style).

Graduate / PhD (2500 words; AP: see unit standards): Develop an original argument that reads Chapter VI as a hinge in the novel's larger treatment of strategy in courtship. Position your reading within a named critical conversation (for example formalist, historicist, psychoanalytic, feminist or postcolonial approaches), account for the textual history where relevant, and articulate the stakes of your intervention for scholarship on Pride and Prejudice.

SAT-style questions

1. If a woman conceals her affection with the same skill from the object of it, she may lose the opportunity of fixing him; and it will then be but poor consolation to believe the world equally in the dark.

   As used in the text, what does the word “conceals” most nearly mean?

   A. reflect deeply on a subject

   B. explained; revealed

   C. hides

   D. the quality of having an inferior or less favorable position

2. “You are a very strange creature by way of a friend!—always wanting me to play and sing before anybody and everybody!—If my vanity had taken a musical turn, you would have been invaluable, but as it is, I would really rather not sit down before those who must be in the habit of hearing the very best performers.” On Miss Lucas’s persevering, however, she added, “Very well; if it must be so, it must.” And gravely glancing at Mr.

Darcy, "There is a fine old saying, which everybody here is of course familiar with—'Keep your breath to cool your porridge,'—and I shall keep mine to swell my song."

Which choice best states a central concern of "Chapter VI"?

A. An unhappy marriage observed

B. A changed Darcy

C. Self-recognition

D. Strategy in courtship

SAT key: 1. C (hides); 2. D (Strategy in courtship)

Lesson 8: Chapter VII

Focus: the entail and the officers

Objective: Students will analyze how setting develops in “Chapter VII” by writing a claim-evidence-reasoning paragraph that cites at least 2 quotations from the section, and will score at least 80% on the section quiz.

Standards: AP: see the unit standards

Critical voice: “I had not seen 'Pride and Prejudice' till I read that sentence of yours, and then I got the book. And what did I find? An accurate, daguerreotyped portrait of a commonplace face; a carefully-fenced, highly-cultivated garden, with neat borders and delicate flowers; but no glance of a bright, vivid physiognomy, no open country, no fresh air, no blue hill, no bonny beck. I should hardly like to live with her ladies and gentlemen, in their elegant but confined houses.” (Charlotte Brontë, novelist, Letter to G. H. Lewes, 12 January 1848, in Elizabeth Gaskell, The Life of Charlotte Brontë, Vol. 2, Chapter II (1857), Vol. 2, Ch. II; public domain). Counter-evidence hunt: Elizabeth walks three miles through mud in Chapter VII. Does that scene answer Brontë's "no open country, no fresh air"? Students write a reply letter to Brontë. Objective: Analyze setting and the limits of Austen's world (the entail, the walk to Netherfield). Standards: AP: see the unit standards

Teacher only · spoilers

We learn Longbourn is entailed to a distant male relative. Kitty and Lydia chase officers stationed in Meryton. Jane, invited to Netherfield, rides there in the rain at her mother's scheming and falls ill; Elizabeth walks three miles through mud to nurse her.

Background: An entail restricted inheritance, usually to male heirs; militia regiments were stationed in towns during the Napoleonic wars.

Significance: Elizabeth's muddy walk shows her independence and affection, shocking the Netherfield ladies.

Lesson plan and lecture script (90 minutes)

> 0–8 min · Bell-ringer · You do (8 min)
> Students write to the bell-ringer, then pair-share.
> What does Elizabeth's long walk reveal about her values? Write for five minutes. Starters: I think... because... / This connects to family and reputation because....
> Prompt: What does Elizabeth's long walk reveal about her values?
> Sentence starters: I think… because… · This connects to family and reputation because…
> Strong response: A strong response takes a position and anticipates this: the Bingley sisters sneer at her muddy petticoat.

8–18 min · Vocabulary with etymology notes · I do (10 min)
Five key words in context, with verified word histories.
Today's words: prognostics — predictions; coincided — agreed; were the same; milliner — a person who makes or sells women's hats; effusions — an unrestrained expression of emotion; apothecary — a person who prepared and sold medicines and gave medical advice. "coincided": Origin of "coincide": French coïncider; earlier Medieval Latin coincidere. "effusions": Origin of "effusion": Middle French effusion; earlier Latin effūsiō ("outpouring").
Words: prognostics: predictions · coincided: agreed; were the same · milliner: a person who makes or sells women's hats · effusions: an unrestrained expression of emotion · apothecary: a person who prepared and sold medicines and gave medical advice

18–28 min · Background and context · I do (10 min)
Mini-lecture (read or adapt the script).
An entail restricted inheritance, usually to male heirs; militia regiments were stationed in towns during the Napoleonic wars. Elizabeth's muddy walk shows her independence and affection, shocking the Netherfield ladies. Setting: The entail and the militia: legal and social facts shaping the plot. Characterization: Elizabeth walks three miles through mud to nurse Jane, showing independence and affection. Watch for marriage and money: Incomes, entails and fortunes are stated precisely; marriage is always also an economic question. In this chapter: "Bennet's property consisted almost entirely in an estate of two thousand a year, which, unfortunately for his daughters, was entailed in default" (Chapter VII, paragraph 1).

28–40 min · I do: modeled close reading · I do (12 min)
Model the close reading of the anchor quotation using the written think-aloud below.
First, meaning. I read "Mr. Bennet's property consisted almost entirely in an estate of two thousand a year, which, unfortunately for his daughters, was entailed" slowly and put it in my own words: Mr. Bennet's estate must pass to a distant male relative, leaving his daughters unprovided for. Next, craft. I notice "unfortunately for his daughters," which shows the narrator's sympathy. The strongest word is "entailed": it is a legal word meaning restricted to male heirs. Then, effect. Why does the entail matter so much to the daughters? My answer: The entail matters so much to the daughters because the estate passes to Mr. Collins, leaving them poor if their father dies; marriage becomes their only security, which drives Mrs. Bennet's urgency.

> Mr. Bennet's property consisted almost entirely in an estate of two thousand a year, which, unfortunately for his daughters, was entailed (Chapter VII, paragraph 1)

Think-aloud: First, meaning. I read "Mr. Bennet's property consisted almost entirely in an estate of two thousand a year, which, unfortunately for his daughters, was entailed" slowly and put it in my own words: Mr. Bennet's estate must pass to a distant male relative, leaving his daughters unprovided for. Next, craft. I notice "unfortunately for his daughters," which shows the narrator's sympathy. The strongest word is "entailed": it is a legal word meaning restricted to male heirs. Then, effect. Why does the entail matter so much to the daughters? My answer: The entail matters so much to the daughters because the estate passes to Mr. Collins, leaving them poor if their father dies; marriage becomes their only security, which drives Mrs. Bennet's urgency.

40–55 min · We do: guided annotation · We do (15 min)
Guided analysis of a second quotation; expected answers given.
Ask: What words in this line stand out, and what do they suggest? Expected: "Glowing" is positive; "dirty" is the sisters' focus. Different readers judge the same image differently: theme of judgment. Ask: How does this line connect to family and reputation? Expected: The Bingley sisters sneer at her muddy petticoat. (The visual image that divides the Bingley sisters and Darcy.)

> with weary ankles, dirty stockings, and a face glowing with the warmth of exercise (Chapter VII, paragraph 45)

Ask: What words in this line stand out, and what do they suggest?
Expected answer: "Glowing" is positive; "dirty" is the sisters' focus. Different readers judge the same image differently: theme of judgment.
Ask: How does this line connect to family and reputation?
Expected answer: The Bingley sisters sneer at her muddy petticoat. (The visual image that divides the Bingley sisters and Darcy.)

55–70 min · You do: independent annotation · You do (15 min)
Independent annotation and a claim-evidence-reasoning paragraph (exemplar given).
Annotate the chapter for setting, characterization (three marks with a margin note each), then write one claim-evidence-reasoning paragraph: what does this chapter suggest about the entail and the officers? Then start your writing prompt at your assigned level (HS Sophomore: Analyze how Chapter VII develops the idea of the entail and the officers. Make a precise claim, support it with at least three pieces of textual evidence, and explain how the author's use of setting and plot shapes that idea. Address one possible counterclaim.) Exemplar: Elizabeth's walk to Netherfield shows her love for Jane matters more to her than propriety. When the text says "with weary ankles, dirty stockings, and a face glowing with the warmth of exercise" (Chapter VII, paragraph 45), it shows this directly. She arrives "with weary ankles, dirty stockings, and a face glowing," a picture of devotion that the Bingley sisters despise and Darcy admires.
Task: Annotate the chapter for setting, characterization (three marks with a margin note each), then write one claim-evidence-reasoning paragraph: what does this chapter suggest about the entail and the officers? Then start your writing prompt at your assigned level (HS Sophomore: Analyze how Chapter VII develops the idea of the entail and the officers. Make a precise claim, support it with at least three pieces of textual evidence, and explain how the author's use of setting and plot shapes that idea. Address one possible counterclaim.)
Exemplar: Elizabeth's walk to Netherfield shows her love for Jane matters more to her than propriety. When the text says "with weary ankles, dirty stockings, and a face glowing with the warmth of exercise" (Chapter VII, paragraph 45), it shows this directly. She arrives "with weary ankles, dirty stockings, and a face glowing," a picture of devotion that the Bingley sisters despise and Darcy admires.

70–80 min · Discussion · We do (10 min)
Structured discussion from the 30 tiered questions, with facilitation notes.
Anchor question: What does Elizabeth's long walk reveal about her values? Ask how each character would describe Elizabeth's arrival.
Anchor question: What does Elizabeth's long walk reveal about her values?
Facilitation: Ask how each character would describe Elizabeth's arrival.

80–87 min · Exit ticket / chapter quiz · You do (7 min)
Chapter quiz in the app and an exit ticket (answer given).
Chapter quiz in the app, then: In one sentence, what does this chapter suggest about the entail and the officers? Support it with one short quotation. Model answer: Elizabeth's walk to Netherfield shows her love for Jane matters more to her than propriety. ("with weary ankles, dirty stockings, and a face glowing with the warmth of exercise", Chapter VII, paragraph 45). Accept any defensible claim backed by a quotation from the chapter; the answer key for the quiz is in the Quiz section.
Exit ticket: In one sentence, what does this chapter suggest about the entail and the officers? Support it with one short quotation.
Answer: Model answer: Elizabeth's walk to Netherfield shows her love for Jane matters more to her than propriety. ("with weary ankles, dirty stockings, and a face glowing with the warmth of exercise", Chapter VII, paragraph 45). Accept any defensible claim backed by a quotation from the chapter; the answer key for the quiz is in the Quiz section.

87–90 min · Closure · I do (3 min)
Summarize the lesson and preview the next reading.
Today we saw how setting shapes the entail and the officers. Key takeaway: the Bingley sisters sneer at her muddy petticoat.

Total: 90 minutes.

Teacher analysis (spoilers)

Literary elements

- Setting: The entail and the militia: legal and social facts shaping the plot.
- Characterization: Elizabeth walks three miles through mud to nurse Jane, showing independence and affection.

Themes and how they develop

- family and reputation: the Bingley sisters sneer at her muddy petticoat.

Symbols and motifs

- marriage and money: Incomes, entails and fortunes are stated precisely; marriage is always also an economic question. In this chapter: "Bennet's property consisted almost entirely in an estate of two thousand a year, which, unfortunately for his daughters, was entailed in default" (Chapter VII, paragraph 1).
- first impressions and judgment: Characters judge quickly and must revise; the novel's working title was First Impressions. In this chapter: "of feeling should be guided by reason; and, in my opinion, exertion should always be in proportion to what is required" (Chapter VII, paragraph 42).

Key quotations (checked against the reading text)

- "Mr. Bennet's property consisted almost entirely in an estate of two thousand a year, which, unfortunately for his daughters, was entailed" (Chapter VII, paragraph 1) The entail: the economic stakes.
- "crossing field after field at a quick pace, jumping over stiles and springing over puddles" (Chapter VII, paragraph 45) Energetic, unconventional.
- "with weary ankles, dirty stockings, and a face glowing with the warmth of exercise" (Chapter VII, paragraph 45) The visual image that divides the Bingley sisters and Darcy.

Model claim-evidence-reasoning

Claim: Elizabeth's walk to Netherfield shows her love for Jane matters more to her than propriety.
Evidence: "with weary ankles, dirty stockings, and a face glowing with the warmth of exercise" (Chapter VII, paragraph 45)
Reasoning: She arrives "with weary ankles, dirty stockings, and a face glowing," a picture of devotion that the Bingley sisters despise and Darcy admires.

Vocabulary with etymology notes

Word	Definition (in this sentence)	In context	Word history
prognostics (noun)	predictions	Jane was therefore obliged to go on horseback, and her mother attended her to the door with many cheerful prognostics of a bad day.
coincided (verb)	agreed; were the same	I had hoped that our sentiments coincided in every particular, but I must so far differ from you as to think our two youngest daughters uncommonly foolish."	"coincided": Origin of "coincide": French coïncider; earlier Medieval Latin coincidere. (Liber et Libri origin note, https://en.wiktionary.org/wiki/coincide#Etymology)
milliner (noun)	a person who makes or sells women's hats	The village of Longbourn was only one mile from Meryton; a most convenient distance for the young ladies, who were usually tempted thither three or four times a week, to pay their duty to their aunt and to a milliner's shop just over the way.
effusions (noun)	an unrestrained expression of emotion	After listening one morning to their effusions on this subject, Mr.	"effusions": Origin of "effusion": Middle French effusion; earlier Latin effūsiō ("outpouring"). (Liber et Libri origin note, https://en.wiktionary.org/wiki/effusion#Etymology)
	a person who prepared and sold	The apothecary came, and having examined his patient, said, as apothecary (noun)	medicines and gave medical advice	might be supposed, that she had caught a violent cold, and that they must endeavour to get the better of it; advised her to return to bed, and promised her some draughts.

compassionate (adjective)	kind and caring toward others	"If you are not so compassionate as to dine today with Louisa and me, we shall be in danger of hating each other for the rest of our lives, for a whole day's tête-à-tête between two women can never end without a quarrel.	"compassionate": compassion + -ate; compassion is from Late Latin compati "to suffer with," from com- "with" + pati "to suffer." (Online Etymology Dictionary (hand-checked note), https://www.etymonline.com/word/compassionate)
politely (adverb)	in a polite manner	She was received, however, very politely by them; and in their brother's manners there was something better than politeness; there was good humour and kindness.
headache (noun)	a pain in the head	Jones—therefore do not be alarmed if you should hear of his having been to me—and excepting a sore-throat and headache there is not much the matter with me.
replying (verb)	react verbally	Bennet was prevented replying by the entrance of the footman with a note for Miss Bennet; it came from Netherfield, and the servant waited for an answer.	"replying": Origin of "reply": Old French replier ("to reply"); earlier Latin replicō ("to fold back"). (Liber et Libri origin note, https://en.wiktionary.org/wiki/reply#Etymology)
pursuit (noun)	the act of following someone to win or catch them up	Bennet, when Elizabeth had read the note aloud, "if your daughter should have a dangerous fit of illness, if she should die, it would be a comfort to know that it was all in pursuit of Mr.	"pursuit": Origin: Old French poursuite. (Liber et Libri origin note, https://en.wiktionary.org/wiki/pursuit#Etymology)

Discussion questions

1. What does Elizabeth's long walk reveal about her values?
2. Where does setting appear in this chapter, and what effect does it have? Point to one passage.
3. How does this chapter connect to the book's larger concern with pride and self-knowledge?

Classroom discussion questions (30, tiered)

Wait time after every question (3 s for DOK 1, 5 s for DOK 2, 8 to 10 s for DOK 3 and 4); think-pair-share on DOK 3 and 4; answer each response with a follow-up probe; close with student-generated questions. Focus sets by rigor level: Scaffolded support: 1, 2, 3, 4, 5, 6, 11, 12, 13, 14, 21, 22; HS Freshman: 1, 2, 3, 4, 5, 12, 13, 14, 15, 22, 23, 24; HS Sophomore: 1, 2, 3, 4, 13, 14, 15,

16, 17, 23, 24, 25; HS Junior: 1, 2, 3, 14, 15, 16, 17, 18, 24, 25, 26, 27; HS Senior: 1, 2, 3, 15, 16, 17, 18, 25, 26, 27, 28, 29; AP: 1, 2, 16, 17, 18, 19, 20, 26, 27, 28, 29, 30; College Freshman: 1, 2, 17, 18, 19, 20, 21, 22, 27, 28, 29, 30; College Sophomore: 1, 2, 11, 18, 19, 20, 21, 22, 23, 28, 29, 30; College Junior: 1, 11, 12, 19, 20, 21, 22, 23, 24, 25, 29, 30; College Senior: 1, 11, 12, 13, 20, 21, 22, 23, 24, 25, 26, 30; Graduate / PhD: 1, 11, 12, 13, 21, 22, 23, 24, 25, 26, 27, 28

Literal / recall

1. What is an entail? [DOK 1 · coldCallWithSupport · wait 3 s · AP: unit standards] Look for: A legal limit passing property to a set heir
2. Who chase the officers? [DOK 1 · turnAndTalk · wait 3 s · AP: unit standards] Look for: Kitty and Lydia
3. Why does Mrs. Bennet send Jane on horseback? [DOK 1 · coldCallWithSupport · wait 3 s · AP: unit standards] Look for: So rain will force her to stay at Netherfield
4. What happens to Jane? [DOK 1 · turnAndTalk · wait 3 s · AP: unit standards] Look for: She catches a cold and must stay
5. How does Elizabeth reach Netherfield? [DOK 1 · coldCallWithSupport · wait 3 s · AP: unit standards] Look for: She walks through mud
6. Retell the three most important events of “Chapter VII” in order, in one sentence each. [DOK 1 · turnAndTalk · wait 3 s · AP: unit standards] Look for: We learn Longbourn is entailed to a distant male relative. Kitty and Lydia chase officers stationed in Meryton. Jane, invited to Netherfield, rides there in the rain at her mother's scheming and falls ill; Elizabeth walks three miles through mud to nurse her.
7. Which characters appear or are mentioned in “Chapter VII”? Name two and one thing each says or does. [DOK 1 · coldCallWithSupport · wait 3 s · AP: unit standards] Look for: Names and actions taken from the chapter; check against the teacher summary.
8. Where and when does “Chapter VII” take place? Point to the line that tells you. [DOK 1 · turnAndTalk · wait 3 s · AP: unit standards] Look for: A place/time detail quoted from the chapter.
9. Reread: “Jane was therefore obliged to go on horseback, and her mother attended her to the door with many cheerful prognostics of a bad day.” What does “prognostics” mean here, and what is literally happening in this line? [DOK 1 · turnAndTalk · wait 3 s · AP: unit standards] Look for: prognostics: predictions.
10. Reread: “I had hoped that our sentiments coincided in every particular, but I must so far differ from you as to think our two youngest daughters uncommonly foolish.”” What does “coincided” mean here, and what is literally happening in this line? [DOK 1 · turnAndTalk · wait 3 s · AP: unit standards] Look for: coincided: agreed; were the same.

Inferential / analytical

1. What does “Chapter VII” suggest about the entail and the officers? State the inference and the line that supports it. [DOK 2 · thinkPairShare · wait 5 s · AP-LIT.LAN] Look for: Elizabeth's muddy walk shows her independence and affection, shocking the Netherfield ladies.
2. Find one example of setting in this chapter. What does it reveal that a plain statement would not? [DOK 2 · followUp · wait 5 s · AP-LIT.SET] Look for: Look for where and when events happen and how place shapes action or feeling.
3. How does the plot in this chapter shape what we understand about the entail and the officers? [DOK 3 · thinkPairShare · wait 8 s · AP-LIT.STR] Look for: Look for key events and the causes linking them.
   Answer guidance: A defensible line of argument: Elizabeth's walk to Netherfield shows her love for Jane matters more to her than propriety. Useful evidence: “Mr. Bennet’s property consisted almost entirely in an estate of two thousand a year, which, unfortunately for his daughters, was entailed" (Chapter VII, paragraph 1): The entail: the economic stakes. Theme link: the Bingley sisters sneer at her muddy petticoat. Credit any position that is supported by quotation and reasoning; push one-sided answers to address the strongest counterpoint.

4. In the passage that begins ""This is the only point, I flatter myself, on which we do not agree.", why might Austen have chosen these particular words? Pick two and explain their connotations. [DOK 2 · followUp · wait 5 s · AP-LIT.FIG] Look for: Diction analysis of two words in the anchor passage.
5. What causes the main turn in "Chapter VII", and what effect is it likely to have on what follows? [DOK 2 · followUp · wait 5 s · AP-LIT.STR] Look for: We learn Longbourn is entailed to a distant male relative. Kitty and Lydia chase officers stationed in Meryton. Jane, invited to Netherfield, rides there in the rain at her mother's scheming and falls ill; Elizabeth walks three miles through mud to nurse her.
6. How does "Chapter VII" build on "Chapter VI"? Name one link of cause and effect. [DOK 3 · thinkPairShare · wait 8 s · AP-LIT.STR] Look for: A causal or structural link between this and the previous chapter.
   Answer guidance: A defensible line of argument: Elizabeth's walk to Netherfield shows her love for Jane matters more to her than propriety. Useful evidence: "crossing field after field at a quick pace, jumping over stiles and springing over puddles" (Chapter VII, paragraph 45): Energetic, unconventional. Theme link: the Bingley sisters sneer at her muddy petticoat. Credit any position that is supported by quotation and reasoning; push one-sided answers to address the strongest counterpoint.
7. What can we infer about a character's motives from what they say and do here, as opposed to what they claim? [DOK 3 · followUp · wait 8 s · AP-LIT.CHR] Look for: An inference about motive supported by a quoted line.
   Answer guidance: A defensible line of argument: Elizabeth's walk to Netherfield shows her love for Jane matters more to her than propriety. Useful evidence: "with weary ankles, dirty stockings, and a face glowing with the warmth of exercise" (Chapter VII, paragraph 45): The visual image that divides the Bingley sisters and Darcy. On characterization: Elizabeth walks three miles through mud to nurse Jane, showing independence and affection. Credit any position that is supported by quotation and reasoning; push one-sided answers to address the strongest counterpoint.
8. The bell-ringer asked: "What does Elizabeth's long walk reveal about her values?" Now that we have read closely, how would you revise your first answer, and which line changed your mind? [DOK 2 · thinkPairShare · wait 5 s · AP-LIT.LAN] Look for: A revised answer anchored in the text.
9. Where does characterization appear, and how does it connect this chapter to the larger concern with pride and self-knowledge? [DOK 3 · followUp · wait 8 s · AP-LIT.CHR] Look for: Look for what characters say, do and think, and how others react to them.
   Answer guidance: A defensible line of argument: Elizabeth's walk to Netherfield shows her love for Jane matters more to her than propriety. Useful evidence: "Mr. Bennet's property consisted almost entirely in an estate of two thousand a year, which, unfortunately for his daughters, was entailed" (Chapter VII, paragraph 1): The entail: the economic stakes. On characterization: Elizabeth walks three miles through mud to nurse Jane, showing independence and affection. Credit any position that is supported by quotation and reasoning; push one-sided answers to address the strongest counterpoint.
10. Background: An entail restricted inheritance, usually to male heirs; militia regiments were stationed in towns during the Napoleonic wars. How does knowing this change the way you read one moment in the chapter? [DOK 3 · thinkPairShare · wait 8 s · AP-LIT.SET] Look for: A specific moment reread in light of the context.
    Answer guidance: A defensible line of argument: Elizabeth's walk to Netherfield shows her love for Jane matters more to her than propriety. Useful evidence: "crossing field after field at a quick pace, jumping over stiles and springing over puddles" (Chapter VII, paragraph 45): Energetic, unconventional. On setting: The entail and the militia: legal and social facts shaping the plot. Credit any position that is supported by quotation and reasoning; push one-sided answers to address the strongest counterpoint.

Evaluative / synthesis / creative

1. A critic might argue: "Elizabeth's muddy walk shows her independence and affection, shocking the Netherfield ladies." How far do you agree? Take a stand and defend it with two lines from the chapter. [DOK 3 · fourCorners · wait 8 s · AP-LIT.LAN] Look for: A defended position with evidence and one counterpoint.
   Answer guidance: A defensible line of argument: Elizabeth's walk to Netherfield shows her love for Jane matters more to her than propriety. Useful evidence: "with weary ankles, dirty stockings, and a face glowing with the warmth of exercise" (Chapter VII, paragraph 45): The visual image that divides the Bingley sisters and Darcy. Theme link: the Bingley sisters sneer at her muddy petticoat. Credit any position that is supported by quotation and reasoning; push one-sided answers to address the strongest counterpoint.
2. Which character in this chapter acts most wisely, and which least? Judge them by a standard you name. [DOK 3 · thinkPairShare · wait 8 s · AP-LIT.CHR, AP-LIT.LAN] Look for: An evaluation using an explicit criterion and evidence.
   Answer guidance: A defensible line of argument: Elizabeth's walk to Netherfield shows her love for Jane matters more to her than propriety. Useful evidence: "Mr. Bennet's property consisted almost entirely in an estate of two thousand a year, which, unfortunately for his daughters, was entailed" (Chapter VII, paragraph 1): The entail: the economic stakes. On characterization: Elizabeth walks three miles through mud to nurse Jane, showing independence and affection. Credit any position that is supported by quotation and reasoning; push one-sided answers to address the strongest counterpoint.
3. Rewrite one moment of "Chapter VII" from the point of view of a different character. What does the new angle reveal or hide about the entail and the officers? [DOK 4 · thinkPairShare · wait 8 s · AP-LIT.LAN, AP-LIT.NAR] Look for: A creative product with a rationale tied to the text.
   Answer guidance: A defensible line of argument: Elizabeth's walk to Netherfield shows her love for Jane matters more to her than propriety. Useful evidence: "crossing field after field at a quick pace, jumping over stiles and springing over puddles" (Chapter VII, paragraph 45): Energetic, unconventional. Theme link: the Bingley sisters sneer at her muddy petticoat. Credit any position that is supported by quotation and reasoning; push one-sided answers to address the strongest counterpoint.
4. Write three questions of your own about "Chapter VII": one recall, one "why/how", and one "should/what if". Trade with a partner and answer theirs. [DOK 3 · studentGenerated · wait 8 s · AP-LIT.LAN] Look for: Student-generated questions at three levels.
   Answer guidance: A defensible line of argument: Elizabeth's walk to Netherfield shows her love for Jane matters more to her than propriety. Useful evidence: "with weary ankles, dirty stockings, and a face glowing with the warmth of exercise" (Chapter VII, paragraph 45): The visual image that divides the Bingley sisters and Darcy. Theme link: the Bingley sisters sneer at her muddy petticoat. Credit any position that is supported by quotation and reasoning; push one-sided answers to address the strongest counterpoint.
5. Connect this chapter to marriage and money: is the link strong or weak so far? What would Austen need to show next to strengthen it? [DOK 4 · socraticCircle · wait 8 s · AP-LIT.LAN] Look for: A judgment of thematic development across the work.

Answer guidance: A defensible line of argument: Elizabeth's walk to Netherfield shows her love for Jane matters more to her than propriety. Useful evidence: “Mr. Bennet’s property consisted almost entirely in an estate of two thousand a year, which, unfortunately for his daughters, was entailed” (Chapter VII, paragraph 1): The entail: the economic stakes. Theme link: the Bingley sisters sneer at her muddy petticoat. Credit any position that is supported by quotation and reasoning; push one-sided answers to address the strongest counterpoint.

6. Is the setting in this chapter effective, or does it feel heavy-handed? Evaluate it as a reader would in a review. [DOK 3 · fourCorners · wait 8 s · AP-LIT.LAN, AP-LIT.SET] Look for: An evaluative judgment with criteria and evidence.

   Answer guidance: A defensible line of argument: Elizabeth's walk to Netherfield shows her love for Jane matters more to her than propriety. Useful evidence: “crossing field after field at a quick pace, jumping over stiles and springing over puddles” (Chapter VII, paragraph 45): Energetic, unconventional. On setting: The entail and the militia: legal and social facts shaping the plot. Credit any position that is supported by quotation and reasoning; push one-sided answers to address the strongest counterpoint.

7. Compare how “Chapter VII” treats the entail and the officers with how another text, film or event you know treats a similar idea. What does Pride and Prejudice see that the other misses? [DOK 4 · socraticCircle · wait 8 s · AP-LIT.LAN] Look for: A cross-text synthesis.

   Answer guidance: A defensible line of argument: Elizabeth's walk to Netherfield shows her love for Jane matters more to her than propriety. Useful evidence: “with weary ankles, dirty stockings, and a face glowing with the warmth of exercise” (Chapter VII, paragraph 45): The visual image that divides the Bingley sisters and Darcy. Theme link: the Bingley sisters sneer at her muddy petticoat. Credit any position that is supported by quotation and reasoning; push one-sided answers to address the strongest counterpoint.

8. Predict what “Chapter VIII” will bring, using two clues from this chapter. After reading, evaluate your prediction. [DOK 3 · thinkPairShare · wait 8 s · AP-LIT.LAN, AP-LIT.STR] Look for: A prediction or judgment justified with textual clues.

   Answer guidance: A defensible line of argument: Elizabeth's walk to Netherfield shows her love for Jane matters more to her than propriety. Useful evidence: “Mr. Bennet’s property consisted almost entirely in an estate of two thousand a year, which, unfortunately for his daughters, was entailed” (Chapter VII, paragraph 1): The entail: the economic stakes. Theme link: the Bingley sisters sneer at her muddy petticoat. Credit any position that is supported by quotation and reasoning; push one-sided answers to address the strongest counterpoint.

9. Design a one-paragraph modern adaptation of this chapter (setting, characters, conflict). What must stay the same for it to still be about the entail and the officers? [DOK 4 · thinkPairShare · wait 8 s · AP-LIT.LAN] Look for: A creative transfer that keeps the core idea.

   Answer guidance: A defensible line of argument: Elizabeth's walk to Netherfield shows her love for Jane matters more to her than propriety. Useful evidence: “crossing field after field at a quick pace, jumping over stiles and springing over puddles” (Chapter VII, paragraph 45): Energetic, unconventional. Theme link: the Bingley sisters sneer at her muddy petticoat. Credit any position that is supported by quotation and reasoning; push one-sided answers to address the strongest counterpoint.

10. What question would you most like to ask Jane Austen about this chapter, and what answer do you think the text itself gives? [DOK 4 · studentGenerated · wait 8 s · AP-LIT.LAN] Look for: A student-generated question answered from evidence.

Answer guidance: A defensible line of argument: Elizabeth's walk to Netherfield shows her love for Jane matters more to her than propriety. Useful evidence: “with weary ankles, dirty stockings, and a face glowing with the warmth of exercise” (Chapter VII, paragraph 45): The visual image that divides the Bingley sisters and Darcy. Theme link: the Bingley sisters sneer at her muddy petticoat. Credit any position that is supported by quotation and reasoning; push one-sided answers to address the strongest counterpoint.

Annotation focus

- Setting: look for where and when events happen and how place shapes action or feeling (anchor passage in the We do segment)
- Also notice Plot: key events and the causes linking them
- Also notice Characterization: what characters say, do and think, and how others react to them

Chapter quiz: item bank (all eleven rigor versions)

1. [mc · recall · DOK 1] In the line “The village of Longbourn was only one mile from Meryton; a most convenient distance for the young ladies, who were usually tempted thither three or four times a week, to pay their duty to their aunt and to a milliner’s…”, what does “milliner” most nearly mean?

   A. a person who makes or sells women's hats
   B. winning favor in a sly, flattering way
   C. bad handling or management
   D. lavish; very generous (in giving thanks or praise)

   Key: A (a person who makes or sells women's hats)

2. [mc · recall · DOK 1] How does Elizabeth reach Netherfield?

   A. She walks through mud
   B. By carriage
   C. By boat
   D. On horseback

   Key: A (She walks through mud)

3. [fill · recall · DOK 1] Fill in the blank with the vocabulary word that fits: “If you are not so _____ as to dine today with Louisa and me, we shall be in danger of hating each other for the rest of our lives, for a whole day’s tête-à-tête between two women can never end without a quarrel.” Word bank: milliner, compassionate, coincided, prognostics

   Key: compassionate

4. [mc · recall · DOK 1] Which word completes this sentence from Chapter VII, paragraph 6? “From all that I can collect by your manner of talking, you must be two of the _____ girls in the country.”

   A. silliest
   B. respectable
   C. answered
   D. benevolence

   Key: A (silliest)

5. [fill · recall · DOK 1] Complete the quotation from Chapter VII, paragraph 45: “with weary ankles, dirty _____, and a face glowing with the warmth of exercise”

   Key: stockings

6. [fill · recall · DOK 1] Fill in the blank with the vocabulary word that fits: “She was received, however, very _____ by them; and in their brother’s manners there was something better than politeness; there was good humour and kindness.” Word bank: coincided, politely, milliner, prognostics

   Key: politely

7. [mc · recall · DOK 1] Which word completes this sentence from Chapter VII, paragraph 29? “But if you have got them today,’ said Elizabeth, ‘my mother’s purpose will be _____.”

   A. answered
   B. connections
   C. scheme
   D. children

   Key: A (answered)

8. [mc · recall · DOK 1] In the line “Jane was therefore obliged to go on horseback, and her mother attended her to the door with many cheerful prognostics of a bad day.”, what does “prognostics” most nearly mean?

   A. predictions
   B. formal or perfunctory politeness
   C. a ban; something that stops activity
   D. improvement (here: in Jane's health)

   Key: A (predictions)

9. [mc · recall · DOK 1] What happens to Jane?

   A. She is engaged
   B. She gets lost
   C. She meets Wickham
   D. She catches a cold and must stay

   Key: D (She catches a cold and must stay)

10. [mc · inference · DOK 2] Which of these passages comes earliest in Chapter VII?

    A. “Catherine was disconcerted, and made no answer; but Lydia, with perfect indifference, continued to express her admiration of Captain…”
    B. “They could talk of nothing but officers; and Mr. Bingley’s large fortune, the mention of which gave animation to their mother, was…”
    C. “From all that I can collect by your manner of talking, you must be two of the silliest girls in the country.”
    D. “Mr. Philips visited them all, and this opened to his nieces a source of felicity unknown before.”

    Key: D (“Mr. Philips visited them all, and this opened to his nieces a source of felicity unknown before.”)

11. [short · inference · DOK 2] What does this passage from Chapter VII, paragraph 12 reveal about the character or situation? “I remember the time when I liked a red coat myself very well—and indeed so I do still at my heart; and if a smart young colonel, with five or six thousand a year, should want one of my girls, I shall not say nay to him; and I thought…” Answer in two or three sentences with one detail.

Sample answer: The passage (Chapter VII, paragraph 12) shows the situation turning on first impressions and prejudice: the Bingley sisters sneer at her muddy petticoat. The words "regimentals" and "becoming" are the proof, because they show how the moment looks to the people in it. They suggest more than the narrator states outright.

12. [short · inference · DOK 2] What can you infer from this line? "crossing field after field at a quick pace, jumping over stiles and springing over puddles" (Chapter VII, paragraph 45) Answer in two or three sentences with one detail.
    Sample answer: Energetic, unconventional. The evidence is "crossing field after field at a quick pace, jumping over stiles and springing over puddles" (Chapter VII, paragraph 45). This develops family and reputation: the Bingley sisters sneer at her muddy petticoat.

13. [mc · inference · DOK 2] Which choice best states a central concern of "Chapter VII"?
    A. Visit to Hunsford
    B. The entail and the officers
    C. First impressions at the ball
    D. Sisters and judgment

    Key: B (The entail and the officers)

14. [short · analysis · DOK 3] Analyze how the word choice in this passage from Chapter VII, paragraph 23 shapes its tone: "No, my dear, you had better go on horseback, because it seems likely to rain; and then you must stay all night." Pick two words and explain their effect.
    Sample answer: The words "horseback" and "because" (Chapter VII, paragraph 23) make the tone heavy and deliberate rather than neutral. That weight points the reader to class and social mobility: the Bingley sisters sneer at her muddy petticoat. The author chooses them so the moment feels significant instead of passing.

15. [short · analysis · DOK 3] Analyze the word choice in "with weary ankles, dirty stockings, and a face glowing with the warmth of exercise" (Chapter VII, paragraph 45). Pick two words and explain what they suggest.
    Sample answer: The visual image that divides the Bingley sisters and Darcy. The evidence is "with weary ankles, dirty stockings, and a face glowing with the warmth of exercise" (Chapter VII, paragraph 45). This develops family and reputation: the Bingley sisters sneer at her muddy petticoat. The words "stockings" and "exercise" carry that meaning: they are the charged choices in the line, and changing either would soften the effect.

16. [short · synthesis · DOK 4] Synthesis: trace how family and reputation develops from Chapter II to Chapter VII. Use one quotation from each.
    Sample answer: Earlier, in Chapter II, paragraph 1, the text reads "Mr. Bennet was among the earliest of those who waited on Mr. Bingley" — Opening reversal: he has done what he pretended to refuse. In Chapter VII, "Mr. Bennet's property consisted almost entirely in an estate of two thousand a year, which, unfortunately for his daughters, was entailed" (Chapter VII, paragraph 1), which shows the entail: the economic stakes. The Bingley sisters sneer at her muddy petticoat.

17. [mc · recall · DOK 1] Why does Mrs. Bennet send Jane on horseback?
    A. For exercise
    B. To save money
    C. So rain will force her to stay at Netherfield
    D. Because the carriage is broken

    Key: C (So rain will force her to stay at Netherfield)

18. [fill · recall · DOK 1] Fill in the blank with the vocabulary word that fits: "The _____ came, and having examined his patient, said, as might be supposed, that she had caught a violent cold, and that they must endeavour to get the better of it; advised her to return to bed, and promised her some draughts." Word bank:

prognostics, coincided, milliner, apothecary

Key: apothecary

19. [mc · recall · DOK 1] In the line “After listening one morning to their effusions on this subject, Mr.”, what does “effusions” most nearly mean?

    A. an unrestrained expression of emotion

    B. with care and persistence

    C. a man who has recently been married

    D. calmed

    Key: A (an unrestrained expression of emotion)

20. [mc · recall · DOK 1] Who chase the officers?

    A. Mrs. Bennet

    B. Mary and Charlotte

    C. Jane and Elizabeth

    D. Kitty and Lydia

    Key: D (Kitty and Lydia)

21. [fill · recall · DOK 1] Fill in the blank with the vocabulary word that fits: “Jones—therefore do not be alarmed if you should hear of his having been to me—and excepting a sore-throat and _____ there is not much the matter with me.” Word bank: coincided, prognostics, milliner, headache

    Key: headache

22. [fill · recall · DOK 1] Complete the quotation from Chapter VII, paragraph 1: “Mr. Bennet’s property consisted almost entirely in an estate of two thousand a year, which, _____ for his daughters, was entailed”

    Key: unfortunately

23. [mc · analysis · DOK 3] Which literary element does this describe in “Chapter VII”? Elizabeth walks three miles through mud to nurse Jane, showing independence and affection.

    A. Characterization

    B. Imagery

    C. Symbolism

    D. Hyperbole

    Key: A (Characterization)

24. [short · analysis · DOK 3] Claim: Elizabeth's walk to Netherfield shows her love for Jane matters more to her than propriety. Explain how this evidence supports the claim: “with weary ankles, dirty stockings, and a face glowing with the warmth of exercise” (Chapter VII, paragraph 45).

    Sample answer: She arrives "with weary ankles, dirty stockings, and a face glowing," a picture of devotion that the Bingley sisters despise and Darcy admires. The evidence is “with weary ankles, dirty stockings, and a face glowing with the warmth of exercise” (Chapter VII, paragraph 45), which shows the visual image that divides the Bingley sisters and Darcy. This develops family and reputation: the Bingley sisters sneer at her muddy petticoat.

25. [mc · analysis · DOK 3] Which literary element does this describe in “Chapter VII”? The entail and the militia: legal and social facts shaping the plot.

    A. Setting

    B. Theme

    C. Foreshadowing

D. Simile

Key: A (Setting)

26. [fill · recall · DOK 1] Complete the quotation from Chapter VII, paragraph 12: “When they get to our age I dare say they will not think about _____ any more than we do.” Word bank: answered, following, father, officers
Key: officers

27. [short · inference · DOK 2] What does this passage from Chapter VII, paragraph 49 reveal about the character or situation? “Miss Bingley offered her the carriage, and she only wanted a little pressing to accept it, when Jane testified such concern in parting with her, that Miss Bingley was obliged to convert the offer of the chaise into an invitation to remain…” Answer in two or three sentences with one detail.
Sample answer: The passage (Chapter VII, paragraph 49) shows the situation turning on first impressions and prejudice: the Bingley sisters sneer at her muddy petticoat. The words “invitation” and “testified” are the proof, because they show how the moment looks to the people in it. They suggest more than the narrator states outright.

28. [short · synthesis · DOK 4] Connect this passage from Chapter VII, paragraph 4 to the story's treatment of marriage and money: “They could talk of nothing but officers; and Mr. Bingley’s large fortune, the mention of which gave animation to their mother, was worthless in their eyes when opposed to the regimentals of an ensign.” Use one other moment from the story as well.
Sample answer: This passage (Chapter VII, paragraph 4) develops marriage and money: the Bingley sisters sneer at her muddy petticoat. Its words “regimentals” and “worthless” carry that idea into this moment. The same concern returns in “Catherine was disconcerted, and made no answer; but Lydia, with perfect indifference, continued to express her…” (Chapter VII, paragraph 7), so the two passages read as a pattern, not a single moment. Together they show the story treating marriage and money as central.

29. [short · synthesis · DOK 4] Connect this passage from Chapter VII, paragraph 39 to the story's treatment of women's limited choices: “I shall be very fit to see Jane—which is all I want.” Use one other moment from the story as well.
Sample answer: This passage (Chapter VII, paragraph 39) develops women's limited choices: the Bingley sisters sneer at her muddy petticoat. Its words its wording carry that idea into this moment. The same concern returns in “The distance is nothing, when one has a motive; only three miles.” (Chapter VII, paragraph 41), so the two passages read as a pattern, not a single moment. Together they show the story treating women's limited choices as central.

30. [mc · recall · DOK 1 · AP: AP-LIT.STR] What is an entail?

A. A legal limit passing property to a set heir

B. A marriage contract

C. A dance

D. A kind of carriage

Key: A (A legal limit passing property to a set heir)

31. [short · analysis · DOK 3 · AP: AP-LIT.FIG] Analyze how the word choice in this passage from Chapter VII, paragraph 31 shapes its tone: “Till the next morning, however, she was not aware of all the felicity of her contrivance.” Pick two words and explain their effect.
Sample answer: The words “contrivance” and “felicity” (Chapter VII, paragraph 31) make the tone heavy and deliberate rather than neutral. That weight points the reader to pride and self-knowledge: the Bingley sisters sneer at her muddy petticoat. The author chooses them so the moment feels significant instead of passing.

32. [short · synthesis · DOK 4 · AP: AP-LIT.LAN] Connect this passage from Chapter VII, paragraph 47 to the story's treatment of marriage and money: “Miss Bennet had slept ill, and though up, was very feverish and not well enough to leave her room." Use one other moment from the story as well.

Sample answer: This passage (Chapter VII, paragraph 47) develops marriage and money: the Bingley sisters sneer at her muddy petticoat. Its words "feverish" and "enough" carry that idea into this moment. The same concern returns in "She was not equal, however, to much conversation, and when Miss Bingley left them together, could attempt little beside…" (Chapter VII, paragraph 47), so the two passages read as a pattern, not a single moment. Together they show the story treating marriage and money as central.

33. [fill · recall · DOK 1 · AP: AP-LIT.FIG] Complete the quotation from Chapter VII, paragraph 2: "She had a sister married to a Mr. Philips, who had been a clerk to their father, and succeeded him in the business, and a brother settled in London in a _____ line of trade." Word bank: respectable, silliest, astonished, felicity

    Key: respectable

34. [mc · recall · DOK 1 · AP: AP-LIT.FIG] In the line "I had hoped that our sentiments coincided in every particular, but I must so far differ from you as to think our two youngest daughters uncommonly foolish.", what does "coincided" most nearly mean?

    A. agreed; were the same

    B. cause to be embarrassed; cause to feel self-conscious

    C. nearness; closeness (of place)

    D. put into a rage; make violently angry

    Key: A (agreed; were the same)

35. [fill · recall · DOK 1 · AP: AP-LIT.STR] Complete the quotation from Chapter VII, paragraph 45: "crossing field after field at a quick pace, jumping over stiles and _____ over puddles"

    Key: springing

36. [short · inference · DOK 2 · AP: AP-LIT.CHR] What can you infer from this line? "Mr. Bennet's property consisted almost entirely in an estate of two thousand a year, which, unfortunately for his daughters, was entailed" (Chapter VII, paragraph 1) Answer in two or three sentences with one detail.

    Sample answer: The entail: the economic stakes. The evidence is "Mr. Bennet's property consisted almost entirely in an estate of two thousand a year, which, unfortunately for his daughters, was entailed" (Chapter VII, paragraph 1).

37. [fill · recall · DOK 1 · Dual Credit (Indiana College Core): ICC-WC-1.5] Complete the quotation from Chapter VII, paragraph 40: "Is this a hint to me, Lizzy,' said her _____, 'to send for the horses?" Word bank: alternative, officers, father, connections

    Key: father

38. [mc · inference · DOK 2 · Dual Credit (Indiana College Core): ICC-WC-1.5] What does this passage most clearly show? "with weary ankles, dirty stockings, and a face glowing with the warmth of exercise" (Chapter VII, paragraph 45)

    A. The key to Charlotte's marriage.

    B. The dramatic irony stated directly.

    C. The visual image that divides the Bingley sisters and Darcy.

    D. The chapter opens with the letter she asked for.

    Key: C (The visual image that divides the Bingley sisters and Darcy.)

39. [short · synthesis · DOK 4 · Dual Credit (Indiana College Core): ICC-WC-1.5] Close reading: how do the diction and syntax of "crossing field after field at a quick pace, jumping over stiles and springing over puddles" (Chapter VII, paragraph 45) shape its meaning? Consider a second, competing reading.

    Sample answer: Energetic, unconventional. The evidence is "crossing field after field at a quick pace, jumping over stiles and springing over puddles" (Chapter VII, paragraph 45). This develops family and reputation: the Bingley sisters sneer at her muddy petticoat. The words "springing" and "crossing" carry that meaning: they are the charged choices in the line, and changing either would soften the effect. She arrives "with weary ankles, dirty stockings, and a face glowing," a picture of devotion that the Bingley sisters despise and Darcy admires.

40. [short · synthesis · DOK 4 · Dual Credit (Indiana College Core): ICC-WC-1.5] Close reading: how do the diction and syntax of "Mr. Bennet's property consisted almost entirely in an estate of two thousand a year, which, unfortunately for his daughters, was entailed" (Chapter VII, paragraph 1) shape its meaning? Consider a second, competing reading.

    Sample answer: The entail: the economic stakes. The evidence is "Mr. Bennet's property consisted almost entirely in an estate of two thousand a year, which, unfortunately for his daughters, was entailed" (Chapter VII, paragraph 1). This develops family and reputation: the Bingley sisters sneer at her muddy petticoat. The words "unfortunately" and "consisted" carry that meaning: they are the charged choices in the line, and changing either would soften the effect. She arrives "with weary ankles, dirty stockings, and a face glowing," a picture of devotion that the Bingley sisters despise and Darcy admires.

Rigor version	Items (in order)	Mix
Scaffolded support	1, 2, 3, 4, 5, 6, 7, 8, 9, 10, 11, 12, 13, 14, 15, 16	recall 9, inference 4, analysis 2, synthesis 1
HS Freshman	1, 17, 18, 3, 8, 19, 5, 20, 21, 22, 12, 13, 23, 24, 25, 16	recall 10, inference 2, analysis 3, synthesis 1
HS Sophomore	6, 4, 20, 21, 3, 26, 2, 27, 13, 11, 10, 14, 25, 24, 28, 29	recall 7, inference 4, analysis 3, synthesis 2
HS Junior	6, 18, 1, 9, 30, 27, 10, 11, 13, 12, 24, 14, 31, 25, 32, 28	recall 5, inference 5, analysis 4, synthesis 2
HS Senior	33, 2, 5, 34, 35, 27, 13, 11, 10, 23, 14, 31, 24, 28, 29, 16	recall 5, inference 4, analysis 4, synthesis 3
AP	18, 17, 33, 36, 13, 10, 27, 14, 23, 25, 31, 15, 29, 28, 16, 32	recall 3, inference 4, analysis 5, synthesis 4
College Freshman	7, 18, 37, 38, 10, 11, 13, 31, 14, 25, 23, 29, 28, 16, 39, 40	recall 3, inference 4, analysis 4, synthesis 5
College Sophomore	18, 4, 3, 36, 10, 12, 27, 25, 14, 31, 23, 24, 29, 28, 32, 16	recall 3, inference 4, analysis 5, synthesis 4
College Junior	18, 6, 27, 36, 10, 13, 11, 23, 14, 31, 25, 15, 29, 32, 28, 16	recall 2, inference 5, analysis 5, synthesis 4
College Senior	18, 3, 11, 10, 13, 24, 31, 14, 23, 25, 32, 28, 39, 29, 40, 16	recall 2, inference 3, analysis 5, synthesis 6
Graduate / PhD	5, 18, 13, 10, 27, 25, 23, 15, 14, 31, 32, 39, 16, 28, 40, 29	recall 2, inference 3, analysis 5, synthesis 6

Writing prompts (eleven rigor levels)

Scaffolded support (250 words; AP: see unit standards): Supported track (work from the passage your teacher selects). In "Chapter VII," how does Austen show the entail and the officers? Write a paragraph that states your claim, quotes two details from the passage, and explains how each detail supports your idea. Use the setting you noticed as one piece of evidence.

HS Freshman (350 words; AP: see unit standards): In Chapter VII, how does Austen develop the idea of the entail and the officers? State a clear claim, support it with two or three quotations, and explain how the setting in the chapter helps build that idea.

HS Sophomore (450 words; AP: see unit standards): Analyze how Chapter VII develops the idea of the entail and the officers. Make a precise claim, support it with at least three pieces of textual evidence, and explain how the author's use of setting and plot shapes that idea. Address one possible counterclaim.

HS Junior (550 words; AP: see unit standards): Analyze how the structure of Chapter VII (where it begins, turns and ends) and its setting shape the reader's understanding of the entail and the officers. Identify one place where the text leaves matters uncertain and explain how that uncertainty adds to its meaning.

HS Senior (600 words; AP: see unit standards): Two readers disagree about what Chapter VII suggests about the entail and the officers. Lay out two plausible interpretations, weigh the evidence for each (including the chapter's setting and plot), and argue for the stronger one in a sustained, well-organized essay.

AP (650 words; AP: AP-LIT.SET, AP-LIT.LAN): Write a literary argument in which you analyze how Jane Austen uses setting in Chapter VII to complicate the reader's understanding of the entail and the officers. Develop a defensible thesis, select evidence purposefully, and explain how specific choices of diction and syntax create meaning.

College Freshman (1000 words; AP: see unit standards): Situate Chapter VII within its historical and literary context and argue how the chapter's treatment of the entail and the officers responds to that context. Engage with at least one secondary perspective (a critic, historian or the author's own statements), integrate quotations smoothly, and cite in MLA style.

College Sophomore (1250 words; AP: see unit standards): Read Chapter VII alongside the conventions of its genre and period. Argue how the chapter's handling of the entail and the officers follows or bends those conventions, using the setting as evidence, and test your reading against one published critic. Document two secondary sources in MLA.

College Junior (1500 words; AP: see unit standards): Apply a named critical approach (for example formalist, historicist, feminist, psychoanalytic or ecocritical) to Chapter VII and its treatment of the entail and the officers. State your method, show what it reveals in the chapter's setting and plot, and identify where the text resists it.

College Senior (2000 words; AP: see unit standards): Develop a research argument that reads Chapter VII as evidence for a larger claim about the entail and the officers in Pride and Prejudice. Connect close reading of the chapter to the whole novel, engage at least four scholarly sources, and state precisely where your reading departs from theirs (Chicago style).

Graduate / PhD (2500 words; AP: see unit standards): Develop an original argument that reads Chapter VII as a hinge in the novel's larger treatment of the entail and the officers. Position your reading within a named critical conversation (for example formalist, historicist, psychoanalytic, feminist or postcolonial approaches), account for the textual history where relevant, and articulate the stakes of your intervention for scholarship on Pride and Prejudice.

SAT-style questions

1. The village of Longbourn was only one mile from Meryton; a most convenient distance for the young ladies, who were usually tempted thither three or four times a week, to pay their duty to their aunt and to a milliner's shop just over the way.

   As used in the text, what does the word "milliner" most nearly mean?

   A. the act of following someone to win or catch them up

   B. a pain in the head

   C. a person who makes or sells women's hats

   D. react verbally

2. "This is the only point, I flatter myself, on which we do not agree. I had hoped that our sentiments coincided in every particular, but I must so far differ from you as to think our two youngest daughters uncommonly foolish."

   Which choice best states a central concern of "Chapter VII"?

   A. A persuasive tale

   B. Consequences of refusal

   C. Family in crisis

   D. The entail and the officers

SAT key: 1. C (a person who makes or sells women's hats); 2. D (The entail and the officers)

Lesson 9: Chapter VIII

Focus: the accomplished woman

Objective: Students will analyze how characterization develops in "Chapter VIII" by writing a claim-evidence-reasoning paragraph that cites at least 2 quotations from the section, and will score at least 80% on the section quiz.

Standards: AP: see the unit standards

Content note (alcohol or drugs (mentioned)): This section mentions drinking or a drug ("…t, he was an indolent man, who lived only to eat, drink, and play at cards, who when he found h…"). Treat it as period custom or plot detail; name it plainly and don't glamorize it.
Student preview: This section mentions drinking or a drug.
Suggested language: "What does this detail add to the scene?"

Teacher only · spoilers

At Netherfield the Bingley sisters mock Elizabeth's muddy petticoat. Darcy, Miss Bingley and Elizabeth debate what makes an 'accomplished' woman; Darcy adds 'extensive reading.'

Background: Female 'accomplishments' (music, drawing, languages) were valued as marriage assets.

Significance: Elizabeth's skepticism about impossible standards is a sly critique of how women were judged.

Lesson plan and lecture script (90 minutes)

0–8 min · Bell-ringer · You do (8 min)
Students write to the bell-ringer, then pair-share.
What does the debate about accomplishments reveal about each speaker? Write for five minutes. Starters: I think... because... / This connects to women's choices because.... Content note before we start: This section mentions drinking or a drug.
Prompt: What does the debate about accomplishments reveal about each speaker?
Sentence starters: I think… because… · This connects to women's choices because…
Strong response: A strong response takes a position and anticipates this: accomplishments as a marriage market display.

8–18 min · Vocabulary with etymology notes · I do (10 min)
Five key words in context, with verified word histories.
Today's words: undervaluing — treating as less valuable than it is; netting — making by knotting thread into a net; scampering — running about hurriedly; solaced — comforted; inattention — lack of attention. "scampering": Origin of "scamper": possibly Dutch schamperen; earlier Old French escamper. "solaced": Origin of "solace": Old French solas. "inattention": Origin: French inattention.
Words: undervaluing: treating as less valuable than it is · netting: making by knotting thread into a net · scampering: running about hurriedly · solaced: comforted · inattention: lack of attention

18–28 min · Background and context · I do (10 min)
Mini-lecture (read or adapt the script).
Female 'accomplishments' (music, drawing, languages) were valued as marriage assets. Elizabeth's skepticism about impossible standards is a sly critique of how women were judged. Characterization: The "accomplished woman" debate reveals Miss Bingley's flattery, Darcy's high standards and Elizabeth's skepticism. Irony: Miss Bingley's list of accomplishments is designed to describe herself. Watch for pride: Pride is discussed openly and shown in action; who is proud, and whether pride is a fault, keeps shifting. In this chapter: "were pronounced to be very bad indeed, a mixture of pride and impertinence; she had no conversation, no style, no taste, no" (Chapter VIII, paragraph 3).

28–40 min · I do: modeled close reading · I do (12 min)
Model the close reading of the anchor quotation using the written think-aloud below.
First, meaning. I read "A woman must have a thorough knowledge of music, singing, drawing, dancing, and the modern languages, to deserve the word" slowly and put it in my own words: Miss Bingley lists all the things a woman must master to deserve the word "accomplished." Next, craft. I notice the long list, which grows absurd as it goes on. The strongest word is "deserve": it suggests worth must be earned by a checklist. Then, effect. Why does Miss Bingley's list of accomplishments seem ridiculous? My answer: Miss Bingley is showing off and trying to impress Darcy; Austen mocks the idea of a perfect woman.

> A woman must have a thorough knowledge of music, singing, drawing, dancing, and the modern languages, to deserve the word (Chapter VIII, paragraph 50)

Think-aloud: First, meaning. I read "A woman must have a thorough knowledge of music, singing, drawing, dancing, and the modern languages, to deserve the word" slowly and put it in my own words: Miss Bingley lists all the things a woman must master to deserve the word "accomplished." Next, craft. I notice the long list, which grows absurd as it goes on. The strongest word is "deserve": it suggests worth must be earned by a checklist. Then, effect. Why does Miss Bingley's list of accomplishments seem ridiculous? My answer: Miss Bingley is showing off and trying to impress Darcy; Austen mocks the idea of a perfect woman.

40–55 min · We do: guided annotation · We do (15 min)
Guided analysis of a second quotation; expected answers given.
Ask: What words in this line stand out, and what do they suggest? Expected: Elizabeth's wit punctures the standard. Darcy's addition of "reading" shows he values intelligence. Ask: How does this line connect to women's choices? Expected: Accomplishments as a marriage market display. (Darcy's addition: values mind.)

> the improvement of her mind by extensive reading (Chapter VIII, paragraph 51)

Ask: What words in this line stand out, and what do they suggest?
Expected answer: Elizabeth's wit punctures the standard. Darcy's addition of "reading" shows he values intelligence.
Ask: How does this line connect to women's choices?
Expected answer: Accomplishments as a marriage market display. (Darcy's addition: values mind.)

55–70 min · You do: independent annotation · You do (15 min)

Independent annotation and a claim-evidence-reasoning paragraph (exemplar given).

Annotate the chapter for characterization, irony (three marks with a margin note each), then write one claim-evidence-reasoning paragraph: what does this chapter suggest about the accomplished woman? Then start your writing prompt at your assigned level (HS Sophomore: Analyze how Chapter VIII develops the idea of the accomplished woman. Make a precise claim, support it with at least three pieces of textual evidence, and explain how the author's use of characterization and irony shapes that idea. Address one possible counterclaim.) Exemplar: The debate shows that "accomplishment" is a social performance for the marriage market, which Elizabeth mocks. When the text says “I am no longer surprised at your knowing only six accomplished women. I rather wonder now at your knowing any” (Chapter VIII, paragraph 52), it shows this directly. Miss Bingley's list of music, drawing and languages describes skills for display, while Elizabeth replies that she wonders at Darcy "knowing any," exposing the impossibility of the ideal.

Task: Annotate the chapter for characterization, irony (three marks with a margin note each), then write one claim-evidence-reasoning paragraph: what does this chapter suggest about the accomplished woman? Then start your writing prompt at your assigned level (HS Sophomore: Analyze how Chapter VIII develops the idea of the accomplished woman. Make a precise claim, support it with at least three pieces of textual evidence, and explain how the author's use of characterization and irony shapes that idea. Address one possible counterclaim.)

Exemplar: The debate shows that "accomplishment" is a social performance for the marriage market, which Elizabeth mocks. When the text says “I am no longer surprised at your knowing only six accomplished women. I rather wonder now at your knowing any” (Chapter VIII, paragraph 52), it shows this directly. Miss Bingley's list of music, drawing and languages describes skills for display, while Elizabeth replies that she wonders at Darcy "knowing any," exposing the impossibility of the ideal.

70–80 min · Discussion · We do (10 min)

Structured discussion from the 30 tiered questions, with facilitation notes.

Anchor question: What does the debate about accomplishments reveal about each speaker? Compare with modern "accomplishments": résumés, social media.

Anchor question: What does the debate about accomplishments reveal about each speaker?

Facilitation: Compare with modern "accomplishments": résumés, social media.

80–87 min · Exit ticket / chapter quiz · You do (7 min)
Chapter quiz in the app and an exit ticket (answer given).
Chapter quiz in the app, then: In one sentence, what does this chapter suggest about the accomplished woman? Support it with one short quotation. Model answer: The debate shows that "accomplishment" is a social performance for the marriage market, which Elizabeth mocks. (“I am no longer surprised at your knowing only six accomplished women. I rather wonder now at your knowing any”, Chapter VIII, paragraph 52). Accept any defensible claim backed by a quotation from the chapter; the answer key for the quiz is in the Quiz section.
Exit ticket: In one sentence, what does this chapter suggest about the accomplished woman? Support it with one short quotation.
Answer: Model answer: The debate shows that "accomplishment" is a social performance for the marriage market, which Elizabeth mocks. (“I am no longer surprised at your knowing only six accomplished women. I rather wonder now at your knowing any”, Chapter VIII, paragraph 52). Accept any defensible claim backed by a quotation from the chapter; the answer key for the quiz is in the Quiz section.

87–90 min · Closure · I do (3 min)
Summarize the lesson and preview the next reading.
Today we saw how characterization shapes the accomplished woman. Key takeaway: accomplishments as a marriage market display.

Total: 90 minutes.

Teacher analysis (spoilers)

Literary elements

- Characterization: The "accomplished woman" debate reveals Miss Bingley's flattery, Darcy's high standards and Elizabeth's skepticism.
- Irony: Miss Bingley's list of accomplishments is designed to describe herself.

Themes and how they develop

- women's choices: accomplishments as a marriage market display.

Symbols and motifs

- pride: Pride is discussed openly and shown in action; who is proud, and whether pride is a fault, keeps shifting. In this chapter: “were pronounced to be very bad indeed, a mixture of pride and impertinence; she had no conversation, no style, no taste, no” (Chapter VIII, paragraph 3).
- first impressions and judgment: Characters judge quickly and must revise; the novel's working title was First Impressions. In this chapter: “many men, I dare say, it succeeds. But, in my opinion, it is a paltry device, a very mean art” (Chapter VIII, paragraph 56).

Key quotations (checked against the reading text)

- “A woman must have a thorough knowledge of music, singing, drawing, dancing, and the modern languages, to deserve the word” (Chapter VIII, paragraph 50) Miss Bingley's checklist.

- "I am no longer surprised at your knowing only six accomplished women. I rather wonder now at your knowing any" (Chapter VIII, paragraph 52) Elizabeth's wit.
- "the improvement of her mind by extensive reading" (Chapter VIII, paragraph 51) Darcy's addition: values mind.

Model claim-evidence-reasoning

Claim: The debate shows that "accomplishment" is a social performance for the marriage market, which Elizabeth mocks.
Evidence: "I am no longer surprised at your knowing only six accomplished women. I rather wonder now at your knowing any" (Chapter VIII, paragraph 52)
Reasoning: Miss Bingley's list of music, drawing and languages describes skills for display, while Elizabeth replies that she wonders at Darcy "knowing any," exposing the impossibility of the ideal.

Vocabulary with etymology notes

Word	Definition (in this sentence)	In context	Word history
undervaluing (verb)	treating as less valuable than it is	"Eliza Bennet," said Miss Bingley, when the door was closed on her, "is one of those young ladies who seek to recommend themselves to the other sex, by undervaluing their own; and with many men, I dare say, it succeeds.
netting (verb)	making by knotting thread into a net	The word is applied to many a woman who deserves it no otherwise than by netting a purse, or covering a screen.
scampering (verb)	running about hurriedly	Why must she be scampering about the country, because her sister had a cold?	"scampering": Origin of "scamper": possibly Dutch schamperen; earlier Old French escamper. (Liber et Libri origin note, https://en.wiktionary.org/wiki/scamper#Etymology)
solaced (verb)	comforted	They solaced their wretchedness, however, by duets after supper, while he could find no better relief to his feelings than by giving his housekeeper directions that every possible attention might be paid to the sick lady and her sister.	"solaced": Origin of "solace": Old French solas. (Liber et Libri origin note, https://en.wiktionary.org/wiki/solace#Etymology)
inattention (noun)	lack of attention	Hurst called them to order, with bitter complaints of their inattention to what was going forward.	"inattention": Origin: French inattention. (Liber et Libri origin note, https://en.wiktionary.org/wiki/inattention#Etymology)

pianoforte (noun)	a piano	Her performance on the pianoforte is exquisite."
despises (verb)	look down on with disdain	"Miss Eliza Bennet," said Miss Bingley, "despises cards.
condescend (verb)	to lower oneself to do something	"Undoubtedly," replied Darcy, to whom this remark was chiefly addressed, "there is meanness in all the arts which ladies sometimes condescend to employ for captivation.
stationed (verb)	placed in position	Elizabeth was so much caught by what passed, as to leave her very little attention for her book; and soon laying it wholly aside, she drew near the card-table, and stationed herself between Mr.
esteemed (verb)	regard highly; think much of	"Oh! certainly," cried his faithful assistant, "no one can be really esteemed accomplished, who does not greatly surpass what is usually met with.	"esteemed": Origin of "esteem": Middle French estimer; earlier Latin aestimō. (Liber et Libri origin note, https://en.wiktionary.org/wiki/esteem#Etymology)

Discussion questions

1. What does the debate about accomplishments reveal about each speaker?
2. Where does characterization appear in this chapter, and what effect does it have? Point to one passage.
3. How does this chapter connect to the book's larger concern with marriage and money?

Classroom discussion questions (30, tiered)

Wait time after every question (3 s for DOK 1, 5 s for DOK 2, 8 to 10 s for DOK 3 and 4); think-pair-share on DOK 3 and 4; answer each response with a follow-up probe; close with student-generated questions. Focus sets by rigor level: Scaffolded support: 1, 2, 3, 4, 5, 6, 11, 12, 13, 14, 21, 22; HS Freshman: 1, 2, 3, 4, 5, 12, 13, 14, 15, 22, 23, 24; HS Sophomore: 1, 2, 3, 4, 13, 14, 15, 16, 17, 23, 24, 25; HS Junior: 1, 2, 3, 14, 15, 16, 17, 18, 24, 25, 26, 27; HS Senior: 1, 2, 3, 15, 16, 17, 18, 25, 26, 27, 28, 29; AP: 1, 2, 16, 17, 18, 19, 20, 26, 27, 28, 29, 30; College Freshman: 1, 2, 17, 18, 19, 20, 21, 22, 27, 28, 29, 30; College Sophomore: 1, 2, 11, 18, 19, 20, 21, 22, 23, 28, 29, 30; College Junior: 1, 11, 12, 19, 20, 21, 22, 23, 24, 25, 29, 30; College Senior: 1, 11, 12, 13, 20, 21, 22, 23, 24, 25, 26, 30; Graduate / PhD: 1, 11, 12, 13, 21, 22, 23, 24, 25, 26, 27, 28

Literal / recall

1. What do the Bingley sisters mock? [DOK 1 · coldCallWithSupport · wait 3 s · AP: unit standards] Look for: Elizabeth's muddy petticoat
2. What does Darcy add to the list of accomplishments? [DOK 1 · turnAndTalk · wait 3 s · AP: unit standards] Look for: Extensive reading
3. How does Elizabeth respond to the long list? [DOK 1 · coldCallWithSupport · wait 3 s · AP: unit standards] Look for: She doubts any woman meets it
4. Why were accomplishments valued? [DOK 1 · turnAndTalk · wait 3 s · AP: unit standards] Look for: They improved marriage prospects

5. Who praises Darcy's library to win him? [DOK 1 · coldCallWithSupport · wait 3 s · AP: unit standards] Look for: Miss Bingley
6. Retell the three most important events of “Chapter VIII” in order, in one sentence each. [DOK 1 · turnAndTalk · wait 3 s · AP: unit standards] Look for: At Netherfield the Bingley sisters mock Elizabeth's muddy petticoat. Darcy, Miss Bingley and Elizabeth debate what makes an 'accomplished' woman; Darcy adds 'extensive reading.'
7. Which characters appear or are mentioned in “Chapter VIII”? Name two and one thing each says or does. [DOK 1 · coldCallWithSupport · wait 3 s · AP: unit standards] Look for: Names and actions taken from the chapter; check against the teacher summary.
8. Where and when does “Chapter VIII” take place? Point to the line that tells you. [DOK 1 · turnAndTalk · wait 3 s · AP: unit standards] Look for: A place/time detail quoted from the chapter.
9. Reread: ““Eliza Bennet,” said Miss Bingley, when the door was closed on her, “is one of those young ladies who seek to recommend themselves to the other sex, by undervaluing their own; and with many men, I dare say, it succeeds.” What does “undervaluing” mean here, and what is literally happening in this line? [DOK 1 · turnAndTalk · wait 3 s · AP: unit standards] Look for: undervaluing: treating as less valuable than it is.
10. Reread: “The word is applied to many a woman who deserves it no otherwise than by netting a purse, or covering a screen.” What does “netting” mean here, and what is literally happening in this line? [DOK 1 · turnAndTalk · wait 3 s · AP: unit standards] Look for: netting: making by knotting thread into a net.

Inferential / analytical

1. What does “Chapter VIII” suggest about the accomplished woman? State the inference and the line that supports it. [DOK 2 · thinkPairShare · wait 5 s · AP-LIT.LAN] Look for: Elizabeth's skepticism about impossible standards is a sly critique of how women were judged.
2. Find one example of characterization in this chapter. What does it reveal that a plain statement would not? [DOK 2 · followUp · wait 5 s · AP-LIT.CHR] Look for: Look for what characters say, do and think, and how others react to them.
3. How does the irony in this chapter shape what we understand about the accomplished woman? [DOK 3 · thinkPairShare · wait 8 s · AP-LIT.NAR] Look for: Look for gaps between what characters expect or say and what is true.
   Answer guidance: A defensible line of argument: The debate shows that "accomplishment" is a social performance for the marriage market, which Elizabeth mocks. Useful evidence: “A woman must have a thorough knowledge of music, singing, drawing, dancing, and the modern languages, to deserve the word” (Chapter VIII, paragraph 50): Miss Bingley's checklist. On irony: Miss Bingley's list of accomplishments is designed to describe herself. Credit any position that is supported by quotation and reasoning; push one-sided answers to address the strongest counterpoint.
4. In the passage that begins “Elizabeth was so much caught by what passed, as to leave her very little attention for her book; and soon laying it wholly aside, she drew near the card-table, and stationed…”, why might Austen have chosen these particular words? Pick two and explain their connotations. [DOK 2 · followUp · wait 5 s · AP-LIT.FIG] Look for: Diction analysis of two words in the anchor passage.
5. What causes the main turn in “Chapter VIII”, and what effect is it likely to have on what follows? [DOK 2 · followUp · wait 5 s · AP-LIT.STR] Look for: At Netherfield the Bingley sisters mock Elizabeth's muddy petticoat. Darcy, Miss Bingley and Elizabeth debate what makes an 'accomplished' woman; Darcy adds 'extensive reading.'
6. How does “Chapter VIII” build on “Chapter VII”? Name one link of cause and effect. [DOK 3 · thinkPairShare · wait 8 s · AP-LIT.STR] Look for: A causal or structural link between this and the previous chapter.

Answer guidance: A defensible line of argument: The debate shows that "accomplishment" is a social performance for the marriage market, which Elizabeth mocks. Useful evidence: “I am no longer surprised at your knowing only six accomplished women. I rather wonder now at your knowing any” (Chapter VIII, paragraph 52): Elizabeth's wit. Theme link: accomplishments as a marriage market display. Credit any position that is supported by quotation and reasoning; push one-sided answers to address the strongest counterpoint.

7. What can we infer about a character's motives from what they say and do here, as opposed to what they claim? [DOK 3 · followUp · wait 8 s · AP-LIT.CHR] Look for: An inference about motive supported by a quoted line.
   Answer guidance: A defensible line of argument: The debate shows that "accomplishment" is a social performance for the marriage market, which Elizabeth mocks. Useful evidence: “the improvement of her mind by extensive reading” (Chapter VIII, paragraph 51): Darcy's addition: values mind. On characterization: The "accomplished woman" debate reveals Miss Bingley's flattery, Darcy's high standards and Elizabeth's skepticism. Credit any position that is supported by quotation and reasoning; push one-sided answers to address the strongest counterpoint.
8. The bell-ringer asked: “What does the debate about accomplishments reveal about each speaker?” Now that we have read closely, how would you revise your first answer, and which line changed your mind? [DOK 2 · thinkPairShare · wait 5 s · AP-LIT.LAN] Look for: A revised answer anchored in the text.
9. Where does theme appear, and how does it connect this chapter to the larger concern with marriage and money? [DOK 3 · followUp · wait 8 s · AP-LIT.LAN] Look for: Look for statements or moments that connect to the book's big ideas.
   Answer guidance: A defensible line of argument: The debate shows that "accomplishment" is a social performance for the marriage market, which Elizabeth mocks. Useful evidence: “A woman must have a thorough knowledge of music, singing, drawing, dancing, and the modern languages, to deserve the word” (Chapter VIII, paragraph 50): Miss Bingley's checklist. Theme link: accomplishments as a marriage market display. Credit any position that is supported by quotation and reasoning; push one-sided answers to address the strongest counterpoint.
10. Background: Female 'accomplishments' (music, drawing, languages) were valued as marriage assets. How does knowing this change the way you read one moment in the chapter? [DOK 3 · thinkPairShare · wait 8 s · AP-LIT.SET] Look for: A specific moment reread in light of the context.
    Answer guidance: A defensible line of argument: The debate shows that "accomplishment" is a social performance for the marriage market, which Elizabeth mocks. Useful evidence: “I am no longer surprised at your knowing only six accomplished women. I rather wonder now at your knowing any” (Chapter VIII, paragraph 52): Elizabeth's wit. Theme link: accomplishments as a marriage market display. Credit any position that is supported by quotation and reasoning; push one-sided answers to address the strongest counterpoint.

Evaluative / synthesis / creative

1. A critic might argue: “Elizabeth's skepticism about impossible standards is a sly critique of how women were judged.” How far do you agree? Take a stand and defend it with two lines from the chapter. [DOK 3 · fourCorners · wait 8 s · AP-LIT.LAN] Look for: A defended position with evidence and one counterpoint.
   Answer guidance: A defensible line of argument: The debate shows that "accomplishment" is a social performance for the marriage market, which Elizabeth mocks. Useful evidence: “the improvement of her mind by extensive reading” (Chapter VIII, paragraph 51): Darcy's addition: values mind. Theme link:

accomplishments as a marriage market display. Credit any position that is supported by quotation and reasoning; push one-sided answers to address the strongest counterpoint.

2. Which character in this chapter acts most wisely, and which least? Judge them by a standard you name. [DOK 3 · thinkPairShare · wait 8 s · AP-LIT.CHR, AP-LIT.LAN] Look for: An evaluation using an explicit criterion and evidence.

   Answer guidance: A defensible line of argument: The debate shows that "accomplishment" is a social performance for the marriage market, which Elizabeth mocks. Useful evidence: “A woman must have a thorough knowledge of music, singing, drawing, dancing, and the modern languages, to deserve the word” (Chapter VIII, paragraph 50): Miss Bingley's checklist. On characterization: The "accomplished woman" debate reveals Miss Bingley's flattery, Darcy's high standards and Elizabeth's skepticism. Credit any position that is supported by quotation and reasoning; push one-sided answers to address the strongest counterpoint.

3. Rewrite one moment of “Chapter VIII” from the point of view of a different character. What does the new angle reveal or hide about the accomplished woman? [DOK 4 · thinkPairShare · wait 8 s · AP-LIT.LAN, AP-LIT.NAR] Look for: A creative product with a rationale tied to the text.

   Answer guidance: A defensible line of argument: The debate shows that "accomplishment" is a social performance for the marriage market, which Elizabeth mocks. Useful evidence: “I am no longer surprised at your knowing only six accomplished women. I rather wonder now at your knowing any” (Chapter VIII, paragraph 52): Elizabeth's wit. Theme link: accomplishments as a marriage market display. Credit any position that is supported by quotation and reasoning; push one-sided answers to address the strongest counterpoint.

4. Write three questions of your own about “Chapter VIII”: one recall, one “why/how”, and one “should/what if”. Trade with a partner and answer theirs. [DOK 3 · studentGenerated · wait 8 s · AP-LIT.LAN] Look for: Student-generated questions at three levels.

   Answer guidance: A defensible line of argument: The debate shows that "accomplishment" is a social performance for the marriage market, which Elizabeth mocks. Useful evidence: “the improvement of her mind by extensive reading” (Chapter VIII, paragraph 51): Darcy's addition: values mind. Theme link: accomplishments as a marriage market display. Credit any position that is supported by quotation and reasoning; push one-sided answers to address the strongest counterpoint.

5. Connect this chapter to class and social mobility: is the link strong or weak so far? What would Austen need to show next to strengthen it? [DOK 4 · socraticCircle · wait 8 s · AP-LIT.LAN] Look for: A judgment of thematic development across the work.

   Answer guidance: A defensible line of argument: The debate shows that "accomplishment" is a social performance for the marriage market, which Elizabeth mocks. Useful evidence: “A woman must have a thorough knowledge of music, singing, drawing, dancing, and the modern languages, to deserve the word” (Chapter VIII, paragraph 50): Miss Bingley's checklist. Theme link: accomplishments as a marriage market display. Credit any position that is supported by quotation and reasoning; push one-sided answers to address the strongest counterpoint.

6. Is the characterization in this chapter effective, or does it feel heavy-handed? Evaluate it as a reader would in a review. [DOK 3 · fourCorners · wait 8 s · AP-LIT.CHR, AP-LIT.LAN] Look for: An evaluative judgment with criteria and evidence.

   Answer guidance: A defensible line of argument: The debate shows that "accomplishment" is a social performance for the marriage market, which Elizabeth mocks. Useful evidence: “I am no longer surprised at your knowing only six accomplished women. I rather wonder now at your knowing any” (Chapter VIII, paragraph 52): Elizabeth's wit. On characterization: The "accomplished woman" debate reveals Miss Bingley's flattery, Darcy's high standards and Elizabeth's skepticism. Credit any position that is supported by quotation and reasoning; push one-sided answers to address the strongest counterpoint.

7. Compare how “Chapter VIII” treats the accomplished woman with how another text, film or event you know treats a similar idea. What does Pride and Prejudice see that the other misses? [DOK 4 · socraticCircle · wait 8 s · AP-LIT.LAN] Look for: A cross-text synthesis.

   Answer guidance: A defensible line of argument: The debate shows that "accomplishment" is a social performance for the marriage market, which Elizabeth mocks. Useful evidence: “the improvement of her mind by extensive reading” (Chapter VIII, paragraph 51): Darcy's addition: values mind. Theme link: accomplishments as a marriage market display. Credit any position that is supported by quotation and reasoning; push one-sided answers to address the strongest counterpoint.

8. Predict what “Chapter IX” will bring, using two clues from this chapter. After reading, evaluate your prediction. [DOK 3 · thinkPairShare · wait 8 s · AP-LIT.LAN, AP-LIT.STR] Look for: A prediction or judgment justified with textual clues.

   Answer guidance: A defensible line of argument: The debate shows that "accomplishment" is a social performance for the marriage market, which Elizabeth mocks. Useful evidence: “A woman must have a thorough knowledge of music, singing, drawing, dancing, and the modern languages, to deserve the word” (Chapter VIII, paragraph 50): Miss Bingley's checklist. Theme link: accomplishments as a marriage market display. Credit any position that is supported by quotation and reasoning; push one-sided answers to address the strongest counterpoint.

9. Design a one-paragraph modern adaptation of this chapter (setting, characters, conflict). What must stay the same for it to still be about the accomplished woman? [DOK 4 · thinkPairShare · wait 8 s · AP-LIT.LAN] Look for: A creative transfer that keeps the core idea.

   Answer guidance: A defensible line of argument: The debate shows that "accomplishment" is a social performance for the marriage market, which Elizabeth mocks. Useful evidence: “I am no longer surprised at your knowing only six accomplished women. I rather wonder now at your knowing any” (Chapter VIII, paragraph 52): Elizabeth's wit. Theme link: accomplishments as a marriage market display. Credit any position that is supported by quotation and reasoning; push one-sided answers to address the strongest counterpoint.

10. What question would you most like to ask Jane Austen about this chapter, and what answer do you think the text itself gives? [DOK 4 · studentGenerated · wait 8 s · AP-LIT.LAN] Look for: A student-generated question answered from evidence.

    Answer guidance: A defensible line of argument: The debate shows that "accomplishment" is a social performance for the marriage market, which Elizabeth mocks. Useful evidence: “the improvement of her mind by extensive reading” (Chapter VIII, paragraph 51): Darcy's addition: values mind. Theme link: accomplishments as a marriage market display. Credit any position that is supported by quotation and reasoning; push one-sided answers to address the strongest counterpoint.

Annotation focus

- Characterization: look for what characters say, do and think, and how others react to them (anchor passage in the We do segment)
- Also notice Irony: gaps between what characters expect or say and what is true

- Also notice Theme: statements or moments that connect to the book's big ideas

Chapter quiz: item bank (all eleven rigor versions)

1. [fill · recall · DOK 1] Complete the quotation from Chapter VIII, paragraph 50: “A woman must have a thorough _____ of music, singing, drawing, dancing, and the modern languages, to deserve the word”
   Key: knowledge
2. [fill · recall · DOK 1] Complete the quotation from Chapter VIII, paragraph 1: “At five o’clock the two ladies retired to dress, and at half past six Elizabeth was _____ to dinner.” Word bank: recommend, summoned, astonished, attorney
   Key: summoned
3. [mc · recall · DOK 1] In the line “Why must she be scampering about the country, because her sister had a cold?”, what does “scampering” most nearly mean?
   A. running about hurriedly
   B. invited; sought out
   C. to belittle; to speak of as unimportant
   D. picked out; chose
   Key: A (running about hurriedly)
4. [fill · recall · DOK 1] Fill in the blank with the vocabulary word that fits: “Miss Eliza Bennet,’ said Miss Bingley, ‘_____ cards.” Word bank: undervaluing, despises, scampering, netting
   Key: despises
5. [mc · recall · DOK 1] How does Elizabeth respond to the long list?
   A. She doubts any woman meets it
   B. She lists her own skills
   C. She agrees completely
   D. She leaves
   Key: A (She doubts any woman meets it)
6. [mc · recall · DOK 1] In the line “They solaced their wretchedness, however, by duets after supper, while he could find no better relief to his feelings than by giving his housekeeper directions that every possible attention might be paid to the sick…”, what does “solaced” most nearly mean?
   A. lack of respect
   B. a washing or cleansing
   C. comforted
   D. a ban; something that stops activity
   Key: C (comforted)
7. [fill · recall · DOK 1] Fill in the blank with the vocabulary word that fits: “Undoubtedly,’ replied Darcy, to whom this remark was chiefly addressed, ‘there is meanness in all the arts which ladies sometimes _____ to employ for captivation.” Word bank: netting, undervaluing, scampering, condescend
   Key: condescend
8. [mc · recall · DOK 1] Who praises Darcy's library to win him?
   A. Miss Bingley
   B. Jane

C. Mrs. Hurst

D. Elizabeth

Key: A (Miss Bingley)

9. [mc · recall · DOK 1] What does Darcy add to the list of accomplishments?

A. Dancing

B. Extensive reading

C. Wealth

D. Cooking

Key: B (Extensive reading)

10. [mc · recall · DOK 1] What do the Bingley sisters mock?

A. Elizabeth's muddy petticoat

B. Jane's illness

C. Darcy's books

D. Mr. Bennet's wit

Key: A (Elizabeth's muddy petticoat)

11. [mc · recall · DOK 1] In the line “The word is applied to many a woman who deserves it no otherwise than by netting a purse, or covering a screen.”, what does “netting” most nearly mean?

A. fairly good; moderate

B. asking; appealing (to someone)

C. winning or drawing in (someone's feelings)

D. making by knotting thread into a net

Key: D (making by knotting thread into a net)

12. [short · inference · DOK 2] What does this passage from Chapter VIII, paragraph 1 reveal about the character or situation? “The sisters, on hearing this, repeated three or four times how much they were grieved, how shocking it was to have a bad cold, and how excessively they disliked being ill themselves; and then thought no more of the matter: and their…” Answer in two or three sentences with one detail.

Sample answer: The passage (Chapter VIII, paragraph 1) shows the situation turning on first impressions and prejudice: accomplishments as a marriage market display. The words “indifference” and “immediately” are the proof, because they show how the moment looks to the people in it. They suggest more than the narrator states outright.

13. [short · inference · DOK 2] What does this passage from Chapter VIII, paragraph 26 reveal about the character or situation? “He immediately offered to fetch her others; all that his library afforded.” Answer in two or three sentences with one detail.

Sample answer: The passage (Chapter VIII, paragraph 26) shows the situation turning on first impressions and prejudice: accomplishments as a marriage market display. The words “immediately” and “afforded” are the proof, because they show how the moment looks to the people in it. They suggest more than the narrator states outright.

14. [short · analysis · DOK 3] Analyze how the word choice in this passage from Chapter VIII, paragraph 7 shapes its tone: “I thought Miss Elizabeth Bennet looked remarkably well, when she came into the room this morning.” Pick two words and explain their effect.

Sample answer: The words “remarkably” and “thought” (Chapter VIII, paragraph 7) make the tone heavy and deliberate rather than neutral. That weight points the reader to pride and self-knowledge: accomplishments as a marriage market display. The author chooses them so the moment feels significant instead of passing.

15. [short · analysis · DOK 3] Analyze how the word choice in this passage from Chapter VIII, paragraph 2 shapes its tone: “Miss Bingley was engrossed by Mr. Darcy, her sister scarcely less so; and as for Mr. Hurst, by whom Elizabeth sat, he was an indolent man, who lived only to eat, drink, and play at cards, who when he found her prefer a plain dish to a…” Pick two words and explain their effect.
    Sample answer: The words “engrossed” and “scarcely” (Chapter VIII, paragraph 2) make the tone heavy and deliberate rather than neutral. That weight points the reader to class and social mobility: accomplishments as a marriage market display. The author chooses them so the moment feels significant instead of passing.
16. [short · synthesis · DOK 4] Connect this passage from Chapter VIII, paragraph 58 to the story's treatment of women's limited choices: “Miss Bingley was not so entirely satisfied with this reply as to continue the subject.” Use one other moment from the story as well.
    Sample answer: This passage (Chapter VIII, paragraph 58) develops women's limited choices: accomplishments as a marriage market display. Its words “satisfied” and “entirely” carry that idea into this moment. The same concern returns in “The sisters, on hearing this, repeated three or four times how much they were grieved, how shocking it was to have a…” (Chapter VIII, paragraph 1), so the two passages read as a pattern, not a single moment. Together they show the story treating women's limited choices as central.
17. [mc · recall · DOK 1] Which word completes this sentence from Chapter VIII, paragraph 20? “To this speech Bingley made no answer; but his sisters gave it their hearty assent, and indulged their mirth for some time at the expense of their dear friend’s vulgar _____.”

    A. relations
    B. recommend
    C. excessive
    D. returned

    Key: A (relations)
18. [fill · recall · DOK 1] Complete the quotation from Chapter VIII, paragraph 10: “It seems to me to show an abominable sort of conceited _____, a most country town indifference to decorum.” Word bank: pleasure, returned, summoned, independence
    Key: independence
19. [fill · recall · DOK 1] Complete the quotation from Chapter VIII, paragraph 51: “the _____ of her mind by extensive reading”
    Key: improvement
20. [fill · recall · DOK 1] Complete the quotation from Chapter VIII, paragraph 52: “I am no longer surprised at your knowing only six _____ women. I rather wonder now at your knowing any”
    Key: accomplished
21. [fill · recall · DOK 1] Fill in the blank with the vocabulary word that fits: “Her performance on the _____ is exquisite.” Word bank: undervaluing, pianoforte, scampering, netting
    Key: pianoforte
22. [short · analysis · DOK 3] Analyze the word choice in “the improvement of her mind by extensive reading” (Chapter VIII, paragraph 51). Pick two words and explain what they suggest.
    Sample answer: Darcy's addition: values mind. The evidence is “the improvement of her mind by extensive reading” (Chapter VIII, paragraph 51). This develops women's choices: accomplishments as a marriage market display. The words “improvement” and “extensive” carry that meaning: they are the charged choices in the line, and changing either would soften the effect.

23. [short · synthesis · DOK 4] Synthesis: trace how women's choices develops from Chapter VII to Chapter VIII. Use one quotation from each.
    Sample answer: Earlier, in Chapter VII, paragraph 1, the text reads “Mr. Bennet’s property consisted almost entirely in an estate of two thousand a year, which, unfortunately for his daughters, was entailed”, which shows the entail: the economic stakes. In Chapter VIII, “A woman must have a thorough knowledge of music, singing, drawing, dancing, and the modern languages, to deserve the word” (Chapter VIII, paragraph 50) — Miss Bingley's checklist. Accomplishments as a marriage market display.

24. [fill · recall · DOK 1] Complete the quotation from Chapter VIII, paragraph 26: “Elizabeth _____ him from her heart, and then walked towards a table where a few books were lying.” Word bank: yourself, astonished, returned, thanked Key: thanked

25. [mc · recall · DOK 1] Which word completes this sentence from Chapter VIII, paragraph 4? “She has nothing, in short, to _____ her, but being an excellent walker.”
    A. independence
    B. recommend
    C. excessive
    D. complacency

    Key: B (recommend)

26. [mc · recall · DOK 1] Why were accomplishments valued?
    A. They prevented illness
    B. They improved marriage prospects
    C. They paid wages
    D. They were required by law

    Key: B (They improved marriage prospects)

27. [short · analysis · DOK 3] Claim: The debate shows that "accomplishment" is a social performance for the marriage market, which Elizabeth mocks. Explain how this evidence supports the claim: “I am no longer surprised at your knowing only six accomplished women. I rather wonder now at your knowing any” (Chapter VIII, paragraph 52).
    Sample answer: Miss Bingley's list of music, drawing and languages describes skills for display, while Elizabeth replies that she wonders at Darcy "knowing any," exposing the impossibility of the ideal. The evidence is “I am no longer surprised at your knowing only six accomplished women. I rather wonder now at your knowing any” (Chapter VIII, paragraph 52) — Elizabeth's wit. This develops women's choices: accomplishments as a marriage market display.

28. [short · synthesis · DOK 4] Connect this passage from Chapter VIII, paragraph 14 to the story's treatment of women's limited choices: “But with such a father and mother, and such low connections, I am afraid there is no chance of it.” Use one other moment from the story as well.
    Sample answer: This passage (Chapter VIII, paragraph 14) develops women's limited choices: accomplishments as a marriage market display. Its words “connections” and “father” carry that idea into this moment. The same concern returns in “If they had uncles enough to fill all Cheapside,’ cried Bingley, ‘it would not make them one jot less agreeable.” (Chapter VIII, paragraph 18), so the two passages read as a pattern, not a single moment. Together they show the story treating women's limited choices as central.

29. [short · synthesis · DOK 4] Connect this passage from Chapter VIII, paragraph 21 to the story's treatment of marriage and money: “With a renewal of tenderness, however, they repaired to her room on leaving the dining-parlour, and sat with her till summoned to coffee." Use one other moment from the story as well.

Sample answer: This passage (Chapter VIII, paragraph 21) develops marriage and money: accomplishments as a marriage market display. Its words "tenderness" and "repaired" carry that idea into this moment. The same concern returns in "Do you prefer reading to cards?' said he; 'that is rather singular." (Chapter VIII, paragraph 22), so the two passages read as a pattern, not a single moment. Together they show the story treating marriage and money as central.

30. [mc · inference · DOK 2 · AP: AP-LIT.LAN] Which choice best states a central concern of "Chapter VIII"?

    A. Cold reception

    B. The accomplished woman

    C. Self-recognition

    D. Family in crisis

    Key: B (The accomplished woman)

31. [short · analysis · DOK 3 · AP: AP-LIT.FIG] Analyze how the word choice in this passage from Chapter VIII, paragraph 32 shapes its tone: "I cannot comprehend the neglect of a family library in such days as these." Pick two words and explain their effect.

    Sample answer: The words "comprehend" and "neglect" (Chapter VIII, paragraph 32) make the tone heavy and deliberate rather than neutral. That weight points the reader to class and social mobility: accomplishments as a marriage market display. The author chooses them so the moment feels significant instead of passing.

32. [short · analysis · DOK 3 · AP: AP-LIT.FIG] Analyze how the word choice in this passage from Chapter VIII, paragraph 40 shapes its tone: "Is Miss Darcy much grown since the spring?' said Miss Bingley; 'will she be as tall as I am?" Pick two words and explain their effect.

    Sample answer: The words "spring" (Chapter VIII, paragraph 40) make the tone heavy and deliberate rather than neutral. That weight points the reader to pride and self-knowledge: accomplishments as a marriage market display. The author chooses them so the moment feels significant instead of passing.

33. [mc · analysis · DOK 3 · AP: AP-LIT.NAR] Which literary element does this describe in "Chapter VIII"? Miss Bingley's list of accomplishments is designed to describe herself.

    A. Personification

    B. Symbolism

    C. Conflict

    D. Irony

    Key: D (Irony)

34. [mc · analysis · DOK 3 · AP: AP-LIT.CHR] Which literary element does this describe in "Chapter VIII"? The 'accomplished woman' debate reveals Miss Bingley's flattery, Darcy's high standards and Elizabeth's skepticism.

    A. Theme

    B. Imagery

    C. Characterization

    D. Metaphor

    Key: C (Characterization)

35. [short · synthesis · DOK 4 · Dual Credit (Indiana College Core): ICC-WC-1.5] Close reading: how do the diction and syntax of "A woman must have a thorough knowledge of music, singing, drawing, dancing, and the modern languages, to deserve the word" (Chapter VIII, paragraph 50) shape its meaning? Consider a second, competing reading.

Sample answer: Miss Bingley's checklist. The evidence is “A woman must have a thorough knowledge of music, singing, drawing, dancing, and the modern languages, to deserve the word” (Chapter VIII, paragraph 50). This develops women's choices: accomplishments as a marriage market display. The words “languages” and “knowledge” carry that meaning: they are the charged choices in the line, and changing either would soften the effect. Miss Bingley's list of music, drawing and languages describes skills for display, while Elizabeth replies that she wonders at Darcy "knowing any," exposing the impossibility of the ideal.

36. [fill · recall · DOK 1 · Program outcome: LeL-C2-LIT-1] Fill in the blank with the vocabulary word that fits: “Hurst called them to order, with bitter complaints of their _____ to what was going forward.” Word bank: scampering, inattention, netting, undervaluing

    Key: inattention

37. [mc · inference · DOK 2 · Program outcome: LeL-C3-LIT-1] What does this passage most clearly show? “the improvement of her mind by extensive reading” (Chapter VIII, paragraph 51)

    A. Darcy's addition: values mind.

    B. Comic speed: marriage as a choice among interchangeable daughters.

    C. Lydia's note: thoughtless and triumphant; note the grammar ("with who") and the tone.

    D. The narrator steps in to defend a love based on esteem rather than "first sight."

    Key: A (Darcy's addition: values mind.)

38. [short · inference · DOK 2 · Program outcome: LeL-C3-LIT-1] What can you infer from this line? “A woman must have a thorough knowledge of music, singing, drawing, dancing, and the modern languages, to deserve the word” (Chapter VIII, paragraph 50) Answer in two or three sentences with one detail.

    Sample answer: Miss Bingley's checklist. The evidence is “A woman must have a thorough knowledge of music, singing, drawing, dancing, and the modern languages, to deserve the word” (Chapter VIII, paragraph 50).

Rigor version	Items (in order)	Mix
Scaffolded support	1, 2, 3, 4, 5, 6, 7, 8, 9, 10, 11, 12, 13, 14, 15, 16	recall 11, inference 2, analysis 2, synthesis 1
HS Freshman	10, 17, 3, 1, 5, 18, 19, 20, 9, 21, 13, 12, 14, 22, 15, 23	recall 10, inference 2, analysis 3, synthesis 1
HS Sophomore	24, 25, 11, 6, 26, 3, 18, 7, 5, 12, 13, 27, 22, 14, 28, 29	recall 9, inference 2, analysis 3, synthesis 2
HS Junior	24, 9, 2, 17, 25, 21, 26, 13, 30, 12, 31, 14, 22, 32, 28, 23	recall 7, inference 3, analysis 4, synthesis 2
HS Senior	1, 17, 5, 21, 3, 7, 26, 12, 13, 32, 33, 31, 22, 28, 16, 29	recall 7, inference 2, analysis 4, synthesis 3
AP	1, 9, 10, 5, 7, 13, 15, 34, 31, 22, 32, 14, 23, 29, 16, 28	recall 5, inference 1, analysis 6, synthesis 4
College Freshman	2, 20, 11, 10, 9, 15, 14, 22, 32, 31, 34, 35, 23, 28, 16, 29	recall 5, inference 0, analysis 6, synthesis 5
College Sophomore	24, 26, 36, 10, 9, 15, 34, 22, 31, 32, 14, 16, 23, 29, 35, 28	recall 5, inference 0, analysis 6, synthesis 5
College Junior	6, 25, 36, 21, 37, 38, 31, 33, 32, 27, 15, 14, 16, 23, 28, 29	recall 4, inference 2, analysis 6, synthesis 4
College Senior	17, 36, 21, 10, 9, 14, 15, 27, 22, 34, 31, 32, 16, 23, 29, 28	recall 5, inference 0, analysis 7, synthesis 4

Graduate / PhD	21, 36, 10, 8, 30, 37, 31, 32, 15, 27, 14, 29, 35, 23, 16, 28	recall 4, inference 2, analysis 5, synthesis 5

Writing prompts (eleven rigor levels)

Scaffolded support (250 words; AP: see unit standards): Supported track (work from the passage your teacher selects). In “Chapter VIII,” how does Austen show the accomplished woman? Write a paragraph that states your claim, quotes two details from the passage, and explains how each detail supports your idea. Use the characterization you noticed as one piece of evidence.

HS Freshman (350 words; AP: see unit standards): In Chapter VIII, how does Austen develop the idea of the accomplished woman? State a clear claim, support it with two or three quotations, and explain how the characterization in the chapter helps build that idea.

HS Sophomore (450 words; AP: see unit standards): Analyze how Chapter VIII develops the idea of the accomplished woman. Make a precise claim, support it with at least three pieces of textual evidence, and explain how the author's use of characterization and irony shapes that idea. Address one possible counterclaim.

HS Junior (550 words; AP: see unit standards): Analyze how the structure of Chapter VIII (where it begins, turns and ends) and its characterization shape the reader's understanding of the accomplished woman. Identify one place where the text leaves matters uncertain and explain how that uncertainty adds to its meaning.

HS Senior (600 words; AP: see unit standards): Two readers disagree about what Chapter VIII suggests about the accomplished woman. Lay out two plausible interpretations, weigh the evidence for each (including the chapter's characterization and irony), and argue for the stronger one in a sustained, well-organized essay.

AP (650 words; AP: AP-LIT.CHR, AP-LIT.LAN): Write a literary argument in which you analyze how Jane Austen uses characterization in Chapter VIII to complicate the reader's understanding of the accomplished woman. Develop a defensible thesis, select evidence purposefully, and explain how specific choices of diction and syntax create meaning.

College Freshman (1000 words; AP: see unit standards): Situate Chapter VIII within its historical and literary context and argue how the chapter's treatment of the accomplished woman responds to that context. Engage with at least one secondary perspective (a critic, historian or the author's own statements), integrate quotations smoothly, and cite in MLA style.

College Sophomore (1250 words; AP: see unit standards): Read Chapter VIII alongside the conventions of its genre and period. Argue how the chapter's handling of the accomplished woman follows or bends those conventions, using the characterization as evidence, and test your reading against one published critic. Document two secondary sources in MLA.

College Junior (1500 words; AP: see unit standards): Apply a named critical approach (for example formalist, historicist, feminist, psychoanalytic or ecocritical) to Chapter VIII and its treatment of the accomplished woman. State your method, show what it reveals in the chapter's characterization and irony, and identify where the text resists it.

College Senior (2000 words; AP: see unit standards): Develop a research argument that reads Chapter VIII as evidence for a larger claim about the accomplished woman in Pride and Prejudice. Connect close reading of the chapter to the whole novel, engage at least four scholarly sources, and state precisely where your reading departs from theirs (Chicago style).

Graduate / PhD (2500 words; AP: see unit standards): Develop an original argument that reads Chapter VIII as a hinge in the novel's larger treatment of the accomplished woman. Position your reading within a named critical conversation (for example formalist, historicist, psychoanalytic, feminist or postcolonial approaches), account for the textual history where relevant, and articulate the stakes of your intervention for scholarship on Pride and Prejudice.

SAT-style questions

1. Why must she be scampering about the country, because her sister had a cold?

   As used in the text, what does the word “scampering” most nearly mean?

   A. placed in position

   B. to lower oneself to do something

   C. regard highly; think much of

   D. running about hurriedly

2. Elizabeth was so much caught by what passed, as to leave her very little attention for her book; and soon laying it wholly aside, she drew near the card-table, and stationed herself between Mr. Bingley and his eldest sister, to observe the game.

   Which choice best states a central concern of “Chapter VIII”?

   A. The accomplished woman

   B. A revelation from the colonel

   C. The letter

   D. Consequences of refusal

SAT key: 1. D (running about hurriedly); 2. A (The accomplished woman)

Lesson 10: Chapter IX

Focus: embarrassing relations

Objective: Students will analyze how characterization develops in "Chapter IX" by writing a claim-evidence-reasoning paragraph that cites at least 2 quotations from the section, and will score at least 80% on the section quiz.

Standards: AP: see the unit standards

Content note (age of a minor): Lydia is "a girl of fifteen"; flag her age now, because later an adult man pursues her.
Student preview: Notice Lydia's age in this chapter; it matters later.
Suggested language: "How old is Lydia, and how do the adults around her treat her?"

Teacher only · spoilers

Mrs. Bennet visits Netherfield with Lydia and Kitty, embarrassing Elizabeth by boasting and mocking Darcy. Lydia demands that Bingley hold a ball.

Background: Public behavior reflected on a family's whole reputation in genteel society.

Significance: Mrs. Bennet's lack of propriety becomes a real obstacle to her daughters' prospects.

Lesson plan and lecture script (90 minutes)

0–8 min · Bell-ringer · You do (8 min)
Students write to the bell-ringer, then pair-share.
How does Mrs. Bennet's behavior hurt the daughters she wants to help? Write for five minutes. Starters: I think... because... / This connects to family and reputation because.... Content note before we start: Notice Lydia's age in this chapter; it matters later.
Prompt: How does Mrs. Bennet's behavior hurt the daughters she wants to help?
Sentence starters: I think… because… · This connects to family and reputation because…
Strong response: A strong response takes a position and anticipates this: the daughters are judged by their mother's manners; this is the first of many scenes where family embarrassment threatens Jane's prospects.

8–18 min · Vocabulary with etymology notes · I do (10 min)
Five key words in context, with verified word histories.
Today's words: witticisms — clever, funny remarks; nourishes — feeds; makes stronger; profuse — lavish; very generous (in giving thanks or praise); amendment — improvement (here: in Jane's health); efficacy — capacity or power to produce a desired effect. "nourishes": Origin of "nourish": Latin nutriō ("to suckle").
Words: witticisms: clever, funny remarks · nourishes: feeds; makes stronger · profuse: lavish; very generous (in giving thanks or praise) · amendment: improvement (here: in Jane's health) · efficacy: capacity or power to produce a desired effect

18–28 min · Background and context · I do (10 min)
Mini-lecture (read or adapt the script).
Public behavior reflected on a family's whole reputation in genteel society. Mrs. Bennet's lack of propriety becomes a real obstacle to her daughters' prospects. Characterization: Mrs. Bennet's visit to Netherfield is a comic disaster: she boasts about Jane, quarrels with Darcy about country society and lets Lydia demand a ball. Each speech lowers the family in the eyes of the Netherfield party. Irony: Mrs. Bennet believes she is advancing her daughters; every word works against them. Elizabeth's attempts to change the subject are the reader's guide. Watch for silence and reserve: What characters leave unsaid (Darcy's reserve, Jane's composure, Elizabeth's secrets) drives misunderstanding. In this chapter: "could think of nothing to say; and after a short silence Mrs. Bennet began repeating her thanks to Mr. Bingley for his" (Chapter IX, paragraph 35).

28–40 min · I do: modeled close reading · I do (12 min)
Model the close reading of the anchor quotation using the written think-aloud below.
First, meaning. I read "She seems a very pleasant young woman" slowly and put it in my own words: When his sister sneers at the Lucas family, Bingley says that Charlotte seems a very pleasant young woman. Next, craft. I notice his short, kind remark comes right after Miss Bingley's snobbish comments, a deliberate contrast. The strongest word is "pleasant": it is a generous, simple word, the opposite of his sisters' scorn. Then, effect. What does Bingley's comment about Charlotte show? My answer: Bingley's comment about Charlotte shows that he is good-natured and easy to please, unlike his sisters; his openness is why Jane likes him and why his friends can persuade him later.

> She seems a very pleasant young woman (Chapter IX, paragraph 30)

Think-aloud: First, meaning. I read "She seems a very pleasant young woman" slowly and put it in my own words: When his sister sneers at the Lucas family, Bingley says that Charlotte seems a very pleasant young woman. Next, craft. I notice his short, kind remark comes right after Miss Bingley's snobbish comments, a deliberate contrast. The strongest word is "pleasant": it is a generous, simple word, the opposite of his sisters' scorn. Then, effect. What does Bingley's comment about Charlotte show? My answer: Bingley's comment about Charlotte shows that he is good-natured and easy to please, unlike his sisters; his openness is why Jane likes him and why his friends can persuade him later.

40–55 min · We do: guided annotation · We do (15 min)
Guided analysis of a second quotation; expected answers given.
Ask: What words in this line stand out, and what do they suggest? Expected: "Satisfied" is ironic because the reader has watched Elizabeth's embarrassment; the line shows how blind Mrs. Bennet is, which links to family and reputation. Ask: How does this line connect to family and reputation? Expected: The daughters are judged by their mother's manners; this is the first of many scenes where family embarrassment threatens Jane's prospects. (Elizabeth's mother is "satisfied" with a visit the reader can see has gone badly: the irony is in the gap.)

> She performed her part indeed without much graciousness, but Mrs. Bennet was satisfied (Chapter IX, paragraph 35)

Ask: What words in this line stand out, and what do they suggest?
Expected answer: "Satisfied" is ironic because the reader has watched Elizabeth's embarrassment; the line shows how blind Mrs. Bennet is, which links to family and reputation.
Ask: How does this line connect to family and reputation?
Expected answer: The daughters are judged by their mother's manners; this is the first of many scenes where family embarrassment threatens Jane's prospects. (Elizabeth's mother is "satisfied" with a visit the reader can see has gone badly: the irony is in the gap.)

55–70 min · You do: independent annotation · You do (15 min)
Independent annotation and a claim-evidence-reasoning paragraph (exemplar given).
Annotate the chapter for characterization, irony (three marks with a margin note each), then write one claim-evidence-reasoning paragraph: what does this chapter suggest about embarrassing relations? Then start your writing prompt at your assigned level (HS Sophomore: Analyze how Chapter IX develops the idea of embarrassing relations. Make a precise claim, support it with at least three pieces of textual evidence, and explain how the author's use of characterization and tone / mood shapes that idea. Address one possible counterclaim.) Exemplar: Mrs. Bennet's behaviour at Netherfield damages the reputation she is trying to promote. When the text says “She performed her part indeed without much graciousness, but Mrs. Bennet was satisfied” (Chapter IX, paragraph 35), it shows this directly. She leaves "satisfied" after a visit in which Elizabeth has had to manage her, showing that she cannot see the impression her family makes; Lydia's demand for a ball adds to it.
Task: Annotate the chapter for characterization, irony (three marks with a margin note each), then write one claim-evidence-reasoning paragraph: what does this chapter suggest about embarrassing relations? Then start your writing prompt at your assigned level (HS Sophomore: Analyze how Chapter IX develops the idea of embarrassing relations. Make a precise claim, support it with at least three pieces of textual evidence, and explain how the author's use of characterization and tone / mood shapes that idea. Address one possible counterclaim.)
Exemplar: Mrs. Bennet's behaviour at Netherfield damages the reputation she is trying to promote. When the text says “She performed her part indeed without much graciousness, but Mrs. Bennet was satisfied” (Chapter IX, paragraph 35), it shows this directly. She leaves "satisfied" after a visit in which Elizabeth has had to manage her, showing that she cannot see the impression her family makes; Lydia's demand for a ball adds to it.

70–80 min · Discussion · We do (10 min)
Structured discussion from the 30 tiered questions, with facilitation notes.
Anchor question: How does Mrs. Bennet's behavior hurt the daughters she wants to help? Ask: is it fair that Jane and Elizabeth are judged by their mother? Then ask whether we do the same today.
Anchor question: How does Mrs. Bennet's behavior hurt the daughters she wants to help?
Facilitation: Ask: is it fair that Jane and Elizabeth are judged by their mother? Then ask whether we do the same today.

80–87 min · Exit ticket / chapter quiz · You do (7 min)
Chapter quiz in the app and an exit ticket (answer given).
Chapter quiz in the app, then: In one sentence, what does this chapter suggest about embarrassing relations? Support it with one short quotation. Model answer: Mrs. Bennet's behaviour at Netherfield damages the reputation she is trying to promote. ("She performed her part indeed without much graciousness, but Mrs. Bennet was satisfied", Chapter IX, paragraph 35). Accept any defensible claim backed by a quotation from the chapter; the answer key for the quiz is in the Quiz section.
Exit ticket: In one sentence, what does this chapter suggest about embarrassing relations? Support it with one short quotation.
Answer: Model answer: Mrs. Bennet's behaviour at Netherfield damages the reputation she is trying to promote. ("She performed her part indeed without much graciousness, but Mrs. Bennet was satisfied", Chapter IX, paragraph 35). Accept any defensible claim backed by a quotation from the chapter; the answer key for the quiz is in the Quiz section.

87–90 min · Closure · I do (3 min)
Summarize the lesson and preview the next reading.
Today we saw how characterization shapes embarrassing relations. Key takeaway: the daughters are judged by their mother's manners; this is the first of many scenes where family embarrassment threatens Jane's prospects.

Total: 90 minutes.

Teacher analysis (spoilers)

Literary elements

- Characterization: Mrs. Bennet's visit to Netherfield is a comic disaster: she boasts about Jane, quarrels with Darcy about country society and lets Lydia demand a ball. Each speech lowers the family in the eyes of the Netherfield party.
- Irony: Mrs. Bennet believes she is advancing her daughters; every word works against them. Elizabeth's attempts to change the subject are the reader's guide.

Themes and how they develop

- family and reputation: the daughters are judged by their mother's manners; this is the first of many scenes where family embarrassment threatens Jane's prospects.

Symbols and motifs

- silence and reserve: What characters leave unsaid (Darcy's reserve, Jane's composure, Elizabeth's secrets) drives misunderstanding. In this chapter: “could think of nothing to say; and after a short silence Mrs. Bennet began repeating her thanks to Mr. Bingley for his” (Chapter IX, paragraph 35).
- letters: Letters carry news, reveal character and change minds; Darcy's letter is the turning point of the novel. In this chapter: “did not. Perhaps he thought her too young. However, he wrote some verses on her, and very pretty they were” (Chapter IX, paragraph 31).

Key quotations (checked against the reading text)

- “She performed her part indeed without much graciousness, but Mrs. Bennet was satisfied” (Chapter IX, paragraph 35) Elizabeth's mother is "satisfied" with a visit the reader can see has gone badly: the irony is in the gap.
- “She seems a very pleasant young woman” (Chapter IX, paragraph 30) Bingley's polite understatement about Jane; his good nature survives the embarrassment.
- “Lydia was a stout, well-grown girl of fifteen” (Chapter IX, paragraph 36) Lydia's first close portrait: young, bold, indulged; it prepares her role later.

Model claim-evidence-reasoning

Claim: Mrs. Bennet's behaviour at Netherfield damages the reputation she is trying to promote.
Evidence: “She performed her part indeed without much graciousness, but Mrs. Bennet was satisfied” (Chapter IX, paragraph 35)
Reasoning: She leaves "satisfied" after a visit in which Elizabeth has had to manage her, showing that she cannot see the impression her family makes; Lydia's demand for a ball adds to it.

Vocabulary with etymology notes

Word	Definition (in this sentence)	In context	Word history
witticisms (noun)	clever, funny remarks	Darcy; the latter of whom, however, could not be prevailed on to join in their censure of her, in spite of all Miss Bingley's witticisms on fine eyes.
nourishes (verb)	feeds; makes stronger	Everything nourishes what is strong already.	“nourishes”: Origin of “nourish”: Latin nutriō (“to suckle”). (Liber et Libri origin note, https://en.wiktionary.org/wiki/nourish#Etymology)
profuse (adjective)	lavish; very generous (in giving thanks or praise)	Bennet was profuse in her acknowledgments.
amendment (noun)	improvement (here: in Jane's health)	In spite of this amendment, however, she requested to have a note sent to Longbourn, desiring her mother to visit Jane, and form her own judgment of her situation.

efficacy (noun)	capacity or power to produce a desired effect	I wonder who first discovered the efficacy of poetry in driving away love!"
complied (verb)	act in accordance with someone's rules, commands, or wishes	The note was immediately dispatched, and its contents as quickly complied with.
genteel (adjective)	marked by refinement in taste and manners	Bingley—is not he? so much the man of fashion! so genteel and so easy!—He has always something to say to everybody.
civility (noun)	formal or perfunctory politeness	"You may depend upon it, Madam," said Miss Bingley, with cold civility, "that Miss Bennet shall receive every possible attention while she remains with us."	"civility": Origin: Latin civilitas. (Liber et Libri origin note, https://en.wiktionary.org/wiki/civility#Etymology)
mentioning (verb)	speaking about briefly	Bennet, offended by his manner of mentioning a country neighbourhood.	"mentioning": Origin of "mention": Old French mention; earlier Latin mentiōnem. (Liber et Libri origin note, https://en.wiktionary.org/wiki/mention#Etymology)

Discussion questions

1. How does Mrs. Bennet's behavior hurt the daughters she wants to help?
2. Where does characterization appear in this chapter, and what effect does it have? Point to one passage.
3. How does this chapter connect to the book's larger concern with class and social mobility?

Classroom discussion questions (30, tiered)

Wait time after every question (3 s for DOK 1, 5 s for DOK 2, 8 to 10 s for DOK 3 and 4); think-pair-share on DOK 3 and 4; answer each response with a follow-up probe; close with student-generated questions. Focus sets by rigor level: Scaffolded support: 1, 2, 3, 4, 5, 6, 11, 12, 13, 14, 21, 22; HS Freshman: 1, 2, 3, 4, 5, 12, 13, 14, 15, 22, 23, 24; HS Sophomore: 1, 2, 3, 4, 13, 14, 15, 16, 17, 23, 24, 25; HS Junior: 1, 2, 3, 14, 15, 16, 17, 18, 24, 25, 26, 27; HS Senior: 1, 2, 3, 15, 16, 17, 18, 25, 26, 27, 28, 29; AP: 1, 2, 16, 17, 18, 19, 20, 26, 27, 28, 29, 30; College Freshman: 1, 2, 17, 18, 19, 20, 21, 22, 27, 28, 29, 30; College Sophomore: 1, 2, 11, 18, 19, 20, 21, 22, 23, 28, 29, 30; College Junior: 1, 11, 12, 19, 20, 21, 22, 23, 24, 25, 29, 30; College Senior: 1, 11, 12, 13, 20, 21, 22, 23, 24, 25, 26, 30; Graduate / PhD: 1, 11, 12, 13, 21, 22, 23, 24, 25, 26, 27, 28

Literal / recall

1. Who visits Netherfield to check on Jane? [DOK 1 · coldCallWithSupport · wait 3 s · AP: unit standards] Look for: Mrs. Bennet with Lydia and Kitty
2. How does Elizabeth feel during the visit? [DOK 1 · turnAndTalk · wait 3 s · AP: unit standards] Look for: Embarrassed

3. What does Lydia ask Bingley to hold? [DOK 1 · coldCallWithSupport · wait 3 s · AP: unit standards] Look for: A ball
4. How does Mrs. Bennet treat Darcy? [DOK 1 · turnAndTalk · wait 3 s · AP: unit standards] Look for: Rudely
5. Why does family behavior matter? [DOK 1 · coldCallWithSupport · wait 3 s · AP: unit standards] Look for: It affects the daughters' reputation
6. Retell the three most important events of “Chapter IX” in order, in one sentence each. [DOK 1 · turnAndTalk · wait 3 s · AP: unit standards] Look for: Mrs. Bennet visits Netherfield with Lydia and Kitty, embarrassing Elizabeth by boasting and mocking Darcy. Lydia demands that Bingley hold a ball.
7. Which characters appear or are mentioned in “Chapter IX”? Name two and one thing each says or does. [DOK 1 · coldCallWithSupport · wait 3 s · AP: unit standards] Look for: Names and actions taken from the chapter; check against the teacher summary.
8. Where and when does “Chapter IX” take place? Point to the line that tells you. [DOK 1 · turnAndTalk · wait 3 s · AP: unit standards] Look for: A place/time detail quoted from the chapter.
9. Reread: “Darcy; the latter of whom, however, could not be prevailed on to join in their censure of her, in spite of all Miss Bingley’s witticisms on fine eyes.” What does “witticisms” mean here, and what is literally happening in this line? [DOK 1 · turnAndTalk · wait 3 s · AP: unit standards] Look for: witticisms: clever, funny remarks.
10. Reread: “Everything nourishes what is strong already.” What does “nourishes” mean here, and what is literally happening in this line? [DOK 1 · turnAndTalk · wait 3 s · AP: unit standards] Look for: nourishes: feeds; makes stronger.

Inferential / analytical

1. What does “Chapter IX” suggest about embarrassing relations? State the inference and the line that supports it. [DOK 2 · thinkPairShare · wait 5 s · AP-LIT.LAN] Look for: Mrs. Bennet's lack of propriety becomes a real obstacle to her daughters' prospects.
2. Find one example of characterization in this chapter. What does it reveal that a plain statement would not? [DOK 2 · followUp · wait 5 s · AP-LIT.CHR] Look for: Look for what characters say, do and think, and how others react to them.
3. How does the tone / mood in this chapter shape what we understand about embarrassing relations? [DOK 3 · thinkPairShare · wait 8 s · AP-LIT.FIG] Look for: Look for word choices that reveal the narrator's attitude or the scene's feeling.

   Answer guidance: A defensible line of argument: Mrs. Bennet's behaviour at Netherfield damages the reputation she is trying to promote. Useful evidence: “She performed her part indeed without much graciousness, but Mrs. Bennet was satisfied” (Chapter IX, paragraph 35): Elizabeth's mother is "satisfied" with a visit the reader can see has gone badly: the irony is in the gap. Theme link: the daughters are judged by their mother's manners; this is the first of many scenes where family embarrassment threatens Jane's prospects. Credit any position that is supported by quotation and reasoning; push one-sided answers to address the strongest counterpoint.
4. In the passage that begins “Elizabeth passed the chief of the night in her sister’s room, and in the morning had the pleasure of being able to send a tolerable answer to the enquiries which she very early…”, why might Austen have chosen these particular words? Pick two and explain their connotations. [DOK 2 · followUp · wait 5 s · AP-LIT.FIG] Look for: Diction analysis of two words in the anchor passage.

5. What causes the main turn in “Chapter IX”, and what effect is it likely to have on what follows? [DOK 2 · followUp · wait 5 s · AP-LIT.STR] Look for: Mrs. Bennet visits Netherfield with Lydia and Kitty, embarrassing Elizabeth by boasting and mocking Darcy. Lydia demands that Bingley hold a ball.
6. How does “Chapter IX” build on “Chapter VIII”? Name one link of cause and effect. [DOK 3 · thinkPairShare · wait 8 s · AP-LIT.STR] Look for: A causal or structural link between this and the previous chapter.
   Answer guidance: A defensible line of argument: Mrs. Bennet's behaviour at Netherfield damages the reputation she is trying to promote. Useful evidence: “She seems a very pleasant young woman” (Chapter IX, paragraph 30): Bingley's polite understatement about Jane; his good nature survives the embarrassment. Theme link: the daughters are judged by their mother's manners; this is the first of many scenes where family embarrassment threatens Jane's prospects. Credit any position that is supported by quotation and reasoning; push one-sided answers to address the strongest counterpoint.
7. What can we infer about a character's motives from what they say and do here, as opposed to what they claim? [DOK 3 · followUp · wait 8 s · AP-LIT.CHR] Look for: An inference about motive supported by a quoted line.
   Answer guidance: A defensible line of argument: Mrs. Bennet's behaviour at Netherfield damages the reputation she is trying to promote. Useful evidence: “Lydia was a stout, well-grown girl of fifteen” (Chapter IX, paragraph 36): Lydia's first close portrait: young, bold, indulged; it prepares her role later. On characterization: Mrs. Bennet's visit to Netherfield is a comic disaster: she boasts about Jane, quarrels with Darcy about country society and lets Lydia demand a ball. Each speech lowers the family in the eyes of the Netherfield party. Credit any position that is supported by quotation and reasoning; push one-sided answers to address the strongest counterpoint.
8. The bell-ringer asked: “How does Mrs. Bennet's behavior hurt the daughters she wants to help?” Now that we have read closely, how would you revise your first answer, and which line changed your mind? [DOK 2 · thinkPairShare · wait 5 s · AP-LIT.LAN] Look for: A revised answer anchored in the text.
9. Where does irony appear, and how does it connect this chapter to the larger concern with class and social mobility? [DOK 3 · followUp · wait 8 s · AP-LIT.NAR] Look for: Look for gaps between what characters expect or say and what is true.
   Answer guidance: A defensible line of argument: Mrs. Bennet's behaviour at Netherfield damages the reputation she is trying to promote. Useful evidence: “She performed her part indeed without much graciousness, but Mrs. Bennet was satisfied” (Chapter IX, paragraph 35): Elizabeth's mother is "satisfied" with a visit the reader can see has gone badly: the irony is in the gap. On irony: Mrs. Bennet believes she is advancing her daughters; every word works against them. Elizabeth's attempts to change the subject are the reader's guide. Credit any position that is supported by quotation and reasoning; push one-sided answers to address the strongest counterpoint.
10. Background: Public behavior reflected on a family's whole reputation in genteel society. How does knowing this change the way you read one moment in the chapter? [DOK 3 · thinkPairShare · wait 8 s · AP-LIT.SET] Look for: A specific moment reread in light of the context.
    Answer guidance: A defensible line of argument: Mrs. Bennet's behaviour at Netherfield damages the reputation she is trying to promote. Useful evidence: “She seems a very pleasant young woman” (Chapter IX, paragraph 30): Bingley's polite understatement about Jane; his good nature survives the embarrassment. Theme link: the daughters are judged by their mother's manners; this is the first of many scenes where family embarrassment threatens Jane's prospects. Credit any position that is supported by quotation and reasoning; push one-sided answers to address the strongest counterpoint.

Evaluative / synthesis / creative

1. A critic might argue: “Mrs. Bennet's lack of propriety becomes a real obstacle to her daughters' prospects.” How far do you agree? Take a stand and defend it with two lines from the chapter. [DOK 3 · fourCorners · wait 8 s · AP-LIT.LAN] Look for: A defended position with evidence and one counterpoint.
   Answer guidance: A defensible line of argument: Mrs. Bennet's behaviour at Netherfield damages the reputation she is trying to promote. Useful evidence: “Lydia was a stout, well-grown girl of fifteen” (Chapter IX, paragraph 36): Lydia's first close portrait: young, bold, indulged; it prepares her role later. Theme link: the daughters are judged by their mother's manners; this is the first of many scenes where family embarrassment threatens Jane's prospects. Credit any position that is supported by quotation and reasoning; push one-sided answers to address the strongest counterpoint.
2. Which character in this chapter acts most wisely, and which least? Judge them by a standard you name. [DOK 3 · thinkPairShare · wait 8 s · AP-LIT.CHR, AP-LIT.LAN] Look for: An evaluation using an explicit criterion and evidence.
   Answer guidance: A defensible line of argument: Mrs. Bennet's behaviour at Netherfield damages the reputation she is trying to promote. Useful evidence: “She performed her part indeed without much graciousness, but Mrs. Bennet was satisfied” (Chapter IX, paragraph 35): Elizabeth's mother is "satisfied" with a visit the reader can see has gone badly: the irony is in the gap. On characterization: Mrs. Bennet's visit to Netherfield is a comic disaster: she boasts about Jane, quarrels with Darcy about country society and lets Lydia demand a ball. Each speech lowers the family in the eyes of the Netherfield party. Credit any position that is supported by quotation and reasoning; push one-sided answers to address the strongest counterpoint.
3. Rewrite one moment of “Chapter IX” from the point of view of a different character. What does the new angle reveal or hide about embarrassing relations? [DOK 4 · thinkPairShare · wait 8 s · AP-LIT.LAN, AP-LIT.NAR] Look for: A creative product with a rationale tied to the text.
   Answer guidance: A defensible line of argument: Mrs. Bennet's behaviour at Netherfield damages the reputation she is trying to promote. Useful evidence: “She seems a very pleasant young woman” (Chapter IX, paragraph 30): Bingley's polite understatement about Jane; his good nature survives the embarrassment. Theme link: the daughters are judged by their mother's manners; this is the first of many scenes where family embarrassment threatens Jane's prospects. Credit any position that is supported by quotation and reasoning; push one-sided answers to address the strongest counterpoint.
4. Write three questions of your own about “Chapter IX”: one recall, one “why/how”, and one “should/what if”. Trade with a partner and answer theirs. [DOK 3 · studentGenerated · wait 8 s · AP-LIT.LAN] Look for: Student-generated questions at three levels.
   Answer guidance: A defensible line of argument: Mrs. Bennet's behaviour at Netherfield damages the reputation she is trying to promote. Useful evidence: “Lydia was a stout, well-grown girl of fifteen” (Chapter IX, paragraph 36): Lydia's first close portrait: young, bold, indulged; it prepares her role later. Theme link: the daughters are judged by their mother's manners; this is the first of many scenes where family embarrassment threatens Jane's prospects. Credit any position that is supported by quotation and reasoning; push one-sided answers to address the strongest counterpoint.
5. Connect this chapter to women's limited choices: is the link strong or weak so far? What would Austen need to show next to strengthen it? [DOK 4 · socraticCircle · wait 8 s · AP-LIT.LAN] Look for: A judgment of thematic development across the work.
   Answer guidance: A defensible line of argument: Mrs. Bennet's behaviour at Netherfield damages the reputation she is trying to promote. Useful evidence: “She performed her part indeed without much graciousness, but Mrs. Bennet was satisfied” (Chapter IX, paragraph 35): Elizabeth's mother is "satisfied" with a visit the reader can see has gone badly: the irony is in the gap. Theme link: the daughters are judged by their mother's manners; this is the first of many scenes where family embarrassment threatens Jane's prospects. Credit any position that is supported by quotation and reasoning; push one-sided answers to address the strongest counterpoint.

6. Is the characterization in this chapter effective, or does it feel heavy-handed? Evaluate it as a reader would in a review. [DOK 3 · fourCorners · wait 8 s · AP-LIT.CHR, AP-LIT.LAN] Look for: An evaluative judgment with criteria and evidence.

   Answer guidance: A defensible line of argument: Mrs. Bennet's behaviour at Netherfield damages the reputation she is trying to promote. Useful evidence: “She seems a very pleasant young woman” (Chapter IX, paragraph 30): Bingley's polite understatement about Jane; his good nature survives the embarrassment. On characterization: Mrs. Bennet's visit to Netherfield is a comic disaster: she boasts about Jane, quarrels with Darcy about country society and lets Lydia demand a ball. Each speech lowers the family in the eyes of the Netherfield party. Credit any position that is supported by quotation and reasoning; push one-sided answers to address the strongest counterpoint.

7. Compare how “Chapter IX” treats embarrassing relations with how another text, film or event you know treats a similar idea. What does Pride and Prejudice see that the other misses? [DOK 4 · socraticCircle · wait 8 s · AP-LIT.LAN] Look for: A cross-text synthesis.

   Answer guidance: A defensible line of argument: Mrs. Bennet's behaviour at Netherfield damages the reputation she is trying to promote. Useful evidence: “Lydia was a stout, well-grown girl of fifteen” (Chapter IX, paragraph 36): Lydia's first close portrait: young, bold, indulged; it prepares her role later. Theme link: the daughters are judged by their mother's manners; this is the first of many scenes where family embarrassment threatens Jane's prospects. Credit any position that is supported by quotation and reasoning; push one-sided answers to address the strongest counterpoint.

8. Predict what “Chapter X” will bring, using two clues from this chapter. After reading, evaluate your prediction. [DOK 3 · thinkPairShare · wait 8 s · AP-LIT.LAN, AP-LIT.STR] Look for: A prediction or judgment justified with textual clues.

   Answer guidance: A defensible line of argument: Mrs. Bennet's behaviour at Netherfield damages the reputation she is trying to promote. Useful evidence: “She performed her part indeed without much graciousness, but Mrs. Bennet was satisfied” (Chapter IX, paragraph 35): Elizabeth's mother is "satisfied" with a visit the reader can see has gone badly: the irony is in the gap. Theme link: the daughters are judged by their mother's manners; this is the first of many scenes where family embarrassment threatens Jane's prospects. Credit any position that is supported by quotation and reasoning; push one-sided answers to address the strongest counterpoint.

9. Design a one-paragraph modern adaptation of this chapter (setting, characters, conflict). What must stay the same for it to still be about embarrassing relations? [DOK 4 · thinkPairShare · wait 8 s · AP-LIT.LAN] Look for: A creative transfer that keeps the core idea.

   Answer guidance: A defensible line of argument: Mrs. Bennet's behaviour at Netherfield damages the reputation she is trying to promote. Useful evidence: “She seems a very pleasant young woman” (Chapter IX, paragraph 30): Bingley's polite understatement about Jane; his good nature survives the embarrassment. Theme link: the daughters are judged by their mother's manners; this is the first of many scenes where family embarrassment threatens Jane's prospects. Credit any position that is supported by quotation and reasoning; push one-sided answers to address the strongest counterpoint.

10. What question would you most like to ask Jane Austen about this chapter, and what answer do you think the text itself gives? [DOK 4 · studentGenerated · wait 8 s · AP-LIT.LAN] Look for: A student-generated question answered from evidence.

    Answer guidance: A defensible line of argument: Mrs. Bennet's behaviour at Netherfield damages the reputation she is trying to promote. Useful evidence: “Lydia was a stout, well-grown girl of fifteen” (Chapter IX, paragraph 36): Lydia's first close portrait: young, bold, indulged; it prepares her role later. Theme link: the daughters are judged by their mother's manners; this is the first of many scenes where family embarrassment threatens Jane's prospects. Credit any position that is supported by quotation and reasoning; push one-sided answers to address the strongest counterpoint.

Annotation focus

- Characterization: look for what characters say, do and think, and how others react to them (anchor passage in the We do segment)
- Also notice Tone / mood: word choices that reveal the narrator's attitude or the scene's feeling
- Also notice Irony: gaps between what characters expect or say and what is true

Chapter quiz: item bank (all eleven rigor versions)

1. [mc · recall · DOK 1] Who visits Netherfield to check on Jane?

   A. Mr. Collins

   B. Charlotte

   C. Mrs. Bennet with Lydia and Kitty

   D. Mr. Bennet alone

   Key: C (Mrs. Bennet with Lydia and Kitty)

2. [fill · recall · DOK 1] Fill in the blank with the vocabulary word that fits: “You may depend upon it, Madam,’ said Miss Bingley, with cold _____, ‘that Miss Bennet shall receive every possible attention while she remains with us.” Word bank: civility, witticisms, profuse, nourishes

   Key: civility

3. [fill · recall · DOK 1] Fill in the blank with the vocabulary word that fits: “I wonder who first discovered the _____ of poetry in driving away love!” Word bank: nourishes, profuse, witticisms, efficacy

   Key: efficacy

4. [fill · recall · DOK 1] Fill in the blank with the vocabulary word that fits: “Bingley—is not he? so much the man of fashion! so _____ and so easy!—He has always something to say to everybody.” Word bank: genteel, witticisms, nourishes, profuse

   Key: genteel

5. [fill · recall · DOK 1] Complete the quotation from Chapter IX, paragraph 36: “Lydia was a stout, well-grown girl of _____”

   Key: fifteen

6. [mc · recall · DOK 1] In the line “Everything nourishes what is strong already.”, what does “nourishes” most nearly mean?

   A. to belittle; to speak of as unimportant

B. feeds; makes stronger

C. having the requisite qualities or resources to meet a task

D. criticizing strongly

Key: B (feeds; makes stronger)

7. [mc · recall · DOK 1] What does Lydia ask Bingley to hold?

A. A concert

B. A dinner

C. A ball

D. A hunt

Key: C (A ball)

8. [mc · recall · DOK 1] How does Mrs. Bennet treat Darcy?

A. Respectfully

B. Flirtatiously

C. Rudely

D. Shyly

Key: C (Rudely)

9. [mc · recall · DOK 1] How does Elizabeth feel during the visit?

A. Proud

B. Embarrassed

C. Angry with Jane

D. Bored

Key: B (Embarrassed)

10. [mc · recall · DOK 1] In the line “In spite of this amendment, however, she requested to have a note sent to Longbourn, desiring her mother to visit Jane, and form her own judgment of her situation.”, what does “amendment” most nearly mean?

A. to draw into (a difficult situation)

B. improvement (here: in Jane's health)

C. winning or drawing in (someone's feelings)

D. making by knotting thread into a net

Key: B (improvement (here: in Jane's health))

11. [mc · recall · DOK 1] In the line “Darcy; the latter of whom, however, could not be prevailed on to join in their censure of her, in spite of all Miss Bingley’s witticisms on fine eyes.”, what does “witticisms” most nearly mean?

A. slanting

B. chestnut trees

C. annoying; wearying

D. clever, funny remarks

Key: D (clever, funny remarks)

12. [mc · inference · DOK 2] Which choice best states a central concern of “Chapter IX”?

    A. Confiding and consent

    B. Strategy in courtship

    C. Embarrassing relations

    D. Scandal

    Key: C (Embarrassing relations)

13. [short · inference · DOK 2] What can you infer from this line? “She seems a very pleasant young woman” (Chapter IX, paragraph 30) Answer in two or three sentences with one detail.

    Sample answer: Bingley's polite understatement about Jane; his good nature survives the embarrassment. The evidence is “She seems a very pleasant young woman” (Chapter IX, paragraph 30). This develops family and reputation: the daughters are judged by their mother's manners; this is the first of many scenes where family embarrassment threatens Jane's prospects.

14. [mc · analysis · DOK 3] Which literary element does this describe in “Chapter IX”? Mrs. Bennet's visit to Netherfield is a comic disaster: she boasts about Jane, quarrels with Darcy about country society and lets Lydia demand a ball. Each speech lowers the family in the eyes of the Netherfield party.

    A. Theme

    B. Metaphor

    C. Personification

    D. Characterization

    Key: D (Characterization)

15. [mc · analysis · DOK 3] Which literary element does this describe in “Chapter IX”? Mrs. Bennet believes she is advancing her daughters; every word works against them. Elizabeth's attempts to change the subject are the reader's guide.

    A. Simile

    B. Structure

    C. Irony

    D. Imagery

    Key: C (Irony)

16. [short · synthesis · DOK 4] Close reading: how do the diction and syntax of “She performed her part indeed without much graciousness, but Mrs. Bennet was satisfied” (Chapter IX, paragraph 35) shape its meaning? Consider a second, competing reading.

    Sample answer: Elizabeth's mother is "satisfied" with a visit the reader can see has gone badly: the irony is in the gap. The evidence is “She performed her part indeed without much graciousness, but Mrs. Bennet was satisfied” (Chapter IX, paragraph 35). This develops family and reputation: the daughters are judged by their mother's manners; this is the first of many scenes where family embarrassment threatens Jane's prospects. The words “graciousness” and “performed” carry that meaning: they are the charged choices in the line, and changing either would soften the effect. She leaves "satisfied" after a visit in which Elizabeth has had to manage her, showing that she cannot see the impression her family makes; Lydia's demand for a ball adds to it.

17. [fill · recall · DOK 1] Complete the quotation from Chapter IX, paragraph 35: “She performed her part indeed without much _____, but Mrs. Bennet was satisfied”

    Key: graciousness

18. [mc · recall · DOK 1] In the line “Bennet was profuse in her acknowledgments.”, what does “profuse” most nearly mean?

    A. a large entrance or reception room or area

    B. administer or bestow, as in small portions

    C. cleverness in keeping something secret

    D. lavish; very generous (in giving thanks or praise)

    Key: D (lavish; very generous (in giving thanks or praise))

19. [fill · recall · DOK 1] Fill in the blank with the vocabulary word that fits: “The note was immediately dispatched, and its contents as quickly _____ with.” Word bank: witticisms, complied, nourishes, profuse

    Key: complied

20. [fill · recall · DOK 1] Complete the quotation from Chapter IX, paragraph 30: “She seems a very _____ young woman”

    Key: pleasant

21. [short · analysis · DOK 3] Analyze the word choice in “Lydia was a stout, well-grown girl of fifteen” (Chapter IX, paragraph 36). Pick two words and explain what they suggest.

    Sample answer: Lydia's first close portrait: young, bold, indulged; it prepares her role later. The evidence is “Lydia was a stout, well-grown girl of fifteen” (Chapter IX, paragraph 36). This develops family and reputation: the daughters are judged by their mother's manners; this is the first of many scenes where family embarrassment threatens Jane's prospects. The words “fifteen” and “grown” carry that meaning: they are the charged choices in the line, and changing either would soften the effect.

22. [short · synthesis · DOK 4] Synthesis: trace how family and reputation develops from Chapter VII to Chapter IX. Use one quotation from each.

    Sample answer: Earlier, in Chapter VII, paragraph 1, the text reads “Mr. Bennet’s property consisted almost entirely in an estate of two thousand a year, which, unfortunately for his daughters, was entailed”, which shows the entail: the economic stakes. In Chapter IX, “She performed her part indeed without much graciousness, but Mrs. Bennet was satisfied” (Chapter IX, paragraph 35) — Elizabeth's mother is "satisfied" with a visit the reader can see has gone badly: the irony is in the gap. The daughters are judged by their mother's manners; this is the first of many scenes where family embarrassment threatens Jane's prospects.

23. [fill · recall · DOK 1] Complete the quotation from Chapter IX, paragraph 1: “Mrs. Bennet, _____ by her two youngest girls, reached Netherfield soon after the family breakfast.” Word bank: immediately, country, accompanied, surprised

    Key: accompanied

24. [mc · recall · DOK 1] Which word completes this sentence from Chapter IX, paragraph 23? “Aye—that is because you have the right _____.”

    A. accompanied

    B. disposition

    C. surprised

    D. subjects

    Key: B (disposition)

25. [short · inference · DOK 2] What does this passage from Chapter IX, paragraph 2 reveal about the character or situation? “Had she found Jane in any apparent danger, Mrs. Bennet would have been very miserable” Answer in two or three sentences with one detail.

Sample answer: The passage (Chapter IX, paragraph 2) shows the situation turning on first impressions and prejudice: the daughters are judged by their mother's manners; this is the first of many scenes where family embarrassment threatens Jane's prospects. The words “miserable” and “apparent” are the proof, because they show how the moment looks to the people in it. They suggest more than the narrator states outright.

26. [short · inference · DOK 2] What does this passage from Chapter IX, paragraph 23 reveal about the character or situation? “But that gentleman,’ looking at Darcy, ‘seemed to think the country was nothing at all.” Answer in two or three sentences with one detail.
    Sample answer: The passage (Chapter IX, paragraph 23) shows the situation turning on first impressions and prejudice: the daughters are judged by their mother's manners; this is the first of many scenes where family embarrassment threatens Jane's prospects. The words “gentleman” and “looking” are the proof, because they show how the moment looks to the people in it. They suggest more than the narrator states outright.

27. [short · analysis · DOK 3] Analyze how the word choice in this passage from Chapter IX, paragraph 26 shapes its tone: “Elizabeth, for the sake of saying something that might turn her mother’s thoughts, now asked her if Charlotte Lucas had been at Longbourn since her coming away.” Pick two words and explain their effect.
    Sample answer: The words “something” and “thoughts” (Chapter IX, paragraph 26) make the tone heavy and deliberate rather than neutral. That weight points the reader to class and social mobility: the daughters are judged by their mother's manners; this is the first of many scenes where family embarrassment threatens Jane's prospects. The author chooses them so the moment feels significant instead of passing.

28. [short · synthesis · DOK 4] Connect this passage from Chapter IX, paragraph 32 to the story's treatment of women's limited choices: “There has been many a one, I fancy, overcome in the same way.” Use one other moment from the story as well.
    Sample answer: This passage (Chapter IX, paragraph 32) develops women's limited choices: the daughters are judged by their mother's manners; this is the first of many scenes where family embarrassment threatens Jane's prospects. Its words “overcome” carry that idea into this moment. The same concern returns in “But if it be only a slight, thin sort of inclination, I am convinced that one good sonnet will starve it entirely away.” (Chapter IX, paragraph 34), so the two passages read as a pattern, not a single moment. Together they show the story treating women's limited choices as central.

29. [short · synthesis · DOK 4] Connect this passage from Chapter IX, paragraph 16 to the story's treatment of women's limited choices: “Yes; but intricate characters are the most amusing.” Use one other moment from the story as well.
    Sample answer: This passage (Chapter IX, paragraph 16) develops women's limited choices: the daughters are judged by their mother's manners; this is the first of many scenes where family embarrassment threatens Jane's prospects. Its words “characters” and “intricate” carry that idea into this moment. The same concern returns in “In a country neighbourhood you move in a very confined and unvarying society.” (Chapter IX, paragraph 17), so the two passages read as a pattern, not a single moment. Together they show the story treating women's limited choices as central.

30. [mc · recall · DOK 1 · AP: AP-LIT.FIG] Which word completes this sentence from Chapter IX, paragraph 3? “Mr. Jones says we must not think of _____ her.”
    A. themselves
    B. accompanied
    C. apothecary
    D. moving

    Key: D (moving)

31. [short · analysis · DOK 3 · AP: AP-LIT.FIG] Analyze how the word choice in this passage from Chapter IX, paragraph 8 shapes its tone: “Whatever I do is done in a hurry,’ replied he; ‘and therefore if I should resolve to quit Netherfield, I should probably be off in five minutes." Pick two words and explain their effect.

Sample answer: The words "therefore" and "probably" (Chapter IX, paragraph 8) make the tone heavy and deliberate rather than neutral. That weight points the reader to pride and self-knowledge: the daughters are judged by their mother's manners; this is the first of many scenes where family embarrassment threatens Jane's prospects. The author chooses them so the moment feels significant instead of passing.

32. [short · analysis · DOK 3 · AP: AP-LIT.FIG] Analyze how the word choice in this passage from Chapter IX, paragraph 3 shapes its tone: "We must trespass a little longer on your kindness." Pick two words and explain their effect.

    Sample answer: The words "trespass" and "kindness" (Chapter IX, paragraph 3) make the tone heavy and deliberate rather than neutral. That weight points the reader to class and social mobility: the daughters are judged by their mother's manners; this is the first of many scenes where family embarrassment threatens Jane's prospects. The author chooses them so the moment feels significant instead of passing.

33. [short · analysis · DOK 3 · AP: AP-LIT.FIG] Analyze how the word choice in this passage from Chapter IX, paragraph 29 shapes its tone: "Not that I think Charlotte so very plain—but then she is our particular friend." Pick two words and explain their effect.

    Sample answer: The words "particular" and "friend" (Chapter IX, paragraph 29) make the tone heavy and deliberate rather than neutral. That weight points the reader to pride and self-knowledge: the daughters are judged by their mother's manners; this is the first of many scenes where family embarrassment threatens Jane's prospects. The author chooses them so the moment feels significant instead of passing.

34. [short · synthesis · DOK 4 · AP: AP-LIT.LAN] Connect this passage from Chapter IX, paragraph 20 to the story's treatment of marriage and money: "Mrs. Bennet, who fancied she had gained a complete victory over him, continued her triumph." Use one other moment from the story as well.

    Sample answer: This passage (Chapter IX, paragraph 20) develops marriage and money: the daughters are judged by their mother's manners; this is the first of many scenes where family embarrassment threatens Jane's prospects. Its words "continued" and "complete" carry that idea into this moment. The same concern returns in "The country is a vast deal pleasanter, is not it, Mr. Bingley?" (Chapter IX, paragraph 21), so the two passages read as a pattern, not a single moment. Together they show the story treating marriage and money as central.

35. [fill · recall · DOK 1 · AP: AP-LIT.FIG] Complete the quotation from Chapter IX, paragraph 20: "Everybody was _____; and Darcy, after looking at her for a moment, turned silently away." Word bank: themselves, surprised, quitting, necessarily

    Key: surprised

36. [short · inference · DOK 2 · AP: AP-LIT.CHR] What can you infer from this line? "She performed her part indeed without much graciousness, but Mrs. Bennet was satisfied" (Chapter IX, paragraph 35) Answer in two or three sentences with one detail.

    Sample answer: Elizabeth's mother is "satisfied" with a visit the reader can see has gone badly: the irony is in the gap. The evidence is "She performed her part indeed without much graciousness, but Mrs. Bennet was satisfied" (Chapter IX, paragraph 35).

37. [short · synthesis · DOK 4 · AP: AP-LIT.FIG] Close reading: how do the diction and syntax of "She seems a very pleasant young woman" (Chapter IX, paragraph 30) shape its meaning? Consider a second, competing reading.

    Sample answer: Bingley's polite understatement about Jane; his good nature survives the embarrassment. The evidence is "She seems a very pleasant young woman" (Chapter IX, paragraph 30). This develops family and reputation: the daughters are judged by their mother's manners; this is the first of many scenes where family embarrassment threatens Jane's prospects. The words “pleasant” and “seems” carry that meaning: they are the charged choices in the line, and changing either would soften the effect. She leaves "satisfied" after a visit in which Elizabeth has had to manage her, showing that she cannot see the impression her family makes; Lydia's demand for a ball adds to it.

38. [short · synthesis · DOK 4 · AP: AP-LIT.LAN] Connect this passage from Chapter IX, paragraph 35 to the story's treatment of marriage and money: “Upon this signal, the youngest of her daughters put herself forward.” Use one other moment from the story as well.

    Sample answer: This passage (Chapter IX, paragraph 35) develops marriage and money: the daughters are judged by their mother's manners; this is the first of many scenes where family embarrassment threatens Jane's prospects. Its words “daughters” and “youngest” carry that idea into this moment. The same concern returns in “She had high animal spirits, and a sort of natural self-consequence, which the attentions of the officers, to whom her…” (Chapter IX, paragraph 36), so the two passages read as a pattern, not a single moment. Together they show the story treating marriage and money as central.

39. [short · analysis · DOK 3 · Dual Credit (Indiana College Core): ICC-WC-1.5] Claim: Mrs. Bennet's behaviour at Netherfield damages the reputation she is trying to promote. Explain how this evidence supports the claim: “She performed her part indeed without much graciousness, but Mrs. Bennet was satisfied” (Chapter IX, paragraph 35).

    Sample answer: She leaves "satisfied" after a visit in which Elizabeth has had to manage her, showing that she cannot see the impression her family makes; Lydia's demand for a ball adds to it. The evidence is “She performed her part indeed without much graciousness, but Mrs. Bennet was satisfied” (Chapter IX, paragraph 35) — Elizabeth's mother is "satisfied" with a visit the reader can see has gone badly: the irony is in the gap. This develops family and reputation: the daughters are judged by their mother's manners; this is the first of many scenes where family embarrassment threatens Jane's prospects.

40. [fill · recall · DOK 1 · Program outcome: LeL-C2-LIT-1] Complete the quotation from Chapter IX, paragraph 7: “You will not think of _____ it in a hurry I hope, though you have but a short lease.” Word bank: expected, quitting, country, subjects

    Key: quitting

41. [mc · inference · DOK 2 · Program outcome: LeL-C2-LIT-1] What does this passage most clearly show? “She performed her part indeed without much graciousness, but Mrs. Bennet was satisfied” (Chapter IX, paragraph 35)

    A. "Wisely" is ironic: his caution will deepen her misjudgment.

    B. Ironic "pitiable": she suffers only for herself.

    C. Elizabeth's mother is "satisfied" with a visit the reader can see has gone badly: the irony is in the gap.

    D. Lady Catherine's report gave him hope.

    Key: C (Elizabeth's mother is "satisfied" with a visit the reader can see has gone badly: the irony is in the gap.)

42. [mc · inference · DOK 2 · Program outcome: LeL-C4-LIT-1] What does this passage most clearly show? “Lydia was a stout, well-grown girl of fifteen” (Chapter IX, paragraph 36)

    A. The visual image that divides the Bingley sisters and Darcy.

    B. Her judgment follows her feelings.

    C. Lydia's first close portrait: young, bold, indulged; it prepares her role later.

    D. Mary's distinction; useful for the title.

    Key: C (Lydia's first close portrait: young, bold, indulged; it prepares her role later.)

43. [mc · inference · DOK 2 · Program outcome: LeL-GR-LIT-1] What does this passage most clearly show? “She seems a very pleasant young woman” (Chapter IX, paragraph 30)

    A. The dramatic irony stated directly.

B. Elizabeth's ironic, honest realization.

C. Bingley's polite understatement about Jane; his good nature survives the embarrassment.

D. The chapter opens by clearing the stage for new arrivals.

Key: C (Bingley's polite understatement about Jane; his good nature survives the embarrassment.)

Rigor version	Items (in order)	Mix
Scaffolded support	1, 2, 3, 4, 5, 6, 7, 8, 9, 10, 11, 12, 13, 14, 15, 16	recall 11, inference 2, analysis 2, synthesis 1
HS Freshman	9, 3, 4, 10, 11, 17, 18, 19, 2, 20, 13, 12, 14, 15, 21, 22	recall 10, inference 2, analysis 3, synthesis 1
HS Sophomore	23, 18, 7, 19, 20, 24, 4, 11, 25, 12, 26, 14, 21, 27, 28, 29	recall 8, inference 3, analysis 3, synthesis 2
HS Junior	9, 5, 18, 8, 4, 30, 26, 25, 13, 12, 31, 14, 32, 33, 34, 29	recall 6, inference 4, analysis 4, synthesis 2
HS Senior	35, 18, 10, 2, 17, 5, 25, 26, 12, 15, 32, 27, 14, 22, 28, 34	recall 6, inference 3, analysis 4, synthesis 3
AP	3, 23, 8, 36, 25, 26, 12, 27, 15, 21, 14, 32, 37, 34, 38, 29	recall 3, inference 4, analysis 5, synthesis 4
College Freshman	35, 18, 8, 3, 12, 26, 13, 39, 32, 31, 27, 14, 22, 29, 38, 34	recall 4, inference 3, analysis 5, synthesis 4
College Sophomore	40, 30, 3, 41, 26, 12, 14, 32, 27, 21, 33, 34, 29, 28, 37, 22	recall 3, inference 3, analysis 5, synthesis 5
College Junior	3, 20, 12, 41, 26, 14, 15, 31, 27, 32, 38, 22, 37, 34, 28, 29	recall 2, inference 3, analysis 5, synthesis 6
College Senior	2, 3, 1, 12, 42, 15, 31, 27, 33, 37, 38, 28, 34, 22, 29, 16	recall 3, inference 2, analysis 4, synthesis 7
Graduate / PhD	3, 19, 1, 43, 14, 21, 15, 33, 32, 31, 27, 38, 29, 34, 22, 28	recall 3, inference 1, analysis 7, synthesis 5

Writing prompts (eleven rigor levels)

Scaffolded support (250 words; AP: see unit standards): Supported track (work from the passage your teacher selects). In “Chapter IX,” how does Austen show embarrassing relations? Write a paragraph that states your claim, quotes two details from the passage, and explains how each detail supports your idea. Use the characterization you noticed as one piece of evidence.

HS Freshman (350 words; AP: see unit standards): In Chapter IX, how does Austen develop the idea of embarrassing relations? State a clear claim, support it with two or three quotations, and explain how the characterization in the chapter helps build that idea.

HS Sophomore (450 words; AP: see unit standards): Analyze how Chapter IX develops the idea of embarrassing relations. Make a precise claim, support it with at least three pieces of textual evidence, and explain how the author's use of characterization and tone / mood shapes that idea. Address one possible counterclaim.

HS Junior (550 words; AP: see unit standards): Analyze how the structure of Chapter IX (where it begins, turns and ends) and its characterization shape the reader's understanding of embarrassing relations. Identify one place where the text leaves matters uncertain and explain how that uncertainty adds to its meaning.

HS Senior (600 words; AP: see unit standards): Two readers disagree about what Chapter IX suggests about embarrassing relations. Lay out two plausible interpretations, weigh the evidence for each (including the chapter's characterization and tone / mood), and argue for the stronger one in a sustained, well-organized essay.

AP (650 words; AP: AP-LIT.CHR, AP-LIT.LAN): Write a literary argument in which you analyze how Jane Austen uses characterization in Chapter IX to complicate the reader's understanding of embarrassing relations. Develop a defensible thesis, select evidence purposefully, and explain how specific choices of diction and syntax create meaning.

College Freshman (1000 words; AP: see unit standards): Situate Chapter IX within its historical and literary context and argue how the chapter's treatment of embarrassing relations responds to that context. Engage with at least one secondary perspective (a critic, historian or the author's own statements), integrate quotations smoothly, and cite in MLA style.

College Sophomore (1250 words; AP: see unit standards): Read Chapter IX alongside the conventions of its genre and period. Argue how the chapter's handling of embarrassing relations follows or bends those conventions, using the characterization as evidence, and test your reading against one published critic. Document two secondary sources in MLA.

College Junior (1500 words; AP: see unit standards): Apply a named critical approach (for example formalist, historicist, feminist, psychoanalytic or ecocritical) to Chapter IX and its treatment of embarrassing relations. State your method, show what it reveals in the chapter's characterization and tone / mood, and identify where the text resists it.

College Senior (2000 words; AP: see unit standards): Develop a research argument that reads Chapter IX as evidence for a larger claim about embarrassing relations in Pride and Prejudice. Connect close reading of the chapter to the whole novel, engage at least four scholarly sources, and state precisely where your reading departs from theirs (Chicago style).

Graduate / PhD (2500 words; AP: see unit standards): Develop an original argument that reads Chapter IX as a hinge in the novel's larger treatment of embarrassing relations. Position your reading within a named critical conversation (for example formalist, historicist, psychoanalytic, feminist or postcolonial approaches), account for the textual history where relevant, and articulate the stakes of your intervention for scholarship on Pride and Prejudice.

SAT-style questions

1. Bennet was profuse in her acknowledgments.

   As used in the text, what does the word “profuse” most nearly mean?

   A. lavish; very generous (in giving thanks or praise)

   B. formal or perfunctory politeness

   C. speaking about briefly

   D. marked by refinement in taste and manners

2. Elizabeth passed the chief of the night in her sister's room, and in the morning had the pleasure of being able to send a tolerable answer to the enquiries which she very early received from Mr. Bingley by a housemaid, and some time afterwards from the two elegant ladies who waited on his sisters. In spite of this amendment, however, she requested to have a note sent to Longbourn, desiring her mother to visit Jane, and form her own judgment of her situation. The note was immediately dispatched, and its contents as quickly complied with. Mrs. Bennet, accompanied by her two youngest girls, reached Netherfield soon after the family breakfast.

Which choice best states a central concern of "Chapter IX"?

A. Marriage as a social goal

B. The Brighton plan

C. Embarrassing relations

D. A persuasive tale

SAT key: 1. A (lavish; very generous (in giving thanks or praise)); 2. C (Embarrassing relations)

Lesson 11: Chapter X

Focus: wit as courtship

Objective: Students will analyze how characterization develops in “Chapter X” by writing a claim-evidence-reasoning paragraph that cites at least 2 quotations from the section, and will score at least 80% on the section quiz.

Standards: AP: see the unit standards

Teacher only · spoilers

Miss Bingley flatters Darcy as he writes a letter; Elizabeth and Darcy spar over Bingley's 'humility' and persuadability. Darcy asks Elizabeth to dance a reel; she refuses wittily, and he finds himself 'bewitched.'

Background: Letter writing was a central social skill and a sign of character.

Significance: Their verbal duels reveal mutual attraction neither admits.

Lesson plan and lecture script (90 minutes)

0–8 min · Bell-ringer · You do (8 min)
Students write to the bell-ringer, then pair-share.
Why does Darcy enjoy Elizabeth's refusal rather than resent it? Write for five minutes. Starters: I think... because... / This connects to pride and prejudice because....
Prompt: Why does Darcy enjoy Elizabeth's refusal rather than resent it?
Sentence starters: I think… because… · This connects to pride and prejudice because…
Strong response: A strong response takes a position and anticipates this: Elizabeth refuses to give Darcy the satisfaction of dancing a reel: "despise me if you dare."

8–18 min · Vocabulary with etymology notes · I do (10 min)
Five key words in context, with verified word histories.
Today's words: appertain — to belong to or be connected with; overthrowing — defeating; spoiling (a plan); celerity — speed; swiftness; rambled — walked about with no fixed route; premeditated — planned in advance. “appertain”: Origin: Old French apartenir; earlier Late Latin appertinēre. “overthrowing”: Origin of “overthrow”: an English formation from over- + throw.
Words: appertain: to belong to or be connected with · overthrowing: defeating; spoiling (a plan) · celerity: speed; swiftness · rambled: walked about with no fixed route · premeditated: planned in advance

18–28 min · Background and context · I do (10 min)
Mini-lecture (read or adapt the script).
Letter writing was a central social skill and a sign of character. Their verbal duels reveal mutual attraction neither admits. Characterization: In the letter-writing scene Darcy writes carefully and at length, Bingley carelessly; Miss Bingley flatters Darcy constantly; Elizabeth watches and judges. Dialogue: The debate about Bingley's "precipitance" (acting on a friend's persuasion) foreshadows Darcy persuading Bingley to leave Jane. Foreshadowing: Miss Bingley teases Darcy about marrying Elizabeth, naming the possibility long before either admits it. Watch for silence and reserve: What characters leave unsaid (Darcy's reserve, Jane's composure, Elizabeth's secrets) drives misunderstanding. In this chapter: "He was silent" (Chapter X, paragraph 14).

28–40 min · I do: modeled close reading · I do (12 min)
Model the close reading of the anchor quotation using the written think-aloud below.
First, meaning. I read "I am afraid you do not like your pen" slowly and put it in my own words: As Darcy writes a letter, Miss Bingley tells him she is afraid he does not like his pen. Next, craft. I notice the fussy, attentive remark about a trivial object, one of many interruptions she makes while he writes. The strongest word is "afraid": it is polite exaggeration, pretending concern over a pen to get his attention. Then, effect. What is Miss Bingley really doing when she worries about Darcy's pen? My answer: She is not worried about the pen; she is flattering Darcy and trying to draw him into conversation, and his short replies show her pursuit is unwelcome.

> I am afraid you do not like your pen (Chapter X, paragraph 11)

Think-aloud: First, meaning. I read "I am afraid you do not like your pen" slowly and put it in my own words: As Darcy writes a letter, Miss Bingley tells him she is afraid he does not like his pen. Next, craft. I notice the fussy, attentive remark about a trivial object, one of many interruptions she makes while he writes. The strongest word is "afraid": it is polite exaggeration, pretending concern over a pen to get his attention. Then, effect. What is Miss Bingley really doing when she worries about Darcy's pen? My answer: She is not worried about the pen; she is flattering Darcy and trying to draw him into conversation, and his short replies show her pursuit is unwelcome.

40–55 min · We do: guided annotation · We do (15 min)
Guided analysis of a second quotation; expected answers given.
Ask: What words in this line stand out, and what do they suggest? Expected: Elizabeth's challenge: playful and defiant, the voice Darcy finds irresistible. Look at the craft: The debate about Bingley's "precipitance" (acting on a friend's persuasion) foreshadows Darcy persuading Bingley to leave Jane. Ask: How does this line connect to pride and prejudice? Expected: Elizabeth refuses to give Darcy the satisfaction of dancing a reel: "despise me if you dare." (Elizabeth's challenge: playful and defiant, the voice Darcy finds irresistible.)

> despise me if you dare (Chapter X, paragraph 50)

Ask: What words in this line stand out, and what do they suggest?
Expected answer: Elizabeth's challenge: playful and defiant, the voice Darcy finds irresistible. Look at the craft: The debate about Bingley's "precipitance" (acting on a friend's persuasion) foreshadows Darcy persuading Bingley to leave Jane.
Ask: How does this line connect to pride and prejudice?
Expected answer: Elizabeth refuses to give Darcy the satisfaction of dancing a reel: "despise me if you dare." (Elizabeth's challenge: playful and defiant, the voice Darcy finds irresistible.)

55–70 min · You do: independent annotation · You do (15 min)
Independent annotation and a claim-evidence-reasoning paragraph (exemplar given).
Annotate the chapter for characterization, dialogue (three marks with a margin note each), then write one claim-evidence-reasoning paragraph: what does this chapter suggest about wit as courtship? Then start your writing prompt at your assigned level (HS Sophomore: Analyze how Chapter X develops the idea of wit as courtship. Make a precise claim, support it with at least three pieces of textual evidence, and explain how the author's use of characterization and irony shapes that idea. Address one possible counterclaim.) Exemplar: The letter-writing scene shows Elizabeth misreading Darcy's attention because she has already decided he dislikes her. When the text says “Elizabeth could not help observing as she turned over some music books that lay on the instrument, how frequently Mr. Darcy’s eyes were fixed on her” (Chapter X, paragraph 46), it shows this directly. She notices "how frequently Mr. Darcy's eyes were fixed on her" but concludes he finds something wrong in her; the reader, who knows his admiration, sees prejudice shaping her interpretation.
Task: Annotate the chapter for characterization, dialogue (three marks with a margin note each), then write one claim-evidence-reasoning paragraph: what does this chapter suggest about wit as courtship? Then start your writing prompt at your assigned level (HS Sophomore: Analyze how Chapter X develops the idea of wit as courtship. Make a precise claim, support it with at least three pieces of textual evidence, and explain how the author's use of characterization and irony shapes that idea. Address one possible counterclaim.)
Exemplar: The letter-writing scene shows Elizabeth misreading Darcy's attention because she has already decided he dislikes her. When the text says “Elizabeth could not help observing as she turned over some music books that lay on the instrument, how frequently Mr. Darcy’s eyes were fixed on her” (Chapter X, paragraph 46), it shows this directly. She notices "how frequently Mr. Darcy's eyes were fixed on her" but concludes he finds something wrong in her; the reader, who knows his admiration, sees prejudice shaping her interpretation.

70–80 min · Discussion · We do (10 min)
Structured discussion from the 30 tiered questions, with facilitation notes.
Anchor question: Why does Darcy enjoy Elizabeth's refusal rather than resent it? Ask students to list three things Darcy does in this chapter and give a generous and an ungenerous reading of each.
Anchor question: Why does Darcy enjoy Elizabeth's refusal rather than resent it?
Facilitation: Ask students to list three things Darcy does in this chapter and give a generous and an ungenerous reading of each.

80–87 min · Exit ticket / chapter quiz · You do (7 min)
Chapter quiz in the app and an exit ticket (answer given).
Chapter quiz in the app, then: In one sentence, what does this chapter suggest about wit as courtship? Support it with one short quotation. Model answer: The letter-writing scene shows Elizabeth misreading Darcy's attention because she has already decided he dislikes her. ("Elizabeth could not help observing as she turned over some music books that lay on the instrument, how frequently Mr. Darcy's eyes were fixed on her", Chapter X, paragraph 46). Accept any defensible claim backed by a quotation from the chapter; the answer key for the quiz is in the Quiz section.
Exit ticket: In one sentence, what does this chapter suggest about wit as courtship? Support it with one short quotation.
Answer: Model answer: The letter-writing scene shows Elizabeth misreading Darcy's attention because she has already decided he dislikes her. ("Elizabeth could not help observing as she turned over some music books that lay on the instrument, how frequently Mr. Darcy's eyes were fixed on her", Chapter X, paragraph 46). Accept any defensible claim backed by a quotation from the chapter; the answer key for the quiz is in the Quiz section.

87–90 min · Closure · I do (3 min)
Summarize the lesson and preview the next reading.
Today we saw how characterization shapes wit as courtship. Key takeaway: Elizabeth refuses to give Darcy the satisfaction of dancing a reel: "despise me if you dare."

Total: 90 minutes.

Teacher analysis (spoilers)

Literary elements

- Characterization: In the letter-writing scene Darcy writes carefully and at length, Bingley carelessly; Miss Bingley flatters Darcy constantly; Elizabeth watches and judges.
- Dialogue: The debate about Bingley's "precipitance" (acting on a friend's persuasion) foreshadows Darcy persuading Bingley to leave Jane.
- Foreshadowing: Miss Bingley teases Darcy about marrying Elizabeth, naming the possibility long before either admits it.

Themes and how they develop

- pride and prejudice: Elizabeth refuses to give Darcy the satisfaction of dancing a reel: "despise me if you dare."

Symbols and motifs

- silence and reserve: What characters leave unsaid (Darcy's reserve, Jane's composure, Elizabeth's secrets) drives misunderstanding. In this chapter: "He was silent" (Chapter X, paragraph 14).
- letters: Letters carry news, reveal character and change minds; Darcy's letter is the turning point of the novel. In this chapter: "Bingley, seated near him, was watching the progress of his letter, and repeatedly calling off his attention by messages to his sister" (Chapter X, paragraph 1).

Key quotations (checked against the reading text)

- "I am afraid you do not like your pen" (Chapter X, paragraph 11) Miss Bingley's flattery of Darcy's letter-writing: comic and transparent.
- "despise me if you dare" (Chapter X, paragraph 50) Elizabeth's challenge: playful and defiant, the voice Darcy finds irresistible.
- "Elizabeth could not help observing as she turned over some music books that lay on the instrument, how frequently Mr. Darcy's eyes were fixed on her" (Chapter X, paragraph 46) The narrator lets us see Darcy's attention, while Elizabeth misreads it as disapproval.

Model claim-evidence-reasoning

Claim: The letter-writing scene shows Elizabeth misreading Darcy's attention because she has already decided he dislikes her.
Evidence: "Elizabeth could not help observing as she turned over some music books that lay on the instrument, how frequently Mr. Darcy's eyes were fixed on her" (Chapter X, paragraph 46)
Reasoning: She notices "how frequently Mr. Darcy's eyes were fixed on her" but concludes he finds something wrong in her; the reader, who knows his admiration, sees prejudice shaping her interpretation.

Vocabulary with etymology notes

Word	Definition (in this sentence)	In context	Word history
appertain (verb)	to belong to or be connected with	"Will it not be advisable, before we proceed on this subject, to arrange with rather more precision the degree of importance which is to appertain to this request, as well as the degree of intimacy subsisting between the parties?"	"appertain": Origin: Old French apartenir; earlier Late Latin appertinēre. (Liber et Libri origin note, https://en.wiktionary.org/wiki/appertain#Etymology)
overthrowing (verb)	defeating; spoiling (a plan)	You wanted me, I know, to say 'Yes,' that you might have the pleasure of despising my taste; but I always delight in overthrowing those kind of schemes, and cheating a person of their premeditated contempt.	"overthrowing": Origin of "overthrow": an English formation from over- + throw. (Liber et Libri origin note, https://en.wiktionary.org/wiki/overthrow#Etymology)
celerity (noun)	speed; swiftness

		"I dare say you believed it; but I am by no means convinced that you would be gone with such celerity.
rambled (verb)	walked about with no fixed route	She then ran gaily off, rejoicing as she rambled about, in the hope of being at home again in a day or two.
premeditated (adjective)	planned in advance	You wanted me, I know, to say 'Yes,' that you might have the pleasure of despising my taste; but I always delight in overthrowing those kind of schemes, and cheating a person of their premeditated contempt.
indignity (noun)	an affront to one's dignity or self-esteem	Miss Bingley warmly resented the indignity he had received, in an expostulation with her brother for talking such nonsense.	"indignity": Origin: Latin indignitās. (Liber et Libri origin note, https://en.wiktionary.org/wiki/indignity#Etymology)
charmingly (adverb)	in a charming manner	You are charmingly group'd, and appear to uncommon advantage.
alacrity (noun)	liveliness and eagerness	Miss Bingley moved with alacrity to the pianoforte, and after a polite request that Elizabeth would lead the way, which the other as politely and more earnestly negatived, she seated herself.	"alacrity": Origin: Latin alacritās. (Liber et Libri origin note, https://en.wiktionary.org/wiki/alacrity#Etymology)
resented (verb)	felt angry about	Miss Bingley warmly resented the indignity he had received, in an expostulation with her brother for talking such nonsense.	"resented": Origin of "resent": Middle French ressentir; earlier Old French resentir. (Liber et Libri origin note, https://en.wiktionary.org/wiki/resent#Etymology)
deference (noun)	a courteous expression (by word or deed) of esteem or regard	I assure you that if Darcy were not such a great tall fellow, in comparison with myself, I should not pay him half so much deference.	"deference": Origin: French déférence. (Liber et Libri origin note, https://en.wiktionary.org/wiki/deference#Etymology)

Discussion questions

1. Why does Darcy enjoy Elizabeth's refusal rather than resent it?
2. Where does characterization appear in this chapter, and what effect does it have? Point to one passage.
3. How does this chapter connect to the book's larger concern with women's limited choices?

Classroom discussion questions (30, tiered)

Wait time after every question (3 s for DOK 1, 5 s for DOK 2, 8 to 10 s for DOK 3 and 4); think-pair-share on DOK 3 and 4; answer each response with a follow-up probe; close with student-generated questions. Focus sets by rigor level: Scaffolded support: 1, 2, 3, 4, 5, 6, 11, 12, 13, 14, 21, 22; HS Freshman: 1, 2, 3, 4, 5, 12, 13, 14, 15, 22, 23, 24; HS Sophomore: 1, 2, 3, 4, 13, 14, 15,

16, 17, 23, 24, 25; HS Junior: 1, 2, 3, 14, 15, 16, 17, 18, 24, 25, 26, 27; HS Senior: 1, 2, 3, 15, 16, 17, 18, 25, 26, 27, 28, 29; AP: 1, 2, 16, 17, 18, 19, 20, 26, 27, 28, 29, 30; College Freshman: 1, 2, 17, 18, 19, 20, 21, 22, 27, 28, 29, 30; College Sophomore: 1, 2, 11, 18, 19, 20, 21, 22, 23, 28, 29, 30; College Junior: 1, 11, 12, 19, 20, 21, 22, 23, 24, 25, 29, 30; College Senior: 1, 11, 12, 13, 20, 21, 22, 23, 24, 25, 26, 30; Graduate / PhD: 1, 11, 12, 13, 21, 22, 23, 24, 25, 26, 27, 28

Literal / recall

1. What is Darcy doing while Miss Bingley flatters him? [DOK 1 · coldCallWithSupport · wait 3 s · AP: unit standards] Look for: Writing a letter
2. What trait of Bingley do they debate? [DOK 1 · turnAndTalk · wait 3 s · AP: unit standards] Look for: How easily he is persuaded
3. What does Elizabeth refuse? [DOK 1 · coldCallWithSupport · wait 3 s · AP: unit standards] Look for: To dance a reel with Darcy
4. How does Darcy feel about Elizabeth? [DOK 1 · turnAndTalk · wait 3 s · AP: unit standards] Look for: Increasingly attracted
5. What literary device fills their conversations? [DOK 1 · coldCallWithSupport · wait 3 s · AP: unit standards] Look for: Witty irony
6. Retell the three most important events of "Chapter X" in order, in one sentence each. [DOK 1 · turnAndTalk · wait 3 s · AP: unit standards] Look for: Miss Bingley flatters Darcy as he writes a letter; Elizabeth and Darcy spar over Bingley's 'humility' and persuadability. Darcy asks Elizabeth to dance a reel; she refuses wittily, and he finds himself 'bewitched.'
7. Which characters appear or are mentioned in "Chapter X"? Name two and one thing each says or does. [DOK 1 · coldCallWithSupport · wait 3 s · AP: unit standards] Look for: Names and actions taken from the chapter; check against the teacher summary.
8. Where and when does "Chapter X" take place? Point to the line that tells you. [DOK 1 · turnAndTalk · wait 3 s · AP: unit standards] Look for: A place/time detail quoted from the chapter.
9. Reread: ""Will it not be advisable, before we proceed on this subject, to arrange with rather more precision the degree of importance which is to appertain to this request, as well as the degree of intimacy subsisting between…" What does "appertain" mean here, and what is literally happening in this line? [DOK 1 · turnAndTalk · wait 3 s · AP: unit standards] Look for: appertain: to belong to or be connected with.
10. Reread: "You wanted me, I know, to say 'Yes,' that you might have the pleasure of despising my taste; but I always delight in overthrowing those kind of schemes, and cheating a person of their premeditated contempt." What does "overthrowing" mean here, and what is literally happening in this line? [DOK 1 · turnAndTalk · wait 3 s · AP: unit standards] Look for: overthrowing: defeating; spoiling (a plan).

Inferential / analytical

1. What does "Chapter X" suggest about wit as courtship? State the inference and the line that supports it. [DOK 2 · thinkPairShare · wait 5 s · AP-LIT.LAN] Look for: Their verbal duels reveal mutual attraction neither admits.
2. Find one example of characterization in this chapter. What does it reveal that a plain statement would not? [DOK 2 · followUp · wait 5 s · AP-LIT.CHR] Look for: Look for what characters say, do and think, and how others react to them.
3. How does the irony in this chapter shape what we understand about wit as courtship? [DOK 3 · thinkPairShare · wait 8 s · AP-LIT.NAR] Look for: Look for gaps between what characters expect or say and what is true.

Answer guidance: A defensible line of argument: The letter-writing scene shows Elizabeth misreading Darcy's attention because she has already decided he dislikes her. Useful evidence: “I am afraid you do not like your pen” (Chapter X, paragraph 11): Miss Bingley's flattery of Darcy's letter-writing: comic and transparent. Theme link: Elizabeth refuses to give Darcy the satisfaction of dancing a reel: "despise me if you dare." Credit any position that is supported by quotation and reasoning; push one-sided answers to address the strongest counterpoint.

4. In the passage that begins ““I dare say you believed it; but I am by no means convinced that you would be gone with such celerity.”, why might Austen have chosen these particular words? Pick two and explain their connotations. [DOK 2 · followUp · wait 5 s · AP-LIT.FIG] Look for: Diction analysis of two words in the anchor passage.
5. What causes the main turn in “Chapter X”, and what effect is it likely to have on what follows? [DOK 2 · followUp · wait 5 s · AP-LIT.STR] Look for: Miss Bingley flatters Darcy as he writes a letter; Elizabeth and Darcy spar over Bingley's 'humility' and persuadability. Darcy asks Elizabeth to dance a reel; she refuses wittily, and he finds himself 'bewitched.'
6. How does “Chapter X” build on “Chapter IX”? Name one link of cause and effect. [DOK 3 · thinkPairShare · wait 8 s · AP-LIT.STR] Look for: A causal or structural link between this and the previous chapter.
   Answer guidance: A defensible line of argument: The letter-writing scene shows Elizabeth misreading Darcy's attention because she has already decided he dislikes her. Useful evidence: “despise me if you dare” (Chapter X, paragraph 50): Elizabeth's challenge: playful and defiant, the voice Darcy finds irresistible. Theme link: Elizabeth refuses to give Darcy the satisfaction of dancing a reel: "despise me if you dare." Credit any position that is supported by quotation and reasoning; push one-sided answers to address the strongest counterpoint.
7. What can we infer about a character's motives from what they say and do here, as opposed to what they claim? [DOK 3 · followUp · wait 8 s · AP-LIT.CHR] Look for: An inference about motive supported by a quoted line.
   Answer guidance: A defensible line of argument: The letter-writing scene shows Elizabeth misreading Darcy's attention because she has already decided he dislikes her. Useful evidence: “Elizabeth could not help observing as she turned over some music books that lay on the instrument, how frequently Mr. Darcy’s eyes were fixed on her” (Chapter X, paragraph 46): The narrator lets us see Darcy's attention, while Elizabeth misreads it as disapproval. On characterization: In the letter-writing scene Darcy writes carefully and at length, Bingley carelessly; Miss Bingley flatters Darcy constantly; Elizabeth watches and judges. Credit any position that is supported by quotation and reasoning; push one-sided answers to address the strongest counterpoint.
8. The bell-ringer asked: “Why does Darcy enjoy Elizabeth's refusal rather than resent it?” Now that we have read closely, how would you revise your first answer, and which line changed your mind? [DOK 2 · thinkPairShare · wait 5 s · AP-LIT.LAN] Look for: A revised answer anchored in the text.
9. Where does theme appear, and how does it connect this chapter to the larger concern with women's limited choices? [DOK 3 · followUp · wait 8 s · AP-LIT.LAN] Look for: Look for statements or moments that connect to the book's big ideas.
   Answer guidance: A defensible line of argument: The letter-writing scene shows Elizabeth misreading Darcy's attention because she has already decided he dislikes her. Useful evidence: “I am afraid you do not like your pen” (Chapter X, paragraph 11): Miss Bingley's flattery of Darcy's letter-writing: comic and transparent. Theme link: Elizabeth refuses to give Darcy the satisfaction of dancing a reel: "despise me if you dare." Credit any position that is supported by quotation and reasoning; push one-sided answers to address the strongest counterpoint.

10. Background: Letter writing was a central social skill and a sign of character. How does knowing this change the way you read one moment in the chapter? [DOK 3 · thinkPairShare · wait 8 s · AP-LIT.SET] Look for: A specific moment reread in light of the context.
    Answer guidance: A defensible line of argument: The letter-writing scene shows Elizabeth misreading Darcy's attention because she has already decided he dislikes her. Useful evidence: “despise me if you dare” (Chapter X, paragraph 50): Elizabeth's challenge: playful and defiant, the voice Darcy finds irresistible. Theme link: Elizabeth refuses to give Darcy the satisfaction of dancing a reel: "despise me if you dare." Credit any position that is supported by quotation and reasoning; push one-sided answers to address the strongest counterpoint.

Evaluative / synthesis / creative

1. A critic might argue: “Their verbal duels reveal mutual attraction neither admits.” How far do you agree? Take a stand and defend it with two lines from the chapter. [DOK 3 · fourCorners · wait 8 s · AP-LIT.LAN] Look for: A defended position with evidence and one counterpoint.
   Answer guidance: A defensible line of argument: The letter-writing scene shows Elizabeth misreading Darcy's attention because she has already decided he dislikes her. Useful evidence: “Elizabeth could not help observing as she turned over some music books that lay on the instrument, how frequently Mr. Darcy’s eyes were fixed on her” (Chapter X, paragraph 46): The narrator lets us see Darcy's attention, while Elizabeth misreads it as disapproval. Theme link: Elizabeth refuses to give Darcy the satisfaction of dancing a reel: "despise me if you dare." Credit any position that is supported by quotation and reasoning; push one-sided answers to address the strongest counterpoint.
2. Which character in this chapter acts most wisely, and which least? Judge them by a standard you name. [DOK 3 · thinkPairShare · wait 8 s · AP-LIT.CHR, AP-LIT.LAN] Look for: An evaluation using an explicit criterion and evidence.
   Answer guidance: A defensible line of argument: The letter-writing scene shows Elizabeth misreading Darcy's attention because she has already decided he dislikes her. Useful evidence: “I am afraid you do not like your pen” (Chapter X, paragraph 11): Miss Bingley's flattery of Darcy's letter-writing: comic and transparent. On characterization: In the letter-writing scene Darcy writes carefully and at length, Bingley carelessly; Miss Bingley flatters Darcy constantly; Elizabeth watches and judges. Credit any position that is supported by quotation and reasoning; push one-sided answers to address the strongest counterpoint.
3. Rewrite one moment of “Chapter X” from the point of view of a different character. What does the new angle reveal or hide about wit as courtship? [DOK 4 · thinkPairShare · wait 8 s · AP-LIT.LAN, AP-LIT.NAR] Look for: A creative product with a rationale tied to the text.
   Answer guidance: A defensible line of argument: The letter-writing scene shows Elizabeth misreading Darcy's attention because she has already decided he dislikes her. Useful evidence: “despise me if you dare” (Chapter X, paragraph 50): Elizabeth's challenge: playful and defiant, the voice Darcy finds irresistible. Theme link: Elizabeth refuses to give Darcy the satisfaction of dancing a reel: "despise me if you dare." Credit any position that is supported by quotation and reasoning; push one-sided answers to address the strongest counterpoint.
4. Write three questions of your own about “Chapter X”: one recall, one “why/how”, and one “should/what if”. Trade with a partner and answer theirs. [DOK 3 · studentGenerated · wait 8 s · AP-LIT.LAN] Look for: Student-generated questions at three levels.

Answer guidance: A defensible line of argument: The letter-writing scene shows Elizabeth misreading Darcy's attention because she has already decided he dislikes her. Useful evidence: “Elizabeth could not help observing as she turned over some music books that lay on the instrument, how frequently Mr. Darcy’s eyes were fixed on her” (Chapter X, paragraph 46): The narrator lets us see Darcy's attention, while Elizabeth misreads it as disapproval. Theme link: Elizabeth refuses to give Darcy the satisfaction of dancing a reel: "despise me if you dare." Credit any position that is supported by quotation and reasoning; push one-sided answers to address the strongest counterpoint.

5. Connect this chapter to first impressions and prejudice: is the link strong or weak so far? What would Austen need to show next to strengthen it? [DOK 4 · socraticCircle · wait 8 s · AP-LIT.LAN] Look for: A judgment of thematic development across the work.

   Answer guidance: A defensible line of argument: The letter-writing scene shows Elizabeth misreading Darcy's attention because she has already decided he dislikes her. Useful evidence: “I am afraid you do not like your pen” (Chapter X, paragraph 11): Miss Bingley's flattery of Darcy's letter-writing: comic and transparent. Theme link: Elizabeth refuses to give Darcy the satisfaction of dancing a reel: "despise me if you dare." Credit any position that is supported by quotation and reasoning; push one-sided answers to address the strongest counterpoint.

6. Is the characterization in this chapter effective, or does it feel heavy-handed? Evaluate it as a reader would in a review. [DOK 3 · fourCorners · wait 8 s · AP-LIT.CHR, AP-LIT.LAN] Look for: An evaluative judgment with criteria and evidence.

   Answer guidance: A defensible line of argument: The letter-writing scene shows Elizabeth misreading Darcy's attention because she has already decided he dislikes her. Useful evidence: “despise me if you dare” (Chapter X, paragraph 50): Elizabeth's challenge: playful and defiant, the voice Darcy finds irresistible. On characterization: In the letter-writing scene Darcy writes carefully and at length, Bingley carelessly; Miss Bingley flatters Darcy constantly; Elizabeth watches and judges. Credit any position that is supported by quotation and reasoning; push one-sided answers to address the strongest counterpoint.

7. Compare how “Chapter X” treats wit as courtship with how another text, film or event you know treats a similar idea. What does Pride and Prejudice see that the other misses? [DOK 4 · socraticCircle · wait 8 s · AP-LIT.LAN] Look for: A cross-text synthesis.

   Answer guidance: A defensible line of argument: The letter-writing scene shows Elizabeth misreading Darcy's attention because she has already decided he dislikes her. Useful evidence: “Elizabeth could not help observing as she turned over some music books that lay on the instrument, how frequently Mr. Darcy’s eyes were fixed on her” (Chapter X, paragraph 46): The narrator lets us see Darcy's attention, while Elizabeth misreads it as disapproval. Theme link: Elizabeth refuses to give Darcy the satisfaction of dancing a reel: "despise me if you dare." Credit any position that is supported by quotation and reasoning; push one-sided answers to address the strongest counterpoint.

8. Predict what “Chapter XI” will bring, using two clues from this chapter. After reading, evaluate your prediction. [DOK 3 · thinkPairShare · wait 8 s · AP-LIT.LAN, AP-LIT.STR] Look for: A prediction or judgment justified with textual clues.

   Answer guidance: A defensible line of argument: The letter-writing scene shows Elizabeth misreading Darcy's attention because she has already decided he dislikes her. Useful evidence: “I am afraid you do not like your pen” (Chapter X, paragraph 11): Miss Bingley's flattery of Darcy's letter-writing: comic and transparent. On foreshadowing: Miss Bingley teases Darcy about marrying Elizabeth, naming the possibility long before either admits it. Credit any position that is supported by quotation and reasoning; push one-sided answers to address the strongest counterpoint.

9. Design a one-paragraph modern adaptation of this chapter (setting, characters, conflict). What must stay the same for it to still be about wit as courtship? [DOK 4 · thinkPairShare · wait 8 s · AP-LIT.LAN] Look for: A creative transfer that keeps the core idea.

   Answer guidance: A defensible line of argument: The letter-writing scene shows Elizabeth misreading Darcy's attention because she has already decided he dislikes her. Useful evidence: “despise me if you dare” (Chapter X, paragraph 50): Elizabeth's challenge: playful and defiant, the voice Darcy finds irresistible. Theme link: Elizabeth refuses to give Darcy the satisfaction of dancing a reel: "despise me if you dare." Credit any position that is supported by quotation and reasoning; push one-sided answers to address the strongest counterpoint.

10. What question would you most like to ask Jane Austen about this chapter, and what answer do you think the text itself gives? [DOK 4 · studentGenerated · wait 8 s · AP-LIT.LAN] Look for: A student-generated question answered from evidence.

    Answer guidance: A defensible line of argument: The letter-writing scene shows Elizabeth misreading Darcy's attention because she has already decided he dislikes her. Useful evidence: “Elizabeth could not help observing as she turned over some music books that lay on the instrument, how frequently Mr. Darcy’s eyes were fixed on her” (Chapter X, paragraph 46): The narrator lets us see Darcy's attention, while Elizabeth misreads it as disapproval. Theme link: Elizabeth refuses to give Darcy the satisfaction of dancing a reel: "despise me if you dare." Credit any position that is supported by quotation and reasoning; push one-sided answers to address the strongest counterpoint.

Annotation focus

- Characterization: look for what characters say, do and think, and how others react to them (anchor passage in the We do segment)
- Also notice Irony: gaps between what characters expect or say and what is true
- Also notice Theme: statements or moments that connect to the book's big ideas

Chapter quiz: item bank (all eleven rigor versions)

1. [mc · recall · DOK 1] In the line “I dare say you believed it; but I am by no means convinced that you would be gone with such celerity.”, what does “celerity” most nearly mean?

   A. denied having

   B. giving offense to moral sensibilities and injurious to reputation

   C. speed; swiftness

   D. that cannot be entirely consumed or used up

   Key: C (speed; swiftness)

2. [mc · recall · DOK 1] What is Darcy doing while Miss Bingley flatters him?

   A. Painting

   B. Writing a letter

   C. Playing cards

   D. Reading

Key: B (Writing a letter)

3. [fill · recall · DOK 1] Complete the quotation from Chapter X, paragraph 46: “Elizabeth could not help observing as she turned over some music books that lay on the _____, how frequently Mr. Darcy's eyes were fixed on her”

   Key: instrument

4. [mc · recall · DOK 1] In the line “She then ran gaily off, rejoicing as she rambled about, in the hope of being at home again in a day or two.”, what does “rambled” most nearly mean?

   A. winning or drawing in (someone's feelings)

   B. placed in position

   C. walked about with no fixed route

   D. a mark or flaw that spoils the appearance of something (especially on a person's body)

   Key: C (walked about with no fixed route)

5. [mc · recall · DOK 1] What literary device fills their conversations?

   A. Flashback

   B. Witty irony

   C. Allegory

   D. Rhyme

   Key: B (Witty irony)

6. [mc · recall · DOK 1] What trait of Bingley do they debate?

   A. His dancing

   B. His wealth

   C. How easily he is persuaded

   D. His health

   Key: C (How easily he is persuaded)

7. [fill · recall · DOK 1] Complete the quotation from Chapter X, paragraph 11: “I am _____ you do not like your pen”

   Key: afraid

8. [mc · recall · DOK 1] What does Elizabeth refuse?

   A. To marry Collins

   B. To leave Netherfield

   C. To dance a reel with Darcy

   D. To play the piano

   Key: C (To dance a reel with Darcy)

9. [mc · recall · DOK 1] In the line “Will it not be advisable, before we proceed on this subject, to arrange with rather more precision the degree of importance which is to appertain to this request, as well as the degree of intimacy subsisting between the…”, what does “appertain” most nearly mean?

   A. an expert; a skilled person

   B. extremely happy

   C. joyously unrestrained

   D. to belong to or be connected with

Key: D (to belong to or be connected with)

10. [fill · recall · DOK 1] Fill in the blank with the vocabulary word that fits: “Miss Bingley warmly resented the _____ he had received, in an expostulation with her brother for talking such nonsense.” Word bank: indignity, celerity, overthrowing, appertain

    Key: indignity

11. [fill · recall · DOK 1] Fill in the blank with the vocabulary word that fits: “You wanted me, I know, to say ‘Yes,’ that you might have the pleasure of despising my taste; but I always delight in overthrowing those kind of schemes, and cheating a person of their _____ contempt.” Word bank: overthrowing, premeditated, celerity, appertain

    Key: premeditated

12. [mc · inference · DOK 2] Which choice best states a central concern of “Chapter X”?

    A. Wit as courtship
    B. Puzzling visits
    C. Letters of judgment
    D. Jealousy at Pemberley

    Key: A (Wit as courtship)

13. [mc · analysis · DOK 3] Which literary element does this describe in “Chapter X”? The debate about Bingley's ‘precipitance’ (acting on a friend's persuasion) foreshadows Darcy persuading Bingley to leave Jane.

    A. Conflict
    B. Structure
    C. Plot
    D. Dialogue

    Key: D (Dialogue)

14. [mc · analysis · DOK 3] Which literary element does this describe in “Chapter X”? In the letter-writing scene Darcy writes carefully and at length, Bingley carelessly; Miss Bingley flatters Darcy constantly; Elizabeth watches and judges.

    A. Hyperbole
    B. Imagery
    C. Characterization
    D. Symbolism

    Key: C (Characterization)

15. [short · synthesis · DOK 4] Synthesis: trace how pride and prejudice develops from Chapter V to Chapter X. Use one quotation from each.

    Sample answer: Earlier, in Chapter V, paragraph 20, the text reads “Pride relates more to our opinion of ourselves, vanity to what we would have others think of us” — Mary's distinction; useful for the title. In Chapter X, “I am afraid you do not like your pen” (Chapter X, paragraph 11) — Miss Bingley's flattery of Darcy's letter-writing: comic and transparent. Elizabeth refuses to give Darcy the satisfaction of dancing a reel: "despise me if you dare.".

16. [short · synthesis · DOK 4] Close reading: how do the diction and syntax of “despise me if you dare” (Chapter X, paragraph 50) shape its meaning? Consider a second, competing reading.

    Sample answer: Elizabeth's challenge: playful and defiant, the voice Darcy finds irresistible. The evidence is “despise me if you dare” (Chapter X, paragraph 50). This develops pride and prejudice: Elizabeth refuses to give Darcy the satisfaction of dancing a reel: "despise me if you dare.". The words “despise” and “dare” carry that meaning: they are the charged choices in the line, and changing either would soften the effect. She notices "how frequently Mr. Darcy's eyes were fixed on her" but concludes he finds something wrong in her; the reader, who knows his admiration, sees prejudice shaping her interpretation.

17. [fill · recall · DOK 1] Fill in the blank with the vocabulary word that fits: “You are _____ group’d, and appear to uncommon advantage.” Word bank: appertain, overthrowing, charmingly, celerity
    Key: charmingly

18. [fill · recall · DOK 1] Fill in the blank with the vocabulary word that fits: “Miss Bingley moved with _____ to the pianoforte, and after a polite request that Elizabeth would lead the way, which the other as politely and more earnestly negatived, she seated herself.” Word bank: appertain, alacrity, overthrowing, celerity
    Key: alacrity

19. [mc · recall · DOK 1] How does Darcy feel about Elizabeth?

    A. Disgusted
    B. Increasingly attracted
    C. Indifferent
    D. Afraid

    Key: B (Increasingly attracted)

20. [short · inference · DOK 2] What can you infer from this line? “despise me if you dare” (Chapter X, paragraph 50) Answer in two or three sentences with one detail.
    Sample answer: Elizabeth's challenge: playful and defiant, the voice Darcy finds irresistible. The evidence is “despise me if you dare” (Chapter X, paragraph 50). This develops pride and prejudice: Elizabeth refuses to give Darcy the satisfaction of dancing a reel: "despise me if you dare.".

21. [short · inference · DOK 2] What can you infer from this line? “I am afraid you do not like your pen” (Chapter X, paragraph 11) Answer in two or three sentences with one detail.
    Sample answer: Miss Bingley's flattery of Darcy's letter-writing: comic and transparent. The evidence is “I am afraid you do not like your pen” (Chapter X, paragraph 11). This develops pride and prejudice: Elizabeth refuses to give Darcy the satisfaction of dancing a reel: "despise me if you dare.".

22. [mc · recall · DOK 1] Which word completes this sentence from Chapter X, paragraph 28? “Nay,’ cried Bingley, ‘this is too much, to _____ at night all the foolish things that were said in the morning.”

    A. understanding
    B. remember
    C. precipitance
    D. person

    Key: B (remember)

23. [fill · recall · DOK 1] Complete the quotation from Chapter X, paragraph 1: “Mrs. Hurst and Miss Bingley had spent some hours of the morning with the invalid, who _____, though slowly, to mend; and in the evening Elizabeth joined their party in the drawing-room.” Word bank: carelessness, improvement, continued, observing
    Key: continued

24. [fill · recall · DOK 1] Complete the quotation from Chapter X, paragraph 32: “Would Mr. Darcy then consider the rashness of your original _____ as atoned for by your obstinacy in adhering to it?” Word bank: observing, charming, intention, requester
    Key: intention

25. [short · inference · DOK 2] What does this passage from Chapter X, paragraph 1 reveal about the character or situation? “Mr. Darcy was writing, and Miss Bingley, seated near him, was watching the progress of his letter, and repeatedly calling off his attention by messages to his sister.” Answer in two or three sentences with one detail.

    Sample answer: The passage (Chapter X, paragraph 1) shows the situation turning on first impressions and prejudice: Elizabeth refuses to give Darcy the satisfaction of dancing a reel: "despise me if you dare.". The words “repeatedly” and “attention” are the proof, because they show how the moment looks to the people in it. They suggest more than the narrator states outright.

26. [short · inference · DOK 2] What does this passage from Chapter X, paragraph 33 reveal about the character or situation? “Upon my word I cannot exactly explain the matter, Darcy must speak for himself.” Answer in two or three sentences with one detail.

    Sample answer: The passage (Chapter X, paragraph 33) shows the situation turning on first impressions and prejudice: Elizabeth refuses to give Darcy the satisfaction of dancing a reel: "despise me if you dare.". The words “explain” and “exactly” are the proof, because they show how the moment looks to the people in it. They suggest more than the narrator states outright.

27. [short · analysis · DOK 3] Analyze how the word choice in this passage from Chapter X, paragraph 8 shapes its tone: “It is fortunate, then, that they fall to my lot instead of to yours.” Pick two words and explain their effect.

    Sample answer: The words “fortunate” and “instead” (Chapter X, paragraph 8) make the tone heavy and deliberate rather than neutral. That weight points the reader to class and social mobility: Elizabeth refuses to give Darcy the satisfaction of dancing a reel: "despise me if you dare.". The author chooses them so the moment feels significant instead of passing.

28. [short · analysis · DOK 3] Analyze how the word choice in this passage from Chapter X, paragraph 20 shapes its tone: “That will not do for a compliment to Darcy, Caroline,’ cried her brother—‘because he does not write with ease.” Pick two words and explain their effect.

    Sample answer: The words “compliment” and “brother” (Chapter X, paragraph 20) make the tone heavy and deliberate rather than neutral. That weight points the reader to pride and self-knowledge: Elizabeth refuses to give Darcy the satisfaction of dancing a reel: "despise me if you dare.". The author chooses them so the moment feels significant instead of passing.

29. [short · synthesis · DOK 4] Evaluate this claim about the chapter: “The letter-writing scene shows Elizabeth misreading Darcy's attention because she has already decided he dislikes her.” Is it fully persuasive? Argue with evidence, including a passage that complicates it.

    Sample answer: The claim is persuasive in part. “Elizabeth could not help observing as she turned over some music books that lay on the instrument, how frequently Mr. Darcy’s eyes were fixed on her” (Chapter X, paragraph 46) supports it: She notices "how frequently Mr. Darcy's eyes were fixed on her" but concludes he finds something wrong in her; the reader, who knows his admiration, sees prejudice shaping her interpretation. But “I am afraid you do not like your pen” (Chapter X, paragraph 11) complicates it: Miss Bingley's flattery of Darcy's letter-writing: comic and transparent, and its “not” marks a limit or reversal the claim passes over. So the claim stands only in a qualified form: true of the chapter's main pattern, but not of every moment in it.

30. [short · synthesis · DOK 4] Connect this passage from Chapter X, paragraph 57 to the story's treatment of marriage and money: “Do let the portraits of your uncle and aunt Philips be placed in the gallery at Pemberley.” Use one other moment from the story as well.

    Sample answer: This passage (Chapter X, paragraph 57) develops marriage and money: Elizabeth refuses to give Darcy the satisfaction of dancing a reel: "despise me if you dare.". Its words “portraits” and “gallery” carry that idea into this moment.

The same concern returns in “At that moment they were met from another walk, by Mrs. Hurst and Elizabeth herself.” (Chapter X, paragraph 59), so the two passages read as a pattern, not a single moment. Together they show the story treating marriage and money as central.

31. [short · analysis · DOK 3 · AP: AP-LIT.FIG] Analyze how the word choice in this passage from Chapter X, paragraph 37 shapes its tone: “But in general and ordinary cases between friend and friend, where one of them is desired by the other to change a resolution of no very great moment, should you think ill of that person for complying with the desire, without waiting to be…” Pick two words and explain their effect.
Sample answer: The words “resolution” and “complying” (Chapter X, paragraph 37) make the tone heavy and deliberate rather than neutral. That weight points the reader to class and social mobility: Elizabeth refuses to give Darcy the satisfaction of dancing a reel: "despise me if you dare.". The author chooses them so the moment feels significant instead of passing.

32. [short · synthesis · DOK 4 · AP: AP-LIT.LAN] Connect this passage from Chapter X, paragraph 30 to the story's treatment of marriage and money: “You have only proved by this,’ cried Elizabeth, ‘that Mr. Bingley did not do justice to his own disposition.” Use one other moment from the story as well.
Sample answer: This passage (Chapter X, paragraph 30) develops marriage and money: Elizabeth refuses to give Darcy the satisfaction of dancing a reel: "despise me if you dare.". Its words “disposition” and “justice” carry that idea into this moment. The same concern returns in “But I am afraid you are giving it a turn which that gentleman did by no means intend; for he would certainly think the…” (Chapter X, paragraph 31), so the two passages read as a pattern, not a single moment. Together they show the story treating marriage and money as central.

33. [short · analysis · DOK 3 · AP: AP-LIT.FIG] Analyze how the word choice in this passage from Chapter X, paragraph 42 shapes its tone: “If you and Miss Bennet will defer yours till I am out of the room, I shall be very thankful; and then you may say whatever you like of me.” Pick two words and explain their effect.
Sample answer: The words “thankful” and “whatever” (Chapter X, paragraph 42) make the tone heavy and deliberate rather than neutral. That weight points the reader to pride and self-knowledge: Elizabeth refuses to give Darcy the satisfaction of dancing a reel: "despise me if you dare.". The author chooses them so the moment feels significant instead of passing.

34. [short · synthesis · DOK 4 · AP: AP-LIT.LAN] Connect this passage from Chapter X, paragraph 52 to the story's treatment of women's limited choices: “He really believed, that were it not for the inferiority of her connections, he should be in some danger.” Use one other moment from the story as well.
Sample answer: This passage (Chapter X, paragraph 52) develops women's limited choices: Elizabeth refuses to give Darcy the satisfaction of dancing a reel: "despise me if you dare.". Its words “connections” and “inferiority” carry that idea into this moment. The same concern returns in “She often tried to provoke Darcy into disliking her guest, by talking of their supposed marriage, and planning his…” (Chapter X, paragraph 54), so the two passages read as a pattern, not a single moment. Together they show the story treating women's limited choices as central.

35. [mc · recall · DOK 1 · AP: AP-LIT.FIG] Which word completes this sentence from Chapter X, paragraph 15? “Tell your sister I am delighted to hear of her _____ on the harp, and pray let her know that I am quite in raptures with her beautiful little design for a table, and I think it infinitely superior to Miss Grantley’s.”

    A. precipitance
    B. requester
    C. improvement
    D. intention

    Key: C (improvement)

36. [mc · inference · DOK 2 · AP: AP-LIT.LAN] What does this passage most clearly show? “I am afraid you do not like your pen” (Chapter X, paragraph 11)

    A. Miss Bingley's flattery of Darcy's letter-writing: comic and transparent.

    B. Lady Catherine on Elizabeth.

    C. The narrator shares Mr. Bennet's pleasure in absurdity.

    D. Collins's refusal of novels, written in a novel; Austen's joke at his expense.

    Key: A (Miss Bingley's flattery of Darcy's letter-writing: comic and transparent.)

37. [mc · inference · DOK 2 · AP: AP-LIT.LAN] What does this passage most clearly show? “Elizabeth could not help observing as she turned over some music books that lay on the instrument, how frequently Mr. Darcy’s eyes were fixed on her” (Chapter X, paragraph 46)

    A. Wickham's interest shifts to an heiress, Miss King.

    B. Collins's letter: hypocrisy dressed as piety.

    C. The narrator lets us see Darcy's attention, while Elizabeth misreads it as disapproval.

    D. He predicts his remorse will fade, and it does.

    Key: C (The narrator lets us see Darcy's attention, while Elizabeth misreads it as disapproval.)

38. [mc · inference · DOK 2 · AP: AP-LIT.LAN] What does this passage most clearly show? “despise me if you dare” (Chapter X, paragraph 50)

    A. Jane's letter: the fear that Wickham will not marry Lydia, which would ruin her.

    B. Collins's refusal of novels, written in a novel; Austen's joke at his expense.

    C. Elizabeth's challenge: playful and defiant, the voice Darcy finds irresistible.

    D. Bingley's polite understatement about Jane; his good nature survives the embarrassment.

    Key: C (Elizabeth's challenge: playful and defiant, the voice Darcy finds irresistible.)

39. [short · synthesis · DOK 4 · AP: AP-LIT.LAN] Connect this passage from Chapter X, paragraph 27 to the story's treatment of women's limited choices: “The power of doing anything with quickness is always much prized by the possessor, and often without any attention to the imperfection of the performance.” Use one other moment from the story as well.

    Sample answer: This passage (Chapter X, paragraph 27) develops women's limited choices: Elizabeth refuses to give Darcy the satisfaction of dancing a reel: "despise me if you dare.". Its words “imperfection” and “performance” carry that idea into this moment. The same concern returns in “When you told Mrs. Bennet this morning that if you ever resolved on quitting Netherfield you should be gone in five…” (Chapter X, paragraph 27), so the two passages read as a pattern, not a single moment. Together they show the story treating women's limited choices as central.

40. [mc · recall · DOK 1 · Dual Credit (Indiana College Core): ICC-WC-1.5] Which word completes this sentence from Chapter X, paragraph 37? “A regard for the _____ would often make one readily yield to a request, without waiting for arguments to reason one into it.”

    A. improvement

    B. requester

    C. acknowledged

    D. understanding

    Key: B (requester)

41. [short · analysis · DOK 3 · Program outcome: LeL-C2-LIT-1] Claim: The letter-writing scene shows Elizabeth misreading Darcy's attention because she has already decided he dislikes her. Explain how this evidence supports the claim: “Elizabeth could not help observing as she turned over some music books that lay on the instrument, how frequently Mr. Darcy’s eyes were fixed on her” (Chapter X, paragraph 46).

Sample answer: She notices "how frequently Mr. Darcy's eyes were fixed on her" but concludes he finds something wrong in her; the reader, who knows his admiration, sees prejudice shaping her interpretation. The evidence is “Elizabeth could not help observing as she turned over some music books that lay on the instrument, how frequently Mr. Darcy’s eyes were…” (Chapter X, paragraph 46), which shows the narrator lets us see Darcy's attention, while Elizabeth misreads it as disapproval. This develops pride and prejudice: Elizabeth refuses to give Darcy the satisfaction of dancing a reel: "despise me if you dare.".

42. [fill · recall · DOK 1 · Program outcome: LeL-C3-LIT-1] Complete the quotation from Chapter X, paragraph 22: “Oh!’ cried Miss Bingley, ‘Charles writes in the most careless way _____.” Word bank: intention, imaginable, himself, carelessness

    Key: imaginable

43. [short · synthesis · DOK 4 · Program outcome: LeL-C3-LIT-1] Close reading: how do the diction and syntax of “I am afraid you do not like your pen” (Chapter X, paragraph 11) shape its meaning? Consider a second, competing reading.

    Sample answer: Miss Bingley's flattery of Darcy's letter-writing: comic and transparent. The evidence is “I am afraid you do not like your pen” (Chapter X, paragraph 11). This develops pride and prejudice: Elizabeth refuses to give Darcy the satisfaction of dancing a reel: "despise me if you dare.". The words “afraid” and “your” carry that meaning: they are the charged choices in the line, and changing either would soften the effect. She notices "how frequently Mr. Darcy's eyes were fixed on her" but concludes he finds something wrong in her; the reader, who knows his admiration, sees prejudice shaping her interpretation.

44. [short · analysis · DOK 3 · Program outcome: LeL-C4-LIT-1] Analyze the word choice in “Elizabeth could not help observing as she turned over some music books that lay on the instrument, how frequently Mr. Darcy’s eyes were fixed on her” (Chapter X, paragraph 46). Pick two words and explain what they suggest.

    Sample answer: The narrator lets us see Darcy's attention, while Elizabeth misreads it as disapproval. The evidence is “Elizabeth could not help observing as she turned over some music books that lay on the instrument, how frequently Mr. Darcy’s eyes were…” (Chapter X, paragraph 46). This develops pride and prejudice: Elizabeth refuses to give Darcy the satisfaction of dancing a reel: "despise me if you dare.". The words “instrument” and “frequently” carry that meaning: they are the charged choices in the line, and changing either would soften the effect.

Rigor version	Items (in order)	Mix
Scaffolded support	1, 2, 3, 4, 5, 6, 7, 8, 9, 10, 11, 12, 13, 14, 15, 16	recall 11, inference 1, analysis 2, synthesis 2
HS Freshman	11, 7, 17, 18, 5, 6, 3, 4, 8, 19, 12, 20, 21, 14, 13, 15	recall 10, inference 3, analysis 2, synthesis 1
HS Sophomore	11, 2, 8, 17, 22, 23, 24, 25, 26, 21, 12, 13, 27, 28, 29, 30	recall 7, inference 4, analysis 3, synthesis 2
HS Junior	10, 17, 1, 5, 3, 4, 26, 20, 12, 25, 28, 31, 27, 14, 32, 30	recall 6, inference 4, analysis 4, synthesis 2
HS Senior	9, 8, 18, 7, 19, 25, 26, 12, 20, 28, 13, 33, 27, 34, 32, 15	recall 5, inference 4, analysis 4, synthesis 3
AP	10, 7, 35, 36, 26, 37, 38, 33, 28, 13, 14, 27, 30, 39, 34, 29	recall 3, inference 4, analysis 5, synthesis 4

College Freshman	7, 24, 40, 38, 26, 12, 25, 14, 28, 31, 33, 13, 15, 34, 30, 39	recall 3, inference 4, analysis 5, synthesis 4
College Sophomore	5, 23, 11, 2, 12, 20, 14, 27, 33, 41, 28, 30, 39, 34, 15, 32	recall 4, inference 2, analysis 5, synthesis 5
College Junior	42, 18, 2, 6, 12, 41, 28, 13, 31, 33, 34, 43, 16, 30, 39, 15	recall 4, inference 1, analysis 5, synthesis 6
College Senior	10, 17, 36, 12, 14, 31, 33, 44, 13, 27, 30, 39, 15, 34, 29, 32	recall 2, inference 2, analysis 6, synthesis 6
Graduate / PhD	10, 17, 37, 12, 20, 13, 14, 27, 33, 31, 29, 30, 39, 32, 34, 15	recall 2, inference 3, analysis 5, synthesis 6

Writing prompts (eleven rigor levels)

Scaffolded support (250 words; AP: see unit standards): Supported track (work from the passage your teacher selects). In “Chapter X,” how does Austen show wit as courtship? Write a paragraph that states your claim, quotes two details from the passage, and explains how each detail supports your idea. Use the characterization you noticed as one piece of evidence.

HS Freshman (350 words; AP: see unit standards): In Chapter X, how does Austen develop the idea of wit as courtship? State a clear claim, support it with two or three quotations, and explain how the characterization in the chapter helps build that idea.

HS Sophomore (450 words; AP: see unit standards): Analyze how Chapter X develops the idea of wit as courtship. Make a precise claim, support it with at least three pieces of textual evidence, and explain how the author's use of characterization and irony shapes that idea. Address one possible counterclaim.

HS Junior (550 words; AP: see unit standards): Analyze how the structure of Chapter X (where it begins, turns and ends) and its characterization shape the reader's understanding of wit as courtship. Identify one place where the text leaves matters uncertain and explain how that uncertainty adds to its meaning.

HS Senior (600 words; AP: see unit standards): Two readers disagree about what Chapter X suggests about wit as courtship. Lay out two plausible interpretations, weigh the evidence for each (including the chapter's characterization and irony), and argue for the stronger one in a sustained, well-organized essay.

AP (650 words; AP: AP-LIT.CHR, AP-LIT.LAN): Write a literary argument in which you analyze how Jane Austen uses characterization in Chapter X to complicate the reader's understanding of wit as courtship. Develop a defensible thesis, select evidence purposefully, and explain how specific choices of diction and syntax create meaning.

College Freshman (1000 words; AP: see unit standards): Situate Chapter X within its historical and literary context and argue how the chapter's treatment of wit as courtship responds to that context. Engage with at least one secondary perspective (a critic, historian or the author's own statements), integrate quotations smoothly, and cite in MLA style.

College Sophomore (1250 words; AP: see unit standards): Read Chapter X alongside the conventions of its genre and period. Argue how the chapter's handling of wit as courtship follows or bends those conventions, using the characterization as evidence, and test your reading against one published critic. Document two secondary sources in MLA.

College Junior (1500 words; AP: see unit standards): Apply a named critical approach (for example formalist, historicist, feminist, psychoanalytic or ecocritical) to Chapter X and its treatment of wit as courtship. State your method, show what it reveals in the chapter's characterization and irony, and identify where the text resists it.

College Senior (2000 words; AP: see unit standards): Develop a research argument that reads Chapter X as evidence for a larger claim about wit as courtship in Pride and Prejudice. Connect close reading of the chapter to the whole novel, engage at least four scholarly sources, and state precisely where your reading departs from theirs (Chicago style).

Graduate / PhD (2500 words; AP: see unit standards): Develop an original argument that reads Chapter X as a hinge in the novel's larger treatment of wit as courtship. Position your reading within a named critical conversation (for example formalist, historicist, psychoanalytic, feminist or postcolonial approaches), account for the textual history where relevant, and articulate the stakes of your intervention for scholarship on Pride and Prejudice.

SAT-style questions

1. "I dare say you believed it; but I am by no means convinced that you would be gone with such celerity.

   As used in the text, what does the word "celerity" most nearly mean?

   A. speed; swiftness

   B. liveliness and eagerness

   C. a courteous expression (by word or deed) of esteem or regard

   D. felt angry about

2. "I dare say you believed it; but I am by no means convinced that you would be gone with such celerity. Your conduct would be quite as dependant on chance as that of any man I know; and if, as you were mounting your horse, a friend were to say, 'Bingley, you had better stay till next week,' you would probably do it, you would probably not go—and, at another word, might stay a month."

   Which choice best states a central concern of "Chapter X"?

   A. Wit as courtship

   B. Darcy at Rosings

   C. The great confrontation

   D. Disappointment and philosophy

SAT key: 1. A (speed; swiftness); 2. A (Wit as courtship)

Lesson 12: Chapter XI

Focus: character flaws examined

Objective: Students will analyze how characterization develops in “Chapter XI” by writing a claim-evidence-reasoning paragraph that cites at least 2 quotations from the section, and will score at least 80% on the section quiz.

Standards: AP: see the unit standards

Teacher only · spoilers

Elizabeth and Darcy discuss faults: he admits to a resentful temper—'my good opinion once lost is lost forever'—while she teases that his flaw is to hate everybody.

Background: Self-examination was a common moral exercise in conduct literature.

Significance: Darcy names his pride directly; the novel will test whether either can change.

Lesson plan and lecture script (90 minutes)

0–8 min · Bell-ringer · You do (8 min)
Students write to the bell-ringer, then pair-share.
Darcy says his good opinion once lost is lost forever. Is this pride or integrity? Write for five minutes. Starters: I think... because... / This connects to pride and prejudice because....
Prompt: Darcy says his good opinion once lost is lost forever. Is this pride or integrity?
Sentence starters: I think… because… · This connects to pride and prejudice because…
Strong response: A strong response takes a position and anticipates this: both characters own the faults of the title: he resentment and pride, she a will to misunderstand.

8–18 min · Vocabulary with etymology notes · I do (10 min)
Five key words in context, with verified word histories.
Today's words: disappointing — failing to give someone what they hope for; persevered — kept on despite difficulty; bracelets — bands or chains worn around the wrist; studious — busy reading; absorbed in study; chooses — pick out, select, or choose from a number of alternatives. “studious”: Origin: Latin studiōsus.
Words: disappointing: failing to give someone what they hope for · persevered: kept on despite difficulty · bracelets: bands or chains worn around the wrist · studious: busy reading; absorbed in study · chooses: pick out, select, or choose from a number of alternatives

18–28 min · Background and context · I do (10 min)
Mini-lecture (read or adapt the script).
Self-examination was a common moral exercise in conduct literature. Darcy names his pride directly; the novel will test whether either can change. Characterization: Elizabeth and Darcy discuss faults directly. Darcy admits his temper is "resentful"; Elizabeth's teasing hides real criticism. Dialogue: Their exchange is structured like a duel, each line answering the last. Watch for silence and reserve: What characters leave unsaid (Darcy's reserve, Jane's composure, Elizabeth's secrets) drives misunderstanding. In this chapter: "assured him that no one intended to play, and the silence of the whole party on the subject seemed to justify her" (Chapter XI, paragraph 3).

28–40 min · I do: modeled close reading · I do (12 min)
Model the close reading of the anchor quotation using the written think-aloud below.
First, meaning. I read "My good opinion once lost is lost forever" slowly and put it in my own words: Darcy admits that once he loses good opinion of someone, it is lost forever. Next, craft. I notice the repetition of "lost," which shows his stubbornness. The strongest word is "forever": it shows he does not forgive. Then, effect. What does Darcy confess about his temper? My answer: Darcy confesses that his temper is resentful and that his good opinion once lost is lost forever; this unforgiving pride is the flaw he must overcome later.

> My good opinion once lost is lost forever (Chapter XI, paragraph 28)

Think-aloud: First, meaning. I read "My good opinion once lost is lost forever" slowly and put it in my own words: Darcy admits that once he loses good opinion of someone, it is lost forever. Next, craft. I notice the repetition of "lost," which shows his stubbornness. The strongest word is "forever": it shows he does not forgive. Then, effect. What does Darcy confess about his temper? My answer: Darcy confesses that his temper is resentful and that his good opinion once lost is lost forever; this unforgiving pride is the flaw he must overcome later.

40–55 min · We do: guided annotation · We do (15 min)
Guided analysis of a second quotation; expected answers given.
Ask: What words in this line stand out, and what do they suggest? Expected: "Wilfully" means on purpose: Darcy accuses Elizabeth of choosing to misread people. It is accurate, which links to prejudice. Ask: How does this line connect to pride and prejudice? Expected: Both characters own the faults of the title: he resentment and pride, she a will to misunderstand. (Darcy's reply; it is the more accurate judgment.)

> is wilfully to misunderstand them (Chapter XI, paragraph 32)

Ask: What words in this line stand out, and what do they suggest?
Expected answer: "Wilfully" means on purpose: Darcy accuses Elizabeth of choosing to misread people. It is accurate, which links to prejudice.
Ask: How does this line connect to pride and prejudice?
Expected answer: Both characters own the faults of the title: he resentment and pride, she a will to misunderstand. (Darcy's reply; it is the more accurate judgment.)

55–70 min · You do: independent annotation · You do (15 min)

Independent annotation and a claim-evidence-reasoning paragraph (exemplar given).

Annotate the chapter for characterization, dialogue (three marks with a margin note each), then write one claim-evidence-reasoning paragraph: what does this chapter suggest about character flaws examined? Then start your writing prompt at your assigned level (HS Sophomore: Analyze how Chapter XI develops the idea of character flaws examined. Make a precise claim, support it with at least three pieces of textual evidence, and explain how the author's use of characterization and theme shapes that idea. Address one possible counterclaim.) Exemplar: The exchange shows that pride and prejudice belong to both Elizabeth and Darcy. When the text says "And your defect is a propensity to hate everybody" (Chapter XI, paragraph 31), it shows this directly. Elizabeth accuses him of "a propensity to hate everybody," and he answers that hers is "wilfully to misunderstand them," so the novel gives each a fault the other can see.

Task: Annotate the chapter for characterization, dialogue (three marks with a margin note each), then write one claim-evidence-reasoning paragraph: what does this chapter suggest about character flaws examined? Then start your writing prompt at your assigned level (HS Sophomore: Analyze how Chapter XI develops the idea of character flaws examined. Make a precise claim, support it with at least three pieces of textual evidence, and explain how the author's use of characterization and theme shapes that idea. Address one possible counterclaim.)

Exemplar: The exchange shows that pride and prejudice belong to both Elizabeth and Darcy. When the text says "And your defect is a propensity to hate everybody" (Chapter XI, paragraph 31), it shows this directly. Elizabeth accuses him of "a propensity to hate everybody," and he answers that hers is "wilfully to misunderstand them," so the novel gives each a fault the other can see.

70–80 min · Discussion · We do (10 min)

Structured discussion from the 30 tiered questions, with facilitation notes.

Anchor question: Darcy says his good opinion once lost is lost forever. Is this pride or integrity? Ask which accusation is more accurate. Most students say Darcy's; ask for proof from Chapters III-X.

Anchor question: Darcy says his good opinion once lost is lost forever. Is this pride or integrity?

Facilitation: Ask which accusation is more accurate. Most students say Darcy's; ask for proof from Chapters III-X.

80–87 min · Exit ticket / chapter quiz · You do (7 min)

Chapter quiz in the app and an exit ticket (answer given).

Chapter quiz in the app, then: In one sentence, what does this chapter suggest about character flaws examined? Support it with one short quotation. Model answer: The exchange shows that pride and prejudice belong to both Elizabeth and Darcy. ("And your defect is a propensity to hate everybody", Chapter XI, paragraph 31). Accept any defensible claim backed by a quotation from the chapter; the answer key for the quiz is in the Quiz section.

Exit ticket: In one sentence, what does this chapter suggest about character flaws examined? Support it with one short quotation.

Answer: Model answer: The exchange shows that pride and prejudice belong to both Elizabeth and Darcy. ("And your defect is a propensity to hate everybody", Chapter XI, paragraph 31). Accept any defensible claim backed by a quotation from the chapter; the answer key for the quiz is in the Quiz section.

> 87–90 min · Closure · I do (3 min)
> Summarize the lesson and preview the next reading.
> Today we saw how characterization shapes character flaws examined. Key takeaway: both characters own the faults of the title: he resentment and pride, she a will to misunderstand.

Total: 90 minutes.

Teacher analysis (spoilers)

Literary elements

- Characterization: Elizabeth and Darcy discuss faults directly. Darcy admits his temper is "resentful"; Elizabeth's teasing hides real criticism.
- Dialogue: Their exchange is structured like a duel, each line answering the last.

Themes and how they develop

- pride and prejudice: both characters own the faults of the title: he resentment and pride, she a will to misunderstand.

Symbols and motifs

- silence and reserve: What characters leave unsaid (Darcy's reserve, Jane's composure, Elizabeth's secrets) drives misunderstanding. In this chapter: “assured him that no one intended to play, and the silence of the whole party on the subject seemed to justify her” (Chapter XI, paragraph 3).
- pride: Pride is discussed openly and shown in action; who is proud, and whether pride is a fault, keeps shifting. In this chapter: “Such as vanity and pride” (Chapter XI, paragraph 23).

Key quotations (checked against the reading text)

- “My good opinion once lost is lost forever” (Chapter XI, paragraph 28) Darcy's self-description; it will be tested when he forgives Elizabeth's refusal.
- “And your defect is a propensity to hate everybody” (Chapter XI, paragraph 31) Elizabeth's sharp verdict.
- “is wilfully to misunderstand them” (Chapter XI, paragraph 32) Darcy's reply; it is the more accurate judgment.

Model claim-evidence-reasoning

Claim: The exchange shows that pride and prejudice belong to both Elizabeth and Darcy.
Evidence: “And your defect is a propensity to hate everybody” (Chapter XI, paragraph 31)
Reasoning: Elizabeth accuses him of "a propensity to hate everybody," and he answers that hers is "wilfully to misunderstand them," so the novel gives each a fault the other can see.

Vocabulary with etymology notes

Word	Definition (in this sentence)	In context	Word history

disappointing (verb)	failing to give someone what they hope for	"Not at all," was her answer; "but depend upon it, he means to be severe on us, and our surest way of disappointing him, will be to ask nothing about it."
persevered (verb)	kept on despite difficulty	Darcy in anything, and persevered therefore in requiring an explanation of his two motives.
bracelets (noun)	bands or chains worn around the wrist	Hurst, principally occupied in playing with her bracelets and rings, joined now and then in her brother's conversation with Miss Bennet.
studious (adjective)	busy reading; absorbed in study	Her figure was elegant, and she walked well;—but Darcy, at whom it was all aimed, was still inflexibly studious.	"studious": Origin: Latin studiōsus. (Liber et Libri origin note, https://en.wiktionary.org/wiki/studious#Etymology) chooses (verb)	pick out, select, or choose from a number of alternatives	"If you mean Darcy," cried her brother, "he may go to bed, if he chooses, before it begins—but as for the ball, it is quite a settled thing; and as soon as Nicholls has made white soup enough I shall send round my cards."
calmness (noun)	steadiness of mind under stress	Tease calmness of temper and presence of mind!
fireplace (noun)	an open recess in a wall at the base of a chimney where a fire can be built	The first half hour was spent in piling up the fire, lest she should suffer from the change of room; and she removed at his desire to the other side of the fireplace, that she might be farther from the door.
disguise (noun)	an outward semblance that misrepresents the true nature of something	He owns it himself without disguise."	"disguise": Origin: Old French desguiser. (Liber et Libri origin note, https://en.wiktionary.org/wiki/disguise#Etymology) motives (noun)	reasons for doing something	He was directly invited to join their party, but he declined it, observing that he could imagine but two motives for their choosing to walk up and down the room together, with either of which motives his joining them would interfere.

Discussion questions

1. Darcy says his good opinion once lost is lost forever. Is this pride or integrity?
2. Where does characterization appear in this chapter, and what effect does it have? Point to one passage.

3. How does this chapter connect to the book's larger concern with first impressions and prejudice?

Classroom discussion questions (30, tiered)

Wait time after every question (3 s for DOK 1, 5 s for DOK 2, 8 to 10 s for DOK 3 and 4); think-pair-share on DOK 3 and 4; answer each response with a follow-up probe; close with student-generated questions. Focus sets by rigor level: Scaffolded support: 1, 2, 3, 4, 5, 6, 11, 12, 13, 14, 21, 22; HS Freshman: 1, 2, 3, 4, 5, 12, 13, 14, 15, 22, 23, 24; HS Sophomore: 1, 2, 3, 4, 13, 14, 15, 16, 17, 23, 24, 25; HS Junior: 1, 2, 3, 14, 15, 16, 17, 18, 24, 25, 26, 27; HS Senior: 1, 2, 3, 15, 16, 17, 18, 25, 26, 27, 28, 29; AP: 1, 2, 16, 17, 18, 19, 20, 26, 27, 28, 29, 30; College Freshman: 1, 2, 17, 18, 19, 20, 21, 22, 27, 28, 29, 30; College Sophomore: 1, 2, 11, 18, 19, 20, 21, 22, 23, 28, 29, 30; College Junior: 1, 11, 12, 19, 20, 21, 22, 23, 24, 25, 29, 30; College Senior: 1, 11, 12, 13, 20, 21, 22, 23, 24, 25, 26, 30; Graduate / PhD: 1, 11, 12, 13, 21, 22, 23, 24, 25, 26, 27, 28

Literal / recall

1. What fault does Darcy admit? [DOK 1 · coldCallWithSupport · wait 3 s · AP: unit standards] Look for: A resentful temper
2. What does Elizabeth say is Darcy's defect? [DOK 1 · turnAndTalk · wait 3 s · AP: unit standards] Look for: A tendency to hate everybody
3. Who invites Elizabeth to walk around the room? [DOK 1 · coldCallWithSupport · wait 3 s · AP: unit standards] Look for: Miss Bingley
4. What does Elizabeth refuse to laugh at? [DOK 1 · turnAndTalk · wait 3 s · AP: unit standards] Look for: Wisdom and goodness
5. Which theme does this conversation develop? [DOK 1 · coldCallWithSupport · wait 3 s · AP: unit standards] Look for: Pride and self-knowledge
6. Retell the three most important events of “Chapter XI” in order, in one sentence each. [DOK 1 · turnAndTalk · wait 3 s · AP: unit standards] Look for: Elizabeth and Darcy discuss faults: he admits to a resentful temper—'my good opinion once lost is lost forever'—while she teases that his flaw is to hate everybody.
7. Which characters appear or are mentioned in “Chapter XI”? Name two and one thing each says or does. [DOK 1 · coldCallWithSupport · wait 3 s · AP: unit standards] Look for: Names and actions taken from the chapter; check against the teacher summary.
8. Where and when does “Chapter XI” take place? Point to the line that tells you. [DOK 1 · turnAndTalk · wait 3 s · AP: unit standards] Look for: A place/time detail quoted from the chapter.
9. Reread: ““Not at all,” was her answer; “but depend upon it, he means to be severe on us, and our surest way of disappointing him, will be to ask nothing about it.”” What does “disappointing” mean here, and what is literally happening in this line? [DOK 1 · turnAndTalk · wait 3 s · AP: unit standards] Look for: disappointing: failing to give someone what they hope for.
10. Reread: “Darcy in anything, and persevered therefore in requiring an explanation of his two motives.” What does “persevered” mean here, and what is literally happening in this line? [DOK 1 · turnAndTalk · wait 3 s · AP: unit standards] Look for: persevered: kept on despite difficulty.

Inferential / analytical

1. What does “Chapter XI” suggest about character flaws examined? State the inference and the line that supports it. [DOK 2 · thinkPairShare · wait 5 s · AP-LIT.LAN] Look for: Darcy names his pride directly; the novel will test whether either can change.

2. Find one example of characterization in this chapter. What does it reveal that a plain statement would not? [DOK 2 · followUp · wait 5 s · AP-LIT.CHR] Look for: Look for what characters say, do and think, and how others react to them.
3. How does the theme in this chapter shape what we understand about character flaws examined? [DOK 3 · thinkPairShare · wait 8 s · AP-LIT.LAN] Look for: Look for statements or moments that connect to the book's big ideas.
   Answer guidance: A defensible line of argument: The exchange shows that pride and prejudice belong to both Elizabeth and Darcy. Useful evidence: “My good opinion once lost is lost forever” (Chapter XI, paragraph 28): Darcy's self-description; it will be tested when he forgives Elizabeth's refusal. Theme link: both characters own the faults of the title: he resentment and pride, she a will to misunderstand. Credit any position that is supported by quotation and reasoning; push one-sided answers to address the strongest counterpoint.
4. In the passage that begins “But when the gentlemen entered, Jane was no longer the first object.”, why might Austen have chosen these particular words? Pick two and explain their connotations. [DOK 2 · followUp · wait 5 s · AP-LIT.FIG] Look for: Diction analysis of two words in the anchor passage.
5. What causes the main turn in “Chapter XI”, and what effect is it likely to have on what follows? [DOK 2 · followUp · wait 5 s · AP-LIT.STR] Look for: Elizabeth and Darcy discuss faults: he admits to a resentful temper—'my good opinion once lost is lost forever'—while she teases that his flaw is to hate everybody.
6. How does “Chapter XI” build on “Chapter X”? Name one link of cause and effect. [DOK 3 · thinkPairShare · wait 8 s · AP-LIT.STR] Look for: A causal or structural link between this and the previous chapter.
   Answer guidance: A defensible line of argument: The exchange shows that pride and prejudice belong to both Elizabeth and Darcy. Useful evidence: “And your defect is a propensity to hate everybody” (Chapter XI, paragraph 31): Elizabeth's sharp verdict. Theme link: both characters own the faults of the title: he resentment and pride, she a will to misunderstand. Credit any position that is supported by quotation and reasoning; push one-sided answers to address the strongest counterpoint.
7. What can we infer about a character's motives from what they say and do here, as opposed to what they claim? [DOK 3 · followUp · wait 8 s · AP-LIT.CHR] Look for: An inference about motive supported by a quoted line.
   Answer guidance: A defensible line of argument: The exchange shows that pride and prejudice belong to both Elizabeth and Darcy. Useful evidence: “is wilfully to misunderstand them” (Chapter XI, paragraph 32): Darcy's reply; it is the more accurate judgment. On characterization: Elizabeth and Darcy discuss faults directly. Darcy admits his temper is "resentful"; Elizabeth's teasing hides real criticism. Credit any position that is supported by quotation and reasoning; push one-sided answers to address the strongest counterpoint.
8. The bell-ringer asked: “Darcy says his good opinion once lost is lost forever. Is this pride or integrity?” Now that we have read closely, how would you revise your first answer, and which line changed your mind? [DOK 2 · thinkPairShare · wait 5 s · AP-LIT.LAN] Look for: A revised answer anchored in the text.
9. Where does irony appear, and how does it connect this chapter to the larger concern with first impressions and prejudice? [DOK 3 · followUp · wait 8 s · AP-LIT.NAR] Look for: Look for gaps between what characters expect or say and what is true.
   Answer guidance: A defensible line of argument: The exchange shows that pride and prejudice belong to both Elizabeth and Darcy. Useful evidence: “My good opinion once lost is lost forever” (Chapter XI, paragraph 28): Darcy's self-description; it will be tested when he forgives Elizabeth's refusal. Theme link: both characters own the faults of the title: he resentment and pride, she a will to misunderstand. Credit any position that is supported by quotation and reasoning; push one-sided answers to address the strongest counterpoint.

10. Background: Self-examination was a common moral exercise in conduct literature. How does knowing this change the way you read one moment in the chapter? [DOK 3 · thinkPairShare · wait 8 s · AP-LIT.SET] Look for: A specific moment reread in light of the context.
    Answer guidance: A defensible line of argument: The exchange shows that pride and prejudice belong to both Elizabeth and Darcy. Useful evidence: “And your defect is a propensity to hate everybody” (Chapter XI, paragraph 31): Elizabeth's sharp verdict. Theme link: both characters own the faults of the title: he resentment and pride, she a will to misunderstand. Credit any position that is supported by quotation and reasoning; push one-sided answers to address the strongest counterpoint.

Evaluative / synthesis / creative

1. A critic might argue: “Darcy names his pride directly; the novel will test whether either can change.” How far do you agree? Take a stand and defend it with two lines from the chapter. [DOK 3 · fourCorners · wait 8 s · AP-LIT.LAN] Look for: A defended position with evidence and one counterpoint.
   Answer guidance: A defensible line of argument: The exchange shows that pride and prejudice belong to both Elizabeth and Darcy. Useful evidence: “is wilfully to misunderstand them” (Chapter XI, paragraph 32): Darcy's reply; it is the more accurate judgment. Theme link: both characters own the faults of the title: he resentment and pride, she a will to misunderstand. Credit any position that is supported by quotation and reasoning; push one-sided answers to address the strongest counterpoint.
2. Which character in this chapter acts most wisely, and which least? Judge them by a standard you name. [DOK 3 · thinkPairShare · wait 8 s · AP-LIT.CHR, AP-LIT.LAN] Look for: An evaluation using an explicit criterion and evidence.
   Answer guidance: A defensible line of argument: The exchange shows that pride and prejudice belong to both Elizabeth and Darcy. Useful evidence: “My good opinion once lost is lost forever” (Chapter XI, paragraph 28): Darcy's self-description; it will be tested when he forgives Elizabeth's refusal. On characterization: Elizabeth and Darcy discuss faults directly. Darcy admits his temper is "resentful"; Elizabeth's teasing hides real criticism. Credit any position that is supported by quotation and reasoning; push one-sided answers to address the strongest counterpoint.
3. Rewrite one moment of “Chapter XI” from the point of view of a different character. What does the new angle reveal or hide about character flaws examined? [DOK 4 · thinkPairShare · wait 8 s · AP-LIT.LAN, AP-LIT.NAR] Look for: A creative product with a rationale tied to the text.
   Answer guidance: A defensible line of argument: The exchange shows that pride and prejudice belong to both Elizabeth and Darcy. Useful evidence: “And your defect is a propensity to hate everybody” (Chapter XI, paragraph 31): Elizabeth's sharp verdict. Theme link: both characters own the faults of the title: he resentment and pride, she a will to misunderstand. Credit any position that is supported by quotation and reasoning; push one-sided answers to address the strongest counterpoint.
4. Write three questions of your own about “Chapter XI”: one recall, one “why/how”, and one “should/what if”. Trade with a partner and answer theirs. [DOK 3 · studentGenerated · wait 8 s · AP-LIT.LAN] Look for: Student-generated questions at three levels.
   Answer guidance: A defensible line of argument: The exchange shows that pride and prejudice belong to both Elizabeth and Darcy. Useful evidence: “is wilfully to misunderstand them” (Chapter XI, paragraph 32): Darcy's reply; it is the more accurate judgment. Theme link: both characters own the faults of the title: he resentment and pride, she a will to misunderstand. Credit any position that is supported by quotation and reasoning; push one-sided answers to address the strongest counterpoint.

5. Connect this chapter to pride and self-knowledge: is the link strong or weak so far? What would Austen need to show next to strengthen it? [DOK 4 · socraticCircle · wait 8 s · AP-LIT.LAN] Look for: A judgment of thematic development across the work.

   Answer guidance: A defensible line of argument: The exchange shows that pride and prejudice belong to both Elizabeth and Darcy. Useful evidence: “My good opinion once lost is lost forever” (Chapter XI, paragraph 28): Darcy's self-description; it will be tested when he forgives Elizabeth's refusal. Theme link: both characters own the faults of the title: he resentment and pride, she a will to misunderstand. Credit any position that is supported by quotation and reasoning; push one-sided answers to address the strongest counterpoint.

6. Is the characterization in this chapter effective, or does it feel heavy-handed? Evaluate it as a reader would in a review. [DOK 3 · fourCorners · wait 8 s · AP-LIT.CHR, AP-LIT.LAN] Look for: An evaluative judgment with criteria and evidence.

   Answer guidance: A defensible line of argument: The exchange shows that pride and prejudice belong to both Elizabeth and Darcy. Useful evidence: “And your defect is a propensity to hate everybody” (Chapter XI, paragraph 31): Elizabeth's sharp verdict. On characterization: Elizabeth and Darcy discuss faults directly. Darcy admits his temper is "resentful"; Elizabeth's teasing hides real criticism. Credit any position that is supported by quotation and reasoning; push one-sided answers to address the strongest counterpoint.

7. Compare how “Chapter XI” treats character flaws examined with how another text, film or event you know treats a similar idea. What does Pride and Prejudice see that the other misses? [DOK 4 · socraticCircle · wait 8 s · AP-LIT.LAN] Look for: A cross-text synthesis.

   Answer guidance: A defensible line of argument: The exchange shows that pride and prejudice belong to both Elizabeth and Darcy. Useful evidence: “is wilfully to misunderstand them” (Chapter XI, paragraph 32): Darcy's reply; it is the more accurate judgment. Theme link: both characters own the faults of the title: he resentment and pride, she a will to misunderstand. Credit any position that is supported by quotation and reasoning; push one-sided answers to address the strongest counterpoint.

8. Predict what “Chapter XII” will bring, using two clues from this chapter. After reading, evaluate your prediction. [DOK 3 · thinkPairShare · wait 8 s · AP-LIT.LAN, AP-LIT.STR] Look for: A prediction or judgment justified with textual clues.

   Answer guidance: A defensible line of argument: The exchange shows that pride and prejudice belong to both Elizabeth and Darcy. Useful evidence: “My good opinion once lost is lost forever” (Chapter XI, paragraph 28): Darcy's self-description; it will be tested when he forgives Elizabeth's refusal. Theme link: both characters own the faults of the title: he resentment and pride, she a will to misunderstand. Credit any position that is supported by quotation and reasoning; push one-sided answers to address the strongest counterpoint.

9. Design a one-paragraph modern adaptation of this chapter (setting, characters, conflict). What must stay the same for it to still be about character flaws examined? [DOK 4 · thinkPairShare · wait 8 s · AP-LIT.LAN] Look for: A creative transfer that keeps the core idea.

   Answer guidance: A defensible line of argument: The exchange shows that pride and prejudice belong to both Elizabeth and Darcy. Useful evidence: “And your defect is a propensity to hate everybody” (Chapter XI, paragraph 31): Elizabeth's sharp verdict. Theme link: both characters own the faults of the title: he resentment and pride, she a will to misunderstand. Credit any position that is supported by quotation and reasoning; push one-sided answers to address the strongest counterpoint.

10. What question would you most like to ask Jane Austen about this chapter, and what answer do you think the text itself gives? [DOK 4 · studentGenerated · wait 8 s · AP-LIT.LAN] Look for: A student-generated question answered from evidence.

    Answer guidance: A defensible line of argument: The exchange shows that pride and prejudice belong to both Elizabeth and Darcy. Useful evidence: “is wilfully to misunderstand them” (Chapter XI, paragraph 32): Darcy's reply; it is the more accurate judgment. Theme link: both characters own the faults of the title: he resentment and pride, she a will to misunderstand. Credit any position that is supported by quotation and reasoning; push one-sided answers to address the strongest counterpoint.

Annotation focus

- Characterization: look for what characters say, do and think, and how others react to them (anchor passage in the We do segment)
- Also notice Theme: statements or moments that connect to the book's big ideas
- Also notice Irony: gaps between what characters expect or say and what is true

Chapter quiz: item bank (all eleven rigor versions)

1. [fill · recall · DOK 1] Fill in the blank with the vocabulary word that fits: “Tease _____ of temper and presence of mind!” Word bank: persevered, disappointing, bracelets, calmness

   Key: calmness

2. [mc · recall · DOK 1] Who invites Elizabeth to walk around the room?

   A. Darcy

   B. Jane

   C. Mrs. Hurst

   D. Miss Bingley

   Key: D (Miss Bingley)

3. [mc · recall · DOK 1] In the line “Hurst, principally occupied in playing with her bracelets and rings, joined now and then in her brother’s conversation with Miss Bennet.”, what does “bracelets” most nearly mean?

   A. bands or chains worn around the wrist

   B. the act of preparing something (as food) by the application of heat

   C. willingness to please others

   D. agitation; a troubled state

   Key: A (bands or chains worn around the wrist)

4. [fill · recall · DOK 1] Fill in the blank with the vocabulary word that fits: “The first half hour was spent in piling up the fire, lest she should suffer from the change of room; and she removed at his desire to the other side of the _____, that she might be farther from the door.” Word bank: bracelets, persevered, disappointing, fireplace

   Key: fireplace

5. [mc · recall · DOK 1] In the line "Her figure was elegant, and she walked well;—but Darcy, at whom it was all aimed, was still inflexibly studious.", what does "studious" most nearly mean?

   A. leads into a wrong idea

   B. busy reading; absorbed in study

   C. plays or sings for others

   D. be present or associated with an event or entity

   Key: B (busy reading; absorbed in study)

6. [fill · recall · DOK 1] Complete the quotation from Chapter XI, paragraph 11: "I assure you it is very _____ after sitting so long in one attitude." Word bank: refreshing, succeeded, punish, intelligence

   Key: refreshing

7. [mc · recall · DOK 1] Which word completes this sentence from Chapter XI, paragraph 16? "How shall we _____ him for such a speech?"

   A. understand

   B. intelligence

   C. meditating

   D. punish

   Key: D (punish)

8. [fill · recall · DOK 1] Complete the quotation from Chapter XI, paragraph 4: "She could not win him, however, to any _____; he merely answered her question, and read on." Word bank: refreshing, conversation, rational, intelligence

   Key: conversation

9. [mc · recall · DOK 1] In the line "Not at all,' was her answer; 'but depend upon it, he means to be severe on us, and our surest way of disappointing him, will be to ask nothing about it.", what does "disappointing" most nearly mean?

   A. improvement (here: in Jane's health)

   B. failing to give someone what they hope for

   C. bringing shame on

   D. sternness; severity

   Key: B (failing to give someone what they hope for)

10. [fill · recall · DOK 1] Complete the quotation from Chapter XI, paragraph 1: "When the ladies removed after dinner, Elizabeth ran up to her sister, and seeing her well guarded from cold, _____ her into the drawing-room" Word bank: attended, congratulation, meditating, gentlemen

    Key: attended

11. [mc · inference · DOK 2] Which choice best states a central concern of "Chapter XI"?

    A. Doubts and preparations

    B. A misguided warning

    C. Character flaws examined

    D. The second proposal

    Key: C (Character flaws examined)

12. [short · inference · DOK 2] What does this passage from Chapter XI, paragraph 17 reveal about the character or situation? “We can all plague and punish one another.” Answer in two or three sentences with one detail.
    Sample answer: The passage (Chapter XI, paragraph 17) shows the situation turning on first impressions and prejudice: both characters own the faults of the title: he resentment and pride, she a will to misunderstand. The words “another” and “punish” are the proof, because they show how the moment looks to the people in it. They suggest more than the narrator states outright.
13. [short · inference · DOK 2] What does this passage from Chapter XI, paragraph 1 reveal about the character or situation? “They could describe an entertainment with accuracy, relate an anecdote with humour, and laugh at their acquaintance with spirit.” Answer in two or three sentences with one detail.
    Sample answer: The passage (Chapter XI, paragraph 1) shows the situation turning on first impressions and prejudice: both characters own the faults of the title: he resentment and pride, she a will to misunderstand. The words “entertainment” and “acquaintance” are the proof, because they show how the moment looks to the people in it. They suggest more than the narrator states outright.
14. [short · analysis · DOK 3] Analyze the word choice in “is wilfully to misunderstand them” (Chapter XI, paragraph 32). Pick two words and explain what they suggest.
    Sample answer: Darcy's reply; it is the more accurate judgment. The evidence is “is wilfully to misunderstand them” (Chapter XI, paragraph 32). This develops pride and prejudice: both characters own the faults of the title: he resentment and pride, she a will to misunderstand. The words “misunderstand” and “wilfully” carry that meaning: they are the charged choices in the line, and changing either would soften the effect.
15. [mc · analysis · DOK 3] Which literary element does this describe in “Chapter XI”? Elizabeth and Darcy discuss faults directly. Darcy admits his temper is ‘resentful’; Elizabeth's teasing hides real criticism.
    A. Characterization
    B. Allusion
    C. Irony
    D. Metaphor

    Key: A (Characterization)
16. [short · synthesis · DOK 4] Connect this passage from Chapter XI, paragraph 12 to the story's treatment of marriage and money: “Elizabeth was surprised, but agreed to it immediately.” Use one other moment from the story as well.
    Sample answer: This passage (Chapter XI, paragraph 12) develops marriage and money: both characters own the faults of the title: he resentment and pride, she a will to misunderstand. Its words “immediately” and “surprised” carry that idea into this moment. The same concern returns in “He was as much awake to the novelty of attention in that quarter as Elizabeth herself could be, and unconsciously…” (Chapter XI, paragraph 12), so the two passages read as a pattern, not a single moment. Together they show the story treating marriage and money as central.
17. [fill · recall · DOK 1] Complete the quotation from Chapter XI, paragraph 31: “And your defect is a _____ to hate everybody”
    Key: propensity
18. [mc · recall · DOK 1] What fault does Darcy admit?
    A. Greed
    B. Cowardice
    C. Laziness

D. A resentful temper

Key: D (A resentful temper)

19. [fill · recall · DOK 1] Complete the quotation from Chapter XI, paragraph 28: “My good _____ once lost is lost forever”

    Key: opinion

20. [mc · recall · DOK 1] Which word completes this sentence from Chapter XI, paragraph 8? “I should like balls infinitely better,’ she replied, ‘if they were carried on in a different manner; but there is something _____ tedious in the usual process of such a meeting.”

    A. insufferably

    B. punish

    C. therefore

    D. understand

    Key: A (insufferably)

21. [short · analysis · DOK 3] Analyze how the word choice in this passage from Chapter XI, paragraph 20 shapes its tone: “Miss Bingley,’ said he, ‘has given me credit for more than can be.” Pick two words and explain their effect.

    Sample answer: The words “credit” (Chapter XI, paragraph 20) make the tone heavy and deliberate rather than neutral. That weight points the reader to class and social mobility: both characters own the faults of the title: he resentment and pride, she a will to misunderstand. The author chooses them so the moment feels significant instead of passing.

22. [short · analysis · DOK 3] Claim: The exchange shows that pride and prejudice belong to both Elizabeth and Darcy. Explain how this evidence supports the claim: “And your defect is a propensity to hate everybody” (Chapter XI, paragraph 31).

    Sample answer: Elizabeth accuses him of "a propensity to hate everybody," and he answers that hers is "wilfully to misunderstand them," so the novel gives each a fault the other can see. The evidence is “And your defect is a propensity to hate everybody” (Chapter XI, paragraph 31) — Elizabeth's sharp verdict. This develops pride and prejudice: both characters own the faults of the title: he resentment and pride, she a will to misunderstand.

23. [short · analysis · DOK 3] Analyze how the word choice in this passage from Chapter XI, paragraph 4 shapes its tone: “Miss Bingley’s attention was quite as much engaged in watching Mr. Darcy’s progress through his book, as in reading her own; and she was perpetually either making some inquiry, or looking at his page.” Pick two words and explain their effect.

    Sample answer: The words “perpetually” and “attention” (Chapter XI, paragraph 4) make the tone heavy and deliberate rather than neutral. That weight points the reader to pride and self-knowledge: both characters own the faults of the title: he resentment and pride, she a will to misunderstand. The author chooses them so the moment feels significant instead of passing.

24. [short · synthesis · DOK 4] Close reading: how do the diction and syntax of “My good opinion once lost is lost forever” (Chapter XI, paragraph 28) shape its meaning? Consider a second, competing reading.

    Sample answer: Darcy's self-description; it will be tested when he forgives Elizabeth's refusal. The evidence is “My good opinion once lost is lost forever” (Chapter XI, paragraph 28). This develops pride and prejudice: both characters own the faults of the title: he resentment and pride, she a will to misunderstand. The words “forever” and “opinion” carry that meaning: they are the charged choices in the line, and changing either would soften the effect. Elizabeth accuses him of "a propensity to hate everybody," and he answers that hers is "wilfully to misunderstand them," so the novel gives each a fault the other can see.

25. [mc · recall · DOK 1] Which theme does this conversation develop?

    A. Money only

    B. Pride and self-knowledge

    C. War

    D. Travel

    Key: B (Pride and self-knowledge)

26. [mc · recall · DOK 1] What does Elizabeth say is Darcy's defect?

    A. Shyness

    B. Vanity about looks

    C. Poverty

    D. A tendency to hate everybody

    Key: D (A tendency to hate everybody)

27. [fill · recall · DOK 1] Fill in the blank with the vocabulary word that fits: "He owns it himself without _____."

    Word bank: persevered, bracelets, disguise, disappointing

    Key: disguise

28. [short · inference · DOK 2] What can you infer from this line? "And your defect is a propensity to hate everybody" (Chapter XI, paragraph 31) Answer in two or three sentences with one detail.

    Sample answer: Elizabeth's sharp verdict. The evidence is "And your defect is a propensity to hate everybody" (Chapter XI, paragraph 31). This develops pride and prejudice: both characters own the faults of the title: he resentment and pride, she a will to misunderstand.

29. [short · inference · DOK 2] What can you infer from this line? "My good opinion once lost is lost forever" (Chapter XI, paragraph 28) Answer in two or three sentences with one detail.

    Sample answer: Darcy's self-description; it will be tested when he forgives Elizabeth's refusal. The evidence is "My good opinion once lost is lost forever" (Chapter XI, paragraph 28). This develops pride and prejudice: both characters own the faults of the title: he resentment and pride, she a will to misunderstand.

30. [mc · analysis · DOK 3] Which literary element does this describe in "Chapter XI"? Their exchange is structured like a duel, each line answering the last.

    A. Point of view

    B. Simile

    C. Tone / mood

    D. Dialogue

    Key: D (Dialogue)

31. [short · synthesis · DOK 4] Connect this passage from Chapter XI, paragraph 34 to the story's treatment of marriage and money: "Her sister made not the smallest objection, and the pianoforte was opened, and Darcy, after a few moments recollection, was not sorry for it." Use one other moment from the story as well.

    Sample answer: This passage (Chapter XI, paragraph 34) develops marriage and money: both characters own the faults of the title: he resentment and pride, she a will to misunderstand. Its words "recollection" and "pianoforte" carry that idea into this moment. The same concern returns in "They could describe an entertainment with accuracy, relate an anecdote with humour, and laugh at their acquaintance…" (Chapter XI, paragraph 1), so the two passages read as a pattern, not a single moment. Together they show the story treating marriage and money as central.

32. [short · synthesis · DOK 4] Connect this passage from Chapter XI, paragraph 8 to the story's treatment of women's limited choices: “It would surely be much more rational if conversation instead of dancing made the order of the day.” Use one other moment from the story as well.
    Sample answer: This passage (Chapter XI, paragraph 8) develops women's limited choices: both characters own the faults of the title: he resentment and pride, she a will to misunderstand. Its words “conversation” and “rational” carry that idea into this moment. The same concern returns in “Miss Bingley made no answer; and soon afterwards got up and walked about the room.” (Chapter XI, paragraph 10), so the two passages read as a pattern, not a single moment. Together they show the story treating women's limited choices as central.

33. [mc · recall · DOK 1 · AP: AP-LIT.FIG] Which word completes this sentence from Chapter XI, paragraph 2? “Elizabeth, at work in the _____ corner, saw it all with great delight.”

    A. punish
    B. refreshing
    C. opposite
    D. congratulation

    Key: C (opposite)

34. [short · analysis · DOK 3 · AP: AP-LIT.FIG] Analyze how the word choice in this passage from Chapter XI, paragraph 22 shapes its tone: “But it has been the study of my life to avoid those weaknesses which often expose a strong understanding to ridicule.” Pick two words and explain their effect.
    Sample answer: The words “understanding” and “weaknesses” (Chapter XI, paragraph 22) make the tone heavy and deliberate rather than neutral. That weight points the reader to pride and self-knowledge: both characters own the faults of the title: he resentment and pride, she a will to misunderstand. The author chooses them so the moment feels significant instead of passing.

35. [short · analysis · DOK 3 · AP: AP-LIT.FIG] Analyze how the word choice in this passage from Chapter XI, paragraph 3 shapes its tone: “She assured him that no one intended to play, and the silence of the whole party on the subject seemed to justify her.” Pick two words and explain their effect.
    Sample answer: The words “intended” and “assured” (Chapter XI, paragraph 3) make the tone heavy and deliberate rather than neutral. That weight points the reader to class and social mobility: both characters own the faults of the title: he resentment and pride, she a will to misunderstand. The author chooses them so the moment feels significant instead of passing.

36. [short · synthesis · DOK 4 · AP: AP-LIT.LAN] Connect this passage from Chapter XI, paragraph 28 to the story's treatment of women's limited choices: “My feelings are not puffed about with every attempt to move them.” Use one other moment from the story as well.
    Sample answer: This passage (Chapter XI, paragraph 28) develops women's limited choices: both characters own the faults of the title: he resentment and pride, she a will to misunderstand. Its words “feelings” and “attempt” carry that idea into this moment. The same concern returns in “No’—said Darcy, ‘I have made no such pretension.” (Chapter XI, paragraph 28), so the two passages read as a pattern, not a single moment. Together they show the story treating women's limited choices as central.

37. [fill · recall · DOK 1 · AP: AP-LIT.FIG] Fill in the blank with the vocabulary word that fits: “If you mean Darcy,’ cried her brother, ‘he may go to bed, if he _____, before it begins—but as for the ball, it is quite a settled thing; and as soon as Nicholls has made white soup enough I shall send round my cards.” Word bank: bracelets, persevered, chooses, disappointing
    Key: chooses

38. [mc · recall · DOK 1 · AP: AP-LIT.FIG] In the line “Darcy in anything, and persevered therefore in requiring an explanation of his two motives.”, what does “persevered” most nearly mean?

    A. sternness; severity

    B. kept on despite difficulty

    C. to belong to or be connected with

    D. care and protection

    Key: B (kept on despite difficulty)

39. [mc · recall · DOK 1 · AP: AP-LIT.CHR] What does Elizabeth refuse to laugh at?

    A. Wisdom and goodness

    B. Whims

    C. Nonsense

    D. Folly

    Key: A (Wisdom and goodness)

40. [short · synthesis · DOK 4 · AP: AP-LIT.LAN] Synthesis: trace how pride and prejudice develops from Chapter X to Chapter XI. Use one quotation from each.

    Sample answer: Earlier, in Chapter X, paragraph 11, the text reads “I am afraid you do not like your pen” — Miss Bingley's flattery of Darcy's letter-writing: comic and transparent. In Chapter XI, “My good opinion once lost is lost forever” (Chapter XI, paragraph 28) — Darcy's self-description; it will be tested when he forgives Elizabeth's refusal. Both characters own the faults of the title: he resentment and pride, she a will to misunderstand.

41. [mc · inference · DOK 2 · Program outcome: LeL-C2-LIT-1] What does this passage most clearly show? “is wilfully to misunderstand them” (Chapter XI, paragraph 32)

    A. The chapter opens with the letter she asked for.

    B. Elizabeth's judgment of Collins from his style: here her quick judgment is right.

    C. Irony: "got rid of" undercuts "maternal feelings."

    D. Darcy's reply; it is the more accurate judgment.

    Key: D (Darcy's reply; it is the more accurate judgment.)

42. [short · synthesis · DOK 4 · Program outcome: LeL-GR-LIT-1] Close reading: how do the diction and syntax of “And your defect is a propensity to hate everybody” (Chapter XI, paragraph 31) shape its meaning? Consider a second, competing reading.

    Sample answer: Elizabeth's sharp verdict. The evidence is “And your defect is a propensity to hate everybody” (Chapter XI, paragraph 31). This develops pride and prejudice: both characters own the faults of the title: he resentment and pride, she a will to misunderstand. The words “propensity” and “everybody” carry that meaning: they are the charged choices in the line, and changing either would soften the effect. Elizabeth accuses him of "a propensity to hate everybody," and he answers that hers is "wilfully to misunderstand them," so the novel gives each a fault the other can see.

Rigor version	Items (in order)	Mix
Scaffolded support	1, 2, 3, 4, 5, 6, 7, 8, 9, 10, 11, 12, 13, 14, 15, 16	recall 10, inference 3, analysis 2, synthesis 1
HS Freshman	8, 2, 17, 18, 19, 10, 7, 5, 20, 13, 11, 12, 21, 22, 23, 24	recall 9, inference 3, analysis 3, synthesis 1
HS Sophomore	25, 6, 18, 26, 27, 4, 11, 28, 12, 29, 13, 15, 23, 30, 31, 32	recall 6, inference 5, analysis 3, synthesis 2

HS Junior	2, 9, 10, 6, 33, 17, 13, 28, 12, 11, 21, 30, 34, 35, 31, 36	recall 6, inference 4, analysis 4, synthesis 2
HS Senior	37, 38, 3, 8, 39, 29, 11, 12, 13, 34, 30, 35, 22, 40, 32, 16	recall 5, inference 4, analysis 4, synthesis 3
AP	1, 27, 9, 18, 11, 13, 15, 35, 21, 34, 22, 24, 40, 32, 36, 31	recall 4, inference 2, analysis 5, synthesis 5
College Freshman	8, 7, 26, 37, 11, 12, 29, 35, 34, 23, 21, 30, 40, 36, 16, 32	recall 4, inference 3, analysis 5, synthesis 4
College Sophomore	37, 18, 1, 41, 11, 12, 35, 22, 30, 23, 34, 31, 36, 32, 40, 16	recall 3, inference 3, analysis 5, synthesis 5
College Junior	37, 5, 1, 13, 11, 30, 23, 35, 21, 15, 34, 36, 31, 32, 40, 16	recall 3, inference 2, analysis 6, synthesis 5
College Senior	5, 37, 1, 11, 34, 22, 21, 15, 30, 23, 24, 31, 32, 16, 36, 40	recall 3, inference 1, analysis 6, synthesis 6
Graduate / PhD	7, 37, 1, 18, 14, 35, 23, 34, 15, 30, 40, 36, 16, 42, 31, 32	recall 4, inference 0, analysis 6, synthesis 6

Writing prompts (eleven rigor levels)

Scaffolded support (250 words; AP: see unit standards): Supported track (work from the passage your teacher selects). In “Chapter XI,” how does Austen show character flaws examined? Write a paragraph that states your claim, quotes two details from the passage, and explains how each detail supports your idea. Use the characterization you noticed as one piece of evidence.

HS Freshman (350 words; AP: see unit standards): In Chapter XI, how does Austen develop the idea of character flaws examined? State a clear claim, support it with two or three quotations, and explain how the characterization in the chapter helps build that idea.

HS Sophomore (450 words; AP: see unit standards): Analyze how Chapter XI develops the idea of character flaws examined. Make a precise claim, support it with at least three pieces of textual evidence, and explain how the author's use of characterization and theme shapes that idea. Address one possible counterclaim.

HS Junior (550 words; AP: see unit standards): Analyze how the structure of Chapter XI (where it begins, turns and ends) and its characterization shape the reader's understanding of character flaws examined. Identify one place where the text leaves matters uncertain and explain how that uncertainty adds to its meaning.

HS Senior (600 words; AP: see unit standards): Two readers disagree about what Chapter XI suggests about character flaws examined. Lay out two plausible interpretations, weigh the evidence for each (including the chapter's characterization and theme), and argue for the stronger one in a sustained, well-organized essay.

AP (650 words; AP: AP-LIT.CHR, AP-LIT.LAN): Write a literary argument in which you analyze how Jane Austen uses characterization in Chapter XI to complicate the reader's understanding of character flaws examined. Develop a defensible thesis, select evidence purposefully, and explain how specific choices of diction and syntax create meaning.

College Freshman (1000 words; AP: see unit standards): Situate Chapter XI within its historical and literary context and argue how the chapter's treatment of character flaws examined responds to that context. Engage with at least one secondary perspective (a critic, historian or the author's own statements), integrate quotations smoothly, and cite in MLA style.

College Sophomore (1250 words; AP: see unit standards): Read Chapter XI alongside the conventions of its genre and period. Argue how the chapter's handling of character flaws examined follows or bends those conventions, using the characterization as evidence, and test your reading against one published critic. Document two secondary sources in MLA.

College Junior (1500 words; AP: see unit standards): Apply a named critical approach (for example formalist, historicist, feminist, psychoanalytic or ecocritical) to Chapter XI and its treatment of character flaws examined. State your method, show what it reveals in the chapter's characterization and theme, and identify where the text resists it.

College Senior (2000 words; AP: see unit standards): Develop a research argument that reads Chapter XI as evidence for a larger claim about character flaws examined in Pride and Prejudice. Connect close reading of the chapter to the whole novel, engage at least four scholarly sources, and state precisely where your reading departs from theirs (Chicago style).

Graduate / PhD (2500 words; AP: see unit standards): Develop an original argument that reads Chapter XI as a hinge in the novel's larger treatment of character flaws examined. Position your reading within a named critical conversation (for example formalist, historicist, psychoanalytic, feminist or postcolonial approaches), account for the textual history where relevant, and articulate the stakes of your intervention for scholarship on Pride and Prejudice.

SAT-style questions

1. Hurst, principally occupied in playing with her bracelets and rings, joined now and then in her brother's conversation with Miss Bennet.

   As used in the text, what does the word "bracelets" most nearly mean?

   A. reasons for doing something

   B. bands or chains worn around the wrist

   C. an open recess in a wall at the base of a chimney where a fire can be built

   D. an outward semblance that misrepresents the true nature of something

2. But when the gentlemen entered, Jane was no longer the first object. Miss Bingley's eyes were instantly turned towards Darcy, and she had something to say to him before he had advanced many steps. He addressed himself directly to Miss Bennet, with a polite congratulation; Mr. Hurst also made her a slight bow, and said he was "very glad;" but diffuseness and warmth remained for Bingley's salutation. He was full of joy and attention. The first half hour was spent in piling up the fire, lest she should suffer from the change of room; and she removed at his desire to the other side of the fireplace, that she might be farther from the door. He then sat down by her, and talked scarcely to anyone else. Elizabeth, at work in the opposite corner, saw it all with great delight.

   Which choice best states a central concern of "Chapter XI"?

   A. Departure and relief

   B. Character flaws examined

   C. A journey and a mercenary suitor

   D. Bingley returns

SAT key: 1. B (bands or chains worn around the wrist); 2. B (Character flaws examined)

Lesson 13: Chapter XII

Focus: departure and relief

Objective: Students will analyze how characterization develops in “Chapter XII” by writing a claim-evidence-reasoning paragraph that cites at least 2 quotations from the section, and will score at least 80% on the section quiz.

Standards: AP: see the unit standards

Teacher only · spoilers

The sisters return home to Longbourn. Darcy, alarmed by his attraction, resolves to give Elizabeth no further encouragement. Mrs. Bennet is displeased they came back so soon.

Background: Extended visits were common; leaving too early or too late could seem impolite.

Significance: Darcy's inner resistance shows class pride battling feeling.

Lesson plan and lecture script (90 minutes)

0–8 min · Bell-ringer · You do (8 min)
Students write to the bell-ringer, then pair-share.
Why does Darcy decide to avoid Elizabeth? Write for five minutes. Starters: I think... because... / This connects to first impressions because....
Prompt: Why does Darcy decide to avoid Elizabeth?
Sentence starters: I think… because… · This connects to first impressions because…
Strong response: A strong response takes a position and anticipates this: Darcy's restraint deepens Elizabeth's dislike.

8–18 min · Vocabulary with etymology notes · I do (10 min)
Four key words in context, with verified word histories.
Today's words: needlessly — without good reason; postscript — a note added at the end of a letter; intruding — coming in where one is not wanted; welcomed — greeted (someone) warmly on arrival. “intruding”: Origin of “intrude”: Latin intrudere.
Words: needlessly: without good reason · postscript: a note added at the end of a letter · intruding: coming in where one is not wanted · welcomed: greeted (someone) warmly on arrival

18–28 min · Background and context · I do (10 min)
Mini-lecture (read or adapt the script).
Extended visits were common; leaving too early or too late could seem impolite. Darcy's inner resistance shows class pride battling feeling. Characterization: Darcy, alarmed by his attraction, decides to show no admiration; he barely speaks to Elizabeth on her last day. Point of view: The narrator moves into Darcy's mind, a rare view that shows he is fighting his feelings. Watch for letters: Letters carry news, reveal character and change minds; Darcy's letter is the turning point of the novel. In this chapter: "In consequence of an agreement between the sisters, Elizabeth wrote the next morning to her mother, to beg that the carriage" (Chapter XII, paragraph 1).

28–40 min · I do: modeled close reading · I do (12 min)
Model the close reading of the anchor quotation using the written think-aloud below.
First, meaning. I read "She attracted him more than he liked" slowly and put it in my own words: Darcy finds Elizabeth more attractive than he wants to. Next, craft. I notice the phrase "more than he liked," which shows resistance. The strongest word is "attracted": it shows feeling beyond his control. Then, effect. What does Darcy realize about Elizabeth? My answer: Darcy is falling for Elizabeth against his will; he decides to hide it, which creates misunderstandings.

> She attracted him more than he liked (Chapter XII, paragraph 4)

Think-aloud: First, meaning. I read "She attracted him more than he liked" slowly and put it in my own words: Darcy finds Elizabeth more attractive than he wants to. Next, craft. I notice the phrase "more than he liked," which shows resistance. The strongest word is "attracted": it shows feeling beyond his control. Then, effect. What does Darcy realize about Elizabeth? My answer: Darcy is falling for Elizabeth against his will; he decides to hide it, which creates misunderstandings.

40–55 min · We do: guided annotation · We do (15 min)
Guided analysis of a second quotation; expected answers given.
Ask: What words in this line stand out, and what do they suggest? Expected: "Wisely" is ironic: hiding feelings creates misunderstandings. This links to first impressions. Ask: How does this line connect to first impressions? Expected: Darcy's restraint deepens Elizabeth's dislike. ("Wisely" is ironic: his caution will deepen her misjudgment.)

> He wisely resolved to be particularly careful that no sign of admiration should now escape him (Chapter XII, paragraph 4)

Ask: What words in this line stand out, and what do they suggest?
Expected answer: "Wisely" is ironic: hiding feelings creates misunderstandings. This links to first impressions.
Ask: How does this line connect to first impressions?
Expected answer: Darcy's restraint deepens Elizabeth's dislike. ("Wisely" is ironic: his caution will deepen her misjudgment.)

55–70 min · You do: independent annotation · You do (15 min)
Independent annotation and a claim-evidence-reasoning paragraph (exemplar given).
Annotate the chapter for characterization, point of view (three marks with a margin note each), then write one claim-evidence-reasoning paragraph: what does this chapter suggest about departure and relief? Then start your writing prompt at your assigned level (HS Sophomore: Analyze how Chapter XII develops the idea of departure and relief. Make a precise claim, support it with at least three pieces of textual evidence, and explain how the author's use of characterization and plot shapes that idea. Address one possible counterclaim.) Exemplar: Darcy's decision to hide his admiration confirms Elizabeth's prejudice. When the text says "He wisely resolved to be particularly careful that no sign of admiration should now escape him" (Chapter XII, paragraph 4), it shows this directly. Because "she attracted him more than he liked," he resolves that "no sign of admiration should now escape him," so his behaviour gives her more reason to think he dislikes her.
Task: Annotate the chapter for characterization, point of view (three marks with a margin note each), then write one claim-evidence-reasoning paragraph: what does this chapter suggest about departure and relief? Then start your writing prompt at your assigned level (HS Sophomore: Analyze how Chapter XII develops the idea of departure and relief. Make a precise claim, support it with at least three pieces of textual evidence, and explain how the author's use of characterization and plot shapes that idea. Address one possible counterclaim.)
Exemplar: Darcy's decision to hide his admiration confirms Elizabeth's prejudice. When the text says "He wisely resolved to be particularly careful that no sign of admiration should now escape him" (Chapter XII, paragraph 4), it shows this directly. Because "she attracted him more than he liked," he resolves that "no sign of admiration should now escape him," so his behaviour gives her more reason to think he dislikes her.

70–80 min · Discussion · We do (10 min)
Structured discussion from the 30 tiered questions, with facilitation notes.
Anchor question: Why does Darcy decide to avoid Elizabeth? Ask: how responsible is Darcy for Elizabeth's misjudgment?
Anchor question: Why does Darcy decide to avoid Elizabeth?
Facilitation: Ask: how responsible is Darcy for Elizabeth's misjudgment?

80–87 min · Exit ticket / chapter quiz · You do (7 min)
Chapter quiz in the app and an exit ticket (answer given).
Chapter quiz in the app, then: In one sentence, what does this chapter suggest about departure and relief? Support it with one short quotation. Model answer: Darcy's decision to hide his admiration confirms Elizabeth's prejudice. ("He wisely resolved to be particularly careful that no sign of admiration should now escape him", Chapter XII, paragraph 4). Accept any defensible claim backed by a quotation from the chapter; the answer key for the quiz is in the Quiz section.
Exit ticket: In one sentence, what does this chapter suggest about departure and relief? Support it with one short quotation.
Answer: Model answer: Darcy's decision to hide his admiration confirms Elizabeth's prejudice. ("He wisely resolved to be particularly careful that no sign of admiration should now escape him", Chapter XII, paragraph 4). Accept any defensible claim backed by a quotation from the chapter; the answer key for the quiz is in the Quiz section.

> 87–90 min · Closure · I do (3 min)
> Summarize the lesson and preview the next reading.
> Today we saw how characterization shapes departure and relief. Key takeaway: Darcy's restraint deepens Elizabeth's dislike.

Total: 90 minutes.

Teacher analysis (spoilers)

Literary elements

- Characterization: Darcy, alarmed by his attraction, decides to show no admiration; he barely speaks to Elizabeth on her last day.
- Point of view: The narrator moves into Darcy's mind, a rare view that shows he is fighting his feelings.

Themes and how they develop

- first impressions: Darcy's restraint deepens Elizabeth's dislike.

Symbols and motifs

- letters: Letters carry news, reveal character and change minds; Darcy's letter is the turning point of the novel. In this chapter: “In consequence of an agreement between the sisters, Elizabeth wrote the next morning to her mother, to beg that the carriage” (Chapter XII, paragraph 1).
- marriage and money: Incomes, entails and fortunes are stated precisely; marriage is always also an economic question. In this chapter: “actually been hinted that Colonel Forster was going to be married” (Chapter XII, paragraph 7).

Key quotations (checked against the reading text)

- “She attracted him more than he liked” (Chapter XII, paragraph 4) Darcy's resistance to his own feelings.
- “He wisely resolved to be particularly careful that no sign of admiration should now escape him” (Chapter XII, paragraph 4) "Wisely" is ironic: his caution will deepen her misjudgment.
- “They were not welcomed home very cordially by their mother” (Chapter XII, paragraph 6) Mrs. Bennet is annoyed that her daughters have come back early, before Jane could gain more time with Bingley.

Model claim-evidence-reasoning

Claim: Darcy's decision to hide his admiration confirms Elizabeth's prejudice.
Evidence: “He wisely resolved to be particularly careful that no sign of admiration should now escape him” (Chapter XII, paragraph 4)
Reasoning: Because "she attracted him more than he liked," he resolves that "no sign of admiration should now escape him," so his behaviour gives her more reason to think he dislikes her.

Vocabulary with etymology notes

Word		In context	Word history

	Definition (in this sentence)
needlessly (adverb)	without good reason	Against staying longer, however, Elizabeth was positively resolved—nor did she much expect it would be asked; and fearful, on the contrary, as being considered as intruding themselves needlessly long, she urged Jane to borrow Mr.
postscript (noun)	a note added at the end of a letter	Bennet sent them word that they could not possibly have the carriage before Tuesday; and in her postscript it was added, that if Mr.
intruding (verb)	coming in where one is not wanted	Against staying longer, however, Elizabeth was positively resolved—nor did she much expect it would be asked; and fearful, on the contrary, as being considered as intruding themselves needlessly long, she urged Jane to borrow Mr.	"intruding": Origin of "intrude": Latin intrudere. (Liber et Libri origin note, https://en.wiktionary.org/wiki/intrude#Etymology)
welcomed (verb)	greeted (someone) warmly on arrival	They were not welcomed home very cordially by their mother.

Discussion questions

1. Why does Darcy decide to avoid Elizabeth?
2. Where does characterization appear in this chapter, and what effect does it have? Point to one passage.
3. How does this chapter connect to the book's larger concern with pride and self-knowledge?

Classroom discussion questions (30, tiered)

Wait time after every question (3 s for DOK 1, 5 s for DOK 2, 8 to 10 s for DOK 3 and 4); think-pair-share on DOK 3 and 4; answer each response with a follow-up probe; close with student-generated questions. Focus sets by rigor level: Scaffolded support: 1, 2, 3, 4, 5, 6, 11, 12, 13, 14, 21, 22; HS Freshman: 1, 2, 3, 4, 5, 12, 13, 14, 15, 22, 23, 24; HS Sophomore: 1, 2, 3, 4, 13, 14, 15, 16, 17, 23, 24, 25; HS Junior: 1, 2, 3, 14, 15, 16, 17, 18, 24, 25, 26, 27; HS Senior: 1, 2, 3, 15, 16, 17, 18, 25, 26, 27, 28, 29; AP: 1, 2, 16, 17, 18, 19, 20, 26, 27, 28, 29, 30; College Freshman: 1, 2, 17, 18, 19, 20, 21, 22, 27, 28, 29, 30; College Sophomore: 1, 2, 11, 18, 19, 20, 21, 22, 23, 28, 29, 30; College Junior: 1, 11, 12, 19, 20, 21, 22, 23, 24, 25, 29, 30; College Senior: 1, 11, 12, 13, 20, 21, 22, 23, 24, 25, 26, 30; Graduate / PhD: 1, 11, 12, 13, 21, 22, 23, 24, 25, 26, 27, 28

Literal / recall

1. Where do Jane and Elizabeth return? [DOK 1 · coldCallWithSupport · wait 3 s · AP: unit standards] Look for: Longbourn
2. What does Darcy decide? [DOK 1 · turnAndTalk · wait 3 s · AP: unit standards] Look for: To show Elizabeth no further attention
3. How does Mrs. Bennet feel about their early return? [DOK 1 · coldCallWithSupport · wait 3 s · AP: unit standards] Look for: Displeased
4. What does Darcy fear? [DOK 1 · turnAndTalk · wait 3 s · AP: unit standards] Look for: His growing attraction
5. Who is glad to see them home? [DOK 1 · coldCallWithSupport · wait 3 s · AP: unit standards] Look for: Mr. Bennet

6. Retell the three most important events of “Chapter XII” in order, in one sentence each. [DOK 1 · turnAndTalk · wait 3 s · AP: unit standards] Look for: The sisters return home to Longbourn. Darcy, alarmed by his attraction, resolves to give Elizabeth no further encouragement. Mrs. Bennet is displeased they came back so soon.
7. Which characters appear or are mentioned in “Chapter XII”? Name two and one thing each says or does. [DOK 1 · coldCallWithSupport · wait 3 s · AP: unit standards] Look for: Names and actions taken from the chapter; check against the teacher summary.
8. Where and when does “Chapter XII” take place? Point to the line that tells you. [DOK 1 · turnAndTalk · wait 3 s · AP: unit standards] Look for: A place/time detail quoted from the chapter.
9. Reread: “Against staying longer, however, Elizabeth was positively resolved—nor did she much expect it would be asked; and fearful, on the contrary, as being considered as intruding themselves needlessly long, she urged Jane to…” What does “needlessly” mean here, and what is literally happening in this line? [DOK 1 · turnAndTalk · wait 3 s · AP: unit standards] Look for: needlessly: without good reason.
10. Reread: “Bennet sent them word that they could not possibly have the carriage before Tuesday; and in her postscript it was added, that if Mr.” What does “postscript” mean here, and what is literally happening in this line? [DOK 1 · turnAndTalk · wait 3 s · AP: unit standards] Look for: postscript: a note added at the end of a letter.

Inferential / analytical

1. What does “Chapter XII” suggest about departure and relief? State the inference and the line that supports it. [DOK 2 · thinkPairShare · wait 5 s · AP-LIT.LAN] Look for: Darcy's inner resistance shows class pride battling feeling.
2. Find one example of characterization in this chapter. What does it reveal that a plain statement would not? [DOK 2 · followUp · wait 5 s · AP-LIT.CHR] Look for: Look for what characters say, do and think, and how others react to them.
3. How does the plot in this chapter shape what we understand about departure and relief? [DOK 3 · thinkPairShare · wait 8 s · AP-LIT.STR] Look for: Look for key events and the causes linking them.
   Answer guidance: A defensible line of argument: Darcy's decision to hide his admiration confirms Elizabeth's prejudice. Useful evidence: “She attracted him more than he liked” (Chapter XII, paragraph 4): Darcy's resistance to his own feelings. Theme link: Darcy's restraint deepens Elizabeth's dislike. Credit any position that is supported by quotation and reasoning; push one-sided answers to address the strongest counterpoint.
4. In the passage that begins “They were not welcomed home very cordially by their mother.”, why might Austen have chosen these particular words? Pick two and explain their connotations. [DOK 2 · followUp · wait 5 s · AP-LIT.FIG] Look for: Diction analysis of two words in the anchor passage.
5. What causes the main turn in “Chapter XII”, and what effect is it likely to have on what follows? [DOK 2 · followUp · wait 5 s · AP-LIT.STR] Look for: The sisters return home to Longbourn. Darcy, alarmed by his attraction, resolves to give Elizabeth no further encouragement. Mrs. Bennet is displeased they came back so soon.
6. How does “Chapter XII” build on “Chapter XI”? Name one link of cause and effect. [DOK 3 · thinkPairShare · wait 8 s · AP-LIT.STR] Look for: A causal or structural link between this and the previous chapter.
   Answer guidance: A defensible line of argument: Darcy's decision to hide his admiration confirms Elizabeth's prejudice. Useful evidence: “He wisely resolved to be particularly careful that no sign of admiration should now escape him” (Chapter XII, paragraph 4): "Wisely" is ironic: his caution will deepen her misjudgment. Theme link: Darcy's restraint deepens Elizabeth's dislike. Credit any position that is supported by quotation and reasoning; push one-sided answers to address the strongest counterpoint.

7. What can we infer about a character's motives from what they say and do here, as opposed to what they claim? [DOK 3 · followUp · wait 8 s · AP-LIT.CHR] Look for: An inference about motive supported by a quoted line.
   Answer guidance: A defensible line of argument: Darcy's decision to hide his admiration confirms Elizabeth's prejudice. Useful evidence: “They were not welcomed home very cordially by their mother” (Chapter XII, paragraph 6): Mrs. Bennet is annoyed that her daughters have come back early, before Jane could gain more time with Bingley. On characterization: Darcy, alarmed by his attraction, decides to show no admiration; he barely speaks to Elizabeth on her last day. Credit any position that is supported by quotation and reasoning; push one-sided answers to address the strongest counterpoint.
8. The bell-ringer asked: “Why does Darcy decide to avoid Elizabeth?” Now that we have read closely, how would you revise your first answer, and which line changed your mind? [DOK 2 · thinkPairShare · wait 5 s · AP-LIT.LAN] Look for: A revised answer anchored in the text.
9. Where does tone / mood appear, and how does it connect this chapter to the larger concern with pride and self-knowledge? [DOK 3 · followUp · wait 8 s · AP-LIT.FIG] Look for: Look for word choices that reveal the narrator's attitude or the scene's feeling.
   Answer guidance: A defensible line of argument: Darcy's decision to hide his admiration confirms Elizabeth's prejudice. Useful evidence: “She attracted him more than he liked” (Chapter XII, paragraph 4): Darcy's resistance to his own feelings. Theme link: Darcy's restraint deepens Elizabeth's dislike. Credit any position that is supported by quotation and reasoning; push one-sided answers to address the strongest counterpoint.
10. Background: Extended visits were common; leaving too early or too late could seem impolite. How does knowing this change the way you read one moment in the chapter? [DOK 3 · thinkPairShare · wait 8 s · AP-LIT.SET] Look for: A specific moment reread in light of the context.
    Answer guidance: A defensible line of argument: Darcy's decision to hide his admiration confirms Elizabeth's prejudice. Useful evidence: “He wisely resolved to be particularly careful that no sign of admiration should now escape him” (Chapter XII, paragraph 4): "Wisely" is ironic: his caution will deepen her misjudgment. Theme link: Darcy's restraint deepens Elizabeth's dislike. Credit any position that is supported by quotation and reasoning; push one-sided answers to address the strongest counterpoint.

Evaluative / synthesis / creative

1. A critic might argue: “Darcy's inner resistance shows class pride battling feeling.” How far do you agree? Take a stand and defend it with two lines from the chapter. [DOK 3 · fourCorners · wait 8 s · AP-LIT.LAN] Look for: A defended position with evidence and one counterpoint.
   Answer guidance: A defensible line of argument: Darcy's decision to hide his admiration confirms Elizabeth's prejudice. Useful evidence: “They were not welcomed home very cordially by their mother” (Chapter XII, paragraph 6): Mrs. Bennet is annoyed that her daughters have come back early, before Jane could gain more time with Bingley. Theme link: Darcy's restraint deepens Elizabeth's dislike. Credit any position that is supported by quotation and reasoning; push one-sided answers to address the strongest counterpoint.
2. Which character in this chapter acts most wisely, and which least? Judge them by a standard you name. [DOK 3 · thinkPairShare · wait 8 s · AP-LIT.CHR, AP-LIT.LAN] Look for: An evaluation using an explicit criterion and evidence.
   Answer guidance: A defensible line of argument: Darcy's decision to hide his admiration confirms Elizabeth's prejudice. Useful evidence: “She attracted him more than he liked” (Chapter XII, paragraph 4):

Darcy's resistance to his own feelings. On characterization: Darcy, alarmed by his attraction, decides to show no admiration; he barely speaks to Elizabeth on her last day. Credit any position that is supported by quotation and reasoning; push one-sided answers to address the strongest counterpoint.

3. Rewrite one moment of “Chapter XII” from the point of view of a different character. What does the new angle reveal or hide about departure and relief? [DOK 4 · thinkPairShare · wait 8 s · AP-LIT.LAN, AP-LIT.NAR] Look for: A creative product with a rationale tied to the text.

   Answer guidance: A defensible line of argument: Darcy's decision to hide his admiration confirms Elizabeth's prejudice. Useful evidence: “He wisely resolved to be particularly careful that no sign of admiration should now escape him” (Chapter XII, paragraph 4): "Wisely" is ironic: his caution will deepen her misjudgment. On point of view: The narrator moves into Darcy's mind, a rare view that shows he is fighting his feelings. Credit any position that is supported by quotation and reasoning; push one-sided answers to address the strongest counterpoint.

4. Write three questions of your own about “Chapter XII”: one recall, one “why/how”, and one “should/what if”. Trade with a partner and answer theirs. [DOK 3 · studentGenerated · wait 8 s · AP-LIT.LAN] Look for: Student-generated questions at three levels.

   Answer guidance: A defensible line of argument: Darcy's decision to hide his admiration confirms Elizabeth's prejudice. Useful evidence: “They were not welcomed home very cordially by their mother” (Chapter XII, paragraph 6): Mrs. Bennet is annoyed that her daughters have come back early, before Jane could gain more time with Bingley. Theme link: Darcy's restraint deepens Elizabeth's dislike. Credit any position that is supported by quotation and reasoning; push one-sided answers to address the strongest counterpoint.

5. Connect this chapter to marriage and money: is the link strong or weak so far? What would Austen need to show next to strengthen it? [DOK 4 · socraticCircle · wait 8 s · AP-LIT.LAN] Look for: A judgment of thematic development across the work.

   Answer guidance: A defensible line of argument: Darcy's decision to hide his admiration confirms Elizabeth's prejudice. Useful evidence: “She attracted him more than he liked” (Chapter XII, paragraph 4): Darcy's resistance to his own feelings. Theme link: Darcy's restraint deepens Elizabeth's dislike. Credit any position that is supported by quotation and reasoning; push one-sided answers to address the strongest counterpoint.

6. Is the characterization in this chapter effective, or does it feel heavy-handed? Evaluate it as a reader would in a review. [DOK 3 · fourCorners · wait 8 s · AP-LIT.CHR, AP-LIT.LAN] Look for: An evaluative judgment with criteria and evidence.

   Answer guidance: A defensible line of argument: Darcy's decision to hide his admiration confirms Elizabeth's prejudice. Useful evidence: “He wisely resolved to be particularly careful that no sign of admiration should now escape him” (Chapter XII, paragraph 4): "Wisely" is ironic: his caution will deepen her misjudgment. On characterization: Darcy, alarmed by his attraction, decides to show no admiration; he barely speaks to Elizabeth on her last day. Credit any position that is supported by quotation and reasoning; push one-sided answers to address the strongest counterpoint.

7. Compare how “Chapter XII” treats departure and relief with how another text, film or event you know treats a similar idea. What does Pride and Prejudice see that the other misses? [DOK 4 · socraticCircle · wait 8 s · AP-LIT.LAN] Look for: A cross-text synthesis.

   Answer guidance: A defensible line of argument: Darcy's decision to hide his admiration confirms Elizabeth's prejudice. Useful evidence: “They were not welcomed home very cordially by their mother”

(Chapter XII, paragraph 6): Mrs. Bennet is annoyed that her daughters have come back early, before Jane could gain more time with Bingley. Theme link: Darcy's restraint deepens Elizabeth's dislike. Credit any position that is supported by quotation and reasoning; push one-sided answers to address the strongest counterpoint.

8. Predict what "Chapter XIII" will bring, using two clues from this chapter. After reading, evaluate your prediction. [DOK 3 · thinkPairShare · wait 8 s · AP-LIT.LAN, AP-LIT.STR] Look for: A prediction or judgment justified with textual clues.

   Answer guidance: A defensible line of argument: Darcy's decision to hide his admiration confirms Elizabeth's prejudice. Useful evidence: "She attracted him more than he liked" (Chapter XII, paragraph 4): Darcy's resistance to his own feelings. Theme link: Darcy's restraint deepens Elizabeth's dislike. Credit any position that is supported by quotation and reasoning; push one-sided answers to address the strongest counterpoint.

9. Design a one-paragraph modern adaptation of this chapter (setting, characters, conflict). What must stay the same for it to still be about departure and relief? [DOK 4 · thinkPairShare · wait 8 s · AP-LIT.LAN] Look for: A creative transfer that keeps the core idea.

   Answer guidance: A defensible line of argument: Darcy's decision to hide his admiration confirms Elizabeth's prejudice. Useful evidence: "He wisely resolved to be particularly careful that no sign of admiration should now escape him" (Chapter XII, paragraph 4): "Wisely" is ironic: his caution will deepen her misjudgment. Theme link: Darcy's restraint deepens Elizabeth's dislike. Credit any position that is supported by quotation and reasoning; push one-sided answers to address the strongest counterpoint.

10. What question would you most like to ask Jane Austen about this chapter, and what answer do you think the text itself gives? [DOK 4 · studentGenerated · wait 8 s · AP-LIT.LAN] Look for: A student-generated question answered from evidence.

    Answer guidance: A defensible line of argument: Darcy's decision to hide his admiration confirms Elizabeth's prejudice. Useful evidence: "They were not welcomed home very cordially by their mother" (Chapter XII, paragraph 6): Mrs. Bennet is annoyed that her daughters have come back early, before Jane could gain more time with Bingley. Theme link: Darcy's restraint deepens Elizabeth's dislike. Credit any position that is supported by quotation and reasoning; push one-sided answers to address the strongest counterpoint.

Annotation focus

- Characterization: look for what characters say, do and think, and how others react to them (anchor passage in the We do segment)
- Also notice Plot: key events and the causes linking them
- Also notice Tone / mood: word choices that reveal the narrator's attitude or the scene's feeling

Chapter quiz: item bank (all eleven rigor versions)

1. [mc · recall · DOK 1] Which word completes this sentence from Chapter XII, paragraph 4? "To Mr. Darcy it was welcome _____—Elizabeth had been at Netherfield long enough."

   A. affection

   B. liveliest

   C. consequence

D. intelligence

Key: D (intelligence)

2. [fill · recall · DOK 1] Complete the quotation from Chapter XII, paragraph 4: “She _____ him more than he liked”

   Key: attracted

3. [mc · recall · DOK 1] Who is glad to see them home?

   A. Lydia

   B. Miss Bingley

   C. Mrs. Hurst

   D. Mr. Bennet

   Key: D (Mr. Bennet)

4. [fill · recall · DOK 1] Fill in the blank with the vocabulary word that fits: “Bennet sent them word that they could not possibly have the carriage before Tuesday; and in her _____ it was added, that if Mr.” Word bank: welcomed, needlessly, intruding, postscript

   Key: postscript

5. [mc · recall · DOK 1] What does Darcy fear?

   A. Losing his estate

   B. Bingley's anger

   C. His growing attraction

   D. Illness

   Key: C (His growing attraction)

6. [mc · recall · DOK 1] Where do Jane and Elizabeth return?

   A. Meryton inn

   B. Longbourn

   C. Hunsford

   D. London

   Key: B (Longbourn)

7. [fill · recall · DOK 1] Complete the quotation from Chapter XII, paragraph 1: “In _____ of an agreement between the sisters, Elizabeth wrote the next morning to her mother, to beg that the carriage might be sent for them in the course of the day.” Word bank: intelligence, preceding, consequence, affection

   Key: consequence

8. [mc · recall · DOK 1] What does Darcy decide?

   A. To propose

   B. To leave England

   C. To dance with her

   D. To show Elizabeth no further attention

   Key: D (To show Elizabeth no further attention)

9. [fill · recall · DOK 1] Complete the quotation from Chapter XII, paragraph 6: “But their father, though very laconic in his _____ of pleasure, was really glad to see them; he had felt their importance in the family circle." Word bank: intelligence, consequence, expressions, separation

Key: expressions

10. [fill · recall · DOK 1] Fill in the blank with the vocabulary word that fits: "Against staying longer, however, Elizabeth was positively resolved—nor did she much expect it would be asked; and fearful, on the contrary, as being considered as intruding themselves _____ long, she urged Jane to borrow Mr." Word bank: intruding, needlessly, welcomed, postscript

    Key: needlessly

11. [short · inference · DOK 2] What can you infer from this line? "She attracted him more than he liked" (Chapter XII, paragraph 4) Answer in two or three sentences with one detail.

    Sample answer: Darcy's resistance to his own feelings. The evidence is "She attracted him more than he liked" (Chapter XII, paragraph 4). This develops first impressions: Darcy's restraint deepens Elizabeth's dislike.

12. [mc · inference · DOK 2] Which of these passages comes earliest in Chapter XII?

    A. "The communication excited many professions of concern; and enough was said of wishing them to stay at least till the following day to work…"

    B. "Her answer, therefore, was not propitious, at least not to Elizabeth's wishes, for she was impatient to get home."

    C. "But Mrs. Bennet, who had calculated on her daughters remaining at Netherfield till the following Tuesday, which would exactly finish Jane's…"

    D. "In consequence of an agreement between the sisters, Elizabeth wrote the next morning to her mother, to beg that the carriage might be sent…"

    Key: D ("In consequence of an agreement between the sisters, Elizabeth wrote the next morning to her mother, to beg that the carriage might be sent…")

13. [mc · inference · DOK 2] Which choice best states a central concern of "Chapter XII"?

    A. Character flaws examined

    B. The hidden benefactor

    C. Departure and relief

    D. Family dynamics and anticipation

    Key: C (Departure and relief)

14. [short · analysis · DOK 3] Analyze how the word choice in this passage from Chapter XII, paragraph 2 shapes its tone: "The communication excited many professions of concern; and enough was said of wishing them to stay at least till the following day to work on Jane; and till the morrow, their going was deferred." Pick two words and explain their effect.

    Sample answer: The words "communication" and "professions" (Chapter XII, paragraph 2) make the tone heavy and deliberate rather than neutral. That weight points the reader to pride and self-knowledge: Darcy's restraint deepens Elizabeth's dislike. The author chooses them so the moment feels significant instead of passing.

15. [mc · analysis · DOK 3] Which literary element does this describe in "Chapter XII"? The narrator moves into Darcy's mind, a rare view that shows he is fighting his feelings.

    A. Foreshadowing

    B. Point of view

    C. Plot

    D. Diction / vocabulary

Key: B (Point of view)

16. [short · synthesis · DOK 4] Connect this passage from Chapter XII, paragraph 5 to the story's treatment of women's limited choices: “Miss Bingley’s civility to Elizabeth increased at last very rapidly, as well as her affection for Jane” Use one other moment from the story as well.
    Sample answer: This passage (Chapter XII, paragraph 5) develops women's limited choices: Darcy's restraint deepens Elizabeth's dislike. Its words “affection” and “increased” carry that idea into this moment. The same concern returns in “Mrs. Bennet wondered at their coming, and thought them very wrong to give so much trouble, and was sure Jane would have…” (Chapter XII, paragraph 6), so the two passages read as a pattern, not a single moment. Together they show the story treating women's limited choices as central.
17. [fill · recall · DOK 1] Complete the quotation from Chapter XII, paragraph 4: “He wisely resolved to be _____ careful that no sign of admiration should now escape him”
    Key: particularly
18. [mc · recall · DOK 1] How does Mrs. Bennet feel about their early return?
    A. Thrilled
    B. Indifferent
    C. Displeased
    D. Relieved

    Key: C (Displeased)
19. [mc · analysis · DOK 3] Which literary element does this describe in “Chapter XII”? Darcy, alarmed by his attraction, decides to show no admiration; he barely speaks to Elizabeth on her last day.
    A. Characterization
    B. Allusion
    C. Irony
    D. Simile

    Key: A (Characterization)
20. [short · synthesis · DOK 4] Close reading: how do the diction and syntax of “She attracted him more than he liked” (Chapter XII, paragraph 4) shape its meaning? Consider a second, competing reading.
    Sample answer: Darcy's resistance to his own feelings. The evidence is “She attracted him more than he liked” (Chapter XII, paragraph 4). This develops first impressions: Darcy's restraint deepens Elizabeth's dislike. The words “attracted” and “liked” carry that meaning: they are the charged choices in the line, and changing either would soften the effect. Because "she attracted him more than he liked," he resolves that "no sign of admiration should now escape him," so his behaviour gives her more reason to think he dislikes her.
21. [short · synthesis · DOK 4] Connect this passage from Chapter XII, paragraph 7 to the story's treatment of marriage and money: “Catherine and Lydia had information for them of a different sort.” Use one other moment from the story as well.
    Sample answer: This passage (Chapter XII, paragraph 7) develops marriage and money: Darcy's restraint deepens Elizabeth's dislike. Its words “information” and “different” carry that idea into this moment. The same concern returns in “But Mrs. Bennet, who had calculated on her daughters remaining at Netherfield till the following Tuesday, which would…” (Chapter XII, paragraph 1), so the two passages read as a pattern, not a single moment. Together they show the story treating marriage and money as central.
22. [short · analysis · DOK 3 · AP: AP-LIT.LAN] Claim: Darcy's decision to hide his admiration confirms Elizabeth's prejudice. Explain how this evidence supports the claim: “He wisely resolved to be particularly careful that no sign of admiration should now escape him” (Chapter XII, paragraph 4).

Sample answer: Because "she attracted him more than he liked," he resolves that "no sign of admiration should now escape him," so his behaviour gives her more reason to think he dislikes her. The evidence is “He wisely resolved to be particularly careful that no sign of admiration should now escape him” (Chapter XII, paragraph 4) — "Wisely" is ironic: his caution will deepen her misjudgment. This develops first impressions: Darcy's restraint deepens Elizabeth's dislike.

23. [short · synthesis · DOK 4 · AP: AP-LIT.LAN] Synthesis: trace how first impressions develops from Chapter III to Chapter XII. Use one quotation from each.

    Sample answer: Earlier, in Chapter III, paragraph 13, the text reads “She is tolerable; but not handsome enough to tempt me” — Darcy's insult; the source of Elizabeth's prejudice. In Chapter XII, “She attracted him more than he liked” (Chapter XII, paragraph 4) — Darcy's resistance to his own feelings. Darcy's restraint deepens Elizabeth's dislike.

24. [fill · recall · DOK 1 · AP: AP-LIT.STR] Complete the quotation from Chapter XII, paragraph 6: “They were not welcomed home very _____ by their mother”

    Key: cordially

25. [mc · inference · DOK 2 · AP: AP-LIT.LAN] What does this passage most clearly show? “They were not welcomed home very cordially by their mother” (Chapter XII, paragraph 6)

    A. Mrs. Bennet is annoyed that her daughters have come back early, before Jane could gain more time with Bingley.

    B. Wickham's interest shifts to an heiress, Miss King.

    C. Comic speed: marriage as a choice among interchangeable daughters.

    D. The narrator's list of five adjectives.

    Key: A (Mrs. Bennet is annoyed that her daughters have come back early, before Jane could gain more time with Bingley.)

26. [mc · inference · DOK 2 · AP: AP-LIT.LAN] What does this passage most clearly show? “She attracted him more than he liked” (Chapter XII, paragraph 4)

    A. Darcy's resistance to his own feelings.

    B. Elizabeth's judgment of Collins from his style: here her quick judgment is right.

    C. Mrs. Gardiner's hint about love.

    D. Elizabeth tells Jane that Miss Bingley sees Bingley's love for Jane and means to separate them.

    Key: A (Darcy's resistance to his own feelings.)

27. [short · inference · DOK 2 · Dual Credit (Indiana College Core): ICC-WC-1.5] What can you infer from this line? “He wisely resolved to be particularly careful that no sign of admiration should now escape him” (Chapter XII, paragraph 4) Answer in two or three sentences with one detail.

    Sample answer: "Wisely" is ironic: his caution will deepen her misjudgment. The evidence is “He wisely resolved to be particularly careful that no sign of admiration should now escape him” (Chapter XII, paragraph 4).

28. [short · synthesis · DOK 4 · Program outcome: LeL-C3-LIT-1] Close reading: how do the diction and syntax of “He wisely resolved to be particularly careful that no sign of admiration should now escape him” (Chapter XII, paragraph 4) shape its meaning? Consider a second, competing reading.

    Sample answer: "Wisely" is ironic: his caution will deepen her misjudgment. The evidence is “He wisely resolved to be particularly careful that no sign of admiration should now escape him” (Chapter XII, paragraph 4). This develops first impressions: Darcy's restraint deepens Elizabeth's dislike. The words “particularly” and “admiration” carry that meaning: they are the charged choices in the line, and changing either would soften the effect. Because "she attracted him more than he liked," he resolves that "no sign of admiration should now escape him," so his behaviour gives her more reason to think he dislikes her.

29. [mc · recall · DOK 1 · Program outcome: LeL-GR-LIT-1] In the line “Against staying longer, however, Elizabeth was positively resolved—nor did she much expect it would be asked; and fearful, on the contrary, as being considered as intruding themselves needlessly long, she urged Jane to…”, what does “needlessly” most nearly mean?

    A. coming in where one is not wanted

    B. a note added at the end of a letter

    C. without good reason

    D. greeted (someone) warmly on arrival

    Key: C (without good reason)

30. [short · analysis · DOK 3 · Program outcome: LeL-GR-LIT-1] Analyze the word choice in “They were not welcomed home very cordially by their mother” (Chapter XII, paragraph 6). Pick two words and explain what they suggest.

    Sample answer: Mrs. Bennet is annoyed that her daughters have come back early, before Jane could gain more time with Bingley. The evidence is “They were not welcomed home very cordially by their mother” (Chapter XII, paragraph 6). This develops first impressions: Darcy's restraint deepens Elizabeth's dislike. The words “cordially” and “welcomed” carry that meaning: they are the charged choices in the line, and changing either would soften the effect.

Rigor version	Items (in order)	Mix
Scaffolded support	1, 2, 3, 4, 5, 6, 7, 8, 9, 10, 11, 12, 13, 14, 15, 16	recall 10, inference 3, analysis 2, synthesis 1
HS Freshman	17, 10, 8, 18, 4, 2, 5, 7, 1, 9, 12, 13, 15, 14, 19, 20	recall 10, inference 2, analysis 3, synthesis 1
HS Sophomore	4, 3, 7, 10, 6, 17, 9, 18, 11, 12, 13, 14, 19, 15, 16, 21	recall 8, inference 3, analysis 3, synthesis 2
HS Junior	1, 5, 18, 6, 2, 9, 10, 12, 13, 11, 15, 14, 22, 19, 23, 21	recall 7, inference 3, analysis 4, synthesis 2
HS Senior	24, 17, 10, 18, 8, 3, 2, 9, 13, 12, 19, 14, 15, 16, 23, 20	recall 8, inference 2, analysis 3, synthesis 3
AP	5, 4, 3, 18, 17, 8, 12, 13, 25, 26, 15, 19, 14, 16, 23, 21	recall 6, inference 4, analysis 3, synthesis 3
College Freshman	10, 4, 8, 3, 1, 13, 12, 26, 27, 25, 14, 19, 15, 23, 21, 16	recall 5, inference 5, analysis 3, synthesis 3
College Sophomore	10, 6, 9, 2, 8, 12, 13, 11, 25, 14, 19, 15, 22, 23, 16, 21	recall 5, inference 4, analysis 4, synthesis 3
College Junior	2, 7, 3, 8, 6, 18, 13, 12, 15, 19, 14, 28, 21, 23, 16, 20	recall 6, inference 2, analysis 3, synthesis 5
College Senior	3, 18, 10, 7, 2, 9, 13, 12, 11, 22, 19, 15, 14, 16, 23, 21	recall 6, inference 3, analysis 4, synthesis 3
Graduate / PhD	2, 8, 3, 18, 29, 9, 13, 12, 19, 30, 14, 15, 21, 20, 16, 23	recall 6, inference 2, analysis 4, synthesis 4

Writing prompts (eleven rigor levels)

Scaffolded support (250 words; AP: see unit standards): Supported track (work from the passage your teacher selects). In “Chapter XII,” how does Austen show departure and relief? Write a paragraph that states your claim, quotes two details from the passage, and explains how each detail supports your idea. Use the characterization you noticed as one piece of evidence.

HS Freshman (350 words; AP: see unit standards): In Chapter XII, how does Austen develop the idea of departure and relief? State a clear claim, support it with two or three quotations, and explain how the characterization in the chapter helps build that idea.

HS Sophomore (450 words; AP: see unit standards): Analyze how Chapter XII develops the idea of departure and relief. Make a precise claim, support it with at least three pieces of textual evidence, and explain how the author's use of characterization and plot shapes that idea. Address one possible counterclaim.

HS Junior (550 words; AP: see unit standards): Analyze how the structure of Chapter XII (where it begins, turns and ends) and its characterization shape the reader's understanding of departure and relief. Identify one place where the text leaves matters uncertain and explain how that uncertainty adds to its meaning.

HS Senior (600 words; AP: see unit standards): Two readers disagree about what Chapter XII suggests about departure and relief. Lay out two plausible interpretations, weigh the evidence for each (including the chapter's characterization and plot), and argue for the stronger one in a sustained, well-organized essay.

AP (650 words; AP: AP-LIT.CHR, AP-LIT.LAN): Write a literary argument in which you analyze how Jane Austen uses characterization in Chapter XII to complicate the reader's understanding of departure and relief. Develop a defensible thesis, select evidence purposefully, and explain how specific choices of diction and syntax create meaning.

College Freshman (1000 words; AP: see unit standards): Situate Chapter XII within its historical and literary context and argue how the chapter's treatment of departure and relief responds to that context. Engage with at least one secondary perspective (a critic, historian or the author's own statements), integrate quotations smoothly, and cite in MLA style.

College Sophomore (1250 words; AP: see unit standards): Read Chapter XII alongside the conventions of its genre and period. Argue how the chapter's handling of departure and relief follows or bends those conventions, using the characterization as evidence, and test your reading against one published critic. Document two secondary sources in MLA.

College Junior (1500 words; AP: see unit standards): Apply a named critical approach (for example formalist, historicist, feminist, psychoanalytic or ecocritical) to Chapter XII and its treatment of departure and relief. State your method, show what it reveals in the chapter's characterization and plot, and identify where the text resists it.

College Senior (2000 words; AP: see unit standards): Develop a research argument that reads Chapter XII as evidence for a larger claim about departure and relief in Pride and Prejudice. Connect close reading of the chapter to the whole novel, engage at least four scholarly sources, and state precisely where your reading departs from theirs (Chicago style).

Graduate / PhD (2500 words; AP: see unit standards): Develop an original argument that reads Chapter XII as a hinge in the novel's larger treatment of departure and relief. Position your reading within a named critical conversation (for example formalist, historicist, psychoanalytic, feminist or postcolonial approaches), account for the textual history where relevant, and articulate the stakes of your intervention for scholarship on Pride and Prejudice.

SAT-style questions

1. Against staying longer, however, Elizabeth was positively resolved—nor did she much expect it would be asked; and fearful, on the contrary, as being considered as intruding themselves needlessly long, she urged Jane to borrow Mr.

   As used in the text, what does the word "needlessly" most nearly mean?

   A. a note added at the end of a letter
   B. greeted (someone) warmly on arrival
   C. without good reason
   D. coming in where one is not wanted

2. They were not welcomed home very cordially by their mother. Mrs. Bennet wondered at their coming, and thought them very wrong to give so much trouble, and was sure Jane would have caught cold again. But their father, though very laconic in his expressions of pleasure, was really glad to see them; he had felt their importance in the family circle. The evening conversation, when they were all assembled, had lost much of its animation, and almost all its sense, by the absence of Jane and Elizabeth.

   Which choice best states a central concern of "Chapter XII"?

   A. A disastrous ball
   B. Cold reception
   C. Departure and relief
   D. Scandal

SAT key: 1. C (without good reason); 2. C (Departure and relief)

Lesson 14: Chapter XIII

Focus: an absurd cousin's letter

Objective: Students will analyze how characterization develops in “Chapter XIII” by writing a claim-evidence-reasoning paragraph that cites at least 2 quotations from the section, and will score at least 80% on the section quiz.

Standards: AP: see the unit standards

Critical voice: “A Mr. Collins, too, a formal, conceited, yet servile young sprig of divinity, is drawn with the same force and precision.” (Walter Scott (attrib.; the review is unsigned), novelist, Review of Emma (with remarks on Pride and Prejudice), The Quarterly Review (dated October 1815; pub. 1816), reprinted in Famous Reviews, ed. R. Brimley Johnson (1914), section on Pride and Prejudice; public domain). Annotation task: find one "formal," one "conceited" and one "servile" phrase in Collins's letter. Objective: Analyze Mr. Collins's letter as satire of pomposity and servility. Standards: AP: see the unit standards

Teacher only · spoilers

Mr. Bennet reads a letter from Mr. Collins, the clergyman cousin who will inherit Longbourn. Collins arrives, pompous and obsequious, praising his patroness Lady Catherine de Bourgh.

Background: Clergymen often depended on wealthy patrons for their livings.

Significance: Collins is a comic masterpiece who satirizes both sycophancy and the church's dependence on rank.

Lesson plan and lecture script (90 minutes)

0–8 min · Bell-ringer · You do (8 min)
Students write to the bell-ringer, then pair-share.
What words would you use for Collins's letter, and why? Write for five minutes. Starters: I think... because... / This connects to marriage and money because....
Prompt: What words would you use for Collins's letter, and why?
Sentence starters: I think… because… · This connects to marriage and money because…
Strong response: A strong response takes a position and anticipates this: the entail now has a face; Collins intends to marry one of the daughters to soften it.

8–18 min · Vocabulary with etymology notes · I do (10 min)
Five key words in context, with verified word histories.
Today's words: inheriting — receiving property after someone's death; asperity — harshness of tone or manner; complimented — praised; atonement — compensation for a wrong; injuring — harming; wronging (here, financially). “atonement”: Origin: possibly an English formation from atone + -ment.
Words: inheriting: receiving property after someone's death · asperity: harshness of tone or manner · complimented: praised · atonement: compensation for a wrong · injuring: harming; wronging (here, financially)

18–28 min · Background and context · I do (10 min)
Mini-lecture (read or adapt the script).
Clergymen often depended on wealthy patrons for their livings. Collins is a comic masterpiece who satirizes both sycophancy and the church's dependence on rank. Characterization: Mr. Collins is introduced through his letter: pompous, self-important, obsequious toward Lady Catherine, and offering to "make amends" to the daughters he will dispossess. Irony: Mr. Bennet reads the letter for the amusement of its absurdity; Elizabeth asks whether the writer can be "a sensible man." Watch for rank and condescension: Rank is displayed and enforced, above all at Rosings by Lady Catherine; Elizabeth refuses to be cowed. In this chapter: "earnest endeavour to demean myself with grateful respect towards her Ladyship, and be ever ready to perform those rites and ceremonies which" (Chapter XIII, paragraph 13).

28–40 min · I do: modeled close reading · I do (12 min)
Model the close reading of the anchor quotation using the written think-aloud below.
First, meaning. I read "that you have ordered a good dinner today, because I have reason to expect an addition to our family party" slowly and put it in my own words: Mr. Bennet tells his wife at breakfast to order a good dinner because he expects a guest. Next, craft. I notice his playful mystery, making her guess who is coming. The strongest word is "addition": it is vague, which builds suspense. Then, effect. What is Mr. Bennet teasing his wife about? My answer: Mr. Bennet is teasing his wife about a mystery guest for dinner, enjoying her curiosity; the guest turns out to be Mr. Collins, the heir of the entail.

> that you have ordered a good dinner today, because I have reason to expect an addition to our family party
> (Chapter XIII, paragraph 1)

Think-aloud: First, meaning. I read "that you have ordered a good dinner today, because I have reason to expect an addition to our family party" slowly and put it in my own words: Mr. Bennet tells his wife at breakfast to order a good dinner because he expects a guest. Next, craft. I notice his playful mystery, making her guess who is coming. The strongest word is "addition": it is vague, which builds suspense. Then, effect. What is Mr. Bennet teasing his wife about? My answer: Mr. Bennet is teasing his wife about a mystery guest for dinner, enjoying her curiosity; the guest turns out to be Mr. Collins, the heir of the entail.

40–55 min · We do: guided annotation · We do (15 min)
Guided analysis of a second quotation; expected answers given.
Ask: What words in this line stand out, and what do they suggest? Expected: "Servility" (bowing to superiors) and "self-importance" contradict each other, which is what makes him comic. Elizabeth's first impression here is correct, a useful contrast with Darcy. Ask: How does this line connect to marriage and money? Expected: The entail now has a face; Collins intends to marry one of the daughters to soften it. (Mr. Bennet's ironic "promises well": he expects entertainment.)

> There is a mixture of servility and self-importance in his letter, which promises well (Chapter XIII, paragraph 20)

Ask: What words in this line stand out, and what do they suggest?
Expected answer: "Servility" (bowing to superiors) and "self-importance" contradict each other, which is what makes him comic. Elizabeth's first impression here is correct, a useful contrast with Darcy.
Ask: How does this line connect to marriage and money?
Expected answer: The entail now has a face; Collins intends to marry one of the daughters to soften it. (Mr. Bennet's ironic "promises well": he expects entertainment.)

55–70 min · You do: independent annotation · You do (15 min)
Independent annotation and a claim-evidence-reasoning paragraph (exemplar given).
Annotate the chapter for characterization, irony (three marks with a margin note each), then write one claim-evidence-reasoning paragraph: what does this chapter suggest about an absurd cousin's letter? Then start your writing prompt at your assigned level (HS Sophomore: Analyze how Chapter XIII develops the idea of an absurd cousin's letter. Make a precise claim, support it with at least three pieces of textual evidence, and explain how the author's use of characterization and irony shapes that idea. Address one possible counterclaim.) Exemplar: Collins's letter reveals his character before he appears, and Elizabeth reads it accurately. When the text says “There is a mixture of servility and self-importance in his letter, which promises well” (Chapter XIII, paragraph 20), it shows this directly. Mr. Bennet notes its "mixture of servility and self-importance," and Elizabeth asks "Can he be a sensible man?"; style exposes the man.
Task: Annotate the chapter for characterization, irony (three marks with a margin note each), then write one claim-evidence-reasoning paragraph: what does this chapter suggest about an absurd cousin's letter? Then start your writing prompt at your assigned level (HS Sophomore: Analyze how Chapter XIII develops the idea of an absurd cousin's letter. Make a precise claim, support it with at least three pieces of textual evidence, and explain how the author's use of characterization and irony shapes that idea. Address one possible counterclaim.)
Exemplar: Collins's letter reveals his character before he appears, and Elizabeth reads it accurately. When the text says “There is a mixture of servility and self-importance in his letter, which promises well” (Chapter XIII, paragraph 20), it shows this directly. Mr. Bennet notes its "mixture of servility and self-importance," and Elizabeth asks "Can he be a sensible man?"; style exposes the man.

70–80 min · Discussion · We do (10 min)
Structured discussion from the 30 tiered questions, with facilitation notes.
Anchor question: What words would you use for Collins's letter, and why? Ask: when are Elizabeth's first impressions right, and when are they wrong? What is different?
Anchor question: What words would you use for Collins's letter, and why?
Facilitation: Ask: when are Elizabeth's first impressions right, and when are they wrong? What is different?

80–87 min · Exit ticket / chapter quiz · You do (7 min)
Chapter quiz in the app and an exit ticket (answer given).
Chapter quiz in the app, then: In one sentence, what does this chapter suggest about an absurd cousin's letter? Support it with one short quotation. Model answer: Collins's letter reveals his character before he appears, and Elizabeth reads it accurately. (“There is a mixture of servility and self-importance in his letter, which promises well”, Chapter XIII, paragraph 20). Accept any defensible claim backed by a quotation from the chapter; the answer key for the quiz is in the Quiz section.
Exit ticket: In one sentence, what does this chapter suggest about an absurd cousin's letter? Support it with one short quotation.
Answer: Model answer: Collins's letter reveals his character before he appears, and Elizabeth reads it accurately. (“There is a mixture of servility and self-importance in his letter, which promises well”, Chapter XIII, paragraph 20). Accept any defensible claim backed by a quotation from the chapter; the answer key for the quiz is in the Quiz section.

87–90 min · Closure · I do (3 min)
Summarize the lesson and preview the next reading.
Today we saw how characterization shapes an absurd cousin's letter. Key takeaway: the entail now has a face; Collins intends to marry one of the daughters to soften it.

Total: 90 minutes.

Teacher analysis (spoilers)

Literary elements

- Characterization: Mr. Collins is introduced through his letter: pompous, self-important, obsequious toward Lady Catherine, and offering to "make amends" to the daughters he will dispossess.
- Irony: Mr. Bennet reads the letter for the amusement of its absurdity; Elizabeth asks whether the writer can be "a sensible man."

Themes and how they develop

- marriage and money: the entail now has a face; Collins intends to marry one of the daughters to soften it.

Symbols and motifs

- rank and condescension: Rank is displayed and enforced, above all at Rosings by Lady Catherine; Elizabeth refuses to be cowed. In this chapter: “earnest endeavour to demean myself with grateful respect towards her Ladyship, and be ever ready to perform those rites and ceremonies which” (Chapter XIII, paragraph 13).
- silence and reserve: What characters leave unsaid (Darcy's reserve, Jane's composure, Elizabeth's secrets) drives misunderstanding. In this chapter: “seemed neither in need of encouragement, nor inclined to be silent himself. He was a tall, heavy looking young man of five” (Chapter XIII, paragraph 23).

Key quotations (checked against the reading text)

- “that you have ordered a good dinner today, because I have reason to expect an addition to our family party” (Chapter XIII, paragraph 1) Mr. Bennet's teasing opening announces a visitor.
- “Can he be a sensible man, sir” (Chapter XIII, paragraph 19) Elizabeth's judgment of Collins from his style: here her quick judgment is right.
- “There is a mixture of servility and self-importance in his letter, which promises well” (Chapter XIII, paragraph 20) Mr. Bennet's ironic "promises well": he expects entertainment.

Model claim-evidence-reasoning

Claim: Collins's letter reveals his character before he appears, and Elizabeth reads it accurately.
Evidence: “There is a mixture of servility and self-importance in his letter, which promises well” (Chapter XIII, paragraph 20)
Reasoning: Mr. Bennet notes its "mixture of servility and self-importance," and Elizabeth asks "Can he be a sensible man?"; style exposes the man.

Vocabulary with etymology notes

Word	Definition (in this sentence)	In context	Word history
inheriting (verb)	receiving property after someone's death	Collins from the guilt of inheriting Longbourn.
asperity (noun)	harshness of tone or manner	Bennet, who assured him with some asperity that they were very well able to keep a good cook, and that her daughters had nothing to do in the kitchen.
complimented (verb)	praised	He had not been long seated before he complimented Mrs.
atonement (noun)	compensation for a wrong	“Though it is difficult,” said Jane, “to guess in what way he can mean to	“atonement”: Origin: possibly an English formation from atone + -ment. (Liber et Libri origin note,

		make us the atonement he thinks our due, the wish is certainly to his credit."	https://en.wiktionary.org/wiki/atonement#Etymology)
injuring (verb)	harming; wronging (here, financially)	I cannot be otherwise than concerned at being the means of injuring your amiable daughters, and beg leave to apologise for it, as well as to assure you of my readiness to make them every possible amends—but of this hereafter.
cookery (noun)	the act of preparing something (as food) by the application of heat	The dinner too in its turn was highly admired; and he begged to know to which of his fair cousins, the excellence of its cookery was owing.	"cookery": Origin: an English formation from cook + -ery. (Liber et Libri origin note, https://en.wiktionary.org/wiki/cookery#Etymology)
defective (adjective)	having a defect	"In point of composition," said Mary, "his letter does not seem defective.	"defective": Origin: Old French defectif; earlier Late Latin dēfectīvus. (Liber et Libri origin note, https://en.wiktionary.org/wiki/defective#Etymology)
punctual (adjective)	acting or arriving or performed exactly at the time appointed	Collins was punctual to his time, and was received with great politeness by the whole family.
cousins (noun)	the child of your aunt or uncle	"I am very sensible, madam, of the hardship to my fair cousins—and could say much on the subject, but that I am cautious of appearing forward and precipitate.
readiness (noun)	willingness	I cannot be otherwise than concerned at being the means of injuring your amiable daughters, and beg leave to apologise for it, as well as to assure you of my readiness to make them every possible amends—but of this hereafter.

Discussion questions

1. What words would you use for Collins's letter, and why?
2. Where does characterization appear in this chapter, and what effect does it have? Point to one passage.
3. How does this chapter connect to the book's larger concern with marriage and money?

Classroom discussion questions (30, tiered)

Wait time after every question (3 s for DOK 1, 5 s for DOK 2, 8 to 10 s for DOK 3 and 4); think-pair-share on DOK 3 and 4; answer each response with a follow-up probe; close with student-generated questions. Focus sets by rigor level: Scaffolded support: 1, 2, 3, 4, 5, 6, 11, 12, 13, 14, 21, 22; HS Freshman: 1, 2, 3, 4, 5, 12, 13, 14, 15, 22, 23, 24; HS Sophomore: 1, 2, 3, 4, 13, 14, 15, 16, 17, 23, 24, 25; HS Junior: 1, 2, 3, 14, 15, 16, 17, 18, 24, 25, 26, 27; HS Senior: 1, 2, 3, 15, 16, 17, 18, 25, 26, 27, 28, 29; AP: 1, 2, 16, 17, 18, 19, 20, 26, 27, 28, 29, 30; College Freshman: 1, 2, 17, 18, 19, 20, 21, 22, 27, 28, 29, 30; College Sophomore: 1, 2, 11, 18, 19, 20, 21, 22, 23, 28, 29, 30; College Junior: 1, 11, 12, 19, 20, 21, 22, 23, 24, 25, 29, 30; College Senior: 1, 11, 12, 13, 20, 21, 22, 23, 24, 25, 26, 30; Graduate / PhD: 1, 11, 12, 13, 21, 22, 23, 24, 25, 26, 27, 28

Literal / recall

1. Who will inherit Longbourn? [DOK 1 · coldCallWithSupport · wait 3 s · AP: unit standards] Look for: Mr. Collins
2. What is Collins's profession? [DOK 1 · turnAndTalk · wait 3 s · AP: unit standards] Look for: Clergyman
3. Who is Collins's patroness? [DOK 1 · coldCallWithSupport · wait 3 s · AP: unit standards] Look for: Lady Catherine de Bourgh
4. How does Mr. Bennet view the letter? [DOK 1 · turnAndTalk · wait 3 s · AP: unit standards] Look for: With amusement
5. What tone does Austen use for Collins? [DOK 1 · coldCallWithSupport · wait 3 s · AP: unit standards] Look for: Satirical
6. Retell the three most important events of “Chapter XIII” in order, in one sentence each. [DOK 1 · turnAndTalk · wait 3 s · AP: unit standards] Look for: Mr. Bennet reads a letter from Mr. Collins, the clergyman cousin who will inherit Longbourn. Collins arrives, pompous and obsequious, praising his patroness Lady Catherine de Bourgh.
7. Which characters appear or are mentioned in “Chapter XIII”? Name two and one thing each says or does. [DOK 1 · coldCallWithSupport · wait 3 s · AP: unit standards] Look for: Names and actions taken from the chapter; check against the teacher summary.
8. Where and when does “Chapter XIII” take place? Point to the line that tells you. [DOK 1 · turnAndTalk · wait 3 s · AP: unit standards] Look for: A place/time detail quoted from the chapter.
9. Reread: “Collins from the guilt of inheriting Longbourn.” What does “inheriting” mean here, and what is literally happening in this line? [DOK 1 · turnAndTalk · wait 3 s · AP: unit standards] Look for: inheriting: receiving property after someone's death.
10. Reread: “Bennet, who assured him with some asperity that they were very well able to keep a good cook, and that her daughters had nothing to do in the kitchen.” What does “asperity” mean here, and what is literally happening in this line? [DOK 1 · turnAndTalk · wait 3 s · AP: unit standards] Look for: asperity: harshness of tone or manner.

Inferential / analytical

1. What does “Chapter XIII” suggest about an absurd cousin's letter? State the inference and the line that supports it. [DOK 2 · thinkPairShare · wait 5 s · AP-LIT.LAN] Look for: Collins is a comic masterpiece who satirizes both sycophancy and the church's dependence on rank.
2. Find one example of characterization in this chapter. What does it reveal that a plain statement would not? [DOK 2 · followUp · wait 5 s · AP-LIT.CHR] Look for: Look for what characters say, do and think, and how others react to them.

3. How does the irony in this chapter shape what we understand about an absurd cousin's letter? [DOK 3 · thinkPairShare · wait 8 s · AP-LIT.NAR] Look for: Look for gaps between what characters expect or say and what is true.
   Answer guidance: A defensible line of argument: Collins's letter reveals his character before he appears, and Elizabeth reads it accurately. Useful evidence: “that you have ordered a good dinner today, because I have reason to expect an addition to our family party” (Chapter XIII, paragraph 1): Mr. Bennet's teasing opening announces a visitor. On irony: Mr. Bennet reads the letter for the amusement of its absurdity; Elizabeth asks whether the writer can be "a sensible man." Credit any position that is supported by quotation and reasoning; push one-sided answers to address the strongest counterpoint.
4. In the passage that begins ““It certainly is a most iniquitous affair,””, why might Austen have chosen these particular words? Pick two and explain their connotations. [DOK 2 · followUp · wait 5 s · AP-LIT.FIG] Look for: Diction analysis of two words in the anchor passage.
5. What causes the main turn in “Chapter XIII”, and what effect is it likely to have on what follows? [DOK 2 · followUp · wait 5 s · AP-LIT.STR] Look for: Mr. Bennet reads a letter from Mr. Collins, the clergyman cousin who will inherit Longbourn. Collins arrives, pompous and obsequious, praising his patroness Lady Catherine de Bourgh.
6. How does “Chapter XIII” build on “Chapter XII”? Name one link of cause and effect. [DOK 3 · thinkPairShare · wait 8 s · AP-LIT.STR] Look for: A causal or structural link between this and the previous chapter.
   Answer guidance: A defensible line of argument: Collins's letter reveals his character before he appears, and Elizabeth reads it accurately. Useful evidence: “Can he be a sensible man, sir” (Chapter XIII, paragraph 19): Elizabeth's judgment of Collins from his style: here her quick judgment is right. Theme link: the entail now has a face; Collins intends to marry one of the daughters to soften it. Credit any position that is supported by quotation and reasoning; push one-sided answers to address the strongest counterpoint.
7. What can we infer about a character's motives from what they say and do here, as opposed to what they claim? [DOK 3 · followUp · wait 8 s · AP-LIT.CHR] Look for: An inference about motive supported by a quoted line.
   Answer guidance: A defensible line of argument: Collins's letter reveals his character before he appears, and Elizabeth reads it accurately. Useful evidence: “There is a mixture of servility and self-importance in his letter, which promises well” (Chapter XIII, paragraph 20): Mr. Bennet's ironic "promises well": he expects entertainment. On characterization: Mr. Collins is introduced through his letter: pompous, self-important, obsequious toward Lady Catherine, and offering to "make amends" to the daughters he will dispossess. Credit any position that is supported by quotation and reasoning; push one-sided answers to address the strongest counterpoint.
8. The bell-ringer asked: “What words would you use for Collins's letter, and why?” Now that we have read closely, how would you revise your first answer, and which line changed your mind? [DOK 2 · thinkPairShare · wait 5 s · AP-LIT.LAN] Look for: A revised answer anchored in the text.
9. Where does tone / mood appear, and how does it connect this chapter to the larger concern with marriage and money? [DOK 3 · followUp · wait 8 s · AP-LIT.FIG] Look for: Look for word choices that reveal the narrator's attitude or the scene's feeling.
   Answer guidance: A defensible line of argument: Collins's letter reveals his character before he appears, and Elizabeth reads it accurately. Useful evidence: “that you have ordered a good dinner today, because I have reason to expect an addition to our family party” (Chapter XIII, paragraph 1): Mr. Bennet's teasing opening announces a visitor. Theme link: the entail now has a face; Collins intends to marry one of the daughters to soften it. Credit any position that is supported by quotation and reasoning; push one-sided answers to address the strongest counterpoint.

10. Background: Clergymen often depended on wealthy patrons for their livings. How does knowing this change the way you read one moment in the chapter? [DOK 3 · thinkPairShare · wait 8 s · AP-LIT.SET] Look for: A specific moment reread in light of the context.
    Answer guidance: A defensible line of argument: Collins's letter reveals his character before he appears, and Elizabeth reads it accurately. Useful evidence: “Can he be a sensible man, sir” (Chapter XIII, paragraph 19): Elizabeth's judgment of Collins from his style: here her quick judgment is right. Theme link: the entail now has a face; Collins intends to marry one of the daughters to soften it. Credit any position that is supported by quotation and reasoning; push one-sided answers to address the strongest counterpoint.

Evaluative / synthesis / creative

1. A critic might argue: “Collins is a comic masterpiece who satirizes both sycophancy and the church's dependence on rank.” How far do you agree? Take a stand and defend it with two lines from the chapter. [DOK 3 · fourCorners · wait 8 s · AP-LIT.LAN] Look for: A defended position with evidence and one counterpoint.
   Answer guidance: A defensible line of argument: Collins's letter reveals his character before he appears, and Elizabeth reads it accurately. Useful evidence: “There is a mixture of servility and self-importance in his letter, which promises well” (Chapter XIII, paragraph 20): Mr. Bennet's ironic "promises well": he expects entertainment. Theme link: the entail now has a face; Collins intends to marry one of the daughters to soften it. Credit any position that is supported by quotation and reasoning; push one-sided answers to address the strongest counterpoint.
2. Which character in this chapter acts most wisely, and which least? Judge them by a standard you name. [DOK 3 · thinkPairShare · wait 8 s · AP-LIT.CHR, AP-LIT.LAN] Look for: An evaluation using an explicit criterion and evidence.
   Answer guidance: A defensible line of argument: Collins's letter reveals his character before he appears, and Elizabeth reads it accurately. Useful evidence: “that you have ordered a good dinner today, because I have reason to expect an addition to our family party” (Chapter XIII, paragraph 1): Mr. Bennet's teasing opening announces a visitor. On characterization: Mr. Collins is introduced through his letter: pompous, self-important, obsequious toward Lady Catherine, and offering to "make amends" to the daughters he will dispossess. Credit any position that is supported by quotation and reasoning; push one-sided answers to address the strongest counterpoint.
3. Rewrite one moment of “Chapter XIII” from the point of view of a different character. What does the new angle reveal or hide about an absurd cousin's letter? [DOK 4 · thinkPairShare · wait 8 s · AP-LIT.LAN, AP-LIT.NAR] Look for: A creative product with a rationale tied to the text.
   Answer guidance: A defensible line of argument: Collins's letter reveals his character before he appears, and Elizabeth reads it accurately. Useful evidence: “Can he be a sensible man, sir” (Chapter XIII, paragraph 19): Elizabeth's judgment of Collins from his style: here her quick judgment is right. Theme link: the entail now has a face; Collins intends to marry one of the daughters to soften it. Credit any position that is supported by quotation and reasoning; push one-sided answers to address the strongest counterpoint.
4. Write three questions of your own about “Chapter XIII”: one recall, one “why/how”, and one “should/what if”. Trade with a partner and answer theirs. [DOK 3 · studentGenerated · wait 8 s · AP-LIT.LAN] Look for: Student-generated questions at three levels.
   Answer guidance: A defensible line of argument: Collins's letter reveals his character before he appears, and Elizabeth reads it accurately. Useful evidence: “There is a mixture of servility and self-importance in his letter, which promises well” (Chapter XIII, paragraph 20): Mr. Bennet's ironic "promises well": he expects entertainment. Theme link: the entail now has a face; Collins intends to marry one of the daughters to soften it. Credit any position that is supported by quotation and reasoning; push one-sided answers to address the strongest counterpoint.

5. Connect this chapter to class and social mobility: is the link strong or weak so far? What would Austen need to show next to strengthen it? [DOK 4 · socraticCircle · wait 8 s · AP-LIT.LAN] Look for: A judgment of thematic development across the work.

   Answer guidance: A defensible line of argument: Collins's letter reveals his character before he appears, and Elizabeth reads it accurately. Useful evidence: “that you have ordered a good dinner today, because I have reason to expect an addition to our family party” (Chapter XIII, paragraph 1): Mr. Bennet's teasing opening announces a visitor. Theme link: the entail now has a face; Collins intends to marry one of the daughters to soften it. Credit any position that is supported by quotation and reasoning; push one-sided answers to address the strongest counterpoint.

6. Is the characterization in this chapter effective, or does it feel heavy-handed? Evaluate it as a reader would in a review. [DOK 3 · fourCorners · wait 8 s · AP-LIT.CHR, AP-LIT.LAN] Look for: An evaluative judgment with criteria and evidence.

   Answer guidance: A defensible line of argument: Collins's letter reveals his character before he appears, and Elizabeth reads it accurately. Useful evidence: “Can he be a sensible man, sir” (Chapter XIII, paragraph 19): Elizabeth's judgment of Collins from his style: here her quick judgment is right. On characterization: Mr. Collins is introduced through his letter: pompous, self-important, obsequious toward Lady Catherine, and offering to "make amends" to the daughters he will dispossess. Credit any position that is supported by quotation and reasoning; push one-sided answers to address the strongest counterpoint.

7. Compare how “Chapter XIII” treats an absurd cousin's letter with how another text, film or event you know treats a similar idea. What does Pride and Prejudice see that the other misses? [DOK 4 · socraticCircle · wait 8 s · AP-LIT.LAN] Look for: A cross-text synthesis.

   Answer guidance: A defensible line of argument: Collins's letter reveals his character before he appears, and Elizabeth reads it accurately. Useful evidence: “There is a mixture of servility and self-importance in his letter, which promises well” (Chapter XIII, paragraph 20): Mr. Bennet's ironic "promises well": he expects entertainment. Theme link: the entail now has a face; Collins intends to marry one of the daughters to soften it. Credit any position that is supported by quotation and reasoning; push one-sided answers to address the strongest counterpoint.

8. Predict what “Chapter XIV” will bring, using two clues from this chapter. After reading, evaluate your prediction. [DOK 3 · thinkPairShare · wait 8 s · AP-LIT.LAN, AP-LIT.STR] Look for: A prediction or judgment justified with textual clues.

   Answer guidance: A defensible line of argument: Collins's letter reveals his character before he appears, and Elizabeth reads it accurately. Useful evidence: “that you have ordered a good dinner today, because I have reason to expect an addition to our family party” (Chapter XIII, paragraph 1): Mr. Bennet's teasing opening announces a visitor. Theme link: the entail now has a face; Collins intends to marry one of the daughters to soften it. Credit any position that is supported by quotation and reasoning; push one-sided answers to address the strongest counterpoint.

9. Design a one-paragraph modern adaptation of this chapter (setting, characters, conflict). What must stay the same for it to still be about an absurd cousin's letter? [DOK 4 · thinkPairShare · wait 8 s · AP-LIT.LAN] Look for: A creative transfer that keeps the core idea.

   Answer guidance: A defensible line of argument: Collins's letter reveals his character before he appears, and Elizabeth reads it accurately. Useful evidence: “Can he be a sensible man, sir” (Chapter XIII, paragraph 19): Elizabeth's judgment of Collins from his style: here her quick judgment is right. Theme link: the entail now has a face; Collins intends to marry one of the daughters to soften it. Credit any position that is supported by quotation and reasoning; push one-sided answers to address the strongest counterpoint.

10. What question would you most like to ask Jane Austen about this chapter, and what answer do you think the text itself gives? [DOK 4 · studentGenerated · wait 8 s · AP-LIT.LAN] Look for: A student-generated question answered from evidence.

    Answer guidance: A defensible line of argument: Collins's letter reveals his character before he appears, and Elizabeth reads it accurately. Useful evidence: “There is a mixture of servility and self-importance in his letter, which promises well” (Chapter XIII, paragraph 20): Mr. Bennet's ironic "promises well": he expects entertainment. Theme link: the entail now has a face; Collins intends to marry one of the daughters to soften it. Credit any position that is supported by quotation and reasoning; push one-sided answers to address the strongest counterpoint.

Annotation focus

- Characterization: look for what characters say, do and think, and how others react to them (anchor passage in the We do segment)
- Also notice Irony: gaps between what characters expect or say and what is true
- Also notice Tone / mood: word choices that reveal the narrator's attitude or the scene's feeling

Chapter quiz: item bank (all eleven rigor versions)

1. [fill · recall · DOK 1] Complete the quotation from Chapter XIII, paragraph 20: “There is a mixture of servility and self-_____ in his letter, which promises well”

   Key: importance

2. [mc · recall · DOK 1] In the line “Bennet, who assured him with some asperity that they were very well able to keep a good cook, and that her daughters had nothing to do in the kitchen.”, what does “asperity” most nearly mean?

   A. qualities that make someone attractive

   B. harshness of tone or manner

   C. to hesitate because of moral doubt

   D. speaking about briefly

   Key: B (harshness of tone or manner)

3. [fill · recall · DOK 1] Complete the quotation from Chapter XIII, paragraph 7: “I do think it is the hardest thing in the world, that your estate should be entailed away from your own children; and I am sure if I had been you, I should have tried long ago to do _____ or other about it.” Word bank: something, apologizing, fortnight, unlucky

   Key: something

4. [fill · recall · DOK 1] Complete the quotation from Chapter XIII, paragraph 19: “Can he be a _____ man, sir”

   Key: sensible

5. [mc · recall · DOK 1] In the line “Though it is difficult,’ said Jane, ‘to guess in what way he can mean to make us the atonement he thinks our due, the wish is certainly to his credit.”, what does “atonement” most nearly mean?

   A. a pain in the head

   B. compensation for a wrong

   C. busy reading; absorbed in study

   D. plain-woven cotton fabric

   Key: B (compensation for a wrong)

6. [fill · recall · DOK 1] Fill in the blank with the vocabulary word that fits: “The dinner too in its turn was highly admired; and he begged to know to which of his fair cousins, the excellence of its _____ was owing.” Word bank: asperity, complimented, cookery, inheriting

   Key: cookery

7. [fill · recall · DOK 1] Complete the quotation from Chapter XIII, paragraph 2: “I know of nobody that is coming I am sure, unless Charlotte Lucas should happen to call in, and I hope my _____ are good enough for her.” Word bank: clergyman, dinners, dropped, mentioned

   Key: dinners

8. [mc · recall · DOK 1] In the line “He had not been long seated before he complimented Mrs.”, what does “complimented” most nearly mean?

   A. not pleased

   B. praised

   C. floor covering consisting of a piece of thick heavy fabric (usually with nap or pile)

   D. a state of nervous excitement

   Key: B (praised)

9. [mc · recall · DOK 1] What tone does Austen use for Collins?

   A. Satirical

   B. Mysterious

   C. Romantic

   D. Tragic

   Key: A (Satirical)

10. [fill · recall · DOK 1] Fill in the blank with the vocabulary word that fits: “In point of composition,’ said Mary, ‘his letter does not seem _____.” Word bank: inheriting, asperity, defective, complimented

    Key: defective

11. [short · inference · DOK 2] What does this passage from Chapter XIII, paragraph 23 reveal about the character or situation? “To Catherine and Lydia, neither the letter nor its writer were in any degree interesting.” Answer in two or three sentences with one detail.

    Sample answer: The passage (Chapter XIII, paragraph 23) shows the situation turning on first impressions and prejudice: the entail now has a face; Collins intends to marry one of the daughters to soften it. The words “interesting” and “neither” are the proof, because they show how the moment looks to the people in it. They suggest more than the narrator states outright.

12. [short · inference · DOK 2] What can you infer from this line? “Can he be a sensible man, sir” (Chapter XIII, paragraph 19) Answer in two or three sentences with one detail.

Sample answer: Elizabeth's judgment of Collins from his style: here her quick judgment is right. The evidence is “Can he be a sensible man, sir” (Chapter XIII, paragraph 19). This develops marriage and money: the entail now has a face; Collins intends to marry one of the daughters to soften it.

13. [short · inference · DOK 2] What does this passage from Chapter XIII, paragraph 2 reveal about the character or situation? “I do not believe she often sees such at home.” Answer in two or three sentences with one detail.

    Sample answer: The passage (Chapter XIII, paragraph 2) shows the situation turning on first impressions and prejudice: the entail now has a face; Collins intends to marry one of the daughters to soften it. The words “believe” are the proof, because they show how the moment looks to the people in it. They suggest more than the narrator states outright.

14. [short · analysis · DOK 3] Analyze how the word choice in this passage from Chapter XIII, paragraph 29 shapes its tone: “He was interrupted by a summons to dinner; and the girls smiled on each other.” Pick two words and explain their effect.

    Sample answer: The words “interrupted” and “summons” (Chapter XIII, paragraph 29) make the tone heavy and deliberate rather than neutral. That weight points the reader to pride and self-knowledge: the entail now has a face; Collins intends to marry one of the daughters to soften it. The author chooses them so the moment feels significant instead of passing.

15. [short · analysis · DOK 3] Analyze how the word choice in this passage from Chapter XIII, paragraph 8 shapes its tone: “Jane and Elizabeth attempted to explain to her the nature of an entail.” Pick two words and explain their effect.

    Sample answer: The words “attempted” and “explain” (Chapter XIII, paragraph 8) make the tone heavy and deliberate rather than neutral. That weight points the reader to pride and self-knowledge: the entail now has a face; Collins intends to marry one of the daughters to soften it. The author chooses them so the moment feels significant instead of passing.

16. [short · synthesis · DOK 4] Synthesis: trace how marriage and money develops from Chapter VI to Chapter XIII. Use one quotation from each.

    Sample answer: Earlier, in Chapter VI, paragraph 10, the text reads “Happiness in marriage is entirely a matter of chance” — Charlotte's cynical realism, foreshadowing her choice. In Chapter XIII, “that you have ordered a good dinner today, because I have reason to expect an addition to our family party” (Chapter XIII, paragraph 1) — Mr. Bennet's teasing opening announces a visitor. The entail now has a face; Collins intends to marry one of the daughters to soften it.

17. [mc · recall · DOK 1] Which word completes this sentence from Chapter XIII, paragraph 5? “This roused a general _____; and he had the pleasure of being eagerly questioned by his wife and five daughters at once.”

    A. attempted
    B. fortnight
    C. astonishment
    D. expressed

    Key: C (astonishment)

18. [mc · recall · DOK 1] Which word completes this sentence from Chapter XIII, paragraph 23? “It was next to _____ that their cousin should come in a scarlet coat, and it was now some weeks since they had received pleasure from the society of a man in any other colour.”

    A. attempted
    B. clergyman
    C. impossible
    D. unlucky

    Key: C (impossible)

19. [fill · recall · DOK 1] Fill in the blank with the vocabulary word that fits: "I cannot be otherwise than concerned at being the means of _____ your amiable daughters, and beg leave to apologise for it, as well as to assure you of my readiness to make them every possible amends—but of this hereafter." Word bank: complimented, inheriting, asperity, injuring

    Key: injuring

20. [mc · inference · DOK 2] Which choice best states a central concern of "Chapter XIII"?

    A. Character flaws examined

    B. An unhappy marriage observed

    C. Bingley returns

    D. An absurd cousin's letter

    Key: D (An absurd cousin's letter)

21. [short · analysis · DOK 3] Analyze how the word choice in this passage from Chapter XIII, paragraph 26 shapes its tone: "You allude perhaps to the entail of this estate." Pick two words and explain their effect.

    Sample answer: The words "perhaps" and "allude" (Chapter XIII, paragraph 26) make the tone heavy and deliberate rather than neutral. That weight points the reader to class and social mobility: the entail now has a face; Collins intends to marry one of the daughters to soften it. The author chooses them so the moment feels significant instead of passing.

22. [short · analysis · DOK 3] Analyze how the word choice in this passage from Chapter XIII, paragraph 6 shapes its tone: "After amusing himself some time with their curiosity, he thus explained." Pick two words and explain their effect.

    Sample answer: The words "explained" and "curiosity" (Chapter XIII, paragraph 6) make the tone heavy and deliberate rather than neutral. That weight points the reader to class and social mobility: the entail now has a face; Collins intends to marry one of the daughters to soften it. The author chooses them so the moment feels significant instead of passing.

23. [short · synthesis · DOK 4] Connect this passage from Chapter XIII, paragraph 20 to the story's treatment of marriage and money: "There is something very pompous in his style." Use one other moment from the story as well.

    Sample answer: This passage (Chapter XIII, paragraph 20) develops marriage and money: the entail now has a face; Collins intends to marry one of the daughters to soften it. Its words "something" and "pompous" carry that idea into this moment. The same concern returns in "I have great hopes of finding him quite the reverse." (Chapter XIII, paragraph 21), so the two passages read as a pattern, not a single moment. Together they show the story treating marriage and money as central.

24. [fill · recall · DOK 1] Fill in the blank with the vocabulary word that fits: "Collins was _____ to his time, and was received with great politeness by the whole family." Word bank: complimented, inheriting, asperity, punctual

    Key: punctual

25. [fill · recall · DOK 1] Complete the quotation from Chapter XIII, paragraph 1: "that you have ordered a good dinner today, because I have reason to expect an _____ to our family party"

    Key: addition

26. [mc · recall · DOK 1] Which word completes this sentence from Chapter XIII, paragraph 11? "Why, indeed, he does seem to have had some filial _____ on that head, as you will hear."

    A. scruples

    B. extraordinary

    C. conscientious

    D. dinners

    Key: A (scruples)

27. [short · synthesis · DOK 4] Connect this passage from Chapter XIII, paragraph 14 to the story's treatment of women's limited choices: “I remain, dear sir, with respectful compliments to your lady and daughters, your well-wisher and friend,” Use one other moment from the story as well.

    Sample answer: This passage (Chapter XIII, paragraph 14) develops women's limited choices: the entail now has a face; Collins intends to marry one of the daughters to soften it. Its words “compliments” and “respectful” carry that idea into this moment. The same concern returns in “The disagreement subsisting between yourself and my late honoured father always gave me much uneasiness, and since I…” (Chapter XIII, paragraph 14), so the two passages read as a pattern, not a single moment. Together they show the story treating women's limited choices as central.

28. [mc · recall · DOK 1 · AP: AP-LIT.STR] How does Mr. Bennet view the letter?

    A. With fear
    B. With amusement
    C. With anger
    D. With admiration

    Key: B (With amusement)

29. [mc · analysis · DOK 3 · AP: AP-LIT.LAN] In this chapter, which theme does the following most directly develop? The entail now has a face; Collins intends to marry one of the daughters to soften it.

    A. Marriage and money
    B. Class and social mobility
    C. Pride and self-knowledge
    D. First impressions and prejudice

    Key: A (Marriage and money)

30. [mc · recall · DOK 1 · AP: AP-LIT.CHR] What is Collins's profession?

    A. Soldier
    B. Lawyer
    C. Merchant
    D. Clergyman

    Key: D (Clergyman)

31. [mc · recall · DOK 1 · AP: AP-LIT.FIG] In the line “Collins from the guilt of inheriting Longbourn.”, what does “inheriting” most nearly mean?

    A. harshness of tone or manner
    B. compensation for a wrong
    C. receiving property after someone's death
    D. praised

    Key: C (receiving property after someone's death)

32. [mc · recall · DOK 1 · AP: AP-LIT.STR] Who will inherit Longbourn?

    A. Mr. Darcy
    B. Sir William
    C. Mr. Collins
    D. Mr. Bingley

    Key: C (Mr. Collins)

33. [short · inference · DOK 2 · AP: AP-LIT.CHR] What can you infer from this line? “that you have ordered a good dinner today, because I have reason to expect an addition to our family party” (Chapter XIII, paragraph 1) Answer in two or three sentences with one detail.

    Sample answer: Mr. Bennet's teasing opening announces a visitor. The evidence is “that you have ordered a good dinner today, because I have reason to expect an addition to our family party” (Chapter XIII, paragraph 1).

34. [short · analysis · DOK 3 · AP: AP-LIT.FIG] Analyze the word choice in “There is a mixture of servility and self-importance in his letter, which promises well” (Chapter XIII, paragraph 20). Pick two words and explain what they suggest.

    Sample answer: Mr. Bennet's ironic "promises well": he expects entertainment. The evidence is “There is a mixture of servility and self-importance in his letter, which promises well” (Chapter XIII, paragraph 20). This develops marriage and money: the entail now has a face; Collins intends to marry one of the daughters to soften it. The words “importance” and “servility” carry that meaning: they are the charged choices in the line, and changing either would soften the effect.

35. [mc · analysis · DOK 3 · Dual Credit (Indiana College Core): ICC-WC-1.5] Which literary element does this describe in “Chapter XIII”? Mr. Collins is introduced through his letter: pompous, self-important, obsequious toward Lady Catherine, and offering to ‘make amends’ to the daughters he will dispossess.

    A. Characterization

    B. Symbolism

    C. Setting

    D. Simile

    Key: A (Characterization)

36. [short · synthesis · DOK 4 · Program outcome: LeL-C2-LIT-1] Close reading: how do the diction and syntax of “that you have ordered a good dinner today, because I have reason to expect an addition to our family party” (Chapter XIII, paragraph 1) shape its meaning? Consider a second, competing reading.

    Sample answer: Mr. Bennet's teasing opening announces a visitor. The evidence is “that you have ordered a good dinner today, because I have reason to expect an addition to our family party” (Chapter XIII, paragraph 1). This develops marriage and money: the entail now has a face; Collins intends to marry one of the daughters to soften it. The words “addition” and “because” carry that meaning: they are the charged choices in the line, and changing either would soften the effect. Mr. Bennet notes its "mixture of servility and self-importance," and Elizabeth asks "Can he be a sensible man?"; style exposes the man.

37. [mc · recall · DOK 1 · Program outcome: LeL-C4-LIT-1] Who is Collins's patroness?

    A. Mrs. Phillips

    B. Miss Bingley

    C. Lady Lucas

    D. Lady Catherine de Bourgh

    Key: D (Lady Catherine de Bourgh)

38. [short · synthesis · DOK 4 · Program outcome: LeL-C4-LIT-1] Close reading: how do the diction and syntax of “Can he be a sensible man, sir” (Chapter XIII, paragraph 19) shape its meaning? Consider a second, competing reading.

    Sample answer: Elizabeth's judgment of Collins from his style: here her quick judgment is right. The evidence is “Can he be a sensible man, sir” (Chapter XIII, paragraph 19). This develops marriage and money: the entail now has a face; Collins intends to marry one of the daughters to soften it. The words “sensible” and “sir” carry that meaning: they are the charged choices in the line, and changing either would soften the effect. Mr. Bennet notes its "mixture of servility and self-importance," and Elizabeth asks "Can he be a sensible man?"; style exposes the man.

Rigor version	Items (in order)	Mix
Scaffolded support	1, 2, 3, 4, 5, 6, 7, 8, 9, 10, 11, 12, 13, 14, 15, 16	recall 10, inference 3, analysis 2, synthesis 1
HS Freshman	3, 10, 4, 17, 18, 19, 7, 1, 8, 11, 13, 20, 21, 15, 22, 23	recall 9, inference 3, analysis 3, synthesis 1
HS Sophomore	24, 5, 19, 1, 9, 18, 25, 26, 10, 11, 13, 21, 14, 22, 23, 27	recall 9, inference 2, analysis 3, synthesis 2
HS Junior	3, 28, 9, 2, 17, 24, 11, 13, 20, 12, 15, 21, 14, 29, 23, 27	recall 6, inference 4, analysis 4, synthesis 2
HS Senior	26, 4, 30, 24, 3, 11, 12, 20, 13, 29, 15, 14, 21, 16, 27, 23	recall 5, inference 4, analysis 4, synthesis 3
AP	10, 31, 2, 19, 32, 33, 12, 34, 14, 21, 15, 29, 22, 27, 16, 23	recall 5, inference 2, analysis 6, synthesis 3
College Freshman	18, 28, 4, 19, 13, 12, 11, 21, 35, 14, 29, 22, 15, 27, 16, 23	recall 4, inference 3, analysis 6, synthesis 3
College Sophomore	7, 5, 19, 32, 20, 11, 34, 21, 29, 15, 22, 14, 27, 36, 23, 16	recall 4, inference 2, analysis 6, synthesis 4
College Junior	4, 32, 19, 30, 20, 12, 29, 22, 15, 34, 21, 14, 36, 23, 27, 16	recall 4, inference 2, analysis 6, synthesis 4
College Senior	6, 31, 37, 19, 20, 13, 11, 15, 21, 29, 22, 14, 38, 27, 16, 23	recall 4, inference 3, analysis 5, synthesis 4
Graduate / PhD	4, 19, 30, 32, 12, 14, 35, 29, 22, 15, 34, 21, 23, 36, 27, 16	recall 4, inference 1, analysis 7, synthesis 4

Writing prompts (eleven rigor levels)

Scaffolded support (250 words; AP: see unit standards): Supported track (work from the passage your teacher selects). In “Chapter XIII,” how does Austen show an absurd cousin's letter? Write a paragraph that states your claim, quotes two details from the passage, and explains how each detail supports your idea. Use the characterization you noticed as one piece of evidence.

HS Freshman (350 words; AP: see unit standards): In Chapter XIII, how does Austen develop the idea of an absurd cousin's letter? State a clear claim, support it with two or three quotations, and explain how the characterization in the chapter helps build that idea.

HS Sophomore (450 words; AP: see unit standards): Analyze how Chapter XIII develops the idea of an absurd cousin's letter. Make a precise claim, support it with at least three pieces of textual evidence, and explain how the author's use of characterization and irony shapes that idea. Address one possible counterclaim.

HS Junior (550 words; AP: see unit standards): Analyze how the structure of Chapter XIII (where it begins, turns and ends) and its characterization shape the reader's understanding of an absurd cousin's letter. Identify one place where the text leaves matters uncertain and explain how that uncertainty adds to its meaning.

HS Senior (600 words; AP: see unit standards): Two readers disagree about what Chapter XIII suggests about an absurd cousin's letter. Lay out two plausible interpretations, weigh the evidence for each (including the chapter's characterization and irony), and argue for the stronger one in a sustained, well-organized essay.

AP (650 words; AP: AP-LIT.CHR, AP-LIT.LAN): Write a literary argument in which you analyze how Jane Austen uses characterization in Chapter XIII to complicate the reader's understanding of an absurd cousin's letter. Develop a defensible thesis, select evidence purposefully, and explain how specific choices of diction and syntax create meaning.

College Freshman (1000 words; AP: see unit standards): Situate Chapter XIII within its historical and literary context and argue how the chapter's treatment of an absurd cousin's letter responds to that context. Engage with at least one secondary perspective (a critic, historian or the author's own statements), integrate quotations smoothly, and cite in MLA style.

College Sophomore (1250 words; AP: see unit standards): Read Chapter XIII alongside the conventions of its genre and period. Argue how the chapter's handling of an absurd cousin's letter follows or bends those conventions, using the characterization as evidence, and test your reading against one published critic. Document two secondary sources in MLA.

College Junior (1500 words; AP: see unit standards): Apply a named critical approach (for example formalist, historicist, feminist, psychoanalytic or ecocritical) to Chapter XIII and its treatment of an absurd cousin's letter. State your method, show what it reveals in the chapter's characterization and irony, and identify where the text resists it.

College Senior (2000 words; AP: see unit standards): Develop a research argument that reads Chapter XIII as evidence for a larger claim about an absurd cousin's letter in Pride and Prejudice. Connect close reading of the chapter to the whole novel, engage at least four scholarly sources, and state precisely where your reading departs from theirs (Chicago style).

Graduate / PhD (2500 words; AP: see unit standards): Develop an original argument that reads Chapter XIII as a hinge in the novel's larger treatment of an absurd cousin's letter. Position your reading within a named critical conversation (for example formalist, historicist, psychoanalytic, feminist or postcolonial approaches), account for the textual history where relevant, and articulate the stakes of your intervention for scholarship on Pride and Prejudice.

SAT-style questions

1. He had not been long seated before he complimented Mrs.

   As used in the text, what does the word “complimented” most nearly mean?

   A. the child of your aunt or uncle

   B. acting or arriving or performed exactly at the time appointed

   C. praised

   D. willingness

2. "It certainly is a most iniquitous affair," said Mr. Bennet, "and nothing can clear Mr. Collins from the guilt of inheriting Longbourn. But if you will listen to his letter, you may perhaps be a little softened by his manner of expressing himself."

Which choice best states a central concern of "Chapter XIII"?

A. Neighbors and gossip

B. Trusted relatives

C. Bingley returns

D. An absurd cousin's letter

SAT key: 1. C (praised); 2. D (An absurd cousin's letter)

Lesson 15: Chapter XIV

Focus: pompous flattery

Objective: Students will analyze how irony develops in “Chapter XIV” by writing a claim-evidence-reasoning paragraph that cites at least 2 quotations from the section, and will score at least 80% on the section quiz.

Standards: AP: see the unit standards

Teacher only · spoilers

Collins praises Lady Catherine at length and explains that he prepares delicate compliments in advance. Asked to read aloud, he picks Fordyce's Sermons and is offended when Lydia interrupts.

Background: Fordyce's Sermons to Young Women (1766) was a conduct book on female propriety.

Significance: Austen mocks rehearsed flattery and moralizing aimed at young women.

Lesson plan and lecture script (90 minutes)

0–8 min · Bell-ringer · You do (8 min)
Students write to the bell-ringer, then pair-share.
Why is it funny that Collins prepares compliments in advance? Write for five minutes. Starters: I think... because... / This connects to marriage and money because....
Prompt: Why is it funny that Collins prepares compliments in advance?
Sentence starters: I think… because… · This connects to marriage and money because…
Strong response: A strong response takes a position and anticipates this: Collins's patron Lady Catherine shows how rank controls careers in the church.

8–18 min · Vocabulary with etymology notes · I do (10 min)
Five key words in context, with verified word histories.
Today's words: superintended — supervised; directed; backgammon — a board game for two players using dice; phaeton — a light, open four-wheeled carriage; quadrille — a card game for four players; resides — make one's home in a particular place or community. “backgammon”: Origin: probably an English formation from back + gamen. “quadrille”: Origin: Spanish cuadrilla; earlier Latin quadra. “resides”: Origin of “reside”: Old French resider; earlier Latin resideō (“remain behind”).
Words: superintended: supervised; directed · backgammon: a board game for two players using dice · phaeton: a light, open four-wheeled carriage · quadrille: a card game for four players · resides: make one's home in a particular place or community

18–28 min · Background and context · I do (10 min)
Mini-lecture (read or adapt the script).
Fordyce's Sermons to Young Women (1766) was a conduct book on female propriety. Austen mocks rehearsed flattery and moralizing aimed at young women. Characterization: At dinner Collins praises Lady Catherine and admits he prepares "little elegant compliments" in advance; Mr. Bennet draws him out for sport. Irony: Collins describes his flattery as natural; the narrator lets him condemn himself. Watch for rank and condescension: Rank is displayed and enforced, above all at Rosings by Lady Catherine; Elizabeth refuses to be cowed. In this chapter: "in his life witnessed such behaviour in a person of rank—such affability and condescension, as he had himself experienced from Lady Catherine" (Chapter XIV, paragraph 1).

28–40 min · I do: modeled close reading · I do (12 min)
Model the close reading of the anchor quotation using the written think-aloud below.
First, meaning. I read "whether these pleasing attentions proceed from the impulse of the moment, or are the result of previous study" slowly and put it in my own words: Mr. Bennet asks Mr. Collins whether his flattering compliments come from impulse or are prepared in advance. Next, craft. I notice the polite, mock-serious question that hides sarcasm under good manners. The strongest word is "study": it suggests Collins practices his compliments like a lesson. Then, effect. How is Mr. Bennet mocking Mr. Collins? My answer: Collins answers that he does prepare them, never noticing the joke; Mr. Bennet enjoys exposing his foolishness, and the reader shares his amusement.

> whether these pleasing attentions proceed from the impulse of the moment, or are the result of previous study (Chapter XIV, paragraph 10)

Think-aloud: First, meaning. I read "whether these pleasing attentions proceed from the impulse of the moment, or are the result of previous study" slowly and put it in my own words: Mr. Bennet asks Mr. Collins whether his flattering compliments come from impulse or are prepared in advance. Next, craft. I notice the polite, mock-serious question that hides sarcasm under good manners. The strongest word is "study": it suggests Collins practices his compliments like a lesson. Then, effect. How is Mr. Bennet mocking Mr. Collins? My answer: Collins answers that he does prepare them, never noticing the joke; Mr. Bennet enjoys exposing his foolishness, and the reader shares his amusement.

40–55 min · We do: guided annotation · We do (15 min)
Guided analysis of a second quotation; expected answers given.
Ask: What words in this line stand out, and what do they suggest? Expected: The narrator shares Mr. Bennet's pleasure in absurdity. Look at the craft: Collins describes his flattery as natural; the narrator lets him condemn himself. Ask: How does this line connect to marriage and money? Expected: Collins's patron Lady Catherine shows how rank controls careers in the church. (The narrator shares Mr. Bennet's pleasure in absurdity.)

> Mr. Bennet's expectations were fully answered (Chapter XIV, paragraph 12)

Ask: What words in this line stand out, and what do they suggest?
Expected answer: The narrator shares Mr. Bennet's pleasure in absurdity. Look at the craft: Collins describes his flattery as natural; the narrator lets him condemn himself.
Ask: How does this line connect to marriage and money?
Expected answer: Collins's patron Lady Catherine shows how rank controls careers in the church. (The narrator shares Mr. Bennet's pleasure in absurdity.)

55–70 min · You do: independent annotation · You do (15 min)
Independent annotation and a claim-evidence-reasoning paragraph (exemplar given).
Annotate the chapter for characterization, irony (three marks with a margin note each), then write one claim-evidence-reasoning paragraph: what does this chapter suggest about pompous flattery? Then start your writing prompt at your assigned level (HS Sophomore: Analyze how Chapter XIV develops the idea of pompous flattery. Make a precise claim, support it with at least three pieces of textual evidence, and explain how the author's use of irony and characterization shapes that idea. Address one possible counterclaim.) Exemplar: Austen exposes Collins through his own words, inviting the reader to share Mr. Bennet's amusement. When the text says "whether these pleasing attentions proceed from the impulse of the moment, or are the result of previous study" (Chapter XIV, paragraph 10), it shows this directly. Mr. Bennet asks whether his compliments are "the result of previous study," and Collins admits they are; the narrator then notes that "Mr. Bennet's expectations were fully answered."
Task: Annotate the chapter for characterization, irony (three marks with a margin note each), then write one claim-evidence-reasoning paragraph: what does this chapter suggest about pompous flattery? Then start your writing prompt at your assigned level (HS Sophomore: Analyze how Chapter XIV develops the idea of pompous flattery. Make a precise claim, support it with at least three pieces of textual evidence, and explain how the author's use of irony and characterization shapes that idea. Address one possible counterclaim.)
Exemplar: Austen exposes Collins through his own words, inviting the reader to share Mr. Bennet's amusement. When the text says "whether these pleasing attentions proceed from the impulse of the moment, or are the result of previous study" (Chapter XIV, paragraph 10), it shows this directly. Mr. Bennet asks whether his compliments are "the result of previous study," and Collins admits they are; the narrator then notes that "Mr. Bennet's expectations were fully answered."

70–80 min · Discussion · We do (10 min)
Structured discussion from the 30 tiered questions, with facilitation notes.
Anchor question: Why is it funny that Collins prepares compliments in advance? Ask whether Mr. Bennet's mockery is harmless fun or a failure of responsibility.
Anchor question: Why is it funny that Collins prepares compliments in advance?
Facilitation: Ask whether Mr. Bennet's mockery is harmless fun or a failure of responsibility.

80–87 min · Exit ticket / chapter quiz · You do (7 min)
Chapter quiz in the app and an exit ticket (answer given).
Chapter quiz in the app, then: In one sentence, what does this chapter suggest about pompous flattery? Support it with one short quotation. Model answer: Austen exposes Collins through his own words, inviting the reader to share Mr. Bennet's amusement. ("whether these pleasing attentions proceed from the impulse of the moment, or are the result of previous study", Chapter XIV, paragraph 10). Accept any defensible claim backed by a quotation from the chapter; the answer key for the quiz is in the Quiz section.
Exit ticket: In one sentence, what does this chapter suggest about pompous flattery? Support it with one short quotation.
Answer: Model answer: Austen exposes Collins through his own words, inviting the reader to share Mr. Bennet's amusement. ("whether these pleasing attentions proceed from the impulse of the moment, or are the result of previous study", Chapter XIV, paragraph 10). Accept any defensible claim backed by a quotation from the chapter; the answer key for the quiz is in the Quiz section.

87–90 min · Closure · I do (3 min)
Summarize the lesson and preview the next reading.
Today we saw how characterization shapes pompous flattery. Key takeaway: Collins's patron Lady Catherine shows how rank controls careers in the church.

Total: 90 minutes.

Teacher analysis (spoilers)

Literary elements

- Characterization: At dinner Collins praises Lady Catherine and admits he prepares "little elegant compliments" in advance; Mr. Bennet draws him out for sport.
- Irony: Collins describes his flattery as natural; the narrator lets him condemn himself.

Themes and how they develop

- marriage and money: Collins's patron Lady Catherine shows how rank controls careers in the church.

Symbols and motifs

- rank and condescension: Rank is displayed and enforced, above all at Rosings by Lady Catherine; Elizabeth refuses to be cowed. In this chapter: "in his life witnessed such behaviour in a person of rank —such affability and condescension, as he had himself experienced from Lady Catherine" (Chapter XIV, paragraph 1).

- pride: Pride is discussed openly and shown in action; who is proud, and whether pride is a fault, keeps shifting. In this chapter: “pool of quadrille in the evening. Lady Catherine was reckoned proud by many people he knew, but he had never seen anything” (Chapter XIV, paragraph 1).

Key quotations (checked against the reading text)

- “whether these pleasing attentions proceed from the impulse of the moment, or are the result of previous study” (Chapter XIV, paragraph 10) Mr. Bennet's sly question.
- “Mr. Bennet’s expectations were fully answered” (Chapter XIV, paragraph 12) The narrator shares Mr. Bennet's pleasure in absurdity.
- “protested that he never read novels” (Chapter XIV, paragraph 13) Collins's refusal of novels, written in a novel; Austen's joke at his expense.

Model claim-evidence-reasoning

Claim: Austen exposes Collins through his own words, inviting the reader to share Mr. Bennet's amusement.
Evidence: “whether these pleasing attentions proceed from the impulse of the moment, or are the result of previous study” (Chapter XIV, paragraph 10)
Reasoning: Mr. Bennet asks whether his compliments are "the result of previous study," and Collins admits they are; the narrator then notes that "Mr. Bennet's expectations were fully answered."

Vocabulary with etymology notes

Word	Definition (in this sentence)	In context	Word history
superintended (verb)	supervised; directed	She is unfortunately of a sickly constitution, which has prevented her making that progress in many accomplishments, which she could not otherwise have failed of; as I am informed by the lady who superintended her education, and who still resides with them.
backgammon (noun)	a board game for two players using dice	Bennet, he offered himself as his antagonist at backgammon.	“backgammon”: Origin: probably an English formation from back + gamen. (Liber et Libri origin note, https://en.wiktionary.org/wiki/backgammon#Etymology)
phaeton (noun)	a light, open four-wheeled carriage	But she is perfectly amiable, and often condescends to drive by my humble abode in her little phaeton and ponies.”
quadrille (noun)	a card game for four players	She had also asked him twice to dine at Rosings, and had sent for him only the Saturday before, to make up her pool of quadrille in the evening.	“quadrille”: Origin: Spanish cuadrilla; earlier Latin quadra. (Liber et Libri origin note, https://en.wiktionary.org/wiki/quadrille#Etymology)

resides (verb)	make one's home in a particular place or community	She is unfortunately of a sickly constitution, which has prevented her making that progress in many accomplishments, which she could not otherwise have failed of; as I am informed by the lady who superintended her education, and who still resides with them.	"resides": Origin of "reside": Old French resider; earlier Latin resideō ("remain behind"). (Liber et Libri origin note, https://en.wiktionary.org/wiki/reside#Etymology)
civilly (adverb)	politely, with good manners	Bennet and her daughters apologised most civilly for Lydia's interruption, and promised that it should not occur again, if he would resume his book; but Mr.	"civilly": Origin: an English formation from civil + -ly. (Liber et Libri origin note, https://en.wiktionary.org/wiki/civilly#Etymology)
heiress (noun)	a female heir	"She has one only daughter, the heiress of Rosings, and of very extensive property."
antagonist (noun)	someone who offers opposition	Bennet, he offered himself as his antagonist at backgammon.	"antagonist": Origin: Latin antagonista. (Liber et Libri origin note, https://en.wiktionary.org/wiki/antagonist#Etymology)
prevents (verb)	keep from happening or arising; make impossible	"Her indifferent state of health unhappily prevents her being in town; and by that means, as I told Lady Catherine myself one day, has deprived the British court of its brightest ornament.
preaching (verb)	deliver a sermon	She had been graciously pleased to approve of both the discourses, which he had already had the honour of preaching before her.

Discussion questions

1. Why is it funny that Collins prepares compliments in advance?
2. Where does irony appear in this chapter, and what effect does it have? Point to one passage.
3. How does this chapter connect to the book's larger concern with class and social mobility?

Classroom discussion questions (30, tiered)

Wait time after every question (3 s for DOK 1, 5 s for DOK 2, 8 to 10 s for DOK 3 and 4); think-pair-share on DOK 3 and 4; answer each response with a follow-up probe; close with student-generated questions. Focus sets by rigor level: Scaffolded support: 1, 2, 3, 4, 5, 6, 11, 12, 13, 14, 21, 22; HS Freshman: 1, 2, 3, 4, 5, 12, 13, 14, 15, 22, 23, 24; HS Sophomore: 1, 2, 3, 4, 13, 14, 15, 16, 17, 23, 24, 25; HS Junior: 1, 2, 3, 14, 15, 16, 17, 18, 24, 25, 26, 27; HS Senior: 1, 2, 3, 15, 16, 17, 18, 25, 26, 27, 28, 29; AP: 1, 2, 16, 17, 18, 19, 20, 26, 27, 28, 29, 30; College Freshman: 1, 2, 17, 18, 19, 20, 21, 22, 27, 28, 29, 30; College Sophomore: 1, 2, 11, 18, 19, 20, 21, 22, 23, 28, 29, 30; College Junior: 1, 11, 12, 19, 20, 21, 22, 23, 24, 25, 29, 30; College Senior: 1, 11, 12, 13, 20, 21, 22, 23, 24, 25, 26, 30; Graduate / PhD: 1, 11, 12, 13, 21, 22, 23, 24, 25, 26, 27, 28

Literal / recall

1. What does Collins admit he does? [DOK 1 · coldCallWithSupport · wait 3 s · AP: unit standards] Look for: Prepares compliments in advance
2. What book does Collins read aloud? [DOK 1 · turnAndTalk · wait 3 s · AP: unit standards] Look for: Fordyce's Sermons
3. Who interrupts him? [DOK 1 · coldCallWithSupport · wait 3 s · AP: unit standards] Look for: Lydia
4. What is his attitude to Lady Catherine? [DOK 1 · turnAndTalk · wait 3 s · AP: unit standards] Look for: Worshipful
5. Why does Mr. Bennet invite Collins to read? [DOK 1 · coldCallWithSupport · wait 3 s · AP: unit standards] Look for: To enjoy his absurdity
6. Retell the three most important events of "Chapter XIV" in order, in one sentence each. [DOK 1 · turnAndTalk · wait 3 s · AP: unit standards] Look for: Collins praises Lady Catherine at length and explains that he prepares delicate compliments in advance. Asked to read aloud, he picks Fordyce's Sermons and is offended when Lydia interrupts.
7. Which characters appear or are mentioned in "Chapter XIV"? Name two and one thing each says or does. [DOK 1 · coldCallWithSupport · wait 3 s · AP: unit standards] Look for: Names and actions taken from the chapter; check against the teacher summary.
8. Where and when does "Chapter XIV" take place? Point to the line that tells you. [DOK 1 · turnAndTalk · wait 3 s · AP: unit standards] Look for: A place/time detail quoted from the chapter.
9. Reread: "She is unfortunately of a sickly constitution, which has prevented her making that progress in many accomplishments, which she could not otherwise have failed of; as I am informed by the lady who superintended her…" What does "superintended" mean here, and what is literally happening in this line? [DOK 1 · turnAndTalk · wait 3 s · AP: unit standards] Look for: superintended: supervised; directed.
10. Reread: "Bennet, he offered himself as his antagonist at backgammon." What does "backgammon" mean here, and what is literally happening in this line? [DOK 1 · turnAndTalk · wait 3 s · AP: unit standards] Look for: backgammon: a board game for two players using dice.

Inferential / analytical

1. What does "Chapter XIV" suggest about pompous flattery? State the inference and the line that supports it. [DOK 2 · thinkPairShare · wait 5 s · AP-LIT.LAN] Look for: Austen mocks rehearsed flattery and moralizing aimed at young women.
2. Find one example of irony in this chapter. What does it reveal that a plain statement would not? [DOK 2 · followUp · wait 5 s · AP-LIT.NAR] Look for: Look for gaps between what characters expect or say and what is true.
3. How does the characterization in this chapter shape what we understand about pompous flattery? [DOK 3 · thinkPairShare · wait 8 s · AP-LIT.CHR] Look for: Look for what characters say, do and think, and how others react to them.

   Answer guidance: A defensible line of argument: Austen exposes Collins through his own words, inviting the reader to share Mr. Bennet's amusement. Useful evidence: "whether these pleasing attentions proceed from the impulse of the moment, or are the result of previous study" (Chapter XIV, paragraph 10): Mr. Bennet's sly question. On characterization: At dinner Collins praises Lady Catherine and admits he prepares "little elegant compliments" in advance; Mr. Bennet draws him out for sport. Credit any position that is supported by quotation and reasoning; push one-sided answers to address the strongest counterpoint.

4. In the passage that begins ““She is a most charming young lady indeed.”, why might Austen have chosen these particular words? Pick two and explain their connotations. [DOK 2 · followUp · wait 5 s · AP-LIT.FIG] Look for: Diction analysis of two words in the anchor passage.
5. What causes the main turn in “Chapter XIV”, and what effect is it likely to have on what follows? [DOK 2 · followUp · wait 5 s · AP-LIT.STR] Look for: Collins praises Lady Catherine at length and explains that he prepares delicate compliments in advance. Asked to read aloud, he picks Fordyce's Sermons and is offended when Lydia interrupts.
6. How does “Chapter XIV” build on “Chapter XIII”? Name one link of cause and effect. [DOK 3 · thinkPairShare · wait 8 s · AP-LIT.STR] Look for: A causal or structural link between this and the previous chapter.
   Answer guidance: A defensible line of argument: Austen exposes Collins through his own words, inviting the reader to share Mr. Bennet's amusement. Useful evidence: “Mr. Bennet’s expectations were fully answered” (Chapter XIV, paragraph 12): The narrator shares Mr. Bennet's pleasure in absurdity. Theme link: Collins's patron Lady Catherine shows how rank controls careers in the church. Credit any position that is supported by quotation and reasoning; push one-sided answers to address the strongest counterpoint.
7. What can we infer about a character's motives from what they say and do here, as opposed to what they claim? [DOK 3 · followUp · wait 8 s · AP-LIT.CHR] Look for: An inference about motive supported by a quoted line.
   Answer guidance: A defensible line of argument: Austen exposes Collins through his own words, inviting the reader to share Mr. Bennet's amusement. Useful evidence: “protested that he never read novels” (Chapter XIV, paragraph 13): Collins's refusal of novels, written in a novel; Austen's joke at his expense. On characterization: At dinner Collins praises Lady Catherine and admits he prepares "little elegant compliments" in advance; Mr. Bennet draws him out for sport. Credit any position that is supported by quotation and reasoning; push one-sided answers to address the strongest counterpoint.
8. The bell-ringer asked: “Why is it funny that Collins prepares compliments in advance?” Now that we have read closely, how would you revise your first answer, and which line changed your mind? [DOK 2 · thinkPairShare · wait 5 s · AP-LIT.LAN] Look for: A revised answer anchored in the text.
9. Where does tone / mood appear, and how does it connect this chapter to the larger concern with class and social mobility? [DOK 3 · followUp · wait 8 s · AP-LIT.FIG] Look for: Look for word choices that reveal the narrator's attitude or the scene's feeling.
   Answer guidance: A defensible line of argument: Austen exposes Collins through his own words, inviting the reader to share Mr. Bennet's amusement. Useful evidence: “whether these pleasing attentions proceed from the impulse of the moment, or are the result of previous study” (Chapter XIV, paragraph 10): Mr. Bennet's sly question. Theme link: Collins's patron Lady Catherine shows how rank controls careers in the church. Credit any position that is supported by quotation and reasoning; push one-sided answers to address the strongest counterpoint.
10. Background: Fordyce's Sermons to Young Women (1766) was a conduct book on female propriety. How does knowing this change the way you read one moment in the chapter? [DOK 3 · thinkPairShare · wait 8 s · AP-LIT.SET] Look for: A specific moment reread in light of the context.
    Answer guidance: A defensible line of argument: Austen exposes Collins through his own words, inviting the reader to share Mr. Bennet's amusement. Useful evidence: “Mr. Bennet’s expectations were fully answered” (Chapter XIV, paragraph 12): The narrator shares Mr. Bennet's pleasure in absurdity. Theme link: Collins's patron Lady Catherine shows how rank controls careers in the church. Credit any position that is supported by quotation and reasoning; push one-sided answers to address the strongest counterpoint.

Evaluative / synthesis / creative

1. A critic might argue: “Austen mocks rehearsed flattery and moralizing aimed at young women.” How far do you agree? Take a stand and defend it with two lines from the chapter. [DOK 3 · fourCorners · wait 8 s · AP-LIT.LAN] Look for: A defended position with evidence and one counterpoint.
   Answer guidance: A defensible line of argument: Austen exposes Collins through his own words, inviting the reader to share Mr. Bennet's amusement. Useful evidence: “protested that he never read novels” (Chapter XIV, paragraph 13): Collins's refusal of novels, written in a novel; Austen's joke at his expense. Theme link: Collins's patron Lady Catherine shows how rank controls careers in the church. Credit any position that is supported by quotation and reasoning; push one-sided answers to address the strongest counterpoint.
2. Which character in this chapter acts most wisely, and which least? Judge them by a standard you name. [DOK 3 · thinkPairShare · wait 8 s · AP-LIT.CHR, AP-LIT.LAN] Look for: An evaluation using an explicit criterion and evidence.
   Answer guidance: A defensible line of argument: Austen exposes Collins through his own words, inviting the reader to share Mr. Bennet's amusement. Useful evidence: “whether these pleasing attentions proceed from the impulse of the moment, or are the result of previous study” (Chapter XIV, paragraph 10): Mr. Bennet's sly question. On characterization: At dinner Collins praises Lady Catherine and admits he prepares "little elegant compliments" in advance; Mr. Bennet draws him out for sport. Credit any position that is supported by quotation and reasoning; push one-sided answers to address the strongest counterpoint.
3. Rewrite one moment of “Chapter XIV” from the point of view of a different character. What does the new angle reveal or hide about pompous flattery? [DOK 4 · thinkPairShare · wait 8 s · AP-LIT.LAN, AP-LIT.NAR] Look for: A creative product with a rationale tied to the text.
   Answer guidance: A defensible line of argument: Austen exposes Collins through his own words, inviting the reader to share Mr. Bennet's amusement. Useful evidence: “Mr. Bennet’s expectations were fully answered” (Chapter XIV, paragraph 12): The narrator shares Mr. Bennet's pleasure in absurdity. Theme link: Collins's patron Lady Catherine shows how rank controls careers in the church. Credit any position that is supported by quotation and reasoning; push one-sided answers to address the strongest counterpoint.
4. Write three questions of your own about “Chapter XIV”: one recall, one “why/how”, and one “should/what if”. Trade with a partner and answer theirs. [DOK 3 · studentGenerated · wait 8 s · AP-LIT.LAN] Look for: Student-generated questions at three levels.
   Answer guidance: A defensible line of argument: Austen exposes Collins through his own words, inviting the reader to share Mr. Bennet's amusement. Useful evidence: “protested that he never read novels” (Chapter XIV, paragraph 13): Collins's refusal of novels, written in a novel; Austen's joke at his expense. Theme link: Collins's patron Lady Catherine shows how rank controls careers in the church. Credit any position that is supported by quotation and reasoning; push one-sided answers to address the strongest counterpoint.
5. Connect this chapter to women's limited choices: is the link strong or weak so far? What would Austen need to show next to strengthen it? [DOK 4 · socraticCircle · wait 8 s · AP-LIT.LAN] Look for: A judgment of thematic development across the work.
   Answer guidance: A defensible line of argument: Austen exposes Collins through his own words, inviting the reader to share Mr. Bennet's amusement. Useful evidence: “whether these pleasing attentions proceed from the impulse of the moment, or are the result of previous study" (Chapter XIV, paragraph 10): Mr. Bennet's sly question. Theme link: Collins's patron Lady Catherine shows how rank controls careers in the church. Credit any position that is supported by quotation and reasoning; push one-sided answers to address the strongest counterpoint.

6. Is the irony in this chapter effective, or does it feel heavy-handed? Evaluate it as a reader would in a review. [DOK 3 · fourCorners · wait 8 s · AP-LIT.LAN, AP-LIT.NAR] Look for: An evaluative judgment with criteria and evidence.
   Answer guidance: A defensible line of argument: Austen exposes Collins through his own words, inviting the reader to share Mr. Bennet's amusement. Useful evidence: "Mr. Bennet's expectations were fully answered" (Chapter XIV, paragraph 12): The narrator shares Mr. Bennet's pleasure in absurdity. On irony: Collins describes his flattery as natural; the narrator lets him condemn himself. Credit any position that is supported by quotation and reasoning; push one-sided answers to address the strongest counterpoint.
7. Compare how "Chapter XIV" treats pompous flattery with how another text, film or event you know treats a similar idea. What does Pride and Prejudice see that the other misses? [DOK 4 · socraticCircle · wait 8 s · AP-LIT.LAN] Look for: A cross-text synthesis.
   Answer guidance: A defensible line of argument: Austen exposes Collins through his own words, inviting the reader to share Mr. Bennet's amusement. Useful evidence: "protested that he never read novels" (Chapter XIV, paragraph 13): Collins's refusal of novels, written in a novel; Austen's joke at his expense. Theme link: Collins's patron Lady Catherine shows how rank controls careers in the church. Credit any position that is supported by quotation and reasoning; push one-sided answers to address the strongest counterpoint.
8. Predict what "Chapter XV" will bring, using two clues from this chapter. After reading, evaluate your prediction. [DOK 3 · thinkPairShare · wait 8 s · AP-LIT.LAN, AP-LIT.STR] Look for: A prediction or judgment justified with textual clues.
   Answer guidance: A defensible line of argument: Austen exposes Collins through his own words, inviting the reader to share Mr. Bennet's amusement. Useful evidence: "whether these pleasing attentions proceed from the impulse of the moment, or are the result of previous study" (Chapter XIV, paragraph 10): Mr. Bennet's sly question. Theme link: Collins's patron Lady Catherine shows how rank controls careers in the church. Credit any position that is supported by quotation and reasoning; push one-sided answers to address the strongest counterpoint.
9. Design a one-paragraph modern adaptation of this chapter (setting, characters, conflict). What must stay the same for it to still be about pompous flattery? [DOK 4 · thinkPairShare · wait 8 s · AP-LIT.LAN] Look for: A creative transfer that keeps the core idea.
   Answer guidance: A defensible line of argument: Austen exposes Collins through his own words, inviting the reader to share Mr. Bennet's amusement. Useful evidence: "Mr. Bennet's expectations were fully answered" (Chapter XIV, paragraph 12): The narrator shares Mr. Bennet's pleasure in absurdity. Theme link: Collins's patron Lady Catherine shows how rank controls careers in the church. Credit any position that is supported by quotation and reasoning; push one-sided answers to address the strongest counterpoint.
10. What question would you most like to ask Jane Austen about this chapter, and what answer do you think the text itself gives? [DOK 4 · studentGenerated · wait 8 s · AP-LIT.LAN] Look for: A student-generated question answered from evidence.
    Answer guidance: A defensible line of argument: Austen exposes Collins through his own words, inviting the reader to share Mr. Bennet's amusement. Useful evidence: "protested that he never read novels" (Chapter XIV, paragraph 13): Collins's refusal of novels, written in a novel; Austen's joke at his expense. Theme link: Collins's patron Lady Catherine shows how rank controls careers in the church. Credit any position that is supported by quotation and reasoning; push one-sided answers to address the strongest counterpoint.

Annotation focus

- Irony: look for gaps between what characters expect or say and what is true (anchor passage in the We do segment)
- Also notice Characterization: what characters say, do and think, and how others react to them
- Also notice Tone / mood: word choices that reveal the narrator's attitude or the scene's feeling

Chapter quiz: item bank (all eleven rigor versions)

1. [fill · recall · DOK 1] Complete the quotation from Chapter XIV, paragraph 12: "Mr. Bennet's _____ were fully answered"

   Key: expectations

2. [mc · recall · DOK 1] Who interrupts him?

   A. Lydia
   B. Mary
   C. Jane
   D. Mr. Bennet

   Key: A (Lydia)

3. [fill · recall · DOK 1] Fill in the blank with the vocabulary word that fits: "She has one only daughter, the _____ of Rosings, and of very extensive property." Word bank: backgammon, heiress, superintended, phaeton

   Key: heiress

4. [mc · recall · DOK 1] What book does Collins read aloud?

   A. A novel
   B. Fordyce's Sermons
   C. A newspaper
   D. The Bible

   Key: B (Fordyce's Sermons)

5. [mc · recall · DOK 1] In the line "She had also asked him twice to dine at Rosings, and had sent for him only the Saturday before, to make up her pool of quadrille in the evening.", what does "quadrille" most nearly mean?

   A. a card game for four players
   B. attempting to win favor from influential people by flattery
   C. appear again
   D. express criticism towards

   Key: A (a card game for four players)

6. [fill · recall · DOK 1] Fill in the blank with the vocabulary word that fits: “Bennet, he offered himself as his _____ at backgammon.” Word bank: phaeton, superintended, antagonist, backgammon

   Key: antagonist

7. [mc · recall · DOK 1] What is his attitude to Lady Catherine?

   A. Indifferent

   B. Worshipful

   C. Hostile

   D. Critical

   Key: B (Worshipful)

8. [mc · recall · DOK 1] In the line “But she is perfectly amiable, and often condescends to drive by my humble abode in her little phaeton and ponies.”, what does “phaeton” most nearly mean?

   A. making a fault seem less serious

   B. fearful expectation or anticipation

   C. a light, open four-wheeled carriage

   D. to increase; to make better

   Key: C (a light, open four-wheeled carriage)

9. [fill · recall · DOK 1] Complete the quotation from Chapter XIV, paragraph 10: “whether these pleasing _____ proceed from the impulse of the moment, or are the result of previous study”

   Key: attentions

10. [fill · recall · DOK 1] Fill in the blank with the vocabulary word that fits: “She is unfortunately of a sickly constitution, which has prevented her making that progress in many accomplishments, which she could not otherwise have failed of; as I am informed by the lady who superintended her education, and who still _____ with them.” Word bank: backgammon, phaeton, superintended, resides

    Key: resides

11. [short · inference · DOK 2] What can you infer from this line? “whether these pleasing attentions proceed from the impulse of the moment, or are the result of previous study” (Chapter XIV, paragraph 10) Answer in two or three sentences with one detail.

    Sample answer: Mr. Bennet's sly question. The evidence is “whether these pleasing attentions proceed from the impulse of the moment, or are the result of previous study” (Chapter XIV, paragraph 10). This develops marriage and money: Collins's patron Lady Catherine shows how rank controls careers in the church.

12. [mc · inference · DOK 2] Which choice best states a central concern of “Chapter XIV”?

    A. An unhappy marriage observed

    B. A revelation from the colonel

    C. Renewed hope

    D. Pompous flattery

    Key: D (Pompous flattery)

13. [short · inference · DOK 2] What can you infer from this line? “Mr. Bennet’s expectations were fully answered” (Chapter XIV, paragraph 12) Answer in two or three sentences with one detail.

    Sample answer: The narrator shares Mr. Bennet's pleasure in absurdity. The evidence is “Mr. Bennet’s expectations were fully answered” (Chapter XIV, paragraph 12). This develops marriage and money: Collins's patron Lady Catherine shows how rank controls careers in the church.

14. [mc · analysis · DOK 3] Which literary element does this describe in “Chapter XIV”? Collins describes his flattery as natural; the narrator lets him condemn himself.

    A. Simile

    B. Irony

    C. Imagery

    D. Hyperbole

    Key: B (Irony)

15. [mc · analysis · DOK 3] Which literary element does this describe in “Chapter XIV”? At dinner Collins praises Lady Catherine and admits he prepares ‘little elegant compliments’ in advance; Mr. Bennet draws him out for sport.

    A. Allusion

    B. Tone / mood

    C. Setting

    D. Characterization

    Key: D (Characterization)

16. [short · synthesis · DOK 4] Evaluate this claim about the chapter: “Austen exposes Collins through his own words, inviting the reader to share Mr. Bennet's amusement.” Is it fully persuasive? Argue with evidence, including a passage that complicates it.

    Sample answer: The claim is persuasive in part. “whether these pleasing attentions proceed from the impulse of the moment, or are the result of previous study” (Chapter XIV, paragraph 10) supports it: Mr. Bennet asks whether his compliments are "the result of previous study," and Collins admits they are; the narrator then notes that "Mr. Bennet's expectations were fully answered.". But “protested that he never read novels” (Chapter XIV, paragraph 13) complicates it: Collins's refusal of novels, written in a novel; Austen's joke at his expense, and its “never” marks a limit or reversal the claim passes over. A fair verdict is that the claim is mostly right but overstated; it needs a limiting clause to cover that passage.

17. [fill · recall · DOK 1] Fill in the blank with the vocabulary word that fits: “Bennet and her daughters apologised most _____ for Lydia’s interruption, and promised that it should not occur again, if he would resume his book; but Mr.” Word bank: phaeton, backgammon, civilly, superintended

    Key: civilly

18. [mc · recall · DOK 1] What does Collins admit he does?

    A. Writes novels

    B. Prepares compliments in advance

    C. Avoids church

    D. Gambles

    Key: B (Prepares compliments in advance)

19. [mc · recall · DOK 1] Why does Mr. Bennet invite Collins to read?

    A. To learn

    B. To flatter him

    C. For Mary

    D. To enjoy his absurdity

    Key: D (To enjoy his absurdity)

20. [fill · recall · DOK 1] Complete the quotation from Chapter XIV, paragraph 13: "_____ that he never read novels"

    Key: protested

21. [mc · analysis · DOK 3] In this chapter, which theme does the following most directly develop? Collins's patron Lady Catherine shows how rank controls careers in the church.

    A. Pride and self-knowledge

    B. First impressions and prejudice

    C. Class and social mobility

    D. Marriage and money

    Key: D (Marriage and money)

22. [mc · recall · DOK 1] Which word completes this sentence from Chapter XIV, paragraph 2? "It is a pity that great ladies in _____ are not more like her."

    A. offended

    B. general

    C. advantageous

    D. compliments

    Key: B (general)

23. [mc · recall · DOK 1] Which word completes this sentence from Chapter XIV, paragraph 17? "Mr. Bennet accepted the challenge, observing that he acted very wisely in leaving the girls to their own trifling _____."

    A. amusements

    B. peculiarly

    C. general

    D. offended

    Key: A (amusements)

24. [fill · recall · DOK 1] Complete the quotation from Chapter XIV, paragraph 1: "Lady Catherine de Bourgh's attention to his wishes, and _____ for his comfort, appeared very remarkable." Word bank: consideration, peculiarly, condescended, handsome

    Key: consideration

25. [short · inference · DOK 2] What does this passage from Chapter XIV, paragraph 1 reveal about the character or situation? "She had always spoken to him as she would to any other gentleman; she made not the smallest objection to his joining in the society of the neighbourhood, nor to his leaving his parish occasionally for a week or two, to visit his relations." Answer in two or three sentences with one detail.

    Sample answer: The passage (Chapter XIV, paragraph 1) shows the situation turning on first impressions and prejudice: Collins's patron Lady Catherine shows how rank controls careers in the church. The words "neighbourhood" and "occasionally" are the proof, because they show how the moment looks to the people in it. They suggest more than the narrator states outright.

26. [short · analysis · DOK 3] Analyze how the word choice in this passage from Chapter XIV, paragraph 8 shapes its tone: "I do not remember her name among the ladies at court." Pick two words and explain their effect.

    Sample answer: The words "remember" and "ladies" (Chapter XIV, paragraph 8) make the tone heavy and deliberate rather than neutral. That weight points the reader to pride and self-knowledge: Collins's patron Lady Catherine shows how rank controls careers in the church. The author chooses them so the moment feels significant instead of passing.

27. [short · synthesis · DOK 4] Connect this passage from Chapter XIV, paragraph 12 to the story's treatment of women's limited choices: “His cousin was as absurd as he had hoped, and he listened to him with the keenest enjoyment, maintaining at the same time the most resolute composure of countenance, and except in an occasional glance at Elizabeth, requiring no partner in…” Use one other moment from the story as well.
    Sample answer: This passage (Chapter XIV, paragraph 12) develops women's limited choices: Collins's patron Lady Catherine shows how rank controls careers in the church. Its words “countenance” and “maintaining” carry that idea into this moment. The same concern returns in “Other books were produced, and after some deliberation he chose Fordyce’s Sermons.” (Chapter XIV, paragraph 13), so the two passages read as a pattern, not a single moment. Together they show the story treating women's limited choices as central.
28. [short · analysis · DOK 3 · AP: AP-LIT.FIG] Analyze the word choice in “protested that he never read novels” (Chapter XIV, paragraph 13). Pick two words and explain what they suggest.
    Sample answer: Collins's refusal of novels, written in a novel; Austen's joke at his expense. The evidence is “protested that he never read novels” (Chapter XIV, paragraph 13). This develops marriage and money: Collins's patron Lady Catherine shows how rank controls careers in the church. The words “protested” and “novels” carry that meaning: they are the charged choices in the line, and changing either would soften the effect.
29. [short · synthesis · DOK 4 · AP: AP-LIT.LAN] Synthesis: trace how marriage and money develops from Chapter XIII to Chapter XIV. Use one quotation from each.
    Sample answer: Earlier, in Chapter XIII, paragraph 1, the text reads “that you have ordered a good dinner today, because I have reason to expect an addition to our family party” — Mr. Bennet's teasing opening announces a visitor. In Chapter XIV, “whether these pleasing attentions proceed from the impulse of the moment, or are the result of previous study” (Chapter XIV, paragraph 10) — Mr. Bennet's sly question. Collins's patron Lady Catherine shows how rank controls careers in the church.
30. [short · analysis · DOK 3 · AP: AP-LIT.FIG] Analyze how the word choice in this passage from Chapter XIV, paragraph 3 shapes its tone: “The garden in which stands my humble abode, is separated only by a lane from Rosings Park, her ladyship’s residence.” Pick two words and explain their effect.
    Sample answer: The words “separated” and “residence” (Chapter XIV, paragraph 3) make the tone heavy and deliberate rather than neutral. That weight points the reader to class and social mobility: Collins's patron Lady Catherine shows how rank controls careers in the church. The author chooses them so the moment feels significant instead of passing.
31. [short · synthesis · DOK 4 · AP: AP-LIT.FIG] Close reading: how do the diction and syntax of “whether these pleasing attentions proceed from the impulse of the moment, or are the result of previous study” (Chapter XIV, paragraph 10) shape its meaning? Consider a second, competing reading.
    Sample answer: Mr. Bennet's sly question. The evidence is “whether these pleasing attentions proceed from the impulse of the moment, or are the result of previous study” (Chapter XIV, paragraph 10). This develops marriage and money: Collins's patron Lady Catherine shows how rank controls careers in the church. The words “attentions” and “pleasing” carry that meaning: they are the charged choices in the line, and changing either would soften the effect. Mr. Bennet asks whether his compliments are "the result of previous study," and Collins admits they are; the narrator then notes that "Mr. Bennet's expectations were fully answered.".
32. [fill · recall · DOK 1 · AP: AP-LIT.FIG] Complete the quotation from Chapter XIV, paragraph 7: “Lady Catherine herself says that in point of true beauty, Miss de Bourgh is far superior to the handsomest of her sex; because there is that in her features which marks the young woman of _____ birth.” Word bank: handsome, advantageous, distinguished, condescended
    Key: distinguished

33. [mc · inference · DOK 2 · AP: AP-LIT.LAN] What does this passage most clearly show? “whether these pleasing attentions proceed from the impulse of the moment, or are the result of previous study” (Chapter XIV, paragraph 10)

    A. Mr. Bennet's sly question.

    B. Mary's distinction; useful for the title.

    C. Miss Bingley's attempt to lower Elizabeth in his eyes.

    D. The cause of separation.

    Key: A (Mr. Bennet's sly question.)

34. [mc · inference · DOK 2 · AP: AP-LIT.LAN] What does this passage most clearly show? “Mr. Bennet’s expectations were fully answered” (Chapter XIV, paragraph 12)

    A. Elizabeth's certainty, answering Jane's hesitation.

    B. Elizabeth's polite dismissal of the man she once believed.

    C. The chapter opens by clearing the stage for new arrivals.

    D. The narrator shares Mr. Bennet's pleasure in absurdity.

    Key: D (The narrator shares Mr. Bennet's pleasure in absurdity.)

35. [short · synthesis · DOK 4 · AP: AP-LIT.LAN] Connect this passage from Chapter XIV, paragraph 14 to the story's treatment of marriage and money: “I shall walk to Meryton tomorrow to hear more about it, and to ask when Mr. Denny comes back from town.” Use one other moment from the story as well.

    Sample answer: This passage (Chapter XIV, paragraph 14) develops marriage and money: Collins's patron Lady Catherine shows how rank controls careers in the church. Its words “tomorrow” carry that idea into this moment. The same concern returns in “But I will no longer importune my young cousin.” (Chapter XIV, paragraph 16), so the two passages read as a pattern, not a single moment. Together they show the story treating marriage and money as central.

36. [fill · recall · DOK 1 · Dual Credit (Indiana College Core): ICC-WC-1.5] Complete the quotation from Chapter XIV, paragraph 14: “My aunt told me so _____ on Saturday.” Word bank: peculiarly, amusements, herself, teatime

    Key: herself

37. [mc · inference · DOK 2 · Dual Credit (Indiana College Core): ICC-WC-1.5] What does this passage most clearly show? “protested that he never read novels” (Chapter XIV, paragraph 13)

    A. Charlotte's cynical realism, foreshadowing her choice.

    B. Collins's refusal of novels, written in a novel; Austen's joke at his expense.

    C. The colonel's easy manners make Darcy's stiffness look worse by contrast.

    D. Mr. Bennet stops Mary's singing in public.

    Key: B (Collins's refusal of novels, written in a novel; Austen's joke at his expense.)

38. [short · analysis · DOK 3 · Program outcome: LeL-C4-LIT-1] Claim: Austen exposes Collins through his own words, inviting the reader to share Mr. Bennet's amusement. Explain how this evidence supports the claim: “whether these pleasing attentions proceed from the impulse of the moment, or are the result of previous study” (Chapter XIV, paragraph 10).

    Sample answer: Mr. Bennet asks whether his compliments are "the result of previous study," and Collins admits they are; the narrator then notes that "Mr. Bennet's expectations were fully answered.". The evidence is “whether these pleasing attentions proceed from the impulse of the moment, or are the result of previous study” (Chapter XIV, paragraph 10) — Mr. Bennet's sly question. This develops marriage and money: Collins's patron Lady Catherine shows how rank controls careers in the church.

39. [short · synthesis · DOK 4 · Program outcome: LeL-GR-LIT-1] Close reading: how do the diction and syntax of "Mr. Bennet's expectations were fully answered" (Chapter XIV, paragraph 12) shape its meaning? Consider a second, competing reading.

    Sample answer: The narrator shares Mr. Bennet's pleasure in absurdity. The evidence is "Mr. Bennet's expectations were fully answered" (Chapter XIV, paragraph 12). This develops marriage and money: Collins's patron Lady Catherine shows how rank controls careers in the church. The words "expectations" and "answered" carry that meaning: they are the charged choices in the line, and changing either would soften the effect. Mr. Bennet asks whether his compliments are "the result of previous study," and Collins admits they are; the narrator then notes that "Mr. Bennet's expectations were fully answered.".

Rigor version	Items (in order)	Mix
Scaffolded support	1, 2, 3, 4, 5, 6, 7, 8, 9, 10, 11, 12, 13, 14, 15, 16	recall 10, inference 3, analysis 2, synthesis 1
HS Freshman	17, 18, 19, 6, 4, 2, 9, 5, 20, 3, 11, 12, 21, 14, 15, 16	recall 10, inference 2, analysis 3, synthesis 1
HS Sophomore	22, 5, 20, 17, 10, 23, 2, 24, 11, 25, 12, 14, 21, 26, 27, 16	recall 8, inference 3, analysis 3, synthesis 2
HS Junior	2, 5, 7, 3, 18, 19, 17, 11, 12, 13, 21, 28, 15, 14, 29, 16	recall 7, inference 3, analysis 4, synthesis 2
HS Senior	20, 10, 2, 19, 22, 7, 13, 25, 12, 21, 30, 14, 15, 27, 31, 29	recall 6, inference 3, analysis 4, synthesis 3
AP	23, 32, 10, 33, 25, 34, 12, 30, 21, 26, 15, 14, 35, 27, 29, 16	recall 3, inference 4, analysis 5, synthesis 4
College Freshman	7, 36, 10, 37, 12, 25, 14, 30, 15, 21, 26, 27, 31, 16, 29, 35	recall 3, inference 3, analysis 5, synthesis 5
College Sophomore	17, 6, 12, 13, 25, 37, 15, 21, 14, 30, 26, 35, 31, 16, 27, 29	recall 2, inference 4, analysis 5, synthesis 5
College Junior	17, 1, 33, 12, 34, 25, 21, 15, 28, 26, 14, 30, 29, 27, 35, 16	recall 2, inference 4, analysis 6, synthesis 4
College Senior	17, 3, 12, 34, 25, 28, 21, 15, 38, 30, 26, 14, 29, 27, 35, 16	recall 2, inference 3, analysis 7, synthesis 4
Graduate / PhD	1, 10, 25, 12, 14, 28, 26, 30, 21, 15, 27, 29, 16, 35, 39, 31	recall 2, inference 2, analysis 6, synthesis 6

Writing prompts (eleven rigor levels)

Scaffolded support (250 words; AP: see unit standards): Supported track (work from the passage your teacher selects). In "Chapter XIV," how does Austen show pompous flattery? Write a paragraph that states your claim, quotes two details from the passage, and explains how each detail supports your idea. Use the irony you noticed as one piece of evidence.

HS Freshman (350 words; AP: see unit standards): In Chapter XIV, how does Austen develop the idea of pompous flattery? State a clear claim, support it with two or three quotations, and explain how the irony in the chapter helps build that idea.

HS Sophomore (450 words; AP: see unit standards): Analyze how Chapter XIV develops the idea of pompous flattery. Make a precise claim, support it with at least three pieces of textual evidence, and explain how the author's use of irony and characterization shapes that idea. Address one possible counterclaim.

HS Junior (550 words; AP: see unit standards): Analyze how the structure of Chapter XIV (where it begins, turns and ends) and its irony shape the reader's understanding of pompous flattery. Identify one place where the text leaves matters uncertain and explain how that uncertainty adds to its meaning. Distinguish what is directly stated from what is really meant.

HS Senior (600 words; AP: see unit standards): Two readers disagree about what Chapter XIV suggests about pompous flattery. Lay out two plausible interpretations, weigh the evidence for each (including the chapter's irony and characterization), and argue for the stronger one in a sustained, well-organized essay. Distinguish what is directly stated from what is really meant.

AP (650 words; AP: AP-LIT.NAR, AP-LIT.LAN): Write a literary argument in which you analyze how Jane Austen uses irony in Chapter XIV to complicate the reader's understanding of pompous flattery. Develop a defensible thesis, select evidence purposefully, and explain how specific choices of diction and syntax create meaning.

College Freshman (1000 words; AP: see unit standards): Situate Chapter XIV within its historical and literary context and argue how the chapter's treatment of pompous flattery responds to that context. Engage with at least one secondary perspective (a critic, historian or the author's own statements), integrate quotations smoothly, and cite in MLA style.

College Sophomore (1250 words; AP: see unit standards): Read Chapter XIV alongside the conventions of its genre and period. Argue how the chapter's handling of pompous flattery follows or bends those conventions, using the irony as evidence, and test your reading against one published critic. Document two secondary sources in MLA.

College Junior (1500 words; AP: see unit standards): Apply a named critical approach (for example formalist, historicist, feminist, psychoanalytic or ecocritical) to Chapter XIV and its treatment of pompous flattery. State your method, show what it reveals in the chapter's irony and characterization, and identify where the text resists it.

College Senior (2000 words; AP: see unit standards): Develop a research argument that reads Chapter XIV as evidence for a larger claim about pompous flattery in Pride and Prejudice. Connect close reading of the chapter to the whole novel, engage at least four scholarly sources, and state precisely where your reading departs from theirs (Chicago style).

Graduate / PhD (2500 words; AP: see unit standards): Develop an original argument that reads Chapter XIV as a hinge in the novel's larger treatment of pompous flattery. Position your reading within a named critical conversation (for example formalist, historicist, psychoanalytic, feminist or postcolonial approaches), account for the textual history where relevant, and articulate the stakes of your intervention for scholarship on Pride and Prejudice.

SAT-style questions

1. But she is perfectly amiable, and often condescends to drive by my humble abode in her little phaeton and ponies."

   As used in the text, what does the word "phaeton" most nearly mean?

   A. someone who offers opposition
   B. deliver a sermon
   C. a light, open four-wheeled carriage
   D. keep from happening or arising; make impossible

2. "She is a most charming young lady indeed. Lady Catherine herself says that in point of true beauty, Miss de Bourgh is far superior to the handsomest of her sex; because there is that in her features which marks the young woman of distinguished birth. She is unfortunately of a sickly constitution, which has prevented her making that progress in many accomplishments, which she could not otherwise have failed of; as I am informed by the lady who superintended her education, and who still resides with them. But she is perfectly amiable, and often condescends to drive by my humble abode in her little phaeton and ponies."

   Which choice best states a central concern of "Chapter XIV"?

   A. Sisters and judgment
   B. Pompous flattery
   C. Embarrassing relations
   D. Pemberley

SAT key: 1. C (a light, open four-wheeled carriage); 2. B (Pompous flattery)

Lesson 16: Chapter XV

Focus: a charming stranger

Objective: Students will analyze how characterization develops in "Chapter XV" by writing a claim-evidence-reasoning paragraph that cites at least 2 quotations from the section, and will score at least 80% on the section quiz.

Standards: AP: see the unit standards

Teacher only · spoilers

Collins intends to marry a Bennet daughter and, told Jane is likely engaged, shifts to Elizabeth. In Meryton the girls meet the handsome George Wickham; Darcy and Wickham see each other and change color.

Background: Militia officers were socially attractive but often lacked fortune.

Significance: The tense meeting foreshadows a hidden history.

Lesson plan and lecture script (90 minutes)

0–8 min · Bell-ringer · You do (8 min)
Students write to the bell-ringer, then pair-share.
What does the reaction of Darcy and Wickham suggest? Write for five minutes. Starters: I think... because... / This connects to first impressions because....
Prompt: What does the reaction of Darcy and Wickham suggest?
Sentence starters: I think… because… · This connects to first impressions because…
Strong response: A strong response takes a position and anticipates this: Wickham's charm is all surface, and Elizabeth is charmed.

8–18 min · Vocabulary with etymology notes · I do (10 min)
Five key words in context, with verified word histories.
Today's words: seconding — supporting; backing up; unwearying — never tiring; counteracted — offset; reduced the effect of; spokesman — the person who did most of the talking; assents — expressions of agreement. "assents": Origin of "assent": Old French assent; earlier Latin assentiō.
Words: seconding: supporting; backing up · unwearying: never tiring · counteracted: offset; reduced the effect of · spokesman: the person who did most of the talking · assents: expressions of agreement

18–28 min · Background and context · I do (10 min)
Mini-lecture (read or adapt the script).
Militia officers were socially attractive but often lacked fortune. The tense meeting foreshadows a hidden history. Characterization: Collins "was not a sensible man"; he decides to marry Jane and, told she is nearly engaged, switches to Elizabeth "while Mrs. Bennet was stirring the fire." Characterization: Wickham appears in Meryton, handsome and easy; a cold meeting between Wickham and Darcy is seen by Elizabeth. Watch for rank and condescension: Rank is displayed and enforced, above all at Rosings by Lady Catherine; Elizabeth refuses to be cowed. In this chapter: "vacant; and the respect which he felt for her high rank, and his veneration for her as his patroness, mingling with a" (Chapter XV, paragraph 1).

28–40 min · I do: modeled close reading · I do (12 min)
Model the close reading of the anchor quotation using the written think-aloud below.
First, meaning. I read "Mr. Collins was not a sensible man, and the deficiency of nature had been but little assisted by education or society" slowly and put it in my own words: The narrator says Mr. Collins was not sensible, and his lack of sense had not been helped by education or company. Next, craft. I notice the blunt judgment dressed in formal, balanced phrasing. The strongest word is "deficiency": it means a lack, a clinical word that sums him up. Then, effect. How does the narrator judge Mr. Collins? My answer: Austen's narrator openly mocks Collins, explaining his mix of servility and self-importance; the description prepares us to laugh at him and to see why Elizabeth must refuse him.

> Mr. Collins was not a sensible man, and the deficiency of nature had been but little assisted by education or society (Chapter XV, paragraph 1)

Think-aloud: First, meaning. I read "Mr. Collins was not a sensible man, and the deficiency of nature had been but little assisted by education or society" slowly and put it in my own words: The narrator says Mr. Collins was not sensible, and his lack of sense had not been helped by education or company. Next, craft. I notice the blunt judgment dressed in formal, balanced phrasing. The strongest word is "deficiency": it means a lack, a clinical word that sums him up. Then, effect. How does the narrator judge Mr. Collins? My answer: Austen's narrator openly mocks Collins, explaining his mix of servility and self-importance; the description prepares us to laugh at him and to see why Elizabeth must refuse him.

40–55 min · We do: guided annotation · We do (15 min)
Guided analysis of a second quotation; expected answers given.
Ask: What words in this line stand out, and what do they suggest? Expected: The quick switch shows that for Collins any daughter will do; the comedy hides a harsh point about marriage and money. Ask: How does this line connect to first impressions? Expected: Wickham's charm is all surface, and Elizabeth is charmed. (Comic speed: marriage as a choice among interchangeable daughters.)

> Mr. Collins had only to change from Jane to Elizabeth—and it was soon done—done while Mrs. Bennet was stirring the fire (Chapter XV, paragraph 4)

Ask: What words in this line stand out, and what do they suggest?
Expected answer: The quick switch shows that for Collins any daughter will do; the comedy hides a harsh point about marriage and money.
Ask: How does this line connect to first impressions?
Expected answer: Wickham's charm is all surface, and Elizabeth is charmed. (Comic speed: marriage as a choice among interchangeable daughters.)

55–70 min · You do: independent annotation · You do (15 min)
Independent annotation and a claim-evidence-reasoning paragraph (exemplar given).
Annotate the chapter for characterization, characterization (three marks with a margin note each), then write one claim-evidence-reasoning paragraph: what does this chapter suggest about a charming stranger? Then start your writing prompt at your assigned level (HS Sophomore: Analyze how Chapter XV develops the idea of a charming stranger. Make a precise claim, support it with at least three pieces of textual evidence, and explain how the author's use of characterization and foreshadowing shapes that idea. Address one possible counterclaim.) Exemplar: The chapter sets two suitors side by side, one absurd and one charming, and both are judged on surface. When the text says "Mr. Collins had only to change from Jane to Elizabeth—and it was soon done—done while Mrs. Bennet was stirring the fire" (Chapter XV, paragraph 4), it shows this directly. Collins switches brides "while Mrs. Bennet was stirring the fire," treating the daughters as interchangeable, while Wickham's "appearance was greatly in his favour," which is all Elizabeth knows of him.
Task: Annotate the chapter for characterization, characterization (three marks with a margin note each), then write one claim-evidence-reasoning paragraph: what does this chapter suggest about a charming stranger? Then start your writing prompt at your assigned level (HS Sophomore: Analyze how Chapter XV develops the idea of a charming stranger. Make a precise claim, support it with at least three pieces of textual evidence, and explain how the author's use of characterization and foreshadowing shapes that idea. Address one possible counterclaim.)
Exemplar: The chapter sets two suitors side by side, one absurd and one charming, and both are judged on surface. When the text says "Mr. Collins had only to change from Jane to Elizabeth—and it was soon done—done while Mrs. Bennet was stirring the fire" (Chapter XV, paragraph 4), it shows this directly. Collins switches brides "while Mrs. Bennet was stirring the fire," treating the daughters as interchangeable, while Wickham's "appearance was greatly in his favour," which is all Elizabeth knows of him.

70–80 min · Discussion · We do (10 min)
Structured discussion from the 30 tiered questions, with facilitation notes.
Anchor question: What does the reaction of Darcy and Wickham suggest? Point out the cold meeting between Darcy and Wickham: what would a careful reader do with it?
Anchor question: What does the reaction of Darcy and Wickham suggest?
Facilitation: Point out the cold meeting between Darcy and Wickham: what would a careful reader do with it?

80–87 min · Exit ticket / chapter quiz · You do (7 min)
Chapter quiz in the app and an exit ticket (answer given).
Chapter quiz in the app, then: In one sentence, what does this chapter suggest about a charming stranger? Support it with one short quotation. Model answer: The chapter sets two suitors side by side, one absurd and one charming, and both are judged on surface. ("Mr. Collins had only to change from Jane to Elizabeth—and it was soon done—done while Mrs. Bennet was stirring the fire", Chapter XV, paragraph 4). Accept any defensible claim backed by a quotation from the chapter; the answer key for the quiz is in the Quiz section.
Exit ticket: In one sentence, what does this chapter suggest about a charming stranger? Support it with one short quotation.
Answer: Model answer: The chapter sets two suitors side by side, one absurd and one charming, and both are judged on surface. ("Mr. Collins had only to change from Jane to Elizabeth—and it was soon done—done while Mrs. Bennet was stirring the fire", Chapter XV, paragraph 4). Accept any defensible claim backed by a quotation from the chapter; the answer key for the quiz is in the Quiz section.

87–90 min · Closure · I do (3 min)
Summarize the lesson and preview the next reading.
Today we saw how characterization shapes a charming stranger. Key takeaway: Wickham's charm is all surface, and Elizabeth is charmed.

Total: 90 minutes.

Teacher analysis (spoilers)

Literary elements

- Characterization: Collins "was not a sensible man"; he decides to marry Jane and, told she is nearly engaged, switches to Elizabeth "while Mrs. Bennet was stirring the fire."
- Characterization: Wickham appears in Meryton, handsome and easy; a cold meeting between Wickham and Darcy is seen by Elizabeth.

Themes and how they develop

- first impressions: Wickham's charm is all surface, and Elizabeth is charmed.

Symbols and motifs

- rank and condescension: Rank is displayed and enforced, above all at Rosings by Lady Catherine; Elizabeth refuses to be cowed. In this chapter: “vacant; and the respect which he felt for her high rank, and his veneration for her as his patroness, mingling with a” (Chapter XV, paragraph 1).
- pride: Pride is discussed openly and shown in action; who is proud, and whether pride is a fault, keeps shifting. In this chapter: “rights as a rector, made him altogether a mixture of pride and obsequiousness, self-importance and humility” (Chapter XV, paragraph 1).

Key quotations (checked against the reading text)

- “Mr. Collins was not a sensible man, and the deficiency of nature had been but little assisted by education or society” (Chapter XV, paragraph 1) The narrator's verdict.
- “Mr. Collins had only to change from Jane to Elizabeth—and it was soon done—done while Mrs. Bennet was stirring the fire” (Chapter XV, paragraph 4) Comic speed: marriage as a choice among interchangeable daughters.
- “His appearance was greatly in his favour” (Chapter XV, paragraph 8) Wickham judged on appearance.

Model claim-evidence-reasoning

Claim: The chapter sets two suitors side by side, one absurd and one charming, and both are judged on surface.
Evidence: “Mr. Collins had only to change from Jane to Elizabeth—and it was soon done—done while Mrs. Bennet was stirring the fire” (Chapter XV, paragraph 4)
Reasoning: Collins switches brides "while Mrs. Bennet was stirring the fire," treating the daughters as interchangeable, while Wickham's "appearance was greatly in his favour," which is all Elizabeth knows of him.

Vocabulary with etymology notes

Word	Definition (in this sentence)	In context	Word history
seconding (verb)	supporting; backing up	Philips’ throwing up the parlour window, and loudly seconding the invitation.
unwearying (adjective)	never tiring	Collins repeated his apologies in quitting the room, and was assured with unwearying civility that they were perfectly needless.
counteracted (verb)	offset; reduced the effect of	The subjection in which his father had brought him up, had given him originally great humility of manner, but it was now a good deal counteracted by the self-conceit of a weak head, living in retirement, and the consequential feelings of early and unexpected prosperity.
spokesman (noun)	the person who did most of the talking	Bingley was the principal spokesman, and Miss Bennet the principal object.

assents (noun)	expressions of agreement	In pompous nothings on his side, and civil assents on that of his cousins, their time passed till they entered Meryton.	"assents": Origin of "assent": Old French assent; earlier Latin assentiō. (Liber et Libri origin note, https://en.wiktionary.org/wiki/assent#Etymology)
lottery (noun)	a card game played with tickets for prizes	Philips protested that they would have a nice comfortable noisy game of lottery tickets, and a little bit of hot supper afterwards.	"lottery": Origin: Italian lotteria. (Liber et Libri origin note, https://en.wiktionary.org/wiki/lottery#Etymology)
cessation (noun)	a stopping	Bennet, with little cessation, of his house and garden at Hunsford.	"cessation": Origin: Middle French cessation; earlier Latin cessātiō. (Liber et Libri origin note, https://en.wiktionary.org/wiki/cessation#Etymology)
exclamations (noun)	an abrupt excited utterance	Philips was quite awed by such an excess of good breeding; but her contemplation of one stranger was soon put an end to by exclamations and inquiries about the other, of whom, however, she could only tell her nieces what they already knew, that Mr.

Discussion questions

1. What does the reaction of Darcy and Wickham suggest?
2. Where does characterization appear in this chapter, and what effect does it have? Point to one passage.
3. How does this chapter connect to the book's larger concern with women's limited choices?

Classroom discussion questions (30, tiered)

Wait time after every question (3 s for DOK 1, 5 s for DOK 2, 8 to 10 s for DOK 3 and 4); think-pair-share on DOK 3 and 4; answer each response with a follow-up probe; close with student-generated questions. Focus sets by rigor level: Scaffolded support: 1, 2, 3, 4, 5, 6, 11, 12, 13, 14, 21, 22; HS Freshman: 1, 2, 3, 4, 5, 12, 13, 14, 15, 22, 23, 24; HS Sophomore: 1, 2, 3, 4, 13, 14, 15, 16, 17, 23, 24, 25; HS Junior: 1, 2, 3, 14, 15, 16, 17, 18, 24, 25, 26, 27; HS Senior: 1, 2, 3, 15, 16, 17, 18, 25, 26, 27, 28, 29; AP: 1, 2, 16, 17, 18, 19, 20, 26, 27, 28, 29, 30; College Freshman: 1, 2, 17, 18, 19, 20, 21, 22, 27, 28, 29, 30; College Sophomore: 1, 2, 11, 18, 19, 20, 21, 22, 23, 28, 29, 30; College Junior: 1, 11, 12, 19, 20, 21, 22, 23, 24, 25, 29, 30; College Senior: 1, 11, 12, 13, 20, 21, 22, 23, 24, 25, 26, 30; Graduate / PhD: 1, 11, 12, 13, 21, 22, 23, 24, 25, 26, 27, 28

Literal / recall

1. Why did Collins come to Longbourn? [DOK 1 · coldCallWithSupport · wait 3 s · AP: unit standards] Look for: To choose a wife among the daughters
2. Whom does Collins choose after Jane? [DOK 1 · turnAndTalk · wait 3 s · AP: unit standards] Look for: Elizabeth
3. Who is Mr. Wickham? [DOK 1 · coldCallWithSupport · wait 3 s · AP: unit standards] Look for: A charming militia officer
4. What happens when Darcy and Wickham meet? [DOK 1 · turnAndTalk · wait 3 s · AP: unit standards] Look for: Both change color

5. What first impression does Wickham make? [DOK 1 · coldCallWithSupport · wait 3 s · AP: unit standards] Look for: Very charming
6. Retell the three most important events of "Chapter XV" in order, in one sentence each. [DOK 1 · turnAndTalk · wait 3 s · AP: unit standards] Look for: Collins intends to marry a Bennet daughter and, told Jane is likely engaged, shifts to Elizabeth. In Meryton the girls meet the handsome George Wickham; Darcy and Wickham see each other and change color.
7. Which characters appear or are mentioned in "Chapter XV"? Name two and one thing each says or does. [DOK 1 · coldCallWithSupport · wait 3 s · AP: unit standards] Look for: Names and actions taken from the chapter; check against the teacher summary.
8. Where and when does "Chapter XV" take place? Point to the line that tells you. [DOK 1 · turnAndTalk · wait 3 s · AP: unit standards] Look for: A place/time detail quoted from the chapter.
9. Reread: "Philips' throwing up the parlour window, and loudly seconding the invitation." What does "seconding" mean here, and what is literally happening in this line? [DOK 1 · turnAndTalk · wait 3 s · AP: unit standards] Look for: seconding: supporting; backing up.
10. Reread: "Collins repeated his apologies in quitting the room, and was assured with unwearying civility that they were perfectly needless." What does "unwearying" mean here, and what is literally happening in this line? [DOK 1 · turnAndTalk · wait 3 s · AP: unit standards] Look for: unwearying: never tiring.

Inferential / analytical

1. What does "Chapter XV" suggest about a charming stranger? State the inference and the line that supports it. [DOK 2 · thinkPairShare · wait 5 s · AP-LIT.LAN] Look for: The tense meeting foreshadows a hidden history.
2. Find one example of characterization in this chapter. What does it reveal that a plain statement would not? [DOK 2 · followUp · wait 5 s · AP-LIT.CHR] Look for: Look for what characters say, do and think, and how others react to them.
3. How does the foreshadowing in this chapter shape what we understand about a charming stranger? [DOK 3 · thinkPairShare · wait 8 s · AP-LIT.STR] Look for: Look for hints, warnings or images that point to later events.
   Answer guidance: A defensible line of argument: The chapter sets two suitors side by side, one absurd and one charming, and both are judged on surface. Useful evidence: "Mr. Collins was not a sensible man, and the deficiency of nature had been but little assisted by education or society" (Chapter XV, paragraph 1): The narrator's verdict. Theme link: Wickham's charm is all surface, and Elizabeth is charmed. Credit any position that is supported by quotation and reasoning; push one-sided answers to address the strongest counterpoint.
4. In the passage that begins "In pompous nothings on his side, and civil assents on that of his cousins, their time passed till they entered Meryton.", why might Austen have chosen these particular words? Pick two and explain their connotations. [DOK 2 · followUp · wait 5 s · AP-LIT.FIG] Look for: Diction analysis of two words in the anchor passage.
5. What causes the main turn in "Chapter XV", and what effect is it likely to have on what follows? [DOK 2 · followUp · wait 5 s · AP-LIT.STR] Look for: Collins intends to marry a Bennet daughter and, told Jane is likely engaged, shifts to Elizabeth. In Meryton the girls meet the handsome George Wickham; Darcy and Wickham see each other and change color.
6. How does "Chapter XV" build on "Chapter XIV"? Name one link of cause and effect. [DOK 3 · thinkPairShare · wait 8 s · AP-LIT.STR] Look for: A causal or structural link between this and the previous chapter.

Answer guidance: A defensible line of argument: The chapter sets two suitors side by side, one absurd and one charming, and both are judged on surface. Useful evidence: “Mr. Collins had only to change from Jane to Elizabeth—and it was soon done—done while Mrs. Bennet was stirring the fire” (Chapter XV, paragraph 4): Comic speed: marriage as a choice among interchangeable daughters. Theme link: Wickham's charm is all surface, and Elizabeth is charmed. Credit any position that is supported by quotation and reasoning; push one-sided answers to address the strongest counterpoint.

7. What can we infer about a character's motives from what they say and do here, as opposed to what they claim? [DOK 3 · followUp · wait 8 s · AP-LIT.CHR] Look for: An inference about motive supported by a quoted line.
   Answer guidance: A defensible line of argument: The chapter sets two suitors side by side, one absurd and one charming, and both are judged on surface. Useful evidence: “His appearance was greatly in his favour” (Chapter XV, paragraph 8): Wickham judged on appearance. On characterization: Wickham appears in Meryton, handsome and easy; a cold meeting between Wickham and Darcy is seen by Elizabeth. Credit any position that is supported by quotation and reasoning; push one-sided answers to address the strongest counterpoint.
8. The bell-ringer asked: “What does the reaction of Darcy and Wickham suggest?” Now that we have read closely, how would you revise your first answer, and which line changed your mind? [DOK 2 · thinkPairShare · wait 5 s · AP-LIT.LAN] Look for: A revised answer anchored in the text.
9. Where does irony appear, and how does it connect this chapter to the larger concern with women's limited choices? [DOK 3 · followUp · wait 8 s · AP-LIT.NAR] Look for: Look for gaps between what characters expect or say and what is true.
   Answer guidance: A defensible line of argument: The chapter sets two suitors side by side, one absurd and one charming, and both are judged on surface. Useful evidence: “Mr. Collins was not a sensible man, and the deficiency of nature had been but little assisted by education or society” (Chapter XV, paragraph 1): The narrator's verdict. Theme link: Wickham's charm is all surface, and Elizabeth is charmed. Credit any position that is supported by quotation and reasoning; push one-sided answers to address the strongest counterpoint.
10. Background: Militia officers were socially attractive but often lacked fortune. How does knowing this change the way you read one moment in the chapter? [DOK 3 · thinkPairShare · wait 8 s · AP-LIT.SET] Look for: A specific moment reread in light of the context.
    Answer guidance: A defensible line of argument: The chapter sets two suitors side by side, one absurd and one charming, and both are judged on surface. Useful evidence: “Mr. Collins had only to change from Jane to Elizabeth—and it was soon done—done while Mrs. Bennet was stirring the fire” (Chapter XV, paragraph 4): Comic speed: marriage as a choice among interchangeable daughters. Theme link: Wickham's charm is all surface, and Elizabeth is charmed. Credit any position that is supported by quotation and reasoning; push one-sided answers to address the strongest counterpoint.

Evaluative / synthesis / creative

1. A critic might argue: “The tense meeting foreshadows a hidden history.” How far do you agree? Take a stand and defend it with two lines from the chapter. [DOK 3 · fourCorners · wait 8 s · AP-LIT.LAN] Look for: A defended position with evidence and one counterpoint.
   Answer guidance: A defensible line of argument: The chapter sets two suitors side by side, one absurd and one charming, and both are judged on surface. Useful evidence: “His appearance was greatly in his favour” (Chapter XV, paragraph 8): Wickham judged on appearance. Theme link: Wickham's charm is all surface, and Elizabeth is charmed. Credit any position that is supported by quotation and reasoning; push one-sided answers to address the strongest counterpoint.

2. Which character in this chapter acts most wisely, and which least? Judge them by a standard you name. [DOK 3 · thinkPairShare · wait 8 s · AP-LIT.CHR, AP-LIT.LAN] Look for: An evaluation using an explicit criterion and evidence.

   Answer guidance: A defensible line of argument: The chapter sets two suitors side by side, one absurd and one charming, and both are judged on surface. Useful evidence: “Mr. Collins was not a sensible man, and the deficiency of nature had been but little assisted by education or society” (Chapter XV, paragraph 1): The narrator's verdict. On characterization: Wickham appears in Meryton, handsome and easy; a cold meeting between Wickham and Darcy is seen by Elizabeth. Credit any position that is supported by quotation and reasoning; push one-sided answers to address the strongest counterpoint.

3. Rewrite one moment of “Chapter XV” from the point of view of a different character. What does the new angle reveal or hide about a charming stranger? [DOK 4 · thinkPairShare · wait 8 s · AP-LIT.LAN, AP-LIT.NAR] Look for: A creative product with a rationale tied to the text.

   Answer guidance: A defensible line of argument: The chapter sets two suitors side by side, one absurd and one charming, and both are judged on surface. Useful evidence: “Mr. Collins had only to change from Jane to Elizabeth—and it was soon done—done while Mrs. Bennet was stirring the fire” (Chapter XV, paragraph 4): Comic speed: marriage as a choice among interchangeable daughters. Theme link: Wickham's charm is all surface, and Elizabeth is charmed. Credit any position that is supported by quotation and reasoning; push one-sided answers to address the strongest counterpoint.

4. Write three questions of your own about “Chapter XV”: one recall, one “why/how”, and one “should/what if”. Trade with a partner and answer theirs. [DOK 3 · studentGenerated · wait 8 s · AP-LIT.LAN] Look for: Student-generated questions at three levels.

   Answer guidance: A defensible line of argument: The chapter sets two suitors side by side, one absurd and one charming, and both are judged on surface. Useful evidence: “His appearance was greatly in his favour” (Chapter XV, paragraph 8): Wickham judged on appearance. Theme link: Wickham's charm is all surface, and Elizabeth is charmed. Credit any position that is supported by quotation and reasoning; push one-sided answers to address the strongest counterpoint.

5. Connect this chapter to first impressions and prejudice: is the link strong or weak so far? What would Austen need to show next to strengthen it? [DOK 4 · socraticCircle · wait 8 s · AP-LIT.LAN] Look for: A judgment of thematic development across the work.

   Answer guidance: A defensible line of argument: The chapter sets two suitors side by side, one absurd and one charming, and both are judged on surface. Useful evidence: “Mr. Collins was not a sensible man, and the deficiency of nature had been but little assisted by education or society” (Chapter XV, paragraph 1): The narrator's verdict. Theme link: Wickham's charm is all surface, and Elizabeth is charmed. Credit any position that is supported by quotation and reasoning; push one-sided answers to address the strongest counterpoint.

6. Is the characterization in this chapter effective, or does it feel heavy-handed? Evaluate it as a reader would in a review. [DOK 3 · fourCorners · wait 8 s · AP-LIT.CHR, AP-LIT.LAN] Look for: An evaluative judgment with criteria and evidence.

   Answer guidance: A defensible line of argument: The chapter sets two suitors side by side, one absurd and one charming, and both are judged on surface. Useful evidence: “Mr. Collins had only to change from Jane to Elizabeth—and it was soon done—done while Mrs. Bennet was stirring the fire” (Chapter XV, paragraph 4): Comic speed: marriage as a choice among interchangeable daughters. On characterization: Wickham appears in Meryton, handsome and easy; a cold meeting between Wickham and Darcy is seen by Elizabeth. Credit any position that is supported by quotation and reasoning; push one-sided answers to address the strongest counterpoint.

7. Compare how “Chapter XV” treats a charming stranger with how another text, film or event you know treats a similar idea. What does Pride and Prejudice see that the other misses? [DOK 4 · socraticCircle · wait 8 s · AP-LIT.LAN] Look for: A cross-text synthesis.

   Answer guidance: A defensible line of argument: The chapter sets two suitors side by side, one absurd and one charming, and both are judged on surface. Useful evidence: “His appearance was greatly in his favour” (Chapter XV, paragraph 8): Wickham judged on appearance. Theme link: Wickham's charm is all surface, and Elizabeth is charmed. Credit any position that is supported by quotation and reasoning; push one-sided answers to address the strongest counterpoint.

8. Predict what “Chapter XVI” will bring, using two clues from this chapter. After reading, evaluate your prediction. [DOK 3 · thinkPairShare · wait 8 s · AP-LIT.LAN, AP-LIT.STR] Look for: A prediction or judgment justified with textual clues.

   Answer guidance: A defensible line of argument: The chapter sets two suitors side by side, one absurd and one charming, and both are judged on surface. Useful evidence: “Mr. Collins was not a sensible man, and the deficiency of nature had been but little assisted by education or society” (Chapter XV, paragraph 1): The narrator's verdict. Theme link: Wickham's charm is all surface, and Elizabeth is charmed. Credit any position that is supported by quotation and reasoning; push one-sided answers to address the strongest counterpoint.

9. Design a one-paragraph modern adaptation of this chapter (setting, characters, conflict). What must stay the same for it to still be about a charming stranger? [DOK 4 · thinkPairShare · wait 8 s · AP-LIT.LAN] Look for: A creative transfer that keeps the core idea.

   Answer guidance: A defensible line of argument: The chapter sets two suitors side by side, one absurd and one charming, and both are judged on surface. Useful evidence: “Mr. Collins had only to change from Jane to Elizabeth—and it was soon done—done while Mrs. Bennet was stirring the fire” (Chapter XV, paragraph 4): Comic speed: marriage as a choice among interchangeable daughters. Theme link: Wickham's charm is all surface, and Elizabeth is charmed. Credit any position that is supported by quotation and reasoning; push one-sided answers to address the strongest counterpoint.

10. What question would you most like to ask Jane Austen about this chapter, and what answer do you think the text itself gives? [DOK 4 · studentGenerated · wait 8 s · AP-LIT.LAN] Look for: A student-generated question answered from evidence.

    Answer guidance: A defensible line of argument: The chapter sets two suitors side by side, one absurd and one charming, and both are judged on surface. Useful evidence: “His appearance was greatly in his favour” (Chapter XV, paragraph 8): Wickham judged on appearance. Theme link: Wickham's charm is all surface, and Elizabeth is charmed. Credit any position that is supported by quotation and reasoning; push one-sided answers to address the strongest counterpoint.

Annotation focus

- Characterization: look for what characters say, do and think, and how others react to them (anchor passage in the We do segment)
- Also notice Foreshadowing: hints, warnings or images that point to later events

- Also notice Irony: gaps between what characters expect or say and what is true

Chapter quiz: item bank (all eleven rigor versions)

1. [fill · recall · DOK 1] Complete the quotation from Chapter XV, paragraph 8: "His _____ was greatly in his favour"

   Key: appearance

2. [fill · recall · DOK 1] Fill in the blank with the vocabulary word that fits: "In pompous nothings on his side, and civil _____ on that of his cousins, their time passed till they entered Meryton." Word bank: unwearying, seconding, assents, counteracted

   Key: assents

3. [fill · recall · DOK 1] Complete the quotation from Chapter XV, paragraph 1: "Mr. Collins was not a sensible man, and the _____ of nature had been but little assisted by education or society"

   Key: deficiency

4. [mc · recall · DOK 1] Why did Collins come to Longbourn?

   A. To preach

   B. To choose a wife among the daughters

   C. To meet Darcy

   D. To sell land

   Key: B (To choose a wife among the daughters)

5. [mc · recall · DOK 1] What happens when Darcy and Wickham meet?

   A. They embrace

   B. They fight

   C. They ignore each other calmly

   D. Both change color

   Key: D (Both change color)

6. [fill · recall · DOK 1] Fill in the blank with the vocabulary word that fits: "Philips was quite awed by such an excess of good breeding; but her contemplation of one stranger was soon put an end to by _____ and inquiries about the other, of whom, however, she could only tell her nieces what they already knew, that Mr." Word bank: exclamations, unwearying, counteracted, seconding

   Key: exclamations

7. [mc · recall · DOK 1] In the line "Collins repeated his apologies in quitting the room, and was assured with unwearying civility that they were perfectly needless.", what does "unwearying" most nearly mean?

   A. to belong to or be connected with

   B. hear, usually without the knowledge of the speakers

   C. never tiring

   D. closely; carefully

   Key: C (never tiring)

8. [mc · recall · DOK 1] In the line "Philips' throwing up the parlour window, and loudly seconding the invitation.", what does "seconding" most nearly mean?

   A. invited; sought out

   B. reject with contempt

C. oblivious of dangers or perils or calmly resolute in facing them

D. supporting; backing up

Key: D (supporting; backing up)

9. [mc · recall · DOK 1] In the line “The subjection in which his father had brought him up, had given him originally great humility of manner, but it was now a good deal counteracted by the self-conceit of a weak head, living in retirement, and the…”, what does “counteracted” most nearly mean?

   A. great wickedness

   B. willingness

   C. kept from leaving

   D. offset; reduced the effect of Key: D (offset; reduced the effect of)

10. [mc · recall · DOK 1] In the line “Bingley was the principal spokesman, and Miss Bennet the principal object.”, what does “spokesman” most nearly mean?

    A. be present or associated with an event or entity

    B. the person who did most of the talking

    C. riders who guide the horses pulling a carriage

    D. cook with dry heat, usually in an oven

    Key: B (the person who did most of the talking)

11. [fill · recall · DOK 1] Fill in the blank with the vocabulary word that fits: “Bennet, with little _____, of his house and garden at Hunsford.” Word bank: seconding, cessation, unwearying, counteracted

    Key: cessation

12. [mc · inference · DOK 2] Which choice best states a central concern of “Chapter XV”?

    A. Disappointment and philosophy

    B. Puzzling visits

    C. A charming stranger

    D. The hidden benefactor

    Key: C (A charming stranger)

13. [short · inference · DOK 2] What can you infer from this line? “Mr. Collins had only to change from Jane to Elizabeth—and it was soon done—done while Mrs. Bennet was stirring the fire” (Chapter XV, paragraph 4) Answer in two or three sentences with one detail.

    Sample answer: Comic speed: marriage as a choice among interchangeable daughters. The evidence is “Mr. Collins had only to change from Jane to Elizabeth—and it was soon done—done while Mrs. Bennet was stirring the fire” (Chapter XV, paragraph 4).

14. [short · analysis · DOK 3] Analyze the word choice in “His appearance was greatly in his favour” (Chapter XV, paragraph 8). Pick two words and explain what they suggest.

    Sample answer: Wickham judged on appearance. The evidence is “His appearance was greatly in his favour” (Chapter XV, paragraph 8). This develops first impressions: Wickham's charm is all surface, and Elizabeth is charmed. The words “appearance” and “greatly” carry that meaning: they are the charged choices in the line, and changing either would soften the effect.

15. [mc · analysis · DOK 3] Which literary element does this describe in "Chapter XV"? Collins 'was not a sensible man'; he decides to marry Jane and, told she is nearly engaged, switches to Elizabeth 'while Mrs. Bennet was stirring the fire.'

    A. Alliteration

    B. Imagery

    C. Symbolism

    D. Characterization

    Key: D (Characterization)

16. [short · synthesis · DOK 4] Synthesis: trace how first impressions develops from Chapter XII to Chapter XV. Use one quotation from each.

    Sample answer: Earlier, in Chapter XII, paragraph 4, the text reads "She attracted him more than he liked" — Darcy's resistance to his own feelings. In Chapter XV, "Mr. Collins was not a sensible man, and the deficiency of nature had been but little assisted by education or society" (Chapter XV, paragraph 1) — The narrator's verdict. Wickham's charm is all surface, and Elizabeth is charmed.

17. [mc · recall · DOK 1] Whom does Collins choose after Jane?

    A. Lydia

    B. Mary

    C. Elizabeth

    D. Kitty

    Key: C (Elizabeth)

18. [mc · recall · DOK 1] Which word completes this sentence from Chapter XV, paragraph 8? "Both _____ colour, one looked white, the other red."

    A. changed

    B. protested

    C. impossible

    D. prospect

    Key: A (changed)

19. [fill · recall · DOK 1] Complete the quotation from Chapter XV, paragraph 1: "A fortunate chance had _____ him to Lady Catherine de Bourgh when the living of Hunsford was vacant" Word bank: disinterested, regimentals, impossible, recommended

    Key: recommended

20. [fill · recall · DOK 1] Fill in the blank with the vocabulary word that fits: "Philips protested that they would have a nice comfortable noisy game of _____ tickets, and a little bit of hot supper afterwards." Word bank: counteracted, unwearying, lottery, seconding

    Key: lottery

21. [mc · recall · DOK 1] What first impression does Wickham make?

    A. Shy

    B. Very charming

    C. Rude

    D. Ugly

Key: B (Very charming)

22. [short · inference · DOK 2] What does this passage from Chapter XV, paragraph 2 reveal about the character or situation? “Having now a good house and very sufficient income, he intended to marry” Answer in two or three sentences with one detail.

    Sample answer: The passage (Chapter XV, paragraph 2) shows the situation turning on first impressions and prejudice: Wickham's charm is all surface, and Elizabeth is charmed. The words “sufficient” and “intended” are the proof, because they show how the moment looks to the people in it. They suggest more than the narrator states outright.

23. [short · analysis · DOK 3] Analyze how the word choice in this passage from Chapter XV, paragraph 5 shapes its tone: “Mrs. Bennet treasured up the hint, and trusted that she might soon have two daughters married; and the man whom she could not bear to speak of the day before, was now high in her good graces.” Pick two words and explain their effect.

    Sample answer: The words “treasured” and “daughters” (Chapter XV, paragraph 5) make the tone heavy and deliberate rather than neutral. That weight points the reader to class and social mobility: Wickham's charm is all surface, and Elizabeth is charmed. The author chooses them so the moment feels significant instead of passing.

24. [fill · recall · DOK 1] Complete the quotation from Chapter XV, paragraph 13: “He _____ that except Lady Catherine and her daughter, he had never seen a more elegant woman” Word bank: immediately, disinterested, protested, succeeded

    Key: protested

25. [mc · recall · DOK 1] Who is Mr. Wickham?

    A. A charming militia officer

    B. A clergyman

    C. A lawyer

    D. Bingley's cousin

    Key: A (A charming militia officer)

26. [mc · recall · DOK 1] Which word completes this sentence from Chapter XV, paragraph 4? “Elizabeth, equally next to Jane in birth and beauty, _____ her of course.”

    A. prospect

    B. succeeded

    C. changed

    D. disinterested

    Key: B (succeeded)

27. [fill · recall · DOK 1] Complete the quotation from Chapter XV, paragraph 8: “The officer was the very Mr. Denny, _____ whose return from London Lydia came to inquire, and he bowed as they passed.” Word bank: distinguishing, impossible, prospect, concerning

    Key: concerning

28. [short · analysis · DOK 3] Analyze how the word choice in this passage from Chapter XV, paragraph 8 shapes its tone: “He was then, he said, on his way to Longbourn on purpose to inquire after her.” Pick two words and explain their effect.

    Sample answer: The words “purpose” and “inquire” (Chapter XV, paragraph 8) make the tone heavy and deliberate rather than neutral. That weight points the reader to pride and self-knowledge: Wickham's charm is all surface, and Elizabeth is charmed. The author chooses them so the moment feels significant instead of passing.

29. [mc · analysis · DOK 3] Which literary element does this describe in “Chapter XV”? Wickham appears in Meryton, handsome and easy; a cold meeting between Wickham and Darcy is seen by Elizabeth.

    A. Alliteration

    B. Setting

    C. Personification

    D. Characterization

    Key: D (Characterization)

30. [short · synthesis · DOK 4] Connect this passage from Chapter XV, paragraph 8 to the story's treatment of women's limited choices: “The introduction was followed up on his side by a happy readiness of conversation—a readiness at the same time perfectly correct and unassuming” Use one other moment from the story as well.

    Sample answer: This passage (Chapter XV, paragraph 8) develops women's limited choices: Wickham's charm is all surface, and Elizabeth is charmed. Its words “conversation” and “introduction” carry that idea into this moment. The same concern returns in “In another minute Mr. Bingley, but without seeming to have noticed what passed, took leave and rode on with his friend.” (Chapter XV, paragraph 9), so the two passages read as a pattern, not a single moment. Together they show the story treating women's limited choices as central.

31. [short · synthesis · DOK 4] Connect this passage from Chapter XV, paragraph 13 to the story's treatment of marriage and money: “Something he supposed might be attributed to his connection with them, but yet he had never met with so much attention in the whole course of his life.” Use one other moment from the story as well.

    Sample answer: This passage (Chapter XV, paragraph 13) develops marriage and money: Wickham's charm is all surface, and Elizabeth is charmed. Its words “connection” and “attributed” carry that idea into this moment. The same concern returns in “Having now a good house and very sufficient income, he intended to marry” (Chapter XV, paragraph 2), so the two passages read as a pattern, not a single moment. Together they show the story treating marriage and money as central.

32. [short · synthesis · DOK 4 · AP: AP-LIT.LAN] Evaluate this claim about the chapter: “The chapter sets two suitors side by side, one absurd and one charming, and both are judged on surface.” Is it fully persuasive? Argue with evidence, including a passage that complicates it.

    Sample answer: The claim is persuasive in part. “Mr. Collins had only to change from Jane to Elizabeth—and it was soon done—done while Mrs. Bennet was stirring the fire” (Chapter XV, paragraph 4) supports it: Collins switches brides "while Mrs. Bennet was stirring the fire," treating the daughters as interchangeable, while Wickham's "appearance was greatly in his favour," which is all Elizabeth knows of him. But “Mr. Collins was not a sensible man, and the deficiency of nature had been but little assisted by education or society” (Chapter XV, paragraph 1) complicates it: the line (the narrator's verdict) shows the same issue from another side, and its “not” marks a limit or reversal the claim passes over. Weighing the two passages, the claim survives, but only once it admits the tension the second passage creates.

33. [mc · inference · DOK 2 · AP: AP-LIT.LAN] What does this passage most clearly show? “His appearance was greatly in his favour” (Chapter XV, paragraph 8)

    A. Mr. Bennet's admission, the most serious line he speaks.

    B. Elizabeth's challenge: playful and defiant, the voice Darcy finds irresistible.

    C. Darcy's insult; the source of Elizabeth's prejudice.

    D. Wickham judged on appearance.

    Key: D (Wickham judged on appearance.)

34. [short · inference · DOK 2 · AP: AP-LIT.CHR] What can you infer from this line? “Mr. Collins was not a sensible man, and the deficiency of nature had been but little assisted by education or society” (Chapter XV, paragraph 1) Answer in two or three sentences with one detail.
    Sample answer: The narrator's verdict. The evidence is “Mr. Collins was not a sensible man, and the deficiency of nature had been but little assisted by education or society” (Chapter XV, paragraph 1).

35. [short · synthesis · DOK 4 · Dual Credit (Indiana College Core): ICC-WC-1.5] Close reading: how do the diction and syntax of “Mr. Collins was not a sensible man, and the deficiency of nature had been but little assisted by education or society” (Chapter XV, paragraph 1) shape its meaning? Consider a second, competing reading.
    Sample answer: The narrator's verdict. The evidence is “Mr. Collins was not a sensible man, and the deficiency of nature had been but little assisted by education or society” (Chapter XV, paragraph 1). This develops first impressions: Wickham's charm is all surface, and Elizabeth is charmed. The words “deficiency” and “education” carry that meaning: they are the charged choices in the line, and changing either would soften the effect. Collins switches brides "while Mrs. Bennet was stirring the fire," treating the daughters as interchangeable, while Wickham's "appearance was greatly in his favour," which is all Elizabeth knows of him.

36. [mc · inference · DOK 2 · Program outcome: LeL-C3-LIT-1] What does this passage most clearly show? “Mr. Collins had only to change from Jane to Elizabeth—and it was soon done—done while Mrs. Bennet was stirring the fire” (Chapter XV, paragraph 4)

    A. Comic speed: marriage as a choice among interchangeable daughters.

    B. Charlotte's cynical realism, foreshadowing her choice.

    C. "Wisely" is ironic: his caution will deepen her misjudgment.

    D. Wickham's interest shifts to an heiress, Miss King.

    Key: A (Comic speed: marriage as a choice among interchangeable daughters.)

37. [short · synthesis · DOK 4 · Program outcome: LeL-C4-LIT-1] Close reading: how do the diction and syntax of “Mr. Collins had only to change from Jane to Elizabeth—and it was soon done—done while Mrs. Bennet was stirring the fire” (Chapter XV, paragraph 4) shape its meaning? Consider a second, competing reading.
    Sample answer: Comic speed: marriage as a choice among interchangeable daughters. The evidence is “Mr. Collins had only to change from Jane to Elizabeth—and it was soon done—done while Mrs. Bennet was stirring the fire” (Chapter XV, paragraph 4). This develops first impressions: Wickham's charm is all surface, and Elizabeth is charmed. The words “stirring” and “change” carry that meaning: they are the charged choices in the line, and changing either would soften the effect. Collins switches brides "while Mrs. Bennet was stirring the fire," treating the daughters as interchangeable, while Wickham's "appearance was greatly in his favour," which is all Elizabeth knows of him.

38. [short · analysis · DOK 3 · Program outcome: LeL-GR-LIT-1] Claim: The chapter sets two suitors side by side, one absurd and one charming, and both are judged on surface. Explain how this evidence supports the claim: “Mr. Collins had only to change from Jane to Elizabeth—and it was soon done—done while Mrs. Bennet was stirring the fire” (Chapter XV, paragraph 4).
    Sample answer: Collins switches brides "while Mrs. Bennet was stirring the fire," treating the daughters as interchangeable, while Wickham's "appearance was greatly in his favour," which is all Elizabeth knows of him. The evidence is “Mr. Collins had only to change from Jane to Elizabeth—and it was soon done—done while Mrs. Bennet was stirring the fire” (Chapter XV, paragraph 4) — Comic speed: marriage as a choice among interchangeable daughters. This develops first impressions: Wickham's charm is all surface, and Elizabeth is charmed.

Rigor version	Items (in order)	Mix
Scaffolded support	1, 2, 3, 4, 5, 6, 7, 8, 9, 10, 11, 12, 13, 14, 15, 16

		recall 11, inference 2, analysis 2, synthesis 1
HS Freshman	5, 17, 2, 18, 19, 3, 20, 21, 4, 12, 22, 13, 23, 14, 15, 16	recall 9, inference 3, analysis 3, synthesis 1
HS Sophomore	24, 25, 2, 26, 7, 5, 11, 17, 27, 22, 12, 28, 29, 14, 30, 31	recall 9, inference 2, analysis 3, synthesis 2
HS Junior	21, 27, 11, 10, 4, 20, 8, 17, 12, 22, 28, 14, 15, 23, 32, 31	recall 8, inference 2, analysis 4, synthesis 2
HS Senior	1, 10, 17, 24, 20, 19, 26, 22, 12, 14, 28, 23, 29, 31, 32, 30	recall 7, inference 2, analysis 4, synthesis 3
AP	1, 19, 20, 7, 12, 33, 22, 34, 15, 29, 28, 23, 16, 32, 30, 31	recall 4, inference 4, analysis 4, synthesis 4
College Freshman	11, 2, 4, 21, 22, 33, 12, 23, 15, 28, 29, 32, 16, 31, 35, 30	recall 4, inference 3, analysis 4, synthesis 5
College Sophomore	19, 2, 21, 18, 22, 12, 33, 29, 23, 15, 28, 16, 32, 30, 31, 35	recall 4, inference 3, analysis 4, synthesis 5
College Junior	2, 5, 6, 22, 36, 12, 33, 15, 29, 28, 23, 31, 30, 32, 35, 16	recall 3, inference 4, analysis 4, synthesis 5
College Senior	19, 2, 25, 33, 12, 22, 23, 28, 15, 29, 16, 37, 31, 32, 35, 30	recall 3, inference 3, analysis 4, synthesis 6
Graduate / PhD	2, 20, 17, 12, 33, 22, 34, 23, 15, 38, 29, 28, 31, 32, 30, 16	recall 3, inference 4, analysis 5, synthesis 4

Writing prompts (eleven rigor levels)

Scaffolded support (250 words; AP: see unit standards): Supported track (work from the passage your teacher selects). In “Chapter XV,” how does Austen show a charming stranger? Write a paragraph that states your claim, quotes two details from the passage, and explains how each detail supports your idea. Use the characterization you noticed as one piece of evidence.

HS Freshman (350 words; AP: see unit standards): In Chapter XV, how does Austen develop the idea of a charming stranger? State a clear claim, support it with two or three quotations, and explain how the characterization in the chapter helps build that idea.

HS Sophomore (450 words; AP: see unit standards): Analyze how Chapter XV develops the idea of a charming stranger. Make a precise claim, support it with at least three pieces of textual evidence, and explain how the author's use of characterization and foreshadowing shapes that idea. Address one possible counterclaim.

HS Junior (550 words; AP: see unit standards): Analyze how the structure of Chapter XV (where it begins, turns and ends) and its characterization shape the reader's understanding of a charming stranger. Identify one place where the text leaves matters uncertain and explain how that uncertainty adds to its meaning.

HS Senior (600 words; AP: see unit standards): Two readers disagree about what Chapter XV suggests about a charming stranger. Lay out two plausible interpretations, weigh the evidence for each (including the chapter's characterization and foreshadowing), and argue for the stronger one in a sustained, well-organized essay.

AP (650 words; AP: AP-LIT.CHR, AP-LIT.LAN): Write a literary argument in which you analyze how Jane Austen uses characterization in Chapter XV to complicate the reader's understanding of a charming stranger.

Develop a defensible thesis, select evidence purposefully, and explain how specific choices of diction and syntax create meaning.

College Freshman (1000 words; AP: see unit standards): Situate Chapter XV within its historical and literary context and argue how the chapter's treatment of a charming stranger responds to that context. Engage with at least one secondary perspective (a critic, historian or the author's own statements), integrate quotations smoothly, and cite in MLA style.

College Sophomore (1250 words; AP: see unit standards): Read Chapter XV alongside the conventions of its genre and period. Argue how the chapter's handling of a charming stranger follows or bends those conventions, using the characterization as evidence, and test your reading against one published critic. Document two secondary sources in MLA.

College Junior (1500 words; AP: see unit standards): Apply a named critical approach (for example formalist, historicist, feminist, psychoanalytic or ecocritical) to Chapter XV and its treatment of a charming stranger. State your method, show what it reveals in the chapter's characterization and foreshadowing, and identify where the text resists it.

College Senior (2000 words; AP: see unit standards): Develop a research argument that reads Chapter XV as evidence for a larger claim about a charming stranger in Pride and Prejudice. Connect close reading of the chapter to the whole novel, engage at least four scholarly sources, and state precisely where your reading departs from theirs (Chicago style).

Graduate / PhD (2500 words; AP: see unit standards): Develop an original argument that reads Chapter XV as a hinge in the novel's larger treatment of a charming stranger. Position your reading within a named critical conversation (for example formalist, historicist, psychoanalytic, feminist or postcolonial approaches), account for the textual history where relevant, and articulate the stakes of your intervention for scholarship on Pride and Prejudice.

SAT-style questions

1. The subjection in which his father had brought him up, had given him originally great humility of manner, but it was now a good deal counteracted by the self-conceit of a weak head, living in retirement, and the consequential feelings of early and unexpected prosperity.

   As used in the text, what does the word “counteracted” most nearly mean?

   A. an abrupt excited utterance

   B. offset; reduced the effect of

   C. a card game played with tickets for prizes

   D. a stopping

2. In pompous nothings on his side, and civil assents on that of his cousins, their time passed till they entered Meryton. The attention of the younger ones was then no longer to be gained by him. Their eyes were immediately wandering up in the street in quest of the officers, and nothing less than a very smart bonnet indeed, or a really new muslin in a shop window, could recall them.

   Which choice best states a central concern of “Chapter XV”?

   A. A persuasive tale

B. Strategy in courtship

C. Family in crisis

D. A charming stranger

SAT key: 1. B (offset; reduced the effect of); 2. D (A charming stranger)

Lesson 17: Chapter XVI

Focus: a persuasive tale

Objective: Students will analyze how point of view develops in "Chapter XVI" by writing a claim-evidence-reasoning paragraph that cites at least 2 quotations from the section, and will score at least 80% on the section quiz.

Standards: AP: see the unit standards

Content note (alcohol or drugs (mentioned)): This section mentions drinking or a drug ("…broad-faced stuffy uncle Philips, breathing port wine, who followed them into the room. Mr. W…"). Treat it as period custom or plot detail; name it plainly and don't glamorize it.
Student preview: This section mentions drinking or a drug.
Suggested language: "What does this detail add to the scene?"

Teacher only · spoilers

At Mrs. Phillips's party, Wickham tells Elizabeth that Darcy denied him a clergyman's living promised by Darcy's father. Elizabeth believes him readily.

Background: A 'living' was a church post with income controlled by a patron.

Significance: Readers learn alongside Elizabeth that a confident story is not proof—central to the theme of prejudice.

Lesson plan and lecture script (90 minutes)

0–8 min · Bell-ringer · You do (8 min)
Students write to the bell-ringer, then pair-share.
What evidence does Elizabeth have that Wickham is telling the truth? Write for five minutes. Starters: I think... because... / This connects to first impressions because.... Content note before we start: This section mentions drinking or a drug.
Prompt: What evidence does Elizabeth have that Wickham is telling the truth?
Sentence starters: I think… because… · This connects to first impressions because…
Strong response: A strong response takes a position and anticipates this: Elizabeth believes him immediately because his story confirms her dislike.

8–18 min · Vocabulary with etymology notes · I do (10 min)
Five key words in context, with verified word histories.
Today's words: misleads — leads into a wrong idea; disgracing — bringing shame on; reverting — going back (to a subject); unguarded — frank; careless about hiding feelings; godfather — any man who serves as a sponsor for a child at baptism. "misleads": Origin of "mislead": Middle English mysleden; earlier Old English mislǣdan ("to mislead"). "disgracing": Origin of "disgrace": Middle French disgracier.
Words: misleads: leads into a wrong idea · disgracing: bringing shame on · reverting: going back (to a subject) · unguarded: frank; careless about hiding feelings · godfather: any man who serves as a sponsor for a child at baptism

18–28 min · Background and context · I do (10 min)
Mini-lecture (read or adapt the script).
A 'living' was a church post with income controlled by a patron. Readers learn alongside Elizabeth that a confident story is not proof—central to the theme of prejudice. Characterization: Wickham tells Elizabeth that Darcy cheated him of a promised living; he says he will never expose Darcy, then does exactly that. Irony: Wickham claims discretion while gossiping to a near stranger. Watch for rank and condescension: Rank is displayed and enforced, above all at Rosings by Lady Catherine; Elizabeth refuses to be cowed. In this chapter: "have supposed himself in the small summer breakfast parlour at Rosings; a comparison that did not at first convey much gratification; but" (Chapter XVI, paragraph 2).

28–40 min · I do: modeled close reading · I do (12 min)
Model the close reading of the anchor quotation using the written think-aloud below.
First, meaning. I read "I have no right to give my opinion" slowly and put it in my own words: Wickham tells Elizabeth he has no right to give an opinion of Darcy, since he has known him too long to be impartial. Next, craft. I notice he pretends modesty and fairness while preparing to accuse Darcy. The strongest word is "right": it shows him claiming a fairness he does not actually practice. Then, effect. Why does Wickham claim he cannot judge Darcy fairly? My answer: Wickham's false modesty makes his later accusations seem believable; Elizabeth trusts him because he flatters her own dislike of Darcy.

> I have no right to give my opinion (Chapter XVI, paragraph 14)

Think-aloud: First, meaning. I read "I have no right to give my opinion" slowly and put it in my own words: Wickham tells Elizabeth he has no right to give an opinion of Darcy, since he has known him too long to be impartial. Next, craft. I notice he pretends modesty and fairness while preparing to accuse Darcy. The strongest word is "right": it shows him claiming a fairness he does not actually practice. Then, effect. Why does Wickham claim he cannot judge Darcy fairly? My answer: Wickham's false modesty makes his later accusations seem believable; Elizabeth trusts him because he flatters her own dislike of Darcy.

40–55 min · We do: guided annotation · We do (15 min)
Guided analysis of a second quotation; expected answers given.
Ask: What words in this line stand out, and what do they suggest? Expected: "Handsomer than ever" shows attraction influencing judgment. This is the heart of prejudice. Ask: How does this line connect to first impressions? Expected: Elizabeth believes him immediately because his story confirms her dislike. (Her judgment follows her feelings.)

> Elizabeth honoured him for such feelings, and thought him handsomer than ever as he expressed them (Chapter XVI, paragraph 30)

Ask: What words in this line stand out, and what do they suggest?
Expected answer: "Handsomer than ever" shows attraction influencing judgment. This is the heart of prejudice.
Ask: How does this line connect to first impressions?
Expected answer: Elizabeth believes him immediately because his story confirms her dislike. (Her judgment follows her feelings.)

55–70 min · You do: independent annotation · You do (15 min)
Independent annotation and a claim-evidence-reasoning paragraph (exemplar given).
Annotate the chapter for characterization, irony (three marks with a margin note each), then write one claim-evidence-reasoning paragraph: what does this chapter suggest about a persuasive tale? Then start your writing prompt at your assigned level (HS Sophomore: Analyze how Chapter XVI develops the idea of a persuasive tale. Make a precise claim, support it with at least three pieces of textual evidence, and explain how the author's use of point of view and irony shapes that idea. Address one possible counterclaim.) Exemplar: Elizabeth believes Wickham because his story confirms what she already thinks of Darcy. When the text says "Elizabeth honoured him for such feelings, and thought him handsomer than ever as he expressed them" (Chapter XVI, paragraph 30), it shows this directly. She "honoured him for such feelings, and thought him handsomer than ever," letting attraction and prejudice stand in for evidence.
Task: Annotate the chapter for characterization, irony (three marks with a margin note each), then write one claim-evidence-reasoning paragraph: what does this chapter suggest about a persuasive tale? Then start your writing prompt at your assigned level (HS Sophomore: Analyze how Chapter XVI develops the idea of a persuasive tale. Make a precise claim, support it with at least three pieces of textual evidence, and explain how the author's use of point of view and irony shapes that idea. Address one possible counterclaim.)
Exemplar: Elizabeth believes Wickham because his story confirms what she already thinks of Darcy. When the text says "Elizabeth honoured him for such feelings, and thought him handsomer than ever as he expressed them" (Chapter XVI, paragraph 30), it shows this directly. She "honoured him for such feelings, and thought him handsomer than ever," letting attraction and prejudice stand in for evidence.

70–80 min · Discussion · We do (10 min)
Structured discussion from the 30 tiered questions, with facilitation notes.
Anchor question: What evidence does Elizabeth have that Wickham is telling the truth? Ask students to list what Elizabeth could have checked about Wickham's story, and why she didn't.
Anchor question: What evidence does Elizabeth have that Wickham is telling the truth?
Facilitation: Ask students to list what Elizabeth could have checked about Wickham's story, and why she didn't.

80–87 min · Exit ticket / chapter quiz · You do (7 min)
Chapter quiz in the app and an exit ticket (answer given).
Chapter quiz in the app, then: In one sentence, what does this chapter suggest about a persuasive tale? Support it with one short quotation. Model answer: Elizabeth believes Wickham because his story confirms what she already thinks of Darcy. ("Elizabeth honoured him for such feelings, and thought him handsomer than ever as he expressed them", Chapter XVI, paragraph 30). Accept any defensible claim backed by a quotation from the chapter; the answer key for the quiz is in the Quiz section.
Exit ticket: In one sentence, what does this chapter suggest about a persuasive tale? Support it with one short quotation.
Answer: Model answer: Elizabeth believes Wickham because his story confirms what she already thinks of Darcy. ("Elizabeth honoured him for such feelings, and thought him handsomer than ever as he expressed them", Chapter XVI, paragraph 30). Accept any defensible claim backed by a quotation from the chapter; the answer key for the quiz is in the Quiz section.

87–90 min · Closure · I do (3 min)
Summarize the lesson and preview the next reading.
Today we saw how characterization shapes a persuasive tale. Key takeaway: Elizabeth believes him immediately because his story confirms her dislike.

Total: 90 minutes.

Teacher analysis (spoilers)

Literary elements

- Characterization: Wickham tells Elizabeth that Darcy cheated him of a promised living; he says he will never expose Darcy, then does exactly that.
- Irony: Wickham claims discretion while gossiping to a near stranger.

Themes and how they develop

- first impressions: Elizabeth believes him immediately because his story confirms her dislike.

Symbols and motifs

- rank and condescension: Rank is displayed and enforced, above all at Rosings by Lady Catherine; Elizabeth refuses to be cowed. In this chapter: "have supposed himself in the small summer breakfast parlour at Rosings; a comparison that did not at first convey much gratification; but" (Chapter XVI, paragraph 2).

- silence and reserve: What characters leave unsaid (Darcy's reserve, Jane's composure, Elizabeth's secrets) drives misunderstanding. In this chapter: "they went, for neither Lydia nor Mr. Collins were once silent. Lydia talked incessantly of lottery tickets, of the fish she had" (Chapter XVI, paragraph 59).

Key quotations (checked against the reading text)

- "I have no right to give my opinion" (Chapter XVI, paragraph 14) Wickham, just before giving it.
- "Elizabeth honoured him for such feelings, and thought him handsomer than ever as he expressed them" (Chapter XVI, paragraph 30) Her judgment follows her feelings.
- "I cannot pretend to be sorry" (Chapter XVI, paragraph 16) Wickham on Darcy's unpopularity.

Model claim-evidence-reasoning

Claim: Elizabeth believes Wickham because his story confirms what she already thinks of Darcy.
Evidence: "Elizabeth honoured him for such feelings, and thought him handsomer than ever as he expressed them" (Chapter XVI, paragraph 30)
Reasoning: She "honoured him for such feelings, and thought him handsomer than ever," letting attraction and prejudice stand in for evidence.

Vocabulary with etymology notes

Word	Definition (in this sentence)	In context	Word history
misleads (verb)	leads into a wrong idea	Collins," said she, "speaks highly both of Lady Catherine and her daughter; but from some particulars that he has related of her ladyship, I suspect his gratitude misleads him, and that in spite of her being his patroness, she is an arrogant, conceited woman."	"misleads": Origin of "mislead": Middle English mysleden; earlier Old English mislǣdan ("to mislead"). (Liber et Libri origin note, https://en.wiktionary.org/wiki/mislead#Etymology)
disgracing (verb)	bringing shame on	His behaviour to myself has been scandalous; but I verily believe I could forgive him anything and everything, rather than his disappointing the hopes and disgracing the memory of his father."	"disgracing": Origin of "disgrace": Middle French disgracier. (Liber et Libri origin note, https://en.wiktionary.org/wiki/disgrace#Etymology)
reverting (verb)	going back (to a subject)	After many pauses and many trials of other subjects, Elizabeth could not help reverting once more to the first, and saying—
unguarded (adjective)	frank; careless about hiding feelings	I have a warm, unguarded temper, and I may perhaps have sometimes spoken my opinion of him, and to him, too freely.

godfather (noun)	any man who serves as a sponsor for a child at baptism	He was my godfather, and excessively attached to me.
bequeathed (verb)	leave or give by will after one's death	Darcy bequeathed me the next presentation of the best living in his gift.
creditable (adjective)	worthy of often limited commendation	The officers of the ——shire were in general a very creditable, gentleman-like set, and the best of them were of the present party; but Mr.
inmates (noun)	people living in the same house	"We were born in the same parish, within the same park, the greatest part of our youth was passed together; inmates of the same house, sharing the same amusements, objects of the same parental care.	"inmates": Origin of "inmate": probably in (adj., "inside") + mate; possibly influenced by inn. (Liber et Libri origin note, https://en.wiktionary.org/wiki/inmate#Etymology)
eligible (adjective)	suitable; desirable	A military life is not what I was intended for, but circumstances have now made it eligible.	"eligible": Origin: Middle French eligible; earlier Latin eligibilis. (Liber et Libri origin note, https://en.wiktionary.org/wiki/eligible#Etymology)
scandalous (adjective)	giving offense to moral sensibilities and injurious to reputation	His behaviour to myself has been scandalous; but I verily believe I could forgive him anything and everything, rather than his disappointing the hopes and disgracing the memory of his father."

Discussion questions

1. What evidence does Elizabeth have that Wickham is telling the truth?
2. Where does point of view appear in this chapter, and what effect does it have? Point to one passage.
3. How does this chapter connect to the book's larger concern with first impressions and prejudice?

Classroom discussion questions (30, tiered)

Wait time after every question (3 s for DOK 1, 5 s for DOK 2, 8 to 10 s for DOK 3 and 4); think-pair-share on DOK 3 and 4; answer each response with a follow-up probe; close with student-generated questions. Focus sets by rigor level: Scaffolded support: 1, 2, 3, 4, 5, 6, 11, 12, 13, 14, 21, 22; HS Freshman: 1, 2, 3, 4, 5, 12, 13, 14, 15, 22, 23, 24; HS Sophomore: 1, 2, 3, 4, 13, 14, 15, 16, 17, 23, 24, 25; HS Junior: 1, 2, 3, 14, 15, 16, 17, 18, 24, 25, 26, 27; HS Senior: 1, 2, 3, 15, 16, 17, 18, 25, 26, 27, 28, 29; AP: 1, 2, 16, 17, 18, 19, 20, 26, 27, 28, 29, 30; College Freshman: 1, 2, 17, 18, 19, 20, 21, 22, 27, 28, 29, 30; College Sophomore: 1, 2, 11, 18, 19, 20, 21, 22, 23, 28, 29, 30; College Junior: 1, 11, 12, 19, 20, 21, 22, 23, 24, 25, 29, 30; College Senior: 1, 11, 12, 13, 20, 21, 22, 23, 24, 25, 26, 30; Graduate / PhD: 1, 11, 12, 13, 21, 22, 23, 24, 25, 26, 27, 28

Literal / recall

1. What does Wickham claim Darcy did? [DOK 1 · coldCallWithSupport · wait 3 s · AP: unit standards] Look for: Denied him a promised living
2. Where do they talk? [DOK 1 · turnAndTalk · wait 3 s · AP: unit standards] Look for: Mrs. Phillips's house
3. How does Elizabeth react to Wickham's story about Darcy? [DOK 1 · coldCallWithSupport · wait 3 s · AP: unit standards] Look for: She believes him readily
4. What is a 'living'? [DOK 1 · turnAndTalk · wait 3 s · AP: unit standards] Look for: A church position with income
5. What theme does Elizabeth's belief show? [DOK 1 · coldCallWithSupport · wait 3 s · AP: unit standards] Look for: Prejudice from first impressions
6. Retell the three most important events of “Chapter XVI” in order, in one sentence each. [DOK 1 · turnAndTalk · wait 3 s · AP: unit standards] Look for: At Mrs. Phillips's party, Wickham tells Elizabeth that Darcy denied him a clergyman's living promised by Darcy's father. Elizabeth believes him readily.
7. Which characters appear or are mentioned in “Chapter XVI”? Name two and one thing each says or does. [DOK 1 · coldCallWithSupport · wait 3 s · AP: unit standards] Look for: Names and actions taken from the chapter; check against the teacher summary.
8. Where and when does “Chapter XVI” take place? Point to the line that tells you. [DOK 1 · turnAndTalk · wait 3 s · AP: unit standards] Look for: A place/time detail quoted from the chapter.
9. Reread: “Collins,” said she, “speaks highly both of Lady Catherine and her daughter; but from some particulars that he has related of her ladyship, I suspect his gratitude misleads him, and that in spite of her being his…” What does “misleads” mean here, and what is literally happening in this line? [DOK 1 · turnAndTalk · wait 3 s · AP: unit standards] Look for: misleads: leads into a wrong idea.
10. Reread: “His behaviour to myself has been scandalous; but I verily believe I could forgive him anything and everything, rather than his disappointing the hopes and disgracing the memory of his father.”” What does “disgracing” mean here, and what is literally happening in this line? [DOK 1 · turnAndTalk · wait 3 s · AP: unit standards] Look for: disgracing: bringing shame on.

Inferential / analytical

1. What does “Chapter XVI” suggest about a persuasive tale? State the inference and the line that supports it. [DOK 2 · thinkPairShare · wait 5 s · AP-LIT.LAN] Look for: Readers learn alongside Elizabeth that a confident story is not proof—central to the theme of prejudice.
2. Find one example of point of view in this chapter. What does it reveal that a plain statement would not? [DOK 2 · followUp · wait 5 s · AP-LIT.NAR] Look for: Look for who is telling the story and what that narrator can and cannot know.
3. How does the irony in this chapter shape what we understand about a persuasive tale? [DOK 3 · thinkPairShare · wait 8 s · AP-LIT.NAR] Look for: Look for gaps between what characters expect or say and what is true.
   Answer guidance: A defensible line of argument: Elizabeth believes Wickham because his story confirms what she already thinks of Darcy. Useful evidence: “I have no right to give my opinion” (Chapter XVI, paragraph 14): Wickham, just before giving it. On irony: Wickham claims discretion while gossiping to a near stranger. Credit any position that is supported by quotation and reasoning; push one-sided answers to address the strongest counterpoint.

4. In the passage that begins ““It was the prospect of constant society, and good society,””, why might Austen have chosen these particular words? Pick two and explain their connotations. [DOK 2 · followUp · wait 5 s · AP-LIT.FIG] Look for: Diction analysis of two words in the anchor passage.
5. What causes the main turn in “Chapter XVI”, and what effect is it likely to have on what follows? [DOK 2 · followUp · wait 5 s · AP-LIT.STR] Look for: At Mrs. Phillips's party, Wickham tells Elizabeth that Darcy denied him a clergyman's living promised by Darcy's father. Elizabeth believes him readily.
6. How does “Chapter XVI” build on “Chapter XV”? Name one link of cause and effect. [DOK 3 · thinkPairShare · wait 8 s · AP-LIT.STR] Look for: A causal or structural link between this and the previous chapter.
   Answer guidance: A defensible line of argument: Elizabeth believes Wickham because his story confirms what she already thinks of Darcy. Useful evidence: “Elizabeth honoured him for such feelings, and thought him handsomer than ever as he expressed them” (Chapter XVI, paragraph 30): Her judgment follows her feelings. Theme link: Elizabeth believes him immediately because his story confirms her dislike. Credit any position that is supported by quotation and reasoning; push one-sided answers to address the strongest counterpoint.
7. What can we infer about a character's motives from what they say and do here, as opposed to what they claim? [DOK 3 · followUp · wait 8 s · AP-LIT.CHR] Look for: An inference about motive supported by a quoted line.
   Answer guidance: A defensible line of argument: Elizabeth believes Wickham because his story confirms what she already thinks of Darcy. Useful evidence: “I cannot pretend to be sorry” (Chapter XVI, paragraph 16): Wickham on Darcy's unpopularity. On characterization: Wickham tells Elizabeth that Darcy cheated him of a promised living; he says he will never expose Darcy, then does exactly that. Credit any position that is supported by quotation and reasoning; push one-sided answers to address the strongest counterpoint.
8. The bell-ringer asked: “What evidence does Elizabeth have that Wickham is telling the truth?” Now that we have read closely, how would you revise your first answer, and which line changed your mind? [DOK 2 · thinkPairShare · wait 5 s · AP-LIT.LAN] Look for: A revised answer anchored in the text.
9. Where does characterization appear, and how does it connect this chapter to the larger concern with first impressions and prejudice? [DOK 3 · followUp · wait 8 s · AP-LIT.CHR] Look for: Look for what characters say, do and think, and how others react to them.
   Answer guidance: A defensible line of argument: Elizabeth believes Wickham because his story confirms what she already thinks of Darcy. Useful evidence: “I have no right to give my opinion” (Chapter XVI, paragraph 14): Wickham, just before giving it. On characterization: Wickham tells Elizabeth that Darcy cheated him of a promised living; he says he will never expose Darcy, then does exactly that. Credit any position that is supported by quotation and reasoning; push one-sided answers to address the strongest counterpoint.
10. Background: A 'living' was a church post with income controlled by a patron. How does knowing this change the way you read one moment in the chapter? [DOK 3 · thinkPairShare · wait 8 s · AP-LIT.SET] Look for: A specific moment reread in light of the context.
    Answer guidance: A defensible line of argument: Elizabeth believes Wickham because his story confirms what she already thinks of Darcy. Useful evidence: “Elizabeth honoured him for such feelings, and thought him handsomer than ever as he expressed them” (Chapter XVI, paragraph 30): Her judgment follows her feelings. Theme link: Elizabeth believes him immediately because his story confirms her dislike. Credit any position that is supported by quotation and reasoning; push one-sided answers to address the strongest counterpoint.

Evaluative / synthesis / creative

1. A critic might argue: "Readers learn alongside Elizabeth that a confident story is not proof—central to the theme of prejudice." How far do you agree? Take a stand and defend it with two lines from the chapter. [DOK 3 · fourCorners · wait 8 s · AP-LIT.LAN] Look for: A defended position with evidence and one counterpoint.
   Answer guidance: A defensible line of argument: Elizabeth believes Wickham because his story confirms what she already thinks of Darcy. Useful evidence: "I cannot pretend to be sorry" (Chapter XVI, paragraph 16): Wickham on Darcy's unpopularity. Theme link: Elizabeth believes him immediately because his story confirms her dislike. Credit any position that is supported by quotation and reasoning; push one-sided answers to address the strongest counterpoint.
2. Which character in this chapter acts most wisely, and which least? Judge them by a standard you name. [DOK 3 · thinkPairShare · wait 8 s · AP-LIT.CHR, AP-LIT.LAN] Look for: An evaluation using an explicit criterion and evidence.
   Answer guidance: A defensible line of argument: Elizabeth believes Wickham because his story confirms what she already thinks of Darcy. Useful evidence: "I have no right to give my opinion" (Chapter XVI, paragraph 14): Wickham, just before giving it. On characterization: Wickham tells Elizabeth that Darcy cheated him of a promised living; he says he will never expose Darcy, then does exactly that. Credit any position that is supported by quotation and reasoning; push one-sided answers to address the strongest counterpoint.
3. Rewrite one moment of "Chapter XVI" from the point of view of a different character. What does the new angle reveal or hide about a persuasive tale? [DOK 4 · thinkPairShare · wait 8 s · AP-LIT.LAN, AP-LIT.NAR] Look for: A creative product with a rationale tied to the text.
   Answer guidance: A defensible line of argument: Elizabeth believes Wickham because his story confirms what she already thinks of Darcy. Useful evidence: "Elizabeth honoured him for such feelings, and thought him handsomer than ever as he expressed them" (Chapter XVI, paragraph 30): Her judgment follows her feelings. Theme link: Elizabeth believes him immediately because his story confirms her dislike. Credit any position that is supported by quotation and reasoning; push one-sided answers to address the strongest counterpoint.
4. Write three questions of your own about "Chapter XVI": one recall, one "why/how", and one "should/what if". Trade with a partner and answer theirs. [DOK 3 · studentGenerated · wait 8 s · AP-LIT.LAN] Look for: Student-generated questions at three levels.
   Answer guidance: A defensible line of argument: Elizabeth believes Wickham because his story confirms what she already thinks of Darcy. Useful evidence: "I cannot pretend to be sorry" (Chapter XVI, paragraph 16): Wickham on Darcy's unpopularity. Theme link: Elizabeth believes him immediately because his story confirms her dislike. Credit any position that is supported by quotation and reasoning; push one-sided answers to address the strongest counterpoint.
5. Connect this chapter to pride and self-knowledge: is the link strong or weak so far? What would Austen need to show next to strengthen it? [DOK 4 · socraticCircle · wait 8 s · AP-LIT.LAN] Look for: A judgment of thematic development across the work.
   Answer guidance: A defensible line of argument: Elizabeth believes Wickham because his story confirms what she already thinks of Darcy. Useful evidence: "I have no right to give my opinion" (Chapter XVI, paragraph 14): Wickham, just before giving it. Theme link: Elizabeth believes him immediately because his story confirms her dislike. Credit any position that is supported by quotation and reasoning; push one-sided answers to address the strongest counterpoint.

6. Is the point of view in this chapter effective, or does it feel heavy-handed? Evaluate it as a reader would in a review. [DOK 3 · fourCorners · wait 8 s · AP-LIT.LAN, AP-LIT.NAR] Look for: An evaluative judgment with criteria and evidence.

   Answer guidance: A defensible line of argument: Elizabeth believes Wickham because his story confirms what she already thinks of Darcy. Useful evidence: “Elizabeth honoured him for such feelings, and thought him handsomer than ever as he expressed them” (Chapter XVI, paragraph 30): Her judgment follows her feelings. Theme link: Elizabeth believes him immediately because his story confirms her dislike. Credit any position that is supported by quotation and reasoning; push one-sided answers to address the strongest counterpoint.

7. Compare how “Chapter XVI” treats a persuasive tale with how another text, film or event you know treats a similar idea. What does Pride and Prejudice see that the other misses? [DOK 4 · socraticCircle · wait 8 s · AP-LIT.LAN] Look for: A cross-text synthesis.

   Answer guidance: A defensible line of argument: Elizabeth believes Wickham because his story confirms what she already thinks of Darcy. Useful evidence: “I cannot pretend to be sorry” (Chapter XVI, paragraph 16): Wickham on Darcy's unpopularity. Theme link: Elizabeth believes him immediately because his story confirms her dislike. Credit any position that is supported by quotation and reasoning; push one-sided answers to address the strongest counterpoint.

8. Predict what “Chapter XVII” will bring, using two clues from this chapter. After reading, evaluate your prediction. [DOK 3 · thinkPairShare · wait 8 s · AP-LIT.LAN, AP-LIT.STR] Look for: A prediction or judgment justified with textual clues.

   Answer guidance: A defensible line of argument: Elizabeth believes Wickham because his story confirms what she already thinks of Darcy. Useful evidence: “I have no right to give my opinion” (Chapter XVI, paragraph 14): Wickham, just before giving it. Theme link: Elizabeth believes him immediately because his story confirms her dislike. Credit any position that is supported by quotation and reasoning; push one-sided answers to address the strongest counterpoint.

9. Design a one-paragraph modern adaptation of this chapter (setting, characters, conflict). What must stay the same for it to still be about a persuasive tale? [DOK 4 · thinkPairShare · wait 8 s · AP-LIT.LAN] Look for: A creative transfer that keeps the core idea.

   Answer guidance: A defensible line of argument: Elizabeth believes Wickham because his story confirms what she already thinks of Darcy. Useful evidence: “Elizabeth honoured him for such feelings, and thought him handsomer than ever as he expressed them” (Chapter XVI, paragraph 30): Her judgment follows her feelings. Theme link: Elizabeth believes him immediately because his story confirms her dislike. Credit any position that is supported by quotation and reasoning; push one-sided answers to address the strongest counterpoint.

10. What question would you most like to ask Jane Austen about this chapter, and what answer do you think the text itself gives? [DOK 4 · studentGenerated · wait 8 s · AP-LIT.LAN] Look for: A student-generated question answered from evidence.

    Answer guidance: A defensible line of argument: Elizabeth believes Wickham because his story confirms what she already thinks of Darcy. Useful evidence: “I cannot pretend to be sorry” (Chapter XVI, paragraph 16): Wickham on Darcy's unpopularity. Theme link: Elizabeth believes him immediately because his story confirms her dislike. Credit any position that is supported by quotation and reasoning; push one-sided answers to address the strongest counterpoint.

Annotation focus

- Point of view: look for who is telling the story and what that narrator can and cannot know (anchor passage in the We do segment)
- Also notice Irony: gaps between what characters expect or say and what is true
- Also notice Characterization: what characters say, do and think, and how others react to them

Chapter quiz: item bank (all eleven rigor versions)

1. [fill · recall · DOK 1] Fill in the blank with the vocabulary word that fits: "Darcy _____ me the next presentation of the best living in his gift." Word bank: disgracing, bequeathed, misleads, reverting
   Key: bequeathed
2. [mc · recall · DOK 1] In the line "I have a warm, unguarded temper, and I may perhaps have sometimes spoken my opinion of him, and to him, too freely.", what does "unguarded" most nearly mean?
   A. an activity that diverts or amuses or stimulates
   B. frank; careless about hiding feelings
   C. regaining self-control
   D. a deep awareness of and sympathy for another's suffering

   Key: B (frank; careless about hiding feelings)
3. [fill · recall · DOK 1] Fill in the blank with the vocabulary word that fits: "We were born in the same parish, within the same park, the greatest part of our youth was passed together; _____ of the same house, sharing the same amusements, objects of the same parental care." Word bank: inmates, disgracing, misleads, reverting
   Key: inmates
4. [fill · recall · DOK 1] Complete the quotation from Chapter XVI, paragraph 30: "Elizabeth honoured him for such feelings, and thought him _____ than ever as he expressed them"
   Key: handsomer
5. [mc · recall · DOK 1] What theme does Elizabeth's belief show?
   A. Patriotism
   B. Prejudice from first impressions
   C. Religion
   D. Love of science

   Key: B (Prejudice from first impressions)
6. [mc · recall · DOK 1] How does Elizabeth react to Wickham's story about Darcy?
   A. She warns Darcy
   B. She leaves
   C. She doubts him
   D. She believes him readily

   Key: D (She believes him readily)
7. [mc · recall · DOK 1] What does Wickham claim Darcy did?
   A. Insulted his mother
   B. Shot him
   C. Denied him a promised living

D. Stole his money

Key: C (Denied him a promised living)

8. [mc · recall · DOK 1] In the line “Collins,’ said she, ‘speaks highly both of Lady Catherine and her daughter; but from some particulars that he has related of her ladyship, I suspect his gratitude misleads him, and that in spite of her being his…”, what does “misleads” most nearly mean?

   A. leads into a wrong idea

   B. coming upon by chance

   C. joyful and proud especially because of triumph or success

   D. riders who guide the horses pulling a carriage

   Key: A (leads into a wrong idea)

9. [mc · recall · DOK 1] What is a 'living'?

   A. An inheritance

   B. A salary from the army

   C. A church position with income

   D. A house

   Key: C (A church position with income)

10. [fill · recall · DOK 1] Complete the quotation from Chapter XVI, paragraph 16: “I cannot _____ to be sorry”

    Key: pretend

11. [mc · recall · DOK 1] In the line “After many pauses and many trials of other subjects, Elizabeth could not help reverting once more to the first, and saying—”, what does “reverting” most nearly mean?

    A. changing to a lower state (a less respected state)

    B. denied having

    C. injured by a sudden twist

    D. going back (to a subject)

    Key: D (going back (to a subject))

12. [short · inference · DOK 2] What can you infer from this line? “I have no right to give my opinion” (Chapter XVI, paragraph 14) Answer in two or three sentences with one detail.

    Sample answer: Wickham, just before giving it. The evidence is “I have no right to give my opinion” (Chapter XVI, paragraph 14). This develops first impressions: Elizabeth believes him immediately because his story confirms her dislike.

13. [mc · inference · DOK 2] Which choice best states a central concern of “Chapter XVI”?

    A. Visit to Hunsford

    B. Happiness for Jane

    C. A persuasive tale

    D. Departure and relief

    Key: C (A persuasive tale)

14. [mc · analysis · DOK 3] Which literary element does this describe in “Chapter XVI”? Wickham claims discretion while gossiping to a near stranger.

    A. Alliteration

    B. Conflict

    C. Irony

D. Theme

Key: C (Irony)

15. [short · analysis · DOK 3] Analyze the word choice in “I cannot pretend to be sorry” (Chapter XVI, paragraph 16). Pick two words and explain what they suggest.
Sample answer: Wickham on Darcy's unpopularity. The evidence is “I cannot pretend to be sorry” (Chapter XVI, paragraph 16). This develops first impressions: Elizabeth believes him immediately because his story confirms her dislike. The words “pretend” and “cannot” carry that meaning: they are the charged choices in the line, and changing either would soften the effect.

16. [short · synthesis · DOK 4] Synthesis: trace how first impressions develops from Chapter XV to Chapter XVI. Use one quotation from each.
Sample answer: Earlier, in Chapter XV, paragraph 1, the text reads “Mr. Collins was not a sensible man, and the deficiency of nature had been but little assisted by education or society” — The narrator's verdict. In Chapter XVI, “I have no right to give my opinion” (Chapter XVI, paragraph 14) — Wickham, just before giving it. Elizabeth believes him immediately because his story confirms her dislike.

17. [mc · recall · DOK 1] Which word completes this sentence from Chapter XVI, paragraph 35? “I will not trust myself on the _____,’ replied Wickham, ‘I can hardly be just to him.”

A. subject

B. opportunity

C. induced

D. superintends

Key: A (subject)

18. [fill · recall · DOK 1] Fill in the blank with the vocabulary word that fits: “The officers of the ——shire were in general a very _____, gentleman-like set, and the best of them were of the present party; but Mr.” Word bank: disgracing, creditable, misleads, reverting
Key: creditable

19. [mc · recall · DOK 1] Where do they talk?

A. Rosings

B. Pemberley

C. Mrs. Phillips's house

D. Netherfield

Key: C (Mrs. Phillips's house)

20. [fill · recall · DOK 1] Complete the quotation from Chapter XVI, paragraph 22: “Mr. Wickham began to speak on more general topics, Meryton, the _____, the society, appearing highly pleased with all that he had yet seen, and speaking of the latter especially, with gentle but very intelligible gallantry.” Word bank: degenerate, neighbourhood, opportunity, attachment
Key: neighbourhood

21. [short · inference · DOK 2] What does this passage from Chapter XVI, paragraph 21 reveal about the character or situation? “Elizabeth found the interest of the subject increase, and listened with all her heart; but the delicacy of it prevented farther inquiry.” Answer in two or three sentences with one detail.
Sample answer: The passage (Chapter XVI, paragraph 21) shows the situation turning on first impressions and prejudice: Elizabeth believes him immediately because his story confirms her dislike. The words “prevented” and “increase” are the proof, because they show how the moment looks to the people in it. They suggest more than the narrator states outright.

22. [short · inference · DOK 2] What does this passage from Chapter XVI, paragraph 52 reveal about the character or situation? “I hardly know how Mr. Collins was first introduced to her notice, but he certainly has not known her long.” Answer in two or three sentences with one detail.
    Sample answer: The passage (Chapter XVI, paragraph 52) shows the situation turning on first impressions and prejudice: Elizabeth believes him immediately because his story confirms her dislike. The words “introduced” and “certainly” are the proof, because they show how the moment looks to the people in it. They suggest more than the narrator states outright.
23. [mc · inference · DOK 2] Which of these passages comes earliest in Chapter XVI?
    A. “When the card tables were placed, he had an opportunity of obliging her in return, by sitting down to whist.”
    B. “He inquired how far Netherfield was from Meryton; and, after receiving her answer, asked in a hesitating manner how long Mr. Darcy had been…”
    C. “About a month,’ said Elizabeth; and then, unwilling to let the subject drop, added, ‘He is a man of very large property in Derbyshire, I…”
    D. “Mr. Wickham did not play at whist, and with ready delight was he received at the other table between Elizabeth and Lydia.”

    Key: A (“When the card tables were placed, he had an opportunity of obliging her in return, by sitting down to whist.”)
24. [short · analysis · DOK 3] Analyze how the word choice in this passage from Chapter XVI, paragraph 4 shapes its tone: “Mr. Wickham was the happy man towards whom almost every female eye was turned, and Elizabeth was the happy woman by whom he finally seated himself; and the agreeable manner in which he immediately fell into conversation, though it was only…” Pick two words and explain their effect.
    Sample answer: The words “conversation” and “immediately” (Chapter XVI, paragraph 4) make the tone heavy and deliberate rather than neutral. That weight points the reader to pride and self-knowledge: Elizabeth believes him immediately because his story confirms her dislike. The author chooses them so the moment feels significant instead of passing.
25. [short · analysis · DOK 3] Analyze how the word choice in this passage from Chapter XVI, paragraph 32 shapes its tone: “A thorough, determined dislike of me—a dislike which I cannot but attribute in some measure to jealousy.” Pick two words and explain their effect.
    Sample answer: The words “determined” and “attribute” (Chapter XVI, paragraph 32) make the tone heavy and deliberate rather than neutral. That weight points the reader to class and social mobility: Elizabeth believes him immediately because his story confirms her dislike. The author chooses them so the moment feels significant instead of passing.
26. [short · synthesis · DOK 4] Evaluate this claim about the chapter: “Elizabeth believes Wickham because his story confirms what she already thinks of Darcy.” Is it fully persuasive? Argue with evidence, including a passage that complicates it.
    Sample answer: The claim is persuasive in part. “Elizabeth honoured him for such feelings, and thought him handsomer than ever as he expressed them” (Chapter XVI, paragraph 30) supports it: She "honoured him for such feelings, and thought him handsomer than ever," letting attraction and prejudice stand in for evidence. But “I have no right to give my opinion” (Chapter XVI, paragraph 14) complicates it: Wickham, just before giving it, and its “no” marks a limit or reversal the claim passes over. The claim is therefore a strong reading, not a complete one, and a careful answer says where it stops applying.
27. [fill · recall · DOK 1] Fill in the blank with the vocabulary word that fits: “He was my _____, and excessively attached to me.” Word bank: misleads, godfather, reverting, disgracing
    Key: godfather

28. [fill · recall · DOK 1] Complete the quotation from Chapter XVI, paragraph 14: “I have no right to give my _____”

    Key: opinion

29. [short · analysis · DOK 3] Analyze how the word choice in this passage from Chapter XVI, paragraph 59 shapes its tone: “Elizabeth allowed that he had given a very rational account of it, and they continued talking together with mutual satisfaction till supper put an end to cards; and gave the rest of the ladies their share of Mr. Wickham’s attentions.” Pick two words and explain their effect.

    Sample answer: The words “satisfaction” and “attentions” (Chapter XVI, paragraph 59) make the tone heavy and deliberate rather than neutral. That weight points the reader to class and social mobility: Elizabeth believes him immediately because his story confirms her dislike. The author chooses them so the moment feels significant instead of passing.

30. [short · synthesis · DOK 4] Connect this passage from Chapter XVI, paragraph 8 to the story's treatment of women's limited choices: “At first there seemed danger of Lydia’s engrossing him entirely, for she was a most determined talker; but being likewise extremely fond of lottery tickets, she soon grew too much interested in the game, too eager in making bets and…” Use one other moment from the story as well.

    Sample answer: This passage (Chapter XVI, paragraph 8) develops women's limited choices: Elizabeth believes him immediately because his story confirms her dislike. Its words “engrossing” and “interested” carry that idea into this moment. The same concern returns in “Mr. Wickham did not play at whist, and with ready delight was he received at the other table between Elizabeth and…” (Chapter XVI, paragraph 8), so the two passages read as a pattern, not a single moment. Together they show the story treating women's limited choices as central.

31. [mc · recall · DOK 1 · AP: AP-LIT.FIG] Which word completes this sentence from Chapter XVI, paragraph 13? “As much as I ever wish to be,’ cried Elizabeth warmly—‘I have spent four days in the same house with him, and I think him very _____.”

    A. information

    B. disagreeable

    C. affectionate

    D. subject

    Key: B (disagreeable)

32. [fill · recall · DOK 1 · AP: AP-LIT.FIG] Complete the quotation from Chapter XVI, paragraph 6: “When the card tables were placed, he had an _____ of obliging her in return, by sitting down to whist.” Word bank: hesitating, wonderful, opportunity, attachment

    Key: opportunity

33. [short · analysis · DOK 3 · AP: AP-LIT.FIG] Analyze how the word choice in this passage from Chapter XVI, paragraph 39 shapes its tone: “But we are none of us consistent; and in his behaviour to me, there were stronger impulses even than pride.” Pick two words and explain their effect.

    Sample answer: The words “consistent” and “behaviour” (Chapter XVI, paragraph 39) make the tone heavy and deliberate rather than neutral. That weight points the reader to pride and self-knowledge: Elizabeth believes him immediately because his story confirms her dislike. The author chooses them so the moment feels significant instead of passing.

34. [short · synthesis · DOK 4 · AP: AP-LIT.FIG] Close reading: how do the diction and syntax of “Elizabeth honoured him for such feelings, and thought him handsomer than ever as he expressed them” (Chapter XVI, paragraph 30) shape its meaning? Consider a second, competing reading.

    Sample answer: Her judgment follows her feelings. The evidence is “Elizabeth honoured him for such feelings, and thought him handsomer than ever as he expressed them” (Chapter XVI, paragraph 30). This develops first impressions: Elizabeth believes him immediately because his story confirms her dislike. The words “expressed” and “handsomer” carry that meaning: they are the charged choices in the line, and changing either would soften the effect. She "honoured him for such feelings, and thought him handsomer than ever," letting attraction and prejudice stand in for evidence.

35. [short · synthesis · DOK 4 · AP: AP-LIT.LAN] Connect this passage from Chapter XVI, paragraph 49 to the story's treatment of marriage and money: “The whist party soon afterwards breaking up, the players gathered round the other table, and Mr. Collins took his station between his cousin Elizabeth and Mrs. Philips.” Use one other moment from the story as well.
Sample answer: This passage (Chapter XVI, paragraph 49) develops marriage and money: Elizabeth believes him immediately because his story confirms her dislike. Its words “afterwards” and “breaking” carry that idea into this moment. The same concern returns in “I know very well, madam,’ said he, ‘that when persons sit down to a card table, they must take their chance of these…” (Chapter XVI, paragraph 50), so the two passages read as a pattern, not a single moment. Together they show the story treating marriage and money as central.

36. [fill · recall · DOK 1 · AP: AP-LIT.FIG] Complete the quotation from Chapter XVI, paragraph 41: “Not to appear to disgrace his family, to _____ from the popular qualities, or lose the influence of the Pemberley House, is a powerful motive.” Word bank: degenerate, affectionate, opportunity, attachment
Key: degenerate

37. [mc · analysis · DOK 3 · AP: AP-LIT.CHR] Which literary element does this describe in “Chapter XVI”? Wickham tells Elizabeth that Darcy cheated him of a promised living; he says he will never expose Darcy, then does exactly that.
A. Setting
B. Hyperbole
C. Allusion
D. Characterization
Key: D (Characterization)

38. [short · synthesis · DOK 4 · AP: AP-LIT.FIG] Close reading: how do the diction and syntax of “I have no right to give my opinion” (Chapter XVI, paragraph 14) shape its meaning? Consider a second, competing reading.
Sample answer: Wickham, just before giving it. The evidence is “I have no right to give my opinion” (Chapter XVI, paragraph 14). This develops first impressions: Elizabeth believes him immediately because his story confirms her dislike. The words “opinion” and “right” carry that meaning: they are the charged choices in the line, and changing either would soften the effect. She "honoured him for such feelings, and thought him handsomer than ever," letting attraction and prejudice stand in for evidence.

39. [short · synthesis · DOK 4 · AP: AP-LIT.LAN] Connect this passage from Chapter XVI, paragraph 12 to the story's treatment of marriage and money: “You may well be surprised, Miss Bennet, at such an assertion, after seeing, as you probably might, the very cold manner of our meeting yesterday.” Use one other moment from the story as well.
Sample answer: This passage (Chapter XVI, paragraph 12) develops marriage and money: Elizabeth believes him immediately because his story confirms her dislike. Its words “yesterday” and “assertion” carry that idea into this moment. The same concern returns in “Upon my word I say no more here than I might say in any house in the neighbourhood, except Netherfield.” (Chapter XVI, paragraph 15), so the two passages read as a pattern, not a single moment. Together they show the story treating marriage and money as central.

40. [mc · inference · DOK 2 · Dual Credit (Indiana College Core): ICC-WC-1.5] What does this passage most clearly show? “I have no right to give my opinion” (Chapter XVI, paragraph 14)
A. Mr. Bennet's admission, the most serious line he speaks.

B. Wickham, just before giving it.

C. The narrator's list of five adjectives.

D. Ironic praise of the Bingley sisters.

Key: B (Wickham, just before giving it.)

41. [short · inference · DOK 2 · Program outcome: LeL-C2-LIT-1] What can you infer from this line? “Elizabeth honoured him for such feelings, and thought him handsomer than ever as he expressed them” (Chapter XVI, paragraph 30) Answer in two or three sentences with one detail.

Sample answer: Her judgment follows her feelings. The evidence is “Elizabeth honoured him for such feelings, and thought him handsomer than ever as he expressed them” (Chapter XVI, paragraph 30). This develops first impressions: Elizabeth believes him immediately because his story confirms her dislike.

42. [short · synthesis · DOK 4 · Program outcome: LeL-C3-LIT-1] Connect this passage from Chapter XVI, paragraph 43 to the story's treatment of women's limited choices: “She is a handsome girl, about fifteen or sixteen, and I understand highly accomplished.” Use one other moment from the story as well.

Sample answer: This passage (Chapter XVI, paragraph 43) develops women's limited choices: Elizabeth believes him immediately because his story confirms her dislike. Its words “accomplished” and “understand” carry that idea into this moment. The same concern returns in “How can Mr. Bingley, who seems good humour itself, and is, I really believe, truly amiable, be in friendship with such…” (Chapter XVI, paragraph 45), so the two passages read as a pattern, not a single moment. Together they show the story treating women's limited choices as central.

43. [mc · inference · DOK 2 · Program outcome: LeL-C4-LIT-1] What does this passage most clearly show? “I cannot pretend to be sorry” (Chapter XVI, paragraph 16)

A. Elizabeth reads Miss Bingley correctly.

B. Wickham on Darcy's unpopularity.

C. Why Mr. Bennet married.

D. Opening reversal: he has done what he pretended to refuse.

Key: B (Wickham on Darcy's unpopularity.)

Rigor version	Items (in order)	Mix
Scaffolded support	1, 2, 3, 4, 5, 6, 7, 8, 9, 10, 11, 12, 13, 14, 15, 16	recall 11, inference 2, analysis 2, synthesis 1
HS Freshman	4, 17, 18, 11, 19, 1, 2, 20, 13, 21, 22, 23, 24, 15, 25, 26	recall 8, inference 4, analysis 3, synthesis 1
HS Sophomore	27, 2, 7, 28, 9, 19, 6, 13, 22, 23, 21, 15, 14, 29, 30, 16	recall 7, inference 4, analysis 3, synthesis 2
HS Junior	31, 7, 32, 6, 3, 18, 22, 13, 21, 23, 33, 14, 25, 29, 34, 35	recall 6, inference 4, analysis 4, synthesis 2
HS Senior	31, 32, 1, 6, 10, 22, 23, 13, 21, 15, 24, 29, 25, 16, 30, 26	recall 5, inference 4, analysis 4, synthesis 3
AP	36, 4, 9, 23, 22, 13, 21, 37, 29, 24, 15, 25, 16, 38, 30, 39	recall 3, inference 4, analysis 5, synthesis 4
College Freshman	1, 27, 5, 13, 23, 21, 40, 24, 33, 14, 29, 25, 26, 16, 35, 30	recall 3, inference 4, analysis 5, synthesis 4
	27, 1, 21, 41, 23, 13, 29, 33, 37, 24, 14, 26, 35, 16, 39, 30

College Sophomore		recall 2, inference 4, analysis 5, synthesis 5
College Junior	1, 11, 27, 7, 23, 33, 29, 25, 24, 14, 26, 42, 39, 30, 35, 38	recall 4, inference 1, analysis 5, synthesis 6
College Senior	27, 1, 13, 43, 29, 37, 25, 33, 24, 14, 26, 39, 30, 35, 16, 42	recall 2, inference 2, analysis 6, synthesis 6
Graduate / PhD	28, 27, 7, 43, 22, 33, 14, 24, 25, 37, 16, 42, 35, 39, 26, 30	recall 3, inference 2, analysis 5, synthesis 6

Writing prompts (eleven rigor levels)

Scaffolded support (250 words; AP: see unit standards): Supported track (work from the passage your teacher selects). In “Chapter XVI,” how does Austen show a persuasive tale? Write a paragraph that states your claim, quotes two details from the passage, and explains how each detail supports your idea. Use the point of view you noticed as one piece of evidence.

HS Freshman (350 words; AP: see unit standards): In Chapter XVI, how does Austen develop the idea of a persuasive tale? State a clear claim, support it with two or three quotations, and explain how the point of view in the chapter helps build that idea.

HS Sophomore (450 words; AP: see unit standards): Analyze how Chapter XVI develops the idea of a persuasive tale. Make a precise claim, support it with at least three pieces of textual evidence, and explain how the author's use of point of view and irony shapes that idea. Address one possible counterclaim.

HS Junior (550 words; AP: see unit standards): Analyze how the structure of Chapter XVI (where it begins, turns and ends) and its point of view shape the reader's understanding of a persuasive tale. Identify one place where the text leaves matters uncertain and explain how that uncertainty adds to its meaning. Distinguish what is directly stated from what is really meant.

HS Senior (600 words; AP: see unit standards): Two readers disagree about what Chapter XVI suggests about a persuasive tale. Lay out two plausible interpretations, weigh the evidence for each (including the chapter's point of view and irony), and argue for the stronger one in a sustained, well-organized essay. Distinguish what is directly stated from what is really meant.

AP (650 words; AP: AP-LIT.NAR, AP-LIT.LAN): Write a literary argument in which you analyze how Jane Austen uses point of view in Chapter XVI to complicate the reader's understanding of a persuasive tale. Develop a defensible thesis, select evidence purposefully, and explain how specific choices of diction and syntax create meaning.

College Freshman (1000 words; AP: see unit standards): Situate Chapter XVI within its historical and literary context and argue how the chapter's treatment of a persuasive tale responds to that context. Engage with at least one secondary perspective (a critic, historian or the author's own statements), integrate quotations smoothly, and cite in MLA style.

College Sophomore (1250 words; AP: see unit standards): Read Chapter XVI alongside the conventions of its genre and period. Argue how the chapter's handling of a persuasive tale follows or bends those conventions, using the point of view as evidence, and test your reading against one published critic. Document two secondary sources in MLA.

College Junior (1500 words; AP: see unit standards): Apply a named critical approach (for example formalist, historicist, feminist, psychoanalytic or ecocritical) to Chapter XVI and its treatment of a persuasive tale. State your method, show what it reveals in the chapter's point of view and irony, and identify where the text resists it.

College Senior (2000 words; AP: see unit standards): Develop a research argument that reads Chapter XVI as evidence for a larger claim about a persuasive tale in Pride and Prejudice. Connect close reading of the chapter to the whole novel, engage at least four scholarly sources, and state precisely where your reading departs from theirs (Chicago style).

Graduate / PhD (2500 words; AP: see unit standards): Develop an original argument that reads Chapter XVI as a hinge in the novel's larger treatment of a persuasive tale. Position your reading within a named critical conversation (for example formalist, historicist, psychoanalytic, feminist or postcolonial approaches), account for the textual history where relevant, and articulate the stakes of your intervention for scholarship on Pride and Prejudice.

SAT-style questions

1. After many pauses and many trials of other subjects, Elizabeth could not help reverting once more to the first, and saying—

   As used in the text, what does the word “reverting” most nearly mean?

   A. going back (to a subject)

   B. giving offense to moral sensibilities and injurious to reputation

   C. people living in the same house

   D. suitable; desirable

2. “It was the prospect of constant society, and good society,” he added, “which was my chief inducement to enter the ——shire. I knew it to be a most respectable, agreeable corps, and my friend Denny tempted me farther by his account of their present quarters, and the very great attentions and excellent acquaintance Meryton had procured them. Society, I own, is necessary to me. I have been a disappointed man, and my spirits will not bear solitude. I must have employment and society. A military life is not what I was intended for, but circumstances have now made it eligible. The church ought to have been my profession—I was brought up for the church, and I should at this time have been in possession of a most valuable living, had it pleased the gentleman we were speaking of just now.”

   Which choice best states a central concern of “Chapter XVI”?

   A. Confiding and consent

   B. A persuasive tale

   C. Leaving Kent

   D. Character flaws examined

SAT key: 1. A (going back (to a subject)); 2. B (A persuasive tale)

Lesson 18: Chapter XVII

Focus: doubts and preparations

Objective: Students will analyze how characterization develops in “Chapter XVII” by writing a claim-evidence-reasoning paragraph that cites at least 2 quotations from the section, and will score at least 80% on the section quiz.

Standards: AP: see the unit standards

Teacher only · spoilers

Jane cannot believe ill of either man; Elizabeth sides with Wickham. Collins asks Elizabeth for the first two dances at the Netherfield ball.

Background: The two opening dances were the most significant of a ball.

Significance: Jane's charity contrasts with Elizabeth's certainty.

Lesson plan and lecture script (90 minutes)

0–8 min · Bell-ringer · You do (8 min)
Students write to the bell-ringer, then pair-share.
Whose response to Wickham's story is wiser—Jane's or Elizabeth's? Write for five minutes. Starters: I think... because... / This connects to pride and prejudice because....
Prompt: Whose response to Wickham's story is wiser—Jane's or Elizabeth's?
Sentence starters: I think… because… · This connects to pride and prejudice because…
Strong response: A strong response takes a position and anticipates this: Elizabeth's certainty is her pride.

8–18 min · Vocabulary with etymology notes · I do (10 min)
Four key words in context, with verified word histories.
Today's words: misrepresented — described falsely; ceremonious — very formal and polite; assisting — helping; depended — be contingent upon (something that is elided).
Words: misrepresented: described falsely · ceremonious: very formal and polite · assisting: helping · depended: be contingent upon (something that is elided)

18–28 min · Background and context · I do (10 min)
Mini-lecture (read or adapt the script).
The two opening dances were the most significant of a ball. Jane's charity contrasts with Elizabeth's certainty. Characterization: Jane tries to believe both Wickham and Darcy; Elizabeth is certain. Dialogue: The sisters' debate shows two ways of judging: charity and conviction. Watch for rank and condescension: Rank is displayed and enforced, above all at Rosings by Lady Catherine; Elizabeth refuses to be cowed. In this chapter: “Parsonage, and of assisting to form a quadrille table at Rosings, in the absence of more eligible visitors. The idea soon reached” (Chapter XVII, paragraph 14).

28–40 min · I do: modeled close reading · I do (12 min)
Model the close reading of the anchor quotation using the written think-aloud below.
First, meaning. I read "They have both," said she, "been deceived" slowly and put it in my own words: Jane suggests that both men have been deceived by others in ways no one can know. Next, craft. I notice her eagerness to excuse everyone, even inventing unknown people to blame. The strongest word is "deceived": it lets her avoid deciding that either man is bad. Then, effect. How does Jane explain the conflict between Darcy and Wickham? My answer: Jane always thinks the best of people; her kindness avoids judgment, while Elizabeth's quick certainty against Darcy shows the opposite error.

> They have both," said she, "been deceived (Chapter XVII, paragraph 2)

Think-aloud: First, meaning. I read "They have both," said she, "been deceived" slowly and put it in my own words: Jane suggests that both men have been deceived by others in ways no one can know. Next, craft. I notice her eagerness to excuse everyone, even inventing unknown people to blame. The strongest word is "deceived": it lets her avoid deciding that either man is bad. Then, effect. How does Jane explain the conflict between Darcy and Wickham? My answer: Jane always thinks the best of people; her kindness avoids judgment, while Elizabeth's quick certainty against Darcy shows the opposite error.

40–55 min · We do: guided annotation · We do (15 min)
Guided analysis of a second quotation; expected answers given.
Ask: What words in this line stand out, and what do they suggest? Expected: Jane's view seems naive but avoids unfair judgment. It links to prejudice. Ask: How does this line connect to pride and prejudice? Expected: Elizabeth's certainty is her pride. (Elizabeth repeats gossip she has not tested; the sisters' debate starts from hearsay.)

> Elizabeth related to Jane the next day, what had passed between Mr. Wickham and herself (Chapter XVII, paragraph 1)

Ask: What words in this line stand out, and what do they suggest?
Expected answer: Jane's view seems naive but avoids unfair judgment. It links to prejudice.
Ask: How does this line connect to pride and prejudice?
Expected answer: Elizabeth's certainty is her pride. (Elizabeth repeats gossip she has not tested; the sisters' debate starts from hearsay.)

55–70 min · You do: independent annotation · You do (15 min)
Independent annotation and a claim-evidence-reasoning paragraph (exemplar given).
Annotate the chapter for characterization, dialogue (three marks with a margin note each), then write one claim-evidence-reasoning paragraph: what does this chapter suggest about doubts and preparations? Then start your writing prompt at your assigned level (HS Sophomore: Analyze how Chapter XVII develops the idea of doubts and preparations. Make a precise claim, support it with at least three pieces of textual evidence, and explain how the author's use of characterization and theme shapes that idea. Address one possible counterclaim.) Exemplar: Jane's refusal to condemn anyone contrasts with Elizabeth's certainty. When the text says “They have both,” said she, “been deceived” (Chapter XVII, paragraph 2), it shows this directly. Jane suggests "they have both been deceived," while Elizabeth is sure Darcy is guilty; the novel will show Jane was closer to the truth.
Task: Annotate the chapter for characterization, dialogue (three marks with a margin note each), then write one claim-evidence-reasoning paragraph: what does this chapter suggest about doubts and preparations? Then start your writing prompt at your assigned level (HS Sophomore: Analyze how Chapter XVII develops the idea of doubts and preparations. Make a precise claim, support it with at least three pieces of textual evidence, and explain how the author's use of characterization and theme shapes that idea. Address one possible counterclaim.)
Exemplar: Jane's refusal to condemn anyone contrasts with Elizabeth's certainty. When the text says “They have both,” said she, “been deceived” (Chapter XVII, paragraph 2), it shows this directly. Jane suggests "they have both been deceived," while Elizabeth is sure Darcy is guilty; the novel will show Jane was closer to the truth.

70–80 min · Discussion · We do (10 min)
Structured discussion from the 30 tiered questions, with facilitation notes.
Anchor question: Whose response to Wickham's story is wiser—Jane's or Elizabeth's? Ask: is it better to suspend judgment or to decide quickly?
Anchor question: Whose response to Wickham's story is wiser—Jane's or Elizabeth's?
Facilitation: Ask: is it better to suspend judgment or to decide quickly?

80–87 min · Exit ticket / chapter quiz · You do (7 min)
Chapter quiz in the app and an exit ticket (answer given).
Chapter quiz in the app, then: In one sentence, what does this chapter suggest about doubts and preparations? Support it with one short quotation. Model answer: Jane's refusal to condemn anyone contrasts with Elizabeth's certainty. (“They have both,” said she, “been deceived”, Chapter XVII, paragraph 2). Accept any defensible claim backed by a quotation from the chapter; the answer key for the quiz is in the Quiz section.
Exit ticket: In one sentence, what does this chapter suggest about doubts and preparations? Support it with one short quotation.
Answer: Model answer: Jane's refusal to condemn anyone contrasts with Elizabeth's certainty. (“They have both,” said she, “been deceived”, Chapter XVII, paragraph 2). Accept any defensible claim backed by a quotation from the chapter; the answer key for the quiz is in the Quiz section.

87–90 min · Closure · I do (3 min)
Summarize the lesson and preview the next reading.
Today we saw how characterization shapes doubts and preparations. Key takeaway: Elizabeth's certainty is her pride.

Total: 90 minutes.

Teacher analysis (spoilers)

Literary elements

- Characterization: Jane tries to believe both Wickham and Darcy; Elizabeth is certain.
- Dialogue: The sisters' debate shows two ways of judging: charity and conviction.

Themes and how they develop

- pride and prejudice: Elizabeth's certainty is her pride.

Symbols and motifs

- rank and condescension: Rank is displayed and enforced, above all at Rosings by Lady Catherine; Elizabeth refuses to be cowed. In this chapter: “Parsonage, and of assisting to form a quadrille table at Rosings, in the absence of more eligible visitors. The idea soon reached” (Chapter XVII, paragraph 14).
- marriage and money: Incomes, entails and fortunes are stated precisely; marriage is always also an economic question. In this chapter: “mother gave her to understand that the probability of their marriage was exceedingly agreeable to her. Elizabeth however did not choose to” (Chapter XVII, paragraph 14).

Key quotations (checked against the reading text)

- “They have both,” said she, “been deceived” (Chapter XVII, paragraph 2) Jane's charitable explanation.
- “I beg your pardon;—one knows exactly what to think” (Chapter XVII, paragraph 7) Elizabeth's certainty, answering Jane's hesitation.
- “Elizabeth related to Jane the next day, what had passed between Mr. Wickham and herself” (Chapter XVII, paragraph 1) Elizabeth repeats gossip she has not tested; the sisters' debate starts from hearsay.

Model claim-evidence-reasoning

Claim: Jane's refusal to condemn anyone contrasts with Elizabeth's certainty.
Evidence: “They have both,” said she, “been deceived” (Chapter XVII, paragraph 2)
Reasoning: Jane suggests "they have both been deceived," while Elizabeth is sure Darcy is guilty; the novel will show Jane was closer to the truth.

Vocabulary with etymology notes

Word	Definition (in this sentence)	In context	Word history
misrepresented (verb)	described falsely	Interested people have perhaps misrepresented each to the other.
ceremonious (adjective)	very formal and polite	Bingley himself, instead of a ceremonious card.

assisting (verb)	helping	It now first struck her, that she was selected from among her sisters as worthy of being the mistress of Hunsford Parsonage, and of assisting to form a quadrille table at Rosings, in the absence of more eligible visitors.
depended (verb)	be contingent upon (something that is elided)	The happiness anticipated by Catherine and Lydia, depended less on any single event, or any particular person, for though they each, like Elizabeth, meant to dance half the evening with Mr.

Discussion questions

1. Whose response to Wickham's story is wiser—Jane's or Elizabeth's?
2. Where does characterization appear in this chapter, and what effect does it have? Point to one passage.
3. How does this chapter connect to the book's larger concern with pride and self-knowledge?

Classroom discussion questions (30, tiered)

Wait time after every question (3 s for DOK 1, 5 s for DOK 2, 8 to 10 s for DOK 3 and 4); think-pair-share on DOK 3 and 4; answer each response with a follow-up probe; close with student-generated questions. Focus sets by rigor level: Scaffolded support: 1, 2, 3, 4, 5, 6, 11, 12, 13, 14, 21, 22; HS Freshman: 1, 2, 3, 4, 5, 12, 13, 14, 15, 22, 23, 24; HS Sophomore: 1, 2, 3, 4, 13, 14, 15, 16, 17, 23, 24, 25; HS Junior: 1, 2, 3, 14, 15, 16, 17, 18, 24, 25, 26, 27; HS Senior: 1, 2, 3, 15, 16, 17, 18, 25, 26, 27, 28, 29; AP: 1, 2, 16, 17, 18, 19, 20, 26, 27, 28, 29, 30; College Freshman: 1, 2, 17, 18, 19, 20, 21, 22, 27, 28, 29, 30; College Sophomore: 1, 2, 11, 18, 19, 20, 21, 22, 23, 28, 29, 30; College Junior: 1, 11, 12, 19, 20, 21, 22, 23, 24, 25, 29, 30; College Senior: 1, 11, 12, 13, 20, 21, 22, 23, 24, 25, 26, 30; Graduate / PhD: 1, 11, 12, 13, 21, 22, 23, 24, 25, 26, 27, 28

Literal / recall

1. How does Jane respond to Wickham's story? [DOK 1 · coldCallWithSupport · wait 3 s · AP: unit standards] Look for: She refuses to think ill of either man
2. Whom does Elizabeth side with? [DOK 1 · turnAndTalk · wait 3 s · AP: unit standards] Look for: Wickham
3. Who claims Elizabeth for the first two dances? [DOK 1 · coldCallWithSupport · wait 3 s · AP: unit standards] Look for: Mr. Collins
4. What event is coming? [DOK 1 · turnAndTalk · wait 3 s · AP: unit standards] Look for: The Netherfield ball
5. What feeling does Elizabeth have about the ball? [DOK 1 · coldCallWithSupport · wait 3 s · AP: unit standards] Look for: Hopes to see Wickham
6. Retell the three most important events of "Chapter XVII" in order, in one sentence each. [DOK 1 · turnAndTalk · wait 3 s · AP: unit standards] Look for: Jane cannot believe ill of either man; Elizabeth sides with Wickham. Collins asks Elizabeth for the first two dances at the Netherfield ball.
7. Which characters appear or are mentioned in "Chapter XVII"? Name two and one thing each says or does. [DOK 1 · coldCallWithSupport · wait 3 s · AP: unit standards] Look for: Names and actions taken from the chapter; check against the teacher summary.
8. Where and when does "Chapter XVII" take place? Point to the line that tells you. [DOK 1 · turnAndTalk · wait 3 s · AP: unit standards] Look for: A place/time detail quoted from the chapter.
9. Reread: "Interested people have perhaps misrepresented each to the other." What does "misrepresented" mean here, and what is literally happening in this line? [DOK 1 · turnAndTalk · wait 3 s · AP: unit standards] Look for: misrepresented: described falsely.

10. Reread: “Bingley himself, instead of a ceremonious card.” What does “ceremonious” mean here, and what is literally happening in this line? [DOK 1 · turnAndTalk · wait 3 s · AP: unit standards] Look for: ceremonious: very formal and polite.

Inferential / analytical

1. What does “Chapter XVII” suggest about doubts and preparations? State the inference and the line that supports it. [DOK 2 · thinkPairShare · wait 5 s · AP-LIT.LAN] Look for: Jane's charity contrasts with Elizabeth's certainty.
2. Find one example of characterization in this chapter. What does it reveal that a plain statement would not? [DOK 2 · followUp · wait 5 s · AP-LIT.CHR] Look for: Look for what characters say, do and think, and how others react to them.
3. How does the theme in this chapter shape what we understand about doubts and preparations? [DOK 3 · thinkPairShare · wait 8 s · AP-LIT.LAN] Look for: Look for statements or moments that connect to the book's big ideas.
   Answer guidance: A defensible line of argument: Jane's refusal to condemn anyone contrasts with Elizabeth's certainty. Useful evidence: “They have both,” said she, “been deceived” (Chapter XVII, paragraph 2): Jane's charitable explanation. Theme link: Elizabeth's certainty is her pride. Credit any position that is supported by quotation and reasoning; push one-sided answers to address the strongest counterpoint.
4. In the passage that begins ““They have both,””, why might Austen have chosen these particular words? Pick two and explain their connotations. [DOK 2 · followUp · wait 5 s · AP-LIT.FIG] Look for: Diction analysis of two words in the anchor passage.
5. What causes the main turn in “Chapter XVII”, and what effect is it likely to have on what follows? [DOK 2 · followUp · wait 5 s · AP-LIT.STR] Look for: Jane cannot believe ill of either man; Elizabeth sides with Wickham. Collins asks Elizabeth for the first two dances at the Netherfield ball.
6. How does “Chapter XVII” build on “Chapter XVI”? Name one link of cause and effect. [DOK 3 · thinkPairShare · wait 8 s · AP-LIT.STR] Look for: A causal or structural link between this and the previous chapter.
   Answer guidance: A defensible line of argument: Jane's refusal to condemn anyone contrasts with Elizabeth's certainty. Useful evidence: “I beg your pardon;—one knows exactly what to think” (Chapter XVII, paragraph 7): Elizabeth's certainty, answering Jane's hesitation. Theme link: Elizabeth's certainty is her pride. Credit any position that is supported by quotation and reasoning; push one-sided answers to address the strongest counterpoint.
7. What can we infer about a character's motives from what they say and do here, as opposed to what they claim? [DOK 3 · followUp · wait 8 s · AP-LIT.CHR] Look for: An inference about motive supported by a quoted line.
   Answer guidance: A defensible line of argument: Jane's refusal to condemn anyone contrasts with Elizabeth's certainty. Useful evidence: “Elizabeth related to Jane the next day, what had passed between Mr. Wickham and herself” (Chapter XVII, paragraph 1): Elizabeth repeats gossip she has not tested; the sisters' debate starts from hearsay. On characterization: Jane tries to believe both Wickham and Darcy; Elizabeth is certain. Credit any position that is supported by quotation and reasoning; push one-sided answers to address the strongest counterpoint.
8. The bell-ringer asked: “Whose response to Wickham's story is wiser—Jane's or Elizabeth's?” Now that we have read closely, how would you revise your first answer, and which line changed your mind? [DOK 2 · thinkPairShare · wait 5 s · AP-LIT.LAN] Look for: A revised answer anchored in the text.
9. Where does irony appear, and how does it connect this chapter to the larger concern with pride and self-knowledge? [DOK 3 · followUp · wait 8 s · AP-LIT.NAR] Look for: Look for gaps between what characters expect or say and what is true.

Answer guidance: A defensible line of argument: Jane's refusal to condemn anyone contrasts with Elizabeth's certainty. Useful evidence: “They have both,” said she, “been deceived” (Chapter XVII, paragraph 2): Jane's charitable explanation. Theme link: Elizabeth's certainty is her pride. Credit any position that is supported by quotation and reasoning; push one-sided answers to address the strongest counterpoint.

10. Background: The two opening dances were the most significant of a ball. How does knowing this change the way you read one moment in the chapter? [DOK 3 · thinkPairShare · wait 8 s · AP-LIT.SET] Look for: A specific moment reread in light of the context.

    Answer guidance: A defensible line of argument: Jane's refusal to condemn anyone contrasts with Elizabeth's certainty. Useful evidence: “I beg your pardon;—one knows exactly what to think” (Chapter XVII, paragraph 7): Elizabeth's certainty, answering Jane's hesitation. Theme link: Elizabeth's certainty is her pride. Credit any position that is supported by quotation and reasoning; push one-sided answers to address the strongest counterpoint.

Evaluative / synthesis / creative

1. A critic might argue: “Jane's charity contrasts with Elizabeth's certainty.” How far do you agree? Take a stand and defend it with two lines from the chapter. [DOK 3 · fourCorners · wait 8 s · AP-LIT.LAN] Look for: A defended position with evidence and one counterpoint.

   Answer guidance: A defensible line of argument: Jane's refusal to condemn anyone contrasts with Elizabeth's certainty. Useful evidence: “Elizabeth related to Jane the next day, what had passed between Mr. Wickham and herself” (Chapter XVII, paragraph 1): Elizabeth repeats gossip she has not tested; the sisters' debate starts from hearsay. Theme link: Elizabeth's certainty is her pride. Credit any position that is supported by quotation and reasoning; push one-sided answers to address the strongest counterpoint.
2. Which character in this chapter acts most wisely, and which least? Judge them by a standard you name. [DOK 3 · thinkPairShare · wait 8 s · AP-LIT.CHR, AP-LIT.LAN] Look for: An evaluation using an explicit criterion and evidence.

   Answer guidance: A defensible line of argument: Jane's refusal to condemn anyone contrasts with Elizabeth's certainty. Useful evidence: “They have both,” said she, “been deceived” (Chapter XVII, paragraph 2): Jane's charitable explanation. On characterization: Jane tries to believe both Wickham and Darcy; Elizabeth is certain. Credit any position that is supported by quotation and reasoning; push one-sided answers to address the strongest counterpoint.
3. Rewrite one moment of “Chapter XVII” from the point of view of a different character. What does the new angle reveal or hide about doubts and preparations? [DOK 4 · thinkPairShare · wait 8 s · AP-LIT.LAN, AP-LIT.NAR] Look for: A creative product with a rationale tied to the text.

   Answer guidance: A defensible line of argument: Jane's refusal to condemn anyone contrasts with Elizabeth's certainty. Useful evidence: “I beg your pardon;—one knows exactly what to think” (Chapter XVII, paragraph 7): Elizabeth's certainty, answering Jane's hesitation. Theme link: Elizabeth's certainty is her pride. Credit any position that is supported by quotation and reasoning; push one-sided answers to address the strongest counterpoint.
4. Write three questions of your own about “Chapter XVII”: one recall, one “why/how”, and one “should/what if”. Trade with a partner and answer theirs. [DOK 3 · studentGenerated · wait 8 s · AP-LIT.LAN] Look for: Student-generated questions at three levels.

Answer guidance: A defensible line of argument: Jane's refusal to condemn anyone contrasts with Elizabeth's certainty. Useful evidence: “Elizabeth related to Jane the next day, what had passed between Mr. Wickham and herself” (Chapter XVII, paragraph 1): Elizabeth repeats gossip she has not tested; the sisters' debate starts from hearsay. Theme link: Elizabeth's certainty is her pride. Credit any position that is supported by quotation and reasoning; push one-sided answers to address the strongest counterpoint.

5. Connect this chapter to marriage and money: is the link strong or weak so far? What would Austen need to show next to strengthen it? [DOK 4 · socraticCircle · wait 8 s · AP-LIT.LAN] Look for: A judgment of thematic development across the work.

   Answer guidance: A defensible line of argument: Jane's refusal to condemn anyone contrasts with Elizabeth's certainty. Useful evidence: “They have both,” said she, “been deceived” (Chapter XVII, paragraph 2): Jane's charitable explanation. Theme link: Elizabeth's certainty is her pride. Credit any position that is supported by quotation and reasoning; push one-sided answers to address the strongest counterpoint.

6. Is the characterization in this chapter effective, or does it feel heavy-handed? Evaluate it as a reader would in a review. [DOK 3 · fourCorners · wait 8 s · AP-LIT.CHR, AP-LIT.LAN] Look for: An evaluative judgment with criteria and evidence.

   Answer guidance: A defensible line of argument: Jane's refusal to condemn anyone contrasts with Elizabeth's certainty. Useful evidence: “I beg your pardon;—one knows exactly what to think” (Chapter XVII, paragraph 7): Elizabeth's certainty, answering Jane's hesitation. On characterization: Jane tries to believe both Wickham and Darcy; Elizabeth is certain. Credit any position that is supported by quotation and reasoning; push one-sided answers to address the strongest counterpoint.

7. Compare how “Chapter XVII” treats doubts and preparations with how another text, film or event you know treats a similar idea. What does Pride and Prejudice see that the other misses? [DOK 4 · socraticCircle · wait 8 s · AP-LIT.LAN] Look for: A cross-text synthesis.

   Answer guidance: A defensible line of argument: Jane's refusal to condemn anyone contrasts with Elizabeth's certainty. Useful evidence: “Elizabeth related to Jane the next day, what had passed between Mr. Wickham and herself” (Chapter XVII, paragraph 1): Elizabeth repeats gossip she has not tested; the sisters' debate starts from hearsay. Theme link: Elizabeth's certainty is her pride. Credit any position that is supported by quotation and reasoning; push one-sided answers to address the strongest counterpoint.

8. Predict what “Chapter XVIII” will bring, using two clues from this chapter. After reading, evaluate your prediction. [DOK 3 · thinkPairShare · wait 8 s · AP-LIT.LAN, AP-LIT.STR] Look for: A prediction or judgment justified with textual clues.

   Answer guidance: A defensible line of argument: Jane's refusal to condemn anyone contrasts with Elizabeth's certainty. Useful evidence: “They have both,” said she, “been deceived” (Chapter XVII, paragraph 2): Jane's charitable explanation. Theme link: Elizabeth's certainty is her pride. Credit any position that is supported by quotation and reasoning; push one-sided answers to address the strongest counterpoint.

9. Design a one-paragraph modern adaptation of this chapter (setting, characters, conflict). What must stay the same for it to still be about doubts and preparations? [DOK 4 · thinkPairShare · wait 8 s · AP-LIT.LAN] Look for: A creative transfer that keeps the core idea.

   Answer guidance: A defensible line of argument: Jane's refusal to condemn anyone contrasts with Elizabeth's certainty. Useful evidence: “I beg your pardon;—one knows exactly what to think” (Chapter XVII, paragraph 7): Elizabeth's certainty, answering Jane's hesitation. Theme link: Elizabeth's certainty is her pride. Credit any position that is supported by quotation and reasoning; push one-sided answers to address the strongest counterpoint.

10. What question would you most like to ask Jane Austen about this chapter, and what answer do you think the text itself gives? [DOK 4 · studentGenerated · wait 8 s · AP-LIT.LAN] Look for: A student-generated question answered from evidence.

    Answer guidance: A defensible line of argument: Jane's refusal to condemn anyone contrasts with Elizabeth's certainty. Useful evidence: “Elizabeth related to Jane the next day, what had passed between Mr. Wickham and herself” (Chapter XVII, paragraph 1): Elizabeth repeats gossip she has not tested; the sisters' debate starts from hearsay. Theme link: Elizabeth's certainty is her pride. Credit any position that is supported by quotation and reasoning; push one-sided answers to address the strongest counterpoint.

Annotation focus

- Characterization: look for what characters say, do and think, and how others react to them (anchor passage in the We do segment)
- Also notice Theme: statements or moments that connect to the book's big ideas
- Also notice Irony: gaps between what characters expect or say and what is true

Chapter quiz: item bank (all eleven rigor versions)

1. [fill · recall · DOK 1] Complete the quotation from Chapter XVII, paragraph 1: “Elizabeth _____ to Jane the next day, what had passed between Mr. Wickham and herself”

   Key: related

2. [fill · recall · DOK 1] Fill in the blank with the vocabulary word that fits: “Interested people have perhaps _____ each to the other.” Word bank: ceremonious, misrepresented, depended, assisting

   Key: misrepresented

3. [mc · recall · DOK 1] Who claims Elizabeth for the first two dances?

   A. Darcy
   B. Wickham
   C. Mr. Collins
   D. Bingley

   Key: C (Mr. Collins)

4. [fill · recall · DOK 1] Complete the quotation from Chapter XVII, paragraph 7: “I beg your pardon;—one knows _____ what to think”

   Key: exactly

5. [fill · recall · DOK 1] Fill in the blank with the vocabulary word that fits: “Bingley himself, instead of a _____ card.” Word bank: assisting, depended, misrepresented, ceremonious

   Key: ceremonious

6. [mc · recall · DOK 1] What feeling does Elizabeth have about the ball?

   A. Excitement about Darcy
   B. Dread of Collins only
   C. Hopes to see Wickham
   D. Boredom

Key: C (Hopes to see Wickham)

7. [mc · recall · DOK 1] How does Jane respond to Wickham's story?
   A. She believes Wickham
   B. She is uninterested
   C. She believes Darcy
   D. She refuses to think ill of either man

   Key: D (She refuses to think ill of either man)

8. [mc · recall · DOK 1] Whom does Elizabeth side with?
   A. Wickham
   B. Darcy
   C. Bingley
   D. Collins

   Key: A (Wickham)

9. [mc · recall · DOK 1] What event is coming?
   A. The Netherfield ball
   B. A wedding
   C. A trip to London
   D. A funeral

   Key: A (The Netherfield ball)

10. [mc · recall · DOK 1] In the line “It now first struck her, that she was selected from among her sisters as worthy of being the mistress of Hunsford Parsonage, and of assisting to form a quadrille table at Rosings, in the absence of more eligible…”, what does “assisting” most nearly mean?
    A. pause or hold back in uncertainty or unwillingness
    B. to act as host; to be in charge
    C. helping
    D. first one and then the other

    Key: C (helping)

11. [mc · recall · DOK 1] In the line “The happiness anticipated by Catherine and Lydia, depended less on any single event, or any particular person, for though they each, like Elizabeth, meant to dance half the evening with Mr.”, what does “depended” most nearly mean?
    A. with appreciation; in a grateful manner
    B. the act of following someone to win or catch them up
    C. never tiring
    D. be contingent upon (something that is elided)

    Key: D (be contingent upon (something that is elided))

12. [short · analysis · DOK 3] Analyze the word choice in “Elizabeth related to Jane the next day, what had passed between Mr. Wickham and herself” (Chapter XVII, paragraph 1). Pick two words and explain what they suggest.

    Sample answer: Elizabeth repeats gossip she has not tested; the sisters' debate starts from hearsay. The evidence is “Elizabeth related to Jane the next day, what had passed between Mr. Wickham and herself” (Chapter XVII, paragraph 1). This develops pride and prejudice: Elizabeth's certainty is her pride. The words “between” and “herself” carry that meaning: they are the charged choices in the line, and changing either would soften the effect.

13. [mc · analysis · DOK 3] Which literary element does this describe in “Chapter XVII”? The sisters' debate shows two ways of judging: charity and conviction.

    A. Structure

    B. Imagery

    C. Conflict

    D. Dialogue

    Key: D (Dialogue)

14. [short · synthesis · DOK 4] Close reading: how do the diction and syntax of “They have both,’ said she, ‘been deceived” (Chapter XVII, paragraph 2) shape its meaning? Consider a second, competing reading.

    Sample answer: Jane's charitable explanation. The evidence is “They have both,’ said she, ‘been deceived” (Chapter XVII, paragraph 2). This develops pride and prejudice: Elizabeth's certainty is her pride. The words “deceived” and “both” carry that meaning: they are the charged choices in the line, and changing either would soften the effect. Jane suggests "they have both been deceived," while Elizabeth is sure Darcy is guilty; the novel will show Jane was closer to the truth.

15. [short · synthesis · DOK 4] Evaluate this claim about the chapter: “Jane's refusal to condemn anyone contrasts with Elizabeth's certainty.” Is it fully persuasive? Argue with evidence, including a passage that complicates it.

    Sample answer: The claim is persuasive in part. “They have both,’ said she, ‘been deceived” (Chapter XVII, paragraph 2) supports it: Jane suggests "they have both been deceived," while Elizabeth is sure Darcy is guilty; the novel will show Jane was closer to the truth. But “Elizabeth related to Jane the next day, what had passed between Mr. Wickham and herself” (Chapter XVII, paragraph 1) complicates it: Elizabeth repeats gossip she has not tested; the sisters' debate starts from hearsay, and it pulls the other way. Weighing the two passages, the claim survives, but only once it admits the tension the second passage creates.

16. [short · synthesis · DOK 4] Synthesis: trace how pride and prejudice develops from Chapter XI to Chapter XVII. Use one quotation from each.

    Sample answer: Earlier, in Chapter XI, paragraph 28, the text reads “My good opinion once lost is lost forever” — Darcy's self-description; it will be tested when he forgives Elizabeth's refusal. In Chapter XVII, “They have both,’ said she, ‘been deceived” (Chapter XVII, paragraph 2) — Jane's charitable explanation. Elizabeth's certainty is her pride.

17. [fill · recall · DOK 1] Complete the quotation from Chapter XVII, paragraph 14: “She was not the better pleased with his _____, from the idea it suggested of something more.” Word bank: consequence, repeatedly, liveliness, gallantry

    Key: gallantry

18. [mc · recall · DOK 1] Which word completes this sentence from Chapter XVII, paragraph 4? “Can his most intimate friends be so _____ deceived in him? oh! no.”

    A. contradict

    B. mornings

    C. excessively

    D. repeatedly

    Key: C (excessively)

19. [fill · recall · DOK 1] Complete the quotation from Chapter XVII, paragraph 1: “The _____ of his having really endured such unkindness, was enough to interest all her tender feelings” Word bank: contradict, interested, possibility, excessively

Key: possibility

20. [fill · recall · DOK 1] Complete the quotation from Chapter XVII, paragraph 9: “The two ladies were delighted to see their dear friend again, called it an age since they had met, and _____ asked what she had been doing with herself since their separation.” Word bank: liveliness, civilities, repeatedly, interested

    Key: repeatedly

21. [mc · recall · DOK 1] Which word completes this sentence from Chapter XVII, paragraph 11? “While I can have my _____ to myself,’ said she, ‘it is enough.”

    A. civilities

    B. contradict

    C. attentions

    D. mornings

    Key: D (mornings)

22. [short · inference · DOK 2] What does this passage from Chapter XVII, paragraph 13 reveal about the character or situation? “I am by no means of opinion, I assure you,’ said he, ‘that a ball of this kind, given by a young man of character, to respectable people, can have any evil tendency” Answer in two or three sentences with one detail.

    Sample answer: The passage (Chapter XVII, paragraph 13) shows the situation turning on first impressions and prejudice: Elizabeth's certainty is her pride. The words “respectable” and “character” are the proof, because they show how the moment looks to the people in it. They suggest more than the narrator states outright.

23. [mc · inference · DOK 2] Which of these passages comes earliest in Chapter XVII?

    A. “Very true, indeed;—and now, my dear Jane, what have you got to say in behalf of the interested people who have probably been concerned in…”

    B. “It is, in short, impossible for us to conjecture the causes or circumstances which may have alienated them, without actual blame on either…”

    C. “The possibility of his having really endured such unkindness, was enough to interest all her tender feelings”

    D. “Laugh as much as you choose, but you will not laugh me out of my opinion.”

    Key: C (“The possibility of his having really endured such unkindness, was enough to interest all her tender feelings”)

24. [short · analysis · DOK 3] Analyze how the word choice in this passage from Chapter XVII, paragraph 4 shapes its tone: “Laugh as much as you choose, but you will not laugh me out of my opinion.” Pick two words and explain their effect.

    Sample answer: The words “opinion” and “choose” (Chapter XVII, paragraph 4) make the tone heavy and deliberate rather than neutral. That weight points the reader to pride and self-knowledge: Elizabeth's certainty is her pride. The author chooses them so the moment feels significant instead of passing.

25. [mc · analysis · DOK 3] Which literary element does this describe in “Chapter XVII”? Jane tries to believe both Wickham and Darcy; Elizabeth is certain.

    A. Alliteration

    B. Simile

    C. Theme

    D. Characterization

Key: D (Characterization)

26. [short · analysis · DOK 3] Analyze how the word choice in this passage from Chapter XVII, paragraph 14 shapes its tone: “The idea soon reached to conviction, as she observed his increasing civilities toward herself, and heard his frequent attempt at a compliment on her wit and vivacity” Pick two words and explain their effect.

    Sample answer: The words “civilities” and “compliment” (Chapter XVII, paragraph 14) make the tone heavy and deliberate rather than neutral. That weight points the reader to class and social mobility: Elizabeth's certainty is her pride. The author chooses them so the moment feels significant instead of passing.

27. [short · inference · DOK 2] What can you infer from this line? “I beg your pardon;—one knows exactly what to think” (Chapter XVII, paragraph 7) Answer in two or three sentences with one detail.

    Sample answer: Elizabeth's certainty, answering Jane's hesitation. The evidence is “I beg your pardon;—one knows exactly what to think” (Chapter XVII, paragraph 7). This develops pride and prejudice: Elizabeth's certainty is her pride.

28. [short · synthesis · DOK 4] Connect this passage from Chapter XVII, paragraph 8 to the story's treatment of women's limited choices: “But Jane could think with certainty on only one point—that Mr. Bingley, if he had been imposed on, would have much to suffer when the affair became public.” Use one other moment from the story as well.

    Sample answer: This passage (Chapter XVII, paragraph 8) develops women's limited choices: Elizabeth's certainty is her pride. Its words “certainty” and “imposed” carry that idea into this moment. The same concern returns in “Mr. Bingley and his sisters came to give their personal invitation for the long expected ball at Netherfield, which was…” (Chapter XVII, paragraph 9), so the two passages read as a pattern, not a single moment. Together they show the story treating women's limited choices as central.

29. [short · synthesis · DOK 4] Connect this passage from Chapter XVII, paragraph 10 to the story's treatment of marriage and money: “And even Mary could assure her family that she had no disinclination for it.” Use one other moment from the story as well.

    Sample answer: This passage (Chapter XVII, paragraph 10) develops marriage and money: Elizabeth's certainty is her pride. Its words “disinclination” and “family” carry that idea into this moment. The same concern returns in “The prospect of the Netherfield ball was extremely agreeable to every female of the family.” (Chapter XVII, paragraph 10), so the two passages read as a pattern, not a single moment. Together they show the story treating marriage and money as central.

30. [short · inference · DOK 2 · AP: AP-LIT.CHR] What can you infer from this line? “They have both,’ said she, ‘been deceived” (Chapter XVII, paragraph 2) Answer in two or three sentences with one detail.

    Sample answer: Jane's charitable explanation. The evidence is “They have both,’ said she, ‘been deceived” (Chapter XVII, paragraph 2). This develops pride and prejudice: Elizabeth's certainty is her pride.

31. [mc · inference · DOK 2 · AP: AP-LIT.LAN] Which choice best states a central concern of “Chapter XVII”?

    A. Parental conflict over the refusal

    B. Bingley returns

    C. Doubts and preparations

    D. The Brighton plan

    Key: C (Doubts and preparations)

32. [mc · recall · DOK 1 · Dual Credit (Indiana College Core): ICC-WC-1.5] In the line “Bingley himself, instead of a ceremonious card.”, what does “ceremonious” most nearly mean?

    A. very formal and polite

    B. described falsely

C. be contingent upon (something that is elided)

D. helping

Key: A (very formal and polite)

33. [short · synthesis · DOK 4 · Program outcome: LeL-C2-LIT-1] Close reading: how do the diction and syntax of “I beg your pardon;—one knows exactly what to think” (Chapter XVII, paragraph 7) shape its meaning? Consider a second, competing reading.

    Sample answer: Elizabeth's certainty, answering Jane's hesitation. The evidence is “I beg your pardon;—one knows exactly what to think” (Chapter XVII, paragraph 7). This develops pride and prejudice: Elizabeth's certainty is her pride. The words “exactly” and “pardon” carry that meaning: they are the charged choices in the line, and changing either would soften the effect. Jane suggests "they have both been deceived," while Elizabeth is sure Darcy is guilty; the novel will show Jane was closer to the truth.

34. [fill · recall · DOK 1 · Program outcome: LeL-C3-LIT-1] Complete the quotation from Chapter XVII, paragraph 2: “They have both,’ said she, ‘been _____”

    Key: deceived

35. [mc · recall · DOK 1 · Program outcome: LeL-C4-LIT-1] In the line “Interested people have perhaps misrepresented each to the other.”, what does “misrepresented” most nearly mean?

    A. described falsely

    B. be contingent upon (something that is elided)

    C. very formal and polite

    D. helping

    Key: A (described falsely)

36. [mc · inference · DOK 2 · Program outcome: LeL-C4-LIT-1] What does this passage most clearly show? “Elizabeth related to Jane the next day, what had passed between Mr. Wickham and herself” (Chapter XVII, paragraph 1)

    A. Caroline's letter announces the departure in a careless phrase that hides a deliberate plan.

    B. The colonel on money.

    C. Darcy admits his role.

    D. Elizabeth repeats gossip she has not tested; the sisters' debate starts from hearsay.

    Key: D (Elizabeth repeats gossip she has not tested; the sisters' debate starts from hearsay.)

Rigor version	Items (in order)	Mix
Scaffolded support	1, 2, 3, 4, 5, 6, 7, 8, 9, 10, 11, 12, 13, 14, 15, 16	recall 11, inference 0, analysis 2, synthesis 3
HS Freshman	10, 17, 4, 18, 2, 9, 19, 20, 21, 7, 22, 23, 24, 25, 26, 16	recall 10, inference 2, analysis 3, synthesis 1
HS Sophomore	17, 9, 6, 20, 21, 19, 3, 18, 23, 27, 22, 26, 12, 24, 28, 29	recall 8, inference 3, analysis 3, synthesis 2
HS Junior	6, 9, 1, 11, 8, 18, 19, 22, 23, 30, 12, 24, 26, 13, 15, 28	recall 7, inference 3, analysis 4, synthesis 2
HS Senior	17, 6, 4, 2, 19, 21, 11, 22, 23, 31, 12, 24, 26, 15, 16, 28	recall 7, inference 3, analysis 3, synthesis 3
AP	7, 3, 20, 1, 22, 27, 30, 23, 12, 26, 24, 25, 29, 16, 28, 15	recall 4, inference 4, analysis 4, synthesis 4
College Freshman		recall 5, inference 3, analysis 4, synthesis 4

	2, 10, 19, 18, 32, 23, 30, 22, 24, 12, 25, 26, 15, 28, 29, 16
College Sophomore	5, 20, 9, 3, 7, 23, 22, 13, 26, 12, 24, 16, 33, 15, 29, 28	recall 5, inference 2, analysis 4, synthesis 5
College Junior	20, 21, 32, 34, 3, 7, 22, 23, 24, 12, 26, 13, 15, 16, 29, 28	recall 6, inference 2, analysis 4, synthesis 4
College Senior	21, 5, 35, 11, 17, 31, 23, 36, 30, 22, 26, 24, 29, 15, 28, 16	recall 5, inference 5, analysis 2, synthesis 4
Graduate / PhD	20, 17, 11, 32, 21, 3, 31, 23, 22, 26, 12, 24, 29, 16, 28, 15	recall 6, inference 3, analysis 3, synthesis 4

Writing prompts (eleven rigor levels)

Scaffolded support (250 words; AP: see unit standards): Supported track (work from the passage your teacher selects). In “Chapter XVII,” how does Austen show doubts and preparations? Write a paragraph that states your claim, quotes two details from the passage, and explains how each detail supports your idea. Use the characterization you noticed as one piece of evidence.

HS Freshman (350 words; AP: see unit standards): In Chapter XVII, how does Austen develop the idea of doubts and preparations? State a clear claim, support it with two or three quotations, and explain how the characterization in the chapter helps build that idea.

HS Sophomore (450 words; AP: see unit standards): Analyze how Chapter XVII develops the idea of doubts and preparations. Make a precise claim, support it with at least three pieces of textual evidence, and explain how the author's use of characterization and theme shapes that idea. Address one possible counterclaim.

HS Junior (550 words; AP: see unit standards): Analyze how the structure of Chapter XVII (where it begins, turns and ends) and its characterization shape the reader's understanding of doubts and preparations. Identify one place where the text leaves matters uncertain and explain how that uncertainty adds to its meaning.

HS Senior (600 words; AP: see unit standards): Two readers disagree about what Chapter XVII suggests about doubts and preparations. Lay out two plausible interpretations, weigh the evidence for each (including the chapter's characterization and theme), and argue for the stronger one in a sustained, well-organized essay.

AP (650 words; AP: AP-LIT.CHR, AP-LIT.LAN): Write a literary argument in which you analyze how Jane Austen uses characterization in Chapter XVII to complicate the reader's understanding of doubts and preparations. Develop a defensible thesis, select evidence purposefully, and explain how specific choices of diction and syntax create meaning.

College Freshman (1000 words; AP: see unit standards): Situate Chapter XVII within its historical and literary context and argue how the chapter's treatment of doubts and preparations responds to that context. Engage with at least one secondary perspective (a critic, historian or the author's own statements), integrate quotations smoothly, and cite in MLA style.

College Sophomore (1250 words; AP: see unit standards): Read Chapter XVII alongside the conventions of its genre and period. Argue how the chapter's handling of doubts and preparations follows or bends those conventions, using the characterization as evidence, and test your reading against one published critic. Document two secondary sources in MLA.

College Junior (1500 words; AP: see unit standards): Apply a named critical approach (for example formalist, historicist, feminist, psychoanalytic or ecocritical) to Chapter XVII and its treatment of doubts and preparations. State your method, show what it reveals in the chapter's characterization and theme, and identify where the text resists it.

College Senior (2000 words; AP: see unit standards): Develop a research argument that reads Chapter XVII as evidence for a larger claim about doubts and preparations in Pride and Prejudice. Connect close reading of the chapter to the whole novel, engage at least four scholarly sources, and state precisely where your reading departs from theirs (Chicago style).

Graduate / PhD (2500 words; AP: see unit standards): Develop an original argument that reads Chapter XVII as a hinge in the novel's larger treatment of doubts and preparations. Position your reading within a named critical conversation (for example formalist, historicist, psychoanalytic, feminist or postcolonial approaches), account for the textual history where relevant, and articulate the stakes of your intervention for scholarship on Pride and Prejudice.

SAT-style questions

1. Interested people have perhaps misrepresented each to the other.

   As used in the text, what does the word “misrepresented” most nearly mean?

   A. helping

   B. described falsely

   C. very formal and polite

   D. be contingent upon (something that is elided)

2. “They have both,” said she, “been deceived, I dare say, in some way or other, of which we can form no idea. Interested people have perhaps misrepresented each to the other. It is, in short, impossible for us to conjecture the causes or circumstances which may have alienated them, without actual blame on either side.”

   Which choice best states a central concern of “Chapter XVII”?

   A. Doubts and preparations

   B. A costly solution

   C. A changed Darcy

   D. Music, wit and manners

SAT key: 1. B (described falsely); 2. A (Doubts and preparations)

Lesson 19: Chapter XVIII

Focus: a disastrous ball

Objective: Students will analyze how irony develops in “Chapter XVIII” by writing a claim-evidence-reasoning paragraph that cites at least 2 quotations from the section, and will score at least 80% on the section quiz.

Standards: AP: see the unit standards

Teacher only · spoilers

Wickham is absent from the ball. Elizabeth dances with Darcy and challenges him about Wickham. Her family embarrasses her: Mrs. Bennet boasts loudly of Jane's match, Mary sings badly, and Collins introduces himself to Darcy uninvited.

Background: Introductions had strict rules; speaking first to a superior was a breach.

Significance: Darcy observes the Bennets' impropriety, which later shapes his advice to Bingley.

Lesson plan and lecture script (90 minutes)

0–8 min · Bell-ringer · You do (8 min)
Students write to the bell-ringer, then pair-share.
List each embarrassment and explain how it might affect Jane's prospects. Write for five minutes. Starters: I think... because... / This connects to family and reputation because....
Prompt: List each embarrassment and explain how it might affect Jane's prospects.
Sentence starters: I think… because… · This connects to family and reputation because…
Strong response: A strong response takes a position and anticipates this: the Bennets "expose themselves," as Elizabeth puts it.

8–18 min · Vocabulary with etymology notes · I do (10 min)
Five key words in context, with verified word histories.
Today's words: prefaced — began (a speech) with; ridiculing — mocking; testifying — showing; giving evidence of; hauteur — overbearing pride evidenced by a superior manner toward inferiors; compatible — able to exist and perform in harmonious or agreeable combination. “ridiculing”: Origin of “ridicule”: French ridicule; earlier Latin rīdiculus (“laughable”). “compatible”: Origin: Anglo-Norman compatible; earlier Late Latin compator (“to suffer with”).
Words: prefaced: began (a speech) with · ridiculing: mocking · testifying: showing; giving evidence of · hauteur: overbearing pride evidenced by a superior manner toward inferiors · compatible: able to exist and perform in harmonious or agreeable combination

18–28 min · Background and context · I do (10 min)
Mini-lecture (read or adapt the script).
Introductions had strict rules; speaking first to a superior was a breach. Darcy observes the Bennets' impropriety, which later shapes his advice to Bingley. Characterization: At the Netherfield ball Elizabeth dances with Darcy and challenges him about Wickham; Mrs. Bennet loudly predicts Jane's marriage; Mary sings too long; Collins introduces himself to Darcy. Structure: A set piece of embarrassments, each witnessed by Darcy. Watch for rank and condescension: Rank is displayed and enforced, above all at Rosings by Lady Catherine; Elizabeth refuses to be cowed. In this chapter: "will be in my power to assure him that her ladyship was quite well yesterday se'night" (Chapter XVIII, paragraph 58).

28–40 min · I do: modeled close reading · I do (12 min)
Model the close reading of the anchor quotation using the written think-aloud below.
First, meaning. I read "had her family made an agreement to expose themselves as much as they could during the evening" slowly and put it in my own words: Elizabeth feels her family behaves as if they had agreed to embarrass themselves as much as possible. Next, craft. I notice the ironic idea of a planned performance, as if her family were acting on purpose. The strongest word is "expose": it means to embarrass in public, which is exactly what they do. Then, effect. Why is Elizabeth so embarrassed at the Netherfield ball? My answer: Elizabeth is so embarrassed at the Netherfield ball because her mother's boasting, Mary's singing and Collins's pomposity expose her family; their behavior gives Darcy reasons to separate Bingley from Jane.

> had her family made an agreement to expose themselves as much as they could during the evening (Chapter XVIII, paragraph 71)

Think-aloud: First, meaning. I read "had her family made an agreement to expose themselves as much as they could during the evening" slowly and put it in my own words: Elizabeth feels her family behaves as if they had agreed to embarrass themselves as much as possible. Next, craft. I notice the ironic idea of a planned performance, as if her family were acting on purpose. The strongest word is "expose": it means to embarrass in public, which is exactly what they do. Then, effect. Why is Elizabeth so embarrassed at the Netherfield ball? My answer: Elizabeth is so embarrassed at the Netherfield ball because her mother's boasting, Mary's singing and Collins's pomposity expose her family; their behavior gives Darcy reasons to separate Bingley from Jane.

40–55 min · We do: guided annotation · We do (15 min)
Guided analysis of a second quotation; expected answers given.
Ask: What words in this line stand out, and what do they suggest? Expected: Each relative embarrasses her; she sees it, so later she will understand Darcy's letter. Ask: How does this line connect to family and reputation? Expected: The Bennets "expose themselves," as Elizabeth puts it. (Elizabeth confronts Darcy.)

> I remember hearing you once say, Mr. Darcy, that you hardly ever forgave (Chapter XVIII, paragraph 31)

Ask: What words in this line stand out, and what do they suggest?
Expected answer: Each relative embarrasses her; she sees it, so later she will understand Darcy's letter.
Ask: How does this line connect to family and reputation?
Expected answer: The Bennets "expose themselves," as Elizabeth puts it. (Elizabeth confronts Darcy.)

55–70 min · You do: independent annotation · You do (15 min)
Independent annotation and a claim-evidence-reasoning paragraph (exemplar given).
Annotate the chapter for characterization, structure (three marks with a margin note each), then write one claim-evidence-reasoning paragraph: what does this chapter suggest about a disastrous ball? Then start your writing prompt at your assigned level (HS Sophomore: Analyze how Chapter XVIII develops the idea of a disastrous ball. Make a precise claim, support it with at least three pieces of textual evidence, and explain how the author's use of irony and characterization shapes that idea. Address one possible counterclaim.) Exemplar: The ball provides Darcy with the evidence he later uses against the Bennet family. When the text says "had her family made an agreement to expose themselves as much as they could during the evening" (Chapter XVIII, paragraph 71), it shows this directly. Elizabeth herself thinks it seemed "her family made an agreement to expose themselves as much as they could," which explains why Darcy fears for Bingley.
Task: Annotate the chapter for characterization, structure (three marks with a margin note each), then write one claim-evidence-reasoning paragraph: what does this chapter suggest about a disastrous ball? Then start your writing prompt at your assigned level (HS Sophomore: Analyze how Chapter XVIII develops the idea of a disastrous ball. Make a precise claim, support it with at least three pieces of textual evidence, and explain how the author's use of irony and characterization shapes that idea. Address one possible counterclaim.)
Exemplar: The ball provides Darcy with the evidence he later uses against the Bennet family. When the text says "had her family made an agreement to expose themselves as much as they could during the evening" (Chapter XVIII, paragraph 71), it shows this directly. Elizabeth herself thinks it seemed "her family made an agreement to expose themselves as much as they could," which explains why Darcy fears for Bingley.

70–80 min · Discussion · We do (10 min)
Structured discussion from the 30 tiered questions, with facilitation notes.
Anchor question: List each embarrassment and explain how it might affect Jane's prospects. Ask: what does Darcy see at this ball, and why does it matter later?
Anchor question: List each embarrassment and explain how it might affect Jane's prospects.
Facilitation: Ask: what does Darcy see at this ball, and why does it matter later?

80–87 min · Exit ticket / chapter quiz · You do (7 min)
Chapter quiz in the app and an exit ticket (answer given).
Chapter quiz in the app, then: In one sentence, what does this chapter suggest about a disastrous ball? Support it with one short quotation. Model answer: The ball provides Darcy with the evidence he later uses against the Bennet family. ("had her family made an agreement to expose themselves as much as they could during the evening", Chapter XVIII, paragraph 71). Accept any defensible claim backed by a quotation from the chapter; the answer key for the quiz is in the Quiz section.
Exit ticket: In one sentence, what does this chapter suggest about a disastrous ball? Support it with one short quotation.
Answer: Model answer: The ball provides Darcy with the evidence he later uses against the Bennet family. ("had her family made an agreement to expose themselves as much as they could during the evening", Chapter XVIII, paragraph 71). Accept any defensible claim backed by a quotation from the chapter; the answer key for the quiz is in the Quiz section.

> 87–90 min · Closure · I do (3 min)
> Summarize the lesson and preview the next reading.
> Today we saw how characterization shapes a disastrous ball. Key takeaway: the Bennets "expose themselves," as Elizabeth puts it.

Total: 90 minutes.

Teacher analysis (spoilers)

Literary elements

- Characterization: At the Netherfield ball Elizabeth dances with Darcy and challenges him about Wickham; Mrs. Bennet loudly predicts Jane's marriage; Mary sings too long; Collins introduces himself to Darcy.
- Structure: A set piece of embarrassments, each witnessed by Darcy.

Themes and how they develop

- family and reputation: the Bennets "expose themselves," as Elizabeth puts it.

Symbols and motifs

- rank and condescension: Rank is displayed and enforced, above all at Rosings by Lady Catherine; Elizabeth refuses to be cowed. In this chapter: “will be in my power to assure him that her ladyship was quite well yesterday se’night” (Chapter XVIII, paragraph 58).
- silence and reserve: What characters leave unsaid (Darcy's reserve, Jane's composure, Elizabeth's secrets) drives misunderstanding. In this chapter: “speaking a word; and she began to imagine that their silence was to last through the two dances, and at first was” (Chapter XVIII, paragraph 8).

Key quotations (checked against the reading text)

- “had her family made an agreement to expose themselves as much as they could during the evening” (Chapter XVIII, paragraph 71) Elizabeth's mortification.
- “You have delighted us long enough” (Chapter XVIII, paragraph 68) Mr. Bennet stops Mary's singing in public.
- “I remember hearing you once say, Mr. Darcy, that you hardly ever forgave” (Chapter XVIII, paragraph 31) Elizabeth confronts Darcy.

Model claim-evidence-reasoning

Claim: The ball provides Darcy with the evidence he later uses against the Bennet family.
Evidence: “had her family made an agreement to expose themselves as much as they could during the evening” (Chapter XVIII, paragraph 71)
Reasoning: Elizabeth herself thinks it seemed "her family made an agreement to expose themselves as much as they could," which explains why Darcy fears for Bingley.

Vocabulary with etymology notes

Word	Definition (in this sentence)	In context	Word history
prefaced (verb)	began (a speech) with	Her cousin prefaced his speech with a solemn bow, and though she could not hear a word of it, she felt as if hearing it all, and saw in the motion of his lips the words "apology,"
ridiculing (verb)	mocking	Darcy, however, should have such an opportunity of ridiculing her relations was bad enough, and she could not determine whether the silent contempt of the gentleman, or the insolent smiles of the ladies, were more intolerable.	"ridiculing": Origin of "ridicule": French ridicule; earlier Latin rīdiculus ("laughable"). (Liber et Libri origin note, https://en.wiktionary.org/wiki/ridicule#Etymology)
testifying (verb)	showing; giving evidence of	I cannot acquit him of that duty; nor could I think well of the man who should omit an occasion of testifying his respect towards anybody connected with the family."
hauteur (noun)	overbearing pride evidenced by a superior manner toward inferiors	A deeper shade of hauteur overspread his features, but he said not a word, and Elizabeth, though blaming herself for her own weakness, could not go on.
compatible (adjective)	able to exist and perform in harmonious or agreeable combination	Collins, "were so fortunate as to be able to sing, I should have great pleasure, I am sure, in obliging the company with an air; for I consider music as a very innocent diversion, and perfectly compatible with the profession of a clergyman.	"compatible": Origin: Anglo-Norman compatible; earlier Late Latin compator ("to suffer with"). (Liber et Libri origin note, https://en.wiktionary.org/wiki/compatible#Etymology)
eclipsed (verb)	outshone; made to seem less important	Elizabeth was the least dear to her of all her children; and though the man and the match were quite good enough for her, the worth of each was eclipsed by Mr.
upbraiding (verb)	express criticism towards	You will not thank me for detaining you from the bewitching converse of that young lady, whose bright eyes are also upbraiding me."
preferment (noun)	promotion to a better position,	And I do not think it of light importance that he should have attentive and conciliatory manners especially in the church	towards everybody, especially towards those to whom he owes his preferment.

etiquette (noun)	rules governing socially acceptable behavior	It was necessary to make this circumstance a matter of pleasure, because on such occasions it is the etiquette; but no one was less likely than Mrs.
composedly (adverb)	in a self-collected or self-possessed manner	She looked at Jane, to see how she bore it; but Jane was very composedly talking to Bingley.

Discussion questions

1. List each embarrassment and explain how it might affect Jane's prospects.
2. Where does irony appear in this chapter, and what effect does it have? Point to one passage.
3. How does this chapter connect to the book's larger concern with marriage and money?

Classroom discussion questions (30, tiered)

Wait time after every question (3 s for DOK 1, 5 s for DOK 2, 8 to 10 s for DOK 3 and 4); think-pair-share on DOK 3 and 4; answer each response with a follow-up probe; close with student-generated questions. Focus sets by rigor level: Scaffolded support: 1, 2, 3, 4, 5, 6, 11, 12, 13, 14, 21, 22; HS Freshman: 1, 2, 3, 4, 5, 12, 13, 14, 15, 22, 23, 24; HS Sophomore: 1, 2, 3, 4, 13, 14, 15, 16, 17, 23, 24, 25; HS Junior: 1, 2, 3, 14, 15, 16, 17, 18, 24, 25, 26, 27; HS Senior: 1, 2, 3, 15, 16, 17, 18, 25, 26, 27, 28, 29; AP: 1, 2, 16, 17, 18, 19, 20, 26, 27, 28, 29, 30; College Freshman: 1, 2, 17, 18, 19, 20, 21, 22, 27, 28, 29, 30; College Sophomore: 1, 2, 11, 18, 19, 20, 21, 22, 23, 28, 29, 30; College Junior: 1, 11, 12, 19, 20, 21, 22, 23, 24, 25, 29, 30; College Senior: 1, 11, 12, 13, 20, 21, 22, 23, 24, 25, 26, 30; Graduate / PhD: 1, 11, 12, 13, 21, 22, 23, 24, 25, 26, 27, 28

Literal / recall

1. Who is missing from the ball? [DOK 1 · coldCallWithSupport · wait 3 s · AP: unit standards] Look for: Wickham
2. What does Elizabeth bring up while dancing with Darcy? [DOK 1 · turnAndTalk · wait 3 s · AP: unit standards] Look for: Wickham
3. Who sings poorly? [DOK 1 · coldCallWithSupport · wait 3 s · AP: unit standards] Look for: Mary
4. What social rule does Collins break? [DOK 1 · turnAndTalk · wait 3 s · AP: unit standards] Look for: Introducing himself to Darcy uninvited
5. What does Mrs. Bennet boast about? [DOK 1 · coldCallWithSupport · wait 3 s · AP: unit standards] Look for: Jane's expected marriage
6. Retell the three most important events of "Chapter XVIII" in order, in one sentence each. [DOK 1 · turnAndTalk · wait 3 s · AP: unit standards] Look for: Wickham is absent from the ball. Elizabeth dances with Darcy and challenges him about Wickham. Her family embarrasses her: Mrs. Bennet boasts loudly of Jane's match, Mary sings badly, and Collins introduces himself to Darcy uninvited.
7. Which characters appear or are mentioned in "Chapter XVIII"? Name two and one thing each says or does. [DOK 1 · coldCallWithSupport · wait 3 s · AP: unit standards] Look for: Names and actions taken from the chapter; check against the teacher summary.
8. Where and when does "Chapter XVIII" take place? Point to the line that tells you. [DOK 1 · turnAndTalk · wait 3 s · AP: unit standards] Look for: A place/time detail quoted from the chapter.

9. Reread: “Her cousin prefaced his speech with a solemn bow, and though she could not hear a word of it, she felt as if hearing it all, and saw in the motion of his lips the words “apology,”” What does “prefaced” mean here, and what is literally happening in this line? [DOK 1 · turnAndTalk · wait 3 s · AP: unit standards] Look for: prefaced: began (a speech) with.
10. Reread: “Darcy, however, should have such an opportunity of ridiculing her relations was bad enough, and she could not determine whether the silent contempt of the gentleman, or the insolent smiles of the ladies, were more…” What does “ridiculing” mean here, and what is literally happening in this line? [DOK 1 · turnAndTalk · wait 3 s · AP: unit standards] Look for: ridiculing: mocking.

Inferential / analytical

1. What does “Chapter XVIII” suggest about a disastrous ball? State the inference and the line that supports it. [DOK 2 · thinkPairShare · wait 5 s · AP-LIT.LAN] Look for: Darcy observes the Bennets' impropriety, which later shapes his advice to Bingley.
2. Find one example of irony in this chapter. What does it reveal that a plain statement would not? [DOK 2 · followUp · wait 5 s · AP-LIT.NAR] Look for: Look for gaps between what characters expect or say and what is true.
3. How does the characterization in this chapter shape what we understand about a disastrous ball? [DOK 3 · thinkPairShare · wait 8 s · AP-LIT.CHR] Look for: Look for what characters say, do and think, and how others react to them.
   Answer guidance: A defensible line of argument: The ball provides Darcy with the evidence he later uses against the Bennet family. Useful evidence: “had her family made an agreement to expose themselves as much as they could during the evening” (Chapter XVIII, paragraph 71): Elizabeth's mortification. On characterization: At the Netherfield ball Elizabeth dances with Darcy and challenges him about Wickham; Mrs. Bennet loudly predicts Jane's marriage; Mary sings too long; Collins introduces himself to Darcy. Credit any position that is supported by quotation and reasoning; push one-sided answers to address the strongest counterpoint.
4. In the passage that begins “The effect was immediate.”, why might Austen have chosen these particular words? Pick two and explain their connotations. [DOK 2 · followUp · wait 5 s · AP-LIT.FIG] Look for: Diction analysis of two words in the anchor passage.
5. What causes the main turn in “Chapter XVIII”, and what effect is it likely to have on what follows? [DOK 2 · followUp · wait 5 s · AP-LIT.STR] Look for: Wickham is absent from the ball. Elizabeth dances with Darcy and challenges him about Wickham. Her family embarrasses her: Mrs. Bennet boasts loudly of Jane's match, Mary sings badly, and Collins introduces himself to Darcy uninvited.
6. How does “Chapter XVIII” build on “Chapter XVII”? Name one link of cause and effect. [DOK 3 · thinkPairShare · wait 8 s · AP-LIT.STR] Look for: A causal or structural link between this and the previous chapter.
   Answer guidance: A defensible line of argument: The ball provides Darcy with the evidence he later uses against the Bennet family. Useful evidence: “You have delighted us long enough” (Chapter XVIII, paragraph 68): Mr. Bennet stops Mary's singing in public. On structure: A set piece of embarrassments, each witnessed by Darcy. Credit any position that is supported by quotation and reasoning; push one-sided answers to address the strongest counterpoint.
7. What can we infer about a character's motives from what they say and do here, as opposed to what they claim? [DOK 3 · followUp · wait 8 s · AP-LIT.CHR] Look for: An inference about motive supported by a quoted line.
   Answer guidance: A defensible line of argument: The ball provides Darcy with the evidence he later uses against the Bennet family. Useful evidence: “I remember hearing you once say, Mr. Darcy, that you hardly ever forgave" (Chapter XVIII, paragraph 31): Elizabeth confronts Darcy. On characterization: At the Netherfield ball Elizabeth dances with Darcy and challenges him about Wickham; Mrs. Bennet loudly predicts Jane's marriage; Mary sings too long; Collins introduces himself to Darcy. Credit any position that is supported by quotation and reasoning; push one-sided answers to address the strongest counterpoint.

8. The bell-ringer asked: "List each embarrassment and explain how it might affect Jane's prospects." Now that we have read closely, how would you revise your first answer, and which line changed your mind? [DOK 2 · thinkPairShare · wait 5 s · AP-LIT.LAN] Look for: A revised answer anchored in the text.
9. Where does tone / mood appear, and how does it connect this chapter to the larger concern with marriage and money? [DOK 3 · followUp · wait 8 s · AP-LIT.FIG] Look for: Look for word choices that reveal the narrator's attitude or the scene's feeling.

   Answer guidance: A defensible line of argument: The ball provides Darcy with the evidence he later uses against the Bennet family. Useful evidence: "had her family made an agreement to expose themselves as much as they could during the evening" (Chapter XVIII, paragraph 71): Elizabeth's mortification. Theme link: the Bennets "expose themselves," as Elizabeth puts it. Credit any position that is supported by quotation and reasoning; push one-sided answers to address the strongest counterpoint.
10. Background: Introductions had strict rules; speaking first to a superior was a breach. How does knowing this change the way you read one moment in the chapter? [DOK 3 · thinkPairShare · wait 8 s · AP-LIT.SET] Look for: A specific moment reread in light of the context.

    Answer guidance: A defensible line of argument: The ball provides Darcy with the evidence he later uses against the Bennet family. Useful evidence: "You have delighted us long enough" (Chapter XVIII, paragraph 68): Mr. Bennet stops Mary's singing in public. Theme link: the Bennets "expose themselves," as Elizabeth puts it. Credit any position that is supported by quotation and reasoning; push one-sided answers to address the strongest counterpoint.

Evaluative / synthesis / creative

1. A critic might argue: "Darcy observes the Bennets' impropriety, which later shapes his advice to Bingley." How far do you agree? Take a stand and defend it with two lines from the chapter. [DOK 3 · fourCorners · wait 8 s · AP-LIT.LAN] Look for: A defended position with evidence and one counterpoint.

   Answer guidance: A defensible line of argument: The ball provides Darcy with the evidence he later uses against the Bennet family. Useful evidence: "I remember hearing you once say, Mr. Darcy, that you hardly ever forgave" (Chapter XVIII, paragraph 31): Elizabeth confronts Darcy. Theme link: the Bennets "expose themselves," as Elizabeth puts it. Credit any position that is supported by quotation and reasoning; push one-sided answers to address the strongest counterpoint.
2. Which character in this chapter acts most wisely, and which least? Judge them by a standard you name. [DOK 3 · thinkPairShare · wait 8 s · AP-LIT.CHR, AP-LIT.LAN] Look for: An evaluation using an explicit criterion and evidence.

   Answer guidance: A defensible line of argument: The ball provides Darcy with the evidence he later uses against the Bennet family. Useful evidence: "had her family made an agreement to expose themselves as much as they could during the evening" (Chapter XVIII, paragraph 71): Elizabeth's mortification. On characterization: At the Netherfield ball Elizabeth dances with Darcy and challenges him about Wickham; Mrs. Bennet loudly predicts Jane's marriage; Mary sings too long; Collins introduces himself to Darcy. Credit any position that is supported by quotation and reasoning; push one-sided answers to address the strongest counterpoint.

3. Rewrite one moment of “Chapter XVIII” from the point of view of a different character. What does the new angle reveal or hide about a disastrous ball? [DOK 4 · thinkPairShare · wait 8 s · AP-LIT.LAN, AP-LIT.NAR] Look for: A creative product with a rationale tied to the text.

   Answer guidance: A defensible line of argument: The ball provides Darcy with the evidence he later uses against the Bennet family. Useful evidence: “You have delighted us long enough” (Chapter XVIII, paragraph 68): Mr. Bennet stops Mary's singing in public. Theme link: the Bennets "expose themselves," as Elizabeth puts it. Credit any position that is supported by quotation and reasoning; push one-sided answers to address the strongest counterpoint.

4. Write three questions of your own about “Chapter XVIII”: one recall, one “why/how”, and one “should/what if”. Trade with a partner and answer theirs. [DOK 3 · studentGenerated · wait 8 s · AP-LIT.LAN] Look for: Student-generated questions at three levels.

   Answer guidance: A defensible line of argument: The ball provides Darcy with the evidence he later uses against the Bennet family. Useful evidence: “I remember hearing you once say, Mr. Darcy, that you hardly ever forgave” (Chapter XVIII, paragraph 31): Elizabeth confronts Darcy. Theme link: the Bennets "expose themselves," as Elizabeth puts it. Credit any position that is supported by quotation and reasoning; push one-sided answers to address the strongest counterpoint.

5. Connect this chapter to class and social mobility: is the link strong or weak so far? What would Austen need to show next to strengthen it? [DOK 4 · socraticCircle · wait 8 s · AP-LIT.LAN] Look for: A judgment of thematic development across the work.

   Answer guidance: A defensible line of argument: The ball provides Darcy with the evidence he later uses against the Bennet family. Useful evidence: “had her family made an agreement to expose themselves as much as they could during the evening” (Chapter XVIII, paragraph 71): Elizabeth's mortification. Theme link: the Bennets "expose themselves," as Elizabeth puts it. Credit any position that is supported by quotation and reasoning; push one-sided answers to address the strongest counterpoint.

6. Is the irony in this chapter effective, or does it feel heavy-handed? Evaluate it as a reader would in a review. [DOK 3 · fourCorners · wait 8 s · AP-LIT.LAN, AP-LIT.NAR] Look for: An evaluative judgment with criteria and evidence.

   Answer guidance: A defensible line of argument: The ball provides Darcy with the evidence he later uses against the Bennet family. Useful evidence: “You have delighted us long enough” (Chapter XVIII, paragraph 68): Mr. Bennet stops Mary's singing in public. Theme link: the Bennets "expose themselves," as Elizabeth puts it. Credit any position that is supported by quotation and reasoning; push one-sided answers to address the strongest counterpoint.

7. Compare how “Chapter XVIII” treats a disastrous ball with how another text, film or event you know treats a similar idea. What does Pride and Prejudice see that the other misses? [DOK 4 · socraticCircle · wait 8 s · AP-LIT.LAN] Look for: A cross-text synthesis.

   Answer guidance: A defensible line of argument: The ball provides Darcy with the evidence he later uses against the Bennet family. Useful evidence: “I remember hearing you once say, Mr. Darcy, that you hardly ever forgave” (Chapter XVIII, paragraph 31): Elizabeth confronts Darcy. Theme link: the Bennets "expose themselves," as Elizabeth puts it. Credit any position that is supported by quotation and reasoning; push one-sided answers to address the strongest counterpoint.

8. Predict what “Chapter XIX” will bring, using two clues from this chapter. After reading, evaluate your prediction. [DOK 3 · thinkPairShare · wait 8 s · AP-LIT.LAN, AP-LIT.STR] Look for: A prediction or judgment justified with textual clues.

   Answer guidance: A defensible line of argument: The ball provides Darcy with the evidence he later uses against the Bennet family. Useful evidence: “had her family made an agreement to expose themselves as much as they could during the evening” (Chapter XVIII, paragraph 71): Elizabeth's mortification. Theme link: the Bennets "expose themselves," as Elizabeth puts it. Credit any position that is supported by quotation and reasoning; push one-sided answers to address the strongest counterpoint.

9. Design a one-paragraph modern adaptation of this chapter (setting, characters, conflict). What must stay the same for it to still be about a disastrous ball? [DOK 4 · thinkPairShare · wait 8 s · AP-LIT.LAN] Look for: A creative transfer that keeps the core idea.

   Answer guidance: A defensible line of argument: The ball provides Darcy with the evidence he later uses against the Bennet family. Useful evidence: “You have delighted us long enough” (Chapter XVIII, paragraph 68): Mr. Bennet stops Mary's singing in public. Theme link: the Bennets "expose themselves," as Elizabeth puts it. Credit any position that is supported by quotation and reasoning; push one-sided answers to address the strongest counterpoint.

10. What question would you most like to ask Jane Austen about this chapter, and what answer do you think the text itself gives? [DOK 4 · studentGenerated · wait 8 s · AP-LIT.LAN] Look for: A student-generated question answered from evidence.

    Answer guidance: A defensible line of argument: The ball provides Darcy with the evidence he later uses against the Bennet family. Useful evidence: “I remember hearing you once say, Mr. Darcy, that you hardly ever forgave” (Chapter XVIII, paragraph 31): Elizabeth confronts Darcy. Theme link: the Bennets "expose themselves," as Elizabeth puts it. Credit any position that is supported by quotation and reasoning; push one-sided answers to address the strongest counterpoint.

Annotation focus

- Irony: look for gaps between what characters expect or say and what is true (anchor passage in the We do segment)
- Also notice Characterization: what characters say, do and think, and how others react to them
- Also notice Tone / mood: word choices that reveal the narrator's attitude or the scene's feeling

Chapter quiz: item bank (all eleven rigor versions)

1. [mc · recall · DOK 1] In the line “I cannot acquit him of that duty; nor could I think well of the man who should omit an occasion of testifying his respect towards anybody connected with the family.”, what does “testifying” most nearly mean?

   A. ideas an argument or judgment rests on

   B. lavish; very generous (in giving thanks or praise)

   C. attempting to win favor from influential people by flattery

   D. showing; giving evidence of Key: D (showing; giving evidence of)

2. [mc · recall · DOK 1] What does Mrs. Bennet boast about?

   A. Darcy

   B. Jane's expected marriage

   C. Her cooking

   D. Her wealth

Key: B (Jane's expected marriage)

3. [fill · recall · DOK 1] Complete the quotation from Chapter XVIII, paragraph 71: “had her family made an agreement to expose _____ as much as they could during the evening”
   Key: themselves
4. [fill · recall · DOK 1] Complete the quotation from Chapter XVIII, paragraph 68: “You have _____ us long enough”
   Key: delighted
5. [mc · recall · DOK 1] Who is missing from the ball?
   A. Collins
   B. Bingley
   C. Darcy
   D. Wickham

   Key: D (Wickham)
6. [mc · recall · DOK 1] Who sings poorly?
   A. Lydia
   B. Jane
   C. Elizabeth
   D. Mary

   Key: D (Mary)
7. [mc · recall · DOK 1] Which word completes this sentence from Chapter XVIII, paragraph 4? “Mr. Collins, awkward and solemn, apologising instead of attending, and often moving wrong without being aware of it, gave her all the shame and misery which a _____ partner for a couple of dances can give.”
   A. interrupted
   B. similarity
   C. disagreeable
   D. unsubdued

   Key: C (disagreeable)
8. [fill · recall · DOK 1] Fill in the blank with the vocabulary word that fits: “Collins, ‘were so fortunate as to be able to sing, I should have great pleasure, I am sure, in obliging the company with an air; for I consider music as a very innocent diversion, and perfectly _____ with the profession of a clergyman.” Word bank: compatible, testifying, ridiculing, prefaced
   Key: compatible
9. [mc · recall · DOK 1] In the line “Her cousin prefaced his speech with a solemn bow, and though she could not hear a word of it, she felt as if hearing it all, and saw in the motion of his lips the words ‘apology,’”, what does “prefaced” most nearly mean?
   A. easy to manage or control
   B. carry on a conversation
   C. began (a speech) with
   D. having the requisite qualities or resources to meet a task

   Key: C (began (a speech) with)

10. [mc · recall · DOK 1] Which word completes this sentence from Chapter XVIII, paragraph 15? “How near it may be to mine, I cannot _____ to say.”

    A. interrupted

    B. friendship

    C. pretend

    D. whatever

    Key: C (pretend)

11. [fill · recall · DOK 1] Complete the quotation from Chapter XVIII, paragraph 31: “I _____ hearing you once say, Mr. Darcy, that you hardly ever forgave”

    Key: remember

12. [short · inference · DOK 2] What does this passage from Chapter XVIII, paragraph 35 reveal about the character or situation? “It is particularly incumbent on those who never change their opinion, to be secure of judging properly at first.” Answer in two or three sentences with one detail.

    Sample answer: The passage (Chapter XVIII, paragraph 35) shows the situation turning on first impressions and prejudice: the Bennets "expose themselves," as Elizabeth puts it. The words “particularly” and “incumbent” are the proof, because they show how the moment looks to the people in it. They suggest more than the narrator states outright.

13. [short · inference · DOK 2] What does this passage from Chapter XVIII, paragraph 1 reveal about the character or situation? “The certainty of meeting him had not been checked by any of those recollections that might not unreasonably have alarmed her.” Answer in two or three sentences with one detail.

    Sample answer: The passage (Chapter XVIII, paragraph 1) shows the situation turning on first impressions and prejudice: the Bennets "expose themselves," as Elizabeth puts it. The words “recollections” and “unreasonably” are the proof, because they show how the moment looks to the people in it. They suggest more than the narrator states outright.

14. [mc · analysis · DOK 3] Which literary element does this describe in “Chapter XVIII”? A set piece of embarrassments, each witnessed by Darcy.

    A. Conflict

    B. Hyperbole

    C. Symbolism

    D. Structure

    Key: D (Structure)

15. [short · analysis · DOK 3] Analyze how the word choice in this passage from Chapter XVIII, paragraph 53 shapes its tone: “He does not exactly recollect the circumstances, though he has heard them from Mr. Darcy more than once, but he believes that it was left to him conditionally only.” Pick two words and explain their effect.

    Sample answer: The words “conditionally” and “circumstances” (Chapter XVIII, paragraph 53) make the tone heavy and deliberate rather than neutral. That weight points the reader to pride and self-knowledge: the Bennets "expose themselves," as Elizabeth puts it. The author chooses them so the moment feels significant instead of passing.

16. [short · synthesis · DOK 4] Synthesis: trace how family and reputation develops from Chapter IX to Chapter XVIII. Use one quotation from each.

    Sample answer: Earlier, in Chapter IX, paragraph 35, the text reads “She performed her part indeed without much graciousness, but Mrs. Bennet was satisfied” — Elizabeth's mother is "satisfied" with a visit the reader can see has gone badly: the irony is in the gap. In Chapter XVIII, “had her family made an agreement to expose themselves as much as they could during the evening" (Chapter XVIII, paragraph 71) — Elizabeth's mortification. The Bennets "expose themselves," as Elizabeth puts it.

17. [mc · recall · DOK 1] In the line "A deeper shade of hauteur overspread his features, but he said not a word, and Elizabeth, though blaming herself for her own weakness, could not go on.", what does "hauteur" most nearly mean?

    A. overbearing pride evidenced by a superior manner toward inferiors

    B. saying that one disagrees

    C. the use of brief expressions

    D. a person who makes or sells women's hats

    Key: A (overbearing pride evidenced by a superior manner toward inferiors)

18. [fill · recall · DOK 1] Complete the quotation from Chapter XVIII, paragraph 9: "He smiled, and assured her that _____ she wished him to say should be said." Word bank: whatever, neighbours, unsubdued, similarity

    Key: whatever

19. [fill · recall · DOK 1] Fill in the blank with the vocabulary word that fits: "Elizabeth was the least dear to her of all her children; and though the man and the match were quite good enough for her, the worth of each was _____ by Mr." Word bank: eclipsed, prefaced, testifying, ridiculing

    Key: eclipsed

20. [mc · recall · DOK 1] What does Elizabeth bring up while dancing with Darcy?

    A. Her father

    B. Wickham

    C. Pemberley

    D. Rosings

    Key: B (Wickham)

21. [mc · recall · DOK 1] In the line "Darcy, however, should have such an opportunity of ridiculing her relations was bad enough, and she could not determine whether the silent contempt of the gentleman, or the insolent smiles of the ladies, were more…", what does "ridiculing" most nearly mean?

    A. mocking

    B. the act of winding or twisting

    C. get or find back; recover the use of

    D. a woman of good family and manners

    Key: A (mocking)

22. [short · inference · DOK 2] What can you infer from this line? "You have delighted us long enough" (Chapter XVIII, paragraph 68) Answer in two or three sentences with one detail.

    Sample answer: Mr. Bennet stops Mary's singing in public. The evidence is "You have delighted us long enough" (Chapter XVIII, paragraph 68). This develops family and reputation: the Bennets "expose themselves," as Elizabeth puts it.

23. [short · analysis · DOK 3] Analyze how the word choice in this passage from Chapter XVIII, paragraph 47 shapes its tone: "Jane met her with a smile of such sweet complacency, a glow of such happy expression, as sufficiently marked how well she was satisfied with the occurrences of the evening." Pick two words and explain their effect.

    Sample answer: The words "sufficiently" and "complacency" (Chapter XVIII, paragraph 47) make the tone heavy and deliberate rather than neutral. That weight points the reader to class and social mobility: the Bennets "expose themselves," as Elizabeth puts it. The author chooses them so the moment feels significant instead of passing.

24. [mc · analysis · DOK 3] Which literary element does this describe in “Chapter XVIII”? At the Netherfield ball Elizabeth dances with Darcy and challenges him about Wickham; Mrs. Bennet loudly predicts Jane's marriage; Mary sings too long; Collins introduces himself to Darcy.

    A. Symbolism

    B. Characterization

    C. Imagery

    D. Theme

    Key: B (Characterization)

25. [short · synthesis · DOK 4] Connect this passage from Chapter XVIII, paragraph 65 to the story's treatment of marriage and money: “What advantage can it be to you to offend Mr. Darcy?—You will never recommend yourself to his friend by so doing.” Use one other moment from the story as well.

    Sample answer: This passage (Chapter XVIII, paragraph 65) develops marriage and money: the Bennets "expose themselves," as Elizabeth puts it. Its words “advantage” and “recommend” carry that idea into this moment. The same concern returns in “She could not help frequently glancing her eye at Mr. Darcy, though every glance convinced her of what she dreaded; for…” (Chapter XVIII, paragraph 66), so the two passages read as a pattern, not a single moment. Together they show the story treating marriage and money as central.

26. [fill · recall · DOK 1] Fill in the blank with the vocabulary word that fits: “You will not thank me for detaining you from the bewitching converse of that young lady, whose bright eyes are also _____ me.” Word bank: upbraiding, prefaced, testifying, ridiculing

    Key: upbraiding

27. [short · analysis · DOK 3] Analyze the word choice in “I remember hearing you once say, Mr. Darcy, that you hardly ever forgave” (Chapter XVIII, paragraph 31). Pick two words and explain what they suggest.

    Sample answer: Elizabeth confronts Darcy. The evidence is “I remember hearing you once say, Mr. Darcy, that you hardly ever forgave” (Chapter XVIII, paragraph 31). This develops family and reputation: the Bennets "expose themselves," as Elizabeth puts it. The words “remember” and “hearing” carry that meaning: they are the charged choices in the line, and changing either would soften the effect.

28. [short · analysis · DOK 3] Analyze how the word choice in this passage from Chapter XVIII, paragraph 5 shapes its tone: “She danced next with an officer, and had the refreshment of talking of Wickham, and of hearing that he was universally liked.” Pick two words and explain their effect.

    Sample answer: The words “refreshment” and “universally” (Chapter XVIII, paragraph 5) make the tone heavy and deliberate rather than neutral. That weight points the reader to class and social mobility: the Bennets "expose themselves," as Elizabeth puts it. The author chooses them so the moment feels significant instead of passing.

29. [short · synthesis · DOK 4] Connect this passage from Chapter XVIII, paragraph 17 to the story's treatment of women's limited choices: “He made no answer, and they were again silent till they had gone down the dance, when he asked her if she and her sisters did not very often walk to Meryton.” Use one other moment from the story as well.

    Sample answer: This passage (Chapter XVIII, paragraph 17) develops women's limited choices: the Bennets "expose themselves," as Elizabeth puts it. Its words “sisters” and “answer” carry that idea into this moment. The same concern returns in “Mr. Wickham is blessed with such happy manners as may ensure his making friends—whether he may be equally capable of…” (Chapter XVIII, paragraph 19), so the two passages read as a pattern, not a single moment. Together they show the story treating women's limited choices as central.

30. [short · analysis · DOK 3 · AP: AP-LIT.FIG] Analyze how the word choice in this passage from Chapter XVIII, paragraph 10 shapes its tone: “Perhaps by and bye I may observe that private balls are much pleasanter than public ones.” Pick two words and explain their effect.
    Sample answer: The words “pleasanter” and “observe” (Chapter XVIII, paragraph 10) make the tone heavy and deliberate rather than neutral. That weight points the reader to pride and self-knowledge: the Bennets "expose themselves," as Elizabeth puts it. The author chooses them so the moment feels significant instead of passing.
31. [short · synthesis · DOK 4 · AP: AP-LIT.LAN] Connect this passage from Chapter XVIII, paragraph 58 to the story's treatment of women's limited choices: “It will be in my power to assure him that her ladyship was quite well yesterday se’night.” Use one other moment from the story as well.
    Sample answer: This passage (Chapter XVIII, paragraph 58) develops women's limited choices: the Bennets "expose themselves," as Elizabeth puts it. Its words “yesterday” and “ladyship” carry that idea into this moment. The same concern returns in “I have no reason, I assure you,’ said he, ‘to be dissatisfied with my reception.” (Chapter XVIII, paragraph 61), so the two passages read as a pattern, not a single moment. Together they show the story treating women's limited choices as central.
32. [short · synthesis · DOK 4 · AP: AP-LIT.LAN] Connect this passage from Chapter XVIII, paragraph 24 to the story's treatment of marriage and money: “Sir William’s interruption has made me forget what we were talking of.” Use one other moment from the story as well.
    Sample answer: This passage (Chapter XVIII, paragraph 24) develops marriage and money: the Bennets "expose themselves," as Elizabeth puts it. Its words “interruption” and “talking” carry that idea into this moment. The same concern returns in “We have tried two or three subjects already without success, and what we are to talk of next I cannot imagine.” (Chapter XVIII, paragraph 25), so the two passages read as a pattern, not a single moment. Together they show the story treating marriage and money as central.
33. [mc · inference · DOK 2 · AP: AP-LIT.LAN] Which choice best states a central concern of “Chapter XVIII”?
    A. Pemberley
    B. Leaving Kent
    C. A disastrous ball
    D. Marriage as a social goal

    Key: C (A disastrous ball)
34. [short · synthesis · DOK 4 · AP: AP-LIT.FIG] Close reading: how do the diction and syntax of “had her family made an agreement to expose themselves as much as they could during the evening” (Chapter XVIII, paragraph 71) shape its meaning? Consider a second, competing reading.
    Sample answer: Elizabeth's mortification. The evidence is “had her family made an agreement to expose themselves as much as they could during the evening” (Chapter XVIII, paragraph 71). This develops family and reputation: the Bennets "expose themselves," as Elizabeth puts it. The words “themselves” and “agreement” carry that meaning: they are the charged choices in the line, and changing either would soften the effect. Elizabeth herself thinks it seemed "her family made an agreement to expose themselves as much as they could," which explains why Darcy fears for Bingley.
35. [mc · recall · DOK 1 · Dual Credit (Indiana College Core): ICC-WC-1.5] Which word completes this sentence from Chapter XVIII, paragraph 29? “No—I cannot talk of books in a ballroom; my head is always full of _____ else.”
    A. disagreeable
    B. acquaintance
    C. something

D. assembled

Key: C (something)

36. [fill · recall · DOK 1 · Dual Credit (Indiana College Core): ICC-WC-1.5] Fill in the blank with the vocabulary word that fits: “And I do not think it of light importance that he should have attentive and conciliatory manners towards everybody, especially towards those to whom he owes his _____.” Word bank: preferment, ridiculing, prefaced, testifying

    Key: preferment

37. [mc · inference · DOK 2 · Program outcome: LeL-C3-LIT-1] What does this passage most clearly show? “You have delighted us long enough” (Chapter XVIII, paragraph 68)

    A. The entail: the economic stakes.

    B. Collins's refusal of novels, written in a novel; Austen's joke at his expense.

    C. Elizabeth tells Jane that Miss Bingley sees Bingley's love for Jane and means to separate them.

    D. Mr. Bennet stops Mary's singing in public.

    Key: D (Mr. Bennet stops Mary's singing in public.)

38. [fill · recall · DOK 1 · Program outcome: LeL-GR-LIT-1] Complete the quotation from Chapter XVIII, paragraph 23: “The latter part of this address was scarcely heard by Darcy; but Sir William’s allusion to his friend seemed to strike him forcibly, and his eyes were directed with a very serious _____ towards Bingley and Jane, who were dancing together.” Word bank: assembled, disagreeable, immediately, expression

    Key: expression

Rigor version	Items (in order)	Mix
Scaffolded support	1, 2, 3, 4, 5, 6, 7, 8, 9, 10, 11, 12, 13, 14, 15, 16	recall 11, inference 2, analysis 2, synthesis 1
HS Freshman	4, 17, 18, 19, 20, 9, 21, 1, 11, 13, 22, 12, 15, 23, 24, 25	recall 9, inference 3, analysis 3, synthesis 1
HS Sophomore	2, 18, 11, 20, 26, 17, 7, 5, 12, 13, 22, 27, 28, 23, 29, 25	recall 8, inference 3, analysis 3, synthesis 2
HS Junior	6, 11, 26, 5, 10, 4, 17, 12, 22, 13, 23, 15, 14, 30, 29, 25	recall 7, inference 3, analysis 4, synthesis 2
HS Senior	2, 20, 5, 18, 10, 4, 22, 13, 12, 27, 28, 30, 14, 31, 32, 16	recall 6, inference 3, analysis 4, synthesis 3
AP	1, 7, 11, 8, 5, 12, 33, 30, 23, 27, 15, 28, 25, 34, 16, 31	recall 5, inference 2, analysis 5, synthesis 4
College Freshman	35, 36, 21, 8, 5, 12, 13, 28, 23, 24, 30, 27, 25, 16, 31, 32	recall 5, inference 2, analysis 5, synthesis 4
College Sophomore	26, 17, 8, 5, 20, 28, 15, 27, 24, 30, 34, 32, 31, 16, 29, 25	recall 5, inference 0, analysis 5, synthesis 6
College Junior	21, 17, 8, 19, 37, 30, 15, 23, 14, 27, 28, 25, 29, 16, 31, 32	recall 4, inference 1, analysis 6, synthesis 5
College Senior	7, 8, 19, 5, 20, 33, 23, 15, 30, 28, 32, 25, 29, 31, 16, 34	recall 5, inference 1, analysis 4, synthesis 6
Graduate / PhD	36, 5, 20, 6, 38, 22, 28, 14, 23, 15, 27, 29, 32, 16, 31, 25	recall 5, inference 1, analysis 5, synthesis 5

Writing prompts (eleven rigor levels)

Scaffolded support (250 words; AP: see unit standards): Supported track (work from the passage your teacher selects). In “Chapter XVIII,” how does Austen show a disastrous ball? Write a paragraph that states your claim, quotes two details from the passage, and explains how each detail supports your idea. Use the irony you noticed as one piece of evidence.

HS Freshman (350 words; AP: see unit standards): In Chapter XVIII, how does Austen develop the idea of a disastrous ball? State a clear claim, support it with two or three quotations, and explain how the irony in the chapter helps build that idea.

HS Sophomore (450 words; AP: see unit standards): Analyze how Chapter XVIII develops the idea of a disastrous ball. Make a precise claim, support it with at least three pieces of textual evidence, and explain how the author's use of irony and characterization shapes that idea. Address one possible counterclaim.

HS Junior (550 words; AP: see unit standards): Analyze how the structure of Chapter XVIII (where it begins, turns and ends) and its irony shape the reader's understanding of a disastrous ball. Identify one place where the text leaves matters uncertain and explain how that uncertainty adds to its meaning. Distinguish what is directly stated from what is really meant.

HS Senior (600 words; AP: see unit standards): Two readers disagree about what Chapter XVIII suggests about a disastrous ball. Lay out two plausible interpretations, weigh the evidence for each (including the chapter's irony and characterization), and argue for the stronger one in a sustained, well-organized essay. Distinguish what is directly stated from what is really meant.

AP (650 words; AP: AP-LIT.NAR, AP-LIT.LAN): Write a literary argument in which you analyze how Jane Austen uses irony in Chapter XVIII to complicate the reader's understanding of a disastrous ball. Develop a defensible thesis, select evidence purposefully, and explain how specific choices of diction and syntax create meaning.

College Freshman (1000 words; AP: see unit standards): Situate Chapter XVIII within its historical and literary context and argue how the chapter's treatment of a disastrous ball responds to that context. Engage with at least one secondary perspective (a critic, historian or the author's own statements), integrate quotations smoothly, and cite in MLA style.

College Sophomore (1250 words; AP: see unit standards): Read Chapter XVIII alongside the conventions of its genre and period. Argue how the chapter's handling of a disastrous ball follows or bends those conventions, using the irony as evidence, and test your reading against one published critic. Document two secondary sources in MLA.

College Junior (1500 words; AP: see unit standards): Apply a named critical approach (for example formalist, historicist, feminist, psychoanalytic or ecocritical) to Chapter XVIII and its treatment of a disastrous ball. State your method, show what it reveals in the chapter's irony and characterization, and identify where the text resists it.

College Senior (2000 words; AP: see unit standards): Develop a research argument that reads Chapter XVIII as evidence for a larger claim about a disastrous ball in Pride and Prejudice. Connect close reading of the chapter to the whole novel, engage at least four scholarly sources, and state precisely where your reading departs from theirs (Chicago style).

Graduate / PhD (2500 words; AP: see unit standards): Develop an original argument that reads Chapter XVIII as a hinge in the novel's larger treatment of a disastrous ball. Position your reading within a named critical conversation (for example formalist, historicist, psychoanalytic, feminist or postcolonial approaches), account for the textual history where relevant, and articulate the stakes of your intervention for scholarship on Pride and Prejudice.

SAT-style questions

1. I cannot acquit him of that duty; nor could I think well of the man who should omit an occasion of testifying his respect towards anybody connected with the family."

   As used in the text, what does the word "testifying" most nearly mean?

   A. in a self-collected or self-possessed manner

   B. promotion to a better position, especially in the church

   C. showing; giving evidence of

   D. rules governing socially acceptable behavior

2. The effect was immediate. A deeper shade of hauteur overspread his features, but he said not a word, and Elizabeth, though blaming herself for her own weakness, could not go on. At length Darcy spoke, and in a constrained manner said—

   Which choice best states a central concern of "Chapter XVIII"?

   A. Reflections on love

   B. A misguided warning

   C. A disastrous ball

   D. An imperious hostess

SAT key: 1. C (showing; giving evidence of); 2. C (A disastrous ball)

Lesson 20: Chapter XIX

Focus: a ridiculous proposal

Objective: Students will analyze how irony develops in “Chapter XIX” by writing a claim-evidence-reasoning paragraph that cites at least 2 quotations from the section, and will score at least 80% on the section quiz.

Standards: AP: see the unit standards

Critical voice: “She wishes neither to reform nor to annihilate; she is silent; and that is terrific indeed. One after another she creates her fools, her prigs, her worldlings, her Mr. Collins’, her Sir Walter Elliotts, her Mrs. Bennetts. She encircles them with the lash of a whip-like phrase which, as it runs round them, cuts out their silhouettes for ever.” (Virginia Woolf, novelist and critic, "Jane Austen," The Common Reader (1925), "Jane Austen"; public domain). Close reading: find the "whip-like phrase" in Chapter XIX. How does the narrator judge Collins without ever saying "he is a fool"? Objective: Analyze satire and narrative distance in Collins's proposal. Standards: AP: see the unit standards

Teacher only · spoilers

Collins proposes to Elizabeth with a speech listing reasons, including Lady Catherine's advice. She refuses; he insists that elegant ladies always refuse at first and that she may never get another offer.

Background: A woman refusing a secure match was risky; Collins's offer would have saved her home.

Significance: Elizabeth's refusal asserts the right to marry for affection and respect.

Lesson plan and lecture script (90 minutes)

0–8 min · Bell-ringer · You do (8 min)
Students write to the bell-ringer, then pair-share.
Why does Elizabeth refuse, even though marrying Collins would secure her family's home? Write for five minutes. Starters: I think... because... / This connects to marriage and money because....
Prompt: Why does Elizabeth refuse, even though marrying Collins would secure her family's home?
Sentence starters: I think… because… · This connects to marriage and money because…
Strong response: A strong response takes a position and anticipates this: he reminds her of her small fortune.

8–18 min · Vocabulary with etymology notes · I do (10 min)
Five key words in context, with verified word histories.
Today's words: dissemble — to hide one's true feelings; singled — picked out; chose; sanctioned — approved; given permission; disapprove — consider bad or wrong; purport — the intended meaning of a communication. “singled”: Origin of “single”: Old French sengle; earlier Latin singulus. “purport”: Origin: Anglo-Norman purporter; earlier Latin pro (“forth”).
Words: dissemble: to hide one's true feelings · singled: picked out; chose · sanctioned: approved; given permission · disapprove: consider bad or wrong · purport: the intended meaning of a communication

18–28 min · Background and context · I do (10 min)
Mini-lecture (read or adapt the script).
A woman refusing a secure match was risky; Collins's offer would have saved her home. Elizabeth's refusal asserts the right to marry for affection and respect. Characterization: Collins proposes to Elizabeth with a list of reasons and refuses to hear her refusal as genuine. Irony: His speech about "violence of my affection" is anything but passionate. Watch for rank and condescension: Rank is displayed and enforced, above all at Rosings by Lady Catherine; Elizabeth refuses to be cowed. In this chapter: "especially when tempered with the silence and respect which her rank will inevitably excite. Thus much for my general intention in favour" (Chapter XIX, paragraph 8).

28–40 min · I do: modeled close reading · I do (12 min)
Model the close reading of the anchor quotation using the written think-aloud below.
First, meaning. I read "before I am run away with by my feelings on this subject" slowly and put it in my own words: In the middle of proposing, Collins insists on listing his reasons for marrying before he is "run away with" by emotion. Next, craft. I notice the comic gap: he claims his feelings might overwhelm him, yet he calmly delivers a numbered argument. The strongest word is "feelings": the word promises passion, and everything around it shows there is none. Then, effect. Why does Mr. Collins say he must explain himself before his feelings carry him away? My answer: Mr. Collins says he must explain himself before his feelings carry him away, but then lists his reasons like a business case; Austen makes him ridiculous so Elizabeth's refusal looks like good sense.

> before I am run away with by my feelings on this subject (Chapter XIX, paragraph 6)

Think-aloud: First, meaning. I read "before I am run away with by my feelings on this subject" slowly and put it in my own words: In the middle of proposing, Collins insists on listing his reasons for marrying before he is "run away with" by emotion. Next, craft. I notice the comic gap: he claims his feelings might overwhelm him, yet he calmly delivers a numbered argument. The strongest word is "feelings": the word promises passion, and everything around it shows there is none. Then, effect. Why does Mr. Collins say he must explain himself before his feelings carry him away? My answer: Mr. Collins says he must explain himself before his feelings carry him away, but then lists his reasons like a business case; Austen makes him ridiculous so Elizabeth's refusal looks like good sense.

40–55 min · We do: guided annotation · We do (15 min)
Guided analysis of a second quotation; expected answers given.
Ask: What words in this line stand out, and what do they suggest? Expected: "Unhappily so small" is a threat disguised as sympathy. Elizabeth's refusal links to women's choices. Ask: How does this line connect to marriage and money? Expected: He reminds her of her small fortune. (Collins on her lack of fortune.)

> Your portion is unhappily so small (Chapter XIX, paragraph 17)

Ask: What words in this line stand out, and what do they suggest?
Expected answer: "Unhappily so small" is a threat disguised as sympathy. Elizabeth's refusal links to women's choices.
Ask: How does this line connect to marriage and money?
Expected answer: He reminds her of her small fortune. (Collins on her lack of fortune.)

55–70 min · You do: independent annotation · You do (15 min)
Independent annotation and a claim-evidence-reasoning paragraph (exemplar given).
Annotate the chapter for characterization, irony (three marks with a margin note each), then write one claim-evidence-reasoning paragraph: what does this chapter suggest about a ridiculous proposal? Then start your writing prompt at your assigned level (HS Sophomore: Analyze how Chapter XIX develops the idea of a ridiculous proposal. Make a precise claim, support it with at least three pieces of textual evidence, and explain how the author's use of irony and characterization shapes that idea. Address one possible counterclaim.) Exemplar: Collins's proposal treats marriage as a practical bargain, and Elizabeth's refusal asserts her right to choose. When the text says “Your portion is unhappily so small” (Chapter XIX, paragraph 17), it shows this directly. He reminds her that "your portion is unhappily so small" that she is unlikely to get another offer, but she insists "you could not make me happy."
Task: Annotate the chapter for characterization, irony (three marks with a margin note each), then write one claim-evidence-reasoning paragraph: what does this chapter suggest about a ridiculous proposal? Then start your writing prompt at your assigned level (HS Sophomore: Analyze how Chapter XIX develops the idea of a ridiculous proposal. Make a precise claim, support it with at least three pieces of textual evidence, and explain how the author's use of irony and characterization shapes that idea. Address one possible counterclaim.)
Exemplar: Collins's proposal treats marriage as a practical bargain, and Elizabeth's refusal asserts her right to choose. When the text says “Your portion is unhappily so small” (Chapter XIX, paragraph 17), it shows this directly. He reminds her that "your portion is unhappily so small" that she is unlikely to get another offer, but she insists "you could not make me happy."

70–80 min · Discussion · We do (10 min)
Structured discussion from the 30 tiered questions, with facilitation notes.
Anchor question: Why does Elizabeth refuse, even though marrying Collins would secure her family's home? Ask: was Elizabeth's refusal brave or reckless? Use the entail.
Anchor question: Why does Elizabeth refuse, even though marrying Collins would secure her family's home?
Facilitation: Ask: was Elizabeth's refusal brave or reckless? Use the entail.

80–87 min · Exit ticket / chapter quiz · You do (7 min)
Chapter quiz in the app and an exit ticket (answer given).
Chapter quiz in the app, then: In one sentence, what does this chapter suggest about a ridiculous proposal? Support it with one short quotation. Model answer: Collins's proposal treats marriage as a practical bargain, and Elizabeth's refusal asserts her right to choose. (“Your portion is unhappily so small”, Chapter XIX, paragraph 17). Accept any defensible claim backed by a quotation from the chapter; the answer key for the quiz is in the Quiz section.
Exit ticket: In one sentence, what does this chapter suggest about a ridiculous proposal? Support it with one short quotation.
Answer: Model answer: Collins's proposal treats marriage as a practical bargain, and Elizabeth's refusal asserts her right to choose. (“Your portion is unhappily so small”, Chapter XIX, paragraph 17). Accept any defensible claim backed by a quotation from the chapter; the answer key for the quiz is in the Quiz section.

> 87–90 min · Closure · I do (3 min)
> Summarize the lesson and preview the next reading.
> Today we saw how characterization shapes a ridiculous proposal. Key takeaway: he reminds her of her small fortune.

Total: 90 minutes.

Teacher analysis (spoilers)

Literary elements

- Characterization: Collins proposes to Elizabeth with a list of reasons and refuses to hear her refusal as genuine.
- Irony: His speech about "violence of my affection" is anything but passionate.

Themes and how they develop

- marriage and money: he reminds her of her small fortune.

Symbols and motifs

- rank and condescension: Rank is displayed and enforced, above all at Rosings by Lady Catherine; Elizabeth refuses to be cowed. In this chapter: “especially when tempered with the silence and respect which her rank will inevitably excite. Thus much for my general intention in favour” (Chapter XIX, paragraph 8).
- silence and reserve: What characters leave unsaid (Darcy's reserve, Jane's composure, Elizabeth's secrets) drives misunderstanding. In this chapter: “must be acceptable to her, especially when tempered with the silence and respect which her rank will inevitably excite. Thus much for” (Chapter XIX, paragraph 8).

Key quotations (checked against the reading text)

- “before I am run away with by my feelings on this subject” (Chapter XIX, paragraph 6) Collins's comic emotion.
- “You could not make me happy, and I am convinced that I am the last woman in the world who would make you so” (Chapter XIX, paragraph 12) Elizabeth's refusal.
- “Your portion is unhappily so small” (Chapter XIX, paragraph 17) Collins on her lack of fortune.

Model claim-evidence-reasoning

Claim: Collins's proposal treats marriage as a practical bargain, and Elizabeth's refusal asserts her right to choose.
Evidence: “Your portion is unhappily so small” (Chapter XIX, paragraph 17)
Reasoning: He reminds her that "your portion is unhappily so small" that she is unlikely to get another offer, but she insists "you could not make me happy."

Vocabulary with etymology notes

Word		In context	Word history

	Definition (in this sentence)
dissemble (verb)	to hide one's true feelings	You can hardly doubt the purport of my discourse, however your natural delicacy may lead you to dissemble; my attentions have been too marked to be mistaken.
singled (verb)	picked out; chose	Almost as soon as I entered the house, I singled you out as the companion of my future life.	"singled": Origin of "single": Old French sengle; earlier Latin singulus. (Liber et Libri origin note, https://en.wiktionary.org/wiki/single#Etymology)
sanctioned (verb)	approved; given permission	"You are uniformly charming!" cried he, with an air of awkward gallantry; "and I am persuaded that when sanctioned by the express authority of both your excellent parents, my proposals will not fail of being acceptable."
disapprove (verb)	consider bad or wrong	Collins very gravely—"but I cannot imagine that her ladyship would at all disapprove of you.
purport (noun)	the intended meaning of a communication	You can hardly doubt the purport of my discourse, however your natural delicacy may lead you to dissemble; my attentions have been too marked to be mistaken.	"purport": Origin: Anglo-Norman purporter; earlier Latin pro ("forth"). (Liber et Libri origin note, https://en.wiktionary.org/wiki/purport#Etymology)
gentlewoman (noun)	a woman of good family and manners	Choose properly, choose a gentlewoman for my sake; and for your own, let her be an active, useful sort of person, not brought up high, but able to make a small income go a good way.
interrupt (verb)	to break in on; to stop	It was absolutely necessary to interrupt him now.
embarrassed (verb)	cause to be embarrassed; cause to feel self-conscious	I desire you will stay where you are."—And upon Elizabeth's seeming really, with vexed and embarrassed looks, about to escape, she added, "Lizzy, I insist upon your staying and hearing Mr.
marrying (verb)	take in marriage	But before I am run away with by my feelings on this subject, perhaps it will be advisable for me to state	"marrying": From Old French marier, from Latin maritare "to wed," from maritus "husband." (Not from Latin

		my reasons for marrying—and moreover for coming into Hertfordshire with the design of selecting a wife, as I certainly did."	mare "sea.") (Online Etymology Dictionary (hand-checked note), https://www.etymonline.com/word/marry)

Discussion questions

1. Why does Elizabeth refuse, even though marrying Collins would secure her family's home?
2. Where does irony appear in this chapter, and what effect does it have? Point to one passage.
3. How does this chapter connect to the book's larger concern with class and social mobility?

Classroom discussion questions (30, tiered)

Wait time after every question (3 s for DOK 1, 5 s for DOK 2, 8 to 10 s for DOK 3 and 4); think-pair-share on DOK 3 and 4; answer each response with a follow-up probe; close with student-generated questions. Focus sets by rigor level: Scaffolded support: 1, 2, 3, 4, 5, 6, 11, 12, 13, 14, 21, 22; HS Freshman: 1, 2, 3, 4, 5, 12, 13, 14, 15, 22, 23, 24; HS Sophomore: 1, 2, 3, 4, 13, 14, 15, 16, 17, 23, 24, 25; HS Junior: 1, 2, 3, 14, 15, 16, 17, 18, 24, 25, 26, 27; HS Senior: 1, 2, 3, 15, 16, 17, 18, 25, 26, 27, 28, 29; AP: 1, 2, 16, 17, 18, 19, 20, 26, 27, 28, 29, 30; College Freshman: 1, 2, 17, 18, 19, 20, 21, 22, 27, 28, 29, 30; College Sophomore: 1, 2, 11, 18, 19, 20, 21, 22, 23, 28, 29, 30; College Junior: 1, 11, 12, 19, 20, 21, 22, 23, 24, 25, 29, 30; College Senior: 1, 11, 12, 13, 20, 21, 22, 23, 24, 25, 26, 30; Graduate / PhD: 1, 11, 12, 13, 21, 22, 23, 24, 25, 26, 27, 28

Literal / recall

1. How does Collins explain why he wants to marry? [DOK 1 · coldCallWithSupport · wait 3 s · AP: unit standards] Look for: He lists reasons, including Lady Catherine's advice
2. What does Collins think Elizabeth's refusal means? [DOK 1 · turnAndTalk · wait 3 s · AP: unit standards] Look for: That ladies refuse at first
3. What does Collins warn Elizabeth about her future? [DOK 1 · coldCallWithSupport · wait 3 s · AP: unit standards] Look for: She may never receive another offer
4. Whose advice does Collins cite among his reasons for marrying? [DOK 1 · turnAndTalk · wait 3 s · AP: unit standards] Look for: Lady Catherine's
5. What theme does the refusal highlight? [DOK 1 · coldCallWithSupport · wait 3 s · AP: unit standards] Look for: Marriage for respect and affection
6. Retell the three most important events of "Chapter XIX" in order, in one sentence each. [DOK 1 · turnAndTalk · wait 3 s · AP: unit standards] Look for: Collins proposes to Elizabeth with a speech listing reasons, including Lady Catherine's advice. She refuses; he insists that elegant ladies always refuse at first and that she may never get another offer.
7. Which characters appear or are mentioned in "Chapter XIX"? Name two and one thing each says or does. [DOK 1 · coldCallWithSupport · wait 3 s · AP: unit standards] Look for: Names and actions taken from the chapter; check against the teacher summary.
8. Where and when does "Chapter XIX" take place? Point to the line that tells you. [DOK 1 · turnAndTalk · wait 3 s · AP: unit standards] Look for: A place/time detail quoted from the chapter.
9. Reread: "You can hardly doubt the purport of my discourse, however your natural delicacy may lead you to dissemble; my attentions have been too marked to be mistaken." What does "dissemble" mean here, and what is literally happening in this line? [DOK 1 · turnAndTalk · wait 3 s · AP: unit standards] Look for: dissemble: to hide one's true feelings.

10. Reread: “Almost as soon as I entered the house, I singled you out as the companion of my future life.” What does “singled” mean here, and what is literally happening in this line? [DOK 1 · turnAndTalk · wait 3 s · AP: unit standards] Look for: singled: picked out; chose.

Inferential / analytical

1. What does “Chapter XIX” suggest about a ridiculous proposal? State the inference and the line that supports it. [DOK 2 · thinkPairShare · wait 5 s · AP-LIT.LAN] Look for: Elizabeth's refusal asserts the right to marry for affection and respect.
2. Find one example of irony in this chapter. What does it reveal that a plain statement would not? [DOK 2 · followUp · wait 5 s · AP-LIT.NAR] Look for: Look for gaps between what characters expect or say and what is true.
3. How does the characterization in this chapter shape what we understand about a ridiculous proposal? [DOK 3 · thinkPairShare · wait 8 s · AP-LIT.CHR] Look for: Look for what characters say, do and think, and how others react to them.
   Answer guidance: A defensible line of argument: Collins's proposal treats marriage as a practical bargain, and Elizabeth's refusal asserts her right to choose. Useful evidence: “before I am run away with by my feelings on this subject” (Chapter XIX, paragraph 6): Collins's comic emotion. On characterization: Collins proposes to Elizabeth with a list of reasons and refuses to hear her refusal as genuine. Credit any position that is supported by quotation and reasoning; push one-sided answers to address the strongest counterpoint.
4. In the passage that begins ““Were it certain that Lady Catherine would think so,””, why might Austen have chosen these particular words? Pick two and explain their connotations. [DOK 2 · followUp · wait 5 s · AP-LIT.FIG] Look for: Diction analysis of two words in the anchor passage.
5. What causes the main turn in “Chapter XIX”, and what effect is it likely to have on what follows? [DOK 2 · followUp · wait 5 s · AP-LIT.STR] Look for: Collins proposes to Elizabeth with a speech listing reasons, including Lady Catherine's advice. She refuses; he insists that elegant ladies always refuse at first and that she may never get another offer.
6. How does “Chapter XIX” build on “Chapter XVIII”? Name one link of cause and effect. [DOK 3 · thinkPairShare · wait 8 s · AP-LIT.STR] Look for: A causal or structural link between this and the previous chapter.
   Answer guidance: A defensible line of argument: Collins's proposal treats marriage as a practical bargain, and Elizabeth's refusal asserts her right to choose. Useful evidence: “You could not make me happy, and I am convinced that I am the last woman in the world who would make you so” (Chapter XIX, paragraph 12): Elizabeth's refusal. Theme link: he reminds her of her small fortune. Credit any position that is supported by quotation and reasoning; push one-sided answers to address the strongest counterpoint.
7. What can we infer about a character's motives from what they say and do here, as opposed to what they claim? [DOK 3 · followUp · wait 8 s · AP-LIT.CHR] Look for: An inference about motive supported by a quoted line.
   Answer guidance: A defensible line of argument: Collins's proposal treats marriage as a practical bargain, and Elizabeth's refusal asserts her right to choose. Useful evidence: “Your portion is unhappily so small” (Chapter XIX, paragraph 17): Collins on her lack of fortune. On characterization: Collins proposes to Elizabeth with a list of reasons and refuses to hear her refusal as genuine. Credit any position that is supported by quotation and reasoning; push one-sided answers to address the strongest counterpoint.
8. The bell-ringer asked: “Why does Elizabeth refuse, even though marrying Collins would secure her family's home?” Now that we have read closely, how would you revise your first answer, and which line changed your mind? [DOK 2 · thinkPairShare · wait 5 s · AP-LIT.LAN] Look for: A revised answer anchored in the text.

9. Where does theme appear, and how does it connect this chapter to the larger concern with class and social mobility? [DOK 3 · followUp · wait 8 s · AP-LIT.LAN] Look for: Look for statements or moments that connect to the book's big ideas.
   Answer guidance: A defensible line of argument: Collins's proposal treats marriage as a practical bargain, and Elizabeth's refusal asserts her right to choose. Useful evidence: “before I am run away with by my feelings on this subject” (Chapter XIX, paragraph 6): Collins's comic emotion. Theme link: he reminds her of her small fortune. Credit any position that is supported by quotation and reasoning; push one-sided answers to address the strongest counterpoint.
10. Background: A woman refusing a secure match was risky; Collins's offer would have saved her home. How does knowing this change the way you read one moment in the chapter? [DOK 3 · thinkPairShare · wait 8 s · AP-LIT.SET] Look for: A specific moment reread in light of the context.
    Answer guidance: A defensible line of argument: Collins's proposal treats marriage as a practical bargain, and Elizabeth's refusal asserts her right to choose. Useful evidence: “You could not make me happy, and I am convinced that I am the last woman in the world who would make you so” (Chapter XIX, paragraph 12): Elizabeth's refusal. Theme link: he reminds her of her small fortune. Credit any position that is supported by quotation and reasoning; push one-sided answers to address the strongest counterpoint.

Evaluative / synthesis / creative

1. A critic might argue: “Elizabeth's refusal asserts the right to marry for affection and respect.” How far do you agree? Take a stand and defend it with two lines from the chapter. [DOK 3 · fourCorners · wait 8 s · AP-LIT.LAN] Look for: A defended position with evidence and one counterpoint.
   Answer guidance: A defensible line of argument: Collins's proposal treats marriage as a practical bargain, and Elizabeth's refusal asserts her right to choose. Useful evidence: “Your portion is unhappily so small” (Chapter XIX, paragraph 17): Collins on her lack of fortune. Theme link: he reminds her of her small fortune. Credit any position that is supported by quotation and reasoning; push one-sided answers to address the strongest counterpoint.
2. Which character in this chapter acts most wisely, and which least? Judge them by a standard you name. [DOK 3 · thinkPairShare · wait 8 s · AP-LIT.CHR, AP-LIT.LAN] Look for: An evaluation using an explicit criterion and evidence.
   Answer guidance: A defensible line of argument: Collins's proposal treats marriage as a practical bargain, and Elizabeth's refusal asserts her right to choose. Useful evidence: “before I am run away with by my feelings on this subject” (Chapter XIX, paragraph 6): Collins's comic emotion. On characterization: Collins proposes to Elizabeth with a list of reasons and refuses to hear her refusal as genuine. Credit any position that is supported by quotation and reasoning; push one-sided answers to address the strongest counterpoint.
3. Rewrite one moment of “Chapter XIX” from the point of view of a different character. What does the new angle reveal or hide about a ridiculous proposal? [DOK 4 · thinkPairShare · wait 8 s · AP-LIT.LAN, AP-LIT.NAR] Look for: A creative product with a rationale tied to the text.
   Answer guidance: A defensible line of argument: Collins's proposal treats marriage as a practical bargain, and Elizabeth's refusal asserts her right to choose. Useful evidence: “You could not make me happy, and I am convinced that I am the last woman in the world who would make you so” (Chapter XIX, paragraph 12): Elizabeth's refusal. Theme link: he reminds her of her small fortune. Credit any position that is supported by quotation and reasoning; push one-sided answers to address the strongest counterpoint.

4. Write three questions of your own about “Chapter XIX”: one recall, one “why/how”, and one “should/what if”. Trade with a partner and answer theirs. [DOK 3 · studentGenerated · wait 8 s · AP-LIT.LAN] Look for: Student-generated questions at three levels.

   Answer guidance: A defensible line of argument: Collins's proposal treats marriage as a practical bargain, and Elizabeth's refusal asserts her right to choose. Useful evidence: “Your portion is unhappily so small” (Chapter XIX, paragraph 17): Collins on her lack of fortune. Theme link: he reminds her of her small fortune. Credit any position that is supported by quotation and reasoning; push one-sided answers to address the strongest counterpoint.

5. Connect this chapter to women's limited choices: is the link strong or weak so far? What would Austen need to show next to strengthen it? [DOK 4 · socraticCircle · wait 8 s · AP-LIT.LAN] Look for: A judgment of thematic development across the work.

   Answer guidance: A defensible line of argument: Collins's proposal treats marriage as a practical bargain, and Elizabeth's refusal asserts her right to choose. Useful evidence: “before I am run away with by my feelings on this subject” (Chapter XIX, paragraph 6): Collins's comic emotion. Theme link: he reminds her of her small fortune. Credit any position that is supported by quotation and reasoning; push one-sided answers to address the strongest counterpoint.

6. Is the irony in this chapter effective, or does it feel heavy-handed? Evaluate it as a reader would in a review. [DOK 3 · fourCorners · wait 8 s · AP-LIT.LAN, AP-LIT.NAR] Look for: An evaluative judgment with criteria and evidence.

   Answer guidance: A defensible line of argument: Collins's proposal treats marriage as a practical bargain, and Elizabeth's refusal asserts her right to choose. Useful evidence: “You could not make me happy, and I am convinced that I am the last woman in the world who would make you so” (Chapter XIX, paragraph 12): Elizabeth's refusal. On irony: His speech about "violence of my affection" is anything but passionate. Credit any position that is supported by quotation and reasoning; push one-sided answers to address the strongest counterpoint.

7. Compare how “Chapter XIX” treats a ridiculous proposal with how another text, film or event you know treats a similar idea. What does Pride and Prejudice see that the other misses? [DOK 4 · socraticCircle · wait 8 s · AP-LIT.LAN] Look for: A cross-text synthesis.

   Answer guidance: A defensible line of argument: Collins's proposal treats marriage as a practical bargain, and Elizabeth's refusal asserts her right to choose. Useful evidence: “Your portion is unhappily so small” (Chapter XIX, paragraph 17): Collins on her lack of fortune. Theme link: he reminds her of her small fortune. Credit any position that is supported by quotation and reasoning; push one-sided answers to address the strongest counterpoint.

8. Predict what “Chapter XX” will bring, using two clues from this chapter. After reading, evaluate your prediction. [DOK 3 · thinkPairShare · wait 8 s · AP-LIT.LAN, AP-LIT.STR] Look for: A prediction or judgment justified with textual clues.

   Answer guidance: A defensible line of argument: Collins's proposal treats marriage as a practical bargain, and Elizabeth's refusal asserts her right to choose. Useful evidence: “before I am run away with by my feelings on this subject” (Chapter XIX, paragraph 6): Collins's comic emotion. Theme link: he reminds her of her small fortune. Credit any position that is supported by quotation and reasoning; push one-sided answers to address the strongest counterpoint.

9. Design a one-paragraph modern adaptation of this chapter (setting, characters, conflict). What must stay the same for it to still be about a ridiculous proposal? [DOK 4 · thinkPairShare · wait 8 s · AP-LIT.LAN] Look for: A creative transfer that keeps the core idea.

Answer guidance: A defensible line of argument: Collins's proposal treats marriage as a practical bargain, and Elizabeth's refusal asserts her right to choose. Useful evidence: “You could not make me happy, and I am convinced that I am the last woman in the world who would make you so” (Chapter XIX, paragraph 12): Elizabeth's refusal. Theme link: he reminds her of her small fortune. Credit any position that is supported by quotation and reasoning; push one-sided answers to address the strongest counterpoint.

10. What question would you most like to ask Jane Austen about this chapter, and what answer do you think the text itself gives? [DOK 4 · studentGenerated · wait 8 s · AP-LIT.LAN] Look for: A student-generated question answered from evidence.

    Answer guidance: A defensible line of argument: Collins's proposal treats marriage as a practical bargain, and Elizabeth's refusal asserts her right to choose. Useful evidence: “Your portion is unhappily so small” (Chapter XIX, paragraph 17): Collins on her lack of fortune. Theme link: he reminds her of her small fortune. Credit any position that is supported by quotation and reasoning; push one-sided answers to address the strongest counterpoint.

Annotation focus

- Irony: look for gaps between what characters expect or say and what is true (anchor passage in the We do segment)
- Also notice Characterization: what characters say, do and think, and how others react to them
- Also notice Theme: statements or moments that connect to the book's big ideas

Chapter quiz: item bank (all eleven rigor versions)

1. [mc · recall · DOK 1] In the line “You are uniformly charming!’ cried he, with an air of awkward gallantry; ‘and I am persuaded that when sanctioned by the express authority of both your excellent parents, my proposals will not fail of being acceptable.”, what does “sanctioned” most nearly mean?

   A. approved; given permission
   B. reveal in private; tell confidentially
   C. showing; giving evidence of
   D. frank; careless about hiding feelings

   Key: A (approved; given permission)

2. [mc · recall · DOK 1] What theme does the refusal highlight?

   A. Marriage for respect and affection
   B. Wealth above all
   C. Obedience
   D. Religion

   Key: A (Marriage for respect and affection)

3. [mc · recall · DOK 1] How does Collins explain why he wants to marry?

   A. He is lonely
   B. He needs money
   C. He says he loves her passionately
   D. He lists reasons, including Lady Catherine's advice

   Key: D (He lists reasons, including Lady Catherine's advice)

4. [mc · recall · DOK 1] What does Collins warn Elizabeth about her future?

   A. She must leave Longbourn

   B. She may never receive another offer

   C. She will have many suitors

   D. She should wait for Darcy

   Key: B (She may never receive another offer)

5. [mc · recall · DOK 1] In the line "Collins very gravely—'but I cannot imagine that her ladyship would at all disapprove of you.", what does "disapprove" most nearly mean?

   A. free from deception or illusion

   B. the person who did most of the talking

   C. consider bad or wrong

   D. pick out, select, or choose from a number of alternatives

   Key: C (consider bad or wrong)

6. [fill · recall · DOK 1] Fill in the blank with the vocabulary word that fits: "I desire you will stay where you are.'—And upon Elizabeth's seeming really, with vexed and _____ looks, about to escape, she added, 'Lizzy, I insist upon your staying and hearing Mr." Word bank: embarrassed, singled, dissemble, sanctioned

   Key: embarrassed

7. [mc · recall · DOK 1] Whose advice does Collins cite among his reasons for marrying?

   A. Mr. Bennet's

   B. Lady Catherine's

   C. Charlotte's

   D. Mr. Darcy's

   Key: B (Lady Catherine's)

8. [fill · recall · DOK 1] Complete the quotation from Chapter XIX, paragraph 17: "Your portion is _____ so small"

   Key: unhappily

9. [mc · recall · DOK 1] What does Collins think Elizabeth's refusal means?

   A. That she loves another

   B. That ladies refuse at first

   C. That she is ill

   D. That she means it

   Key: B (That ladies refuse at first)

10. [fill · recall · DOK 1] Fill in the blank with the vocabulary word that fits: "Choose properly, choose a _____ for my sake; and for your own, let her be an active, useful sort of person, not brought up high, but able to make a small income go a good way." Word bank: singled, dissemble, gentlewoman, sanctioned

    Key: gentlewoman

11. [fill · recall · DOK 1] Fill in the blank with the vocabulary word that fits: "It was absolutely necessary to _____ him now." Word bank: sanctioned, singled, interrupt, dissemble

    Key: interrupt

12. [short · inference · DOK 2] What can you infer from this line? “before I am run away with by my feelings on this subject” (Chapter XIX, paragraph 6) Answer in two or three sentences with one detail.
    Sample answer: Collins's comic emotion. The evidence is “before I am run away with by my feelings on this subject” (Chapter XIX, paragraph 6). This develops marriage and money: he reminds her of her small fortune.
13. [mc · inference · DOK 2] Which choice best states a central concern of “Chapter XIX”?
    A. A ridiculous proposal
    B. Keeping secrets
    C. A persuasive tale
    D. Family uproar

    Key: A (A ridiculous proposal)
14. [short · analysis · DOK 3] Analyze the word choice in “Your portion is unhappily so small” (Chapter XIX, paragraph 17). Pick two words and explain what they suggest.
    Sample answer: Collins on her lack of fortune. The evidence is “Your portion is unhappily so small” (Chapter XIX, paragraph 17). This develops marriage and money: he reminds her of her small fortune. The words “unhappily” and “portion” carry that meaning: they are the charged choices in the line, and changing either would soften the effect.
15. [mc · analysis · DOK 3] Which literary element does this describe in “Chapter XIX”? His speech about ‘violence of my affection’ is anything but passionate.
    A. Hyperbole
    B. Diction / vocabulary
    C. Plot
    D. Irony

    Key: D (Irony)
16. [short · synthesis · DOK 4] Synthesis: trace how marriage and money develops from Chapter XIV to Chapter XIX. Use one quotation from each.
    Sample answer: Earlier, in Chapter XIV, paragraph 10, the text reads “whether these pleasing attentions proceed from the impulse of the moment, or are the result of previous study” — Mr. Bennet's sly question. In Chapter XIX, “before I am run away with by my feelings on this subject” (Chapter XIX, paragraph 6) — Collins's comic emotion. He reminds her of her small fortune.
17. [fill · recall · DOK 1] Complete the quotation from Chapter XIX, paragraph 12: “You could not make me happy, and I am _____ that I am the last woman in the world who would make you so”
    Key: convinced
18. [fill · recall · DOK 1] Complete the quotation from Chapter XIX, paragraph 6: “before I am run away with by my _____ on this subject”
    Key: feelings
19. [mc · recall · DOK 1] Which word completes this sentence from Chapter XIX, paragraph 14? “In making me the offer, you must have satisfied the delicacy of your feelings with regard to my family, and may take _____ of Longbourn estate whenever it falls, without any self-reproach.”
    A. possession
    B. discouraged
    C. ungenerous
    D. qualifications

Key: A (possession)

20. [mc · recall · DOK 1] In the line “Almost as soon as I entered the house, I singled you out as the companion of my future life.”, what does “singled” most nearly mean?

    A. soft, round, sweet fruits with fuzzy skin

    B. a small portable timepiece

    C. picked out; chose

    D. finding out for certain

    Key: C (picked out; chose)

21. [short · inference · DOK 2] What does this passage from Chapter XIX, paragraph 15 reveal about the character or situation? “When I do myself the honour of speaking to you next on this subject I shall hope to receive a more favourable answer than you have now given me” Answer in two or three sentences with one detail.

    Sample answer: The passage (Chapter XIX, paragraph 15) shows the situation turning on first impressions and prejudice: he reminds her of her small fortune. The words “favourable” and “speaking” are the proof, because they show how the moment looks to the people in it. They suggest more than the narrator states outright.

22. [short · inference · DOK 2] What does this passage from Chapter XIX, paragraph 1 reveal about the character or situation? “On finding Mrs. Bennet, Elizabeth, and one of the younger girls together, soon after breakfast, he addressed the mother in these words” Answer in two or three sentences with one detail.

    Sample answer: The passage (Chapter XIX, paragraph 1) shows the situation turning on first impressions and prejudice: he reminds her of her small fortune. The words “breakfast” and “addressed” are the proof, because they show how the moment looks to the people in it. They suggest more than the narrator states outright.

23. [short · analysis · DOK 3] Claim: Collins's proposal treats marriage as a practical bargain, and Elizabeth's refusal asserts her right to choose. Explain how this evidence supports the claim: “Your portion is unhappily so small” (Chapter XIX, paragraph 17).

    Sample answer: He reminds her that "your portion is unhappily so small" that she is unlikely to get another offer, but she insists "you could not make me happy.". The evidence is “Your portion is unhappily so small” (Chapter XIX, paragraph 17) — Collins on her lack of fortune. This develops marriage and money: he reminds her of her small fortune.

24. [mc · analysis · DOK 3] Which literary element does this describe in “Chapter XIX”? Collins proposes to Elizabeth with a list of reasons and refuses to hear her refusal as genuine.

    A. Characterization

    B. Hyperbole

    C. Metaphor

    D. Simile

    Key: A (Characterization)

25. [short · analysis · DOK 3] Analyze how the word choice in this passage from Chapter XIX, paragraph 17 shapes its tone: “My reasons for believing it are briefly these:—It does not appear to me that my hand is unworthy your acceptance, or that the establishment I can offer would be any other than highly desirable.” Pick two words and explain their effect.

    Sample answer: The words “establishment” and “acceptance” (Chapter XIX, paragraph 17) make the tone heavy and deliberate rather than neutral. That weight points the reader to class and social mobility: he reminds her of her small fortune. The author chooses them so the moment feels significant instead of passing.

26. [short · synthesis · DOK 4] Connect this passage from Chapter XIX, paragraph 10 to the story's treatment of women's limited choices: “You forget that I have made no answer.” Use one other moment from the story as well.

Sample answer: This passage (Chapter XIX, paragraph 10) develops women's limited choices: he reminds her of her small fortune. Its words “answer” and “forget” carry that idea into this moment. The same concern returns in “I am not now to learn,’ replied Mr. Collins, with a formal wave of the hand, ‘that it is usual with young ladies to…” (Chapter XIX, paragraph 11), so the two passages read as a pattern, not a single moment. Together they show the story treating women's limited choices as central.

27. [mc · recall · DOK 1] Which word completes this sentence from Chapter XIX, paragraph 10? “Let me do it _____ farther loss of time.”

    A. opened

    B. walked

    C. ungenerous

    D. without

    Key: D (without)

28. [fill · recall · DOK 1] Complete the quotation from Chapter XIX, paragraph 8: “Thus much for my general intention in favour of matrimony; it remains to be told why my views were directed to Longbourn instead of my own _____, where I assure you there are many amiable young women.” Word bank: happiness, walked, neighbourhood, affection

    Key: neighbourhood

29. [mc · recall · DOK 1] Which word completes this sentence from Chapter XIX, paragraph 6? “You would have been less amiable in my eyes had there not been this little _____; but allow me to assure you that I have your respected mother’s permission for this address.”

    A. walked

    B. ungenerous

    C. opened

    D. unwillingness

    Key: D (unwillingness)

30. [short · synthesis · DOK 4] Connect this passage from Chapter XIX, paragraph 12 to the story's treatment of marriage and money: “Upon my word, Sir,’ cried Elizabeth, ‘your hope is rather an extraordinary one after my declaration.” Use one other moment from the story as well.

    Sample answer: This passage (Chapter XIX, paragraph 12) develops marriage and money: he reminds her of her small fortune. Its words “extraordinary” and “declaration” carry that idea into this moment. The same concern returns in “I wish you very happy and very rich, and by refusing your hand, do all in my power to prevent your being otherwise.” (Chapter XIX, paragraph 14), so the two passages read as a pattern, not a single moment. Together they show the story treating marriage and money as central.

31. [fill · recall · DOK 1 · AP: AP-LIT.FIG] Complete the quotation from Chapter XIX, paragraph 12: “I do assure you that I am not one of those young ladies (if such young ladies there are) who are so daring as to risk their _____ on the chance of being asked a second time.” Word bank: compliment, happiness, ungenerous, circumstances

    Key: happiness

32. [fill · recall · DOK 1 · AP: AP-LIT.FIG] Fill in the blank with the vocabulary word that fits: “You can hardly doubt the _____ of my discourse, however your natural delicacy may lead you to dissemble; my attentions have been too marked to be mistaken." Word bank: purport, singled, dissemble, sanctioned

Key: purport

33. [short · analysis · DOK 3 · AP: AP-LIT.FIG] Analyze how the word choice in this passage from Chapter XIX, paragraph 8 shapes its tone: "To fortune I am perfectly indifferent, and shall make no demand of that nature on your father, since I am well aware that it could not be complied with" Pick two words and explain their effect.

    Sample answer: The words "indifferent" and "perfectly" (Chapter XIX, paragraph 8) make the tone heavy and deliberate rather than neutral. That weight points the reader to pride and self-knowledge: he reminds her of her small fortune. The author chooses them so the moment feels significant instead of passing.

34. [short · synthesis · DOK 4 · AP: AP-LIT.FIG] Close reading: how do the diction and syntax of "before I am run away with by my feelings on this subject" (Chapter XIX, paragraph 6) shape its meaning? Consider a second, competing reading.

    Sample answer: Collins's comic emotion. The evidence is "before I am run away with by my feelings on this subject" (Chapter XIX, paragraph 6). This develops marriage and money: he reminds her of her small fortune. The words "feelings" and "subject" carry that meaning: they are the charged choices in the line, and changing either would soften the effect. He reminds her that "your portion is unhappily so small" that she is unlikely to get another offer, but she insists "you could not make me happy.".

35. [mc · analysis · DOK 3 · AP: AP-LIT.LAN] In this chapter, which theme does the following most directly develop? He reminds her of her small fortune.

    A. Marriage and money

    B. First impressions and prejudice

    C. Class and social mobility

    D. Pride and self-knowledge

    Key: A (Marriage and money)

36. [short · analysis · DOK 3 · AP: AP-LIT.FIG] Analyze how the word choice in this passage from Chapter XIX, paragraph 7 shapes its tone: "The idea of Mr. Collins, with all his solemn composure, being run away with by his feelings, made Elizabeth so near laughing that she could not use the short pause he allowed in any attempt to stop him farther, and he continued:" Pick two words and explain their effect.

    Sample answer: The words "composure" and "continued" (Chapter XIX, paragraph 7) make the tone heavy and deliberate rather than neutral. That weight points the reader to class and social mobility: he reminds her of her small fortune. The author chooses them so the moment feels significant instead of passing.

37. [short · synthesis · DOK 4 · AP: AP-LIT.FIG] Close reading: how do the diction and syntax of "You could not make me happy, and I am convinced that I am the last woman in the world who would make you so" (Chapter XIX, paragraph 12) shape its meaning? Consider a second, competing reading.

    Sample answer: Elizabeth's refusal. The evidence is "You could not make me happy, and I am convinced that I am the last woman in the world who would make you so" (Chapter XIX, paragraph 12). This develops marriage and money: he reminds her of her small fortune. The words "convinced" and "happy" carry that meaning: they are the charged choices in the line, and changing either would soften the effect. He reminds her that "your portion is unhappily so small" that she is unlikely to get another offer, but she insists "you could not make me happy.".

38. [short · inference · DOK 2 · Program outcome: LeL-C3-LIT-1] What can you infer from this line? "You could not make me happy, and I am convinced that I am the last woman in the world who would make you so" (Chapter XIX, paragraph 12) Answer in two or three sentences with one detail.

Sample answer: Elizabeth's refusal. The evidence is “You could not make me happy, and I am convinced that I am the last woman in the world who would make you so” (Chapter XIX, paragraph 12).

39. [mc · inference · DOK 2 · Program outcome: LeL-C4-LIT-1] What does this passage most clearly show? “Your portion is unhappily so small” (Chapter XIX, paragraph 17)

    A. Comic speed: marriage as a choice among interchangeable daughters.

    B. Elizabeth's new, critical view of her father.

    C. Collins on her lack of fortune.

    D. The narrator steps in to defend a love based on esteem rather than "first sight."

    Key: C (Collins on her lack of fortune.)

Rigor version	Items (in order)	Mix
Scaffolded support	1, 2, 3, 4, 5, 6, 7, 8, 9, 10, 11, 12, 13, 14, 15, 16	recall 11, inference 2, analysis 2, synthesis 1
HS Freshman	17, 1, 5, 18, 19, 4, 20, 8, 3, 21, 13, 22, 23, 24, 25, 26	recall 9, inference 3, analysis 3, synthesis 1
HS Sophomore	6, 27, 7, 28, 29, 4, 1, 12, 21, 22, 13, 24, 25, 14, 30, 16	recall 7, inference 4, analysis 3, synthesis 2
HS Junior	6, 31, 1, 20, 32, 10, 28, 21, 13, 22, 23, 25, 24, 33, 16, 34	recall 7, inference 3, analysis 4, synthesis 2
HS Senior	28, 7, 31, 10, 32, 9, 21, 13, 22, 14, 25, 24, 33, 30, 26, 16	recall 6, inference 3, analysis 4, synthesis 3
AP	10, 11, 7, 13, 21, 22, 35, 36, 25, 14, 24, 16, 30, 37, 34, 26	recall 3, inference 3, analysis 5, synthesis 5
College Freshman	32, 31, 19, 21, 13, 22, 12, 25, 15, 23, 33, 24, 30, 26, 16, 37	recall 3, inference 4, analysis 5, synthesis 4
College Sophomore	6, 10, 3, 13, 21, 35, 15, 33, 25, 36, 14, 34, 16, 37, 30, 26	recall 3, inference 2, analysis 6, synthesis 5
College Junior	32, 10, 13, 38, 22, 12, 25, 33, 24, 36, 15, 23, 35, 26, 30, 16	recall 2, inference 4, analysis 7, synthesis 3
College Senior	32, 10, 21, 12, 13, 39, 36, 15, 25, 33, 24, 35, 37, 26, 16, 30	recall 2, inference 4, analysis 6, synthesis 4
Graduate / PhD	32, 10, 13, 39, 21, 22, 38, 33, 24, 36, 15, 25, 35, 30, 26, 16	recall 2, inference 5, analysis 6, synthesis 3

Writing prompts (eleven rigor levels)

Scaffolded support (250 words; AP: see unit standards): Supported track (work from the passage your teacher selects). In “Chapter XIX,” how does Austen show a ridiculous proposal? Write a paragraph that states your claim, quotes two details from the passage, and explains how each detail supports your idea. Use the irony you noticed as one piece of evidence.

HS Freshman (350 words; AP: see unit standards): In Chapter XIX, how does Austen develop the idea of a ridiculous proposal? State a clear claim, support it with two or three quotations, and explain how the irony in the chapter helps build that idea.

HS Sophomore (450 words; AP: see unit standards): Analyze how Chapter XIX develops the idea of a ridiculous proposal. Make a precise claim, support it with at least three pieces of textual evidence, and explain how the author's use of irony and characterization shapes that idea. Address one possible counterclaim.

HS Junior (550 words; AP: see unit standards): Analyze how the structure of Chapter XIX (where it begins, turns and ends) and its irony shape the reader's understanding of a ridiculous proposal. Identify one place where the text leaves matters uncertain and explain how that uncertainty adds to its meaning. Distinguish what is directly stated from what is really meant.

HS Senior (600 words; AP: see unit standards): Two readers disagree about what Chapter XIX suggests about a ridiculous proposal. Lay out two plausible interpretations, weigh the evidence for each (including the chapter's irony and characterization), and argue for the stronger one in a sustained, well-organized essay. Distinguish what is directly stated from what is really meant.

AP (650 words; AP: AP-LIT.NAR, AP-LIT.LAN): Write a literary argument in which you analyze how Jane Austen uses irony in Chapter XIX to complicate the reader's understanding of a ridiculous proposal. Develop a defensible thesis, select evidence purposefully, and explain how specific choices of diction and syntax create meaning.

College Freshman (1000 words; AP: see unit standards): Situate Chapter XIX within its historical and literary context and argue how the chapter's treatment of a ridiculous proposal responds to that context. Engage with at least one secondary perspective (a critic, historian or the author's own statements), integrate quotations smoothly, and cite in MLA style.

College Sophomore (1250 words; AP: see unit standards): Read Chapter XIX alongside the conventions of its genre and period. Argue how the chapter's handling of a ridiculous proposal follows or bends those conventions, using the irony as evidence, and test your reading against one published critic. Document two secondary sources in MLA.

College Junior (1500 words; AP: see unit standards): Apply a named critical approach (for example formalist, historicist, feminist, psychoanalytic or ecocritical) to Chapter XIX and its treatment of a ridiculous proposal. State your method, show what it reveals in the chapter's irony and characterization, and identify where the text resists it.

College Senior (2000 words; AP: see unit standards): Develop a research argument that reads Chapter XIX as evidence for a larger claim about a ridiculous proposal in Pride and Prejudice. Connect close reading of the chapter to the whole novel, engage at least four scholarly sources, and state precisely where your reading departs from theirs (Chicago style).

Graduate / PhD (2500 words; AP: see unit standards): Develop an original argument that reads Chapter XIX as a hinge in the novel's larger treatment of a ridiculous proposal. Position your reading within a named critical conversation (for example formalist, historicist, psychoanalytic, feminist or postcolonial approaches), account for the textual history where relevant, and articulate the stakes of your intervention for scholarship on Pride and Prejudice.

SAT-style questions

1. "You are uniformly charming!" cried he, with an air of awkward gallantry; "and I am persuaded that when sanctioned by the express authority of both your excellent parents, my proposals will not fail of being acceptable."

   As used in the text, what does the word "sanctioned" most nearly mean?

   A. to break in on; to stop

   B. cause to be embarrassed; cause to feel self-conscious

   C. take in marriage

   D. approved; given permission

2. "Were it certain that Lady Catherine would think so," said Mr. Collins very gravely—"but I cannot imagine that her ladyship would at all disapprove of you. And you may be certain that when I have the honour of seeing her again I shall speak in the highest terms of your modesty, economy, and other amiable qualifications."

   Which choice best states a central concern of "Chapter XIX"?

   A. The great confrontation

   B. A ridiculous proposal

   C. Music, wit and manners

   D. Neighbors and gossip

SAT key: 1. D (approved; given permission); 2. B (A ridiculous proposal)

Lesson 21: Chapter XX

Focus: parental conflict over the refusal

Objective: Students will analyze how characterization develops in “Chapter XX” by writing a claim-evidence-reasoning paragraph that cites at least 2 quotations from the section, and will score at least 80% on the section quiz.

Standards: AP: see the unit standards

Teacher only · spoilers

Mrs. Bennet insists Elizabeth accept Collins and appeals to Mr. Bennet, who declares: 'Your mother will never see you again if you do not marry Mr. Collins, and I will never see you again if you do.' Collins, wounded in pride, withdraws his offer; Charlotte arrives and witnesses the commotion.

Background: Fathers held legal authority over unmarried daughters, which makes Mr. Bennet's support decisive.

Significance: Mr. Bennet's witty ultimatum is a rare moment of real parental backing, delivered as a joke.

Lesson plan and lecture script (90 minutes)

0–8 min · Bell-ringer · You do (8 min)
Students write to the bell-ringer, then pair-share.
Is Mr. Bennet's support of Elizabeth an act of love, of wit, or both? Write for five minutes. Starters: I think... because... / This connects to women's choices because....
Prompt: Is Mr. Bennet's support of Elizabeth an act of love, of wit, or both?
Sentence starters: I think… because… · This connects to women's choices because…
Strong response: A strong response takes a position and anticipates this: parental power over marriage.

8–18 min · Vocabulary with etymology notes · I do (10 min)
Five key words in context, with verified word histories.
Today's words: disrespect — lack of respect; persists — continues firmly; unconcern — lack of worry or interest; requesting — express the need or desire for; ask for; interpose — be or come between. “unconcern”: Origin: an English formation from un- + concern. “interpose”: Origin: Middle French interposer; earlier Latin interpōnō.
Words: disrespect: lack of respect · persists: continues firmly · unconcern: lack of worry or interest · requesting: express the need or desire for; ask for · interpose: be or come between

18–28 min · Background and context · I do (10 min)
Mini-lecture (read or adapt the script).
Fathers held legal authority over unmarried daughters, which makes Mr. Bennet's support decisive. Mr. Bennet's witty ultimatum is a rare moment of real parental backing, delivered as a joke. Characterization: Mrs. Bennet insists Elizabeth accept; Mr. Bennet backs Elizabeth with a joke. Irony: The father's support comes as a witty paradox. Watch for silence and reserve: What characters leave unsaid (Darcy's reserve, Jane's composure, Elizabeth's secrets) drives misunderstanding. In this chapter: "Mr. Collins was not left long to the silent contemplation of his successful love; for Mrs. Bennet, having dawdled about" (Chapter XX, paragraph 1).

28–40 min · I do: modeled close reading · I do (12 min)
Model the close reading of the anchor quotation using the written think-aloud below.
First, meaning. I read "An unhappy alternative is before you, Elizabeth" slowly and put it in my own words: Mr. Bennet tells Elizabeth her mother will never see her again if she refuses Collins, and he will never see her again if she accepts. Next, craft. I notice the perfectly balanced sentence, two "never see you again" clauses set against each other, so the punch line arrives at the very end. The strongest word is "alternative": it sounds like a solemn choice, then turns out to be a joke. Then, effect. How does Mr. Bennet turn his wife's threat into a joke that protects Elizabeth? My answer: By making the "threat" absurd, Mr. Bennet sides with Elizabeth against a loveless marriage; for once his wit protects his daughter instead of only mocking his wife.

> An unhappy alternative is before you, Elizabeth (Chapter XX, paragraph 18)

Think-aloud: First, meaning. I read "An unhappy alternative is before you, Elizabeth" slowly and put it in my own words: Mr. Bennet tells Elizabeth her mother will never see her again if she refuses Collins, and he will never see her again if she accepts. Next, craft. I notice the perfectly balanced sentence, two "never see you again" clauses set against each other, so the punch line arrives at the very end. The strongest word is "alternative": it sounds like a solemn choice, then turns out to be a joke. Then, effect. How does Mr. Bennet turn his wife's threat into a joke that protects Elizabeth? My answer: By making the "threat" absurd, Mr. Bennet sides with Elizabeth against a loveless marriage; for once his wit protects his daughter instead of only mocking his wife.

40–55 min · We do: guided annotation · We do (15 min)
Guided analysis of a second quotation; expected answers given.
Ask: What words in this line stand out, and what do they suggest? Expected: The witty paradox. Look at the craft: The father's support comes as a witty paradox. Ask: How does this line connect to women's choices? Expected: Parental power over marriage. (The witty paradox.)

> Your mother will never see you again if you do not marry Mr. Collins, and I will never see you again if you do (Chapter XX, paragraph 18)

Ask: What words in this line stand out, and what do they suggest?
Expected answer: The witty paradox. Look at the craft: The father's support comes as a witty paradox.
Ask: How does this line connect to women's choices?
Expected answer: Parental power over marriage. (The witty paradox.)

55–70 min · You do: independent annotation · You do (15 min)

Independent annotation and a claim-evidence-reasoning paragraph (exemplar given).

Annotate the chapter for characterization, irony (three marks with a margin note each), then write one claim-evidence-reasoning paragraph: what does this chapter suggest about parental conflict over the refusal? Then start your writing prompt at your assigned level (HS Sophomore: Analyze how Chapter XX develops the idea of parental conflict over the refusal. Make a precise claim, support it with at least three pieces of textual evidence, and explain how the author's use of characterization and irony shapes that idea. Address one possible counterclaim.) Exemplar: Mr. Bennet supports Elizabeth, but only as a joke, showing his habit of avoiding real conflict. When the text says "Your mother will never see you again if you do not marry Mr. Collins, and I will never see you again if you do" (Chapter XX, paragraph 18), it shows this directly. His paradox "I will never see you again if you do" backs her refusal while turning the crisis into wit.

Task: Annotate the chapter for characterization, irony (three marks with a margin note each), then write one claim-evidence-reasoning paragraph: what does this chapter suggest about parental conflict over the refusal? Then start your writing prompt at your assigned level (HS Sophomore: Analyze how Chapter XX develops the idea of parental conflict over the refusal. Make a precise claim, support it with at least three pieces of textual evidence, and explain how the author's use of characterization and irony shapes that idea. Address one possible counterclaim.)

Exemplar: Mr. Bennet supports Elizabeth, but only as a joke, showing his habit of avoiding real conflict. When the text says "Your mother will never see you again if you do not marry Mr. Collins, and I will never see you again if you do" (Chapter XX, paragraph 18), it shows this directly. His paradox "I will never see you again if you do" backs her refusal while turning the crisis into wit.

70–80 min · Discussion · We do (10 min)

Structured discussion from the 30 tiered questions, with facilitation notes.

Anchor question: Is Mr. Bennet's support of Elizabeth an act of love, of wit, or both? Ask: what would a more serious father have done?

Anchor question: Is Mr. Bennet's support of Elizabeth an act of love, of wit, or both?

Facilitation: Ask: what would a more serious father have done?

80–87 min · Exit ticket / chapter quiz · You do (7 min)

Chapter quiz in the app and an exit ticket (answer given).

Chapter quiz in the app, then: In one sentence, what does this chapter suggest about parental conflict over the refusal? Support it with one short quotation. Model answer: Mr. Bennet supports Elizabeth, but only as a joke, showing his habit of avoiding real conflict. ("Your mother will never see you again if you do not marry Mr. Collins, and I will never see you again if you do", Chapter XX, paragraph 18). Accept any defensible claim backed by a quotation from the chapter; the answer key for the quiz is in the Quiz section.

Exit ticket: In one sentence, what does this chapter suggest about parental conflict over the refusal? Support it with one short quotation.

Answer: Model answer: Mr. Bennet supports Elizabeth, but only as a joke, showing his habit of avoiding real conflict. ("Your mother will never see you again if you do not marry Mr. Collins, and I will never see you again if you do", Chapter XX, paragraph 18). Accept any defensible claim backed by a quotation from the chapter; the answer key for the quiz is in the Quiz section.

> 87–90 min · Closure · I do (3 min)
> Summarize the lesson and preview the next reading.
> Today we saw how characterization shapes parental conflict over the refusal. Key takeaway: parental power over marriage.

Total: 90 minutes.

Teacher analysis (spoilers)

Literary elements

- Characterization: Mrs. Bennet insists Elizabeth accept; Mr. Bennet backs Elizabeth with a joke.
- Irony: The father's support comes as a witty paradox.

Themes and how they develop

- women's choices: parental power over marriage.

Symbols and motifs

- silence and reserve: What characters leave unsaid (Darcy's reserve, Jane's composure, Elizabeth's secrets) drives misunderstanding. In this chapter: “Mr. Collins was not left long to the silent contemplation of his successful love; for Mrs. Bennet, having dawdled about” (Chapter XX, paragraph 1).
- pride: Pride is discussed openly and shown in action; who is proud, and whether pride is a fault, keeps shifting. In this chapter: “what motive his cousin could refuse him; and though his pride was hurt, he suffered in no other way. His regard for” (Chapter XX, paragraph 23).

Key quotations (checked against the reading text)

- “An unhappy alternative is before you, Elizabeth” (Chapter XX, paragraph 18) Mr. Bennet's announcement.
- “Your mother will never see you again if you do not marry Mr. Collins, and I will never see you again if you do” (Chapter XX, paragraph 18) The witty paradox.
- “Nobody can tell what I suffer” (Chapter XX, paragraph 27) Mrs. Bennet's self-pity.

Model claim-evidence-reasoning

Claim: Mr. Bennet supports Elizabeth, but only as a joke, showing his habit of avoiding real conflict.
Evidence: “Your mother will never see you again if you do not marry Mr. Collins, and I will never see you again if you do” (Chapter XX, paragraph 18)
Reasoning: His paradox "I will never see you again if you do" backs her refusal while turning the crisis into wit.

Vocabulary with etymology notes

Word	Definition (in this sentence)	In context	Word history

disrespect (noun)	lack of respect	You will not, I hope, consider me as showing any disrespect to your family, my dear Madam, by thus withdrawing my pretensions to your daughter's favour, without having paid yourself and Mr.
persists (verb)	continues firmly	If therefore she actually persists in rejecting my suit, perhaps it were better not to force her into accepting me, because if liable to such defects of temper, she could not contribute much to my felicity."
unconcern (noun)	lack of worry or interest	Bennet raised his eyes from his book as she entered, and fixed them on her face with a calm unconcern which was not in the least altered by her communication.	"unconcern": Origin: an English formation from un- + concern. (Liber et Libri origin note, https://en.wiktionary.org/wiki/unconcern#Etymology)
requesting (verb)	express the need or desire for; ask for	Bennet the compliment of requesting you to interpose your authority in my behalf.
interpose (verb)	be or come between	Bennet the compliment of requesting you to interpose your authority in my behalf.	"interpose": Origin: Middle French interposer; earlier Latin interpōnō. (Liber et Libri origin note, https://en.wiktionary.org/wiki/interpose#Etymology)
rejecting (verb)	refuse to accept or acknowledge	If therefore she actually persists in rejecting my suit, perhaps it were better not to force her into accepting me, because if liable to such defects of temper, she could not contribute much to my felicity."
interfering (verb)	getting involved in other people's affairs	She endeavoured to secure Jane in her interest, but Jane with all possible mildness declined interfering;—and Elizabeth sometimes with real earnestness and sometimes with playful gaiety replied to her attacks.	"interfering": Origin of "interfere": Old French entreferir. (Liber et Libri origin note, https://en.wiktionary.org/wiki/interfere#Etymology)
mildness (noun)	gentleness	She endeavoured to secure Jane in her interest, but Jane with all possible mildness declined interfering;—and Elizabeth sometimes with real earnestness and sometimes with playful gaiety replied to her attacks.	"mildness": Origin: an English formation from mild + -ness. (Liber et Libri origin note, https://en.wiktionary.org/wiki/mildness#Etymology)
vestibule (noun)	an entrance hall	She was met in the vestibule by Lydia, who, flying to her, cried in a half whisper, "I am glad you are come, for there is such fun here!—What do you think has happened this morning?—Mr.

entreating (verb)	ask for or request earnestly	Bennet was alone, than she likewise began on the subject, calling on Miss Lucas for her compassion, and entreating her to persuade her friend Lizzy to comply with the wishes of all her family.

Discussion questions

1. Is Mr. Bennet's support of Elizabeth an act of love, of wit, or both?
2. Where does characterization appear in this chapter, and what effect does it have? Point to one passage.
3. How does this chapter connect to the book's larger concern with women's limited choices?

Classroom discussion questions (30, tiered)

Wait time after every question (3 s for DOK 1, 5 s for DOK 2, 8 to 10 s for DOK 3 and 4); think-pair-share on DOK 3 and 4; answer each response with a follow-up probe; close with student-generated questions. Focus sets by rigor level: Scaffolded support: 1, 2, 3, 4, 5, 6, 11, 12, 13, 14, 21, 22; HS Freshman: 1, 2, 3, 4, 5, 12, 13, 14, 15, 22, 23, 24; HS Sophomore: 1, 2, 3, 4, 13, 14, 15, 16, 17, 23, 24, 25; HS Junior: 1, 2, 3, 14, 15, 16, 17, 18, 24, 25, 26, 27; HS Senior: 1, 2, 3, 15, 16, 17, 18, 25, 26, 27, 28, 29; AP: 1, 2, 16, 17, 18, 19, 20, 26, 27, 28, 29, 30; College Freshman: 1, 2, 17, 18, 19, 20, 21, 22, 27, 28, 29, 30; College Sophomore: 1, 2, 11, 18, 19, 20, 21, 22, 23, 28, 29, 30; College Junior: 1, 11, 12, 19, 20, 21, 22, 23, 24, 25, 29, 30; College Senior: 1, 11, 12, 13, 20, 21, 22, 23, 24, 25, 26, 30; Graduate / PhD: 1, 11, 12, 13, 21, 22, 23, 24, 25, 26, 27, 28

Literal / recall

1. What does Mrs. Bennet want Mr. Bennet to do? [DOK 1 · coldCallWithSupport · wait 3 s · AP: unit standards] Look for: Insist Elizabeth marry Collins
2. Which choice best paraphrases Mr. Bennet's ultimatum? [DOK 1 · turnAndTalk · wait 3 s · AP: unit standards] Look for: Whatever Elizabeth chooses, one parent will disown her
3. How does Collins respond in the end? [DOK 1 · coldCallWithSupport · wait 3 s · AP: unit standards] Look for: He withdraws his offer with wounded pride
4. Who arrives during the commotion? [DOK 1 · turnAndTalk · wait 3 s · AP: unit standards] Look for: Charlotte Lucas
5. What conflict does this chapter center on? [DOK 1 · coldCallWithSupport · wait 3 s · AP: unit standards] Look for: Mother against daughter over marriage
6. Retell the three most important events of “Chapter XX” in order, in one sentence each. [DOK 1 · turnAndTalk · wait 3 s · AP: unit standards] Look for: Mrs. Bennet insists Elizabeth accept Collins and appeals to Mr. Bennet, who declares: 'Your mother will never see you again if you do not marry Mr. Collins, and I will never see you again if you do.' Collins, wounded in pride, withdraws his offer; Charlotte arrives and witnesses the commotion.
7. Which characters appear or are mentioned in “Chapter XX”? Name two and one thing each says or does. [DOK 1 · coldCallWithSupport · wait 3 s · AP: unit standards] Look for: Names and actions taken from the chapter; check against the teacher summary.
8. Where and when does “Chapter XX” take place? Point to the line that tells you. [DOK 1 · turnAndTalk · wait 3 s · AP: unit standards] Look for: A place/time detail quoted from the chapter.
9. Reread: “You will not, I hope, consider me as showing any disrespect to your family, my dear Madam, by thus withdrawing my pretensions to your daughter’s favour, without having paid yourself and Mr.” What does “disrespect” mean here, and what is literally happening in this line? [DOK 1 · turnAndTalk · wait 3 s · AP: unit standards] Look for: disrespect: lack of respect.

10. Reread: “If therefore she actually persists in rejecting my suit, perhaps it were better not to force her into accepting me, because if liable to such defects of temper, she could not contribute much to my felicity.”” What does “persists” mean here, and what is literally happening in this line? [DOK 1 · turnAndTalk · wait 3 s · AP: unit standards] Look for: persists: continues firmly.

Inferential / analytical

1. What does “Chapter XX” suggest about parental conflict over the refusal? State the inference and the line that supports it. [DOK 2 · thinkPairShare · wait 5 s · AP-LIT.LAN] Look for: Mr. Bennet's witty ultimatum is a rare moment of real parental backing, delivered as a joke.
2. Find one example of characterization in this chapter. What does it reveal that a plain statement would not? [DOK 2 · followUp · wait 5 s · AP-LIT.CHR] Look for: Look for what characters say, do and think, and how others react to them.
3. How does the irony in this chapter shape what we understand about parental conflict over the refusal? [DOK 3 · thinkPairShare · wait 8 s · AP-LIT.NAR] Look for: Look for gaps between what characters expect or say and what is true.

   Answer guidance: A defensible line of argument: Mr. Bennet supports Elizabeth, but only as a joke, showing his habit of avoiding real conflict. Useful evidence: “An unhappy alternative is before you, Elizabeth” (Chapter XX, paragraph 18): Mr. Bennet's announcement. On irony: The father's support comes as a witty paradox. Credit any position that is supported by quotation and reasoning; push one-sided answers to address the strongest counterpoint.
4. In the passage that begins “Mr.”, why might Austen have chosen these particular words? Pick two and explain their connotations. [DOK 2 · followUp · wait 5 s · AP-LIT.FIG] Look for: Diction analysis of two words in the anchor passage.
5. What causes the main turn in “Chapter XX”, and what effect is it likely to have on what follows? [DOK 2 · followUp · wait 5 s · AP-LIT.STR] Look for: Mrs. Bennet insists Elizabeth accept Collins and appeals to Mr. Bennet, who declares: 'Your mother will never see you again if you do not marry Mr. Collins, and I will never see you again if you do.' Collins, wounded in pride, withdraws his offer; Charlotte arrives and witnesses the commotion.
6. How does “Chapter XX” build on “Chapter XIX”? Name one link of cause and effect. [DOK 3 · thinkPairShare · wait 8 s · AP-LIT.STR] Look for: A causal or structural link between this and the previous chapter.

   Answer guidance: A defensible line of argument: Mr. Bennet supports Elizabeth, but only as a joke, showing his habit of avoiding real conflict. Useful evidence: “Your mother will never see you again if you do not marry Mr. Collins, and I will never see you again if you do” (Chapter XX, paragraph 18): The witty paradox. Theme link: parental power over marriage. Credit any position that is supported by quotation and reasoning; push one-sided answers to address the strongest counterpoint.
7. What can we infer about a character's motives from what they say and do here, as opposed to what they claim? [DOK 3 · followUp · wait 8 s · AP-LIT.CHR] Look for: An inference about motive supported by a quoted line.

   Answer guidance: A defensible line of argument: Mr. Bennet supports Elizabeth, but only as a joke, showing his habit of avoiding real conflict. Useful evidence: “Nobody can tell what I suffer” (Chapter XX, paragraph 27): Mrs. Bennet's self-pity. On characterization: Mrs. Bennet insists Elizabeth accept; Mr. Bennet backs Elizabeth with a joke. Credit any position that is supported by quotation and reasoning; push one-sided answers to address the strongest counterpoint.

8. The bell-ringer asked: “Is Mr. Bennet's support of Elizabeth an act of love, of wit, or both?” Now that we have read closely, how would you revise your first answer, and which line changed your mind? [DOK 2 · thinkPairShare · wait 5 s · AP-LIT.LAN] Look for: A revised answer anchored in the text.
9. Where does conflict appear, and how does it connect this chapter to the larger concern with women's limited choices? [DOK 3 · followUp · wait 8 s · AP-LIT.STR] Look for: Look for the forces, people or desires pulling against each other.
   Answer guidance: A defensible line of argument: Mr. Bennet supports Elizabeth, but only as a joke, showing his habit of avoiding real conflict. Useful evidence: “An unhappy alternative is before you, Elizabeth” (Chapter XX, paragraph 18): Mr. Bennet's announcement. Theme link: parental power over marriage. Credit any position that is supported by quotation and reasoning; push one-sided answers to address the strongest counterpoint.
10. Background: Fathers held legal authority over unmarried daughters, which makes Mr. Bennet's support decisive. How does knowing this change the way you read one moment in the chapter? [DOK 3 · thinkPairShare · wait 8 s · AP-LIT.SET] Look for: A specific moment reread in light of the context.
    Answer guidance: A defensible line of argument: Mr. Bennet supports Elizabeth, but only as a joke, showing his habit of avoiding real conflict. Useful evidence: “Your mother will never see you again if you do not marry Mr. Collins, and I will never see you again if you do” (Chapter XX, paragraph 18): The witty paradox. Theme link: parental power over marriage. Credit any position that is supported by quotation and reasoning; push one-sided answers to address the strongest counterpoint.

Evaluative / synthesis / creative

1. A critic might argue: “Mr. Bennet's witty ultimatum is a rare moment of real parental backing, delivered as a joke.” How far do you agree? Take a stand and defend it with two lines from the chapter. [DOK 3 · fourCorners · wait 8 s · AP-LIT.LAN] Look for: A defended position with evidence and one counterpoint.
   Answer guidance: A defensible line of argument: Mr. Bennet supports Elizabeth, but only as a joke, showing his habit of avoiding real conflict. Useful evidence: “Nobody can tell what I suffer” (Chapter XX, paragraph 27): Mrs. Bennet's self-pity. Theme link: parental power over marriage. Credit any position that is supported by quotation and reasoning; push one-sided answers to address the strongest counterpoint.
2. Which character in this chapter acts most wisely, and which least? Judge them by a standard you name. [DOK 3 · thinkPairShare · wait 8 s · AP-LIT.CHR, AP-LIT.LAN] Look for: An evaluation using an explicit criterion and evidence.
   Answer guidance: A defensible line of argument: Mr. Bennet supports Elizabeth, but only as a joke, showing his habit of avoiding real conflict. Useful evidence: “An unhappy alternative is before you, Elizabeth” (Chapter XX, paragraph 18): Mr. Bennet's announcement. On characterization: Mrs. Bennet insists Elizabeth accept; Mr. Bennet backs Elizabeth with a joke. Credit any position that is supported by quotation and reasoning; push one-sided answers to address the strongest counterpoint.
3. Rewrite one moment of “Chapter XX” from the point of view of a different character. What does the new angle reveal or hide about parental conflict over the refusal? [DOK 4 · thinkPairShare · wait 8 s · AP-LIT.LAN, AP-LIT.NAR] Look for: A creative product with a rationale tied to the text.
   Answer guidance: A defensible line of argument: Mr. Bennet supports Elizabeth, but only as a joke, showing his habit of avoiding real conflict. Useful evidence: “Your mother will never see you again if you do not marry Mr. Collins, and I will never see you again if you do” (Chapter XX, paragraph 18): The witty paradox. Theme link: parental power over marriage. Credit any position that is supported by quotation and reasoning; push one-sided answers to address the strongest counterpoint.

4. Write three questions of your own about “Chapter XX”: one recall, one “why/how”, and one “should/what if”. Trade with a partner and answer theirs. [DOK 3 · studentGenerated · wait 8 s · AP-LIT.LAN] Look for: Student-generated questions at three levels.

   Answer guidance: A defensible line of argument: Mr. Bennet supports Elizabeth, but only as a joke, showing his habit of avoiding real conflict. Useful evidence: “Nobody can tell what I suffer” (Chapter XX, paragraph 27): Mrs. Bennet's self-pity. Theme link: parental power over marriage. Credit any position that is supported by quotation and reasoning; push one-sided answers to address the strongest counterpoint.

5. Connect this chapter to first impressions and prejudice: is the link strong or weak so far? What would Austen need to show next to strengthen it? [DOK 4 · socraticCircle · wait 8 s · AP-LIT.LAN] Look for: A judgment of thematic development across the work.

   Answer guidance: A defensible line of argument: Mr. Bennet supports Elizabeth, but only as a joke, showing his habit of avoiding real conflict. Useful evidence: “An unhappy alternative is before you, Elizabeth” (Chapter XX, paragraph 18): Mr. Bennet's announcement. Theme link: parental power over marriage. Credit any position that is supported by quotation and reasoning; push one-sided answers to address the strongest counterpoint.

6. Is the characterization in this chapter effective, or does it feel heavy-handed? Evaluate it as a reader would in a review. [DOK 3 · fourCorners · wait 8 s · AP-LIT.CHR, AP-LIT.LAN] Look for: An evaluative judgment with criteria and evidence.

   Answer guidance: A defensible line of argument: Mr. Bennet supports Elizabeth, but only as a joke, showing his habit of avoiding real conflict. Useful evidence: “Your mother will never see you again if you do not marry Mr. Collins, and I will never see you again if you do” (Chapter XX, paragraph 18): The witty paradox. On characterization: Mrs. Bennet insists Elizabeth accept; Mr. Bennet backs Elizabeth with a joke. Credit any position that is supported by quotation and reasoning; push one-sided answers to address the strongest counterpoint.

7. Compare how “Chapter XX” treats parental conflict over the refusal with how another text, film or event you know treats a similar idea. What does Pride and Prejudice see that the other misses? [DOK 4 · socraticCircle · wait 8 s · AP-LIT.LAN] Look for: A cross-text synthesis.

   Answer guidance: A defensible line of argument: Mr. Bennet supports Elizabeth, but only as a joke, showing his habit of avoiding real conflict. Useful evidence: “Nobody can tell what I suffer” (Chapter XX, paragraph 27): Mrs. Bennet's self-pity. Theme link: parental power over marriage. Credit any position that is supported by quotation and reasoning; push one-sided answers to address the strongest counterpoint.

8. Predict what “Chapter XXI” will bring, using two clues from this chapter. After reading, evaluate your prediction. [DOK 3 · thinkPairShare · wait 8 s · AP-LIT.LAN, AP-LIT.STR] Look for: A prediction or judgment justified with textual clues.

   Answer guidance: A defensible line of argument: Mr. Bennet supports Elizabeth, but only as a joke, showing his habit of avoiding real conflict. Useful evidence: “An unhappy alternative is before you, Elizabeth” (Chapter XX, paragraph 18): Mr. Bennet's announcement. Theme link: parental power over marriage. Credit any position that is supported by quotation and reasoning; push one-sided answers to address the strongest counterpoint.

9. Design a one-paragraph modern adaptation of this chapter (setting, characters, conflict). What must stay the same for it to still be about parental conflict over the refusal? [DOK 4 · thinkPairShare · wait 8 s · AP-

LIT.LAN] Look for: A creative transfer that keeps the core idea.

Answer guidance: A defensible line of argument: Mr. Bennet supports Elizabeth, but only as a joke, showing his habit of avoiding real conflict. Useful evidence: “Your mother will never see you again if you do not marry Mr. Collins, and I will never see you again if you do” (Chapter XX, paragraph 18): The witty paradox. Theme link: parental power over marriage. Credit any position that is supported by quotation and reasoning; push one-sided answers to address the strongest counterpoint.

10. What question would you most like to ask Jane Austen about this chapter, and what answer do you think the text itself gives? [DOK 4 · studentGenerated · wait 8 s · AP-LIT.LAN] Look for: A student-generated question answered from evidence.

    Answer guidance: A defensible line of argument: Mr. Bennet supports Elizabeth, but only as a joke, showing his habit of avoiding real conflict. Useful evidence: “Nobody can tell what I suffer” (Chapter XX, paragraph 27): Mrs. Bennet's self-pity. Theme link: parental power over marriage. Credit any position that is supported by quotation and reasoning; push one-sided answers to address the strongest counterpoint.

Annotation focus

- Characterization: look for what characters say, do and think, and how others react to them (anchor passage in the We do segment)
- Also notice Irony: gaps between what characters expect or say and what is true
- Also notice Conflict: the forces, people or desires pulling against each other

Chapter quiz: item bank (all eleven rigor versions)

1. [mc · recall · DOK 1] Which choice best paraphrases Mr. Bennet's ultimatum?

   A. He threatens to leave home

   B. He sides with Collins

   C. He orders her to marry

   D. Whatever Elizabeth chooses, one parent will disown her

   Key: D (Whatever Elizabeth chooses, one parent will disown her)

2. [mc · recall · DOK 1] Who arrives during the commotion?

   A. Wickham

   B. Lady Catherine

   C. Charlotte Lucas

   D. Bingley

   Key: C (Charlotte Lucas)

3. [mc · recall · DOK 1] What does Mrs. Bennet want Mr. Bennet to do?

   A. Send Collins away

   B. Visit Netherfield

   C. Insist Elizabeth marry Collins

   D. Write to Darcy

   Key: C (Insist Elizabeth marry Collins)

4. [mc · recall · DOK 1] What conflict does this chapter center on?

   A. Town against army

   B. Jane against Bingley

   C. Mother against daughter over marriage

   D. Darcy against Wickham

   Key: C (Mother against daughter over marriage)

5. [fill · recall · DOK 1] Complete the quotation from Chapter XX, paragraph 22: "Not yet, however, in spite of her _____ in her husband, did Mrs. Bennet give up the point." Word bank: disappointment, understand, occasion, summoned

   Key: disappointment

6. [mc · recall · DOK 1] Which word completes this sentence from Chapter XX, paragraph 5? "Lizzy is only _____ in such matters as these."

   A. brought

   B. headstrong

   C. change

   D. directly

   Key: B (headstrong)

7. [fill · recall · DOK 1] Complete the quotation from Chapter XX, paragraph 1: "Mr. Collins was not left long to the silent _____ of his successful love" Word bank: disappointment, change, contemplation, directly

   Key: contemplation

8. [mc · recall · DOK 1] How does Collins respond in the end?

   A. He leaves Longbourn at once

   B. He weeps

   C. He withdraws his offer with wounded pride

   D. He proposes to Jane

   Key: C (He withdraws his offer with wounded pride)

9. [fill · recall · DOK 1] Complete the quotation from Chapter XX, paragraph 10: "And what am I to do on the _____?—It seems a hopeless business." Word bank: occasion, disappointment, understanding, summoned

   Key: occasion

10. [mc · inference · DOK 2] Which of these passages comes earliest in Chapter XX?

    A. "Mr. Collins was not left long to the silent contemplation of his successful love"

    B. "But depend upon it, Mr. Collins,' she added, 'that Lizzy shall be brought to reason."

    C. "This information, however, startled Mrs. Bennet;—she would have been glad to be equally satisfied that her daughter had meant to encourage…"

    D. "I will speak to her about it myself directly."

    Key: A ("Mr. Collins was not left long to the silent contemplation of his successful love")

11. [mc · inference · DOK 2] Which choice best states a central concern of "Chapter XX"?

    A. Parental failure

    B. A costly solution

    C. Disappointment and philosophy

D. Parental conflict over the refusal

Key: D (Parental conflict over the refusal)

12. [short · inference · DOK 2] What does this passage from Chapter XX, paragraph 30 reveal about the character or situation? “Perhaps not the less so from feeling a doubt of my positive happiness had my fair cousin honoured me with her hand” Answer in two or three sentences with one detail.
    Sample answer: The passage (Chapter XX, paragraph 30) shows the situation turning on first impressions and prejudice: parental power over marriage. The words “happiness” and “positive” are the proof, because they show how the moment looks to the people in it. They suggest more than the narrator states outright.
13. [short · inference · DOK 2] What does this passage from Chapter XX, paragraph 20 reveal about the character or situation? “What do you mean, Mr. Bennet, by talking in this way?” Answer in two or three sentences with one detail.
    Sample answer: The passage (Chapter XX, paragraph 20) shows the situation turning on first impressions and prejudice: parental power over marriage. The words “talking” are the proof, because they show how the moment looks to the people in it. They suggest more than the narrator states outright.
14. [short · analysis · DOK 3] Analyze how the word choice in this passage from Chapter XX, paragraph 22 shapes its tone: “She talked to Elizabeth again and again; coaxed and threatened her by turns.” Pick two words and explain their effect.
    Sample answer: The words “threatened” and “talked” (Chapter XX, paragraph 22) make the tone heavy and deliberate rather than neutral. That weight points the reader to class and social mobility: parental power over marriage. The author chooses them so the moment feels significant instead of passing.
15. [mc · analysis · DOK 3] Which literary element does this describe in “Chapter XX”? Mrs. Bennet insists Elizabeth accept; Mr. Bennet backs Elizabeth with a joke.
    A. Allusion
    B. Characterization
    C. Tone / mood
    D. Diction / vocabulary

    Key: B (Characterization)
16. [short · synthesis · DOK 4] Connect this passage from Chapter XX, paragraph 29 to the story's treatment of marriage and money: “In a doleful voice Mrs. Bennet thus began the projected conversation.” Use one other moment from the story as well.
    Sample answer: This passage (Chapter XX, paragraph 29) develops marriage and money: parental power over marriage. Its words “conversation” and “projected” carry that idea into this moment. The same concern returns in “Far be it from me,’ he presently continued in a voice that marked his displeasure, ‘to resent the behaviour of your…” (Chapter XX, paragraph 30), so the two passages read as a pattern, not a single moment. Together they show the story treating marriage and money as central.
17. [fill · recall · DOK 1] Complete the quotation from Chapter XX, paragraph 18: “An unhappy _____ is before you, Elizabeth”
    Key: alternative
18. [fill · recall · DOK 1] Complete the quotation from Chapter XX, paragraph 18: “Your _____ will never see you again if you do not marry Mr. Collins, and I will never see you again if you do”
    Key: mother

19. [mc · recall · DOK 1] In the line “Bennet raised his eyes from his book as she entered, and fixed them on her face with a calm unconcern which was not in the least altered by her communication.”, what does “unconcern” most nearly mean?

    A. bags for holding sewing or needlework

    B. a fine, thin cotton or linen cloth

    C. lack of worry or interest

    D. regularity; steadiness

    Key: C (lack of worry or interest)

20. [short · inference · DOK 2] What can you infer from this line? “Your mother will never see you again if you do not marry Mr. Collins, and I will never see you again if you do” (Chapter XX, paragraph 18) Answer in two or three sentences with one detail.

    Sample answer: The witty paradox. The evidence is “Your mother will never see you again if you do not marry Mr. Collins, and I will never see you again if you do” (Chapter XX, paragraph 18).

21. [short · analysis · DOK 3] Analyze how the word choice in this passage from Chapter XX, paragraph 25 shapes its tone: “Pray do, my dear Miss Lucas,’ she added in a melancholy tone, ‘for nobody is on my side, nobody takes part with me, I am cruelly used, nobody feels for my poor nerves.” Pick two words and explain their effect.

    Sample answer: The words “melancholy” and “cruelly” (Chapter XX, paragraph 25) make the tone heavy and deliberate rather than neutral. That weight points the reader to pride and self-knowledge: parental power over marriage. The author chooses them so the moment feels significant instead of passing.

22. [short · analysis · DOK 3] Analyze how the word choice in this passage from Chapter XX, paragraph 3 shapes its tone: “I will speak to her about it myself directly.” Pick two words and explain their effect.

    Sample answer: The words “directly” and “myself” (Chapter XX, paragraph 3) make the tone heavy and deliberate rather than neutral. That weight points the reader to pride and self-knowledge: parental power over marriage. The author chooses them so the moment feels significant instead of passing.

23. [short · synthesis · DOK 4] Connect this passage from Chapter XX, paragraph 6 to the story's treatment of women's limited choices: “Mr. Bennet, you are wanted immediately; we are all in an uproar.” Use one other moment from the story as well.

    Sample answer: This passage (Chapter XX, paragraph 6) develops women's limited choices: parental power over marriage. Its words “immediately” and “uproar” carry that idea into this moment. The same concern returns in “Lizzy declares she will not have Mr. Collins, and Mr. Collins begins to say that he will not have Lizzy.” (Chapter XX, paragraph 9), so the two passages read as a pattern, not a single moment. Together they show the story treating women's limited choices as central.

24. [fill · recall · DOK 1] Fill in the blank with the vocabulary word that fits: “She endeavoured to secure Jane in her interest, but Jane with all possible _____ declined interfering;—and Elizabeth sometimes with real earnestness and sometimes with playful gaiety replied to her attacks.” Word bank: disrespect, persists, mildness, unconcern

    Key: mildness

25. [fill · recall · DOK 1] Fill in the blank with the vocabulary word that fits: “Bennet the compliment of requesting you to _____ your authority in my behalf.” Word bank: persists, disrespect, interpose, unconcern

    Key: interpose

26. [mc · analysis · DOK 3] Which literary element does this describe in “Chapter XX”? The father's support comes as a witty paradox.

    A. Simile

    B. Metaphor

    C. Irony

    D. Imagery

    Key: C (Irony)

27. [short · synthesis · DOK 4] Connect this passage from Chapter XX, paragraph 14 to the story's treatment of marriage and money: “I have sent for you on an affair of importance.” Use one other moment from the story as well.

    Sample answer: This passage (Chapter XX, paragraph 14) develops marriage and money: parental power over marriage. Its words “importance” and “affair” carry that idea into this moment. The same concern returns in “Very well—and this offer of marriage you have refused?” (Chapter XX, paragraph 14), so the two passages read as a pattern, not a single moment. Together they show the story treating marriage and money as central.

28. [mc · recall · DOK 1 · AP: AP-LIT.FIG] In the line “You will not, I hope, consider me as showing any disrespect to your family, my dear Madam, by thus withdrawing my pretensions to your daughter’s favour, without having paid yourself and Mr.”, what does “disrespect” most nearly mean?

    A. lack of respect

    B. willingness

    C. liveliness and eagerness

    D. outshone; made to seem less important

    Key: A (lack of respect)

29. [short · inference · DOK 2 · AP: AP-LIT.CHR] What can you infer from this line? “An unhappy alternative is before you, Elizabeth” (Chapter XX, paragraph 18) Answer in two or three sentences with one detail.

    Sample answer: Mr. Bennet's announcement. The evidence is “An unhappy alternative is before you, Elizabeth” (Chapter XX, paragraph 18). This develops women's choices: parental power over marriage.

30. [short · synthesis · DOK 4 · AP: AP-LIT.LAN] Synthesis: trace how women's choices develops from Chapter VIII to Chapter XX. Use one quotation from each.

    Sample answer: Earlier, in Chapter VIII, paragraph 50, the text reads “A woman must have a thorough knowledge of music, singing, drawing, dancing, and the modern languages, to deserve the word” — Miss Bingley's checklist. In Chapter XX, “An unhappy alternative is before you, Elizabeth” (Chapter XX, paragraph 18) — Mr. Bennet's announcement. Parental power over marriage.

31. [short · synthesis · DOK 4 · AP: AP-LIT.LAN] Connect this passage from Chapter XX, paragraph 27 to the story's treatment of women's limited choices: “I have no pleasure in talking to undutiful children.” Use one other moment from the story as well.

    Sample answer: This passage (Chapter XX, paragraph 27) develops women's limited choices: parental power over marriage. Its words “undutiful” and “pleasure” carry that idea into this moment. The same concern returns in “People who suffer as I do from nervous complaints can have no great inclination for talking.” (Chapter XX, paragraph 27), so the two passages read as a pattern, not a single moment. Together they show the story treating women's limited choices as central.

32. [fill · recall · DOK 1 · AP: AP-LIT.STR] Complete the quotation from Chapter XX, paragraph 27: “Nobody can tell what I _____”

    Key: suffer

33. [mc · recall · DOK 1 · AP: AP-LIT.FIG] Which word completes this sentence from Chapter XX, paragraph 19? “Elizabeth could not but smile at such a conclusion of such a beginning; but Mrs. Bennet, who had persuaded herself that her husband regarded the affair as she wished, was excessively _____.”

    A. disappointed

    B. headstrong

    C. directly

    D. brought

    Key: A (disappointed)

34. [short · synthesis · DOK 4 · AP: AP-LIT.FIG] Close reading: how do the diction and syntax of “An unhappy alternative is before you, Elizabeth” (Chapter XX, paragraph 18) shape its meaning? Consider a second, competing reading.

    Sample answer: Mr. Bennet's announcement. The evidence is “An unhappy alternative is before you, Elizabeth” (Chapter XX, paragraph 18). This develops women's choices: parental power over marriage. The words “alternative” and “unhappy” carry that meaning: they are the charged choices in the line, and changing either would soften the effect. His paradox "I will never see you again if you do" backs her refusal while turning the crisis into wit.

35. [short · analysis · DOK 3 · AP: AP-LIT.LAN] Claim: Mr. Bennet supports Elizabeth, but only as a joke, showing his habit of avoiding real conflict. Explain how this evidence supports the claim: “Your mother will never see you again if you do not marry Mr. Collins, and I will never see you again if you do” (Chapter XX, paragraph 18).

    Sample answer: His paradox "I will never see you again if you do" backs her refusal while turning the crisis into wit. The evidence is “Your mother will never see you again if you do not marry Mr. Collins, and I will never see you again if you do” (Chapter XX, paragraph 18) — The witty paradox. This develops women's choices: parental power over marriage.

36. [short · synthesis · DOK 4 · Dual Credit (Indiana College Core): ICC-WC-1.5] Close reading: how do the diction and syntax of “Your mother will never see you again if you do not marry Mr. Collins, and I will never see you again if you do” (Chapter XX, paragraph 18) shape its meaning? Consider a second, competing reading.

    Sample answer: The witty paradox. The evidence is “Your mother will never see you again if you do not marry Mr. Collins, and I will never see you again if you do” (Chapter XX, paragraph 18). This develops women's choices: parental power over marriage. The words “mother” and “never” carry that meaning: they are the charged choices in the line, and changing either would soften the effect. His paradox "I will never see you again if you do" backs her refusal while turning the crisis into wit.

37. [fill · recall · DOK 1 · Program outcome: LeL-C2-LIT-1] Fill in the blank with the vocabulary word that fits: “If therefore she actually persists in _____ my suit, perhaps it were better not to force her into accepting me, because if liable to such defects of temper, she could not contribute much to my felicity.” Word bank: rejecting, disrespect, persists, unconcern

    Key: rejecting

38. [short · analysis · DOK 3 · Program outcome: LeL-C3-LIT-1] Analyze the word choice in “Nobody can tell what I suffer” (Chapter XX, paragraph 27). Pick two words and explain what they suggest.

    Sample answer: Mrs. Bennet's self-pity. The evidence is “Nobody can tell what I suffer” (Chapter XX, paragraph 27). This develops women's choices: parental power over marriage. The words “suffer” and “what” carry that meaning: they are the charged choices in the line, and changing either would soften the effect.

Rigor version	Items (in order)	Mix
Scaffolded support	1, 2, 3, 4, 5, 6, 7, 8, 9, 10, 11, 12, 13, 14, 15, 16	recall 9, inference 4, analysis 2, synthesis 1

HS Freshman	2, 17, 3, 5, 18, 19, 7, 9, 10, 12, 20, 13, 21, 15, 22, 23	recall 8, inference 4, analysis 3, synthesis 1
HS Sophomore	1, 18, 24, 25, 2, 17, 11, 20, 12, 13, 10, 26, 22, 15, 16, 27	recall 6, inference 5, analysis 3, synthesis 2
HS Junior	25, 24, 28, 4, 2, 11, 12, 29, 13, 10, 26, 15, 21, 14, 30, 31	recall 5, inference 5, analysis 4, synthesis 2
HS Senior	25, 3, 32, 33, 11, 12, 13, 20, 10, 21, 14, 26, 22, 31, 34, 23	recall 4, inference 5, analysis 4, synthesis 3
AP	5, 2, 7, 10, 13, 11, 29, 26, 14, 21, 15, 35, 23, 16, 27, 30	recall 3, inference 4, analysis 5, synthesis 4
College Freshman	9, 3, 18, 11, 12, 13, 29, 15, 21, 26, 14, 22, 36, 27, 31, 30	recall 3, inference 4, analysis 5, synthesis 4
College Sophomore	25, 6, 37, 10, 12, 11, 35, 15, 14, 21, 22, 30, 27, 23, 31, 16	recall 3, inference 3, analysis 5, synthesis 5
College Junior	37, 6, 24, 10, 13, 38, 35, 14, 26, 15, 21, 23, 31, 27, 16, 30	recall 3, inference 2, analysis 6, synthesis 5
College Senior	9, 25, 3, 10, 26, 15, 14, 38, 21, 22, 23, 31, 34, 16, 27, 30	recall 3, inference 1, analysis 6, synthesis 6
Graduate / PhD	28, 25, 37, 11, 13, 26, 14, 22, 21, 15, 23, 27, 30, 34, 16, 31	recall 3, inference 2, analysis 5, synthesis 6

Writing prompts (eleven rigor levels)

Scaffolded support (250 words; AP: see unit standards): Supported track (work from the passage your teacher selects). In “Chapter XX,” how does Austen show parental conflict over the refusal? Write a paragraph that states your claim, quotes two details from the passage, and explains how each detail supports your idea. Use the characterization you noticed as one piece of evidence.

HS Freshman (350 words; AP: see unit standards): In Chapter XX, how does Austen develop the idea of parental conflict over the refusal? State a clear claim, support it with two or three quotations, and explain how the characterization in the chapter helps build that idea.

HS Sophomore (450 words; AP: see unit standards): Analyze how Chapter XX develops the idea of parental conflict over the refusal. Make a precise claim, support it with at least three pieces of textual evidence, and explain how the author's use of characterization and irony shapes that idea. Address one possible counterclaim.

HS Junior (550 words; AP: see unit standards): Analyze how the structure of Chapter XX (where it begins, turns and ends) and its characterization shape the reader's understanding of parental conflict over the refusal. Identify one place where the text leaves matters uncertain and explain how that uncertainty adds to its meaning.

HS Senior (600 words; AP: see unit standards): Two readers disagree about what Chapter XX suggests about parental conflict over the refusal. Lay out two plausible interpretations, weigh the evidence for each (including the chapter's characterization and irony), and argue for the stronger one in a sustained, well-organized essay.

AP (650 words; AP: AP-LIT.CHR, AP-LIT.LAN): Write a literary argument in which you analyze how Jane Austen uses characterization in Chapter XX to complicate the reader's understanding of parental conflict over the refusal. Develop a defensible thesis, select evidence purposefully, and explain how specific choices of diction and syntax create meaning.

College Freshman (1000 words; AP: see unit standards): Situate Chapter XX within its historical and literary context and argue how the chapter's treatment of parental conflict over the refusal responds to that context. Engage with at least one secondary perspective (a critic, historian or the author's own statements), integrate quotations smoothly, and cite in MLA style.

College Sophomore (1250 words; AP: see unit standards): Read Chapter XX alongside the conventions of its genre and period. Argue how the chapter's handling of parental conflict over the refusal follows or bends those conventions, using the characterization as evidence, and test your reading against one published critic. Document two secondary sources in MLA.

College Junior (1500 words; AP: see unit standards): Apply a named critical approach (for example formalist, historicist, feminist, psychoanalytic or ecocritical) to Chapter XX and its treatment of parental conflict over the refusal. State your method, show what it reveals in the chapter's characterization and irony, and identify where the text resists it.

College Senior (2000 words; AP: see unit standards): Develop a research argument that reads Chapter XX as evidence for a larger claim about parental conflict over the refusal in Pride and Prejudice. Connect close reading of the chapter to the whole novel, engage at least four scholarly sources, and state precisely where your reading departs from theirs (Chicago style).

Graduate / PhD (2500 words; AP: see unit standards): Develop an original argument that reads Chapter XX as a hinge in the novel's larger treatment of parental conflict over the refusal. Position your reading within a named critical conversation (for example formalist, historicist, psychoanalytic, feminist or postcolonial approaches), account for the textual history where relevant, and articulate the stakes of your intervention for scholarship on Pride and Prejudice.

SAT-style questions

1. Bennet raised his eyes from his book as she entered, and fixed them on her face with a calm unconcern which was not in the least altered by her communication.

   As used in the text, what does the word “unconcern” most nearly mean?

   A. gentleness

   B. lack of worry or interest

   C. an entrance hall

   D. ask for or request earnestly

2. Mr. Collins was not left long to the silent contemplation of his successful love; for Mrs. Bennet, having dawdled about in the vestibule to watch for the end of the conference, no sooner saw Elizabeth open the door and with quick step pass her towards the staircase, than she entered the breakfast-room, and congratulated both him and herself in warm terms on the happy prospect of their nearer connection. Mr. Collins received and returned these felicitations with equal pleasure, and then proceeded to relate the particulars of their interview, with the result of which he trusted he had every reason to be satisfied, since the refusal which his cousin had steadfastly given him would naturally flow from her bashful modesty and the genuine delicacy of her character.

Which choice best states a central concern of "Chapter XX"?

A. Parental conflict over the refusal

B. Pemberley

C. A persuasive tale

D. Family dynamics and anticipation

SAT key: 1. B (lack of worry or interest); 2. A (Parental conflict over the refusal)

Lesson 22: Chapter XXI

Focus: consequences of refusal

Objective: Students will analyze how characterization develops in “Chapter XXI” by writing a claim-evidence-reasoning paragraph that cites at least 2 quotations from the section, and will score at least 80% on the section quiz.

Standards: AP: see the unit standards

Teacher only · spoilers

Collins turns his attention elsewhere. Charlotte draws him away. The Bingley party leaves for London, and Caroline writes that Bingley will not return and hints he may marry Darcy's sister, Georgiana.

Background: London's 'season' was the high point of social and marriage activity.

Significance: Caroline's letter deceives Jane and begins her heartbreak.

Lesson plan and lecture script (90 minutes)

0–8 min · Bell-ringer · You do (8 min)
Students write to the bell-ringer, then pair-share.
Is Caroline's letter honest? What might her motives be? Write for five minutes. Starters: I think... because... / This connects to first impressions because....
Prompt: Is Caroline's letter honest? What might her motives be?
Sentence starters: I think… because… · This connects to first impressions because…
Strong response: A strong response takes a position and anticipates this: Elizabeth's skepticism here is correct.

8–18 min · Vocabulary with etymology notes · I do (10 min)
Five key words in context, with verified word histories.
Today's words: desponding — losing hope; discouraged; inspires — causes (a feeling) in others; indulging — allowing oneself to enjoy; dejection — a state of melancholy depression; deceiving — be false to; be dishonest with.
“desponding”: From Latin despondere "to give up, lose heart," from de- "away" + spondere "to promise." “indulging”: Origin of “indulge”: Latin indulgeō (“to indulge”). “dejection”: Origin: Old French dejection; earlier Latin dejectio (“a casting down”). “deceiving”: Origin of “deceive”: Anglo-Norman deceivre; earlier Latin dēcipiō (“to deceive”).
Words: desponding: losing hope; discouraged · inspires: causes (a feeling) in others · indulging: allowing oneself to enjoy · dejection: a state of melancholy depression · deceiving: be false to; be dishonest with

18–28 min · Background and context · I do (10 min)
Mini-lecture (read or adapt the script).
London's 'season' was the high point of social and marriage activity. Caroline's letter deceives Jane and begins her heartbreak. Characterization: The Bingleys leave Netherfield; Caroline's letter hints that Bingley will marry Georgiana Darcy. Point of view: Jane trusts the letter; Elizabeth reads it skeptically. Watch for silence and reserve: What characters leave unsaid (Darcy's reserve, Jane's composure, Elizabeth's secrets) drives misunderstanding. In this chapter: "to avoid her, but by stiffness of manner and resentful silence. He scarcely ever spoke to her, and the assiduous attentions which" (Chapter XXI, paragraph 1).

28–40 min · I do: modeled close reading · I do (12 min)
Model the close reading of the anchor quotation using the written think-aloud below.
First, meaning. I read "Caroline is incapable of wilfully deceiving anyone" slowly and put it in my own words: Elizabeth argues that Caroline is trying to keep Bingley from Jane, but Jane insists Caroline could never deceive anyone on purpose. Next, craft. I notice Jane's absolute words ("incapable," "anyone"), which leave no room for doubt. The strongest word is "incapable": it shows Jane cannot even imagine deliberate unkindness. Then, effect. Why won't Jane believe that Caroline Bingley is deceiving her? My answer: Jane won't believe Caroline Bingley is deceiving her because Jane's goodness makes her trust everyone; this sets up her painful discovery in London and shows that kindness without judgment can be exploited.

> Caroline is incapable of wilfully deceiving anyone (Chapter XXI, paragraph 21)

Think-aloud: First, meaning. I read "Caroline is incapable of wilfully deceiving anyone" slowly and put it in my own words: Elizabeth argues that Caroline is trying to keep Bingley from Jane, but Jane insists Caroline could never deceive anyone on purpose. Next, craft. I notice Jane's absolute words ("incapable," "anyone"), which leave no room for doubt. The strongest word is "incapable": it shows Jane cannot even imagine deliberate unkindness. Then, effect. Why won't Jane believe that Caroline Bingley is deceiving her? My answer: Jane won't believe Caroline Bingley is deceiving her because Jane's goodness makes her trust everyone; this sets up her painful discovery in London and shows that kindness without judgment can be exploited.

40–55 min · We do: guided annotation · We do (15 min)
Guided analysis of a second quotation; expected answers given.
Ask: What words in this line stand out, and what do they suggest? Expected: Elizabeth tells Jane that Miss Bingley sees Bingley's love for Jane and means to separate them. Look at the craft: Jane trusts the letter; Elizabeth reads it skeptically. Ask: How does this line connect to first impressions? Expected: Elizabeth's skepticism here is correct. (Elizabeth tells Jane that Miss Bingley sees Bingley's love for Jane and means to separate them.)

> Miss Bingley sees that her brother is in love with you (Chapter XXI, paragraph 18)

Ask: What words in this line stand out, and what do they suggest?
Expected answer: Elizabeth tells Jane that Miss Bingley sees Bingley's love for Jane and means to separate them. Look at the craft: Jane trusts the letter; Elizabeth reads it skeptically.
Ask: How does this line connect to first impressions?
Expected answer: Elizabeth's skepticism here is correct. (Elizabeth tells Jane that Miss Bingley sees Bingley's love for Jane and means to separate them.)

55–70 min · You do: independent annotation · You do (15 min)
Independent annotation and a claim-evidence-reasoning paragraph (exemplar given).
Annotate the chapter for characterization, point of view (three marks with a margin note each), then write one claim-evidence-reasoning paragraph: what does this chapter suggest about consequences of refusal? Then start your writing prompt at your assigned level (HS Sophomore: Analyze how Chapter XXI develops the idea of consequences of refusal. Make a precise claim, support it with at least three pieces of textual evidence, and explain how the author's use of characterization and plot shapes that idea. Address one possible counterclaim.) Exemplar: Elizabeth reads Caroline's letter more accurately than Jane, showing that suspicion can be useful. When the text says “Caroline is incapable of wilfully deceiving anyone” (Chapter XXI, paragraph 21), it shows this directly. Jane says "Caroline is incapable of wilfully deceiving anyone," but Elizabeth sees that Miss Bingley wants to separate them.
Task: Annotate the chapter for characterization, point of view (three marks with a margin note each), then write one claim-evidence-reasoning paragraph: what does this chapter suggest about consequences of refusal? Then start your writing prompt at your assigned level (HS Sophomore: Analyze how Chapter XXI develops the idea of consequences of refusal. Make a precise claim, support it with at least three pieces of textual evidence, and explain how the author's use of characterization and plot shapes that idea. Address one possible counterclaim.)
Exemplar: Elizabeth reads Caroline's letter more accurately than Jane, showing that suspicion can be useful. When the text says “Caroline is incapable of wilfully deceiving anyone” (Chapter XXI, paragraph 21), it shows this directly. Jane says "Caroline is incapable of wilfully deceiving anyone," but Elizabeth sees that Miss Bingley wants to separate them.

70–80 min · Discussion · We do (10 min)
Structured discussion from the 30 tiered questions, with facilitation notes.
Anchor question: Is Caroline's letter honest? What might her motives be? Ask: when is Elizabeth's distrust right?
Anchor question: Is Caroline's letter honest? What might her motives be?
Facilitation: Ask: when is Elizabeth's distrust right?

80–87 min · Exit ticket / chapter quiz · You do (7 min)
Chapter quiz in the app and an exit ticket (answer given).
Chapter quiz in the app, then: In one sentence, what does this chapter suggest about consequences of refusal? Support it with one short quotation. Model answer: Elizabeth reads Caroline's letter more accurately than Jane, showing that suspicion can be useful. ("Caroline is incapable of wilfully deceiving anyone", Chapter XXI, paragraph 21). Accept any defensible claim backed by a quotation from the chapter; the answer key for the quiz is in the Quiz section.
Exit ticket: In one sentence, what does this chapter suggest about consequences of refusal? Support it with one short quotation.
Answer: Model answer: Elizabeth reads Caroline's letter more accurately than Jane, showing that suspicion can be useful. ("Caroline is incapable of wilfully deceiving anyone", Chapter XXI, paragraph 21). Accept any defensible claim backed by a quotation from the chapter; the answer key for the quiz is in the Quiz section.

87–90 min · Closure · I do (3 min)
Summarize the lesson and preview the next reading.
Today we saw how characterization shapes consequences of refusal. Key takeaway: Elizabeth's skepticism here is correct.

Total: 90 minutes.

Teacher analysis (spoilers)

Literary elements

- Characterization: The Bingleys leave Netherfield; Caroline's letter hints that Bingley will marry Georgiana Darcy.
- Point of view: Jane trusts the letter; Elizabeth reads it skeptically.

Themes and how they develop

- first impressions: Elizabeth's skepticism here is correct.

Symbols and motifs

- silence and reserve: What characters leave unsaid (Darcy's reserve, Jane's composure, Elizabeth's secrets) drives misunderstanding. In this chapter: "to avoid her, but by stiffness of manner and resentful silence. He scarcely ever spoke to her, and the assiduous attentions which" (Chapter XXI, paragraph 1).
- letters: Letters carry news, reveal character and change minds; Darcy's letter is the turning point of the novel. In this chapter: "Soon after their return, a letter was delivered to Miss Bennet; it came from Netherfield, and was" (Chapter XXI, paragraph 6).

Key quotations (checked against the reading text)

- "Caroline is incapable of wilfully deceiving anyone" (Chapter XXI, paragraph 21) Jane's charity.
- "Miss Bingley sees that her brother is in love with you" (Chapter XXI, paragraph 18) Elizabeth tells Jane that Miss Bingley sees Bingley's love for Jane and means to separate them.

- "The whole party have left Netherfield by this time" (Chapter XXI, paragraph 6) Caroline's letter announces the departure in a careless phrase that hides a deliberate plan.

Model claim-evidence-reasoning

Claim: Elizabeth reads Caroline's letter more accurately than Jane, showing that suspicion can be useful.
Evidence: "Caroline is incapable of wilfully deceiving anyone" (Chapter XXI, paragraph 21)
Reasoning: Jane says "Caroline is incapable of wilfully deceiving anyone," but Elizabeth sees that Miss Bingley wants to separate them.

Vocabulary with etymology notes

Word	Definition (in this sentence)	In context	Word history
desponding (adjective)	losing hope; discouraged	Jane's temper was not desponding, and she was gradually led to hope, though the diffidence of affection sometimes overcame the hope, that Bingley would return to Netherfield and answer every wish of her heart.	"desponding": From Latin despondere "to give up, lose heart," from de- "away" + spondere "to promise." (Online Etymology Dictionary (hand-checked note), https://www.etymonline.com/word/despond)
inspires (verb)	causes (a feeling) in others	I really do not think Georgiana Darcy has her equal for beauty, elegance, and accomplishments; and the affection she inspires in Louisa and myself, is heightened into something still more interesting, from the hope we dare to entertain of her being hereafter our sister.
indulging (verb)	allowing oneself to enjoy	With all these circumstances to favour an attachment and nothing to prevent it, am I wrong, my dearest Jane, in indulging the hope of an event which will secure the happiness of so many?"	"indulging": Origin of "indulge": Latin indulgeō ("to indulge"). (Liber et Libri origin note, https://en.wiktionary.org/wiki/indulge#Etymology)
dejection (noun)	a state of melancholy depression	As for the gentleman himself, his feelings were chiefly expressed, not by embarrassment or dejection, or by trying to avoid her, but by stiffness of manner and resentful silence.	"dejection": Origin: Old French dejection; earlier Latin dejectio ("a casting down"). (Liber et Libri origin note, https://en.wiktionary.org/wiki/dejection#Etymology)
deceiving (verb)	be false to; be dishonest with	Caroline is incapable of wilfully deceiving anyone; and all that I can hope in this case is, that she is deceived herself."	"deceiving": Origin of "deceive": Anglo-Norman deceivre; earlier Latin dēcipiō ("to deceive"). (Liber et Libri origin note, https://en.wiktionary.org/wiki/deceive#Etymology)
detained (verb)	kept from leaving	Bingley will not be detained in London by them."

allusion (noun)	passing reference or indirect mention	Collins's offer was now nearly at an end, and Elizabeth had only to suffer from the uncomfortable feelings necessarily attending it, and occasionally from some peevish allusion of her mother.
hesitate (verb)	pause or hold back in uncertainty or unwillingness	"How can you talk so?"—said Jane faintly smiling—"You must know that though I should be exceedingly grieved at their disapprobation, I could not hesitate."

Discussion questions

1. Is Caroline's letter honest? What might her motives be?
2. Where does characterization appear in this chapter, and what effect does it have? Point to one passage.
3. How does this chapter connect to the book's larger concern with first impressions and prejudice?

Classroom discussion questions (30, tiered)

Wait time after every question (3 s for DOK 1, 5 s for DOK 2, 8 to 10 s for DOK 3 and 4); think-pair-share on DOK 3 and 4; answer each response with a follow-up probe; close with student-generated questions. Focus sets by rigor level: Scaffolded support: 1, 2, 3, 4, 5, 6, 11, 12, 13, 14, 21, 22; HS Freshman: 1, 2, 3, 4, 5, 12, 13, 14, 15, 22, 23, 24; HS Sophomore: 1, 2, 3, 4, 13, 14, 15, 16, 17, 23, 24, 25; HS Junior: 1, 2, 3, 14, 15, 16, 17, 18, 24, 25, 26, 27; HS Senior: 1, 2, 3, 15, 16, 17, 18, 25, 26, 27, 28, 29; AP: 1, 2, 16, 17, 18, 19, 20, 26, 27, 28, 29, 30; College Freshman: 1, 2, 17, 18, 19, 20, 21, 22, 27, 28, 29, 30; College Sophomore: 1, 2, 11, 18, 19, 20, 21, 22, 23, 28, 29, 30; College Junior: 1, 11, 12, 19, 20, 21, 22, 23, 24, 25, 29, 30; College Senior: 1, 11, 12, 13, 20, 21, 22, 23, 24, 25, 26, 30; Graduate / PhD: 1, 11, 12, 13, 21, 22, 23, 24, 25, 26, 27, 28

Literal / recall

1. Who distracts Collins after the refusal? [DOK 1 · coldCallWithSupport · wait 3 s · AP: unit standards] Look for: Charlotte Lucas
2. Where do the Netherfield party go? [DOK 1 · turnAndTalk · wait 3 s · AP: unit standards] Look for: London
3. Who writes to Jane? [DOK 1 · coldCallWithSupport · wait 3 s · AP: unit standards] Look for: Caroline Bingley
4. Whom does Caroline hint Bingley will marry? [DOK 1 · turnAndTalk · wait 3 s · AP: unit standards] Look for: Georgiana Darcy
5. How does Jane respond to Caroline's letter? [DOK 1 · coldCallWithSupport · wait 3 s · AP: unit standards] Look for: She is hurt but believes Caroline
6. Retell the three most important events of "Chapter XXI" in order, in one sentence each. [DOK 1 · turnAndTalk · wait 3 s · AP: unit standards] Look for: Collins turns his attention elsewhere. Charlotte draws him away. The Bingley party leaves for London, and Caroline writes that Bingley will not return and hints he may marry Darcy's sister, Georgiana.
7. Which characters appear or are mentioned in "Chapter XXI"? Name two and one thing each says or does. [DOK 1 · coldCallWithSupport · wait 3 s · AP: unit standards] Look for: Names and actions taken from the chapter; check against the teacher summary.
8. Where and when does "Chapter XXI" take place? Point to the line that tells you. [DOK 1 · turnAndTalk · wait 3 s · AP: unit standards] Look for: A place/time detail quoted from the chapter.

9. Reread: “Jane’s temper was not desponding, and she was gradually led to hope, though the diffidence of affection sometimes overcame the hope, that Bingley would return to Netherfield and answer every wish of her heart.” What does “desponding” mean here, and what is literally happening in this line? [DOK 1 · turnAndTalk · wait 3 s · AP: unit standards] Look for: desponding: losing hope; discouraged.
10. Reread: “I really do not think Georgiana Darcy has her equal for beauty, elegance, and accomplishments; and the affection she inspires in Louisa and myself, is heightened into something still more interesting, from the hope we…” What does “inspires” mean here, and what is literally happening in this line? [DOK 1 · turnAndTalk · wait 3 s · AP: unit standards] Look for: inspires: causes (a feeling) in others.

Inferential / analytical

1. What does “Chapter XXI” suggest about consequences of refusal? State the inference and the line that supports it. [DOK 2 · thinkPairShare · wait 5 s · AP-LIT.LAN] Look for: Caroline's letter deceives Jane and begins her heartbreak.
2. Find one example of characterization in this chapter. What does it reveal that a plain statement would not? [DOK 2 · followUp · wait 5 s · AP-LIT.CHR] Look for: Look for what characters say, do and think, and how others react to them.
3. How does the plot in this chapter shape what we understand about consequences of refusal? [DOK 3 · thinkPairShare · wait 8 s · AP-LIT.STR] Look for: Look for key events and the causes linking them.
   Answer guidance: A defensible line of argument: Elizabeth reads Caroline's letter more accurately than Jane, showing that suspicion can be useful. Useful evidence: “Caroline is incapable of wilfully deceiving anyone” (Chapter XXI, paragraph 21): Jane's charity. Theme link: Elizabeth's skepticism here is correct. Credit any position that is supported by quotation and reasoning; push one-sided answers to address the strongest counterpoint.
4. In the passage that begins “The discussion of Mr.”, why might Austen have chosen these particular words? Pick two and explain their connotations. [DOK 2 · followUp · wait 5 s · AP-LIT.FIG] Look for: Diction analysis of two words in the anchor passage.
5. What causes the main turn in “Chapter XXI”, and what effect is it likely to have on what follows? [DOK 2 · followUp · wait 5 s · AP-LIT.STR] Look for: Collins turns his attention elsewhere. Charlotte draws him away. The Bingley party leaves for London, and Caroline writes that Bingley will not return and hints he may marry Darcy's sister, Georgiana.
6. How does “Chapter XXI” build on “Chapter XX”? Name one link of cause and effect. [DOK 3 · thinkPairShare · wait 8 s · AP-LIT.STR] Look for: A causal or structural link between this and the previous chapter.
   Answer guidance: A defensible line of argument: Elizabeth reads Caroline's letter more accurately than Jane, showing that suspicion can be useful. Useful evidence: “Miss Bingley sees that her brother is in love with you” (Chapter XXI, paragraph 18): Elizabeth tells Jane that Miss Bingley sees Bingley's love for Jane and means to separate them. Theme link: Elizabeth's skepticism here is correct. Credit any position that is supported by quotation and reasoning; push one-sided answers to address the strongest counterpoint.
7. What can we infer about a character's motives from what they say and do here, as opposed to what they claim? [DOK 3 · followUp · wait 8 s · AP-LIT.CHR] Look for: An inference about motive supported by a quoted line.
   Answer guidance: A defensible line of argument: Elizabeth reads Caroline's letter more accurately than Jane, showing that suspicion can be useful. Useful evidence: “The whole party have left Netherfield by this time” (Chapter XXI, paragraph 6): Caroline's letter announces the departure in a careless phrase that hides a deliberate plan. On characterization: The Bingleys leave Netherfield; Caroline's letter hints that Bingley will marry Georgiana Darcy. Credit any position that is supported by quotation and reasoning; push one-sided answers to address the strongest counterpoint.

8. The bell-ringer asked: “Is Caroline's letter honest? What might her motives be?” Now that we have read closely, how would you revise your first answer, and which line changed your mind? [DOK 2 · thinkPairShare · wait 5 s · AP-LIT.LAN] Look for: A revised answer anchored in the text.
9. Where does tone / mood appear, and how does it connect this chapter to the larger concern with first impressions and prejudice? [DOK 3 · followUp · wait 8 s · AP-LIT.FIG] Look for: Look for word choices that reveal the narrator's attitude or the scene's feeling.
   Answer guidance: A defensible line of argument: Elizabeth reads Caroline's letter more accurately than Jane, showing that suspicion can be useful. Useful evidence: “Caroline is incapable of wilfully deceiving anyone” (Chapter XXI, paragraph 21): Jane's charity. Theme link: Elizabeth's skepticism here is correct. Credit any position that is supported by quotation and reasoning; push one-sided answers to address the strongest counterpoint.
10. Background: London's 'season' was the high point of social and marriage activity. How does knowing this change the way you read one moment in the chapter? [DOK 3 · thinkPairShare · wait 8 s · AP-LIT.SET] Look for: A specific moment reread in light of the context.
    Answer guidance: A defensible line of argument: Elizabeth reads Caroline's letter more accurately than Jane, showing that suspicion can be useful. Useful evidence: “Miss Bingley sees that her brother is in love with you” (Chapter XXI, paragraph 18): Elizabeth tells Jane that Miss Bingley sees Bingley's love for Jane and means to separate them. Theme link: Elizabeth's skepticism here is correct. Credit any position that is supported by quotation and reasoning; push one-sided answers to address the strongest counterpoint.

Evaluative / synthesis / creative

1. A critic might argue: “Caroline's letter deceives Jane and begins her heartbreak.” How far do you agree? Take a stand and defend it with two lines from the chapter. [DOK 3 · fourCorners · wait 8 s · AP-LIT.LAN] Look for: A defended position with evidence and one counterpoint.
   Answer guidance: A defensible line of argument: Elizabeth reads Caroline's letter more accurately than Jane, showing that suspicion can be useful. Useful evidence: “The whole party have left Netherfield by this time” (Chapter XXI, paragraph 6): Caroline's letter announces the departure in a careless phrase that hides a deliberate plan. Theme link: Elizabeth's skepticism here is correct. Credit any position that is supported by quotation and reasoning; push one-sided answers to address the strongest counterpoint.
2. Which character in this chapter acts most wisely, and which least? Judge them by a standard you name. [DOK 3 · thinkPairShare · wait 8 s · AP-LIT.CHR, AP-LIT.LAN] Look for: An evaluation using an explicit criterion and evidence.
   Answer guidance: A defensible line of argument: Elizabeth reads Caroline's letter more accurately than Jane, showing that suspicion can be useful. Useful evidence: “Caroline is incapable of wilfully deceiving anyone” (Chapter XXI, paragraph 21): Jane's charity. On characterization: The Bingleys leave Netherfield; Caroline's letter hints that Bingley will marry Georgiana Darcy. Credit any position that is supported by quotation and reasoning; push one-sided answers to address the strongest counterpoint.
3. Rewrite one moment of “Chapter XXI” from the point of view of a different character. What does the new angle reveal or hide about consequences of refusal? [DOK 4 · thinkPairShare · wait 8 s · AP-LIT.LAN, AP-LIT.NAR] Look for: A creative product with a rationale tied to the text.
   Answer guidance: A defensible line of argument: Elizabeth reads Caroline's letter more accurately than

Jane, showing that suspicion can be useful. Useful evidence: “Miss Bingley sees that her brother is in love with you” (Chapter XXI, paragraph 18): Elizabeth tells Jane that Miss Bingley sees Bingley's love for Jane and means to separate them. On point of view: Jane trusts the letter; Elizabeth reads it skeptically. Credit any position that is supported by quotation and reasoning; push one-sided answers to address the strongest counterpoint.

4. Write three questions of your own about “Chapter XXI”: one recall, one “why/how”, and one “should/what if”. Trade with a partner and answer theirs. [DOK 3 · studentGenerated · wait 8 s · AP-LIT.LAN] Look for: Student-generated questions at three levels.

   Answer guidance: A defensible line of argument: Elizabeth reads Caroline's letter more accurately than Jane, showing that suspicion can be useful. Useful evidence: “The whole party have left Netherfield by this time” (Chapter XXI, paragraph 6): Caroline's letter announces the departure in a careless phrase that hides a deliberate plan. Theme link: Elizabeth's skepticism here is correct. Credit any position that is supported by quotation and reasoning; push one-sided answers to address the strongest counterpoint.

5. Connect this chapter to pride and self-knowledge: is the link strong or weak so far? What would Austen need to show next to strengthen it? [DOK 4 · socraticCircle · wait 8 s · AP-LIT.LAN] Look for: A judgment of thematic development across the work.

   Answer guidance: A defensible line of argument: Elizabeth reads Caroline's letter more accurately than Jane, showing that suspicion can be useful. Useful evidence: “Caroline is incapable of wilfully deceiving anyone” (Chapter XXI, paragraph 21): Jane's charity. Theme link: Elizabeth's skepticism here is correct. Credit any position that is supported by quotation and reasoning; push one-sided answers to address the strongest counterpoint.

6. Is the characterization in this chapter effective, or does it feel heavy-handed? Evaluate it as a reader would in a review. [DOK 3 · fourCorners · wait 8 s · AP-LIT.CHR, AP-LIT.LAN] Look for: An evaluative judgment with criteria and evidence.

   Answer guidance: A defensible line of argument: Elizabeth reads Caroline's letter more accurately than Jane, showing that suspicion can be useful. Useful evidence: “Miss Bingley sees that her brother is in love with you” (Chapter XXI, paragraph 18): Elizabeth tells Jane that Miss Bingley sees Bingley's love for Jane and means to separate them. On characterization: The Bingleys leave Netherfield; Caroline's letter hints that Bingley will marry Georgiana Darcy. Credit any position that is supported by quotation and reasoning; push one-sided answers to address the strongest counterpoint.

7. Compare how “Chapter XXI” treats consequences of refusal with how another text, film or event you know treats a similar idea. What does Pride and Prejudice see that the other misses? [DOK 4 · socraticCircle · wait 8 s · AP-LIT.LAN] Look for: A cross-text synthesis.

   Answer guidance: A defensible line of argument: Elizabeth reads Caroline's letter more accurately than Jane, showing that suspicion can be useful. Useful evidence: “The whole party have left Netherfield by this time” (Chapter XXI, paragraph 6): Caroline's letter announces the departure in a careless phrase that hides a deliberate plan. Theme link: Elizabeth's skepticism here is correct. Credit any position that is supported by quotation and reasoning; push one-sided answers to address the strongest counterpoint.

8. Predict what “Chapter XXII” will bring, using two clues from this chapter. After reading, evaluate your prediction. [DOK 3 · thinkPairShare · wait 8 s · AP-LIT.LAN, AP-LIT.STR] Look for: A prediction or judgment justified with textual clues.

   Answer guidance: A defensible line of argument: Elizabeth reads Caroline's letter more accurately than Jane, showing that suspicion can be useful. Useful evidence: “Caroline is incapable of wilfully deceiving anyone" (Chapter XXI, paragraph 21): Jane's charity. Theme link: Elizabeth's skepticism here is correct. Credit any position that is supported by quotation and reasoning; push one-sided answers to address the strongest counterpoint.

9. Design a one-paragraph modern adaptation of this chapter (setting, characters, conflict). What must stay the same for it to still be about consequences of refusal? [DOK 4 · thinkPairShare · wait 8 s · AP-LIT.LAN] Look for: A creative transfer that keeps the core idea.

   Answer guidance: A defensible line of argument: Elizabeth reads Caroline's letter more accurately than Jane, showing that suspicion can be useful. Useful evidence: "Miss Bingley sees that her brother is in love with you" (Chapter XXI, paragraph 18): Elizabeth tells Jane that Miss Bingley sees Bingley's love for Jane and means to separate them. Theme link: Elizabeth's skepticism here is correct. Credit any position that is supported by quotation and reasoning; push one-sided answers to address the strongest counterpoint.

10. What question would you most like to ask Jane Austen about this chapter, and what answer do you think the text itself gives? [DOK 4 · studentGenerated · wait 8 s · AP-LIT.LAN] Look for: A student-generated question answered from evidence.

    Answer guidance: A defensible line of argument: Elizabeth reads Caroline's letter more accurately than Jane, showing that suspicion can be useful. Useful evidence: "The whole party have left Netherfield by this time" (Chapter XXI, paragraph 6): Caroline's letter announces the departure in a careless phrase that hides a deliberate plan. Theme link: Elizabeth's skepticism here is correct. Credit any position that is supported by quotation and reasoning; push one-sided answers to address the strongest counterpoint.

Annotation focus

- Characterization: look for what characters say, do and think, and how others react to them (anchor passage in the We do segment)
- Also notice Plot: key events and the causes linking them
- Also notice Tone / mood: word choices that reveal the narrator's attitude or the scene's feeling

Chapter quiz: item bank (all eleven rigor versions)

1. [fill · recall · DOK 1] Fill in the blank with the vocabulary word that fits: "Caroline is incapable of wilfully _____ anyone; and all that I can hope in this case is, that she is deceived herself." Word bank: desponding, inspires, deceiving, indulging

   Key: deceiving

2. [mc · recall · DOK 1] Which word completes this sentence from Chapter XXI, paragraph 3? "To Elizabeth, however, he voluntarily _____ that the necessity of his absence had been self imposed."

   A. countenance

   B. particularly

   C. acknowledged

   D. accompanying

   Key: C (acknowledged)

3. [mc · recall · DOK 1] In the line "I really do not think Georgiana Darcy has her equal for beauty, elegance, and accomplishments; and the affection she inspires in Louisa and myself, is heightened into something still more interesting, from the hope we…", what does "inspires" most nearly mean?

   A. add to the end

B. chickens, ducks and similar birds raised for food

C. an abrupt excited utterance

D. causes (a feeling) in others

Key: D (causes (a feeling) in others)

4. [mc · recall · DOK 1] In the line "With all these circumstances to favour an attachment and nothing to prevent it, am I wrong, my dearest Jane, in indulging the hope of an event which will secure the happiness of so many?", what does "indulging" most nearly mean?

   A. playful behavior intended to arouse sexual interest

   B. looking at; regarding

   C. allowing oneself to enjoy

   D. placed in position

   Key: C (allowing oneself to enjoy)

5. [fill · recall · DOK 1] Complete the quotation from Chapter XXI, paragraph 2: "The morrow produced no _____ of Mrs. Bennet's ill humour or ill health." Word bank: opinion, abatement, acquaintance, acknowledged

   Key: abatement

6. [mc · recall · DOK 1] Where do the Netherfield party go?

   A. Pemberley

   B. London

   C. Bath

   D. Scotland

   Key: B (London)

7. [fill · recall · DOK 1] Fill in the blank with the vocabulary word that fits: "Collins's offer was now nearly at an end, and Elizabeth had only to suffer from the uncomfortable feelings necessarily attending it, and occasionally from some peevish _____ of her mother." Word bank: indulging, allusion, desponding, inspires

   Key: allusion

8. [fill · recall · DOK 1] Complete the quotation from Chapter XXI, paragraph 15: "Can there be any other _____ on the subject?" Word bank: abatement, opinion, information, accompanying

   Key: opinion

9. [fill · recall · DOK 1] Fill in the blank with the vocabulary word that fits: "Bingley will not be _____ in London by them." Word bank: desponding, detained, indulging, inspires

   Key: detained

10. [fill · recall · DOK 1] Complete the quotation from Chapter XXI, paragraph 7: "She then read the first sentence aloud, which comprised the _____ of their having just resolved to follow their brother to town directly, and of their meaning to dine that day in Grosvenor street, where Mr. Hurst had a house." Word bank: evident, resentment, unreasonable, information

    Key: information

11. [mc · inference · DOK 2] Which choice best states a central concern of "Chapter XXI"?

    A. Music, wit and manners

    B. Visit to Hunsford

    C. Consequences of refusal

    D. Marriage as a social goal

Key: C (Consequences of refusal)

12. [short · inference · DOK 2] What does this passage from Chapter XXI, paragraph 22 reveal about the character or situation? “Believe her to be deceived by all means.” Answer in two or three sentences with one detail.
    Sample answer: The passage (Chapter XXI, paragraph 22) shows the situation turning on first impressions and prejudice: Elizabeth's skepticism here is correct. The words “deceived” are the proof, because they show how the moment looks to the people in it. They suggest more than the narrator states outright.
13. [short · inference · DOK 2] What does this passage from Chapter XXI, paragraph 2 reveal about the character or situation? “He was always to have gone on Saturday, and to Saturday he still meant to stay.” Answer in two or three sentences with one detail.
    Sample answer: The passage (Chapter XXI, paragraph 2) shows the situation turning on first impressions and prejudice: Elizabeth's skepticism here is correct. The words “always” are the proof, because they show how the moment looks to the people in it. They suggest more than the narrator states outright.
14. [short · analysis · DOK 3] Analyze the word choice in “The whole party have left Netherfield by this time” (Chapter XXI, paragraph 6). Pick two words and explain what they suggest.
    Sample answer: Caroline's letter announces the departure in a careless phrase that hides a deliberate plan. The evidence is “The whole party have left Netherfield by this time” (Chapter XXI, paragraph 6). This develops first impressions: Elizabeth's skepticism here is correct. The words “whole” and “party” carry that meaning: they are the charged choices in the line, and changing either would soften the effect.
15. [short · analysis · DOK 3] Analyze how the word choice in this passage from Chapter XXI, paragraph 7 shapes its tone: “I do not pretend to regret anything I shall leave in Hertfordshire, except your society, my dearest friend” Pick two words and explain their effect.
    Sample answer: The words “anything” and “dearest” (Chapter XXI, paragraph 7) make the tone heavy and deliberate rather than neutral. That weight points the reader to pride and self-knowledge: Elizabeth's skepticism here is correct. The author chooses them so the moment feels significant instead of passing.
16. [short · synthesis · DOK 4] Synthesis: trace how first impressions develops from Chapter XVI to Chapter XXI. Use one quotation from each.
    Sample answer: Earlier, in Chapter XVI, paragraph 14, the text reads “I have no right to give my opinion” — Wickham, just before giving it. In Chapter XXI, “Caroline is incapable of wilfully deceiving anyone” (Chapter XXI, paragraph 21) — Jane's charity. Elizabeth's skepticism here is correct.
17. [mc · recall · DOK 1] Who distracts Collins after the refusal?

    A. Lydia
    B. Mary
    C. Charlotte Lucas
    D. Jane

    Key: C (Charlotte Lucas)
18. [mc · recall · DOK 1] Which word completes this sentence from Chapter XXI, paragraph 22? “You could not have _____ a more happy idea, since you will not take comfort in mine.”

    A. unreasonable
    B. started
    C. persuade
    D. abatement

    Key: B (started)

19. [mc · recall · DOK 1] How does Jane respond to Caroline's letter?

    A. She laughs

    B. She is angry

    C. She is hurt but believes Caroline

    D. She goes to London at once

    Key: C (She is hurt but believes Caroline)

20. [fill · recall · DOK 1] Complete the quotation from Chapter XXI, paragraph 21: “Caroline is _____ of wilfully deceiving anyone”

    Key: incapable

21. [mc · analysis · DOK 3] Which literary element does this describe in “Chapter XXI”? The Bingleys leave Netherfield; Caroline's letter hints that Bingley will marry Georgiana Darcy.

    A. Characterization

    B. Allusion

    C. Setting

    D. Irony

    Key: A (Characterization)

22. [short · analysis · DOK 3] Analyze how the word choice in this passage from Chapter XXI, paragraph 27 shapes its tone: “A thousand things may arise in six months!” Pick two words and explain their effect.

    Sample answer: The words “thousand” and “months” (Chapter XXI, paragraph 27) make the tone heavy and deliberate rather than neutral. That weight points the reader to class and social mobility: Elizabeth's skepticism here is correct. The author chooses them so the moment feels significant instead of passing.

23. [short · synthesis · DOK 4] Close reading: how do the diction and syntax of “Caroline is incapable of wilfully deceiving anyone” (Chapter XXI, paragraph 21) shape its meaning? Consider a second, competing reading.

    Sample answer: Jane's charity. The evidence is “Caroline is incapable of wilfully deceiving anyone” (Chapter XXI, paragraph 21). This develops first impressions: Elizabeth's skepticism here is correct. The words “deceiving” and “incapable” carry that meaning: they are the charged choices in the line, and changing either would soften the effect. Jane says "Caroline is incapable of wilfully deceiving anyone," but Elizabeth sees that Miss Bingley wants to separate them.

24. [fill · recall · DOK 1] Fill in the blank with the vocabulary word that fits: ‘How can you talk so?’—said Jane faintly smiling—‘You must know that though I should be exceedingly grieved at their disapprobation, I could not _____.” Word bank: desponding, inspires, indulging, hesitate

    Key: hesitate

25. [mc · analysis · DOK 3] Which literary element does this describe in “Chapter XXI”? Jane trusts the letter; Elizabeth reads it skeptically.

    A. Point of view

    B. Setting

    C. Diction / vocabulary

    D. Simile

    Key: A (Point of view)

26. [short · synthesis · DOK 4] Connect this passage from Chapter XXI, paragraph 16 to the story's treatment of marriage and money: “Yes, there can; for mine is totally different.” Use one other moment from the story as well.

Sample answer: This passage (Chapter XXI, paragraph 16) develops marriage and money: Elizabeth's skepticism here is correct. Its words “different” and “totally” carry that idea into this moment. The same concern returns in “No one who has ever seen you together, can doubt his affection.” (Chapter XXI, paragraph 20), so the two passages read as a pattern, not a single moment. Together they show the story treating marriage and money as central.

27. [mc · recall · DOK 1 · AP: AP-LIT.FIG] In the line “Jane’s temper was not desponding, and she was gradually led to hope, though the diffidence of affection sometimes overcame the hope, that Bingley would return to Netherfield and answer every wish of her heart.”, what does “desponding” most nearly mean?

    A. losing hope; discouraged

    B. easily irritated or annoyed

    C. cause to feel resentment or indignation

    D. make a more or less disguised reference to

    Key: A (losing hope; discouraged)

28. [mc · recall · DOK 1 · AP: AP-LIT.FIG] In the line “As for the gentleman himself, his feelings were chiefly expressed, not by embarrassment or dejection, or by trying to avoid her, but by stiffness of manner and resentful silence.”, what does “dejection” most nearly mean?

    A. a state of melancholy depression

    B. saying that one disagrees

    C. adding up (to)

    D. the regular (professional) army

    Key: A (a state of melancholy depression)

29. [short · analysis · DOK 3 · AP: AP-LIT.FIG] Analyze how the word choice in this passage from Chapter XXI, paragraph 4 shapes its tone: “I found,’ said he, ‘as the time drew near, that I had better not meet Mr. Darcy” Pick two words and explain their effect.

    Sample answer: The words “better” (Chapter XXI, paragraph 4) make the tone heavy and deliberate rather than neutral. That weight points the reader to class and social mobility: Elizabeth's skepticism here is correct. The author chooses them so the moment feels significant instead of passing.

30. [short · synthesis · DOK 4 · AP: AP-LIT.LAN] Connect this passage from Chapter XXI, paragraph 12 to the story's treatment of women's limited choices: “It is only evident that Miss Bingley does not mean he should.” Use one other moment from the story as well.

    Sample answer: This passage (Chapter XXI, paragraph 12) develops women's limited choices: Elizabeth's skepticism here is correct. Its words “evident” and “should” carry that idea into this moment. The same concern returns in “Mr. Darcy is impatient to see his sister, and to confess the truth, we are scarcely less eager to meet her again.” (Chapter XXI, paragraph 14), so the two passages read as a pattern, not a single moment. Together they show the story treating women's limited choices as central.

31. [mc · recall · DOK 1 · AP: AP-LIT.STR] Who writes to Jane?

    A. Bingley

    B. Georgiana

    C. Caroline Bingley

    D. Darcy

    Key: C (Caroline Bingley)

32. [short · inference · DOK 2 · AP: AP-LIT.CHR] What can you infer from this line? “Miss Bingley sees that her brother is in love with you” (Chapter XXI, paragraph 18) Answer in two or three sentences with one detail.
    Sample answer: Elizabeth tells Jane that Miss Bingley sees Bingley's love for Jane and means to separate them. The evidence is “Miss Bingley sees that her brother is in love with you” (Chapter XXI, paragraph 18).
33. [mc · inference · DOK 2 · Dual Credit (Indiana College Core): ICC-WC-1.5] What does this passage most clearly show? “Miss Bingley sees that her brother is in love with you” (Chapter XXI, paragraph 18)
    A. The narrator's blunt judgment of Mrs. Bennet, in three balanced phrases.
    B. Lady Catherine on the departure: she treats everything as about her.
    C. Elizabeth tells Jane that Miss Bingley sees Bingley's love for Jane and means to separate them.
    D. The entail: the economic stakes.

    Key: C (Elizabeth tells Jane that Miss Bingley sees Bingley's love for Jane and means to separate them.)
34. [short · analysis · DOK 3 · Dual Credit (Indiana College Core): ICC-WC-1.5] Claim: Elizabeth reads Caroline's letter more accurately than Jane, showing that suspicion can be useful. Explain how this evidence supports the claim: “Caroline is incapable of wilfully deceiving anyone” (Chapter XXI, paragraph 21).
    Sample answer: Jane says "Caroline is incapable of wilfully deceiving anyone," but Elizabeth sees that Miss Bingley wants to separate them. The evidence is “Caroline is incapable of wilfully deceiving anyone” (Chapter XXI, paragraph 21) — Jane's charity. This develops first impressions: Elizabeth's skepticism here is correct.
35. [fill · recall · DOK 1 · Program outcome: LeL-C2-LIT-1] Complete the quotation from Chapter XXI, paragraph 18: “Miss Bingley sees that her _____ is in love with you”
    Key: brother
36. [mc · inference · DOK 2 · Program outcome: LeL-C2-LIT-1] What does this passage most clearly show? “The whole party have left Netherfield by this time” (Chapter XXI, paragraph 6)
    A. Caroline's letter announces the departure in a careless phrase that hides a deliberate plan.
    B. Collins's refusal of novels, written in a novel; Austen's joke at his expense.
    C. Her vanity in the title.
    D. The room first admires him for his income.

    Key: A (Caroline's letter announces the departure in a careless phrase that hides a deliberate plan.)
37. [short · inference · DOK 2 · Program outcome: LeL-C4-LIT-1] What can you infer from this line? “Caroline is incapable of wilfully deceiving anyone” (Chapter XXI, paragraph 21) Answer in two or three sentences with one detail.
    Sample answer: Jane's charity. The evidence is “Caroline is incapable of wilfully deceiving anyone” (Chapter XXI, paragraph 21). This develops first impressions: Elizabeth's skepticism here is correct.

Rigor version	Items (in order)	Mix
Scaffolded support	1, 2, 3, 4, 5, 6, 7, 8, 9, 10, 11, 12, 13, 14, 15, 16	recall 10, inference 3, analysis 2, synthesis 1
HS Freshman	4, 17, 10, 7, 8, 6, 18, 19, 20, 12, 11, 13, 15, 21, 22, 23	recall 9, inference 3, analysis 3, synthesis 1
HS Sophomore	20, 24, 5, 19, 2, 4, 7, 10, 11, 12, 13, 25, 21, 14, 16, 26	recall 8, inference 3, analysis 3, synthesis 2
HS Junior	1, 19, 27, 4, 9, 3, 28, 13, 12, 11, 15, 22, 29, 25, 26, 30	recall 7, inference 3, analysis 4, synthesis 2
HS Senior	6, 10, 24, 2, 18, 8, 11, 12, 13, 15, 22, 25, 29, 26, 16, 30	recall 6, inference 3, analysis 4, synthesis 3

AP	24, 31, 19, 9, 12, 11, 32, 21, 14, 15, 22, 29, 23, 16, 26, 30	recall 4, inference 3, analysis 5, synthesis 4
College Freshman	8, 24, 19, 11, 13, 12, 33, 15, 22, 21, 25, 34, 29, 16, 26, 30	recall 3, inference 4, analysis 6, synthesis 3
College Sophomore	5, 35, 1, 24, 36, 12, 11, 13, 25, 22, 29, 15, 21, 30, 16, 26	recall 4, inference 4, analysis 5, synthesis 3
College Junior	9, 28, 7, 12, 13, 36, 11, 29, 22, 34, 25, 15, 21, 16, 30, 26	recall 3, inference 4, analysis 6, synthesis 3
College Senior	9, 7, 27, 36, 37, 13, 11, 12, 29, 22, 25, 15, 21, 16, 30, 26	recall 3, inference 5, analysis 5, synthesis 3
Graduate / PhD	9, 7, 11, 32, 13, 12, 36, 29, 25, 21, 15, 22, 16, 30, 26, 23	recall 2, inference 5, analysis 5, synthesis 4

Writing prompts (eleven rigor levels)

Scaffolded support (250 words; AP: see unit standards): Supported track (work from the passage your teacher selects). In “Chapter XXI,” how does Austen show consequences of refusal? Write a paragraph that states your claim, quotes two details from the passage, and explains how each detail supports your idea. Use the characterization you noticed as one piece of evidence.

HS Freshman (350 words; AP: see unit standards): In Chapter XXI, how does Austen develop the idea of consequences of refusal? State a clear claim, support it with two or three quotations, and explain how the characterization in the chapter helps build that idea.

HS Sophomore (450 words; AP: see unit standards): Analyze how Chapter XXI develops the idea of consequences of refusal. Make a precise claim, support it with at least three pieces of textual evidence, and explain how the author's use of characterization and plot shapes that idea. Address one possible counterclaim.

HS Junior (550 words; AP: see unit standards): Analyze how the structure of Chapter XXI (where it begins, turns and ends) and its characterization shape the reader's understanding of consequences of refusal. Identify one place where the text leaves matters uncertain and explain how that uncertainty adds to its meaning.

HS Senior (600 words; AP: see unit standards): Two readers disagree about what Chapter XXI suggests about consequences of refusal. Lay out two plausible interpretations, weigh the evidence for each (including the chapter's characterization and plot), and argue for the stronger one in a sustained, well-organized essay.

AP (650 words; AP: AP-LIT.CHR, AP-LIT.LAN): Write a literary argument in which you analyze how Jane Austen uses characterization in Chapter XXI to complicate the reader's understanding of consequences of refusal. Develop a defensible thesis, select evidence purposefully, and explain how specific choices of diction and syntax create meaning.

College Freshman (1000 words; AP: see unit standards): Situate Chapter XXI within its historical and literary context and argue how the chapter's treatment of consequences of refusal responds to that context. Engage with at least one secondary perspective (a critic, historian or the author's own statements), integrate quotations smoothly, and cite in MLA style.

College Sophomore (1250 words; AP: see unit standards): Read Chapter XXI alongside the conventions of its genre and period. Argue how the chapter's handling of consequences of refusal follows or bends those conventions, using the characterization as evidence, and test your reading against one published critic. Document two secondary sources in MLA.

College Junior (1500 words; AP: see unit standards): Apply a named critical approach (for example formalist, historicist, feminist, psychoanalytic or ecocritical) to Chapter XXI and its treatment of consequences of refusal. State your method, show what it reveals in the chapter's characterization and plot, and identify where the text resists it.

College Senior (2000 words; AP: see unit standards): Develop a research argument that reads Chapter XXI as evidence for a larger claim about consequences of refusal in Pride and Prejudice. Connect close reading of the chapter to the whole novel, engage at least four scholarly sources, and state precisely where your reading departs from theirs (Chicago style).

Graduate / PhD (2500 words; AP: see unit standards): Develop an original argument that reads Chapter XXI as a hinge in the novel's larger treatment of consequences of refusal. Position your reading within a named critical conversation (for example formalist, historicist, psychoanalytic, feminist or postcolonial approaches), account for the textual history where relevant, and articulate the stakes of your intervention for scholarship on Pride and Prejudice.

SAT-style questions

1. With all these circumstances to favour an attachment and nothing to prevent it, am I wrong, my dearest Jane, in indulging the hope of an event which will secure the happiness of so many?"

   As used in the text, what does the word "indulging" most nearly mean?

   A. passing reference or indirect mention

   B. pause or hold back in uncertainty or unwillingness

   C. kept from leaving

   D. allowing oneself to enjoy

2. The discussion of Mr. Collins's offer was now nearly at an end, and Elizabeth had only to suffer from the uncomfortable feelings necessarily attending it, and occasionally from some peevish allusion of her mother. As for the gentleman himself, his feelings were chiefly expressed, not by embarrassment or dejection, or by trying to avoid her, but by stiffness of manner and resentful silence. He scarcely ever spoke to her, and the assiduous attentions which he had been so sensible of himself, were transferred for the rest of the day to Miss Lucas, whose civility in listening to him, was a seasonable relief to them all, and especially to her friend.

   Which choice best states a central concern of "Chapter XXI"?

   A. The second proposal

   B. Consequences of refusal

   C. Family uproar

   D. The entail and the officers

SAT key: 1. D (allowing oneself to enjoy); 2. B (Consequences of refusal)

Lesson 23: Chapter XXII

Focus: a practical marriage

Objective: Students will analyze how characterization develops in “Chapter XXII” by writing a claim-evidence-reasoning paragraph that cites at least 2 quotations from the section, and will score at least 80% on the section quiz.

Standards: AP: see the unit standards

Critical voice: “Shakspeare has had neither equal nor second. But among the writers who, in the point which we have noticed, have approached nearest to the manner of the great master, we have no hesitation in placing Jane Austen, a woman of whom England is justly proud. She has given us a multitude of characters, all, in a certain sense, commonplace, all such as we meet every day. Yet they are all as perfectly discriminated from each other as if they were the most eccentric of human beings.” (Thomas Babington Macaulay, historian and essayist, "Madame D'Arblay" (Edinburgh Review, January 1843), in Critical and Historical Essays, Vol. 2, essay "Madame D'Arblay"; public domain). Compare Charlotte and Elizabeth: both "commonplace," yet "perfectly discriminated." What single choice in Chapter XXII separates them? Objective: Analyze Charlotte Lucas's practical marriage and Austen's range of "commonplace" characters. Standards: AP: see the unit standards

Teacher only · spoilers

Collins proposes to Charlotte, who accepts for security. Elizabeth is shocked that her friend could marry so foolish a man. Charlotte says she is 'not romantic.'

Background: At 27, Charlotte had few prospects; marriage offered her home and status.

Significance: Charlotte's choice offers a realistic counterpoint to romantic ideals.

Lesson plan and lecture script (90 minutes)

> 0–8 min · Bell-ringer · You do (8 min)
> Students write to the bell-ringer, then pair-share.
> Is Charlotte's choice wise, sad, or both? Write for five minutes. Starters: I think... because... / This connects to marriage and money because....
> Prompt: Is Charlotte's choice wise, sad, or both?
> Sentence starters: I think… because… · This connects to marriage and money because…
> Strong response: A strong response takes a position and anticipates this: marriage as security.

8–18 min · Vocabulary with etymology notes · I do (10 min)
Five key words in context, with verified word histories.
Today's words: slyness — cleverness in keeping something secret; overjoyed — extremely happy; offending — cause to feel resentment or indignation; cordiality — a cordial disposition; humiliating — cause to feel shame; hurt the pride of. "offending": Origin of "offend": Middle French offendre; earlier Latin offendō ("strike"). "humiliating": Origin of "humiliate": Late Latin humiliātus; earlier Latin humilis ("lowly").
Words: slyness: cleverness in keeping something secret · overjoyed: extremely happy · offending: cause to feel resentment or indignation · cordiality: a cordial disposition · humiliating: cause to feel shame; hurt the pride of

18–28 min · Background and context · I do (10 min)
Mini-lecture (read or adapt the script).
At 27, Charlotte had few prospects; marriage offered her home and status. Charlotte's choice offers a realistic counterpoint to romantic ideals. Characterization: Charlotte accepts Collins; she explains she is "not romantic." Characterization: Elizabeth is shocked and disappointed. Watch for rank and condescension: Rank is displayed and enforced, above all at Rosings by Lady Catherine; Elizabeth refuses to be cowed. In this chapter: "upon my not taking so material a step without her ladyship's concurrence" (Chapter XXII, paragraph 8).

28–40 min · I do: modeled close reading · I do (12 min)
Model the close reading of the anchor quotation using the written think-aloud below.
First, meaning. I read "I am not romantic you know. I never was" slowly and put it in my own words: Charlotte explains to a shocked Elizabeth why she has accepted Mr. Collins: she never was romantic and only wants a comfortable home. Next, craft. I notice the short, plain sentences, an honest voice with no apology in it. The strongest word is "romantic": it names exactly the ideal Elizabeth holds and Charlotte has given up. Then, effect. What is Charlotte defending when she says she is not romantic? My answer: When Charlotte says she is not romantic, she is defending her choice of security: at twenty-seven with little money, marriage to Collins is her only safe future, a choice Austen shows as reasonable, even if sad.

> I am not romantic you know. I never was (Chapter XXII, paragraph 17)

Think-aloud: First, meaning. I read "I am not romantic you know. I never was" slowly and put it in my own words: Charlotte explains to a shocked Elizabeth why she has accepted Mr. Collins: she never was romantic and only wants a comfortable home. Next, craft. I notice the short, plain sentences, an honest voice with no apology in it. The strongest word is "romantic": it names exactly the ideal Elizabeth holds and Charlotte has given up. Then, effect. What is Charlotte defending when she says she is not romantic? My answer: When Charlotte says she is not romantic, she is defending her choice of security: at twenty-seven with little money, marriage to Collins is her only safe future, a choice Austen shows as reasonable, even if sad.

40–55 min · We do: guided annotation · We do (15 min)
Guided analysis of a second quotation; expected answers given.
Ask: What words in this line stand out, and what do they suggest? Expected: Charlotte is practical; Elizabeth is idealistic. The novel lets both have a point. Ask: How does this line connect to marriage and money? Expected: Marriage as security. (Elizabeth's shock.)

> Engaged to Mr. Collins! my dear Charlotte—impossible (Chapter XXII, paragraph 13)

Ask: What words in this line stand out, and what do they suggest?
Expected answer: Charlotte is practical; Elizabeth is idealistic. The novel lets both have a point.
Ask: How does this line connect to marriage and money?
Expected answer: Marriage as security. (Elizabeth's shock.)

55–70 min · You do: independent annotation · You do (15 min)
Independent annotation and a claim-evidence-reasoning paragraph (exemplar given).
Annotate the chapter for characterization, characterization (three marks with a margin note each), then write one claim-evidence-reasoning paragraph: what does this chapter suggest about a practical marriage? Then start your writing prompt at your assigned level (HS Sophomore: Analyze how Chapter XXII develops the idea of a practical marriage. Make a precise claim, support it with at least three pieces of textual evidence, and explain how the author's use of characterization and theme shapes that idea. Address one possible counterclaim.) Exemplar: Charlotte's marriage shows the economic pressure on women without fortune. When the text says “I ask only a comfortable home” (Chapter XXII, paragraph 17), it shows this directly. She says "I ask only a comfortable home," which for a woman of twenty-seven with no money is a reasonable aim.
Task: Annotate the chapter for characterization, characterization (three marks with a margin note each), then write one claim-evidence-reasoning paragraph: what does this chapter suggest about a practical marriage? Then start your writing prompt at your assigned level (HS Sophomore: Analyze how Chapter XXII develops the idea of a practical marriage. Make a precise claim, support it with at least three pieces of textual evidence, and explain how the author's use of characterization and theme shapes that idea. Address one possible counterclaim.)
Exemplar: Charlotte's marriage shows the economic pressure on women without fortune. When the text says “I ask only a comfortable home” (Chapter XXII, paragraph 17), it shows this directly. She says "I ask only a comfortable home," which for a woman of twenty-seven with no money is a reasonable aim.

70–80 min · Discussion · We do (10 min)
Structured discussion from the 30 tiered questions, with facilitation notes.
Anchor question: Is Charlotte's choice wise, sad, or both? Debate whether Charlotte made the right choice.
Anchor question: Is Charlotte's choice wise, sad, or both?
Facilitation: Debate whether Charlotte made the right choice.

80–87 min · Exit ticket / chapter quiz · You do (7 min)
Chapter quiz in the app and an exit ticket (answer given).
Chapter quiz in the app, then: In one sentence, what does this chapter suggest about a practical marriage? Support it with one short quotation. Model answer: Charlotte's marriage shows the economic pressure on women without fortune. ("I ask only a comfortable home", Chapter XXII, paragraph 17). Accept any defensible claim backed by a quotation from the chapter; the answer key for the quiz is in the Quiz section.
Exit ticket: In one sentence, what does this chapter suggest about a practical marriage? Support it with one short quotation.
Answer: Model answer: Charlotte's marriage shows the economic pressure on women without fortune. ("I ask only a comfortable home", Chapter XXII, paragraph 17). Accept any defensible claim backed by a quotation from the chapter; the answer key for the quiz is in the Quiz section.

87–90 min · Closure · I do (3 min)
Summarize the lesson and preview the next reading.
Today we saw how characterization shapes a practical marriage. Key takeaway: marriage as security.

Total: 90 minutes.

Teacher analysis (spoilers)

Literary elements

- Characterization: Charlotte accepts Collins; she explains she is "not romantic."
- Characterization: Elizabeth is shocked and disappointed.

Themes and how they develop

- marriage and money: marriage as security.

Symbols and motifs

- rank and condescension: Rank is displayed and enforced, above all at Rosings by Lady Catherine; Elizabeth refuses to be cowed. In this chapter: "upon my not taking so material a step without her ladyship's concurrence" (Chapter XXII, paragraph 8).
- letters: Letters carry news, reveal character and change minds; Darcy's letter is the turning point of the novel. In this chapter: "depend upon it, you will speedily receive from me a letter of thanks for this, as well as for every other mark" (Chapter XXII, paragraph 10).

Key quotations (checked against the reading text)

- "I am not romantic you know. I never was" (Chapter XXII, paragraph 17) Charlotte's honesty.
- "I ask only a comfortable home" (Chapter XXII, paragraph 17) Charlotte's realism.
- "Engaged to Mr. Collins! my dear Charlotte—impossible" (Chapter XXII, paragraph 13) Elizabeth's shock.

Model claim-evidence-reasoning

Claim: Charlotte's marriage shows the economic pressure on women without fortune.
Evidence: "I ask only a comfortable home" (Chapter XXII, paragraph 17)
Reasoning: She says "I ask only a comfortable home," which for a woman of twenty-seven with no money is a reasonable aim.

Vocabulary with etymology notes

Word	Definition (in this sentence)	In context	Word history
slyness (noun)	cleverness in keeping something secret	But here, she did injustice to the fire and independence of his character, for it led him to escape out of Longbourn House the next morning with admirable slyness, and hasten to Lucas Lodge to throw himself at her feet.
overjoyed (adjective)	extremely happy	The whole family in short were properly overjoyed on the occasion.
offending (verb)	cause to feel resentment or indignation	"But is there not danger of Lady Catherine's disapprobation here, my good sir?—You had better neglect your relations, than run the risk of offending your patroness."	"offending": Origin of "offend": Middle French offendre; earlier Latin offendō ("strike"). (Liber et Libri origin note, https://en.wiktionary.org/wiki/offend#Etymology)
cordiality (noun)	a cordial disposition	Bennet with great politeness and cordiality said how happy they should be to see him at Longbourn again, whenever his other engagements might allow him to visit them.
humiliating (verb)	cause to feel shame; hurt the pride of	Collins, was a most humiliating picture!—And to the pang of a friend disgracing herself and sunk in her esteem, was added the distressing conviction that it was impossible for that friend to be tolerably happy in the lot she had chosen.	"humiliating": Origin of "humiliate": Late Latin humiliātus; earlier Latin humilis ("lowly"). (Liber et Libri origin note, https://en.wiktionary.org/wiki/humiliate#Etymology)
conference (noun)	a private talk	Miss Lucas called soon after breakfast, and in a private conference with Elizabeth related the event of the day before.
regained (verb)	get or find back; recover the use of	The steady countenance which Miss Lucas had commanded in telling her story, gave way to a momentary confusion here on receiving so direct a reproach; though, as it was no more than she expected, she soon regained her composure, and calmly replied —	"regained": Origin of "regain": Middle French regaigner. (Liber et Libri origin note, https://en.wiktionary.org/wiki/regain#Etymology)
engaging (verb)	winning or drawing in	Collins's addresses, by engaging them towards herself.

	(someone's feelings)

Discussion questions

1. Is Charlotte's choice wise, sad, or both?
2. Where does characterization appear in this chapter, and what effect does it have? Point to one passage.
3. How does this chapter connect to the book's larger concern with pride and self-knowledge?

Classroom discussion questions (30, tiered)

Wait time after every question (3 s for DOK 1, 5 s for DOK 2, 8 to 10 s for DOK 3 and 4); think-pair-share on DOK 3 and 4; answer each response with a follow-up probe; close with student-generated questions. Focus sets by rigor level: Scaffolded support: 1, 2, 3, 4, 5, 6, 11, 12, 13, 14, 21, 22; HS Freshman: 1, 2, 3, 4, 5, 12, 13, 14, 15, 22, 23, 24; HS Sophomore: 1, 2, 3, 4, 13, 14, 15, 16, 17, 23, 24, 25; HS Junior: 1, 2, 3, 14, 15, 16, 17, 18, 24, 25, 26, 27; HS Senior: 1, 2, 3, 15, 16, 17, 18, 25, 26, 27, 28, 29; AP: 1, 2, 16, 17, 18, 19, 20, 26, 27, 28, 29, 30; College Freshman: 1, 2, 17, 18, 19, 20, 21, 22, 27, 28, 29, 30; College Sophomore: 1, 2, 11, 18, 19, 20, 21, 22, 23, 28, 29, 30; College Junior: 1, 11, 12, 19, 20, 21, 22, 23, 24, 25, 29, 30; College Senior: 1, 11, 12, 13, 20, 21, 22, 23, 24, 25, 26, 30; Graduate / PhD: 1, 11, 12, 13, 21, 22, 23, 24, 25, 26, 27, 28

Literal / recall

1. Whom does Collins propose to next? [DOK 1 · coldCallWithSupport · wait 3 s · AP: unit standards] Look for: Charlotte Lucas
2. Why does Charlotte accept? [DOK 1 · turnAndTalk · wait 3 s · AP: unit standards] Look for: For security and a home
3. How does Elizabeth react to Charlotte's engagement to Collins? [DOK 1 · coldCallWithSupport · wait 3 s · AP: unit standards] Look for: Shocked and disappointed
4. What does Charlotte say she is not? [DOK 1 · turnAndTalk · wait 3 s · AP: unit standards] Look for: Romantic
5. What does this chapter suggest about marriage? [DOK 1 · coldCallWithSupport · wait 3 s · AP: unit standards] Look for: It was often an economic necessity
6. Retell the three most important events of “Chapter XXII” in order, in one sentence each. [DOK 1 · turnAndTalk · wait 3 s · AP: unit standards] Look for: Collins proposes to Charlotte, who accepts for security. Elizabeth is shocked that her friend could marry so foolish a man. Charlotte says she is 'not romantic.'
7. Which characters appear or are mentioned in “Chapter XXII”? Name two and one thing each says or does. [DOK 1 · coldCallWithSupport · wait 3 s · AP: unit standards] Look for: Names and actions taken from the chapter; check against the teacher summary.
8. Where and when does “Chapter XXII” take place? Point to the line that tells you. [DOK 1 · turnAndTalk · wait 3 s · AP: unit standards] Look for: A place/time detail quoted from the chapter.
9. Reread: “But here, she did injustice to the fire and independence of his character, for it led him to escape out of Longbourn House the next morning with admirable slyness, and hasten to Lucas Lodge to throw himself at her feet.” What does “slyness” mean here, and what is literally happening in this line? [DOK 1 · turnAndTalk · wait 3 s · AP: unit standards] Look for: slyness: cleverness in keeping something secret.
10. Reread: “The whole family in short were properly overjoyed on the occasion.” What does “overjoyed” mean here, and what is literally happening in this line? [DOK 1 · turnAndTalk · wait 3 s · AP: unit standards] Look for: overjoyed: extremely happy.

Inferential / analytical

1. What does “Chapter XXII” suggest about a practical marriage? State the inference and the line that supports it. [DOK 2 · thinkPairShare · wait 5 s · AP-LIT.LAN] Look for: Charlotte's choice offers a realistic counterpoint to romantic ideals.
2. Find one example of characterization in this chapter. What does it reveal that a plain statement would not? [DOK 2 · followUp · wait 5 s · AP-LIT.CHR] Look for: Look for what characters say, do and think, and how others react to them.
3. How does the theme in this chapter shape what we understand about a practical marriage? [DOK 3 · thinkPairShare · wait 8 s · AP-LIT.LAN] Look for: Look for statements or moments that connect to the book's big ideas.
   Answer guidance: A defensible line of argument: Charlotte's marriage shows the economic pressure on women without fortune. Useful evidence: “I am not romantic you know. I never was” (Chapter XXII, paragraph 17): Charlotte's honesty. Theme link: marriage as security. Credit any position that is supported by quotation and reasoning; push one-sided answers to address the strongest counterpoint.
4. In the passage that begins “As he was to begin his journey too early on the morrow to see any of the family, the ceremony of leave-taking was performed when the ladies moved for the night; and Mrs.”, why might Austen have chosen these particular words? Pick two and explain their connotations. [DOK 2 · followUp · wait 5 s · AP-LIT.FIG] Look for: Diction analysis of two words in the anchor passage.
5. What causes the main turn in “Chapter XXII”, and what effect is it likely to have on what follows? [DOK 2 · followUp · wait 5 s · AP-LIT.STR] Look for: Collins proposes to Charlotte, who accepts for security. Elizabeth is shocked that her friend could marry so foolish a man. Charlotte says she is 'not romantic.'
6. How does “Chapter XXII” build on “Chapter XXI”? Name one link of cause and effect. [DOK 3 · thinkPairShare · wait 8 s · AP-LIT.STR] Look for: A causal or structural link between this and the previous chapter.
   Answer guidance: A defensible line of argument: Charlotte's marriage shows the economic pressure on women without fortune. Useful evidence: “I ask only a comfortable home” (Chapter XXII, paragraph 17): Charlotte's realism. Theme link: marriage as security. Credit any position that is supported by quotation and reasoning; push one-sided answers to address the strongest counterpoint.
7. What can we infer about a character's motives from what they say and do here, as opposed to what they claim? [DOK 3 · followUp · wait 8 s · AP-LIT.CHR] Look for: An inference about motive supported by a quoted line.
   Answer guidance: A defensible line of argument: Charlotte's marriage shows the economic pressure on women without fortune. Useful evidence: “Engaged to Mr. Collins! my dear Charlotte—impossible” (Chapter XXII, paragraph 13): Elizabeth's shock. On characterization: Elizabeth is shocked and disappointed. Credit any position that is supported by quotation and reasoning; push one-sided answers to address the strongest counterpoint.
8. The bell-ringer asked: “Is Charlotte's choice wise, sad, or both?” Now that we have read closely, how would you revise your first answer, and which line changed your mind? [DOK 2 · thinkPairShare · wait 5 s · AP-LIT.LAN] Look for: A revised answer anchored in the text.
9. Where does irony appear, and how does it connect this chapter to the larger concern with pride and self-knowledge? [DOK 3 · followUp · wait 8 s · AP-LIT.NAR] Look for: Look for gaps between what characters expect or say and what is true.
   Answer guidance: A defensible line of argument: Charlotte's marriage shows the economic pressure on women without fortune. Useful evidence: “I am not romantic you know. I never was” (Chapter XXII, paragraph 17): Charlotte's honesty. Theme link: marriage as security. Credit any position that is supported by quotation and reasoning; push one-sided answers to address the strongest counterpoint.

10. Background: At 27, Charlotte had few prospects; marriage offered her home and status. How does knowing this change the way you read one moment in the chapter? [DOK 3 · thinkPairShare · wait 8 s · AP-LIT.SET] Look for: A specific moment reread in light of the context.
    Answer guidance: A defensible line of argument: Charlotte's marriage shows the economic pressure on women without fortune. Useful evidence: “I ask only a comfortable home” (Chapter XXII, paragraph 17): Charlotte's realism. Theme link: marriage as security. Credit any position that is supported by quotation and reasoning; push one-sided answers to address the strongest counterpoint.

Evaluative / synthesis / creative

1. A critic might argue: “Charlotte's choice offers a realistic counterpoint to romantic ideals.” How far do you agree? Take a stand and defend it with two lines from the chapter. [DOK 3 · fourCorners · wait 8 s · AP-LIT.LAN] Look for: A defended position with evidence and one counterpoint.
   Answer guidance: A defensible line of argument: Charlotte's marriage shows the economic pressure on women without fortune. Useful evidence: “Engaged to Mr. Collins! my dear Charlotte—impossible” (Chapter XXII, paragraph 13): Elizabeth's shock. Theme link: marriage as security. Credit any position that is supported by quotation and reasoning; push one-sided answers to address the strongest counterpoint.
2. Which character in this chapter acts most wisely, and which least? Judge them by a standard you name. [DOK 3 · thinkPairShare · wait 8 s · AP-LIT.CHR, AP-LIT.LAN] Look for: An evaluation using an explicit criterion and evidence.
   Answer guidance: A defensible line of argument: Charlotte's marriage shows the economic pressure on women without fortune. Useful evidence: “I am not romantic you know. I never was” (Chapter XXII, paragraph 17): Charlotte's honesty. On characterization: Elizabeth is shocked and disappointed. Credit any position that is supported by quotation and reasoning; push one-sided answers to address the strongest counterpoint.
3. Rewrite one moment of “Chapter XXII” from the point of view of a different character. What does the new angle reveal or hide about a practical marriage? [DOK 4 · thinkPairShare · wait 8 s · AP-LIT.LAN, AP-LIT.NAR] Look for: A creative product with a rationale tied to the text.
   Answer guidance: A defensible line of argument: Charlotte's marriage shows the economic pressure on women without fortune. Useful evidence: “I ask only a comfortable home” (Chapter XXII, paragraph 17): Charlotte's realism. Theme link: marriage as security. Credit any position that is supported by quotation and reasoning; push one-sided answers to address the strongest counterpoint.
4. Write three questions of your own about “Chapter XXII”: one recall, one “why/how”, and one “should/what if”. Trade with a partner and answer theirs. [DOK 3 · studentGenerated · wait 8 s · AP-LIT.LAN] Look for: Student-generated questions at three levels.
   Answer guidance: A defensible line of argument: Charlotte's marriage shows the economic pressure on women without fortune. Useful evidence: “Engaged to Mr. Collins! my dear Charlotte—impossible” (Chapter XXII, paragraph 13): Elizabeth's shock. Theme link: marriage as security. Credit any position that is supported by quotation and reasoning; push one-sided answers to address the strongest counterpoint.
5. Connect this chapter to marriage and money: is the link strong or weak so far? What would Austen need to show next to strengthen it? [DOK 4 · socraticCircle · wait 8 s · AP-LIT.LAN] Look for: A judgment of thematic development across the work.

Answer guidance: A defensible line of argument: Charlotte's marriage shows the economic pressure on women without fortune. Useful evidence: “I am not romantic you know. I never was” (Chapter XXII, paragraph 17): Charlotte's honesty. Theme link: marriage as security. Credit any position that is supported by quotation and reasoning; push one-sided answers to address the strongest counterpoint.

6. Is the characterization in this chapter effective, or does it feel heavy-handed? Evaluate it as a reader would in a review. [DOK 3 · fourCorners · wait 8 s · AP-LIT.CHR, AP-LIT.LAN] Look for: An evaluative judgment with criteria and evidence.

   Answer guidance: A defensible line of argument: Charlotte's marriage shows the economic pressure on women without fortune. Useful evidence: “I ask only a comfortable home” (Chapter XXII, paragraph 17): Charlotte's realism. On characterization: Elizabeth is shocked and disappointed. Credit any position that is supported by quotation and reasoning; push one-sided answers to address the strongest counterpoint.

7. Compare how “Chapter XXII” treats a practical marriage with how another text, film or event you know treats a similar idea. What does Pride and Prejudice see that the other misses? [DOK 4 · socraticCircle · wait 8 s · AP-LIT.LAN] Look for: A cross-text synthesis.

   Answer guidance: A defensible line of argument: Charlotte's marriage shows the economic pressure on women without fortune. Useful evidence: “Engaged to Mr. Collins! my dear Charlotte—impossible” (Chapter XXII, paragraph 13): Elizabeth's shock. Theme link: marriage as security. Credit any position that is supported by quotation and reasoning; push one-sided answers to address the strongest counterpoint.

8. Predict what “Chapter XXIII” will bring, using two clues from this chapter. After reading, evaluate your prediction. [DOK 3 · thinkPairShare · wait 8 s · AP-LIT.LAN, AP-LIT.STR] Look for: A prediction or judgment justified with textual clues.

   Answer guidance: A defensible line of argument: Charlotte's marriage shows the economic pressure on women without fortune. Useful evidence: “I am not romantic you know. I never was” (Chapter XXII, paragraph 17): Charlotte's honesty. Theme link: marriage as security. Credit any position that is supported by quotation and reasoning; push one-sided answers to address the strongest counterpoint.

9. Design a one-paragraph modern adaptation of this chapter (setting, characters, conflict). What must stay the same for it to still be about a practical marriage? [DOK 4 · thinkPairShare · wait 8 s · AP-LIT.LAN] Look for: A creative transfer that keeps the core idea.

   Answer guidance: A defensible line of argument: Charlotte's marriage shows the economic pressure on women without fortune. Useful evidence: “I ask only a comfortable home” (Chapter XXII, paragraph 17): Charlotte's realism. Theme link: marriage as security. Credit any position that is supported by quotation and reasoning; push one-sided answers to address the strongest counterpoint.

10. What question would you most like to ask Jane Austen about this chapter, and what answer do you think the text itself gives? [DOK 4 · studentGenerated · wait 8 s · AP-LIT.LAN] Look for: A student-generated question answered from evidence.

    Answer guidance: A defensible line of argument: Charlotte's marriage shows the economic pressure on women without fortune. Useful evidence: “Engaged to Mr. Collins! my dear Charlotte—impossible” (Chapter XXII, paragraph 13): Elizabeth's shock. Theme link: marriage as security. Credit any position that is supported by quotation and reasoning; push one-sided answers to address the strongest counterpoint.

Annotation focus

- Characterization: look for what characters say, do and think, and how others react to them (anchor passage in the We do segment)

- Also notice Theme: statements or moments that connect to the book's big ideas
- Also notice Irony: gaps between what characters expect or say and what is true

Chapter quiz: item bank (all eleven rigor versions)

1. [fill · recall · DOK 1] Complete the quotation from Chapter XXII, paragraph 17: "I ask only a _____ home"
   Key: comfortable
2. [fill · recall · DOK 1] Fill in the blank with the vocabulary word that fits: "Collins, was a most _____ picture!—And to the pang of a friend disgracing herself and sunk in her esteem, was added the distressing conviction that it was impossible for that friend to be tolerably happy in the lot she had chosen." Word bank: offending, humiliating, overjoyed, slyness
   Key: humiliating
3. [mc · recall · DOK 1] Which word completes this sentence from Chapter XXII, paragraph 2? "In as short a time as Mr. Collins's long speeches would allow, everything was settled between them to the _____ of both"
   A. preservative
   B. immediately
   C. conviction
   D. satisfaction

   Key: D (satisfaction)
4. [fill · recall · DOK 1] Complete the quotation from Chapter XXII, paragraph 17: "I am not _____ you know. I never was"
   Key: romantic
5. [mc · recall · DOK 1] How does Elizabeth react to Charlotte's engagement to Collins?
   A. Indifferent
   B. Shocked and disappointed
   C. Jealous
   D. Delighted

   Key: B (Shocked and disappointed)
6. [mc · recall · DOK 1] In the line "The whole family in short were properly overjoyed on the occasion.", what does "overjoyed" most nearly mean?
   A. brought back to life or strength; revived
   B. add to the end
   C. extremely happy
   D. a piano

   Key: C (extremely happy)
7. [mc · recall · DOK 1] Which word completes this sentence from Chapter XXII, paragraph 3? "A promise of secrecy was of course very dutifully given, but it could not be kept without _____"
   A. difficulty
   B. disapprobation
   C. apprehension
   D. satisfaction

Key: A (difficulty)

8. [mc · recall · DOK 1] What does this chapter suggest about marriage?

   A. It was illegal

   B. It was often an economic necessity

   C. It always meant love

   D. It was rare

   Key: B (It was often an economic necessity)

9. [fill · recall · DOK 1] Fill in the blank with the vocabulary word that fits: “The steady countenance which Miss Lucas had commanded in telling her story, gave way to a momentary confusion here on receiving so direct a reproach; though, as it was no more than she expected, she soon _____ her composure, and calmly replied—” Word bank: offending, overjoyed, slyness, regained

   Key: regained

10. [short · inference · DOK 2] What does this passage from Chapter XXII, paragraph 1 reveal about the character or situation? “But little had she dared to hope that so much love and eloquence awaited her there.” Answer in two or three sentences with one detail.

    Sample answer: The passage (Chapter XXII, paragraph 1) shows the situation turning on first impressions and prejudice: marriage as security. The words “eloquence” and “awaited” are the proof, because they show how the moment looks to the people in it. They suggest more than the narrator states outright.

11. [mc · inference · DOK 2] Which choice best states a central concern of “Chapter XXII”?

    A. A practical marriage

    B. Parental conflict over the refusal

    C. Neighbors and gossip

    D. An imperious hostess

    Key: A (A practical marriage)

12. [short · inference · DOK 2] What does this passage from Chapter XXII, paragraph 16 reveal about the character or situation? “But Elizabeth had now recollected herself, and making a strong effort for it, was able to assure her with tolerable firmness that the prospect of their relationship was highly grateful to her, and that she wished her all imaginable…” Answer in two or three sentences with one detail.

    Sample answer: The passage (Chapter XXII, paragraph 16) shows the situation turning on first impressions and prejudice: marriage as security. The words “relationship” and “recollected” are the proof, because they show how the moment looks to the people in it. They suggest more than the narrator states outright.

13. [short · inference · DOK 2] What can you infer from this line? “I ask only a comfortable home” (Chapter XXII, paragraph 17) Answer in two or three sentences with one detail.

    Sample answer: Charlotte's realism. The evidence is “I ask only a comfortable home” (Chapter XXII, paragraph 17). This develops marriage and money: marriage as security.

14. [short · analysis · DOK 3] Analyze how the word choice in this passage from Chapter XXII, paragraph 3 shapes its tone: “She resolved to give her the information herself, and therefore charged Mr. Collins when he returned to Longbourn to dinner, to drop no hint of what had passed before any of the family.” Pick two words and explain their effect.

    Sample answer: The words “information” and “therefore” (Chapter XXII, paragraph 3) make the tone heavy and deliberate rather than neutral. That weight points the reader to pride and self-knowledge: marriage as security. The author chooses them so the moment feels significant instead of passing.

15. [short · analysis · DOK 3] Analyze how the word choice in this passage from Chapter XXII, paragraph 18 shapes its tone: “The strangeness of Mr. Collins’s making two offers of marriage within three days, was nothing in comparison of his being now accepted.” Pick two words and explain their effect.
    Sample answer: The words “strangeness” and “comparison” (Chapter XXII, paragraph 18) make the tone heavy and deliberate rather than neutral. That weight points the reader to class and social mobility: marriage as security. The author chooses them so the moment feels significant instead of passing.
16. [short · synthesis · DOK 4] Evaluate this claim about the chapter: “Charlotte's marriage shows the economic pressure on women without fortune.” Is it fully persuasive? Argue with evidence, including a passage that complicates it.
    Sample answer: The claim is persuasive in part. “I ask only a comfortable home” (Chapter XXII, paragraph 17) supports it: She says "I ask only a comfortable home," which for a woman of twenty-seven with no money is a reasonable aim. But “I am not romantic you know. I never was” (Chapter XXII, paragraph 17) complicates it: the line (Charlotte's honesty) shows the same issue from another side, and its “not” marks a limit or reversal the claim passes over. Weighing the two passages, the claim survives, but only once it admits the tension the second passage creates.
17. [mc · recall · DOK 1] Why does Charlotte accept?
    A. For love
    B. For security and a home
    C. Because she is rich
    D. To spite Elizabeth

    Key: B (For security and a home)
18. [mc · recall · DOK 1] Which word completes this sentence from Chapter XXII, paragraph 15? “Why should you be surprised, my dear Eliza?—Do you think it _____ that Mr. Collins should be able to procure any woman’s good opinion, because he was not so happy as to succeed with you?”
    A. cannot
    B. incredible
    C. attachment
    D. disapprobation

    Key: B (incredible)
19. [fill · recall · DOK 1] Complete the quotation from Chapter XXII, paragraph 1: “The Bennets were _____ to dine with the Lucases, and again during the chief of the day, was Miss Lucas so kind as to listen to Mr. Collins.” Word bank: engaged, conviction, accidentally, civilities
    Key: engaged
20. [fill · recall · DOK 1] Complete the quotation from Chapter XXII, paragraph 13: “Engaged to Mr. Collins! my dear Charlotte—_____”
    Key: impossible
21. [mc · recall · DOK 1] In the line “But here, she did injustice to the fire and independence of his character, for it led him to escape out of Longbourn House the next morning with admirable slyness, and hasten to Lucas Lodge to throw himself at her feet.”, what does “slyness” most nearly mean?
    A. cook with dry heat, usually in an oven
    B. cleverness in keeping something secret
    C. a piano

D. deer meat

Key: B (cleverness in keeping something secret)

22. [short · inference · DOK 2] What can you infer from this line? “I am not romantic you know. I never was” (Chapter XXII, paragraph 17) Answer in two or three sentences with one detail.
Sample answer: Charlotte's honesty. The evidence is “I am not romantic you know. I never was” (Chapter XXII, paragraph 17). This develops marriage and money: marriage as security.

23. [mc · analysis · DOK 3] In this chapter, which theme does the following most directly develop? Marriage as security.

A. Marriage and money

B. Pride and self-knowledge

C. Class and social mobility

D. First impressions and prejudice

Key: A (Marriage and money)

24. [mc · analysis · DOK 3] Which literary element does this describe in “Chapter XXII”? Charlotte accepts Collins; she explains she is ‘not romantic.’

A. Personification

B. Allusion

C. Setting

D. Characterization

Key: D (Characterization)

25. [short · synthesis · DOK 4] Close reading: how do the diction and syntax of “I ask only a comfortable home” (Chapter XXII, paragraph 17) shape its meaning? Consider a second, competing reading.
Sample answer: Charlotte's realism. The evidence is “I ask only a comfortable home” (Chapter XXII, paragraph 17). This develops marriage and money: marriage as security. The words “comfortable” and “home” carry that meaning: they are the charged choices in the line, and changing either would soften the effect. She says "I ask only a comfortable home," which for a woman of twenty-seven with no money is a reasonable aim.

26. [mc · recall · DOK 1] In the line “Bennet with great politeness and cordiality said how happy they should be to see him at Longbourn again, whenever his other engagements might allow him to visit them.”, what does “cordiality” most nearly mean?

A. a cordial disposition

B. a woman of good family and manners

C. greeted (someone) warmly on arrival

D. suitable; desirable

Key: A (a cordial disposition)

27. [fill · recall · DOK 1] Fill in the blank with the vocabulary word that fits: “Collins’s addresses, by _____ them towards herself.” Word bank: offending, engaging, slyness, overjoyed
Key: engaging

28. [fill · recall · DOK 1] Complete the quotation from Chapter XXII, paragraph 3: “Mr. Collins to be sure was neither sensible nor agreeable; his society was irksome, and his _____ to her must be imaginary.” Word bank: immediately, attachment, disapprobation, accidentally
Key: attachment

29. [short · analysis · DOK 3] Analyze how the word choice in this passage from Chapter XXII, paragraph 2 shapes its tone: “The stupidity with which he was favoured by nature, must guard his courtship from any charm that could make a woman wish for its continuance” Pick two words and explain their effect.
    Sample answer: The words “continuance” and “courtship” (Chapter XXII, paragraph 2) make the tone heavy and deliberate rather than neutral. That weight points the reader to class and social mobility: marriage as security. The author chooses them so the moment feels significant instead of passing.
30. [short · analysis · DOK 3] Claim: Charlotte's marriage shows the economic pressure on women without fortune. Explain how this evidence supports the claim: “I ask only a comfortable home” (Chapter XXII, paragraph 17).
    Sample answer: She says "I ask only a comfortable home," which for a woman of twenty-seven with no money is a reasonable aim. The evidence is “I ask only a comfortable home” (Chapter XXII, paragraph 17) — Charlotte's realism. This develops marriage and money: marriage as security.
31. [short · synthesis · DOK 4] Close reading: how do the diction and syntax of “I am not romantic you know. I never was” (Chapter XXII, paragraph 17) shape its meaning? Consider a second, competing reading.
    Sample answer: Charlotte's honesty. The evidence is “I am not romantic you know. I never was” (Chapter XXII, paragraph 17). This develops marriage and money: marriage as security. The words “romantic” and “never” carry that meaning: they are the charged choices in the line, and changing either would soften the effect. She says "I ask only a comfortable home," which for a woman of twenty-seven with no money is a reasonable aim.
32. [mc · recall · DOK 1 · AP: AP-LIT.CHR] What does Charlotte say she is not?

    A. Healthy
    B. Proud
    C. Romantic
    D. Clever

    Key: C (Romantic)
33. [short · synthesis · DOK 4 · AP: AP-LIT.LAN] Connect this passage from Chapter XXII, paragraph 10 to the story's treatment of marriage and money: “As for my fair cousins, though my absence may not be long enough to render it necessary, I shall now take the liberty of wishing them health and happiness, not excepting my cousin Elizabeth.” Use one other moment from the story as well.
    Sample answer: This passage (Chapter XXII, paragraph 10) develops marriage and money: marriage as security. Its words “happiness” and “excepting” carry that idea into this moment. The same concern returns in “Mrs. Bennet wished to understand by it that he thought of paying his addresses to one of her younger girls, and Mary…” (Chapter XXII, paragraph 11), so the two passages read as a pattern, not a single moment. Together they show the story treating marriage and money as central.
34. [short · synthesis · DOK 4 · AP: AP-LIT.LAN] Synthesis: trace how marriage and money develops from Chapter XIX to Chapter XXII. Use one quotation from each.
    Sample answer: Earlier, in Chapter XIX, paragraph 6, the text reads “before I am run away with by my feelings on this subject” — Collins's comic emotion. In Chapter XXII, “I am not romantic you know. I never was” (Chapter XXII, paragraph 17) — Charlotte's honesty. Marriage as security.
35. [mc · recall · DOK 1 · AP: AP-LIT.STR] Whom does Collins propose to next?

    A. Charlotte Lucas
    B. Mary Bennet
    C. Kitty

D. Caroline

Key: A (Charlotte Lucas)

36. [fill · recall · DOK 1 · AP: AP-LIT.FIG] Fill in the blank with the vocabulary word that fits: “Miss Lucas called soon after breakfast, and in a private _____ with Elizabeth related the event of the day before.” Word bank: slyness, overjoyed, conference, offending

    Key: conference

37. [fill · recall · DOK 1 · AP: AP-LIT.FIG] Complete the quotation from Chapter XXII, paragraph 10: “Believe me, my dear sir, my gratitude is warmly excited by such _____ attention; and depend upon it, you will speedily receive from me a letter of thanks for this, as well as for every other mark of your regard during my stay in Hertfordshire.” Word bank: circumstances, incredible, affectionate, difficulty

    Key: affectionate

38. [short · synthesis · DOK 4 · AP: AP-LIT.LAN] Connect this passage from Chapter XXII, paragraph 5 to the story's treatment of women's limited choices: “My dear Madam,’ he replied, ‘this invitation is particularly gratifying, because it is what I have been hoping to receive; and you may be very certain that I shall avail myself of it as soon as possible.” Use one other moment from the story as well.

    Sample answer: This passage (Chapter XXII, paragraph 5) develops women's limited choices: marriage as security. Its words “particularly” and “gratifying” carry that idea into this moment. The same concern returns in “My dear sir,’ replied Mr. Collins, ‘I am particularly obliged to you for this friendly caution, and you may depend upon…” (Chapter XXII, paragraph 8), so the two passages read as a pattern, not a single moment. Together they show the story treating women's limited choices as central.

39. [mc · analysis · DOK 3 · AP: AP-LIT.CHR] Which literary element does this describe in “Chapter XXII”? Elizabeth is shocked and disappointed.

    A. Tone / mood

    B. Setting

    C. Characterization

    D. Metaphor

    Key: C (Characterization)

40. [short · analysis · DOK 3 · Program outcome: LeL-C2-LIT-1] Analyze the word choice in “Engaged to Mr. Collins! my dear Charlotte—impossible” (Chapter XXII, paragraph 13). Pick two words and explain what they suggest.

    Sample answer: Elizabeth's shock. The evidence is “Engaged to Mr. Collins! my dear Charlotte—impossible” (Chapter XXII, paragraph 13). This develops marriage and money: marriage as security. The words “impossible” and “dear” carry that meaning: they are the charged choices in the line, and changing either would soften the effect.

Rigor version	Items (in order)	Mix
Scaffolded support	1, 2, 3, 4, 5, 6, 7, 8, 9, 10, 11, 12, 13, 14, 15, 16	recall 9, inference 4, analysis 2, synthesis 1
HS Freshman	17, 18, 6, 19, 20, 2, 7, 21, 8, 12, 10, 22, 23, 24, 15, 25	recall 9, inference 3, analysis 3, synthesis 1
HS Sophomore	20, 4, 26, 27, 28, 7, 6, 17, 10, 11, 12, 15, 29, 30, 31, 16	recall 8, inference 3, analysis 3, synthesis 2
HS Junior	2, 9, 7, 6, 32, 12, 11, 22, 13, 10, 15, 23, 29, 14, 33, 34	recall 5, inference 5, analysis 4, synthesis 2
HS Senior	35, 21, 9, 36, 37, 13, 11, 12, 10, 29, 23, 14, 15, 31, 33, 38

		recall 5, inference 4, analysis 4, synthesis 3
AP	37, 1, 32, 35, 10, 14, 39, 15, 29, 23, 34, 33, 25, 38, 16, 31	recall 4, inference 1, analysis 5, synthesis 6
College Freshman	2, 32, 8, 36, 10, 22, 29, 23, 15, 24, 14, 33, 16, 38, 25, 34	recall 4, inference 2, analysis 5, synthesis 5
College Sophomore	8, 2, 36, 35, 11, 12, 23, 29, 40, 15, 14, 34, 25, 33, 38, 16	recall 4, inference 2, analysis 5, synthesis 5
College Junior	5, 17, 2, 36, 11, 22, 23, 14, 15, 29, 40, 38, 33, 34, 16, 25	recall 4, inference 2, analysis 5, synthesis 5
College Senior	2, 36, 35, 6, 10, 13, 11, 29, 40, 14, 15, 23, 16, 38, 33, 34	recall 4, inference 3, analysis 5, synthesis 4
Graduate / PhD	6, 2, 36, 32, 11, 13, 12, 15, 29, 14, 23, 31, 16, 34, 33, 38	recall 4, inference 3, analysis 4, synthesis 5

Writing prompts (eleven rigor levels)

Scaffolded support (250 words; AP: see unit standards): Supported track (work from the passage your teacher selects). In “Chapter XXII,” how does Austen show a practical marriage? Write a paragraph that states your claim, quotes two details from the passage, and explains how each detail supports your idea. Use the characterization you noticed as one piece of evidence.

HS Freshman (350 words; AP: see unit standards): In Chapter XXII, how does Austen develop the idea of a practical marriage? State a clear claim, support it with two or three quotations, and explain how the characterization in the chapter helps build that idea.

HS Sophomore (450 words; AP: see unit standards): Analyze how Chapter XXII develops the idea of a practical marriage. Make a precise claim, support it with at least three pieces of textual evidence, and explain how the author's use of characterization and theme shapes that idea. Address one possible counterclaim.

HS Junior (550 words; AP: see unit standards): Analyze how the structure of Chapter XXII (where it begins, turns and ends) and its characterization shape the reader's understanding of a practical marriage. Identify one place where the text leaves matters uncertain and explain how that uncertainty adds to its meaning.

HS Senior (600 words; AP: see unit standards): Two readers disagree about what Chapter XXII suggests about a practical marriage. Lay out two plausible interpretations, weigh the evidence for each (including the chapter's characterization and theme), and argue for the stronger one in a sustained, well-organized essay.

AP (650 words; AP: AP-LIT.CHR, AP-LIT.LAN): Write a literary argument in which you analyze how Jane Austen uses characterization in Chapter XXII to complicate the reader's understanding of a practical marriage. Develop a defensible thesis, select evidence purposefully, and explain how specific choices of diction and syntax create meaning.

College Freshman (1000 words; AP: see unit standards): Situate Chapter XXII within its historical and literary context and argue how the chapter's treatment of a practical marriage responds to that context. Engage with at least one secondary perspective (a critic, historian or the author's own statements), integrate quotations smoothly, and cite in MLA style.

College Sophomore (1250 words; AP: see unit standards): Read Chapter XXII alongside the conventions of its genre and period. Argue how the chapter's handling of a practical marriage follows or bends those conventions, using the characterization as evidence, and test your reading against one published critic. Document two secondary sources in MLA.

College Junior (1500 words; AP: see unit standards): Apply a named critical approach (for example formalist, historicist, feminist, psychoanalytic or ecocritical) to Chapter XXII and its treatment of a practical marriage. State your method, show what it reveals in the chapter's characterization and theme, and identify where the text resists it.

College Senior (2000 words; AP: see unit standards): Develop a research argument that reads Chapter XXII as evidence for a larger claim about a practical marriage in Pride and Prejudice. Connect close reading of the chapter to the whole novel, engage at least four scholarly sources, and state precisely where your reading departs from theirs (Chicago style).

Graduate / PhD (2500 words; AP: see unit standards): Develop an original argument that reads Chapter XXII as a hinge in the novel's larger treatment of a practical marriage. Position your reading within a named critical conversation (for example formalist, historicist, psychoanalytic, feminist or postcolonial approaches), account for the textual history where relevant, and articulate the stakes of your intervention for scholarship on Pride and Prejudice.

SAT-style questions

1. "But is there not danger of Lady Catherine's disapprobation here, my good sir?—You had better neglect your relations, than run the risk of offending your patroness."

   As used in the text, what does the word "offending" most nearly mean?

   A. winning or drawing in (someone's feelings)

   B. cause to feel resentment or indignation

   C. a private talk

   D. get or find back; recover the use of

2. As he was to begin his journey too early on the morrow to see any of the family, the ceremony of leave-taking was performed when the ladies moved for the night; and Mrs. Bennet with great politeness and cordiality said how happy they should be to see him at Longbourn again, whenever his other engagements might allow him to visit them.

   Which choice best states a central concern of "Chapter XXII"?

   A. Scandal

   B. The second proposal

   C. A practical marriage

   D. A costly solution

SAT key: 1. B (cause to feel resentment or indignation); 2. C (A practical marriage)

Lesson 24: Chapter XXIII

Focus: family uproar

Objective: Students will analyze how characterization develops in “Chapter XXIII” by writing a claim-evidence-reasoning paragraph that cites at least 2 quotations from the section, and will score at least 80% on the section quiz.

Standards: AP: see the unit standards

Teacher only · spoilers

Sir William announces the engagement; Mrs. Bennet is disbelieving and resentful. Jane receives no word from Bingley, and Elizabeth grows more suspicious of Darcy's and the sisters' influence.

Background: Engagements reshaped family alliances and resentments.

Significance: Elizabeth's distrust of Darcy deepens—partly earned, partly prejudice.

Lesson plan and lecture script (90 minutes)

0–8 min · Bell-ringer · You do (8 min)
Students write to the bell-ringer, then pair-share.
Why is Mrs. Bennet especially bitter about Charlotte's engagement? Write for five minutes. Starters: I think... because... / This connects to marriage and money because....
Prompt: Why is Mrs. Bennet especially bitter about Charlotte's engagement?
Sentence starters: I think… because… · This connects to marriage and money because…
Strong response: A strong response takes a position and anticipates this: Mrs. Bennet sees the match only as Longbourn passing to the Lucases one day.

8–18 min · Vocabulary with etymology notes · I do (10 min)
Five key words in context, with verified word histories.
Today's words: unfeeling — cold and unkind; overpowering — very strong; impossible to resist; luckily — by good fortune; abhorrence — hate coupled with disgust; appease — pacify; calm. “appease”: Origin: Old French apeser (“to pacify”).
Words: unfeeling: cold and unkind · overpowering: very strong; impossible to resist · luckily: by good fortune · abhorrence: hate coupled with disgust · appease: pacify; calm

18–28 min · Background and context · I do (10 min)
Mini-lecture (read or adapt the script).
Engagements reshaped family alliances and resentments. Elizabeth's distrust of Darcy deepens—partly earned, partly prejudice. Characterization: Sir William Lucas announces Charlotte's engagement; Mrs. Bennet refuses to believe it, then rages for days. Lydia blurts; Mr. Bennet is pleased to find Charlotte "as foolish as his wife." Structure: The chapter turns from Charlotte's news to Jane's silence: Bingley does not return, and Jane's hope is tested. Watch for silence and reserve: What characters leave unsaid (Darcy's reserve, Jane's composure, Elizabeth's secrets) drives misunderstanding. In this chapter: "and Charlotte there was a restraint which kept them mutually silent on the subject; and Elizabeth felt persuaded that no real confidence" (Chapter XXIII, paragraph 9).

28–40 min · I do: modeled close reading · I do (12 min)
Model the close reading of the anchor quotation using the written think-aloud below.
First, meaning. I read "Sir William Lucas himself appeared, sent by his daughter to announce her engagement to the family" slowly and put it in my own words: Sir William Lucas arrives at Longbourn, sent by Charlotte, to announce her engagement to Mr. Collins. Next, craft. I notice the formal "sent by his daughter," which makes Charlotte the one managing events. The strongest word is "engagement": it is the word that lands on a family where Collins proposed to Elizabeth only days before. Then, effect. Why does Charlotte send her father to break the news? My answer: Charlotte sends her father to break the news because Sir William can announce the engagement formally; it embarrasses the Bennets and shows that Charlotte has taken the match Elizabeth refused.

> Sir William Lucas himself appeared, sent by his daughter to announce her engagement to the family (Chapter XXIII, paragraph 1)

Think-aloud: First, meaning. I read "Sir William Lucas himself appeared, sent by his daughter to announce her engagement to the family" slowly and put it in my own words: Sir William Lucas arrives at Longbourn, sent by Charlotte, to announce her engagement to Mr. Collins. Next, craft. I notice the formal "sent by his daughter," which makes Charlotte the one managing events. The strongest word is "engagement": it is the word that lands on a family where Collins proposed to Elizabeth only days before. Then, effect. Why does Charlotte send her father to break the news? My answer: Charlotte sends her father to break the news because Sir William can announce the engagement formally; it embarrasses the Bennets and shows that Charlotte has taken the match Elizabeth refused.

40–55 min · We do: guided annotation · We do (15 min)
Guided analysis of a second quotation; expected answers given.
Ask: What words in this line stand out, and what do they suggest? Expected: "Pitiable" is ironic; her pain is selfish. Mr. Bennet's amusement shows his detachment. Both responses connect to marriage and money. Ask: How does this line connect to marriage and money? Expected: Mrs. Bennet sees the match only as Longbourn passing to the Lucases one day. (Ironic "pitiable": she suffers only for herself.)

> Mrs. Bennet was really in a most pitiable state (Chapter XXIII, paragraph 16)

Ask: What words in this line stand out, and what do they suggest?
Expected answer: "Pitiable" is ironic; her pain is selfish. Mr. Bennet's amusement shows his detachment. Both responses connect to marriage and money.
Ask: How does this line connect to marriage and money?
Expected answer: Mrs. Bennet sees the match only as Longbourn passing to the Lucases one day. (Ironic "pitiable": she suffers only for herself.)

55–70 min · You do: independent annotation · You do (15 min)
Independent annotation and a claim-evidence-reasoning paragraph (exemplar given).
Annotate the chapter for characterization, structure (three marks with a margin note each), then write one claim-evidence-reasoning paragraph: what does this chapter suggest about family uproar? Then start your writing prompt at your assigned level (HS Sophomore: Analyze how Chapter XXIII develops the idea of family uproar. Make a precise claim, support it with at least three pieces of textual evidence, and explain how the author's use of characterization and tone / mood shapes that idea. Address one possible counterclaim.) Exemplar: The family's reactions to Charlotte's engagement reveal how marriage is measured by property. When the text says “Mrs. Bennet was really in a most pitiable state” (Chapter XXIII, paragraph 16), it shows this directly. Mrs. Bennet is "in a most pitiable state" not for Charlotte's happiness but because the Lucases may inherit Longbourn, while Mr. Bennet simply enjoys finding Charlotte "as foolish as his wife."
Task: Annotate the chapter for characterization, structure (three marks with a margin note each), then write one claim-evidence-reasoning paragraph: what does this chapter suggest about family uproar? Then start your writing prompt at your assigned level (HS Sophomore: Analyze how Chapter XXIII develops the idea of family uproar. Make a precise claim, support it with at least three pieces of textual evidence, and explain how the author's use of characterization and tone / mood shapes that idea. Address one possible counterclaim.)
Exemplar: The family's reactions to Charlotte's engagement reveal how marriage is measured by property. When the text says “Mrs. Bennet was really in a most pitiable state” (Chapter XXIII, paragraph 16), it shows this directly. Mrs. Bennet is "in a most pitiable state" not for Charlotte's happiness but because the Lucases may inherit Longbourn, while Mr. Bennet simply enjoys finding Charlotte "as foolish as his wife."

70–80 min · Discussion · We do (10 min)
Structured discussion from the 30 tiered questions, with facilitation notes.
Anchor question: Why is Mrs. Bennet especially bitter about Charlotte's engagement? Ask which parent's reaction is worse, and why.
Anchor question: Why is Mrs. Bennet especially bitter about Charlotte's engagement?
Facilitation: Ask which parent's reaction is worse, and why.

80–87 min · Exit ticket / chapter quiz · You do (7 min)
Chapter quiz in the app and an exit ticket (answer given).
Chapter quiz in the app, then: In one sentence, what does this chapter suggest about family uproar? Support it with one short quotation. Model answer: The family's reactions to Charlotte's engagement reveal how marriage is measured by property. (“Mrs. Bennet was really in a most pitiable state”, Chapter XXIII, paragraph 16). Accept any defensible claim backed by a quotation from the chapter; the answer key for the quiz is in the Quiz section.
Exit ticket: In one sentence, what does this chapter suggest about family uproar? Support it with one short quotation.
Answer: Model answer: The family's reactions to Charlotte's engagement reveal how marriage is measured by property. (“Mrs. Bennet was really in a most pitiable state”, Chapter XXIII, paragraph 16). Accept any defensible claim backed by a quotation from the chapter; the answer key for the quiz is in the Quiz section.

87–90 min · Closure · I do (3 min)
Summarize the lesson and preview the next reading.
Today we saw how characterization shapes family uproar. Key takeaway: Mrs. Bennet sees the match only as Longbourn passing to the Lucases one day.

Total: 90 minutes.

Teacher analysis (spoilers)

Literary elements

- Characterization: Sir William Lucas announces Charlotte's engagement; Mrs. Bennet refuses to believe it, then rages for days. Lydia blurts; Mr. Bennet is pleased to find Charlotte "as foolish as his wife."
- Structure: The chapter turns from Charlotte's news to Jane's silence: Bingley does not return, and Jane's hope is tested.

Themes and how they develop

- marriage and money: Mrs. Bennet sees the match only as Longbourn passing to the Lucases one day.

Symbols and motifs

- silence and reserve: What characters leave unsaid (Darcy's reserve, Jane's composure, Elizabeth's secrets) drives misunderstanding. In this chapter: “and Charlotte there was a restraint which kept them mutually silent on the subject; and Elizabeth felt persuaded that no real confidence" (Chapter XXIII, paragraph 9).

- letters: Letters carry news, reveal character and change minds; Darcy's letter is the turning point of the novel. In this chapter: "Jane had sent Caroline an early answer to her letter, and was counting the days till she might reasonably hope to" (Chapter XXIII, paragraph 10).

Key quotations (checked against the reading text)

- "Sir William Lucas himself appeared, sent by his daughter to announce her engagement to the family" (Chapter XXIII, paragraph 1) The news delivered formally, a social ritual.
- "Mrs. Bennet was really in a most pitiable state" (Chapter XXIII, paragraph 16) Ironic "pitiable": she suffers only for herself.
- "Charlotte Lucas, whom he had been used to think tolerably sensible, was as foolish as his wife" (Chapter XXIII, paragraph 6) Mr. Bennet's pleasure in folly.

Model claim-evidence-reasoning

Claim: The family's reactions to Charlotte's engagement reveal how marriage is measured by property.
Evidence: "Mrs. Bennet was really in a most pitiable state" (Chapter XXIII, paragraph 16)
Reasoning: Mrs. Bennet is "in a most pitiable state" not for Charlotte's happiness but because the Lucases may inherit Longbourn, while Mr. Bennet simply enjoys finding Charlotte "as foolish as his wife."

Vocabulary with etymology notes

Word	Definition (in this sentence)	In context	Word history
unfeeling (adjective)	cold and unkind	The united efforts of his two unfeeling sisters and of his overpowering friend, assisted by the attractions of Miss Darcy and the amusements of London, might be too much, she feared, for the strength of his attachment.
overpowering (adjective)	very strong; impossible to resist	The united efforts of his two unfeeling sisters and of his overpowering friend, assisted by the attractions of Miss Darcy and the amusements of London, might be too much, she feared, for the strength of his attachment.
luckily (adverb)	by good fortune	He was too happy, however, to need much attention; and luckily for the others, the business of lovemaking relieved them from a great deal of his company.
abhorrence (noun)	hate coupled with disgust	As her successor in that house, she regarded her with jealous abhorrence.

appease (verb)	pacify; calm	Nothing could console and nothing appease her.	“appease”: Origin: Old French apeser (“to pacify”). (Liber et Libri origin note, https://en.wiktionary.org/wiki/appease#Etymology)
murmurs (noun)	quiet complaints	Such were the gentle murmurs of Mrs.	“murmurs”: Origin of “murmur”: Old French murmure; earlier Latin murmur (“murmur”). (Liber et Libri origin note, https://en.wiktionary.org/wiki/murmur#Etymology)
doubting (verb)	feeling unsure	Elizabeth was sitting with her mother and sisters, reflecting on what she had heard, and doubting whether she were authorised to mention it, when Sir William Lucas himself appeared, sent by his daughter to announce her engagement to the family.
solemnity (noun)	a trait of dignified seriousness	Collins arrived on Tuesday, addressed to their father, and written with all the solemnity of gratitude which a twelvemonth’s abode in the family might have prompted.	“solemnity”: Origin: Old French solemnite; earlier Latin sollemnitās. (Liber et Libri origin note, https://en.wiktionary.org/wiki/solemnity#Etymology)

Discussion questions

1. Why is Mrs. Bennet especially bitter about Charlotte's engagement?
2. Where does characterization appear in this chapter, and what effect does it have? Point to one passage.
3. How does this chapter connect to the book's larger concern with marriage and money?

Classroom discussion questions (30, tiered)

Wait time after every question (3 s for DOK 1, 5 s for DOK 2, 8 to 10 s for DOK 3 and 4); think-pair-share on DOK 3 and 4; answer each response with a follow-up probe; close with student-generated questions. Focus sets by rigor level: Scaffolded support: 1, 2, 3, 4, 5, 6, 11, 12, 13, 14, 21, 22; HS Freshman: 1, 2, 3, 4, 5, 12, 13, 14, 15, 22, 23, 24; HS Sophomore: 1, 2, 3, 4, 13, 14, 15, 16, 17, 23, 24, 25; HS Junior: 1, 2, 3, 14, 15, 16, 17, 18, 24, 25, 26, 27; HS Senior: 1, 2, 3, 15, 16, 17, 18, 25, 26, 27, 28, 29; AP: 1, 2, 16, 17, 18, 19, 20, 26, 27, 28, 29, 30; College Freshman: 1, 2, 17, 18, 19, 20, 21, 22, 27, 28, 29, 30; College Sophomore: 1, 2, 11, 18, 19, 20, 21, 22, 23, 28, 29, 30; College Junior: 1, 11, 12, 19, 20, 21, 22, 23, 24, 25, 29, 30; College Senior: 1, 11, 12, 13, 20, 21, 22, 23, 24, 25, 26, 30; Graduate / PhD: 1, 11, 12, 13, 21, 22, 23, 24, 25, 26, 27, 28

Literal / recall

1. Who announces the engagement? [DOK 1 · coldCallWithSupport · wait 3 s · AP: unit standards] Look for: Sir William Lucas
2. How does Mrs. Bennet react to Sir William's news of Charlotte's engagement? [DOK 1 · turnAndTalk · wait 3 s · AP: unit standards] Look for: With disbelief and resentment
3. What does Jane wait for? [DOK 1 · coldCallWithSupport · wait 3 s · AP: unit standards] Look for: News from Bingley
4. Whom does Elizabeth suspect of separating Jane and Bingley? [DOK 1 · turnAndTalk · wait 3 s · AP: unit standards] Look for: His sisters and Darcy

5. Why does Collins's engagement trouble Mrs. Bennet? [DOK 1 · coldCallWithSupport · wait 3 s · AP: unit standards] Look for: Charlotte will become mistress of Longbourn
6. Retell the three most important events of "Chapter XXIII" in order, in one sentence each. [DOK 1 · turnAndTalk · wait 3 s · AP: unit standards] Look for: Sir William announces the engagement; Mrs. Bennet is disbelieving and resentful. Jane receives no word from Bingley, and Elizabeth grows more suspicious of Darcy's and the sisters' influence.
7. Which characters appear or are mentioned in "Chapter XXIII"? Name two and one thing each says or does. [DOK 1 · coldCallWithSupport · wait 3 s · AP: unit standards] Look for: Names and actions taken from the chapter; check against the teacher summary.
8. Where and when does "Chapter XXIII" take place? Point to the line that tells you. [DOK 1 · turnAndTalk · wait 3 s · AP: unit standards] Look for: A place/time detail quoted from the chapter.
9. Reread: "The united efforts of his two unfeeling sisters and of his overpowering friend, assisted by the attractions of Miss Darcy and the amusements of London, might be too much, she feared, for the strength of his attachment." What does "unfeeling" mean here, and what is literally happening in this line? [DOK 1 · turnAndTalk · wait 3 s · AP: unit standards] Look for: unfeeling: cold and unkind.
10. Reread: "The united efforts of his two unfeeling sisters and of his overpowering friend, assisted by the attractions of Miss Darcy and the amusements of London, might be too much, she feared, for the strength of his attachment." What does "overpowering" mean here, and what is literally happening in this line? [DOK 1 · turnAndTalk · wait 3 s · AP: unit standards] Look for: overpowering: very strong; impossible to resist.

Inferential / analytical

1. What does "Chapter XXIII" suggest about family uproar? State the inference and the line that supports it. [DOK 2 · thinkPairShare · wait 5 s · AP-LIT.LAN] Look for: Elizabeth's distrust of Darcy deepens—partly earned, partly prejudice.
2. Find one example of characterization in this chapter. What does it reveal that a plain statement would not? [DOK 2 · followUp · wait 5 s · AP-LIT.CHR] Look for: Look for what characters say, do and think, and how others react to them.
3. How does the tone / mood in this chapter shape what we understand about family uproar? [DOK 3 · thinkPairShare · wait 8 s · AP-LIT.FIG] Look for: Look for word choices that reveal the narrator's attitude or the scene's feeling.

   Answer guidance: A defensible line of argument: The family's reactions to Charlotte's engagement reveal how marriage is measured by property. Useful evidence: "Sir William Lucas himself appeared, sent by his daughter to announce her engagement to the family" (Chapter XXIII, paragraph 1): The news delivered formally, a social ritual. Theme link: Mrs. Bennet sees the match only as Longbourn passing to the Lucases one day. Credit any position that is supported by quotation and reasoning; push one-sided answers to address the strongest counterpoint.
4. In the passage that begins "Elizabeth was sitting with her mother and sisters, reflecting on what she had heard, and doubting whether she were authorised to mention it, when Sir William Lucas himself…", why might Austen have chosen these particular words? Pick two and explain their connotations. [DOK 2 · followUp · wait 5 s · AP-LIT.FIG] Look for: Diction analysis of two words in the anchor passage.
5. What causes the main turn in "Chapter XXIII", and what effect is it likely to have on what follows? [DOK 2 · followUp · wait 5 s · AP-LIT.STR] Look for: Sir William announces the engagement; Mrs. Bennet is disbelieving and resentful. Jane receives no word from Bingley, and Elizabeth grows more suspicious of Darcy's and the sisters' influence.

6. How does “Chapter XXIII” build on “Chapter XXII”? Name one link of cause and effect. [DOK 3 · thinkPairShare · wait 8 s · AP-LIT.STR] Look for: A causal or structural link between this and the previous chapter.
   Answer guidance: A defensible line of argument: The family's reactions to Charlotte's engagement reveal how marriage is measured by property. Useful evidence: “Mrs. Bennet was really in a most pitiable state” (Chapter XXIII, paragraph 16): Ironic "pitiable": she suffers only for herself. On structure: The chapter turns from Charlotte's news to Jane's silence: Bingley does not return, and Jane's hope is tested. Credit any position that is supported by quotation and reasoning; push one-sided answers to address the strongest counterpoint.
7. What can we infer about a character's motives from what they say and do here, as opposed to what they claim? [DOK 3 · followUp · wait 8 s · AP-LIT.CHR] Look for: An inference about motive supported by a quoted line.
   Answer guidance: A defensible line of argument: The family's reactions to Charlotte's engagement reveal how marriage is measured by property. Useful evidence: “Charlotte Lucas, whom he had been used to think tolerably sensible, was as foolish as his wife” (Chapter XXIII, paragraph 6): Mr. Bennet's pleasure in folly. On characterization: Sir William Lucas announces Charlotte's engagement; Mrs. Bennet refuses to believe it, then rages for days. Lydia blurts; Mr. Bennet is pleased to find Charlotte "as foolish as his wife." Credit any position that is supported by quotation and reasoning; push one-sided answers to address the strongest counterpoint.
8. The bell-ringer asked: “Why is Mrs. Bennet especially bitter about Charlotte's engagement?” Now that we have read closely, how would you revise your first answer, and which line changed your mind? [DOK 2 · thinkPairShare · wait 5 s · AP-LIT.LAN] Look for: A revised answer anchored in the text.
9. Where does irony appear, and how does it connect this chapter to the larger concern with marriage and money? [DOK 3 · followUp · wait 8 s · AP-LIT.NAR] Look for: Look for gaps between what characters expect or say and what is true.
   Answer guidance: A defensible line of argument: The family's reactions to Charlotte's engagement reveal how marriage is measured by property. Useful evidence: “Sir William Lucas himself appeared, sent by his daughter to announce her engagement to the family” (Chapter XXIII, paragraph 1): The news delivered formally, a social ritual. Theme link: Mrs. Bennet sees the match only as Longbourn passing to the Lucases one day. Credit any position that is supported by quotation and reasoning; push one-sided answers to address the strongest counterpoint.
10. Background: Engagements reshaped family alliances and resentments. How does knowing this change the way you read one moment in the chapter? [DOK 3 · thinkPairShare · wait 8 s · AP-LIT.SET] Look for: A specific moment reread in light of the context.
    Answer guidance: A defensible line of argument: The family's reactions to Charlotte's engagement reveal how marriage is measured by property. Useful evidence: “Mrs. Bennet was really in a most pitiable state” (Chapter XXIII, paragraph 16): Ironic "pitiable": she suffers only for herself. Theme link: Mrs. Bennet sees the match only as Longbourn passing to the Lucases one day. Credit any position that is supported by quotation and reasoning; push one-sided answers to address the strongest counterpoint.

Evaluative / synthesis / creative

1. A critic might argue: “Elizabeth's distrust of Darcy deepens—partly earned, partly prejudice.” How far do you agree? Take a stand and defend it with two lines from the chapter. [DOK 3 · fourCorners · wait 8 s · AP-LIT.LAN] Look for: A defended position with evidence and one counterpoint.
   Answer guidance: A defensible line of argument: The family's reactions to Charlotte's engagement reveal how marriage is measured by property. Useful evidence: “Charlotte Lucas, whom he had been used to think tolerably sensible, was as foolish as his wife” (Chapter XXIII, paragraph 6): Mr. Bennet's pleasure in folly. Theme link: Mrs. Bennet sees the match only as Longbourn passing to the Lucases one day. Credit any position that is supported by quotation and reasoning; push one-sided answers to address the strongest counterpoint.

2. Which character in this chapter acts most wisely, and which least? Judge them by a standard you name. [DOK 3 · thinkPairShare · wait 8 s · AP-LIT.CHR, AP-LIT.LAN] Look for: An evaluation using an explicit criterion and evidence.

   Answer guidance: A defensible line of argument: The family's reactions to Charlotte's engagement reveal how marriage is measured by property. Useful evidence: “Sir William Lucas himself appeared, sent by his daughter to announce her engagement to the family” (Chapter XXIII, paragraph 1): The news delivered formally, a social ritual. On characterization: Sir William Lucas announces Charlotte's engagement; Mrs. Bennet refuses to believe it, then rages for days. Lydia blurts; Mr. Bennet is pleased to find Charlotte "as foolish as his wife." Credit any position that is supported by quotation and reasoning; push one-sided answers to address the strongest counterpoint.

3. Rewrite one moment of “Chapter XXIII” from the point of view of a different character. What does the new angle reveal or hide about family uproar? [DOK 4 · thinkPairShare · wait 8 s · AP-LIT.LAN, AP-LIT.NAR] Look for: A creative product with a rationale tied to the text.

   Answer guidance: A defensible line of argument: The family's reactions to Charlotte's engagement reveal how marriage is measured by property. Useful evidence: “Mrs. Bennet was really in a most pitiable state” (Chapter XXIII, paragraph 16): Ironic "pitiable": she suffers only for herself. Theme link: Mrs. Bennet sees the match only as Longbourn passing to the Lucases one day. Credit any position that is supported by quotation and reasoning; push one-sided answers to address the strongest counterpoint.

4. Write three questions of your own about “Chapter XXIII”: one recall, one “why/how”, and one “should/what if”. Trade with a partner and answer theirs. [DOK 3 · studentGenerated · wait 8 s · AP-LIT.LAN] Look for: Student-generated questions at three levels.

   Answer guidance: A defensible line of argument: The family's reactions to Charlotte's engagement reveal how marriage is measured by property. Useful evidence: “Charlotte Lucas, whom he had been used to think tolerably sensible, was as foolish as his wife” (Chapter XXIII, paragraph 6): Mr. Bennet's pleasure in folly. Theme link: Mrs. Bennet sees the match only as Longbourn passing to the Lucases one day. Credit any position that is supported by quotation and reasoning; push one-sided answers to address the strongest counterpoint.

5. Connect this chapter to class and social mobility: is the link strong or weak so far? What would Austen need to show next to strengthen it? [DOK 4 · socraticCircle · wait 8 s · AP-LIT.LAN] Look for: A judgment of thematic development across the work.

   Answer guidance: A defensible line of argument: The family's reactions to Charlotte's engagement reveal how marriage is measured by property. Useful evidence: “Sir William Lucas himself appeared, sent by his daughter to announce her engagement to the family” (Chapter XXIII, paragraph 1): The news delivered formally, a social ritual. Theme link: Mrs. Bennet sees the match only as Longbourn passing to the Lucases one day. Credit any position that is supported by quotation and reasoning; push one-sided answers to address the strongest counterpoint.

6. Is the characterization in this chapter effective, or does it feel heavy-handed? Evaluate it as a reader would in a review. [DOK 3 · fourCorners · wait 8 s · AP-LIT.CHR, AP-LIT.LAN] Look for: An evaluative judgment with criteria and evidence.

Answer guidance: A defensible line of argument: The family's reactions to Charlotte's engagement reveal how marriage is measured by property. Useful evidence: “Mrs. Bennet was really in a most pitiable state” (Chapter XXIII, paragraph 16): Ironic "pitiable": she suffers only for herself. On characterization: Sir William Lucas announces Charlotte's engagement; Mrs. Bennet refuses to believe it, then rages for days. Lydia blurts; Mr. Bennet is pleased to find Charlotte "as foolish as his wife." Credit any position that is supported by quotation and reasoning; push one-sided answers to address the strongest counterpoint.

7. Compare how “Chapter XXIII” treats family uproar with how another text, film or event you know treats a similar idea. What does Pride and Prejudice see that the other misses? [DOK 4 · socraticCircle · wait 8 s · AP-LIT.LAN] Look for: A cross-text synthesis.

   Answer guidance: A defensible line of argument: The family's reactions to Charlotte's engagement reveal how marriage is measured by property. Useful evidence: “Charlotte Lucas, whom he had been used to think tolerably sensible, was as foolish as his wife” (Chapter XXIII, paragraph 6): Mr. Bennet's pleasure in folly. Theme link: Mrs. Bennet sees the match only as Longbourn passing to the Lucases one day. Credit any position that is supported by quotation and reasoning; push one-sided answers to address the strongest counterpoint.

8. Predict what “Chapter XXIV” will bring, using two clues from this chapter. After reading, evaluate your prediction. [DOK 3 · thinkPairShare · wait 8 s · AP-LIT.LAN, AP-LIT.STR] Look for: A prediction or judgment justified with textual clues.

   Answer guidance: A defensible line of argument: The family's reactions to Charlotte's engagement reveal how marriage is measured by property. Useful evidence: “Sir William Lucas himself appeared, sent by his daughter to announce her engagement to the family” (Chapter XXIII, paragraph 1): The news delivered formally, a social ritual. Theme link: Mrs. Bennet sees the match only as Longbourn passing to the Lucases one day. Credit any position that is supported by quotation and reasoning; push one-sided answers to address the strongest counterpoint.

9. Design a one-paragraph modern adaptation of this chapter (setting, characters, conflict). What must stay the same for it to still be about family uproar? [DOK 4 · thinkPairShare · wait 8 s · AP-LIT.LAN] Look for: A creative transfer that keeps the core idea.

   Answer guidance: A defensible line of argument: The family's reactions to Charlotte's engagement reveal how marriage is measured by property. Useful evidence: “Mrs. Bennet was really in a most pitiable state” (Chapter XXIII, paragraph 16): Ironic "pitiable": she suffers only for herself. Theme link: Mrs. Bennet sees the match only as Longbourn passing to the Lucases one day. Credit any position that is supported by quotation and reasoning; push one-sided answers to address the strongest counterpoint.

10. What question would you most like to ask Jane Austen about this chapter, and what answer do you think the text itself gives? [DOK 4 · studentGenerated · wait 8 s · AP-LIT.LAN] Look for: A student-generated question answered from evidence.

    Answer guidance: A defensible line of argument: The family's reactions to Charlotte's engagement reveal how marriage is measured by property. Useful evidence: “Charlotte Lucas, whom he had been used to think tolerably sensible, was as foolish as his wife” (Chapter XXIII, paragraph 6): Mr. Bennet's pleasure in folly. Theme link: Mrs. Bennet sees the match only as Longbourn passing to the Lucases one day. Credit any position that is supported by quotation and reasoning; push one-sided answers to address the strongest counterpoint.

Annotation focus

- Characterization: look for what characters say, do and think, and how others react to them (anchor passage in the We do segment)
- Also notice Tone / mood: word choices that reveal the narrator's attitude or the scene's feeling
- Also notice Irony: gaps between what characters expect or say and what is true

Chapter quiz: item bank (all eleven rigor versions)

1. [mc · recall · DOK 1] In the line "He was too happy, however, to need much attention; and luckily for the others, the business of lovemaking relieved them from a great deal of his company.", what does "luckily" most nearly mean?

   A. qualities that make someone attractive

   B. by good fortune

   C. in a strenuous manner; strongly or vigorously

   D. kept from leaving

   Key: B (by good fortune)

2. [fill · recall · DOK 1] Complete the quotation from Chapter XXIII, paragraph 1: "With many _____ to them, and much self-gratulation on the prospect of a connection between the houses, he unfolded the matter—to an audience not merely wondering, but incredulous" Word bank: compliments, disagreeable, astonishment, odious

   Key: compliments

3. [mc · recall · DOK 1] How does Mrs. Bennet react to Sir William's news of Charlotte's engagement?

   A. Sympathy

   B. With disbelief and resentment

   C. Relief

   D. Joy

   Key: B (With disbelief and resentment)

4. [mc · recall · DOK 1] Which word completes this sentence from Chapter XXIII, paragraph 18? "My dear, do not give way to such gloomy _____."

   A. tranquillity

   B. thoughts

   C. odious

   D. prevailed

   Key: B (thoughts)

5. [fill · recall · DOK 1] Fill in the blank with the vocabulary word that fits: "Elizabeth was sitting with her mother and sisters, reflecting on what she had heard, and _____ whether she were authorised to mention it, when Sir William Lucas himself appeared, sent by his daughter to announce her engagement to the family." Word bank: doubting, overpowering, luckily, unfeeling

   Key: doubting

6. [fill · recall · DOK 1] Fill in the blank with the vocabulary word that fits: "Such were the gentle _____ of Mrs." Word bank: luckily, overpowering, murmurs, unfeeling

   Key: murmurs

7. [fill · recall · DOK 1] Complete the quotation from Chapter XXIII, paragraph 6: “Charlotte Lucas, whom he had been used to think _____ sensible, was as foolish as his wife”

   Key: tolerably

8. [fill · recall · DOK 1] Fill in the blank with the vocabulary word that fits: “Nothing could console and nothing _____ her.” Word bank: overpowering, unfeeling, appease, luckily

   Key: appease

9. [mc · recall · DOK 1] Whom does Elizabeth suspect of separating Jane and Bingley?

   A. His sisters and Darcy

   B. Collins

   C. Charlotte

   D. Wickham

   Key: A (His sisters and Darcy)

10. [mc · recall · DOK 1] Why does Collins's engagement trouble Mrs. Bennet?

    A. She wanted Collins herself

    B. Charlotte will become mistress of Longbourn

    C. It is too expensive

    D. She dislikes clergy

    Key: B (Charlotte will become mistress of Longbourn)

11. [short · inference · DOK 2] What does this passage from Chapter XXIII, paragraph 18 reveal about the character or situation? “Let us flatter ourselves that I may be the survivor.” Answer in two or three sentences with one detail.

    Sample answer: The passage (Chapter XXIII, paragraph 18) shows the situation turning on first impressions and prejudice: Mrs. Bennet sees the match only as Longbourn passing to the Lucases one day. The words “ourselves” and “survivor” are the proof, because they show how the moment looks to the people in it. They suggest more than the narrator states outright.

12. [short · inference · DOK 2] What does this passage from Chapter XXIII, paragraph 2 reveal about the character or situation? “Sir William, how can you tell such a story?—Do not you know that Mr. Collins wants to marry Lizzy?” Answer in two or three sentences with one detail.

    Sample answer: The passage (Chapter XXIII, paragraph 2) shows the situation turning on first impressions and prejudice: Mrs. Bennet sees the match only as Longbourn passing to the Lucases one day. The words its wording are the proof, because they show how the moment looks to the people in it. They suggest more than the narrator states outright.

13. [short · inference · DOK 2] What can you infer from this line? “Sir William Lucas himself appeared, sent by his daughter to announce her engagement to the family” (Chapter XXIII, paragraph 1) Answer in two or three sentences with one detail.

    Sample answer: The news delivered formally, a social ritual. The evidence is “Sir William Lucas himself appeared, sent by his daughter to announce her engagement to the family” (Chapter XXIII, paragraph 1).

14. [mc · analysis · DOK 3] In this chapter, which theme does the following most directly develop? Mrs. Bennet sees the match only as Longbourn passing to the Lucases one day.

    A. Pride and self-knowledge

    B. Marriage and money

    C. Class and social mobility

    D. First impressions and prejudice

Key: B (Marriage and money)

15. [short · analysis · DOK 3] Analyze how the word choice in this passage from Chapter XXIII, paragraph 5 shapes its tone: “In the first place, she persisted in disbelieving the whole of the matter; secondly, she was very sure that Mr. Collins had been taken in; thirdly, she trusted that they would never be happy together; and fourthly, that the match might be…” Pick two words and explain their effect.
Sample answer: The words “disbelieving” and “persisted” (Chapter XXIII, paragraph 5) make the tone heavy and deliberate rather than neutral. That weight points the reader to class and social mobility: Mrs. Bennet sees the match only as Longbourn passing to the Lucases one day. The author chooses them so the moment feels significant instead of passing.

16. [short · synthesis · DOK 4] Connect this passage from Chapter XXIII, paragraph 13 to the story's treatment of women's limited choices: “Even Elizabeth began to fear—not that Bingley was indifferent—but that his sisters would be successful in keeping him away.” Use one other moment from the story as well.
Sample answer: This passage (Chapter XXIII, paragraph 13) develops women's limited choices: Mrs. Bennet sees the match only as Longbourn passing to the Lucases one day. Its words “indifferent” and “successful” carry that idea into this moment. The same concern returns in “As for Jane, her anxiety under this suspence was, of course, more painful than Elizabeth’s; but whatever she felt she…” (Chapter XXIII, paragraph 14), so the two passages read as a pattern, not a single moment. Together they show the story treating women's limited choices as central.

17. [mc · recall · DOK 1] Which word completes this sentence from Chapter XXIII, paragraph 5? “Nor did that day wear out her _____.”
    A. contrary
    B. resentment
    C. sometimes
    D. complained

    Key: B (resentment)

18. [mc · recall · DOK 1] Who announces the engagement?
    A. Charlotte
    B. Collins
    C. Mr. Bennet
    D. Sir William Lucas

    Key: D (Sir William Lucas)

19. [mc · recall · DOK 1] What does Jane wait for?
    A. Money
    B. News from Bingley
    C. Lydia
    D. A letter from Darcy

    Key: B (News from Bingley)

20. [mc · recall · DOK 1] In the line “As her successor in that house, she regarded her with jealous abhorrence.”, what does “abhorrence” most nearly mean?
    A. hate coupled with disgust
    B. reasons for doing something
    C. attract; cause to be enamored
    D. marked by casual disrespect

Key: A (hate coupled with disgust)

21. [mc · recall · DOK 1] In the line “The united efforts of his two unfeeling sisters and of his overpowering friend, assisted by the attractions of Miss Darcy and the amusements of London, might be too much, she feared, for the strength of his attachment.”, what does “overpowering” most nearly mean?

    A. criticizing strongly

    B. very strong; impossible to resist

    C. people living in the same house

    D. a long dining-room cabinet with a flat top

    Key: B (very strong; impossible to resist)

22. [fill · recall · DOK 1] Complete the quotation from Chapter XXIII, paragraph 16: “Mrs. Bennet was really in a most _____ state”

    Key: pitiable

23. [mc · recall · DOK 1] Which word completes this sentence from Chapter XXIII, paragraph 12? “Day after day passed away without bringing any other tidings of him than the report which shortly _____ in Meryton of his coming no more to Netherfield the whole winter”

    A. sometimes

    B. prevailed

    C. tranquillity

    D. reasonably

    Key: B (prevailed)

24. [fill · recall · DOK 1] Fill in the blank with the vocabulary word that fits: “Collins arrived on Tuesday, addressed to their father, and written with all the _____ of gratitude which a twelvemonth’s abode in the family might have prompted.” Word bank: luckily, overpowering, unfeeling, solemnity

    Key: solemnity

25. [short · analysis · DOK 3] Analyze how the word choice in this passage from Chapter XXIII, paragraph 11 shapes its tone: “It was very strange that he should come to Longbourn instead of to Lucas Lodge; it was also very inconvenient and exceedingly troublesome.” Pick two words and explain their effect.

    Sample answer: The words “inconvenient” and “troublesome” (Chapter XXIII, paragraph 11) make the tone heavy and deliberate rather than neutral. That weight points the reader to pride and self-knowledge: Mrs. Bennet sees the match only as Longbourn passing to the Lucases one day. The author chooses them so the moment feels significant instead of passing.

26. [mc · analysis · DOK 3] Which literary element does this describe in “Chapter XXIII”? The chapter turns from Charlotte's news to Jane's silence: Bingley does not return, and Jane's hope is tested.

    A. Structure

    B. Simile

    C. Conflict

    D. Point of view

    Key: A (Structure)

27. [short · synthesis · DOK 4] Connect this passage from Chapter XXIII, paragraph 16 to the story's treatment of marriage and money: “The very mention of anything concerning the match threw her into an agony of ill humour, and wherever she went she was sure of hearing it talked of.” Use one other moment from the story as well.

Sample answer: This passage (Chapter XXIII, paragraph 16) develops marriage and money: Mrs. Bennet sees the match only as Longbourn passing to the Lucases one day. Its words "concerning" and "anything" carry that idea into this moment. The same concern returns in "Whenever Charlotte came to see them she concluded her to be anticipating the hour of possession" (Chapter XXIII, paragraph 16), so the two passages read as a pattern, not a single moment. Together they show the story treating marriage and money as central.

28. [fill · recall · DOK 1] Complete the quotation from Chapter XXIII, paragraph 1: "Sir William Lucas himself appeared, sent by his daughter to announce her _____ to the family"
    Key: engagement

29. [fill · recall · DOK 1] Complete the quotation from Chapter XXIII, paragraph 10: "Jane had sent Caroline an early answer to her letter, and was counting the days till she might _____ hope to hear again." Word bank: thoughts, reasonably, sometimes, disagreeable
    Key: reasonably

30. [mc · analysis · DOK 3] Which literary element does this describe in "Chapter XXIII"? Sir William Lucas announces Charlotte's engagement; Mrs. Bennet refuses to believe it, then rages for days. Lydia blurts; Mr. Bennet is pleased to find Charlotte 'as foolish as his wife.'
    A. Alliteration
    B. Personification
    C. Characterization
    D. Tone / mood

    Key: C (Characterization)

31. [mc · inference · DOK 2 · AP: AP-LIT.LAN] Which choice best states a central concern of "Chapter XXIII"?
    A. Music, wit and manners
    B. Embarrassing relations
    C. Family uproar
    D. A disastrous ball

    Key: C (Family uproar)

32. [short · analysis · DOK 3 · AP: AP-LIT.FIG] Analyze how the word choice in this passage from Chapter XXIII, paragraph 24 shapes its tone: "How anyone could have the conscience to entail away an estate from one's own daughters I cannot understand; and all for the sake of Mr. Collins too!—Why should he have it more than anybody else?" Pick two words and explain their effect.
    Sample answer: The words "conscience" and "understand" (Chapter XXIII, paragraph 24) make the tone heavy and deliberate rather than neutral. That weight points the reader to class and social mobility: Mrs. Bennet sees the match only as Longbourn passing to the Lucases one day. The author chooses them so the moment feels significant instead of passing.

33. [short · analysis · DOK 3 · AP: AP-LIT.FIG] Analyze the word choice in "Charlotte Lucas, whom he had been used to think tolerably sensible, was as foolish as his wife" (Chapter XXIII, paragraph 6). Pick two words and explain what they suggest.
    Sample answer: Mr. Bennet's pleasure in folly. The evidence is "Charlotte Lucas, whom he had been used to think tolerably sensible, was as foolish as his wife" (Chapter XXIII, paragraph 6). This develops marriage and money: Mrs. Bennet sees the match only as Longbourn passing to the Lucases one day. The words "tolerably" and "sensible" carry that meaning: they are the charged choices in the line, and changing either would soften the effect.

34. [short · synthesis · DOK 4 · AP: AP-LIT.LAN] Synthesis: trace how marriage and money develops from Chapter XXII to Chapter XXIII. Use one quotation from each.

Sample answer: Earlier, in Chapter XXII, paragraph 17, the text reads “I am not romantic you know. I never was” — Charlotte's honesty. In Chapter XXIII, “Sir William Lucas himself appeared, sent by his daughter to announce her engagement to the family” (Chapter XXIII, paragraph 1), which shows the news delivered formally, a social ritual. Mrs. Bennet sees the match only as Longbourn passing to the Lucases one day.

35. [short · analysis · DOK 3 · AP: AP-LIT.LAN] Claim: The family's reactions to Charlotte's engagement reveal how marriage is measured by property. Explain how this evidence supports the claim: “Mrs. Bennet was really in a most pitiable state” (Chapter XXIII, paragraph 16).

    Sample answer: Mrs. Bennet is "in a most pitiable state" not for Charlotte's happiness but because the Lucases may inherit Longbourn, while Mr. Bennet simply enjoys finding Charlotte "as foolish as his wife.". The evidence is “Mrs. Bennet was really in a most pitiable state” (Chapter XXIII, paragraph 16) — Ironic "pitiable": she suffers only for herself. This develops marriage and money: Mrs. Bennet sees the match only as Longbourn passing to the Lucases one day.

36. [short · synthesis · DOK 4 · Dual Credit (Indiana College Core): ICC-WC-1.5] Close reading: how do the diction and syntax of “Mrs. Bennet was really in a most pitiable state” (Chapter XXIII, paragraph 16) shape its meaning? Consider a second, competing reading.

    Sample answer: Ironic "pitiable": she suffers only for herself. The evidence is “Mrs. Bennet was really in a most pitiable state” (Chapter XXIII, paragraph 16). This develops marriage and money: Mrs. Bennet sees the match only as Longbourn passing to the Lucases one day. The words “pitiable” and “really” carry that meaning: they are the charged choices in the line, and changing either would soften the effect. Mrs. Bennet is "in a most pitiable state" not for Charlotte's happiness but because the Lucases may inherit Longbourn, while Mr. Bennet simply enjoys finding Charlotte "as foolish as his wife.".

37. [fill · recall · DOK 1 · Program outcome: LeL-C2-LIT-1] Complete the quotation from Chapter XXIII, paragraph 15: “The chief of every day was spent by him at Lucas Lodge, and he _____ returned to Longbourn only in time to make an apology for his absence before the family went to bed.” Word bank: sometimes, reasonably, contrary, odious

    Key: sometimes

38. [mc · inference · DOK 2 · Program outcome: LeL-C2-LIT-1] What does this passage most clearly show? “Charlotte Lucas, whom he had been used to think tolerably sensible, was as foolish as his wife” (Chapter XXIII, paragraph 6)

    A. Darcy's reply suggests kinship between them.

    B. "Wisely" is ironic: his caution will deepen her misjudgment.

    C. Comic speed: marriage as a choice among interchangeable daughters.

    D. Mr. Bennet's pleasure in folly.

    Key: D (Mr. Bennet's pleasure in folly.)

39. [short · inference · DOK 2 · Program outcome: LeL-C2-LIT-1] What can you infer from this line? “Mrs. Bennet was really in a most pitiable state” (Chapter XXIII, paragraph 16) Answer in two or three sentences with one detail.

    Sample answer: Ironic "pitiable": she suffers only for herself. The evidence is “Mrs. Bennet was really in a most pitiable state” (Chapter XXIII, paragraph 16). This develops marriage and money: Mrs. Bennet sees the match only as Longbourn passing to the Lucases one day.

Rigor version	Items (in order)	Mix
Scaffolded support	1, 2, 3, 4, 5, 6, 7, 8, 9, 10, 11, 12, 13, 14, 15, 16	recall 10, inference 3, analysis 2, synthesis 1

HS Freshman	17, 18, 19, 20, 21, 22, 23, 24, 3, 2, 12, 11, 25, 14, 26, 27	recall 10, inference 2, analysis 3, synthesis 1
HS Sophomore	2, 5, 4, 28, 20, 17, 7, 29, 10, 11, 12, 30, 15, 14, 16, 27	recall 9, inference 2, analysis 3, synthesis 2
HS Junior	17, 5, 29, 2, 28, 21, 20, 11, 12, 31, 32, 33, 25, 15, 27, 34	recall 7, inference 3, analysis 4, synthesis 2
HS Senior	18, 5, 6, 22, 19, 8, 23, 12, 11, 30, 14, 15, 25, 27, 34, 16	recall 7, inference 2, analysis 4, synthesis 3
AP	5, 18, 19, 6, 11, 12, 14, 25, 33, 30, 35, 15, 32, 27, 16, 34	recall 4, inference 2, analysis 7, synthesis 3
College Freshman	8, 6, 9, 10, 11, 12, 31, 13, 14, 15, 32, 25, 36, 16, 34, 27	recall 4, inference 4, analysis 4, synthesis 4
College Sophomore	37, 24, 3, 38, 12, 39, 11, 13, 25, 15, 32, 26, 14, 34, 16, 27	recall 3, inference 5, analysis 5, synthesis 3
College Junior	1, 10, 29, 3, 28, 11, 12, 25, 26, 15, 32, 14, 36, 16, 27, 34	recall 5, inference 2, analysis 5, synthesis 4
College Senior	23, 28, 22, 6, 5, 38, 12, 11, 14, 15, 32, 25, 26, 34, 16, 27	recall 5, inference 3, analysis 5, synthesis 3
Graduate / PhD	5, 10, 3, 1, 8, 12, 11, 14, 15, 32, 30, 25, 33, 34, 27, 16	recall 5, inference 2, analysis 6, synthesis 3

Writing prompts (eleven rigor levels)

Scaffolded support (250 words; AP: see unit standards): Supported track (work from the passage your teacher selects). In “Chapter XXIII,” how does Austen show family uproar? Write a paragraph that states your claim, quotes two details from the passage, and explains how each detail supports your idea. Use the characterization you noticed as one piece of evidence.

HS Freshman (350 words; AP: see unit standards): In Chapter XXIII, how does Austen develop the idea of family uproar? State a clear claim, support it with two or three quotations, and explain how the characterization in the chapter helps build that idea.

HS Sophomore (450 words; AP: see unit standards): Analyze how Chapter XXIII develops the idea of family uproar. Make a precise claim, support it with at least three pieces of textual evidence, and explain how the author's use of characterization and tone / mood shapes that idea. Address one possible counterclaim.

HS Junior (550 words; AP: see unit standards): Analyze how the structure of Chapter XXIII (where it begins, turns and ends) and its characterization shape the reader's understanding of family uproar. Identify one place where the text leaves matters uncertain and explain how that uncertainty adds to its meaning.

HS Senior (600 words; AP: see unit standards): Two readers disagree about what Chapter XXIII suggests about family uproar. Lay out two plausible interpretations, weigh the evidence for each (including the chapter's characterization and tone / mood), and argue for the stronger one in a sustained, well-organized essay.

AP (650 words; AP: AP-LIT.CHR, AP-LIT.LAN): Write a literary argument in which you analyze how Jane Austen uses characterization in Chapter XXIII to complicate the reader's understanding of family uproar. Develop a defensible thesis, select evidence purposefully, and explain how specific choices of diction and syntax create meaning.

College Freshman (1000 words; AP: see unit standards): Situate Chapter XXIII within its historical and literary context and argue how the chapter's treatment of family uproar responds to that context. Engage with at least one secondary perspective (a critic, historian or the author's own statements), integrate quotations smoothly, and cite in MLA style.

College Sophomore (1250 words; AP: see unit standards): Read Chapter XXIII alongside the conventions of its genre and period. Argue how the chapter's handling of family uproar follows or bends those conventions, using the characterization as evidence, and test your reading against one published critic. Document two secondary sources in MLA.

College Junior (1500 words; AP: see unit standards): Apply a named critical approach (for example formalist, historicist, feminist, psychoanalytic or ecocritical) to Chapter XXIII and its treatment of family uproar. State your method, show what it reveals in the chapter's characterization and tone / mood, and identify where the text resists it.

College Senior (2000 words; AP: see unit standards): Develop a research argument that reads Chapter XXIII as evidence for a larger claim about family uproar in Pride and Prejudice. Connect close reading of the chapter to the whole novel, engage at least four scholarly sources, and state precisely where your reading departs from theirs (Chicago style).

Graduate / PhD (2500 words; AP: see unit standards): Develop an original argument that reads Chapter XXIII as a hinge in the novel's larger treatment of family uproar. Position your reading within a named critical conversation (for example formalist, historicist, psychoanalytic, feminist or postcolonial approaches), account for the textual history where relevant, and articulate the stakes of your intervention for scholarship on Pride and Prejudice.

SAT-style questions

1. He was too happy, however, to need much attention; and luckily for the others, the business of lovemaking relieved them from a great deal of his company.

   As used in the text, what does the word “luckily” most nearly mean?

   A. quiet complaints

   B. feeling unsure

   C. a trait of dignified seriousness

   D. by good fortune

2. Elizabeth was sitting with her mother and sisters, reflecting on what she had heard, and doubting whether she were authorised to mention it, when Sir William Lucas himself appeared, sent by his daughter to announce her engagement to the family. With many compliments to them, and much self-gratulation on the prospect of a connection between the houses, he unfolded the matter—to an audience not merely wondering, but incredulous; for Mrs. Bennet, with more perseverance than politeness, protested he must be entirely mistaken, and Lydia, always unguarded and often uncivil, boisterously exclaimed—

   Which choice best states a central concern of “Chapter XXIII”?

   A. The Brighton plan

   B. Darcy at Rosings

   C. Family uproar

   D. Shameless return

SAT key: 1. D (by good fortune); 2. C (Family uproar)

Lesson 25: Chapter XXIV

Focus: disappointment and philosophy

Objective: Students will analyze how characterization develops in “Chapter XXIV” by writing a claim-evidence-reasoning paragraph that cites at least 2 quotations from the section, and will score at least 80% on the section quiz.

Standards: AP: see the unit standards

Teacher only · spoilers

Caroline's letter confirms the Bingleys will stay in London. Jane bears it quietly. Elizabeth reflects bitterly on the 'inconsistency of all human characters.' Mr. Bennet jokes that Wickham would make a fine jilt.

Background: Women's feelings were expected to be hidden for propriety.

Significance: Elizabeth's cynicism shows how disappointment shapes judgment.

Lesson plan and lecture script (90 minutes)

0–8 min · Bell-ringer · You do (8 min)
Students write to the bell-ringer, then pair-share.
How does Jane's restraint compare with Elizabeth's response? Write for five minutes. Starters: I think... because... / This connects to pride and prejudice because....
Prompt: How does Jane's restraint compare with Elizabeth's response?
Sentence starters: I think… because… · This connects to pride and prejudice because…
Strong response: A strong response takes a position and anticipates this: Elizabeth's cynicism is another kind of quick judgment.

8–18 min · Vocabulary with etymology notes · I do (10 min)
Five key words in context, with verified word histories.
Today's words: disclaimed — denied having; extenuating — making a fault seem less serious; predict — make a prediction about; tell in advance; occurrences — an event that happens; displease — give displeasure to. “disclaimed”: Origin of “disclaim”: Anglo-Norman disclaimer. “occurrences”: From Latin occurrere "to run to meet," from ob- "toward" + currere "to run." “displease”: Origin: Anglo-Norman despleisir.
Words: disclaimed: denied having · extenuating: making a fault seem less serious · predict: make a prediction about; tell in advance · occurrences: an event that happens · displease: give displeasure to

18–28 min · Background and context · I do (10 min)
Mini-lecture (read or adapt the script).
Women's feelings were expected to be hidden for propriety. Elizabeth's cynicism shows how disappointment shapes judgment. Characterization: Miss Bingley's letter ends Jane's hope; Jane hides her pain. Elizabeth is angry at Bingley's weakness and at the world. Dialogue: Elizabeth's speech about how "the more I see of the world, the more am I dissatisfied with it" shows disillusion. Watch for silence and reserve: What characters leave unsaid (Darcy's reserve, Jane's composure, Elizabeth's secrets) drives misunderstanding. In this chapter: "soon communicated the chief of all this, heard it in silent indignation. Her heart was divided between concern for her sister, and" (Chapter XXIV, paragraph 3).

28–40 min · I do: modeled close reading · I do (12 min)
Model the close reading of the anchor quotation using the written think-aloud below.
First, meaning. I read "The more I see of the world, the more am I dissatisfied with it" slowly and put it in my own words: Talking with Jane, Elizabeth says that the more she sees of the world, the less she likes it. Next, craft. I notice the balanced "the more... the more" pattern, which makes her disillusion sound like a rule. The strongest word is "dissatisfied": it shows disappointment piling up, not a single shock. Then, effect. Why is Elizabeth growing dissatisfied with the world? My answer: Charlotte's marriage and Bingley's leaving have shaken Elizabeth's faith in people's sense and constancy; she is judging the world harshly, which is part of the prejudice the novel will correct.

> The more I see of the world, the more am I dissatisfied with it (Chapter XXIV, paragraph 10)

Think-aloud: First, meaning. I read "The more I see of the world, the more am I dissatisfied with it" slowly and put it in my own words: Talking with Jane, Elizabeth says that the more she sees of the world, the less she likes it. Next, craft. I notice the balanced "the more... the more" pattern, which makes her disillusion sound like a rule. The strongest word is "dissatisfied": it shows disappointment piling up, not a single shock. Then, effect. Why is Elizabeth growing dissatisfied with the world? My answer: Charlotte's marriage and Bingley's leaving have shaken Elizabeth's faith in people's sense and constancy; she is judging the world harshly, which is part of the prejudice the novel will correct.

40–55 min · We do: guided annotation · We do (15 min)
Guided analysis of a second quotation; expected answers given.
Ask: What words in this line stand out, and what do they suggest? Expected: "Material service" is ironic in hindsight: the charming man is the dangerous one. This connects to first impressions. Ask: How does this line connect to pride and prejudice? Expected: Elizabeth's cynicism is another kind of quick judgment. (Wickham's charm consoles the family; irony in hindsight.)

> Wickham's society was of material service in dispelling the gloom (Chapter XXIV, paragraph 29)

Ask: What words in this line stand out, and what do they suggest?
Expected answer: "Material service" is ironic in hindsight: the charming man is the dangerous one. This connects to first impressions.
Ask: How does this line connect to pride and prejudice?
Expected answer: Elizabeth's cynicism is another kind of quick judgment. (Wickham's charm consoles the family; irony in hindsight.)

55–70 min · You do: independent annotation · You do (15 min)
Independent annotation and a claim-evidence-reasoning paragraph (exemplar given).
Annotate the chapter for characterization, dialogue (three marks with a margin note each), then write one claim-evidence-reasoning paragraph: what does this chapter suggest about disappointment and philosophy? Then start your writing prompt at your assigned level (HS Sophomore: Analyze how Chapter XXIV develops the idea of disappointment and philosophy. Make a precise claim, support it with at least three pieces of textual evidence, and explain how the author's use of characterization and theme shapes that idea. Address one possible counterclaim.) Exemplar: Jane's disappointment makes Elizabeth harsher in her judgments, and Wickham's charm benefits from it. When the text says "The more I see of the world, the more am I dissatisfied with it" (Chapter XXIV, paragraph 10), it shows this directly. She declares that "the more I see of the world, the more am I dissatisfied with it," and Wickham's company becomes a "material service" to the family, so her anger and his charm feed each other.
Task: Annotate the chapter for characterization, dialogue (three marks with a margin note each), then write one claim-evidence-reasoning paragraph: what does this chapter suggest about disappointment and philosophy? Then start your writing prompt at your assigned level (HS Sophomore: Analyze how Chapter XXIV develops the idea of disappointment and philosophy. Make a precise claim, support it with at least three pieces of textual evidence, and explain how the author's use of characterization and theme shapes that idea. Address one possible counterclaim.)
Exemplar: Jane's disappointment makes Elizabeth harsher in her judgments, and Wickham's charm benefits from it. When the text says "The more I see of the world, the more am I dissatisfied with it" (Chapter XXIV, paragraph 10), it shows this directly. She declares that "the more I see of the world, the more am I dissatisfied with it," and Wickham's company becomes a "material service" to the family, so her anger and his charm feed each other.

70–80 min · Discussion · We do (10 min)
Structured discussion from the 30 tiered questions, with facilitation notes.
Anchor question: How does Jane's restraint compare with Elizabeth's response? Ask: is Elizabeth's cynicism wisdom or another prejudice?
Anchor question: How does Jane's restraint compare with Elizabeth's response?
Facilitation: Ask: is Elizabeth's cynicism wisdom or another prejudice?

80–87 min · Exit ticket / chapter quiz · You do (7 min)
Chapter quiz in the app and an exit ticket (answer given).
Chapter quiz in the app, then: In one sentence, what does this chapter suggest about disappointment and philosophy? Support it with one short quotation. Model answer: Jane's disappointment makes Elizabeth harsher in her judgments, and Wickham's charm benefits from it. ("The more I see of the world, the more am I dissatisfied with it", Chapter XXIV, paragraph 10). Accept any defensible claim backed by a quotation from the chapter; the answer key for the quiz is in the Quiz section.
Exit ticket: In one sentence, what does this chapter suggest about disappointment and philosophy? Support it with one short quotation.
Answer: Model answer: Jane's disappointment makes Elizabeth harsher in her judgments, and Wickham's charm benefits from it. ("The more I see of the world, the more am I dissatisfied with it", Chapter XXIV, paragraph 10). Accept any defensible claim backed by a quotation from the chapter; the answer key for the quiz is in the Quiz section.

> 87–90 min · Closure · I do (3 min)
> Summarize the lesson and preview the next reading.
> Today we saw how characterization shapes disappointment and philosophy. Key takeaway: Elizabeth's cynicism is another kind of quick judgment.

Total: 90 minutes.

Teacher analysis (spoilers)

Literary elements

- Characterization: Miss Bingley's letter ends Jane's hope; Jane hides her pain. Elizabeth is angry at Bingley's weakness and at the world.
- Dialogue: Elizabeth's speech about how "the more I see of the world, the more am I dissatisfied with it" shows disillusion.

Themes and how they develop

- pride and prejudice: Elizabeth's cynicism is another kind of quick judgment.

Symbols and motifs

- silence and reserve: What characters leave unsaid (Darcy's reserve, Jane's composure, Elizabeth's secrets) drives misunderstanding. In this chapter: “soon communicated the chief of all this, heard it in silent indignation. Her heart was divided between concern for her sister, and” (Chapter XXIV, paragraph 3).
- letters: Letters carry news, reveal character and change minds; Darcy's letter is the turning point of the novel. In this chapter: “Miss Bingley’s letter arrived, and put an end to doubt. The very first sentence” (Chapter XXIV, paragraph 1).

Key quotations (checked against the reading text)

- “The more I see of the world, the more am I dissatisfied with it” (Chapter XXIV, paragraph 10) Elizabeth's disillusion.
- “Miss Bingley’s letter arrived, and put an end to doubt” (Chapter XXIV, paragraph 1) Opening line: crisp, decisive.
- “Wickham’s society was of material service in dispelling the gloom” (Chapter XXIV, paragraph 29) Wickham's charm consoles the family; irony in hindsight.

Model claim-evidence-reasoning

Claim: Jane's disappointment makes Elizabeth harsher in her judgments, and Wickham's charm benefits from it.
Evidence: “The more I see of the world, the more am I dissatisfied with it” (Chapter XXIV, paragraph 10)
Reasoning: She declares that "the more I see of the world, the more am I dissatisfied with it," and Wickham's company becomes a "material service" to the family, so her anger and his charm feed each other.

Vocabulary with etymology notes

Word	Definition (in this sentence)	In context	Word history
disclaimed (verb)	denied having	Miss Bennet eagerly disclaimed all extraordinary merit, and threw back the praise on her sister's warm affection.	"disclaimed": Origin of "disclaim": Anglo-Norman disclaimer. (Liber et Libri origin note, https://en.wiktionary.org/wiki/disclaim#Etymology)
extenuating (adjective)	making a fault seem less serious	Miss Bennet was the only creature who could suppose there might be any extenuating circumstances in the case, unknown to the society of Hertfordshire; her mild and steady candour always pleaded for allowances, and urged the possibility of mistakes—but by everybody else Mr.
predict (verb)	make a prediction about; tell in advance	Her many attractions were again dwelt on, and Caroline boasted joyfully of their increasing intimacy, and ventured to predict the accomplishment of the wishes which had been unfolded in her former letter.
occurrences (noun)	an event that happens	Wickham's society was of material service in dispelling the gloom, which the late perverse occurrences had thrown on many of the Longbourn family.	"occurrences": From Latin occurrere "to run to meet," from ob- "toward" + currere "to run." (Online Etymology Dictionary (hand-checked note), https://www.etymonline.com/word/occurrence)
displease (verb)	give displeasure to	But if I go on, I shall displease you by saying what I think of persons you esteem.	"displease": Origin: Anglo-Norman despleisir. (Liber et Libri origin note, https://en.wiktionary.org/wiki/displease#Etymology)
boasted (verb)	show off	Her many attractions were again dwelt on, and Caroline boasted joyfully of their increasing intimacy, and ventured to predict the accomplishment of the wishes which had been unfolded in her former letter.
prudent (adjective)	careful and sensible; marked by sound judgment	Collins's respectability, and Charlotte's prudent, steady character.

Discussion questions

1. How does Jane's restraint compare with Elizabeth's response?
2. Where does characterization appear in this chapter, and what effect does it have? Point to one passage.
3. How does this chapter connect to the book's larger concern with class and social mobility?

Classroom discussion questions (30, tiered)

Wait time after every question (3 s for DOK 1, 5 s for DOK 2, 8 to 10 s for DOK 3 and 4); think-pair-share on DOK 3 and 4; answer each response with a follow-up probe; close with student-generated questions. Focus sets by rigor level: Scaffolded support: 1, 2, 3, 4, 5, 6, 11, 12, 13, 14, 21, 22; HS Freshman: 1, 2, 3, 4, 5, 12, 13, 14, 15, 22, 23, 24; HS Sophomore: 1, 2, 3, 4, 13, 14, 15, 16, 17, 23, 24, 25; HS Junior: 1, 2, 3, 14, 15, 16, 17, 18, 24, 25, 26, 27; HS Senior: 1, 2, 3, 15, 16, 17, 18, 25, 26, 27, 28, 29; AP: 1, 2, 16, 17, 18, 19, 20, 26, 27, 28, 29, 30; College Freshman: 1, 2, 17, 18, 19, 20, 21, 22, 27, 28, 29, 30; College Sophomore: 1, 2, 11, 18, 19, 20, 21, 22, 23, 28, 29, 30; College Junior: 1, 11, 12, 19, 20, 21, 22, 23, 24, 25, 29, 30; College Senior: 1, 11, 12, 13, 20, 21, 22, 23, 24, 25, 26, 30; Graduate / PhD: 1, 11, 12, 13, 21, 22, 23, 24, 25, 26, 27, 28

Literal / recall

1. What does Caroline's second letter say? [DOK 1 · coldCallWithSupport · wait 3 s · AP: unit standards] Look for: The Bingleys will stay in London
2. How does Jane respond to the news that the Bingleys will stay in London? [DOK 1 · turnAndTalk · wait 3 s · AP: unit standards] Look for: She bears it quietly
3. What does Elizabeth reflect on? [DOK 1 · coldCallWithSupport · wait 3 s · AP: unit standards] Look for: The inconsistency of human character
4. Whom does Mr. Bennet joke about? [DOK 1 · turnAndTalk · wait 3 s · AP: unit standards] Look for: Wickham
5. What tone does Mr. Bennet use? [DOK 1 · coldCallWithSupport · wait 3 s · AP: unit standards] Look for: Mocking humor
6. Retell the three most important events of “Chapter XXIV” in order, in one sentence each. [DOK 1 · turnAndTalk · wait 3 s · AP: unit standards] Look for: Caroline's letter confirms the Bingleys will stay in London. Jane bears it quietly. Elizabeth reflects bitterly on the 'inconsistency of all human characters.' Mr. Bennet jokes that Wickham would make a fine jilt.
7. Which characters appear or are mentioned in “Chapter XXIV”? Name two and one thing each says or does. [DOK 1 · coldCallWithSupport · wait 3 s · AP: unit standards] Look for: Names and actions taken from the chapter; check against the teacher summary.
8. Where and when does “Chapter XXIV” take place? Point to the line that tells you. [DOK 1 · turnAndTalk · wait 3 s · AP: unit standards] Look for: A place/time detail quoted from the chapter.
9. Reread: “Miss Bennet eagerly disclaimed all extraordinary merit, and threw back the praise on her sister’s warm affection.” What does “disclaimed” mean here, and what is literally happening in this line? [DOK 1 · turnAndTalk · wait 3 s · AP: unit standards] Look for: disclaimed: denied having.
10. Reread: “Miss Bennet was the only creature who could suppose there might be any extenuating circumstances in the case, unknown to the society of Hertfordshire; her mild and steady candour always pleaded for allowances, and urged…” What does “extenuating” mean here, and what is literally happening in this line? [DOK 1 · turnAndTalk · wait 3 s · AP: unit standards] Look for: extenuating: making a fault seem less serious.

Inferential / analytical

1. What does “Chapter XXIV” suggest about disappointment and philosophy? State the inference and the line that supports it. [DOK 2 · thinkPairShare · wait 5 s · AP-LIT.LAN] Look for: Elizabeth's cynicism shows how disappointment shapes judgment.
2. Find one example of characterization in this chapter. What does it reveal that a plain statement would not? [DOK 2 · followUp · wait 5 s · AP-LIT.CHR] Look for: Look for what characters say, do and think, and how others react to them.
3. How does the theme in this chapter shape what we understand about disappointment and philosophy? [DOK 3 · thinkPairShare · wait 8 s · AP-LIT.LAN] Look for: Look for statements or moments that connect to the book's big ideas.
   Answer guidance: A defensible line of argument: Jane's disappointment makes Elizabeth harsher in her judgments, and Wickham's charm benefits from it. Useful evidence: “The more I see of the world, the more am I dissatisfied with it” (Chapter XXIV, paragraph 10): Elizabeth's disillusion. Theme link: Elizabeth's cynicism is another kind of quick judgment. Credit any position that is supported by quotation and reasoning; push one-sided answers to address the strongest counterpoint.
4. In the passage that begins “Hope was over, entirely over; and when Jane could attend to the rest of the letter, she found little, except the professed affection of the writer, that could give her any comfort.”, why might Austen have chosen these particular words? Pick two and explain their connotations. [DOK 2 · followUp · wait 5 s · AP-LIT.FIG] Look for: Diction analysis of two words in the anchor passage.
5. What causes the main turn in “Chapter XXIV”, and what effect is it likely to have on what follows? [DOK 2 · followUp · wait 5 s · AP-LIT.STR] Look for: Caroline's letter confirms the Bingleys will stay in London. Jane bears it quietly. Elizabeth reflects bitterly on the 'inconsistency of all human characters.' Mr. Bennet jokes that Wickham would make a fine jilt.
6. How does “Chapter XXIV” build on “Chapter XXIII”? Name one link of cause and effect. [DOK 3 · thinkPairShare · wait 8 s · AP-LIT.STR] Look for: A causal or structural link between this and the previous chapter.
   Answer guidance: A defensible line of argument: Jane's disappointment makes Elizabeth harsher in her judgments, and Wickham's charm benefits from it. Useful evidence: “Miss Bingley’s letter arrived, and put an end to doubt” (Chapter XXIV, paragraph 1): Opening line: crisp, decisive. Theme link: Elizabeth's cynicism is another kind of quick judgment. Credit any position that is supported by quotation and reasoning; push one-sided answers to address the strongest counterpoint.
7. What can we infer about a character's motives from what they say and do here, as opposed to what they claim? [DOK 3 · followUp · wait 8 s · AP-LIT.CHR] Look for: An inference about motive supported by a quoted line.
   Answer guidance: A defensible line of argument: Jane's disappointment makes Elizabeth harsher in her judgments, and Wickham's charm benefits from it. Useful evidence: “Wickham’s society was of material service in dispelling the gloom” (Chapter XXIV, paragraph 29): Wickham's charm consoles the family; irony in hindsight. On characterization: Miss Bingley's letter ends Jane's hope; Jane hides her pain. Elizabeth is angry at Bingley's weakness and at the world. Credit any position that is supported by quotation and reasoning; push one-sided answers to address the strongest counterpoint.
8. The bell-ringer asked: “How does Jane's restraint compare with Elizabeth's response?” Now that we have read closely, how would you revise your first answer, and which line changed your mind? [DOK 2 · thinkPairShare · wait 5 s · AP-LIT.LAN] Look for: A revised answer anchored in the text.

9. Where does tone / mood appear, and how does it connect this chapter to the larger concern with class and social mobility? [DOK 3 · followUp · wait 8 s · AP-LIT.FIG] Look for: Look for word choices that reveal the narrator's attitude or the scene's feeling.
   Answer guidance: A defensible line of argument: Jane's disappointment makes Elizabeth harsher in her judgments, and Wickham's charm benefits from it. Useful evidence: “The more I see of the world, the more am I dissatisfied with it” (Chapter XXIV, paragraph 10): Elizabeth's disillusion. Theme link: Elizabeth's cynicism is another kind of quick judgment. Credit any position that is supported by quotation and reasoning; push one-sided answers to address the strongest counterpoint.
10. Background: Women's feelings were expected to be hidden for propriety. How does knowing this change the way you read one moment in the chapter? [DOK 3 · thinkPairShare · wait 8 s · AP-LIT.SET] Look for: A specific moment reread in light of the context.
    Answer guidance: A defensible line of argument: Jane's disappointment makes Elizabeth harsher in her judgments, and Wickham's charm benefits from it. Useful evidence: “Miss Bingley’s letter arrived, and put an end to doubt” (Chapter XXIV, paragraph 1): Opening line: crisp, decisive. Theme link: Elizabeth's cynicism is another kind of quick judgment. Credit any position that is supported by quotation and reasoning; push one-sided answers to address the strongest counterpoint.

Evaluative / synthesis / creative

1. A critic might argue: “Elizabeth's cynicism shows how disappointment shapes judgment.” How far do you agree? Take a stand and defend it with two lines from the chapter. [DOK 3 · fourCorners · wait 8 s · AP-LIT.LAN] Look for: A defended position with evidence and one counterpoint.
   Answer guidance: A defensible line of argument: Jane's disappointment makes Elizabeth harsher in her judgments, and Wickham's charm benefits from it. Useful evidence: “Wickham’s society was of material service in dispelling the gloom” (Chapter XXIV, paragraph 29): Wickham's charm consoles the family; irony in hindsight. Theme link: Elizabeth's cynicism is another kind of quick judgment. Credit any position that is supported by quotation and reasoning; push one-sided answers to address the strongest counterpoint.
2. Which character in this chapter acts most wisely, and which least? Judge them by a standard you name. [DOK 3 · thinkPairShare · wait 8 s · AP-LIT.CHR, AP-LIT.LAN] Look for: An evaluation using an explicit criterion and evidence.
   Answer guidance: A defensible line of argument: Jane's disappointment makes Elizabeth harsher in her judgments, and Wickham's charm benefits from it. Useful evidence: “The more I see of the world, the more am I dissatisfied with it” (Chapter XXIV, paragraph 10): Elizabeth's disillusion. On characterization: Miss Bingley's letter ends Jane's hope; Jane hides her pain. Elizabeth is angry at Bingley's weakness and at the world. Credit any position that is supported by quotation and reasoning; push one-sided answers to address the strongest counterpoint.
3. Rewrite one moment of “Chapter XXIV” from the point of view of a different character. What does the new angle reveal or hide about disappointment and philosophy? [DOK 4 · thinkPairShare · wait 8 s · AP-LIT.LAN, AP-LIT.NAR] Look for: A creative product with a rationale tied to the text.
   Answer guidance: A defensible line of argument: Jane's disappointment makes Elizabeth harsher in her judgments, and Wickham's charm benefits from it. Useful evidence: “Miss Bingley’s letter arrived, and put an end to doubt” (Chapter XXIV, paragraph 1): Opening line: crisp, decisive. Theme link: Elizabeth's cynicism is another kind of quick judgment. Credit any position that is supported by quotation and reasoning; push one-sided answers to address the strongest counterpoint.

4. Write three questions of your own about “Chapter XXIV”: one recall, one “why/how”, and one “should/what if”. Trade with a partner and answer theirs. [DOK 3 · studentGenerated · wait 8 s · AP-LIT.LAN] Look for: Student-generated questions at three levels.

   Answer guidance: A defensible line of argument: Jane's disappointment makes Elizabeth harsher in her judgments, and Wickham's charm benefits from it. Useful evidence: “Wickham’s society was of material service in dispelling the gloom” (Chapter XXIV, paragraph 29): Wickham's charm consoles the family; irony in hindsight. Theme link: Elizabeth's cynicism is another kind of quick judgment. Credit any position that is supported by quotation and reasoning; push one-sided answers to address the strongest counterpoint.

5. Connect this chapter to women's limited choices: is the link strong or weak so far? What would Austen need to show next to strengthen it? [DOK 4 · socraticCircle · wait 8 s · AP-LIT.LAN] Look for: A judgment of thematic development across the work.

   Answer guidance: A defensible line of argument: Jane's disappointment makes Elizabeth harsher in her judgments, and Wickham's charm benefits from it. Useful evidence: “The more I see of the world, the more am I dissatisfied with it” (Chapter XXIV, paragraph 10): Elizabeth's disillusion. Theme link: Elizabeth's cynicism is another kind of quick judgment. Credit any position that is supported by quotation and reasoning; push one-sided answers to address the strongest counterpoint.

6. Is the characterization in this chapter effective, or does it feel heavy-handed? Evaluate it as a reader would in a review. [DOK 3 · fourCorners · wait 8 s · AP-LIT.CHR, AP-LIT.LAN] Look for: An evaluative judgment with criteria and evidence.

   Answer guidance: A defensible line of argument: Jane's disappointment makes Elizabeth harsher in her judgments, and Wickham's charm benefits from it. Useful evidence: “Miss Bingley’s letter arrived, and put an end to doubt” (Chapter XXIV, paragraph 1): Opening line: crisp, decisive. On characterization: Miss Bingley's letter ends Jane's hope; Jane hides her pain. Elizabeth is angry at Bingley's weakness and at the world. Credit any position that is supported by quotation and reasoning; push one-sided answers to address the strongest counterpoint.

7. Compare how “Chapter XXIV” treats disappointment and philosophy with how another text, film or event you know treats a similar idea. What does Pride and Prejudice see that the other misses? [DOK 4 · socraticCircle · wait 8 s · AP-LIT.LAN] Look for: A cross-text synthesis.

   Answer guidance: A defensible line of argument: Jane's disappointment makes Elizabeth harsher in her judgments, and Wickham's charm benefits from it. Useful evidence: “Wickham’s society was of material service in dispelling the gloom” (Chapter XXIV, paragraph 29): Wickham's charm consoles the family; irony in hindsight. Theme link: Elizabeth's cynicism is another kind of quick judgment. Credit any position that is supported by quotation and reasoning; push one-sided answers to address the strongest counterpoint.

8. Predict what “Chapter XXV” will bring, using two clues from this chapter. After reading, evaluate your prediction. [DOK 3 · thinkPairShare · wait 8 s · AP-LIT.LAN, AP-LIT.STR] Look for: A prediction or judgment justified with textual clues.

   Answer guidance: A defensible line of argument: Jane's disappointment makes Elizabeth harsher in her judgments, and Wickham's charm benefits from it. Useful evidence: “The more I see of the world, the more am I dissatisfied with it” (Chapter XXIV, paragraph 10): Elizabeth's disillusion. Theme link: Elizabeth's cynicism is another kind of quick judgment. Credit any position that is supported by quotation and reasoning; push one-sided answers to address the strongest counterpoint.

9. Design a one-paragraph modern adaptation of this chapter (setting, characters, conflict). What must stay the same for it to still be about disappointment and philosophy? [DOK 4 · thinkPairShare · wait 8 s · AP-LIT.LAN] Look for: A creative transfer that keeps the core idea.
   Answer guidance: A defensible line of argument: Jane's disappointment makes Elizabeth harsher in her judgments, and Wickham's charm benefits from it. Useful evidence: “Miss Bingley’s letter arrived, and put an end to doubt” (Chapter XXIV, paragraph 1): Opening line: crisp, decisive. Theme link: Elizabeth's cynicism is another kind of quick judgment. Credit any position that is supported by quotation and reasoning; push one-sided answers to address the strongest counterpoint.
10. What question would you most like to ask Jane Austen about this chapter, and what answer do you think the text itself gives? [DOK 4 · studentGenerated · wait 8 s · AP-LIT.LAN] Look for: A student-generated question answered from evidence.
    Answer guidance: A defensible line of argument: Jane's disappointment makes Elizabeth harsher in her judgments, and Wickham's charm benefits from it. Useful evidence: “Wickham’s society was of material service in dispelling the gloom” (Chapter XXIV, paragraph 29): Wickham's charm consoles the family; irony in hindsight. Theme link: Elizabeth's cynicism is another kind of quick judgment. Credit any position that is supported by quotation and reasoning; push one-sided answers to address the strongest counterpoint.

Annotation focus

- Characterization: look for what characters say, do and think, and how others react to them (anchor passage in the We do segment)
- Also notice Theme: statements or moments that connect to the book's big ideas
- Also notice Tone / mood: word choices that reveal the narrator's attitude or the scene's feeling

Chapter quiz: item bank (all eleven rigor versions)

1. [mc · recall · DOK 1] Whom does Mr. Bennet joke about?
   A. Bingley
   B. Wickham
   C. Darcy
   D. Collins

   Key: B (Wickham)
2. [fill · recall · DOK 1] Fill in the blank with the vocabulary word that fits: “But if I go on, I shall _____ you by saying what I think of persons you esteem.” Word bank: disclaimed, displease, predict, extenuating
   Key: displease
3. [mc · recall · DOK 1] In the line “Miss Bennet eagerly disclaimed all extraordinary merit, and threw back the praise on her sister’s warm affection.”, what does “disclaimed” most nearly mean?
   A. denied having
   B. wear off or die down
   C. placed in position
   D. made to feel ashamed or less proud

Key: A (denied having)

4. [mc · recall · DOK 1] Which word completes this sentence from Chapter XXIV, paragraph 12? “To oblige you, I would try to believe almost anything, but no one else could be _____ by such a belief as this”

   A. assurance

   B. justice

   C. benefited

   D. occupied

   Key: C (benefited)

5. [mc · recall · DOK 1] In the line “Miss Bennet was the only creature who could suppose there might be any extenuating circumstances in the case, unknown to the society of Hertfordshire; her mild and steady candour always pleaded for allowances, and urged…”, what does “extenuating” most nearly mean?

   A. characterized by undue haste and lack of thought or deliberation

   B. frank; careless about hiding feelings

   C. uncertain; not fixed

   D. making a fault seem less serious

   Key: D (making a fault seem less serious)

6. [mc · recall · DOK 1] Which word completes this sentence from Chapter XXIV, paragraph 3? “To Caroline’s _____ of her brother’s being partial to Miss Darcy she paid no credit.”

   A. interference

   B. assertion

   C. happiness

   D. acquaintance

   Key: B (assertion)

7. [fill · recall · DOK 1] Complete the quotation from Chapter XXIV, paragraph 10: “The more I see of the world, the more am I _____ with it”

   Key: dissatisfied

8. [fill · recall · DOK 1] Complete the quotation from Chapter XXIV, paragraph 10: “There are few _____ whom I really love, and still fewer of whom I think well.” Word bank: interference, happiness, assurance, people

   Key: people

9. [fill · recall · DOK 1] Fill in the blank with the vocabulary word that fits: “Her many attractions were again dwelt on, and Caroline _____ joyfully of their increasing intimacy, and ventured to predict the accomplishment of the wishes which had been unfolded in her former letter.” Word bank: disclaimed, extenuating, boasted, predict

   Key: boasted

10. [fill · recall · DOK 1] Complete the quotation from Chapter XXIV, paragraph 5: “Elizabeth looked at her sister with _____ solicitude, but said nothing.” Word bank: incredulous, yourself, difference, benefited

    Key: incredulous

11. [short · inference · DOK 2] What can you infer from this line? “Miss Bingley’s letter arrived, and put an end to doubt” (Chapter XXIV, paragraph 1) Answer in two or three sentences with one detail.

    Sample answer: Opening line: crisp, decisive. The evidence is “Miss Bingley’s letter arrived, and put an end to doubt” (Chapter XXIV, paragraph 1). This develops pride and prejudice: Elizabeth's cynicism is another kind of quick judgment.

12. [short · inference · DOK 2] What does this passage from Chapter XXIV, paragraph 12 reveal about the character or situation? “My dear Jane, Mr. Collins is a conceited, pompous, narrow-minded, silly man; you know he is, as well as I do; and you must feel, as well as I do, that the woman who marries him, cannot have a proper way of thinking.” Answer in two or three sentences with one detail.
    Sample answer: The passage (Chapter XXIV, paragraph 12) shows the situation turning on first impressions and prejudice: Elizabeth's cynicism is another kind of quick judgment. The words “conceited” and “thinking” are the proof, because they show how the moment looks to the people in it. They suggest more than the narrator states outright.
13. [short · inference · DOK 2] What does this passage from Chapter XXIV, paragraph 2 reveal about the character or situation? “Hope was over, entirely over; and when Jane could attend to the rest of the letter, she found little, except the professed affection of the writer, that could give her any comfort.” Answer in two or three sentences with one detail.
    Sample answer: The passage (Chapter XXIV, paragraph 2) shows the situation turning on first impressions and prejudice: Elizabeth's cynicism is another kind of quick judgment. The words “affection” and “professed” are the proof, because they show how the moment looks to the people in it. They suggest more than the narrator states outright.
14. [short · analysis · DOK 3] Analyze how the word choice in this passage from Chapter XXIV, paragraph 3 shapes its tone: “That he was really fond of Jane, she doubted no more than she had ever done” Pick two words and explain their effect.
    Sample answer: The words “doubted” and “really” (Chapter XXIV, paragraph 3) make the tone heavy and deliberate rather than neutral. That weight points the reader to class and social mobility: Elizabeth's cynicism is another kind of quick judgment. The author chooses them so the moment feels significant instead of passing.
15. [short · analysis · DOK 3] Analyze how the word choice in this passage from Chapter XXIV, paragraph 13 shapes its tone: “We must not expect a lively young man to be always so guarded and circumspect.” Pick two words and explain their effect.
    Sample answer: The words “circumspect” and “guarded” (Chapter XXIV, paragraph 13) make the tone heavy and deliberate rather than neutral. That weight points the reader to class and social mobility: Elizabeth's cynicism is another kind of quick judgment. The author chooses them so the moment feels significant instead of passing.
16. [short · synthesis · DOK 4] Connect this passage from Chapter XXIV, paragraph 10 to the story's treatment of marriage and money: “I have met with two instances lately; one I will not mention; the other is Charlotte’s marriage.” Use one other moment from the story as well.
    Sample answer: This passage (Chapter XXIV, paragraph 10) develops marriage and money: Elizabeth's cynicism is another kind of quick judgment. Its words “instances” and “marriage” carry that idea into this moment. The same concern returns in “My dear Lizzy, do not give way to such feelings as these.” (Chapter XXIV, paragraph 11), so the two passages read as a pattern, not a single moment. Together they show the story treating marriage and money as central.
17. [mc · recall · DOK 1] What does Elizabeth reflect on?

    A. Her music

    B. The weather

    C. The inconsistency of human character

    D. Fashion

    Key: C (The inconsistency of human character)
18. [fill · recall · DOK 1] Complete the quotation from Chapter XXIV, paragraph 29: “Wickham’s society was of material service in _____ the gloom”
    Key: dispelling

19. [fill · recall · DOK 1] Complete the quotation from Chapter XXIV, paragraph 1: “Miss Bingley’s letter _____, and put an end to doubt”

    Key: arrived

20. [mc · inference · DOK 2] Which choice best states a central concern of “Chapter XXIV”?

    A. Disappointment and philosophy

    B. Sisters and judgment

    C. Darcy at Rosings

    D. Family in crisis

    Key: A (Disappointment and philosophy)

21. [short · analysis · DOK 3] Analyze how the word choice in this passage from Chapter XXIV, paragraph 6 shapes its tone: “You doubt me,’ cried Jane, slightly colouring; ‘indeed you have no reason.” Pick two words and explain their effect.

    Sample answer: The words “colouring” and “slightly” (Chapter XXIV, paragraph 6) make the tone heavy and deliberate rather than neutral. That weight points the reader to pride and self-knowledge: Elizabeth's cynicism is another kind of quick judgment. The author chooses them so the moment feels significant instead of passing.

22. [short · synthesis · DOK 4] Synthesis: trace how pride and prejudice develops from Chapter XVII to Chapter XXIV. Use one quotation from each.

    Sample answer: Earlier, in Chapter XVII, paragraph 2, the text reads “They have both,’ said she, ‘been deceived” — Jane's charitable explanation. In Chapter XXIV, “The more I see of the world, the more am I dissatisfied with it” (Chapter XXIV, paragraph 10) — Elizabeth's disillusion. Elizabeth's cynicism is another kind of quick judgment.

23. [mc · recall · DOK 1] Which word completes this sentence from Chapter XXIV, paragraph 8? “My dear Jane!’ _____ Elizabeth, ‘you are too good.”

    A. exclaimed

    B. happiness

    C. difference

    D. unaccountable

    Key: A (exclaimed)

24. [mc · recall · DOK 1] What tone does Mr. Bennet use?

    A. Mocking humor

    B. Deep sorrow

    C. Fear

    D. Anger

    Key: A (Mocking humor)

25. [mc · recall · DOK 1] How does Jane respond to the news that the Bingleys will stay in London?

    A. She bears it quietly

    B. She leaves home

    C. She writes to Darcy

    D. She rages

    Key: A (She bears it quietly)

26. [mc · recall · DOK 1] What does Caroline's second letter say?

    A. They are coming back

    B. Bingley is engaged to Jane

    C. Darcy is ill

    D. The Bingleys will stay in London

    Key: D (The Bingleys will stay in London)

27. [short · analysis · DOK 3] Analyze how the word choice in this passage from Chapter XXIV, paragraph 17 shapes its tone: “And do you impute it to either of those?” Pick two words and explain their effect.
    Sample answer: The words “either” and “impute” (Chapter XXIV, paragraph 17) make the tone heavy and deliberate rather than neutral. That weight points the reader to pride and self-knowledge: Elizabeth's cynicism is another kind of quick judgment. The author chooses them so the moment feels significant instead of passing.

28. [short · synthesis · DOK 4] Connect this passage from Chapter XXIV, paragraph 24 to the story's treatment of marriage and money: “Elizabeth could not oppose such a wish; and from this time Mr. Bingley’s name was scarcely ever mentioned between them.” Use one other moment from the story as well.
    Sample answer: This passage (Chapter XXIV, paragraph 24) develops marriage and money: Elizabeth's cynicism is another kind of quick judgment. Its words “mentioned” and “scarcely” carry that idea into this moment. The same concern returns in “Her daughter endeavoured to convince her of what she did not believe herself, that his attentions to Jane had been…” (Chapter XXIV, paragraph 25), so the two passages read as a pattern, not a single moment. Together they show the story treating marriage and money as central.

29. [mc · analysis · DOK 3 · AP: AP-LIT.STR] Which literary element does this describe in “Chapter XXIV”? Elizabeth's speech about how ‘the more I see of the world, the more am I dissatisfied with it’ shows disillusion.

    A. Plot

    B. Foreshadowing

    C. Dialogue

    D. Allusion

    Key: C (Dialogue)

30. [short · synthesis · DOK 4 · AP: AP-LIT.LAN] Connect this passage from Chapter XXIV, paragraph 23 to the story's treatment of women's limited choices: “But, whatever may be their own wishes, it is very unlikely they should have opposed their brother’s.” Use one other moment from the story as well.
    Sample answer: This passage (Chapter XXIV, paragraph 23) develops women's limited choices: Elizabeth's cynicism is another kind of quick judgment. Its words “unlikely” and “whatever” carry that idea into this moment. The same concern returns in “If they believed him attached to me, they would not try to part us; if he were so, they could not succeed.” (Chapter XXIV, paragraph 23), so the two passages read as a pattern, not a single moment. Together they show the story treating women's limited choices as central.

31. [fill · recall · DOK 1 · AP: AP-LIT.FIG] Fill in the blank with the vocabulary word that fits: “Collins’s respectability, and Charlotte’s _____, steady character.” Word bank: predict, extenuating, disclaimed, prudent
    Key: prudent

32. [short · synthesis · DOK 4 · AP: AP-LIT.LAN] Connect this passage from Chapter XXIV, paragraph 8 to the story's treatment of women's limited choices: “Your sweetness and disinterestedness are really angelic; I do not know what to say to you.” Use one other moment from the story as well.
    Sample answer: This passage (Chapter XXIV, paragraph 8) develops women's limited choices: Elizabeth's cynicism is another kind of quick judgment. Its words “disinterestedness” and “sweetness” carry that idea into this moment. The same concern returns in “You wish to think all the world respectable, and are hurt if I speak ill of anybody.” (Chapter XXIV, paragraph 10), so the two passages read as a pattern, not a single moment. Together they show the story treating women's limited choices as central.

33. [fill · recall · DOK 1 · AP: AP-LIT.FIG] Complete the quotation from Chapter XXIV, paragraph 1: “The very first sentence conveyed the _____ of their being all settled in London for the winter, and concluded with her brother’s regret at not having had time to pay his respects to his friends in Hertfordshire before he left the country.” Word bank: justice, assurance, acquaintance, communicated

    Key: assurance

34. [mc · inference · DOK 2 · AP: AP-LIT.LAN] What does this passage most clearly show? “Wickham’s society was of material service in dispelling the gloom” (Chapter XXIV, paragraph 29)

    A. Wickham's charm consoles the family; irony in hindsight.

    B. Darcy's reply suggests kinship between them.

    C. Ironic praise of the Bingley sisters.

    D. Pemberley's taste mirrors character.

    Key: A (Wickham's charm consoles the family; irony in hindsight.)

35. [short · synthesis · DOK 4 · AP: AP-LIT.FIG] Close reading: how do the diction and syntax of “Miss Bingley’s letter arrived, and put an end to doubt” (Chapter XXIV, paragraph 1) shape its meaning? Consider a second, competing reading.

    Sample answer: Opening line: crisp, decisive. The evidence is “Miss Bingley’s letter arrived, and put an end to doubt” (Chapter XXIV, paragraph 1). This develops pride and prejudice: Elizabeth's cynicism is another kind of quick judgment. The words “arrived” and “letter” carry that meaning: they are the charged choices in the line, and changing either would soften the effect. She declares that "the more I see of the world, the more am I dissatisfied with it," and Wickham's company becomes a "material service" to the family, so her anger and his charm feed each other.

36. [mc · inference · DOK 2 · Dual Credit (Indiana College Core): ICC-WC-1.5] What does this passage most clearly show? “Miss Bingley’s letter arrived, and put an end to doubt” (Chapter XXIV, paragraph 1)

    A. Charlotte jokes that Darcy's visit is for Elizabeth.

    B. Mr. Bennet's sarcasm about Wickham: wit as a substitute for action.

    C. Mr. Bennet stops Mary's singing in public.

    D. Opening line: crisp, decisive.

    Key: D (Opening line: crisp, decisive.)

37. [short · analysis · DOK 3 · Dual Credit (Indiana College Core): ICC-WC-1.5] Analyze the word choice in “Wickham’s society was of material service in dispelling the gloom” (Chapter XXIV, paragraph 29). Pick two words and explain what they suggest.

    Sample answer: Wickham's charm consoles the family; irony in hindsight. The evidence is “Wickham’s society was of material service in dispelling the gloom” (Chapter XXIV, paragraph 29). This develops pride and prejudice: Elizabeth's cynicism is another kind of quick judgment. The words “dispelling” and “material” carry that meaning: they are the charged choices in the line, and changing either would soften the effect.

38. [mc · analysis · DOK 3 · Program outcome: LeL-C4-LIT-1] Which literary element does this describe in “Chapter XXIV”? Miss Bingley's letter ends Jane's hope; Jane hides her pain. Elizabeth is angry at Bingley's weakness and at the world.

    A. Characterization

B. Metaphor

C. Hyperbole

D. Alliteration

Key: A (Characterization)

39. [short · synthesis · DOK 4 · Program outcome: LeL-GR-LIT-1] Close reading: how do the diction and syntax of "The more I see of the world, the more am I dissatisfied with it" (Chapter XXIV, paragraph 10) shape its meaning? Consider a second, competing reading.

    Sample answer: Elizabeth's disillusion. The evidence is "The more I see of the world, the more am I dissatisfied with it" (Chapter XXIV, paragraph 10). This develops pride and prejudice: Elizabeth's cynicism is another kind of quick judgment. The words "dissatisfied" and "world" carry that meaning: they are the charged choices in the line, and changing either would soften the effect. She declares that "the more I see of the world, the more am I dissatisfied with it," and Wickham's company becomes a "material service" to the family, so her anger and his charm feed each other.

Rigor version	Items (in order)	Mix
Scaffolded support	1, 2, 3, 4, 5, 6, 7, 8, 9, 10, 11, 12, 13, 14, 15, 16	recall 10, inference 3, analysis 2, synthesis 1
HS Freshman	1, 17, 8, 5, 9, 18, 6, 19, 2, 12, 13, 20, 14, 21, 15, 22	recall 9, inference 3, analysis 3, synthesis 1
HS Sophomore	23, 24, 19, 8, 7, 25, 26, 1, 13, 20, 12, 27, 14, 15, 16, 28	recall 8, inference 3, analysis 3, synthesis 2
HS Junior	3, 8, 4, 23, 18, 7, 9, 26, 13, 12, 29, 14, 21, 27, 30, 16	recall 8, inference 2, analysis 4, synthesis 2
HS Senior	6, 4, 18, 26, 8, 31, 20, 13, 12, 21, 15, 27, 14, 28, 22, 32	recall 6, inference 3, analysis 4, synthesis 3
AP	1, 33, 17, 2, 12, 34, 27, 29, 15, 21, 14, 30, 35, 16, 22, 32	recall 4, inference 2, analysis 5, synthesis 5
College Freshman	10, 2, 4, 26, 25, 36, 13, 14, 27, 15, 37, 21, 32, 30, 16, 28	recall 5, inference 2, analysis 5, synthesis 4
College Sophomore	19, 2, 26, 36, 34, 13, 29, 15, 14, 27, 21, 28, 22, 32, 16, 30	recall 3, inference 3, analysis 5, synthesis 5
College Junior	19, 6, 2, 26, 34, 11, 21, 27, 29, 15, 14, 16, 22, 32, 30, 28	recall 4, inference 2, analysis 5, synthesis 5
College Senior	4, 2, 31, 26, 25, 38, 15, 37, 27, 21, 22, 30, 35, 32, 16, 28	recall 5, inference 0, analysis 5, synthesis 6
Graduate / PhD	4, 2, 9, 26, 23, 11, 20, 15, 14, 21, 22, 28, 16, 39, 30, 32	recall 5, inference 2, analysis 3, synthesis 6

Writing prompts (eleven rigor levels)

Scaffolded support (250 words; AP: see unit standards): Supported track (work from the passage your teacher selects). In "Chapter XXIV," how does Austen show disappointment and philosophy? Write a paragraph that states your claim, quotes two details from the passage, and explains how each detail supports your idea. Use the characterization you noticed as one piece of evidence.

HS Freshman (350 words; AP: see unit standards): In Chapter XXIV, how does Austen develop the idea of disappointment and philosophy? State a clear claim, support it with two or three quotations, and explain how the characterization in the chapter helps build that idea.

HS Sophomore (450 words; AP: see unit standards): Analyze how Chapter XXIV develops the idea of disappointment and philosophy. Make a precise claim, support it with at least three pieces of textual evidence, and explain how the author's use of characterization and theme shapes that idea. Address one possible counterclaim.

HS Junior (550 words; AP: see unit standards): Analyze how the structure of Chapter XXIV (where it begins, turns and ends) and its characterization shape the reader's understanding of disappointment and philosophy. Identify one place where the text leaves matters uncertain and explain how that uncertainty adds to its meaning.

HS Senior (600 words; AP: see unit standards): Two readers disagree about what Chapter XXIV suggests about disappointment and philosophy. Lay out two plausible interpretations, weigh the evidence for each (including the chapter's characterization and theme), and argue for the stronger one in a sustained, well-organized essay.

AP (650 words; AP: AP-LIT.CHR, AP-LIT.LAN): Write a literary argument in which you analyze how Jane Austen uses characterization in Chapter XXIV to complicate the reader's understanding of disappointment and philosophy. Develop a defensible thesis, select evidence purposefully, and explain how specific choices of diction and syntax create meaning.

College Freshman (1000 words; AP: see unit standards): Situate Chapter XXIV within its historical and literary context and argue how the chapter's treatment of disappointment and philosophy responds to that context. Engage with at least one secondary perspective (a critic, historian or the author's own statements), integrate quotations smoothly, and cite in MLA style.

College Sophomore (1250 words; AP: see unit standards): Read Chapter XXIV alongside the conventions of its genre and period. Argue how the chapter's handling of disappointment and philosophy follows or bends those conventions, using the characterization as evidence, and test your reading against one published critic. Document two secondary sources in MLA.

College Junior (1500 words; AP: see unit standards): Apply a named critical approach (for example formalist, historicist, feminist, psychoanalytic or ecocritical) to Chapter XXIV and its treatment of disappointment and philosophy. State your method, show what it reveals in the chapter's characterization and theme, and identify where the text resists it.

College Senior (2000 words; AP: see unit standards): Develop a research argument that reads Chapter XXIV as evidence for a larger claim about disappointment and philosophy in Pride and Prejudice. Connect close reading of the chapter to the whole novel, engage at least four scholarly sources, and state precisely where your reading departs from theirs (Chicago style).

Graduate / PhD (2500 words; AP: see unit standards): Develop an original argument that reads Chapter XXIV as a hinge in the novel's larger treatment of disappointment and philosophy. Position your reading within a named critical conversation (for example formalist, historicist, psychoanalytic, feminist or postcolonial approaches), account for the textual history where relevant, and articulate the stakes of your intervention for scholarship on Pride and Prejudice.

SAT-style questions

1. Her many attractions were again dwelt on, and Caroline boasted joyfully of their increasing intimacy, and ventured to predict the accomplishment of the wishes which had been unfolded in her former letter.

As used in the text, what does the word "predict" most nearly mean?

A. make a prediction about; tell in advance

B. show off

C. careful and sensible; marked by sound judgment

D. give displeasure to

2. Hope was over, entirely over; and when Jane could attend to the rest of the letter, she found little, except the professed affection of the writer, that could give her any comfort. Miss Darcy's praise occupied the chief of it. Her many attractions were again dwelt on, and Caroline boasted joyfully of their increasing intimacy, and ventured to predict the accomplishment of the wishes which had been unfolded in her former letter. She wrote also with great pleasure of her brother's being an inmate of Mr. Darcy's house, and mentioned with raptures, some plans of the latter with regard to new furniture.

Which choice best states a central concern of "Chapter XXIV"?

A. Self-recognition

B. Family uproar

C. Visit to Hunsford

D. Disappointment and philosophy

SAT key: 1. A (make a prediction about; tell in advance); 2. D (Disappointment and philosophy)

Lesson 26: Chapter XXV

Focus: trusted relatives

Objective: Students will analyze how characterization develops in “Chapter XXV” by writing a claim-evidence-reasoning paragraph that cites at least 2 quotations from the section, and will score at least 80% on the section quiz.

Standards: AP: see the unit standards

Teacher only · spoilers

The Gardiners, Mrs. Bennet's sensible brother and his wife, visit for Christmas. Mrs. Gardiner warns Elizabeth not to fall for Wickham, who lacks fortune, and invites Jane to London.

Background: The Gardiners live in Cheapside, a merchant area looked down on by the Bingley sisters.

Significance: The Gardiners show that good sense and manners are not tied to rank.

Lesson plan and lecture script (90 minutes)

0–8 min · Bell-ringer · You do (8 min)
Students write to the bell-ringer, then pair-share.
Why are the Gardiners important despite their 'low' connections? Write for five minutes. Starters: I think... because... / This connects to marriage and money because....
Prompt: Why are the Gardiners important despite their 'low' connections?
Sentence starters: I think… because… · This connects to marriage and money because…
Strong response: A strong response takes a position and anticipates this: Mrs. Gardiner's advice is prudent rather than romantic.

8–18 min · Vocabulary with etymology notes · I do (10 min)
Five key words in context, with verified word histories.
Today's words: ablution — a washing or cleansing; reanimated — brought back to life or strength; revived; incivility — rudeness; combated — battle or contend against in or as if in a battle; hackneyed — repeated too often; overfamiliar through overuse. “ablution”: Origin: Old French ablution; earlier Late Latin ablūtiō (“a washing away”). “reanimated”: Origin of “reanimate”: an English formation from re- + animate. “incivility”: Origin: Middle French incivilité; earlier Late Latin incivilitas (“incivility”).
Words: ablution: a washing or cleansing · reanimated: brought back to life or strength; revived · incivility: rudeness · combated: battle or contend against in or as if in a battle · hackneyed: repeated too often; overfamiliar through overuse

18–28 min · Background and context · I do (10 min)
Mini-lecture (read or adapt the script).
The Gardiners live in Cheapside, a merchant area looked down on by the Bingley sisters. The Gardiners show that good sense and manners are not tied to rank. Characterization: The Gardiners visit for Christmas. Mrs. Gardiner listens to Mrs. Bennet's grievances, invites Jane to London, and notices Elizabeth's interest in Wickham; her warning follows in the next chapter. Characterization: Mr. Gardiner, a tradesman, is sensible and well-bred: a contrast with the snobbery of Darcy's circle. Watch for letters: Letters carry news, reveal character and change minds; Darcy's letter is the turning point of the novel. In this chapter: "cousins health and happiness again, and promised their father another letter of thanks" (Chapter XXV, paragraph 1).

28–40 min · I do: modeled close reading · I do (12 min)
Model the close reading of the anchor quotation using the written think-aloud below.
First, meaning. I read "Gardiner was a sensible, gentleman-like man, greatly superior to his sister, as well by nature as education" slowly and put it in my own words: Mr. Gardiner, who lives by trade in London, is described as sensible and more of a gentleman than his sister, Mrs. Bennet. Next, craft. I notice "gentleman-like" applied to a tradesman, which goes against the snobbery of the Bingley sisters. The strongest word is "superior": it ranks people by sense and manners rather than by birth. Then, effect. Why does Austen stress that Mr. Gardiner is superior to his sister? My answer: Austen shows that true gentility is character, not class; this prepares for Darcy's respect for the Gardiners at Pemberley.

> Gardiner was a sensible, gentleman-like man, greatly superior to his sister, as well by nature as education
> (Chapter XXV, paragraph 2)

Think-aloud: First, meaning. I read "Gardiner was a sensible, gentleman-like man, greatly superior to his sister, as well by nature as education" slowly and put it in my own words: Mr. Gardiner, who lives by trade in London, is described as sensible and more of a gentleman than his sister, Mrs. Bennet. Next, craft. I notice "gentleman-like" applied to a tradesman, which goes against the snobbery of the Bingley sisters. The strongest word is "superior": it ranks people by sense and manners rather than by birth. Then, effect. Why does Austen stress that Mr. Gardiner is superior to his sister? My answer: Austen shows that true gentility is character, not class; this prepares for Darcy's respect for the Gardiners at Pemberley.

40–55 min · We do: guided annotation · We do (15 min)
Guided analysis of a second quotation; expected answers given.
Ask: What words in this line stand out, and what do they suggest? Expected: Elizabeth insists Jane's loss was caused by "the interference of friends," not chance: an accurate suspicion of Darcy. Look at the craft: Mr. Gardiner, a tradesman, is sensible and well-bred: a contrast with the snobbery of Darcy's circle. Ask: How does this line connect to marriage and money? Expected: Mrs. Gardiner's advice is prudent rather than romantic. (Elizabeth insists Jane's loss was caused by "the interference of friends," not chance: an accurate suspicion of Darcy.)

> We do not suffer by accident (Chapter XXV, paragraph 7)

Ask: What words in this line stand out, and what do they suggest?
Expected answer: Elizabeth insists Jane's loss was caused by "the interference of friends," not chance: an accurate suspicion of Darcy. Look at the craft: Mr. Gardiner, a tradesman, is sensible and well-bred: a contrast with the snobbery of Darcy's circle.
Ask: How does this line connect to marriage and money?
Expected answer: Mrs. Gardiner's advice is prudent rather than romantic. (Elizabeth insists Jane's loss was caused by "the interference of friends," not chance: an accurate suspicion of Darcy.)

55–70 min · You do: independent annotation · You do (15 min)
Independent annotation and a claim-evidence-reasoning paragraph (exemplar given).
Annotate the chapter for characterization, characterization (three marks with a margin note each), then write one claim-evidence-reasoning paragraph: what does this chapter suggest about trusted relatives? Then start your writing prompt at your assigned level (HS Sophomore: Analyze how Chapter XXV develops the idea of trusted relatives. Make a precise claim, support it with at least three pieces of textual evidence, and explain how the author's use of characterization and setting shapes that idea. Address one possible counterclaim.) Exemplar: The Gardiners show that good sense and good manners do not depend on rank. When the text says “Gardiner was a sensible, gentleman-like man, greatly superior to his sister, as well by nature as education” (Chapter XXV, paragraph 2), it shows this directly. Mr. Gardiner is "a sensible, gentleman-like man, greatly superior to his sister," though he lives by trade, and his wife gives Elizabeth the wisest advice in the chapter.
Task: Annotate the chapter for characterization, characterization (three marks with a margin note each), then write one claim-evidence-reasoning paragraph: what does this chapter suggest about trusted relatives? Then start your writing prompt at your assigned level (HS Sophomore: Analyze how Chapter XXV develops the idea of trusted relatives. Make a precise claim, support it with at least three pieces of textual evidence, and explain how the author's use of characterization and setting shapes that idea. Address one possible counterclaim.)
Exemplar: The Gardiners show that good sense and good manners do not depend on rank. When the text says “Gardiner was a sensible, gentleman-like man, greatly superior to his sister, as well by nature as education” (Chapter XXV, paragraph 2), it shows this directly. Mr. Gardiner is "a sensible, gentleman-like man, greatly superior to his sister," though he lives by trade, and his wife gives Elizabeth the wisest advice in the chapter.

70–80 min · Discussion · We do (10 min)
Structured discussion from the 30 tiered questions, with facilitation notes.
Anchor question: Why are the Gardiners important despite their 'low' connections? Ask students to predict how Darcy will treat the Gardiners if they meet.
Anchor question: Why are the Gardiners important despite their 'low' connections?
Facilitation: Ask students to predict how Darcy will treat the Gardiners if they meet.

80–87 min · Exit ticket / chapter quiz · You do (7 min)
Chapter quiz in the app and an exit ticket (answer given).
Chapter quiz in the app, then: In one sentence, what does this chapter suggest about trusted relatives? Support it with one short quotation. Model answer: The Gardiners show that good sense and good manners do not depend on rank. ("Gardiner was a sensible, gentleman-like man, greatly superior to his sister, as well by nature as education", Chapter XXV, paragraph 2). Accept any defensible claim backed by a quotation from the chapter; the answer key for the quiz is in the Quiz section.
Exit ticket: In one sentence, what does this chapter suggest about trusted relatives? Support it with one short quotation.
Answer: Model answer: The Gardiners show that good sense and good manners do not depend on rank. ("Gardiner was a sensible, gentleman-like man, greatly superior to his sister, as well by nature as education", Chapter XXV, paragraph 2). Accept any defensible claim backed by a quotation from the chapter; the answer key for the quiz is in the Quiz section.

87–90 min · Closure · I do (3 min)
Summarize the lesson and preview the next reading.
Today we saw how characterization shapes trusted relatives. Key takeaway: Mrs. Gardiner's advice is prudent rather than romantic.

Total: 90 minutes.

Teacher analysis (spoilers)

Literary elements

- Characterization: The Gardiners visit for Christmas. Mrs. Gardiner listens to Mrs. Bennet's grievances, invites Jane to London, and notices Elizabeth's interest in Wickham; her warning follows in the next chapter.
- Characterization: Mr. Gardiner, a tradesman, is sensible and well-bred: a contrast with the snobbery of Darcy's circle.

Themes and how they develop

- marriage and money: Mrs. Gardiner's advice is prudent rather than romantic.

Symbols and motifs

- letters: Letters carry news, reveal character and change minds; Darcy's letter is the turning point of the novel. In this chapter: “cousins health and happiness again, and promised their father another letter of thanks” (Chapter XXV, paragraph 1).
- pride: Pride is discussed openly and shown in action; who is proud, and whether pride is a fault, keeps shifting. In this chapter: “heard Mr. Fitzwilliam Darcy formerly spoken of as a very proud, ill-natured boy” (Chapter XXV, paragraph 20).

Key quotations (checked against the reading text)

- “Gardiner was a sensible, gentleman-like man, greatly superior to his sister, as well by nature as education” (Chapter XXV, paragraph 2) Class is not character: a man in trade is a gentleman in manners.
- “We do not suffer by accident” (Chapter XXV, paragraph 7) Elizabeth insists Jane's loss was caused by "the interference of friends," not chance: an accurate suspicion of Darcy.
- “Mr. Darcy may perhaps have heard of such a place as Gracechurch Street” (Chapter XXV, paragraph 13) Elizabeth mocks Darcy's snobbery about the Gardiners' address in trade-class London.

Model claim-evidence-reasoning

Claim: The Gardiners show that good sense and good manners do not depend on rank.
Evidence: “Gardiner was a sensible, gentleman-like man, greatly superior to his sister, as well by nature as education” (Chapter XXV, paragraph 2)
Reasoning: Mr. Gardiner is "a sensible, gentleman-like man, greatly superior to his sister," though he lives by trade, and his wife gives Elizabeth the wisest advice in the chapter.

Vocabulary with etymology notes

Word	Definition (in this sentence)	In context	Word history
ablution (noun)	a washing or cleansing	Darcy may perhaps have heard of such a place as Gracechurch Street, but he would hardly think a month's ablution enough to cleanse him from its impurities, were he once to enter it; and depend upon it, Mr.	“ablution”: Origin: Old French ablution; earlier Late Latin ablūtiō (“a washing away”). (Liber et Libri origin note, https://en.wiktionary.org/wiki/ablution#Etymology)
reanimated (verb)	brought back to life or strength; revived	It was possible, and sometimes she thought it probable, that his affection might be reanimated, and the influence of his friends successfully combated by the more natural influence of Jane's attractions.	“reanimated”: Origin of “reanimate”: an English formation from re- + animate. (Liber et Libri origin note, https://en.wiktionary.org/wiki/reanimate#Etymology)
incivility (noun)	rudeness	Is not general incivility the very essence of love?”	“incivility”: Origin: Middle French incivilité; earlier Late Latin incivilitas (“incivility”). (Liber et Libri origin note, https://en.wiktionary.org/wiki/incivility#Etymology)

combated (verb)	battle or contend against in or as if in a battle	It was possible, and sometimes she thought it probable, that his affection might be reanimated, and the influence of his friends successfully combated by the more natural influence of Jane's attractions.
hackneyed (adjective)	repeated too often; overfamiliar through overuse	"But that expression of 'violently in love' is so hackneyed, so doubtful, so indefinite, that it gives me very little idea.
warehouses (noun)	a storehouse for goods and merchandise	The Netherfield ladies would have had difficulty in believing that a man who lived by trade, and within view of his own warehouses, could have been so well bred and agreeable.
grievances (noun)	complaints	Bennet had many grievances to relate, and much to complain of.
thwarted (verb)	hinder or prevent (the efforts, plans, or desires) of	It makes me very nervous and poorly, to be thwarted so in my own family, and to have neighbours who think of themselves before anybody else.	"thwarted": Origin of "thwart": Old Norse þvert. (Liber et Libri origin note, https://en.wiktionary.org/wiki/thwart#Etymology)
custody (noun)	care and protection	"And that is quite impossible; for he is now in the custody of his friend, and Mr.
inexhaustible (adjective)	that cannot be entirely consumed or used up	Here consequently was an inexhaustible subject of discourse.

Discussion questions

1. Why are the Gardiners important despite their 'low' connections?
2. Where does characterization appear in this chapter, and what effect does it have? Point to one passage.
3. How does this chapter connect to the book's larger concern with women's limited choices?

Classroom discussion questions (30, tiered)

Wait time after every question (3 s for DOK 1, 5 s for DOK 2, 8 to 10 s for DOK 3 and 4); think-pair-share on DOK 3 and 4; answer each response with a follow-up probe; close with student-generated questions. Focus sets by rigor level: Scaffolded support: 1, 2, 3, 4, 5, 6, 11, 12, 13, 14, 21, 22; HS Freshman: 1, 2, 3, 4, 5, 12, 13, 14, 15, 22, 23, 24; HS Sophomore: 1, 2, 3, 4, 13, 14, 15, 16, 17, 23, 24, 25; HS Junior: 1, 2, 3, 14, 15, 16, 17, 18, 24, 25, 26, 27; HS Senior: 1, 2, 3, 15, 16, 17, 18, 25, 26, 27, 28, 29; AP: 1, 2, 16, 17, 18, 19, 20, 26, 27, 28, 29, 30; College Freshman: 1, 2, 17, 18, 19, 20, 21, 22, 27, 28, 29, 30; College Sophomore: 1, 2, 11, 18, 19, 20, 21, 22, 23, 28, 29, 30; College Junior: 1, 11, 12, 19, 20, 21, 22, 23, 24, 25, 29, 30; College Senior: 1, 11, 12, 13, 20, 21, 22, 23, 24, 25, 26, 30; Graduate / PhD: 1, 11, 12, 13, 21, 22, 23, 24, 25, 26, 27, 28

Literal / recall

1. Who are the Gardiners? [DOK 1 · coldCallWithSupport · wait 3 s · AP: unit standards] Look for: Mrs. Bennet's brother and his wife
2. What does Mrs. Gardiner warn Elizabeth about? [DOK 1 · turnAndTalk · wait 3 s · AP: unit standards] Look for: Falling for Wickham
3. Where do the Gardiners live? [DOK 1 · coldCallWithSupport · wait 3 s · AP: unit standards] Look for: Cheapside in London
4. Who goes to London with them? [DOK 1 · turnAndTalk · wait 3 s · AP: unit standards] Look for: Jane
5. What do the Gardiners show about class? [DOK 1 · coldCallWithSupport · wait 3 s · AP: unit standards] Look for: Good sense is not tied to rank
6. Retell the three most important events of "Chapter XXV" in order, in one sentence each. [DOK 1 · turnAndTalk · wait 3 s · AP: unit standards] Look for: The Gardiners, Mrs. Bennet's sensible brother and his wife, visit for Christmas. Mrs. Gardiner warns Elizabeth not to fall for Wickham, who lacks fortune, and invites Jane to London.
7. Which characters appear or are mentioned in "Chapter XXV"? Name two and one thing each says or does. [DOK 1 · coldCallWithSupport · wait 3 s · AP: unit standards] Look for: Names and actions taken from the chapter; check against the teacher summary.
8. Where and when does "Chapter XXV" take place? Point to the line that tells you. [DOK 1 · turnAndTalk · wait 3 s · AP: unit standards] Look for: A place/time detail quoted from the chapter.
9. Reread: "Darcy may perhaps have heard of such a place as Gracechurch Street, but he would hardly think a month's ablution enough to cleanse him from its impurities, were he once to enter it; and depend upon it, Mr." What does "ablution" mean here, and what is literally happening in this line? [DOK 1 · turnAndTalk · wait 3 s · AP: unit standards] Look for: ablution: a washing or cleansing.
10. Reread: "It was possible, and sometimes she thought it probable, that his affection might be reanimated, and the influence of his friends successfully combated by the more natural influence of Jane's attractions." What does "reanimated" mean here, and what is literally happening in this line? [DOK 1 · turnAndTalk · wait 3 s · AP: unit standards] Look for: reanimated: brought back to life or strength; revived.

Inferential / analytical

1. What does "Chapter XXV" suggest about trusted relatives? State the inference and the line that supports it. [DOK 2 · thinkPairShare · wait 5 s · AP-LIT.LAN] Look for: The Gardiners show that good sense and manners are not tied to rank.
2. Find one example of characterization in this chapter. What does it reveal that a plain statement would not? [DOK 2 · followUp · wait 5 s · AP-LIT.CHR] Look for: Look for what characters say, do and think, and how others react to them.
3. How does the setting in this chapter shape what we understand about trusted relatives? [DOK 3 · thinkPairShare · wait 8 s · AP-LIT.SET] Look for: Look for where and when events happen and how place shapes action or feeling.

   Answer guidance: A defensible line of argument: The Gardiners show that good sense and good manners do not depend on rank. Useful evidence: "Gardiner was a sensible, gentleman-like man, greatly superior to his sister, as well by nature as education” (Chapter XXV, paragraph 2): Class is not character: a man in trade is a gentleman in manners. Theme link: Mrs. Gardiner's advice is prudent rather than romantic. Credit any position that is supported by quotation and reasoning; push one-sided answers to address the strongest counterpoint.

4. In the passage that begins “On the following Monday, Mrs.”, why might Austen have chosen these particular words? Pick two and explain their connotations. [DOK 2 · followUp · wait 5 s · AP-LIT.FIG] Look for: Diction analysis of two words in the anchor passage.
5. What causes the main turn in “Chapter XXV”, and what effect is it likely to have on what follows? [DOK 2 · followUp · wait 5 s · AP-LIT.STR] Look for: The Gardiners, Mrs. Bennet's sensible brother and his wife, visit for Christmas. Mrs. Gardiner warns Elizabeth not to fall for Wickham, who lacks fortune, and invites Jane to London.
6. How does “Chapter XXV” build on “Chapter XXIV”? Name one link of cause and effect. [DOK 3 · thinkPairShare · wait 8 s · AP-LIT.STR] Look for: A causal or structural link between this and the previous chapter.
   Answer guidance: A defensible line of argument: The Gardiners show that good sense and good manners do not depend on rank. Useful evidence: “We do not suffer by accident” (Chapter XXV, paragraph 7): Elizabeth insists Jane's loss was caused by "the interference of friends," not chance: an accurate suspicion of Darcy. Theme link: Mrs. Gardiner's advice is prudent rather than romantic. Credit any position that is supported by quotation and reasoning; push one-sided answers to address the strongest counterpoint.
7. What can we infer about a character's motives from what they say and do here, as opposed to what they claim? [DOK 3 · followUp · wait 8 s · AP-LIT.CHR] Look for: An inference about motive supported by a quoted line.
   Answer guidance: A defensible line of argument: The Gardiners show that good sense and good manners do not depend on rank. Useful evidence: “Mr. Darcy may perhaps have heard of such a place as Gracechurch Street” (Chapter XXV, paragraph 13): Elizabeth mocks Darcy's snobbery about the Gardiners' address in trade-class London. On characterization: Mr. Gardiner, a tradesman, is sensible and well-bred: a contrast with the snobbery of Darcy's circle. Credit any position that is supported by quotation and reasoning; push one-sided answers to address the strongest counterpoint.
8. The bell-ringer asked: “Why are the Gardiners important despite their 'low' connections?” Now that we have read closely, how would you revise your first answer, and which line changed your mind? [DOK 2 · thinkPairShare · wait 5 s · AP-LIT.LAN] Look for: A revised answer anchored in the text.
9. Where does plot appear, and how does it connect this chapter to the larger concern with women's limited choices? [DOK 3 · followUp · wait 8 s · AP-LIT.STR] Look for: Look for key events and the causes linking them.
   Answer guidance: A defensible line of argument: The Gardiners show that good sense and good manners do not depend on rank. Useful evidence: “Gardiner was a sensible, gentleman-like man, greatly superior to his sister, as well by nature as education” (Chapter XXV, paragraph 2): Class is not character: a man in trade is a gentleman in manners. Theme link: Mrs. Gardiner's advice is prudent rather than romantic. Credit any position that is supported by quotation and reasoning; push one-sided answers to address the strongest counterpoint.
10. Background: The Gardiners live in Cheapside, a merchant area looked down on by the Bingley sisters. How does knowing this change the way you read one moment in the chapter? [DOK 3 · thinkPairShare · wait 8 s · AP-LIT.SET] Look for: A specific moment reread in light of the context.
    Answer guidance: A defensible line of argument: The Gardiners show that good sense and good manners do not depend on rank. Useful evidence: “We do not suffer by accident” (Chapter XXV, paragraph 7): Elizabeth insists Jane's loss was caused by "the interference of friends," not chance: an accurate suspicion of Darcy. Theme link: Mrs. Gardiner's advice is prudent rather than romantic. Credit any position that is supported by quotation and reasoning; push one-sided answers to address the strongest counterpoint.

Evaluative / synthesis / creative

1. A critic might argue: “The Gardiners show that good sense and manners are not tied to rank.” How far do you agree? Take a stand and defend it with two lines from the chapter. [DOK 3 · fourCorners · wait 8 s · AP-LIT.LAN] Look for: A defended position with evidence and one counterpoint.
   Answer guidance: A defensible line of argument: The Gardiners show that good sense and good manners do not depend on rank. Useful evidence: “Mr. Darcy may perhaps have heard of such a place as Gracechurch Street” (Chapter XXV, paragraph 13): Elizabeth mocks Darcy's snobbery about the Gardiners' address in trade-class London. Theme link: Mrs. Gardiner's advice is prudent rather than romantic. Credit any position that is supported by quotation and reasoning; push one-sided answers to address the strongest counterpoint.
2. Which character in this chapter acts most wisely, and which least? Judge them by a standard you name. [DOK 3 · thinkPairShare · wait 8 s · AP-LIT.CHR, AP-LIT.LAN] Look for: An evaluation using an explicit criterion and evidence.
   Answer guidance: A defensible line of argument: The Gardiners show that good sense and good manners do not depend on rank. Useful evidence: “Gardiner was a sensible, gentleman-like man, greatly superior to his sister, as well by nature as education” (Chapter XXV, paragraph 2): Class is not character: a man in trade is a gentleman in manners. On characterization: Mr. Gardiner, a tradesman, is sensible and well-bred: a contrast with the snobbery of Darcy's circle. Credit any position that is supported by quotation and reasoning; push one-sided answers to address the strongest counterpoint.
3. Rewrite one moment of “Chapter XXV” from the point of view of a different character. What does the new angle reveal or hide about trusted relatives? [DOK 4 · thinkPairShare · wait 8 s · AP-LIT.LAN, AP-LIT.NAR] Look for: A creative product with a rationale tied to the text.
   Answer guidance: A defensible line of argument: The Gardiners show that good sense and good manners do not depend on rank. Useful evidence: “We do not suffer by accident” (Chapter XXV, paragraph 7): Elizabeth insists Jane's loss was caused by "the interference of friends," not chance: an accurate suspicion of Darcy. Theme link: Mrs. Gardiner's advice is prudent rather than romantic. Credit any position that is supported by quotation and reasoning; push one-sided answers to address the strongest counterpoint.
4. Write three questions of your own about “Chapter XXV”: one recall, one “why/how”, and one “should/what if”. Trade with a partner and answer theirs. [DOK 3 · studentGenerated · wait 8 s · AP-LIT.LAN] Look for: Student-generated questions at three levels.
   Answer guidance: A defensible line of argument: The Gardiners show that good sense and good manners do not depend on rank. Useful evidence: “Mr. Darcy may perhaps have heard of such a place as Gracechurch Street” (Chapter XXV, paragraph 13): Elizabeth mocks Darcy's snobbery about the Gardiners' address in trade-class London. Theme link: Mrs. Gardiner's advice is prudent rather than romantic. Credit any position that is supported by quotation and reasoning; push one-sided answers to address the strongest counterpoint.
5. Connect this chapter to first impressions and prejudice: is the link strong or weak so far? What would Austen need to show next to strengthen it? [DOK 4 · socraticCircle · wait 8 s · AP-LIT.LAN] Look for: A judgment of thematic development across the work.
   Answer guidance: A defensible line of argument: The Gardiners show that good sense and good manners do not depend on rank. Useful evidence: “Gardiner was a sensible, gentleman-like man, greatly superior to his sister, as well by nature as education” (Chapter XXV, paragraph 2): Class is not character: a man in trade is a gentleman in manners. Theme link: Mrs. Gardiner's advice is prudent rather than romantic. Credit any position that is supported by quotation and reasoning; push one-sided answers to address the strongest counterpoint.

6. Is the characterization in this chapter effective, or does it feel heavy-handed? Evaluate it as a reader would in a review. [DOK 3 · fourCorners · wait 8 s · AP-LIT.CHR, AP-LIT.LAN] Look for: An evaluative judgment with criteria and evidence.

   Answer guidance: A defensible line of argument: The Gardiners show that good sense and good manners do not depend on rank. Useful evidence: “We do not suffer by accident” (Chapter XXV, paragraph 7): Elizabeth insists Jane's loss was caused by "the interference of friends," not chance: an accurate suspicion of Darcy. On characterization: Mr. Gardiner, a tradesman, is sensible and well-bred: a contrast with the snobbery of Darcy's circle. Credit any position that is supported by quotation and reasoning; push one-sided answers to address the strongest counterpoint.

7. Compare how “Chapter XXV” treats trusted relatives with how another text, film or event you know treats a similar idea. What does Pride and Prejudice see that the other misses? [DOK 4 · socraticCircle · wait 8 s · AP-LIT.LAN] Look for: A cross-text synthesis.

   Answer guidance: A defensible line of argument: The Gardiners show that good sense and good manners do not depend on rank. Useful evidence: “Mr. Darcy may perhaps have heard of such a place as Gracechurch Street” (Chapter XXV, paragraph 13): Elizabeth mocks Darcy's snobbery about the Gardiners' address in trade-class London. Theme link: Mrs. Gardiner's advice is prudent rather than romantic. Credit any position that is supported by quotation and reasoning; push one-sided answers to address the strongest counterpoint.

8. Predict what “Chapter XXVI” will bring, using two clues from this chapter. After reading, evaluate your prediction. [DOK 3 · thinkPairShare · wait 8 s · AP-LIT.LAN, AP-LIT.STR] Look for: A prediction or judgment justified with textual clues.

   Answer guidance: A defensible line of argument: The Gardiners show that good sense and good manners do not depend on rank. Useful evidence: “Gardiner was a sensible, gentleman-like man, greatly superior to his sister, as well by nature as education” (Chapter XXV, paragraph 2): Class is not character: a man in trade is a gentleman in manners. Theme link: Mrs. Gardiner's advice is prudent rather than romantic. Credit any position that is supported by quotation and reasoning; push one-sided answers to address the strongest counterpoint.

9. Design a one-paragraph modern adaptation of this chapter (setting, characters, conflict). What must stay the same for it to still be about trusted relatives? [DOK 4 · thinkPairShare · wait 8 s · AP-LIT.LAN] Look for: A creative transfer that keeps the core idea.

   Answer guidance: A defensible line of argument: The Gardiners show that good sense and good manners do not depend on rank. Useful evidence: “We do not suffer by accident” (Chapter XXV, paragraph 7): Elizabeth insists Jane's loss was caused by "the interference of friends," not chance: an accurate suspicion of Darcy. Theme link: Mrs. Gardiner's advice is prudent rather than romantic. Credit any position that is supported by quotation and reasoning; push one-sided answers to address the strongest counterpoint.

10. What question would you most like to ask Jane Austen about this chapter, and what answer do you think the text itself gives? [DOK 4 · studentGenerated · wait 8 s · AP-LIT.LAN] Look for: A student-generated question answered from evidence.

Answer guidance: A defensible line of argument: The Gardiners show that good sense and good manners do not depend on rank. Useful evidence: "Mr. Darcy may perhaps have heard of such a place as Gracechurch Street" (Chapter XXV, paragraph 13): Elizabeth mocks Darcy's snobbery about the Gardiners' address in trade-class London. Theme link: Mrs. Gardiner's advice is prudent rather than romantic. Credit any position that is supported by quotation and reasoning; push one-sided answers to address the strongest counterpoint.

Annotation focus

- Characterization: look for what characters say, do and think, and how others react to them (anchor passage in the We do segment)
- Also notice Setting: where and when events happen and how place shapes action or feeling
- Also notice Plot: key events and the causes linking them

Chapter quiz: item bank (all eleven rigor versions)

1. [mc · recall · DOK 1] What does Mrs. Gardiner warn Elizabeth about?

   A. Darcy
   B. Collins
   C. Travel
   D. Falling for Wickham

   Key: D (Falling for Wickham)

2. [fill · recall · DOK 1] Complete the quotation from Chapter XXV, paragraph 7: "We do not suffer by _____"
   Key: accident

3. [mc · recall · DOK 1] What do the Gardiners show about class?

   A. Good sense is not tied to rank
   B. Money is everything
   C. Merchants are foolish
   D. Rank guarantees virtue

   Key: A (Good sense is not tied to rank)

4. [mc · recall · DOK 1] In the line "Is not general incivility the very essence of love?", what does "incivility" most nearly mean?

   A. rudeness
   B. uncertain; not fixed
   C. diffusing warmth and friendliness
   D. promotion to a better position, especially in the church

   Key: A (rudeness)

5. [fill · recall · DOK 1] Fill in the blank with the vocabulary word that fits: "Bennet had many _____ to relate, and much to complain of." Word bank: grievances, reanimated, incivility, ablution
   Key: grievances

6. [fill · recall · DOK 1] Complete the quotation from Chapter XXV, paragraph 13: "Mr. Darcy may _____ have heard of such a place as Gracechurch Street"
   Key: perhaps

7. [fill · recall · DOK 1] Fill in the blank with the vocabulary word that fits: “But that expression of ‘violently in love’ is so _____, so doubtful, so indefinite, that it gives me very little idea.” Word bank: hackneyed, reanimated, incivility, ablution

   Key: hackneyed

8. [mc · recall · DOK 1] In the line “It was possible, and sometimes she thought it probable, that his affection might be reanimated, and the influence of his friends successfully combated by the more natural influence of Jane’s attractions.”, what does “combated” most nearly mean?

   A. add to the end

   B. cause to feel resentment or indignation

   C. battle or contend against in or as if in a battle

   D. utter aloud; often with surprise, horror, or joy

   Key: C (battle or contend against in or as if in a battle)

9. [fill · recall · DOK 1] Fill in the blank with the vocabulary word that fits: “The Netherfield ladies would have had difficulty in believing that a man who lived by trade, and within view of his own _____, could have been so well bred and agreeable.” Word bank: incivility, ablution, warehouses, reanimated

   Key: warehouses

10. [fill · recall · DOK 1] Fill in the blank with the vocabulary word that fits: “It makes me very nervous and poorly, to be _____ so in my own family, and to have neighbours who think of themselves before anybody else.” Word bank: incivility, ablution, thwarted, reanimated

    Key: thwarted

11. [mc · recall · DOK 1] Who goes to London with them?

    A. Lydia

    B. Elizabeth

    C. Mary

    D. Jane

    Key: D (Jane)

12. [short · inference · DOK 2] What can you infer from this line? “Gardiner was a sensible, gentleman-like man, greatly superior to his sister, as well by nature as education” (Chapter XXV, paragraph 2) Answer in two or three sentences with one detail.

    Sample answer: Class is not character: a man in trade is a gentleman in manners. The evidence is “Gardiner was a sensible, gentleman-like man, greatly superior to his sister, as well by nature as education” (Chapter XXV, paragraph 2).

13. [mc · inference · DOK 2] Which choice best states a central concern of “Chapter XXV”?

    A. Trusted relatives

    B. The hidden benefactor

    C. Character flaws examined

    D. Parental failure

    Key: A (Trusted relatives)

14. [mc · analysis · DOK 3] In this chapter, which theme does the following most directly develop? Mrs. Gardiner's advice is prudent rather than romantic.

    A. First impressions and prejudice

    B. Pride and self-knowledge

C. Class and social mobility

D. Marriage and money

Key: D (Marriage and money)

15. [mc · analysis · DOK 3] Which literary element does this describe in “Chapter XXV”? The Gardiners visit for Christmas. Mrs. Gardiner listens to Mrs. Bennet's grievances, invites Jane to London, and notices Elizabeth's interest in Wickham; her warning follows in the next chapter.

A. Tone / mood

B. Hyperbole

C. Characterization

D. Metaphor

Key: C (Characterization)

16. [short · synthesis · DOK 4] Synthesis: trace how marriage and money develops from Chapter XXIII to Chapter XXV. Use one quotation from each.

Sample answer: Earlier, in Chapter XXIII, paragraph 1, the text reads “Sir William Lucas himself appeared, sent by his daughter to announce her engagement to the family”, which shows the news delivered formally, a social ritual. In Chapter XXV, “Gardiner was a sensible, gentleman-like man, greatly superior to his sister, as well by nature as education” (Chapter XXV, paragraph 2) — Class is not character: a man in trade is a gentleman in manners. Mrs. Gardiner's advice is prudent rather than romantic.

17. [mc · recall · DOK 1] Which word completes this sentence from Chapter XXV, paragraph 6? “A young man, such as you describe Mr. Bingley, so easily falls in love with a pretty girl for a few weeks, and when accident separates them, so easily forgets her, that these sort of _____ are very frequent.”

A. refused

B. distribute

C. especially

D. inconstancies

Key: D (inconstancies)

18. [fill · recall · DOK 1] Complete the quotation from Chapter XXV, paragraph 4: “He made her an offer in this very room, and she _____ him.” Word bank: inconstancies, refused, receiving, sister

Key: refused

19. [fill · recall · DOK 1] Complete the quotation from Chapter XXV, paragraph 2: “Gardiner was a sensible, _____-like man, greatly superior to his sister, as well by nature as education”

Key: gentleman

20. [fill · recall · DOK 1] Complete the quotation from Chapter XXV, paragraph 9: “At his own ball he offended two or three young ladies, by not asking them to dance, and I spoke to him twice myself, without _____ an answer.” Word bank: refused, sister, receiving, correspondence

Key: receiving

21. [short · inference · DOK 2] What does this passage from Chapter XXV, paragraph 7 reveal about the character or situation? “An excellent consolation in its way,’ said Elizabeth, ‘but it will not do for us.” Answer in two or three sentences with one detail.

Sample answer: The passage (Chapter XXV, paragraph 7) shows the situation turning on first impressions and prejudice:

Mrs. Gardiner's advice is prudent rather than romantic. The words “consolation” and “excellent” are the proof, because they show how the moment looks to the people in it. They suggest more than the narrator states outright.

22. [mc · inference · DOK 2] Which of these passages comes earliest in Chapter XXV?

    A. “On the following Monday, Mrs. Bennet had the pleasure of receiving her brother and his wife, who came as usual to spend the Christmas at…”

    B. “Mrs. Gardiner, who was several years younger than Mrs. Bennet and Mrs. Philips, was an amiable, intelligent, elegant woman, and a great…”

    C. “After a week spent in professions of love and schemes of felicity, Mr. Collins was called from his amiable Charlotte by the arrival of…”

    D. “He took leave of his relations at Longbourn with as much solemnity as before; wished his fair cousins health and happiness again, and…”

    Key: C (“After a week spent in professions of love and schemes of felicity, Mr. Collins was called from his amiable Charlotte by the arrival of…”)

23. [short · analysis · DOK 3] Analyze how the word choice in this passage from Chapter XXV, paragraph 2 shapes its tone: “Mrs. Gardiner, who was several years younger than Mrs. Bennet and Mrs. Philips, was an amiable, intelligent, elegant woman, and a great favourite with all her Longbourn nieces.” Pick two words and explain their effect.

    Sample answer: The words “intelligent” and “favourite” (Chapter XXV, paragraph 2) make the tone heavy and deliberate rather than neutral. That weight points the reader to pride and self-knowledge: Mrs. Gardiner's advice is prudent rather than romantic. The author chooses them so the moment feels significant instead of passing.

24. [short · analysis · DOK 3] Claim: The Gardiners show that good sense and good manners do not depend on rank. Explain how this evidence supports the claim: “Gardiner was a sensible, gentleman-like man, greatly superior to his sister, as well by nature as education” (Chapter XXV, paragraph 2).

    Sample answer: Mr. Gardiner is "a sensible, gentleman-like man, greatly superior to his sister," though he lives by trade, and his wife gives Elizabeth the wisest advice in the chapter. The evidence is “Gardiner was a sensible, gentleman-like man, greatly superior to his sister, as well by nature as education” (Chapter XXV, paragraph 2) — Class is not character: a man in trade is a gentleman in manners. This develops marriage and money: Mrs. Gardiner's advice is prudent rather than romantic.

25. [short · synthesis · DOK 4] Connect this passage from Chapter XXV, paragraph 18 to the story's treatment of women's limited choices: “The Gardiners stayed a week at Longbourn; and what with the Philipses, the Lucases, and the officers, there was not a day without its engagement.” Use one other moment from the story as well.

    Sample answer: This passage (Chapter XXV, paragraph 18) develops women's limited choices: Mrs. Gardiner's advice is prudent rather than romantic. Its words “engagement” and “officers” carry that idea into this moment. The same concern returns in “When the engagement was for home, some of the officers always made part of it, of which officers Mr. Wickham was sure…” (Chapter XXV, paragraph 18), so the two passages read as a pattern, not a single moment. Together they show the story treating women's limited choices as central.

26. [mc · recall · DOK 1] Who are the Gardiners?

    A. Mrs. Bennet's brother and his wife

    B. Darcy's cousins

    C. Neighbors

    D. Collins's parents

Key: A (Mrs. Bennet's brother and his wife)

27. [fill · recall · DOK 1] Complete the quotation from Chapter XXV, paragraph 1: “After a week spent in _____ of love and schemes of felicity, Mr. Collins was called from his amiable Charlotte by the arrival of Saturday.”
Word bank: correspondence, prevailed, inconstancies, professions
Key: professions

28. [short · analysis · DOK 3] Analyze the word choice in “Mr. Darcy may perhaps have heard of such a place as Gracechurch Street” (Chapter XXV, paragraph 13). Pick two words and explain what they suggest.
Sample answer: Elizabeth mocks Darcy's snobbery about the Gardiners' address in trade-class London. The evidence is “Mr. Darcy may perhaps have heard of such a place as Gracechurch Street” (Chapter XXV, paragraph 13). This develops marriage and money: Mrs. Gardiner's advice is prudent rather than romantic. The words “perhaps” and “place” carry that meaning: they are the charged choices in the line, and changing either would soften the effect.

29. [short · synthesis · DOK 4] Connect this passage from Chapter XXV, paragraph 20 to the story's treatment of marriage and money: “Mrs. Gardiner had seen Pemberley, and known the late Mr. Darcy by character perfectly well.” Use one other moment from the story as well.
Sample answer: This passage (Chapter XXV, paragraph 20) develops marriage and money: Mrs. Gardiner's advice is prudent rather than romantic. Its words “perfectly” and “character” carry that idea into this moment. The same concern returns in “He took leave of his relations at Longbourn with as much solemnity as before; wished his fair cousins health and…” (Chapter XXV, paragraph 1), so the two passages read as a pattern, not a single moment. Together they show the story treating marriage and money as central.

30. [short · synthesis · DOK 4] Connect this passage from Chapter XXV, paragraph 3 to the story's treatment of women's limited choices: “When this was done, she had a less active part to play.” Use one other moment from the story as well.
Sample answer: This passage (Chapter XXV, paragraph 3) develops women's limited choices: Mrs. Gardiner's advice is prudent rather than romantic. Its words “active” carry that idea into this moment. The same concern returns in “However, your coming just at this time is the greatest of comforts, and I am very glad to hear what you tell us, of…” (Chapter XXV, paragraph 4), so the two passages read as a pattern, not a single moment. Together they show the story treating women's limited choices as central.

31. [short · analysis · DOK 3 · AP: AP-LIT.FIG] Analyze how the word choice in this passage from Chapter XXV, paragraph 10 shapes its tone: “Change of scene might be of service—and perhaps a little relief from home, may be as useful as anything.” Pick two words and explain their effect.
Sample answer: The words “anything” and “service” (Chapter XXV, paragraph 10) make the tone heavy and deliberate rather than neutral. That weight points the reader to class and social mobility: Mrs. Gardiner's advice is prudent rather than romantic. The author chooses them so the moment feels significant instead of passing.

32. [short · analysis · DOK 3 · AP: AP-LIT.FIG] Analyze how the word choice in this passage from Chapter XXV, paragraph 12 shapes its tone: “I hope,’ added Mrs. Gardiner, ‘that no consideration with regard to this young man will influence her.” Pick two words and explain their effect.
Sample answer: The words “consideration” and “influence” (Chapter XXV, paragraph 12) make the tone heavy and deliberate rather than neutral. That weight points the reader to pride and self-knowledge: Mrs. Gardiner's advice is prudent rather than romantic. The author chooses them so the moment feels significant instead of passing.

33. [short · synthesis · DOK 4 · AP: AP-LIT.LAN] Evaluate this claim about the chapter: “The Gardiners show that good sense and good manners do not depend on rank.” Is it fully persuasive? Argue with evidence, including a passage that complicates it.
Sample answer: The claim is persuasive in part. “Gardiner was a sensible, gentleman-like man, greatly superior to his sister, as well by nature as education” (Chapter XXV, paragraph 2) supports it: Mr. Gardiner is "a sensible, gentleman-like man, greatly superior to his sister," though he lives by trade, and his wife gives Elizabeth the wisest advice in the chapter. But “We do not suffer by accident” (Chapter XXV, paragraph 7) complicates it: Elizabeth insists Jane's loss was caused by "the interference of friends," not chance: an accurate suspicion of Darcy, and its “not” marks a limit or reversal the claim passes over. So the claim stands only in a qualified form: true of the chapter's main pattern, but not of every moment in it.

34. [mc · analysis · DOK 3 · AP: AP-LIT.CHR] Which literary element does this describe in “Chapter XXV”? Mr. Gardiner, a tradesman, is sensible and well-bred: a contrast with the snobbery of Darcy's circle.

    A. Tone / mood

    B. Theme

    C. Hyperbole

    D. Characterization

    Key: D (Characterization)

35. [short · synthesis · DOK 4 · AP: AP-LIT.FIG] Close reading: how do the diction and syntax of “Gardiner was a sensible, gentleman-like man, greatly superior to his sister, as well by nature as education” (Chapter XXV, paragraph 2) shape its meaning? Consider a second, competing reading.

    Sample answer: Class is not character: a man in trade is a gentleman in manners. The evidence is “Gardiner was a sensible, gentleman-like man, greatly superior to his sister, as well by nature as education” (Chapter XXV, paragraph 2). This develops marriage and money: Mrs. Gardiner's advice is prudent rather than romantic. The words “gentleman” and “education” carry that meaning: they are the charged choices in the line, and changing either would soften the effect. Mr. Gardiner is "a sensible, gentleman-like man, greatly superior to his sister," though he lives by trade, and his wife gives Elizabeth the wisest advice in the chapter.

36. [mc · recall · DOK 1 · Dual Credit (Indiana College Core): ICC-WC-1.5] Which word completes this sentence from Chapter XXV, paragraph 3? “The first part of Mrs. Gardiner’s business on her arrival, was to _____ her presents and describe the newest fashions.”

    A. especially

    B. continued

    C. sister

    D. distribute

    Key: D (distribute)

37. [mc · inference · DOK 2 · Dual Credit (Indiana College Core): ICC-WC-1.5] What does this passage most clearly show? “Gardiner was a sensible, gentleman-like man, greatly superior to his sister, as well by nature as education” (Chapter XXV, paragraph 2)

    A. The Wickhams wear out their welcome.

    B. The narrator lets us see Darcy's attention, while Elizabeth misreads it as disapproval.

    C. Jane's letter: the fear that Wickham will not marry Lydia, which would ruin her.

    D. Class is not character: a man in trade is a gentleman in manners.

    Key: D (Class is not character: a man in trade is a gentleman in manners.)

38. [short · synthesis · DOK 4 · Dual Credit (Indiana College Core): ICC-WC-1.5] Connect this passage from Chapter XXV, paragraph 4 to the story's treatment of marriage and money: “The consequence of it is, that Lady Lucas will have a daughter married before I have, and that Longbourn estate is just as much entailed as ever.” Use one other moment from the story as well.

Sample answer: This passage (Chapter XXV, paragraph 4) develops marriage and money: Mrs. Gardiner's advice is prudent rather than romantic. Its words “consequence” and “entailed” carry that idea into this moment. The same concern returns in “They are all for what they can get.” (Chapter XXV, paragraph 4), so the two passages read as a pattern, not a single moment. Together they show the story treating marriage and money as central.

39. [short · inference · DOK 2 · Program outcome: LeL-C2-LIT-1] What can you infer from this line? “We do not suffer by accident” (Chapter XXV, paragraph 7) Answer in two or three sentences with one detail.
Sample answer: Elizabeth insists Jane's loss was caused by "the interference of friends," not chance: an accurate suspicion of Darcy. The evidence is “We do not suffer by accident” (Chapter XXV, paragraph 7).

40. [short · synthesis · DOK 4 · Program outcome: LeL-GR-LIT-1] Close reading: how do the diction and syntax of “We do not suffer by accident” (Chapter XXV, paragraph 7) shape its meaning? Consider a second, competing reading.
Sample answer: Elizabeth insists Jane's loss was caused by "the interference of friends," not chance: an accurate suspicion of Darcy. The evidence is “We do not suffer by accident” (Chapter XXV, paragraph 7). This develops marriage and money: Mrs. Gardiner's advice is prudent rather than romantic. The words “accident” and “suffer” carry that meaning: they are the charged choices in the line, and changing either would soften the effect. Mr. Gardiner is "a sensible, gentleman-like man, greatly superior to his sister," though he lives by trade, and his wife gives Elizabeth the wisest advice in the chapter.

Rigor version	Items (in order)	Mix
Scaffolded support	1, 2, 3, 4, 5, 6, 7, 8, 9, 10, 11, 12, 13, 14, 15, 16	recall 11, inference 2, analysis 2, synthesis 1
HS Freshman	4, 17, 18, 10, 1, 19, 7, 11, 20, 13, 21, 22, 14, 23, 24, 25	recall 9, inference 3, analysis 3, synthesis 1
HS Sophomore	17, 7, 19, 26, 1, 27, 20, 21, 22, 12, 13, 23, 28, 14, 29, 30	recall 7, inference 4, analysis 3, synthesis 2
HS Junior	8, 6, 4, 7, 10, 26, 3, 21, 22, 13, 28, 31, 14, 32, 33, 29	recall 7, inference 3, analysis 4, synthesis 2
HS Senior	18, 10, 19, 5, 1, 3, 21, 22, 13, 15, 34, 23, 32, 25, 16, 33	recall 6, inference 3, analysis 4, synthesis 3
AP	7, 9, 4, 13, 21, 22, 15, 28, 14, 32, 31, 33, 29, 35, 25, 16	recall 3, inference 3, analysis 5, synthesis 5
College Freshman	10, 5, 36, 21, 13, 22, 37, 14, 32, 23, 31, 15, 16, 38, 29, 30	recall 3, inference 4, analysis 5, synthesis 4
College Sophomore	6, 9, 13, 21, 39, 12, 14, 15, 34, 32, 23, 38, 33, 30, 29, 25	recall 2, inference 4, analysis 5, synthesis 5
College Junior	7, 9, 21, 13, 22, 14, 34, 31, 32, 23, 35, 30, 29, 38, 25, 16	recall 2, inference 3, analysis 5, synthesis 6
College Senior	7, 9, 21, 22, 23, 15, 32, 34, 28, 14, 25, 16, 38, 29, 30, 33	recall 2, inference 2, analysis 6, synthesis 6
Graduate / PhD	19, 7, 22, 15, 32, 23, 14, 34, 31, 38, 33, 30, 40, 16, 25, 29	recall 2, inference 1, analysis 6, synthesis 7

Writing prompts (eleven rigor levels)

Scaffolded support (250 words; AP: see unit standards): Supported track (work from the passage your teacher selects). In “Chapter XXV,” how does Austen show trusted relatives? Write a paragraph that states your claim, quotes two details from the passage, and explains how each detail supports your idea. Use the characterization you noticed as one piece of evidence.

HS Freshman (350 words; AP: see unit standards): In Chapter XXV, how does Austen develop the idea of trusted relatives? State a clear claim, support it with two or three quotations, and explain how the characterization in the chapter helps build that idea.

HS Sophomore (450 words; AP: see unit standards): Analyze how Chapter XXV develops the idea of trusted relatives. Make a precise claim, support it with at least three pieces of textual evidence, and explain how the author's use of characterization and setting shapes that idea. Address one possible counterclaim.

HS Junior (550 words; AP: see unit standards): Analyze how the structure of Chapter XXV (where it begins, turns and ends) and its characterization shape the reader's understanding of trusted relatives. Identify one place where the text leaves matters uncertain and explain how that uncertainty adds to its meaning.

HS Senior (600 words; AP: see unit standards): Two readers disagree about what Chapter XXV suggests about trusted relatives. Lay out two plausible interpretations, weigh the evidence for each (including the chapter's characterization and setting), and argue for the stronger one in a sustained, well-organized essay.

AP (650 words; AP: AP-LIT.CHR, AP-LIT.LAN): Write a literary argument in which you analyze how Jane Austen uses characterization in Chapter XXV to complicate the reader's understanding of trusted relatives. Develop a defensible thesis, select evidence purposefully, and explain how specific choices of diction and syntax create meaning.

College Freshman (1000 words; AP: see unit standards): Situate Chapter XXV within its historical and literary context and argue how the chapter's treatment of trusted relatives responds to that context. Engage with at least one secondary perspective (a critic, historian or the author's own statements), integrate quotations smoothly, and cite in MLA style.

College Sophomore (1250 words; AP: see unit standards): Read Chapter XXV alongside the conventions of its genre and period. Argue how the chapter's handling of trusted relatives follows or bends those conventions, using the characterization as evidence, and test your reading against one published critic. Document two secondary sources in MLA.

College Junior (1500 words; AP: see unit standards): Apply a named critical approach (for example formalist, historicist, feminist, psychoanalytic or ecocritical) to Chapter XXV and its treatment of trusted relatives. State your method, show what it reveals in the chapter's characterization and setting, and identify where the text resists it.

College Senior (2000 words; AP: see unit standards): Develop a research argument that reads Chapter XXV as evidence for a larger claim about trusted relatives in Pride and Prejudice. Connect close reading of the chapter to the whole novel, engage at least four scholarly sources, and state precisely where your reading departs from theirs (Chicago style).

Graduate / PhD (2500 words; AP: see unit standards): Develop an original argument that reads Chapter XXV as a hinge in the novel's larger treatment of trusted relatives. Position your reading within a named critical conversation (for example formalist, historicist, psychoanalytic, feminist or postcolonial approaches), account for the textual history where relevant, and articulate the stakes of your intervention for scholarship on Pride and Prejudice.

SAT-style questions

1. Is not general incivility the very essence of love?"

   As used in the text, what does the word "incivility" most nearly mean?

   A. care and protection

   B. that cannot be entirely consumed or used up

   C. rudeness

   D. hinder or prevent (the efforts, plans, or desires) of

2. On the following Monday, Mrs. Bennet had the pleasure of receiving her brother and his wife, who came as usual to spend the Christmas at Longbourn. Mr. Gardiner was a sensible, gentleman-like man, greatly superior to his sister, as well by nature as education. The Netherfield ladies would have had difficulty in believing that a man who lived by trade, and within view of his own warehouses, could have been so well bred and agreeable. Mrs. Gardiner, who was several years younger than Mrs. Bennet and Mrs. Philips, was an amiable, intelligent, elegant woman, and a great favourite with all her Longbourn nieces. Between the two eldest and herself especially, there subsisted a very particular regard. They had frequently been staying with her in town.

   Which choice best states a central concern of "Chapter XXV"?

   A. Strategy in courtship

   B. An unhappy marriage observed

   C. Cold reception

   D. Trusted relatives

SAT key: 1. C (rudeness); 2. D (Trusted relatives)

Lesson 27: Chapter XXVI

Focus: cold reception

Objective: Students will analyze how characterization develops in “Chapter XXVI” by writing a claim-evidence-reasoning paragraph that cites at least 2 quotations from the section, and will score at least 80% on the section quiz.

Standards: AP: see the unit standards

Teacher only · spoilers

In London, Jane calls on Caroline, who receives her coldly and visits late. Jane finally admits Caroline's insincerity. Wickham's attention shifts to Miss King, who has inherited money.

Background: Return visits were social signals; delay meant rejection.

Significance: Wickham's quick switch to an heiress hints at his true motives.

Lesson plan and lecture script (90 minutes)

0–8 min · Bell-ringer · You do (8 min)
Students write to the bell-ringer, then pair-share.
What does Wickham's interest in Miss King suggest about him? Write for five minutes. Starters: I think... because... / This connects to pride and prejudice because....
Prompt: What does Wickham's interest in Miss King suggest about him?
Sentence starters: I think… because… · This connects to pride and prejudice because…
Strong response: A strong response takes a position and anticipates this: Jane learns to judge.

8–18 min · Vocabulary with etymology notes · I do (10 min)
Five key words in context, with verified word histories.
Today's words: defection — leaving one person or side for another; relinquish — to give up; discourage — try to prevent; show opposition to; abundantly — greatly; very much; involve — to draw into (a difficult situation). “defection”: Origin: Latin dēfectiō. “relinquish”: From Latin relinquere "to leave behind," from re- "back" + linquere "to leave." “abundantly”: Origin: an English formation from abundant + -ly.
Words: defection: leaving one person or side for another · relinquish: to give up · discourage: try to prevent; show opposition to · abundantly: greatly; very much · involve: to draw into (a difficult situation)

18–28 min · Background and context · I do (10 min)
Mini-lecture (read or adapt the script).
Return visits were social signals; delay meant rejection. Wickham's quick switch to an heiress hints at his true motives. Characterization: Jane in London is coldly received by Caroline Bingley; her letter admits she was deceived. Epistolary: The chapter uses Jane's letter to report events from London. Watch for rank and condescension: Rank is displayed and enforced, above all at Rosings by Lady Catherine; Elizabeth refuses to be cowed. In this chapter: "and obliging. It was Mr. Collins's picture of Hunsford and Rosings rationally softened; and Elizabeth perceived that she must wait for her" (Chapter XXVI, paragraph 19).

28–40 min · I do: modeled close reading · I do (12 min)
Model the close reading of the anchor quotation using the written think-aloud below.
First, meaning. I read "I am sure I should be deceived again" slowly and put it in my own words: Jane writes to Elizabeth that she was wrong about Caroline Bingley and would surely be deceived again. Next, craft. I notice the frank, gentle self-correction with no bitterness. The strongest word is "deceived": she uses it of herself, admitting her trust was misplaced. Then, effect. What has Jane learned in this letter? My answer: In this letter Jane has learned that Caroline Bingley is cold and false; Jane grows in judgment without losing her kindness, and her honesty contrasts with Elizabeth's slower recognition of her own errors.

> I am sure I should be deceived again (Chapter XXVI, paragraph 26)

Think-aloud: First, meaning. I read "I am sure I should be deceived again" slowly and put it in my own words: Jane writes to Elizabeth that she was wrong about Caroline Bingley and would surely be deceived again. Next, craft. I notice the frank, gentle self-correction with no bitterness. The strongest word is "deceived": she uses it of herself, admitting her trust was misplaced. Then, effect. What has Jane learned in this letter? My answer: In this letter Jane has learned that Caroline Bingley is cold and false; Jane grows in judgment without losing her kindness, and her honesty contrasts with Elizabeth's slower recognition of her own errors.

40–55 min · We do: guided annotation · We do (15 min)
Guided analysis of a second quotation; expected answers given.
Ask: What words in this line stand out, and what do they suggest? Expected: Jane admits her error. Look at the craft: The chapter uses Jane's letter to report events from London. Ask: How does this line connect to pride and prejudice? Expected: Jane learns to judge. (Jane admits her error.)

> My dearest Lizzy will, I am sure, be incapable of triumphing in her better judgment, at my expense, when I confess myself to have been entirely deceived in Miss Bingley's regard for me (Chapter XXVI, paragraph 26)

Ask: What words in this line stand out, and what do they suggest?
Expected answer: Jane admits her error. Look at the craft: The chapter uses Jane's letter to report events from London.
Ask: How does this line connect to pride and prejudice?
Expected answer: Jane learns to judge. (Jane admits her error.)

55–70 min · You do: independent annotation · You do (15 min)

Independent annotation and a claim-evidence-reasoning paragraph (exemplar given).

Annotate the chapter for characterization, epistolary (three marks with a margin note each), then write one claim-evidence-reasoning paragraph: what does this chapter suggest about cold reception? Then start your writing prompt at your assigned level (HS Sophomore: Analyze how Chapter XXVI develops the idea of cold reception. Make a precise claim, support it with at least three pieces of textual evidence, and explain how the author's use of characterization and irony shapes that idea. Address one possible counterclaim.) Exemplar: Jane's letter shows a generous judge learning to see faults without becoming bitter. When the text says “My dearest Lizzy will, I am sure, be incapable of triumphing in her better judgment, at my expense, when I confess myself to have been entirely deceived in Miss Bingley’s regard for me” (Chapter XXVI, paragraph 26), it shows this directly. She confesses "myself to have been entirely deceived in Miss Bingley's regard for me," but asks Lizzy not to triumph, keeping charity even in disappointment.

Task: Annotate the chapter for characterization, epistolary (three marks with a margin note each), then write one claim-evidence-reasoning paragraph: what does this chapter suggest about cold reception? Then start your writing prompt at your assigned level (HS Sophomore: Analyze how Chapter XXVI develops the idea of cold reception. Make a precise claim, support it with at least three pieces of textual evidence, and explain how the author's use of characterization and irony shapes that idea. Address one possible counterclaim.)

Exemplar: Jane's letter shows a generous judge learning to see faults without becoming bitter. When the text says “My dearest Lizzy will, I am sure, be incapable of triumphing in her better judgment, at my expense, when I confess myself to have been entirely deceived in Miss Bingley’s regard for me” (Chapter XXVI, paragraph 26), it shows this directly. She confesses "myself to have been entirely deceived in Miss Bingley's regard for me," but asks Lizzy not to triumph, keeping charity even in disappointment.

70–80 min · Discussion · We do (10 min)

Structured discussion from the 30 tiered questions, with facilitation notes.

Anchor question: What does Wickham's interest in Miss King suggest about him? Ask: what is Wickham's interest in Miss King? What does it reveal?

Anchor question: What does Wickham's interest in Miss King suggest about him?

Facilitation: Ask: what is Wickham's interest in Miss King? What does it reveal?

80–87 min · Exit ticket / chapter quiz · You do (7 min)
Chapter quiz in the app and an exit ticket (answer given).
Chapter quiz in the app, then: In one sentence, what does this chapter suggest about cold reception? Support it with one short quotation. Model answer: Jane's letter shows a generous judge learning to see faults without becoming bitter. ("My dearest Lizzy will, I am sure, be incapable of triumphing in her better judgment, at my expense, when I confess myself to have been entirely deceived in Miss", Chapter XXVI, paragraph 26). Accept any defensible claim backed by a quotation from the chapter; the answer key for the quiz is in the Quiz section.
Exit ticket: In one sentence, what does this chapter suggest about cold reception? Support it with one short quotation.
Answer: Model answer: Jane's letter shows a generous judge learning to see faults without becoming bitter. ("My dearest Lizzy will, I am sure, be incapable of triumphing in her better judgment, at my expense, when I confess myself to have been entirely deceived in Miss", Chapter XXVI, paragraph 26). Accept any defensible claim backed by a quotation from the chapter; the answer key for the quiz is in the Quiz section.

87–90 min · Closure · I do (3 min)
Summarize the lesson and preview the next reading.
Today we saw how characterization shapes cold reception. Key takeaway: Jane learns to judge.

Total: 90 minutes.

Teacher analysis (spoilers)

Literary elements

- Characterization: Jane in London is coldly received by Caroline Bingley; her letter admits she was deceived.
- Epistolary: The chapter uses Jane's letter to report events from London.

Themes and how they develop

- pride and prejudice: Jane learns to judge.

Symbols and motifs

- rank and condescension: Rank is displayed and enforced, above all at Rosings by Lady Catherine; Elizabeth refuses to be cowed. In this chapter: "and obliging. It was Mr. Collins's picture of Hunsford and Rosings rationally softened; and Elizabeth perceived that she must wait for her" (Chapter XXVI, paragraph 19).
- letters: Letters carry news, reveal character and change minds; Darcy's letter is the turning point of the novel. In this chapter: "of what had been, rather than what was. Charlotte's first letters were received with a good deal of eagerness; there could not" (Chapter XXVI, paragraph 19).

Key quotations (checked against the reading text)

- "I am sure I should be deceived again" (Chapter XXVI, paragraph 26) Jane's honesty.

- "My dearest Lizzy will, I am sure, be incapable of triumphing in her better judgment, at my expense, when I confess myself to have been entirely deceived in Miss Bingley's regard for me" (Chapter XXVI, paragraph 26) Jane admits her error.
- "His apparent partiality had subsided, his attentions were over, he was the admirer of someone else" (Chapter XXVI, paragraph 29) Wickham's interest shifts to an heiress, Miss King.

Model claim-evidence-reasoning

Claim: Jane's letter shows a generous judge learning to see faults without becoming bitter.
Evidence: "My dearest Lizzy will, I am sure, be incapable of triumphing in her better judgment, at my expense, when I confess myself to have been entirely deceived in Miss Bingley's regard for me" (Chapter XXVI, paragraph 26)
Reasoning: She confesses "myself to have been entirely deceived in Miss Bingley's regard for me," but asks Lizzy not to triumph, keeping charity even in disappointment.

Vocabulary with etymology notes

Word	Definition (in this sentence)	In context	Word history
defection (noun)	leaving one person or side for another	Kitty and Lydia take his defection much more to heart than I do.	"defection": Origin: Latin dēfectiō. (Liber et Libri origin note, https://en.wiktionary.org/wiki/defection#Etymology)
relinquish (verb)	to give up	Nothing, on the contrary, could be more natural; and while able to suppose that it cost him a few struggles to relinquish her, she was ready to allow it a wise and desirable measure for both, and could very sincerely wish him happy.	"relinquish": From Latin relinquere "to leave behind," from re- "back" + linquere "to leave." (Online Etymology Dictionary (hand-checked note), https://www.etymonline.com/word/relinquish)
discourage (verb)	try to prevent; show opposition to	"Perhaps it will be as well, if you discourage his coming here so very often.
abundantly (adverb)	greatly; very much	Darcy's sister, as, by Wickham's account, she would make him abundantly regret what he had thrown away.	"abundantly": Origin: an English formation from abundant + -ly. (Liber et Libri origin note, https://en.wiktionary.org/wiki/abundantly#Etymology) involve (verb)	to draw into (a difficult situation)	Do not involve yourself, or endeavour to involve him in an affection which the want of fortune would make so very imprudent.
subsided (verb)	wear off or die down	His apparent partiality had subsided, his attentions were over, he was the admirer of someone else.	"subsided": Origin of "subside": Latin subsīdō ("to settle"). (Liber et Libri origin note, https://en.wiktionary.org/wiki/subside#Etymology)

reproached (verb)	express criticism towards	“I did not think Caroline in spirits,” were her words, “but she was very glad to see me, and reproached me for giving her no notice of my coming to London.
rewarded (verb)	given something good in return	Her impatience for this second letter was as well rewarded as impatience generally is.
bridegroom (noun)	a man who has recently been married	The wedding took place; the bride and bridegroom set off for Kent from the church door, and everybody had as much to say or to hear on the subject as usual.

Discussion questions

1. What does Wickham's interest in Miss King suggest about him?
2. Where does characterization appear in this chapter, and what effect does it have? Point to one passage.
3. How does this chapter connect to the book's larger concern with first impressions and prejudice?

Classroom discussion questions (30, tiered)

Wait time after every question (3 s for DOK 1, 5 s for DOK 2, 8 to 10 s for DOK 3 and 4); think-pair-share on DOK 3 and 4; answer each response with a follow-up probe; close with student-generated questions. Focus sets by rigor level: Scaffolded support: 1, 2, 3, 4, 5, 6, 11, 12, 13, 14, 21, 22; HS Freshman: 1, 2, 3, 4, 5, 12, 13, 14, 15, 22, 23, 24; HS Sophomore: 1, 2, 3, 4, 13, 14, 15, 16, 17, 23, 24, 25; HS Junior: 1, 2, 3, 14, 15, 16, 17, 18, 24, 25, 26, 27; HS Senior: 1, 2, 3, 15, 16, 17, 18, 25, 26, 27, 28, 29; AP: 1, 2, 16, 17, 18, 19, 20, 26, 27, 28, 29, 30; College Freshman: 1, 2, 17, 18, 19, 20, 21, 22, 27, 28, 29, 30; College Sophomore: 1, 2, 11, 18, 19, 20, 21, 22, 23, 28, 29, 30; College Junior: 1, 11, 12, 19, 20, 21, 22, 23, 24, 25, 29, 30; College Senior: 1, 11, 12, 13, 20, 21, 22, 23, 24, 25, 26, 30; Graduate / PhD: 1, 11, 12, 13, 21, 22, 23, 24, 25, 26, 27, 28

Literal / recall

1. How does Caroline treat Jane in London? [DOK 1 · coldCallWithSupport · wait 3 s · AP: unit standards] Look for: Coldly
2. What does Jane finally realize? [DOK 1 · turnAndTalk · wait 3 s · AP: unit standards] Look for: Caroline was insincere
3. Whom does Wickham now pursue? [DOK 1 · coldCallWithSupport · wait 3 s · AP: unit standards] Look for: Miss King, an heiress
4. Why is Miss King attractive to Wickham? [DOK 1 · turnAndTalk · wait 3 s · AP: unit standards] Look for: She has inherited money
5. How does Elizabeth take Wickham's switch? [DOK 1 · coldCallWithSupport · wait 3 s · AP: unit standards] Look for: Calmly, without heartbreak
6. Retell the three most important events of “Chapter XXVI” in order, in one sentence each. [DOK 1 · turnAndTalk · wait 3 s · AP: unit standards] Look for: In London, Jane calls on Caroline, who receives her coldly and visits late. Jane finally admits Caroline's insincerity. Wickham's attention shifts to Miss King, who has inherited money.

7. Which characters appear or are mentioned in “Chapter XXVI”? Name two and one thing each says or does. [DOK 1 · coldCallWithSupport · wait 3 s · AP: unit standards] Look for: Names and actions taken from the chapter; check against the teacher summary.
8. Where and when does “Chapter XXVI” take place? Point to the line that tells you. [DOK 1 · turnAndTalk · wait 3 s · AP: unit standards] Look for: A place/time detail quoted from the chapter.
9. Reread: “Kitty and Lydia take his defection much more to heart than I do.” What does “defection” mean here, and what is literally happening in this line? [DOK 1 · turnAndTalk · wait 3 s · AP: unit standards] Look for: defection: leaving one person or side for another.
10. Reread: “Nothing, on the contrary, could be more natural; and while able to suppose that it cost him a few struggles to relinquish her, she was ready to allow it a wise and desirable measure for both, and could very sincerely…” What does “relinquish” mean here, and what is literally happening in this line? [DOK 1 · turnAndTalk · wait 3 s · AP: unit standards] Look for: relinquish: to give up.

Inferential / analytical

1. What does “Chapter XXVI” suggest about cold reception? State the inference and the line that supports it. [DOK 2 · thinkPairShare · wait 5 s · AP-LIT.LAN] Look for: Wickham's quick switch to an heiress hints at his true motives.
2. Find one example of characterization in this chapter. What does it reveal that a plain statement would not? [DOK 2 · followUp · wait 5 s · AP-LIT.CHR] Look for: Look for what characters say, do and think, and how others react to them.
3. How does the irony in this chapter shape what we understand about cold reception? [DOK 3 · thinkPairShare · wait 8 s · AP-LIT.NAR] Look for: Look for gaps between what characters expect or say and what is true.
   Answer guidance: A defensible line of argument: Jane's letter shows a generous judge learning to see faults without becoming bitter. Useful evidence: “I am sure I should be deceived again” (Chapter XXVI, paragraph 26): Jane's honesty. Theme link: Jane learns to judge. Credit any position that is supported by quotation and reasoning; push one-sided answers to address the strongest counterpoint.
4. In the passage that begins ““You are too sensible a girl, Lizzy, to fall in love merely because you are warned against it; and, therefore, I am not afraid of speaking openly.”, why might Austen have chosen these particular words? Pick two and explain their connotations. [DOK 2 · followUp · wait 5 s · AP-LIT.FIG] Look for: Diction analysis of two words in the anchor passage.
5. What causes the main turn in “Chapter XXVI”, and what effect is it likely to have on what follows? [DOK 2 · followUp · wait 5 s · AP-LIT.STR] Look for: In London, Jane calls on Caroline, who receives her coldly and visits late. Jane finally admits Caroline's insincerity. Wickham's attention shifts to Miss King, who has inherited money.
6. How does “Chapter XXVI” build on “Chapter XXV”? Name one link of cause and effect. [DOK 3 · thinkPairShare · wait 8 s · AP-LIT.STR] Look for: A causal or structural link between this and the previous chapter.
   Answer guidance: A defensible line of argument: Jane's letter shows a generous judge learning to see faults without becoming bitter. Useful evidence: “My dearest Lizzy will, I am sure, be incapable of triumphing in her better judgment, at my expense, when I confess myself to have been entirely deceived in Miss Bingley’s regard for me” (Chapter XXVI, paragraph 26): Jane admits her error. Theme link: Jane learns to judge. Credit any position that is supported by quotation and reasoning; push one-sided answers to address the strongest counterpoint.
7. What can we infer about a character's motives from what they say and do here, as opposed to what they claim? [DOK 3 · followUp · wait 8 s · AP-LIT.CHR] Look for: An inference about motive supported by a quoted line.
   Answer guidance: A defensible line of argument: Jane's letter shows a generous judge learning to see faults without becoming bitter. Useful evidence: “His apparent partiality had subsided, his attentions were over, he was the admirer of someone else” (Chapter XXVI, paragraph 29): Wickham's interest shifts to an heiress, Miss King. On characterization: Jane in London is coldly received by Caroline Bingley; her letter admits she was deceived. Credit any position that is supported by quotation and reasoning; push one-sided answers to address the strongest counterpoint.

8. The bell-ringer asked: “What does Wickham's interest in Miss King suggest about him?” Now that we have read closely, how would you revise your first answer, and which line changed your mind? [DOK 2 · thinkPairShare · wait 5 s · AP-LIT.LAN] Look for: A revised answer anchored in the text.
9. Where does plot appear, and how does it connect this chapter to the larger concern with first impressions and prejudice? [DOK 3 · followUp · wait 8 s · AP-LIT.STR] Look for: Look for key events and the causes linking them.
   Answer guidance: A defensible line of argument: Jane's letter shows a generous judge learning to see faults without becoming bitter. Useful evidence: “I am sure I should be deceived again” (Chapter XXVI, paragraph 26): Jane's honesty. Theme link: Jane learns to judge. Credit any position that is supported by quotation and reasoning; push one-sided answers to address the strongest counterpoint.
10. Background: Return visits were social signals; delay meant rejection. How does knowing this change the way you read one moment in the chapter? [DOK 3 · thinkPairShare · wait 8 s · AP-LIT.SET] Look for: A specific moment reread in light of the context.
    Answer guidance: A defensible line of argument: Jane's letter shows a generous judge learning to see faults without becoming bitter. Useful evidence: “My dearest Lizzy will, I am sure, be incapable of triumphing in her better judgment, at my expense, when I confess myself to have been entirely deceived in Miss Bingley’s regard for me” (Chapter XXVI, paragraph 26): Jane admits her error. Theme link: Jane learns to judge. Credit any position that is supported by quotation and reasoning; push one-sided answers to address the strongest counterpoint.

Evaluative / synthesis / creative

1. A critic might argue: “Wickham's quick switch to an heiress hints at his true motives.” How far do you agree? Take a stand and defend it with two lines from the chapter. [DOK 3 · fourCorners · wait 8 s · AP-LIT.LAN] Look for: A defended position with evidence and one counterpoint.
   Answer guidance: A defensible line of argument: Jane's letter shows a generous judge learning to see faults without becoming bitter. Useful evidence: “His apparent partiality had subsided, his attentions were over, he was the admirer of someone else” (Chapter XXVI, paragraph 29): Wickham's interest shifts to an heiress, Miss King. Theme link: Jane learns to judge. Credit any position that is supported by quotation and reasoning; push one-sided answers to address the strongest counterpoint.
2. Which character in this chapter acts most wisely, and which least? Judge them by a standard you name. [DOK 3 · thinkPairShare · wait 8 s · AP-LIT.CHR, AP-LIT.LAN] Look for: An evaluation using an explicit criterion and evidence.
   Answer guidance: A defensible line of argument: Jane's letter shows a generous judge learning to see faults without becoming bitter. Useful evidence: “I am sure I should be deceived again” (Chapter XXVI, paragraph 26): Jane's honesty. On characterization: Jane in London is coldly received by Caroline Bingley; her letter admits she was deceived. Credit any position that is supported by quotation and reasoning; push one-sided answers to address the strongest counterpoint.
3. Rewrite one moment of “Chapter XXVI” from the point of view of a different character. What does the new angle reveal or hide about cold reception? [DOK 4 · thinkPairShare · wait 8 s · AP-LIT.LAN, AP-LIT.NAR]

Look for: A creative product with a rationale tied to the text.

Answer guidance: A defensible line of argument: Jane's letter shows a generous judge learning to see faults without becoming bitter. Useful evidence: “My dearest Lizzy will, I am sure, be incapable of triumphing in her better judgment, at my expense, when I confess myself to have been entirely deceived in Miss Bingley’s regard for me” (Chapter XXVI, paragraph 26): Jane admits her error. Theme link: Jane learns to judge. Credit any position that is supported by quotation and reasoning; push one-sided answers to address the strongest counterpoint.

4. Write three questions of your own about “Chapter XXVI”: one recall, one “why/how”, and one “should/what if”. Trade with a partner and answer theirs. [DOK 3 · studentGenerated · wait 8 s · AP-LIT.LAN] Look for: Student-generated questions at three levels.

   Answer guidance: A defensible line of argument: Jane's letter shows a generous judge learning to see faults without becoming bitter. Useful evidence: “His apparent partiality had subsided, his attentions were over, he was the admirer of someone else” (Chapter XXVI, paragraph 29): Wickham's interest shifts to an heiress, Miss King. Theme link: Jane learns to judge. Credit any position that is supported by quotation and reasoning; push one-sided answers to address the strongest counterpoint.

5. Connect this chapter to pride and self-knowledge: is the link strong or weak so far? What would Austen need to show next to strengthen it? [DOK 4 · socraticCircle · wait 8 s · AP-LIT.LAN] Look for: A judgment of thematic development across the work.

   Answer guidance: A defensible line of argument: Jane's letter shows a generous judge learning to see faults without becoming bitter. Useful evidence: “I am sure I should be deceived again” (Chapter XXVI, paragraph 26): Jane's honesty. Theme link: Jane learns to judge. Credit any position that is supported by quotation and reasoning; push one-sided answers to address the strongest counterpoint.

6. Is the characterization in this chapter effective, or does it feel heavy-handed? Evaluate it as a reader would in a review. [DOK 3 · fourCorners · wait 8 s · AP-LIT.CHR, AP-LIT.LAN] Look for: An evaluative judgment with criteria and evidence.

   Answer guidance: A defensible line of argument: Jane's letter shows a generous judge learning to see faults without becoming bitter. Useful evidence: “My dearest Lizzy will, I am sure, be incapable of triumphing in her better judgment, at my expense, when I confess myself to have been entirely deceived in Miss Bingley’s regard for me” (Chapter XXVI, paragraph 26): Jane admits her error. On characterization: Jane in London is coldly received by Caroline Bingley; her letter admits she was deceived. Credit any position that is supported by quotation and reasoning; push one-sided answers to address the strongest counterpoint.

7. Compare how “Chapter XXVI” treats cold reception with how another text, film or event you know treats a similar idea. What does Pride and Prejudice see that the other misses? [DOK 4 · socraticCircle · wait 8 s · AP-LIT.LAN] Look for: A cross-text synthesis.

   Answer guidance: A defensible line of argument: Jane's letter shows a generous judge learning to see faults without becoming bitter. Useful evidence: “His apparent partiality had subsided, his attentions were over, he was the admirer of someone else” (Chapter XXVI, paragraph 29): Wickham's interest shifts to an heiress, Miss King. Theme link: Jane learns to judge. Credit any position that is supported by quotation and reasoning; push one-sided answers to address the strongest counterpoint.

8. Predict what “Chapter XXVII” will bring, using two clues from this chapter. After reading, evaluate your prediction. [DOK 3 · thinkPairShare · wait 8 s · AP-LIT.LAN, AP-LIT.STR] Look for: A prediction or judgment justified with textual clues.

Answer guidance: A defensible line of argument: Jane's letter shows a generous judge learning to see faults without becoming bitter. Useful evidence: “I am sure I should be deceived again” (Chapter XXVI, paragraph 26): Jane's honesty. Theme link: Jane learns to judge. Credit any position that is supported by quotation and reasoning; push one-sided answers to address the strongest counterpoint.

9. Design a one-paragraph modern adaptation of this chapter (setting, characters, conflict). What must stay the same for it to still be about cold reception? [DOK 4 · thinkPairShare · wait 8 s · AP-LIT.LAN] Look for: A creative transfer that keeps the core idea.

   Answer guidance: A defensible line of argument: Jane's letter shows a generous judge learning to see faults without becoming bitter. Useful evidence: “My dearest Lizzy will, I am sure, be incapable of triumphing in her better judgment, at my expense, when I confess myself to have been entirely deceived in Miss Bingley’s regard for me” (Chapter XXVI, paragraph 26): Jane admits her error. Theme link: Jane learns to judge. Credit any position that is supported by quotation and reasoning; push one-sided answers to address the strongest counterpoint.

10. What question would you most like to ask Jane Austen about this chapter, and what answer do you think the text itself gives? [DOK 4 · studentGenerated · wait 8 s · AP-LIT.LAN] Look for: A student-generated question answered from evidence.

    Answer guidance: A defensible line of argument: Jane's letter shows a generous judge learning to see faults without becoming bitter. Useful evidence: “His apparent partiality had subsided, his attentions were over, he was the admirer of someone else” (Chapter XXVI, paragraph 29): Wickham's interest shifts to an heiress, Miss King. Theme link: Jane learns to judge. Credit any position that is supported by quotation and reasoning; push one-sided answers to address the strongest counterpoint.

Annotation focus

- Characterization: look for what characters say, do and think, and how others react to them (anchor passage in the We do segment)
- Also notice Irony: gaps between what characters expect or say and what is true
- Also notice Plot: key events and the causes linking them

Chapter quiz: item bank (all eleven rigor versions)

1. [mc · recall · DOK 1] What does Jane finally realize?

   A. Caroline was insincere

   B. She is ill

   C. Darcy loves her

   D. Bingley is married

   Key: A (Caroline was insincere)

2. [mc · recall · DOK 1] Which word completes this sentence from Chapter XXVI, paragraph 5? “I will take care of _____, and of Mr. Wickham too.”

   A. inviting

   B. myself

   C. believe

   D. abominable

Key: B (myself)

3. [mc · recall · DOK 1] In the line “Kitty and Lydia take his defection much more to heart than I do.”, what does “defection” most nearly mean?

   A. a large entrance or reception room or area

   B. leaving one person or side for another

   C. the act of preparing something (as food) by the application of heat

   D. a single word or sound (here, "a syllable said" = a word said)

   Key: B (leaving one person or side for another)

4. [fill · recall · DOK 1] Complete the quotation from Chapter XXVI, paragraph 1: “Mrs. Gardiner’s caution to Elizabeth was punctually and kindly given on the first favourable _____ of speaking to her alone; after honestly telling her what she thought, she thus went on:” Word bank: necessity, resolution, likely, opportunity
   Key: opportunity

5. [fill · recall · DOK 1] Complete the quotation from Chapter XXVI, paragraph 7: “In short, my dear aunt, I should be very sorry to be the means of making any of you _____” Word bank: imagine, unhappy, abominable, necessity
   Key: unhappy

6. [fill · recall · DOK 1] Fill in the blank with the vocabulary word that fits: “I did not think Caroline in spirits,’ were her words, ‘but she was very glad to see me, and _____ me for giving her no notice of my coming to London.” Word bank: reproached, discourage, relinquish, defection
   Key: reproached

7. [mc · recall · DOK 1] How does Elizabeth take Wickham's switch?

   A. She challenges Miss King

   B. With fury

   C. With tears

   D. Calmly, without heartbreak

   Key: D (Calmly, without heartbreak)

8. [mc · recall · DOK 1] Why is Miss King attractive to Wickham?

   A. She has inherited money

   B. She is a duchess

   C. She is related to Darcy

   D. She is beautiful

   Key: A (She has inherited money)

9. [fill · recall · DOK 1] Fill in the blank with the vocabulary word that fits: “Do not _____ yourself, or endeavour to involve him in an affection which the want of fortune would make so very imprudent.” Word bank: relinquish, involve, discourage, defection
   Key: involve

10. [short · inference · DOK 2] What does this passage from Chapter XXVI, paragraph 21 reveal about the character or situation? “She accounted for it, however, by supposing that her last letter to her friend from Longbourn, had by some accident been lost.” Answer in two or three sentences with one detail.
    Sample answer: The passage (Chapter XXVI, paragraph 21) shows the situation turning on first impressions and prejudice:

Jane learns to judge. The words “supposing” and “accounted” are the proof, because they show how the moment looks to the people in it. They suggest more than the narrator states outright.

11. [short · inference · DOK 2] What can you infer from this line? “I am sure I should be deceived again” (Chapter XXVI, paragraph 26) Answer in two or three sentences with one detail.
    Sample answer: Jane's honesty. The evidence is “I am sure I should be deceived again” (Chapter XXVI, paragraph 26). This develops pride and prejudice: Jane learns to judge.
12. [short · inference · DOK 2] What does this passage from Chapter XXVI, paragraph 5 reveal about the character or situation? “He shall not be in love with me, if I can prevent it.” Answer in two or three sentences with one detail.
    Sample answer: The passage (Chapter XXVI, paragraph 5) shows the situation turning on first impressions and prejudice: Jane learns to judge. The words “prevent” are the proof, because they show how the moment looks to the people in it. They suggest more than the narrator states outright.
13. [mc · inference · DOK 2] Which of these passages comes earliest in Chapter XXVI?
    A. “Your father would depend on your resolution and good conduct, I am sure.”
    B. “My dear aunt, this is being serious indeed.”
    C. “You have sense, and we all expect you to use it.”
    D. “But as it is—you must not let your fancy run away with you.”
    Key: D (“But as it is—you must not let your fancy run away with you.”)
14. [short · analysis · DOK 3] Analyze how the word choice in this passage from Chapter XXVI, paragraph 9 shapes its tone: “It is on your account that he has been so frequently invited this week.” Pick two words and explain their effect.
    Sample answer: The words “frequently” and “invited” (Chapter XXVI, paragraph 9) make the tone heavy and deliberate rather than neutral. That weight points the reader to pride and self-knowledge: Jane learns to judge. The author chooses them so the moment feels significant instead of passing.
15. [short · analysis · DOK 3] Analyze how the word choice in this passage from Chapter XXVI, paragraph 25 shapes its tone: “The letter which she wrote on this occasion to her sister, will prove what she felt.” Pick two words and explain their effect.
    Sample answer: The words “occasion” and “sister” (Chapter XXVI, paragraph 25) make the tone heavy and deliberate rather than neutral. That weight points the reader to pride and self-knowledge: Jane learns to judge. The author chooses them so the moment feels significant instead of passing.
16. [short · synthesis · DOK 4] Connect this passage from Chapter XXVI, paragraph 26 to the story's treatment of women's limited choices: “But I pity her, because she must feel that she has been acting wrong, and because I am very sure that anxiety for her brother is the cause of it.” Use one other moment from the story as well.
    Sample answer: This passage (Chapter XXVI, paragraph 26) develops women's limited choices: Jane learns to judge. Its words “anxiety” and “brother” carry that idea into this moment. The same concern returns in “You are too sensible a girl, Lizzy, to fall in love merely because you are warned against it; and, therefore, I am not…” (Chapter XXVI, paragraph 2), so the two passages read as a pattern, not a single moment. Together they show the story treating women's limited choices as central.
17. [fill · recall · DOK 1] Fill in the blank with the vocabulary word that fits: “Her impatience for this second letter was as well _____ as impatience generally is.” Word bank: relinquish, discourage, defection, rewarded
    Key: rewarded

18. [fill · recall · DOK 1] Fill in the blank with the vocabulary word that fits: “His apparent partiality had _____, his attentions were over, he was the admirer of someone else.” Word bank: discourage, relinquish, subsided, defection

    Key: subsided

19. [mc · recall · DOK 1] How does Caroline treat Jane in London?

    A. Warmly

    B. She introduces her to Bingley

    C. Coldly

    D. She invites her to live with them

    Key: C (Coldly)

20. [mc · recall · DOK 1] Which word completes this sentence from Chapter XXVI, paragraph 9? “But do not _____ that he is always here so often.”

    A. hearing

    B. opportunity

    C. imagine

    D. likely

    Key: C (imagine)

21. [fill · recall · DOK 1] Complete the quotation from Chapter XXVI, paragraph 26: “I am sure I should be _____ again”

    Key: deceived

22. [short · analysis · DOK 3] Analyze how the word choice in this passage from Chapter XXVI, paragraph 23 shapes its tone: “My visit was not long, as Caroline and Mrs. Hurst were going out.” Pick two words and explain their effect.

    Sample answer: The words its wording (Chapter XXVI, paragraph 23) make the tone heavy and deliberate rather than neutral. That weight points the reader to class and social mobility: Jane learns to judge. The author chooses them so the moment feels significant instead of passing.

23. [short · synthesis · DOK 4] Close reading: how do the diction and syntax of “My dearest Lizzy will, I am sure, be incapable of triumphing in her better judgment, at my expense, when I confess myself to have been entirely deceived in Miss Bingley’s regard for me” (Chapter XXVI, paragraph 26) shape its meaning? Consider a second, competing reading.

    Sample answer: Jane admits her error. The evidence is “My dearest Lizzy will, I am sure, be incapable of triumphing in her better judgment, at my expense, when I confess myself to have been…” (Chapter XXVI, paragraph 26). This develops pride and prejudice: Jane learns to judge. The words “triumphing” and “incapable” carry that meaning: they are the charged choices in the line, and changing either would soften the effect. She confesses "myself to have been entirely deceived in Miss Bingley's regard for me," but asks Lizzy not to triumph, keeping charity even in disappointment.

24. [mc · recall · DOK 1] In the line “Darcy’s sister, as, by Wickham’s account, she would make him abundantly regret what he had thrown away.”, what does “abundantly” most nearly mean?

    A. greatly; very much

    B. a soldier standing guard

    C. be a witness to

    D. feeling unsure

Key: A (greatly; very much)

25. [mc · recall · DOK 1] In the line “Nothing, on the contrary, could be more natural; and while able to suppose that it cost him a few struggles to relinquish her, she was ready to allow it a wise and desirable measure for both, and could very sincerely…”, what does “relinquish” most nearly mean?

    A. to give up

    B. be contingent upon (something that is elided)

    C. marked by refinement in taste and manners

    D. chestnut trees

    Key: A (to give up)

26. [fill · recall · DOK 1] Complete the quotation from Chapter XXVI, paragraph 29: “His apparent _____ had subsided, his attentions were over, he was the admirer of someone else”

    Key: partiality

27. [mc · inference · DOK 2] Which choice best states a central concern of “Chapter XXVI”?

    A. The entail and the officers

    B. Wit as courtship

    C. Letters of judgment

    D. Cold reception

    Key: D (Cold reception)

28. [short · inference · DOK 2] What can you infer from this line? “My dearest Lizzy will, I am sure, be incapable of triumphing in her better judgment, at my expense, when I confess myself to have been entirely deceived in Miss Bingley’s regard for me” (Chapter XXVI, paragraph 26) Answer in two or three sentences with one detail.

    Sample answer: Jane admits her error. The evidence is “My dearest Lizzy will, I am sure, be incapable of triumphing in her better judgment, at my expense, when I confess myself to have been…” (Chapter XXVI, paragraph 26).

29. [short · analysis · DOK 3] Analyze how the word choice in this passage from Chapter XXVI, paragraph 7 shapes its tone: “All that I can promise you, therefore, is not to be in a hurry.” Pick two words and explain their effect.

    Sample answer: The words “therefore” and “promise” (Chapter XXVI, paragraph 7) make the tone heavy and deliberate rather than neutral. That weight points the reader to class and social mobility: Jane learns to judge. The author chooses them so the moment feels significant instead of passing.

30. [short · synthesis · DOK 4] Connect this passage from Chapter XXVI, paragraph 19 to the story's treatment of marriage and money: “Elizabeth could never address her without feeling that all the comfort of intimacy was over, and, though determined not to slacken as a correspondent, it was for the sake of what had been, rather than what was.” Use one other moment from the story as well.

    Sample answer: This passage (Chapter XXVI, paragraph 19) develops marriage and money: Jane learns to judge. Its words “correspondent” and “determined” carry that idea into this moment. The same concern returns in “The house, furniture, neighbourhood, and roads, were all to her taste, and Lady Catherine’s behaviour was most friendly…” (Chapter XXVI, paragraph 19), so the two passages read as a pattern, not a single moment. Together they show the story treating marriage and money as central.

31. [mc · analysis · DOK 3 · AP: AP-LIT.STR] Which literary element does this describe in “Chapter XXVI”? The chapter uses Jane's letter to report events from London.

    A. Alliteration

B. Epistolary

C. Irony

D. Imagery

Key: B (Epistolary)

32. [short · synthesis · DOK 4 · AP: AP-LIT.LAN] Synthesis: trace how pride and prejudice develops from Chapter XXIV to Chapter XXVI. Use one quotation from each.
Sample answer: Earlier, in Chapter XXIV, paragraph 10, the text reads “The more I see of the world, the more am I dissatisfied with it” — Elizabeth's disillusion. In Chapter XXVI, “I am sure I should be deceived again” (Chapter XXVI, paragraph 26) — Jane's honesty. Jane learns to judge.

33. [mc · recall · DOK 1 · AP: AP-LIT.FIG] In the line “Perhaps it will be as well, if you discourage his coming here so very often.”, what does “discourage” most nearly mean?

A. a handheld collapsible source of shade

B. bringing shame on

C. try to prevent; show opposition to

D. plays or sings for others

Key: C (try to prevent; show opposition to)

34. [mc · recall · DOK 1 · AP: AP-LIT.STR] Whom does Wickham now pursue?

A. Lydia

B. Charlotte

C. Miss King, an heiress

D. Elizabeth

Key: C (Miss King, an heiress)

35. [fill · recall · DOK 1 · AP: AP-LIT.FIG] Complete the quotation from Chapter XXVI, paragraph 12: “I shall depend on _____ from you very often, Eliza.” Word bank: opportunity, believe, hearing, resolution
Key: hearing

36. [short · synthesis · DOK 4 · AP: AP-LIT.LAN] Connect this passage from Chapter XXVI, paragraph 2 to the story's treatment of marriage and money: “You have sense, and we all expect you to use it.” Use one other moment from the story as well.
Sample answer: This passage (Chapter XXVI, paragraph 2) develops marriage and money: Jane learns to judge. Its words “expect” carry that idea into this moment. The same concern returns in “My dear aunt, this is being serious indeed.” (Chapter XXVI, paragraph 3), so the two passages read as a pattern, not a single moment. Together they show the story treating marriage and money as central.

37. [short · synthesis · DOK 4 · AP: AP-LIT.LAN] Connect this passage from Chapter XXVI, paragraph 15 to the story's treatment of women's limited choices: “We shall often meet, I hope, in Hertfordshire.” Use one other moment from the story as well.
Sample answer: This passage (Chapter XXVI, paragraph 15) develops women's limited choices: Jane learns to judge. Its words its wording carry that idea into this moment. The same concern returns in “Elizabeth could not refuse, though she foresaw little pleasure in the visit.” (Chapter XXVI, paragraph 17), so the two passages read as a pattern, not a single moment. Together they show the story treating women's limited choices as central.

38. [short · analysis · DOK 3 · Dual Credit (Indiana College Core): ICC-WC-1.5] Analyze the word choice in “His apparent partiality had subsided, his attentions were over, he was the admirer of someone else” (Chapter XXVI, paragraph 29). Pick two words and explain what they suggest.

Sample answer: Wickham's interest shifts to an heiress, Miss King. The evidence is “His apparent partiality had subsided, his attentions were over, he was the admirer of someone else” (Chapter XXVI, paragraph 29). This develops pride and prejudice: Jane learns to judge. The words “attentions” and “partiality” carry that meaning: they are the charged choices in the line, and changing either would soften the effect.

39. [short · analysis · DOK 3 · Dual Credit (Indiana College Core): ICC-WC-1.5] Claim: Jane's letter shows a generous judge learning to see faults without becoming bitter. Explain how this evidence supports the claim: “My dearest Lizzy will, I am sure, be incapable of triumphing in her better judgment, at my expense, when I confess myself to have been entirely deceived in Miss Bingley’s regard for me” (Chapter XXVI, paragraph 26).

    Sample answer: She confesses "myself to have been entirely deceived in Miss Bingley's regard for me," but asks Lizzy not to triumph, keeping charity even in disappointment. The evidence is “My dearest Lizzy will, I am sure, be incapable of triumphing in her better judgment, at my expense, when I confess myself to have been…” (Chapter XXVI, paragraph 26) — Jane admits her error. This develops pride and prejudice: Jane learns to judge.

40. [short · synthesis · DOK 4 · Dual Credit (Indiana College Core): ICC-WC-1.5] Close reading: how do the diction and syntax of “I am sure I should be deceived again” (Chapter XXVI, paragraph 26) shape its meaning? Consider a second, competing reading.

    Sample answer: Jane's honesty. The evidence is “I am sure I should be deceived again” (Chapter XXVI, paragraph 26). This develops pride and prejudice: Jane learns to judge. The words “deceived” and “should” carry that meaning: they are the charged choices in the line, and changing either would soften the effect. She confesses "myself to have been entirely deceived in Miss Bingley's regard for me," but asks Lizzy not to triumph, keeping charity even in disappointment.

41. [mc · inference · DOK 2 · Program outcome: LeL-C3-LIT-1] What does this passage most clearly show? “My dearest Lizzy will, I am sure, be incapable of triumphing in her better judgment, at my expense, when I confess myself to have been entirely deceived in Miss Bingley’s regard for me” (Chapter XXVI, paragraph 26)

    A. The room first admires him for his income.

    B. Jane admits her error.

    C. The narrator steps in to defend a love based on esteem rather than "first sight."

    D. The chapter opens by clearing the stage for new arrivals.

    Key: B (Jane admits her error.)

Rigor version	Items (in order)	Mix
Scaffolded support	1, 2, 3, 4, 5, 6, 7, 8, 9, 10, 11, 12, 13, 14, 15, 16	recall 9, inference 4, analysis 2, synthesis 1
HS Freshman	17, 18, 6, 2, 19, 20, 21, 4, 11, 13, 10, 12, 14, 15, 22, 23	recall 8, inference 4, analysis 3, synthesis 1
HS Sophomore	17, 4, 19, 24, 25, 26, 11, 13, 27, 28, 10, 29, 22, 14, 16, 30	recall 6, inference 5, analysis 3, synthesis 2
HS Junior	17, 8, 6, 4, 2, 1, 10, 11, 12, 13, 31, 15, 14, 29, 32, 30	recall 6, inference 4, analysis 4, synthesis 2
HS Senior	33, 26, 24, 34, 4, 35, 13, 10, 12, 14, 15, 29, 22, 16, 32, 30	recall 6, inference 3, analysis 4, synthesis 3

AP	35, 9, 24, 19, 27, 13, 12, 15, 14, 22, 29, 36, 30, 23, 16, 37	recall 4, inference 3, analysis 4, synthesis 5
College Freshman	6, 24, 1, 9, 27, 13, 12, 38, 39, 22, 14, 29, 40, 16, 36, 30	recall 4, inference 3, analysis 5, synthesis 4
College Sophomore	35, 8, 9, 19, 13, 10, 14, 29, 31, 39, 22, 32, 36, 16, 37, 30	recall 4, inference 2, analysis 5, synthesis 5
College Junior	35, 21, 19, 11, 41, 13, 27, 29, 14, 15, 22, 37, 32, 36, 30, 16	recall 3, inference 4, analysis 4, synthesis 5
College Senior	25, 9, 6, 19, 13, 31, 29, 14, 22, 15, 30, 40, 16, 37, 32, 36	recall 4, inference 1, analysis 5, synthesis 6
Graduate / PhD	35, 9, 19, 1, 13, 27, 10, 12, 22, 39, 16, 32, 40, 37, 36, 30	recall 4, inference 4, analysis 2, synthesis 6

Writing prompts (eleven rigor levels)

Scaffolded support (250 words; AP: see unit standards): Supported track (work from the passage your teacher selects). In “Chapter XXVI,” how does Austen show cold reception? Write a paragraph that states your claim, quotes two details from the passage, and explains how each detail supports your idea. Use the characterization you noticed as one piece of evidence.

HS Freshman (350 words; AP: see unit standards): In Chapter XXVI, how does Austen develop the idea of cold reception? State a clear claim, support it with two or three quotations, and explain how the characterization in the chapter helps build that idea.

HS Sophomore (450 words; AP: see unit standards): Analyze how Chapter XXVI develops the idea of cold reception. Make a precise claim, support it with at least three pieces of textual evidence, and explain how the author's use of characterization and irony shapes that idea. Address one possible counterclaim.

HS Junior (550 words; AP: see unit standards): Analyze how the structure of Chapter XXVI (where it begins, turns and ends) and its characterization shape the reader's understanding of cold reception. Identify one place where the text leaves matters uncertain and explain how that uncertainty adds to its meaning.

HS Senior (600 words; AP: see unit standards): Two readers disagree about what Chapter XXVI suggests about cold reception. Lay out two plausible interpretations, weigh the evidence for each (including the chapter's characterization and irony), and argue for the stronger one in a sustained, well-organized essay.

AP (650 words; AP: AP-LIT.CHR, AP-LIT.LAN): Write a literary argument in which you analyze how Jane Austen uses characterization in Chapter XXVI to complicate the reader's understanding of cold reception. Develop a defensible thesis, select evidence purposefully, and explain how specific choices of diction and syntax create meaning.

College Freshman (1000 words; AP: see unit standards): Situate Chapter XXVI within its historical and literary context and argue how the chapter's treatment of cold reception responds to that context. Engage with at least one secondary perspective (a critic, historian or the author's own statements), integrate quotations smoothly, and cite in MLA style.

College Sophomore (1250 words; AP: see unit standards): Read Chapter XXVI alongside the conventions of its genre and period. Argue how the chapter's handling of cold reception follows or bends those conventions, using the characterization as evidence, and test your reading against one published critic. Document two secondary sources in MLA.

College Junior (1500 words; AP: see unit standards): Apply a named critical approach (for example formalist, historicist, feminist, psychoanalytic or ecocritical) to Chapter XXVI and its treatment of cold reception. State your method, show what it reveals in the chapter's characterization and irony, and identify where the text resists it.

College Senior (2000 words; AP: see unit standards): Develop a research argument that reads Chapter XXVI as evidence for a larger claim about cold reception in Pride and Prejudice. Connect close reading of the chapter to the whole novel, engage at least four scholarly sources, and state precisely where your reading departs from theirs (Chicago style).

Graduate / PhD (2500 words; AP: see unit standards): Develop an original argument that reads Chapter XXVI as a hinge in the novel's larger treatment of cold reception. Position your reading within a named critical conversation (for example formalist, historicist, psychoanalytic, feminist or postcolonial approaches), account for the textual history where relevant, and articulate the stakes of your intervention for scholarship on Pride and Prejudice.

SAT-style questions

1. "Perhaps it will be as well, if you discourage his coming here so very often.

   As used in the text, what does the word "discourage" most nearly mean?

   A. a man who has recently been married

   B. express criticism towards

   C. try to prevent; show opposition to

   D. given something good in return

2. "You are too sensible a girl, Lizzy, to fall in love merely because you are warned against it; and, therefore, I am not afraid of speaking openly. Seriously, I would have you be on your guard. Do not involve yourself, or endeavour to involve him in an affection which the want of fortune would make so very imprudent. I have nothing to say against him; he is a most interesting young man; and if he had the fortune he ought to have, I should think you could not do better. But as it is—you must not let your fancy run away with you. You have sense, and we all expect you to use it. Your father would depend on your resolution and good conduct, I am sure. You must not disappoint your father."

   Which choice best states a central concern of "Chapter XXVI"?

   A. Cold reception

   B. Character flaws examined

   C. A changed Darcy

   D. A disastrous ball

SAT key: 1. C (try to prevent; show opposition to); 2. A (Cold reception)

Lesson 28: Chapter XXVII

Focus: a journey and a mercenary suitor

Objective: Students will analyze how characterization develops in "Chapter XXVII" by writing a claim-evidence-reasoning paragraph that cites at least 2 quotations from the section, and will score at least 80% on the section quiz.

Standards: AP: see the unit standards

Teacher only · spoilers

Elizabeth sets out for Hunsford with Sir William and Maria Lucas, stopping in London with the Gardiners. Discussing Wickham's pursuit of Miss King, Elizabeth and Mrs. Gardiner debate the line between prudence and greed. The Gardiners invite Elizabeth on a summer tour.

Background: Travel by post-chaise required overnight stops; families relied on relatives in town.

Significance: The debate about 'mercenary' versus 'prudent' motives sharpens the theme of marriage and money.

Lesson plan and lecture script (90 minutes)

0–8 min · Bell-ringer · You do (8 min)
Students write to the bell-ringer, then pair-share.
Where is the line between a prudent marriage and a mercenary one? Write for five minutes. Starters: I think... because... / This connects to marriage and money because....
Prompt: Where is the line between a prudent marriage and a mercenary one?
Sentence starters: I think… because… · This connects to marriage and money because…
Strong response: A strong response takes a position and anticipates this: Mrs. Gardiner asks the key question: what is the difference between prudence and greed?

8–18 min · Vocabulary with etymology notes · I do (10 min)
Five key words in context, with verified word histories.
Today's words: jumbled — mixed up in a confused way; objecting — saying that one disagrees; diversified — varied; mercenary — interested only in money; shyness — a feeling of fear of embarrassment. "jumbled": Origin of "jumble": uncertain; perhaps coined in the 1500s on the model of words like stumble and tumble. "diversified": Origin of "diversify": Middle French diversifier. "mercenary": Origin: Latin mercēnārius ("hired for money").
Words: jumbled: mixed up in a confused way · objecting: saying that one disagrees · diversified: varied · mercenary: interested only in money · shyness: a feeling of fear of embarrassment

18–28 min · Background and context · I do (10 min)
Mini-lecture (read or adapt the script).
Travel by post-chaise required overnight stops; families relied on relatives in town. The debate about 'mercenary' versus 'prudent' motives sharpens the theme of marriage and money. Characterization: Elizabeth travels to Hunsford with Sir William and Maria Lucas; she excuses Wickham's pursuit of an heiress, while condemning similar motives in others. Irony: Elizabeth's double standard: what is "mercenary" in one person is "prudent" in another. Watch for letters: Letters carry news, reveal character and change minds; Darcy's letter is the turning point of the novel. In this chapter: "so little liked her going, that he told her to write to him, and almost promised to answer her letter" (Chapter XXVII, paragraph 2).

28–40 min · I do: modeled close reading · I do (12 min)
Model the close reading of the anchor quotation using the written think-aloud below.
First, meaning. I read "Where does discretion end, and avarice begin" slowly and put it in my own words: Elizabeth asks her aunt where sensible caution ends and greed begins, now that Wickham is courting a girl with ten thousand pounds. Next, craft. I notice two questions that set "discretion" against "avarice," words for the same act seen kindly or harshly. The strongest word is "avarice": it is the harsh name for a motive Elizabeth is reluctant to give Wickham. Then, effect. What question is Elizabeth asking about Wickham's interest in Miss King? My answer: Elizabeth is excusing Wickham for chasing money while she condemned it in others; the line shows her partiality and the novel's question about money in marriage.

> Where does discretion end, and avarice begin (Chapter XXVII, paragraph 9)

Think-aloud: First, meaning. I read "Where does discretion end, and avarice begin" slowly and put it in my own words: Elizabeth asks her aunt where sensible caution ends and greed begins, now that Wickham is courting a girl with ten thousand pounds. Next, craft. I notice two questions that set "discretion" against "avarice," words for the same act seen kindly or harshly. The strongest word is "avarice": it is the harsh name for a motive Elizabeth is reluctant to give Wickham. Then, effect. What question is Elizabeth asking about Wickham's interest in Miss King? My answer: Elizabeth is excusing Wickham for chasing money while she condemned it in others; the line shows her partiality and the novel's question about money in marriage.

40–55 min · We do: guided annotation · We do (15 min)
Guided analysis of a second quotation; expected answers given.
Ask: What words in this line stand out, and what do they suggest? Expected: "Mercenary" means for money; "prudent" means sensible. The words describe the same act with different judgment. Ask: How does this line connect to marriage and money? Expected: Mrs. Gardiner asks the key question: what is the difference between prudence and greed? (Elizabeth's own question.)

> what is the difference in matrimonial affairs, between the mercenary and the prudent motive (Chapter XXVII, paragraph 9)

Ask: What words in this line stand out, and what do they suggest?
Expected answer: "Mercenary" means for money; "prudent" means sensible. The words describe the same act with different judgment.
Ask: How does this line connect to marriage and money?
Expected answer: Mrs. Gardiner asks the key question: what is the difference between prudence and greed? (Elizabeth's own question.)

55–70 min · You do: independent annotation · You do (15 min)
Independent annotation and a claim-evidence-reasoning paragraph (exemplar given).
Annotate the chapter for characterization, irony (three marks with a margin note each), then write one claim-evidence-reasoning paragraph: what does this chapter suggest about a journey and a mercenary suitor? Then start your writing prompt at your assigned level (HS Sophomore: Analyze how Chapter XXVII develops the idea of a journey and a mercenary suitor. Make a precise claim, support it with at least three pieces of textual evidence, and explain how the author's use of characterization and theme shapes that idea. Address one possible counterclaim.) Exemplar: Elizabeth applies one standard to Wickham and another to Charlotte. When the text says “what is the difference in matrimonial affairs, between the mercenary and the prudent motive” (Chapter XXVII, paragraph 9), it shows this directly. She asks what is "the difference in matrimonial affairs, between the mercenary and the prudent motive," but excuses Wickham's pursuit of Miss King while condemning Charlotte for the same calculation.
Task: Annotate the chapter for characterization, irony (three marks with a margin note each), then write one claim-evidence-reasoning paragraph: what does this chapter suggest about a journey and a mercenary suitor? Then start your writing prompt at your assigned level (HS Sophomore: Analyze how Chapter XXVII develops the idea of a journey and a mercenary suitor. Make a precise claim, support it with at least three pieces of textual evidence, and explain how the author's use of characterization and theme shapes that idea. Address one possible counterclaim.)
Exemplar: Elizabeth applies one standard to Wickham and another to Charlotte. When the text says “what is the difference in matrimonial affairs, between the mercenary and the prudent motive” (Chapter XXVII, paragraph 9), it shows this directly. She asks what is "the difference in matrimonial affairs, between the mercenary and the prudent motive," but excuses Wickham's pursuit of Miss King while condemning Charlotte for the same calculation.

70–80 min · Discussion · We do (10 min)
Structured discussion from the 30 tiered questions, with facilitation notes.
Anchor question: Where is the line between a prudent marriage and a mercenary one? Ask: is Elizabeth fair to Charlotte? Use her Wickham defense as evidence.
Anchor question: Where is the line between a prudent marriage and a mercenary one?
Facilitation: Ask: is Elizabeth fair to Charlotte? Use her Wickham defense as evidence.

80–87 min · Exit ticket / chapter quiz · You do (7 min)
Chapter quiz in the app and an exit ticket (answer given).
Chapter quiz in the app, then: In one sentence, what does this chapter suggest about a journey and a mercenary suitor? Support it with one short quotation. Model answer: Elizabeth applies one standard to Wickham and another to Charlotte. ("what is the difference in matrimonial affairs, between the mercenary and the prudent motive", Chapter XXVII, paragraph 9). Accept any defensible claim backed by a quotation from the chapter; the answer key for the quiz is in the Quiz section.
Exit ticket: In one sentence, what does this chapter suggest about a journey and a mercenary suitor? Support it with one short quotation.
Answer: Model answer: Elizabeth applies one standard to Wickham and another to Charlotte. ("what is the difference in matrimonial affairs, between the mercenary and the prudent motive", Chapter XXVII, paragraph 9). Accept any defensible claim backed by a quotation from the chapter; the answer key for the quiz is in the Quiz section.

87–90 min · Closure · I do (3 min)
Summarize the lesson and preview the next reading.
Today we saw how characterization shapes a journey and a mercenary suitor. Key takeaway: Mrs. Gardiner asks the key question: what is the difference between prudence and greed?

Total: 90 minutes.

Teacher analysis (spoilers)

Literary elements

- Characterization: Elizabeth travels to Hunsford with Sir William and Maria Lucas; she excuses Wickham's pursuit of an heiress, while condemning similar motives in others.
- Irony: Elizabeth's double standard: what is "mercenary" in one person is "prudent" in another.

Themes and how they develop

- marriage and money: Mrs. Gardiner asks the key question: what is the difference between prudence and greed?

Symbols and motifs

- letters: Letters carry news, reveal character and change minds; Darcy's letter is the turning point of the novel. In this chapter: "so little liked her going, that he told her to write to him, and almost promised to answer her letter" (Chapter XXVII, paragraph 2).

- marriage and money: Incomes, entails and fortunes are stated precisely; marriage is always also an economic question. In this chapter: “sincere regard; and she parted from him convinced, that whether married or single, he must always be her model of the amiable” (Chapter XXVII, paragraph 3).

Key quotations (checked against the reading text)

- “what is the difference in matrimonial affairs, between the mercenary and the prudent motive” (Chapter XXVII, paragraph 9) Elizabeth's own question.
- “Where does discretion end, and avarice begin” (Chapter XXVII, paragraph 9) Mrs. Gardiner's sharper version.
- “Stupid men are the only ones worth knowing, after all” (Chapter XXVII, paragraph 19) Elizabeth's sarcasm.

Model claim-evidence-reasoning

Claim: Elizabeth applies one standard to Wickham and another to Charlotte.
Evidence: “what is the difference in matrimonial affairs, between the mercenary and the prudent motive” (Chapter XXVII, paragraph 9)
Reasoning: She asks what is "the difference in matrimonial affairs, between the mercenary and the prudent motive," but excuses Wickham's pursuit of Miss King while condemning Charlotte for the same calculation.

Vocabulary with etymology notes

Word	Definition (in this sentence)	In context	Word history
jumbled (verb)	mixed up in a confused way	Lakes, mountains, and rivers, shall not be jumbled together in our imaginations; nor, when we attempt to describe any particular scene, will we begin quarrelling about its relative situation.	“jumbled”: Origin of “jumble”: uncertain; perhaps coined in the 1500s on the model of words like stumble and tumble. (Liber et Libri origin note, https://en.wiktionary.org/wiki/jumble#Etymology)
objecting (verb)	saying that one disagrees	“Her not objecting, does not justify him.
diversified (verb)	varied	With no greater events than these in the Longbourn family, and otherwise diversified by little beyond the walks to Meryton, sometimes dirty and sometimes cold, did January and February pass away.	“diversified”: Origin of “diversify”: Middle French diversifier. (Liber et Libri origin note, https://en.wiktionary.org/wiki/diversify#Etymology)
mercenary (adjective)	interested only in money	I should be sorry to think our friend mercenary.”	“mercenary”: Origin: Latin mercēnārius (“hired for money”). (Liber et Libri origin note, https://en.wiktionary.org/wiki/mercenary#Etymology)
		On the stairs were a troop of little boys and girls, whose eagerness for shyness (noun)	a feeling of fear of embarrassment	their cousin's appearance would not allow them to wait in the drawing-room, and whose shyness, as they had not seen her for a twelvemonth, prevented their coming lower.

theatres (noun)	a building where theatrical performances or motion-picture shows can be presented	The day passed most pleasantly away; the morning in bustle and shopping, and the evening at one of the theatres.

Discussion questions

1. Where is the line between a prudent marriage and a mercenary one?
2. Where does characterization appear in this chapter, and what effect does it have? Point to one passage.
3. How does this chapter connect to the book's larger concern with pride and self-knowledge?

Classroom discussion questions (30, tiered)

Wait time after every question (3 s for DOK 1, 5 s for DOK 2, 8 to 10 s for DOK 3 and 4); think-pair-share on DOK 3 and 4; answer each response with a follow-up probe; close with student-generated questions. Focus sets by rigor level: Scaffolded support: 1, 2, 3, 4, 5, 6, 11, 12, 13, 14, 21, 22; HS Freshman: 1, 2, 3, 4, 5, 12, 13, 14, 15, 22, 23, 24; HS Sophomore: 1, 2, 3, 4, 13, 14, 15, 16, 17, 23, 24, 25; HS Junior: 1, 2, 3, 14, 15, 16, 17, 18, 24, 25, 26, 27; HS Senior: 1, 2, 3, 15, 16, 17, 18, 25, 26, 27, 28, 29; AP: 1, 2, 16, 17, 18, 19, 20, 26, 27, 28, 29, 30; College Freshman: 1, 2, 17, 18, 19, 20, 21, 22, 27, 28, 29, 30; College Sophomore: 1, 2, 11, 18, 19, 20, 21, 22, 23, 28, 29, 30; College Junior: 1, 11, 12, 19, 20, 21, 22, 23, 24, 25, 29, 30; College Senior: 1, 11, 12, 13, 20, 21, 22, 23, 24, 25, 26, 30; Graduate / PhD: 1, 11, 12, 13, 21, 22, 23, 24, 25, 26, 27, 28

Literal / recall

1. Where does Elizabeth stop on the way to Hunsford? [DOK 1 · coldCallWithSupport · wait 3 s · AP: unit standards] Look for: London, with the Gardiners
2. Who travels with her? [DOK 1 · turnAndTalk · wait 3 s · AP: unit standards] Look for: Sir William and Maria Lucas
3. What do Elizabeth and Mrs. Gardiner debate? [DOK 1 · coldCallWithSupport · wait 3 s · AP: unit standards] Look for: Whether Wickham is prudent or mercenary
4. What do the Gardiners invite Elizabeth to? [DOK 1 · turnAndTalk · wait 3 s · AP: unit standards] Look for: A summer pleasure tour
5. How does Elizabeth speak of men after this? [DOK 1 · coldCallWithSupport · wait 3 s · AP: unit standards] Look for: With weary mock cynicism
6. Retell the three most important events of "Chapter XXVII" in order, in one sentence each. [DOK 1 · turnAndTalk · wait 3 s · AP: unit standards] Look for: Elizabeth sets out for Hunsford with Sir William and Maria Lucas, stopping in London with the Gardiners. Discussing Wickham's pursuit of Miss King, Elizabeth and Mrs. Gardiner debate the line between prudence and greed. The Gardiners invite Elizabeth on a summer tour.
7. Which characters appear or are mentioned in "Chapter XXVII"? Name two and one thing each says or does. [DOK 1 · coldCallWithSupport · wait 3 s · AP: unit standards] Look for: Names and actions taken from the chapter; check against the teacher summary.

8. Where and when does “Chapter XXVII” take place? Point to the line that tells you. [DOK 1 · turnAndTalk · wait 3 s · AP: unit standards] Look for: A place/time detail quoted from the chapter.
9. Reread: “Lakes, mountains, and rivers, shall not be jumbled together in our imaginations; nor, when we attempt to describe any particular scene, will we begin quarrelling about its relative situation.” What does “jumbled” mean here, and what is literally happening in this line? [DOK 1 · turnAndTalk · wait 3 s · AP: unit standards] Look for: jumbled: mixed up in a confused way.
10. Reread: ““Her not objecting, does not justify him.” What does “objecting” mean here, and what is literally happening in this line? [DOK 1 · turnAndTalk · wait 3 s · AP: unit standards] Look for: objecting: saying that one disagrees.

Inferential / analytical

1. What does “Chapter XXVII” suggest about a journey and a mercenary suitor? State the inference and the line that supports it. [DOK 2 · thinkPairShare · wait 5 s · AP-LIT.LAN] Look for: The debate about 'mercenary' versus 'prudent' motives sharpens the theme of marriage and money.
2. Find one example of characterization in this chapter. What does it reveal that a plain statement would not? [DOK 2 · followUp · wait 5 s · AP-LIT.CHR] Look for: Look for what characters say, do and think, and how others react to them.
3. How does the theme in this chapter shape what we understand about a journey and a mercenary suitor? [DOK 3 · thinkPairShare · wait 8 s · AP-LIT.LAN] Look for: Look for statements or moments that connect to the book's big ideas.
   Answer guidance: A defensible line of argument: Elizabeth applies one standard to Wickham and another to Charlotte. Useful evidence: “what is the difference in matrimonial affairs, between the mercenary and the prudent motive” (Chapter XXVII, paragraph 9): Elizabeth's own question. Theme link: Mrs. Gardiner asks the key question: what is the difference between prudence and greed? Credit any position that is supported by quotation and reasoning; push one-sided answers to address the strongest counterpoint.
4. In the passage that begins “It was a journey of only twenty-four miles, and they began it so early as to be in Gracechurch-street by noon.”, why might Austen have chosen these particular words? Pick two and explain their connotations. [DOK 2 · followUp · wait 5 s · AP-LIT.FIG] Look for: Diction analysis of two words in the anchor passage.
5. What causes the main turn in “Chapter XXVII”, and what effect is it likely to have on what follows? [DOK 2 · followUp · wait 5 s · AP-LIT.STR] Look for: Elizabeth sets out for Hunsford with Sir William and Maria Lucas, stopping in London with the Gardiners. Discussing Wickham's pursuit of Miss King, Elizabeth and Mrs. Gardiner debate the line between prudence and greed. The Gardiners invite Elizabeth on a summer tour.
6. How does “Chapter XXVII” build on “Chapter XXVI”? Name one link of cause and effect. [DOK 3 · thinkPairShare · wait 8 s · AP-LIT.STR] Look for: A causal or structural link between this and the previous chapter.
   Answer guidance: A defensible line of argument: Elizabeth applies one standard to Wickham and another to Charlotte. Useful evidence: “Where does discretion end, and avarice begin” (Chapter XXVII, paragraph 9): Mrs. Gardiner's sharper version. Theme link: Mrs. Gardiner asks the key question: what is the difference between prudence and greed? Credit any position that is supported by quotation and reasoning; push one-sided answers to address the strongest counterpoint.
7. What can we infer about a character's motives from what they say and do here, as opposed to what they claim? [DOK 3 · followUp · wait 8 s · AP-LIT.CHR] Look for: An inference about motive supported by a quoted line.
   Answer guidance: A defensible line of argument: Elizabeth applies one standard to Wickham and another to Charlotte. Useful evidence: “Stupid men are the only ones worth knowing, after all” (Chapter XXVII, paragraph 19): Elizabeth's sarcasm. On characterization: Elizabeth travels to Hunsford with Sir William and Maria Lucas; she excuses Wickham's pursuit of an heiress, while condemning similar motives in others. Credit any position that is supported by quotation and reasoning; push one-sided answers to address the strongest counterpoint.

8. The bell-ringer asked: “Where is the line between a prudent marriage and a mercenary one?” Now that we have read closely, how would you revise your first answer, and which line changed your mind? [DOK 2 · thinkPairShare · wait 5 s · AP-LIT.LAN] Look for: A revised answer anchored in the text.
9. Where does irony appear, and how does it connect this chapter to the larger concern with pride and self-knowledge? [DOK 3 · followUp · wait 8 s · AP-LIT.NAR] Look for: Look for gaps between what characters expect or say and what is true.

   Answer guidance: A defensible line of argument: Elizabeth applies one standard to Wickham and another to Charlotte. Useful evidence: “what is the difference in matrimonial affairs, between the mercenary and the prudent motive” (Chapter XXVII, paragraph 9): Elizabeth's own question. On irony: Elizabeth's double standard: what is "mercenary" in one person is "prudent" in another. Credit any position that is supported by quotation and reasoning; push one-sided answers to address the strongest counterpoint.
10. Background: Travel by post-chaise required overnight stops; families relied on relatives in town. How does knowing this change the way you read one moment in the chapter? [DOK 3 · thinkPairShare · wait 8 s · AP-LIT.SET] Look for: A specific moment reread in light of the context.

    Answer guidance: A defensible line of argument: Elizabeth applies one standard to Wickham and another to Charlotte. Useful evidence: “Where does discretion end, and avarice begin” (Chapter XXVII, paragraph 9): Mrs. Gardiner's sharper version. Theme link: Mrs. Gardiner asks the key question: what is the difference between prudence and greed? Credit any position that is supported by quotation and reasoning; push one-sided answers to address the strongest counterpoint.

Evaluative / synthesis / creative

1. A critic might argue: “The debate about 'mercenary' versus 'prudent' motives sharpens the theme of marriage and money.” How far do you agree? Take a stand and defend it with two lines from the chapter. [DOK 3 · fourCorners · wait 8 s · AP-LIT.LAN] Look for: A defended position with evidence and one counterpoint.

   Answer guidance: A defensible line of argument: Elizabeth applies one standard to Wickham and another to Charlotte. Useful evidence: “Stupid men are the only ones worth knowing, after all” (Chapter XXVII, paragraph 19): Elizabeth's sarcasm. Theme link: Mrs. Gardiner asks the key question: what is the difference between prudence and greed? Credit any position that is supported by quotation and reasoning; push one-sided answers to address the strongest counterpoint.
2. Which character in this chapter acts most wisely, and which least? Judge them by a standard you name. [DOK 3 · thinkPairShare · wait 8 s · AP-LIT.CHR, AP-LIT.LAN] Look for: An evaluation using an explicit criterion and evidence.

   Answer guidance: A defensible line of argument: Elizabeth applies one standard to Wickham and another to Charlotte. Useful evidence: “what is the difference in matrimonial affairs, between the mercenary and the prudent motive” (Chapter XXVII, paragraph 9): Elizabeth's own question. On characterization: Elizabeth travels to Hunsford with Sir William and Maria Lucas; she excuses Wickham's pursuit of an heiress, while condemning similar motives in others. Credit any position that is supported by quotation and reasoning; push one-sided answers to address the strongest counterpoint.

3. Rewrite one moment of “Chapter XXVII” from the point of view of a different character. What does the new angle reveal or hide about a journey and a mercenary suitor? [DOK 4 · thinkPairShare · wait 8 s · AP-LIT.LAN, AP-LIT.NAR] Look for: A creative product with a rationale tied to the text.

   Answer guidance: A defensible line of argument: Elizabeth applies one standard to Wickham and another to Charlotte. Useful evidence: “Where does discretion end, and avarice begin” (Chapter XXVII, paragraph 9): Mrs. Gardiner's sharper version. Theme link: Mrs. Gardiner asks the key question: what is the difference between prudence and greed? Credit any position that is supported by quotation and reasoning; push one-sided answers to address the strongest counterpoint.
4. Write three questions of your own about “Chapter XXVII”: one recall, one “why/how”, and one “should/what if”. Trade with a partner and answer theirs. [DOK 3 · studentGenerated · wait 8 s · AP-LIT.LAN] Look for: Student-generated questions at three levels.

   Answer guidance: A defensible line of argument: Elizabeth applies one standard to Wickham and another to Charlotte. Useful evidence: “Stupid men are the only ones worth knowing, after all” (Chapter XXVII, paragraph 19): Elizabeth's sarcasm. Theme link: Mrs. Gardiner asks the key question: what is the difference between prudence and greed? Credit any position that is supported by quotation and reasoning; push one-sided answers to address the strongest counterpoint.
5. Connect this chapter to marriage and money: is the link strong or weak so far? What would Austen need to show next to strengthen it? [DOK 4 · socraticCircle · wait 8 s · AP-LIT.LAN] Look for: A judgment of thematic development across the work.

   Answer guidance: A defensible line of argument: Elizabeth applies one standard to Wickham and another to Charlotte. Useful evidence: “what is the difference in matrimonial affairs, between the mercenary and the prudent motive” (Chapter XXVII, paragraph 9): Elizabeth's own question. Theme link: Mrs. Gardiner asks the key question: what is the difference between prudence and greed? Credit any position that is supported by quotation and reasoning; push one-sided answers to address the strongest counterpoint.
6. Is the characterization in this chapter effective, or does it feel heavy-handed? Evaluate it as a reader would in a review. [DOK 3 · fourCorners · wait 8 s · AP-LIT.CHR, AP-LIT.LAN] Look for: An evaluative judgment with criteria and evidence.

   Answer guidance: A defensible line of argument: Elizabeth applies one standard to Wickham and another to Charlotte. Useful evidence: “Where does discretion end, and avarice begin” (Chapter XXVII, paragraph 9): Mrs. Gardiner's sharper version. On characterization: Elizabeth travels to Hunsford with Sir William and Maria Lucas; she excuses Wickham's pursuit of an heiress, while condemning similar motives in others. Credit any position that is supported by quotation and reasoning; push one-sided answers to address the strongest counterpoint.
7. Compare how “Chapter XXVII” treats a journey and a mercenary suitor with how another text, film or event you know treats a similar idea. What does Pride and Prejudice see that the other misses? [DOK 4 · socraticCircle · wait 8 s · AP-LIT.LAN] Look for: A cross-text synthesis.

   Answer guidance: A defensible line of argument: Elizabeth applies one standard to Wickham and another to Charlotte. Useful evidence: “Stupid men are the only ones worth knowing, after all” (Chapter XXVII, paragraph 19): Elizabeth's sarcasm. Theme link: Mrs. Gardiner asks the key question: what is the difference between prudence and greed? Credit any position that is supported by quotation and reasoning; push one-sided answers to address the strongest counterpoint.
8. Predict what “Chapter XXVIII” will bring, using two clues from this chapter. After reading, evaluate your prediction. [DOK 3 · thinkPairShare · wait 8 s · AP-LIT.LAN, AP-LIT.STR] Look for: A prediction or judgment justified with textual clues.

Answer guidance: A defensible line of argument: Elizabeth applies one standard to Wickham and another to Charlotte. Useful evidence: “what is the difference in matrimonial affairs, between the mercenary and the prudent motive” (Chapter XXVII, paragraph 9): Elizabeth's own question. Theme link: Mrs. Gardiner asks the key question: what is the difference between prudence and greed? Credit any position that is supported by quotation and reasoning; push one-sided answers to address the strongest counterpoint.

9. Design a one-paragraph modern adaptation of this chapter (setting, characters, conflict). What must stay the same for it to still be about a journey and a mercenary suitor? [DOK 4 · thinkPairShare · wait 8 s · AP-LIT.LAN] Look for: A creative transfer that keeps the core idea.

   Answer guidance: A defensible line of argument: Elizabeth applies one standard to Wickham and another to Charlotte. Useful evidence: “Where does discretion end, and avarice begin” (Chapter XXVII, paragraph 9): Mrs. Gardiner's sharper version. Theme link: Mrs. Gardiner asks the key question: what is the difference between prudence and greed? Credit any position that is supported by quotation and reasoning; push one-sided answers to address the strongest counterpoint.

10. What question would you most like to ask Jane Austen about this chapter, and what answer do you think the text itself gives? [DOK 4 · studentGenerated · wait 8 s · AP-LIT.LAN] Look for: A student-generated question answered from evidence.

    Answer guidance: A defensible line of argument: Elizabeth applies one standard to Wickham and another to Charlotte. Useful evidence: “Stupid men are the only ones worth knowing, after all” (Chapter XXVII, paragraph 19): Elizabeth's sarcasm. Theme link: Mrs. Gardiner asks the key question: what is the difference between prudence and greed? Credit any position that is supported by quotation and reasoning; push one-sided answers to address the strongest counterpoint.

Annotation focus

- Characterization: look for what characters say, do and think, and how others react to them (anchor passage in the We do segment)
- Also notice Theme: statements or moments that connect to the book's big ideas
- Also notice Irony: gaps between what characters expect or say and what is true

Chapter quiz: item bank (all eleven rigor versions)

1. [fill · recall · DOK 1] Fill in the blank with the vocabulary word that fits: “On the stairs were a troop of little boys and girls, whose eagerness for their cousin’s appearance would not allow them to wait in the drawing-room, and whose _____, as they had not seen her for a twelvemonth, prevented their coming lower.” Word bank: shyness, jumbled, objecting, diversified

   Key: shyness

2. [mc · recall · DOK 1] In the line “Her not objecting, does not justify him.”, what does “objecting” most nearly mean?

   A. saying that one disagrees

   B. a person who prepared and sold medicines and gave medical advice

   C. reach, make, or come to a decision about something

   D. helped; given an advantage

   Key: A (saying that one disagrees)

3. [mc · recall · DOK 1] In the line "With no greater events than these in the Longbourn family, and otherwise diversified by little beyond the walks to Meryton, sometimes dirty and sometimes cold, did January and February pass away.", what does "diversified" most nearly mean?

   A. very strong; impossible to resist

   B. a card game played with tickets for prizes

   C. the event of dying or departure from life

   D. varied

   Key: D (varied)

4. [fill · recall · DOK 1] Complete the quotation from Chapter XXVII, paragraph 4: "Elizabeth loved _____, but she had known Sir William's too long." Word bank: reasonable, absurdities, deficient, seriously

   Key: absurdities

5. [mc · recall · DOK 1] Which word completes this sentence from Chapter XXVII, paragraph 16? "It only shows her being _____ in something herself—sense or feeling."

   A. deficient

   B. seriously

   C. contrived

   D. believe

   Key: A (deficient)

6. [mc · recall · DOK 1] In the line "I should be sorry to think our friend mercenary.", what does "mercenary" most nearly mean?

   A. oblivious of dangers or perils or calmly resolute in facing them

   B. interested only in money

   C. very formal and polite

   D. bringing shame on

   Key: B (interested only in money)

7. [fill · recall · DOK 1] Complete the quotation from Chapter XXVII, paragraph 1: "She had not at first thought very _____ of going thither; but Charlotte, she soon found, was depending on the plan, and she gradually learned to consider it herself with greater pleasure as well as greater certainty." Word bank: seriously, travellers, contrived, complimented

   Key: seriously

8. [mc · recall · DOK 1] Who travels with her?

   A. Jane and Bingley

   B. Lydia

   C. Mr. Collins

   D. Sir William and Maria Lucas

   Key: D (Sir William and Maria Lucas)

9. [mc · recall · DOK 1] In the line "Lakes, mountains, and rivers, shall not be jumbled together in our imaginations; nor, when we attempt to describe any particular scene, will we begin quarrelling about its relative situation.", what does "jumbled" most nearly mean?

   A. insulted; offended openly

B. mixed up in a confused way

C. bags for holding sewing or needlework

D. a state of melancholy depression

Key: B (mixed up in a confused way)

10. [mc · recall · DOK 1] Where does Elizabeth stop on the way to Hunsford?

A. Pemberley

B. London, with the Gardiners

C. Brighton

D. Bath

Key: B (London, with the Gardiners)

11. [short · inference · DOK 2] What does this passage from Chapter XXVII, paragraph 17 reveal about the character or situation? “Well,’ cried Elizabeth, ‘have it as you choose.” Answer in two or three sentences with one detail.

Sample answer: The passage (Chapter XXVII, paragraph 17) shows the situation turning on first impressions and prejudice: Mrs. Gardiner asks the key question: what is the difference between prudence and greed. The words “choose” are the proof, because they show how the moment looks to the people in it. They suggest more than the narrator states outright.

12. [short · inference · DOK 2] What does this passage from Chapter XXVII, paragraph 1 reveal about the character or situation? “Absence had increased her desire of seeing Charlotte again, and weakened her disgust of Mr. Collins.” Answer in two or three sentences with one detail.

Sample answer: The passage (Chapter XXVII, paragraph 1) shows the situation turning on first impressions and prejudice: Mrs. Gardiner asks the key question: what is the difference between prudence and greed. The words “increased” and “weakened” are the proof, because they show how the moment looks to the people in it. They suggest more than the narrator states outright.

13. [short · inference · DOK 2] What can you infer from this line? “Where does discretion end, and avarice begin” (Chapter XXVII, paragraph 9) Answer in two or three sentences with one detail.

Sample answer: Mrs. Gardiner's sharper version. The evidence is “Where does discretion end, and avarice begin” (Chapter XXVII, paragraph 9). This develops marriage and money: Mrs. Gardiner asks the key question: what is the difference between prudence and greed?.

14. [short · analysis · DOK 3] Analyze how the word choice in this passage from Chapter XXVII, paragraph 4 shapes its tone: “Sir William Lucas, and his daughter Maria, a good humoured girl, but as empty-headed as himself, had nothing to say that could be worth hearing, and were listened to with about as much delight as the rattle of the chaise.” Pick two words and explain their effect.

Sample answer: The words “humoured” and “listened” (Chapter XXVII, paragraph 4) make the tone heavy and deliberate rather than neutral. That weight points the reader to pride and self-knowledge: Mrs. Gardiner asks the key question: what is the difference between prudence and greed. The author chooses them so the moment feels significant instead of passing.

15. [short · analysis · DOK 3] Analyze how the word choice in this passage from Chapter XXVII, paragraph 2 shapes its tone: “The only pain was in leaving her father, who would certainly miss her, and who, when it came to the point, so little liked her going, that he told her to write to him, and almost promised to answer her letter.” Pick two words and explain their effect.

Sample answer: The words “certainly” and “promised” (Chapter XXVII, paragraph 2) make the tone heavy and deliberate rather than neutral. That weight points the reader to class and social mobility: Mrs. Gardiner asks the key question: what is the difference between prudence and greed. The author chooses them so the moment feels significant instead of passing.

16. [short · synthesis · DOK 4] Evaluate this claim about the chapter: “Elizabeth applies one standard to Wickham and another to Charlotte.” Is it fully persuasive? Argue with evidence, including a passage that complicates it.

    Sample answer: The claim is persuasive in part. “what is the difference in matrimonial affairs, between the mercenary and the prudent motive” (Chapter XXVII, paragraph 9) supports it: She asks what is "the difference in matrimonial affairs, between the mercenary and the prudent motive," but excuses Wickham's pursuit of Miss King while condemning Charlotte for the same calculation. But “Stupid men are the only ones worth knowing, after all” (Chapter XXVII, paragraph 19) complicates it: the line (Elizabeth's sarcasm) shows the same issue from another side, and its “only” marks a limit or reversal the claim passes over. Weighing the two passages, the claim survives, but only once it admits the tension the second passage creates.

17. [fill · recall · DOK 1] Complete the quotation from Chapter XXVII, paragraph 9: “what is the difference in _____ affairs, between the mercenary and the prudent motive”

    Key: matrimonial

18. [fill · recall · DOK 1] Complete the quotation from Chapter XXVII, paragraph 11: “She is a very good kind of girl, I _____.” Word bank: deficient, believe, improvement, travellers

    Key: believe

19. [mc · recall · DOK 1] Which word completes this sentence from Chapter XXVII, paragraph 6? “It was _____, however, to hope, that they would not continue long.”

    A. improvement
    B. reasonable
    C. circumstances
    D. absurdities

    Key: B (reasonable)

20. [mc · recall · DOK 1] What do the Gardiners invite Elizabeth to?

    A. A summer pleasure tour
    B. A season in Bath
    C. A ball
    D. A wedding

    Key: A (A summer pleasure tour)

21. [fill · recall · DOK 1] Fill in the blank with the vocabulary word that fits: “The day passed most pleasantly away; the morning in bustle and shopping, and the evening at one of the _____.” Word bank: diversified, theatres, objecting, jumbled

    Key: theatres

22. [mc · recall · DOK 1] Which word completes this sentence from Chapter XXVII, paragraph 1? “The _____ of spending a night in London was added in time, and the plan became perfect as plan could be.”

    A. uncompanionable
    B. circumstances
    C. improvement
    D. absurdities

    Key: C (improvement)

23. [mc · inference · DOK 2] Which choice best states a central concern of "Chapter XXVII"?

    A. A journey and a mercenary suitor

    B. A practical marriage

    C. Wit as courtship

    D. Family uproar

    Key: A (A journey and a mercenary suitor)

24. [short · analysis · DOK 3] Analyze how the word choice in this passage from Chapter XXVII, paragraph 20 shapes its tone: "Take care, Lizzy; that speech savours strongly of disappointment." Pick two words and explain their effect.

    Sample answer: The words "disappointment" and "strongly" (Chapter XXVII, paragraph 20) make the tone heavy and deliberate rather than neutral. That weight points the reader to class and social mobility: Mrs. Gardiner asks the key question: what is the difference between prudence and greed. The author chooses them so the moment feels significant instead of passing.

25. [mc · analysis · DOK 3] In this chapter, which theme does the following most directly develop? Mrs. Gardiner asks the key question: what is the difference between prudence and greed?

    A. Class and social mobility

    B. First impressions and prejudice

    C. Pride and self-knowledge

    D. Marriage and money

    Key: D (Marriage and money)

26. [short · synthesis · DOK 4] Synthesis: trace how marriage and money develops from Chapter XXV to Chapter XXVII. Use one quotation from each.

    Sample answer: Earlier, in Chapter XXV, paragraph 2, the text reads "Gardiner was a sensible, gentleman-like man, greatly superior to his sister, as well by nature as education" — Class is not character: a man in trade is a gentleman in manners. In Chapter XXVII, "what is the difference in matrimonial affairs, between the mercenary and the prudent motive" (Chapter XXVII, paragraph 9) — Elizabeth's own question. Mrs. Gardiner asks the key question: what is the difference between prudence and greed?.

27. [fill · recall · DOK 1] Complete the quotation from Chapter XXVII, paragraph 9: "Where does _____ end, and avarice begin"

    Key: discretion

28. [mc · recall · DOK 1] How does Elizabeth speak of men after this?

    A. With silence

    B. With fear

    C. With joy

    D. With weary mock cynicism

    Key: D (With weary mock cynicism)

29. [short · analysis · DOK 3] Analyze how the word choice in this passage from Chapter XXVII, paragraph 23 shapes its tone: "Let our first effusions be less insupportable than those of the generality of travellers." Pick two words and explain their effect.

    Sample answer: The words "insupportable" and "generality" (Chapter XXVII, paragraph 23) make the tone heavy and deliberate rather than neutral. That weight points the reader to pride and self-knowledge: Mrs. Gardiner asks the key question: what is the difference between prudence and greed. The author chooses them so the moment feels significant instead of passing.

30. [short · synthesis · DOK 4] Connect this passage from Chapter XXVII, paragraph 12 to the story's treatment of marriage and money: “But he paid her not the smallest attention, till her grandfather’s death made her mistress of this fortune.” Use one other moment from the story as well.
    Sample answer: This passage (Chapter XXVII, paragraph 12) develops marriage and money: Mrs. Gardiner asks the key question: what is the difference between prudence and greed. Its words “grandfather” and “attention” carry that idea into this moment. The same concern returns in “But there seems indelicacy in directing his attentions towards her, so soon after this event.” (Chapter XXVII, paragraph 14), so the two passages read as a pattern, not a single moment. Together they show the story treating marriage and money as central.

31. [short · synthesis · DOK 4 · AP: AP-LIT.LAN] Connect this passage from Chapter XXVII, paragraph 6 to the story's treatment of women's limited choices: “Their first subject was her sister; and she was more grieved than astonished to hear, in reply to her minute enquiries, that though Jane always struggled to support her spirits, there were periods of dejection.” Use one other moment from the story as well.
    Sample answer: This passage (Chapter XXVII, paragraph 6) develops women's limited choices: Mrs. Gardiner asks the key question: what is the difference between prudence and greed. Its words “astonished” and “enquiries” carry that idea into this moment. The same concern returns in “But, my dear Elizabeth,’ she added, ‘what sort of girl is Miss King?” (Chapter XXVII, paragraph 8), so the two passages read as a pattern, not a single moment. Together they show the story treating women's limited choices as central.

32. [short · synthesis · DOK 4 · AP: AP-LIT.FIG] Close reading: how do the diction and syntax of “Where does discretion end, and avarice begin” (Chapter XXVII, paragraph 9) shape its meaning? Consider a second, competing reading.
    Sample answer: Mrs. Gardiner's sharper version. The evidence is “Where does discretion end, and avarice begin” (Chapter XXVII, paragraph 9). This develops marriage and money: Mrs. Gardiner asks the key question: what is the difference between prudence and greed?. The words “discretion” and “avarice” carry that meaning: they are the charged choices in the line, and changing either would soften the effect. She asks what is "the difference in matrimonial affairs, between the mercenary and the prudent motive," but excuses Wickham's pursuit of Miss King while condemning Charlotte for the same calculation.

33. [mc · recall · DOK 1 · AP: AP-LIT.STR] What do Elizabeth and Mrs. Gardiner debate?

    A. Lydia's manners
    B. Darcy's pride
    C. Whether Wickham is prudent or mercenary
    D. Charlotte's house

    Key: C (Whether Wickham is prudent or mercenary)

34. [short · analysis · DOK 3 · AP: AP-LIT.FIG] Analyze the word choice in “Stupid men are the only ones worth knowing, after all” (Chapter XXVII, paragraph 19). Pick two words and explain what they suggest.
    Sample answer: Elizabeth's sarcasm. The evidence is “Stupid men are the only ones worth knowing, after all” (Chapter XXVII, paragraph 19). This develops marriage and money: Mrs. Gardiner asks the key question: what is the difference between prudence and greed?. The words “knowing” and “worth” carry that meaning: they are the charged choices in the line, and changing either would soften the effect.

35. [mc · analysis · DOK 3 · Program outcome: LeL-C2-LIT-1] Which literary element does this describe in “Chapter XXVII”? Elizabeth travels to Hunsford with Sir William and Maria Lucas; she excuses Wickham's pursuit of an heiress, while condemning similar motives in others.

    A. Symbolism

    B. Imagery

    C. Characterization

    D. Personification

    Key: C (Characterization)

36. [mc · inference · DOK 2 · Program outcome: LeL-C3-LIT-1] What does this passage most clearly show? “Where does discretion end, and avarice begin” (Chapter XXVII, paragraph 9)

    A. Lydia treats the elopement as a joke at her friend's expense.

    B. Direct evidence that Darcy's manners have changed; note the list of what has vanished.

    C. Mrs. Gardiner's sharper version.

    D. Darcy's change is read as proof of love.

    Key: C (Mrs. Gardiner's sharper version.)

37. [mc · analysis · DOK 3 · Program outcome: LeL-C4-LIT-1] Which literary element does this describe in “Chapter XXVII”? Elizabeth's double standard: what is ‘mercenary’ in one person is ‘prudent’ in another.

    A. Alliteration

    B. Irony

    C. Conflict

    D. Allusion

    Key: B (Irony)

Rigor version	Items (in order)	Mix
Scaffolded support	1, 2, 3, 4, 5, 6, 7, 8, 9, 10, 11, 12, 13, 14, 15, 16	recall 10, inference 3, analysis 2, synthesis 1
HS Freshman	17, 18, 19, 6, 20, 21, 22, 1, 5, 23, 11, 12, 24, 15, 25, 26	recall 9, inference 3, analysis 3, synthesis 1
HS Sophomore	10, 27, 7, 28, 9, 18, 19, 23, 12, 11, 13, 25, 29, 24, 26, 30	recall 7, inference 4, analysis 3, synthesis 2
HS Junior	27, 19, 10, 5, 17, 6, 8, 23, 11, 12, 14, 29, 24, 25, 31, 26	recall 7, inference 3, analysis 4, synthesis 2
HS Senior	5, 28, 7, 19, 1, 20, 21, 11, 12, 14, 24, 15, 25, 32, 16, 31	recall 7, inference 2, analysis 4, synthesis 3
AP	18, 33, 7, 10, 11, 23, 25, 24, 29, 15, 34, 32, 31, 30, 16, 26	recall 4, inference 2, analysis 5, synthesis 5
College Freshman	20, 22, 18, 1, 23, 12, 29, 24, 14, 34, 25, 31, 30, 26, 16, 32	recall 4, inference 2, analysis 5, synthesis 5
College Sophomore	22, 3, 1, 21, 11, 25, 24, 15, 29, 14, 34, 35, 30, 26, 31, 16	recall 4, inference 1, analysis 7, synthesis 4
College Junior	1, 22, 21, 36, 11, 23, 34, 15, 25, 24, 14, 29, 31, 16, 30, 26	recall 3, inference 3, analysis 6, synthesis 4
College Senior		recall 4, inference 1, analysis 7, synthesis 4

	17, 10, 8, 18, 13, 24, 14, 37, 29, 15, 25, 34, 26, 16, 30, 31
Graduate / PhD	28, 1, 10, 4, 23, 13, 12, 24, 25, 15, 34, 14, 30, 26, 16, 31	recall 4, inference 3, analysis 5, synthesis 4

Writing prompts (eleven rigor levels)

Scaffolded support (250 words; AP: see unit standards): Supported track (work from the passage your teacher selects). In “Chapter XXVII,” how does Austen show a journey and a mercenary suitor? Write a paragraph that states your claim, quotes two details from the passage, and explains how each detail supports your idea. Use the characterization you noticed as one piece of evidence.

HS Freshman (350 words; AP: see unit standards): In Chapter XXVII, how does Austen develop the idea of a journey and a mercenary suitor? State a clear claim, support it with two or three quotations, and explain how the characterization in the chapter helps build that idea.

HS Sophomore (450 words; AP: see unit standards): Analyze how Chapter XXVII develops the idea of a journey and a mercenary suitor. Make a precise claim, support it with at least three pieces of textual evidence, and explain how the author's use of characterization and theme shapes that idea. Address one possible counterclaim.

HS Junior (550 words; AP: see unit standards): Analyze how the structure of Chapter XXVII (where it begins, turns and ends) and its characterization shape the reader's understanding of a journey and a mercenary suitor. Identify one place where the text leaves matters uncertain and explain how that uncertainty adds to its meaning.

HS Senior (600 words; AP: see unit standards): Two readers disagree about what Chapter XXVII suggests about a journey and a mercenary suitor. Lay out two plausible interpretations, weigh the evidence for each (including the chapter's characterization and theme), and argue for the stronger one in a sustained, well-organized essay.

AP (650 words; AP: AP-LIT.CHR, AP-LIT.LAN): Write a literary argument in which you analyze how Jane Austen uses characterization in Chapter XXVII to complicate the reader's understanding of a journey and a mercenary suitor. Develop a defensible thesis, select evidence purposefully, and explain how specific choices of diction and syntax create meaning.

College Freshman (1000 words; AP: see unit standards): Situate Chapter XXVII within its historical and literary context and argue how the chapter's treatment of a journey and a mercenary suitor responds to that context. Engage with at least one secondary perspective (a critic, historian or the author's own statements), integrate quotations smoothly, and cite in MLA style.

College Sophomore (1250 words; AP: see unit standards): Read Chapter XXVII alongside the conventions of its genre and period. Argue how the chapter's handling of a journey and a mercenary suitor follows or bends those conventions, using the characterization as evidence, and test your reading against one published critic. Document two secondary sources in MLA.

College Junior (1500 words; AP: see unit standards): Apply a named critical approach (for example formalist, historicist, feminist, psychoanalytic or ecocritical) to Chapter XXVII and its treatment of a journey and a mercenary suitor. State your method, show what it reveals in the chapter's characterization and theme, and identify where the text resists it.

College Senior (2000 words; AP: see unit standards): Develop a research argument that reads Chapter XXVII as evidence for a larger claim about a journey and a mercenary suitor in Pride and Prejudice. Connect close reading of the chapter to the whole novel, engage at least four scholarly sources, and state precisely where your reading departs from theirs (Chicago style).

Graduate / PhD (2500 words; AP: see unit standards): Develop an original argument that reads Chapter XXVII as a hinge in the novel's larger treatment of a journey and a mercenary suitor. Position your reading within a named critical conversation (for example formalist, historicist, psychoanalytic, feminist or postcolonial approaches), account for the textual history where relevant, and articulate the stakes of your intervention for scholarship on Pride and Prejudice.

SAT-style questions

1. With no greater events than these in the Longbourn family, and otherwise diversified by little beyond the walks to Meryton, sometimes dirty and sometimes cold, did January and February pass away.

   As used in the text, what does the word “diversified” most nearly mean?

   A. a building where theatrical performances or motion-picture shows can be presented

   B. interested only in money

   C. a feeling of fear of embarrassment

   D. varied

2. It was a journey of only twenty-four miles, and they began it so early as to be in Gracechurch-street by noon. As they drove to Mr. Gardiner’s door, Jane was at a drawing-room window watching their arrival; when they entered the passage she was there to welcome them, and Elizabeth, looking earnestly in her face, was pleased to see it healthful and lovely as ever. On the stairs were a troop of little boys and girls, whose eagerness for their cousin’s appearance would not allow them to wait in the drawing-room, and whose shyness, as they had not seen her for a twelvemonth, prevented their coming lower. All was joy and kindness. The day passed most pleasantly away; the morning in bustle and shopping, and the evening at one of the theatres.

   Which choice best states a central concern of “Chapter XXVII”?

   A. A journey and a mercenary suitor

   B. Leaving Kent

   C. A changed Darcy

   D. Disappointment and philosophy

SAT key: 1. D (varied); 2. A (A journey and a mercenary suitor)

Lesson 29: Chapter XXVIII

Focus: visit to Hunsford

Objective: Students will analyze how setting develops in "Chapter XXVIII" by writing a claim-evidence-reasoning paragraph that cites at least 2 quotations from the section, and will score at least 80% on the section quiz.

Standards: AP: see the unit standards

Teacher only · spoilers

Arriving at Hunsford, Elizabeth is shown every room and the garden by Collins, who praises Lady Catherine constantly. Charlotte manages him skillfully and keeps her own sitting room. They glimpse Lady Catherine's sickly daughter, Anne.

Background: Rosings Park in Kent represents aristocratic wealth and patronage.

Significance: Charlotte has built a contented life by managing her husband's absurdity.

Lesson plan and lecture script (90 minutes)

0–8 min · Bell-ringer · You do (8 min)
Students write to the bell-ringer, then pair-share.
How has Charlotte made her marriage work? Write for five minutes. Starters: I think... because... / This connects to marriage and money because....
Prompt: How has Charlotte made her marriage work?
Sentence starters: I think… because… · This connects to marriage and money because…
Strong response: A strong response takes a position and anticipates this: Charlotte's marriage works because she arranges her life to see little of him.

8–18 min · Vocabulary with etymology notes · I do (10 min)
Five key words in context, with verified word histories.
Today's words: neatness — tidiness and order; sideboard — a long dining-room cabinet with a flat top; sloping — slanting; consistency — harmony of all the parts; good order; diversion — an activity that diverts or amuses or stimulates. "sideboard": Origin: an English formation from side + board. "diversion": Origin: Medieval Latin diversiō; earlier Latin divertō ("to divert").
Words: neatness: tidiness and order · sideboard: a long dining-room cabinet with a flat top · sloping: slanting · consistency: harmony of all the parts; good order · diversion: an activity that diverts or amuses or stimulates

18–28 min · Background and context · I do (10 min)
Mini-lecture (read or adapt the script).
Rosings Park in Kent represents aristocratic wealth and patronage. Charlotte has built a contented life by managing her husband's absurdity. Setting: Hunsford parsonage and Rosings: the material world Charlotte chose. Characterization: Collins shows off; Charlotte manages him by encouraging gardening. Watch for rank and condescension: Rank is displayed and enforced, above all at Rosings by Lady Catherine; Elizabeth refuses to be cowed. In this chapter: "turning expected to bring it in view. The paling of Rosings Park was their boundary on one side. Elizabeth smiled at the" (Chapter XXVIII, paragraph 2).

28–40 min · I do: modeled close reading · I do (12 min)
Model the close reading of the anchor quotation using the written think-aloud below.
First, meaning. I read "I expected at least that the pigs were got into the garden, and here is nothing but Lady Catherine and her daughter" slowly and put it in my own words: Elizabeth expected at least an emergency like pigs in the garden, but it is only Lady Catherine and her daughter. Next, craft. I notice the comic letdown, from farmyard chaos to grand visitors. The strongest word is "pigs": the earthy word deflates the household's awe. Then, effect. Why does Elizabeth react with such dry humor to the visitors? My answer: Elizabeth reacts with dry humor to the visitors because she refuses to be impressed by rank; her joke shows the independence that will later let her stand up to Lady Catherine.

> I expected at least that the pigs were got into the garden, and here is nothing but Lady Catherine and her daughter (Chapter XXVIII, paragraph 14)

Think-aloud: First, meaning. I read "I expected at least that the pigs were got into the garden, and here is nothing but Lady Catherine and her daughter" slowly and put it in my own words: Elizabeth expected at least an emergency like pigs in the garden, but it is only Lady Catherine and her daughter. Next, craft. I notice the comic letdown, from farmyard chaos to grand visitors. The strongest word is "pigs": the earthy word deflates the household's awe. Then, effect. Why does Elizabeth react with such dry humor to the visitors? My answer: Elizabeth reacts with dry humor to the visitors because she refuses to be impressed by rank; her joke shows the independence that will later let her stand up to Lady Catherine.

40–55 min · We do: guided annotation · We do (15 min)
Guided analysis of a second quotation; expected answers given.
Ask: What words in this line stand out, and what do they suggest? Expected: Comfort, not love: this is what Charlotte bargained for. Connects to marriage and money. Ask: How does this line connect to marriage and money? Expected: Charlotte's marriage works because she arranges her life to see little of him. (The key to Charlotte's marriage.)

> When Mr. Collins could be forgotten, there was really a great air of comfort throughout (Chapter XXVIII, paragraph 5)

Ask: What words in this line stand out, and what do they suggest?
Expected answer: Comfort, not love: this is what Charlotte bargained for. Connects to marriage and money.
Ask: How does this line connect to marriage and money?
Expected answer: Charlotte's marriage works because she arranges her life to see little of him. (The key to Charlotte's marriage.)

55–70 min · You do: independent annotation · You do (15 min)
Independent annotation and a claim-evidence-reasoning paragraph (exemplar given).
Annotate the chapter for setting, characterization (three marks with a margin note each), then write one claim-evidence-reasoning paragraph: what does this chapter suggest about visit to Hunsford? Then start your writing prompt at your assigned level (HS Sophomore: Analyze how Chapter XXVIII develops the idea of visit to Hunsford. Make a precise claim, support it with at least three pieces of textual evidence, and explain how the author's use of setting and characterization shapes that idea. Address one possible counterclaim.) Exemplar: Charlotte's marriage is bearable because she has arranged a life apart from her husband. When the text says "When Mr. Collins could be forgotten, there was really a great air of comfort throughout" (Chapter XXVIII, paragraph 5), it shows this directly. "When Mr. Collins could be forgotten, there was really a great air of comfort," the narrator says, a precise description of a compromise.
Task: Annotate the chapter for setting, characterization (three marks with a margin note each), then write one claim-evidence-reasoning paragraph: what does this chapter suggest about visit to Hunsford? Then start your writing prompt at your assigned level (HS Sophomore: Analyze how Chapter XXVIII develops the idea of visit to Hunsford. Make a precise claim, support it with at least three pieces of textual evidence, and explain how the author's use of setting and characterization shapes that idea. Address one possible counterclaim.)
Exemplar: Charlotte's marriage is bearable because she has arranged a life apart from her husband. When the text says "When Mr. Collins could be forgotten, there was really a great air of comfort throughout" (Chapter XXVIII, paragraph 5), it shows this directly. "When Mr. Collins could be forgotten, there was really a great air of comfort," the narrator says, a precise description of a compromise.

70–80 min · Discussion · We do (10 min)
Structured discussion from the 30 tiered questions, with facilitation notes.
Anchor question: How has Charlotte made her marriage work? Ask: is Charlotte happy? What would counts as evidence either way?
Anchor question: How has Charlotte made her marriage work?
Facilitation: Ask: is Charlotte happy? What would counts as evidence either way?

80–87 min · Exit ticket / chapter quiz · You do (7 min)
Chapter quiz in the app and an exit ticket (answer given).
Chapter quiz in the app, then: In one sentence, what does this chapter suggest about visit to Hunsford? Support it with one short quotation. Model answer: Charlotte's marriage is bearable because she has arranged a life apart from her husband. ("When Mr. Collins could be forgotten, there was really a great air of comfort throughout", Chapter XXVIII, paragraph 5). Accept any defensible claim backed by a quotation from the chapter; the answer key for the quiz is in the Quiz section.
Exit ticket: In one sentence, what does this chapter suggest about visit to Hunsford? Support it with one short quotation.
Answer: Model answer: Charlotte's marriage is bearable because she has arranged a life apart from her husband. ("When Mr. Collins could be forgotten, there was really a great air of comfort throughout", Chapter XXVIII, paragraph 5). Accept any defensible claim backed by a quotation from the chapter; the answer key for the quiz is in the Quiz section.

87–90 min · Closure · I do (3 min)
Summarize the lesson and preview the next reading.
Today we saw how setting shapes visit to Hunsford. Key takeaway: Charlotte's marriage works because she arranges her life to see little of him.

Total: 90 minutes.

Teacher analysis (spoilers)

Literary elements

- Setting: Hunsford parsonage and Rosings: the material world Charlotte chose.
- Characterization: Collins shows off; Charlotte manages him by encouraging gardening.

Themes and how they develop

- marriage and money: Charlotte's marriage works because she arranges her life to see little of him.

Symbols and motifs

- rank and condescension: Rank is displayed and enforced, above all at Rosings by Lady Catherine; Elizabeth refuses to be cowed. In this chapter: "turning expected to bring it in view. The paling of Rosings Park was their boundary on one side. Elizabeth smiled at the" (Chapter XXVIII, paragraph 2).

- marriage and money: Incomes, entails and fortunes are stated precisely; marriage is always also an economic question. In this chapter: “instantly that her cousin’s manners were not altered by his marriage; his formal civility was just what it had been, and he” (Chapter XXVIII, paragraph 3).

Key quotations (checked against the reading text)

- “When Mr. Collins could be forgotten, there was really a great air of comfort throughout” (Chapter XXVIII, paragraph 5) The key to Charlotte's marriage.
- “I expected at least that the pigs were got into the garden, and here is nothing but Lady Catherine and her daughter” (Chapter XXVIII, paragraph 14) Elizabeth deflates the household's awe of rank with a joke.
- “Every object in the next day’s journey was new and interesting to Elizabeth” (Chapter XXVIII, paragraph 1) Opening; Elizabeth's openness.

Model claim-evidence-reasoning

Claim: Charlotte's marriage is bearable because she has arranged a life apart from her husband.
Evidence: “When Mr. Collins could be forgotten, there was really a great air of comfort throughout” (Chapter XXVIII, paragraph 5)
Reasoning: "When Mr. Collins could be forgotten, there was really a great air of comfort," the narrator says, a precise description of a compromise.

Vocabulary with etymology notes

Word	Definition (in this sentence)	In context	Word history
neatness (noun)	tidiness and order	It was rather small, but well built and convenient; and everything was fitted up and arranged with a neatness and consistency of which Elizabeth gave Charlotte all the credit.
sideboard (noun)	a long dining-room cabinet with a flat top	After sitting long enough to admire every article of furniture in the room, from the sideboard to the fender, to give an account of their journey and of all that had happened in London, Mr.	“sideboard”: Origin: an English formation from side + board. (Liber et Libri origin note, https://en.wiktionary.org/wiki/sideboard#Etymology)
sloping (adjective)	slanting	The garden sloping to the road, the house standing in it, the green pales and the laurel hedge, everything declared they were arriving.
consistency (noun)	harmony of all the parts; good order	It was rather small, but well built and convenient; and everything was fitted up and arranged with a neatness and consistency of which Elizabeth gave Charlotte all the credit.
diversion (noun)	an activity that diverts or	Collins and Charlotte were both standing at the gate in conversation with the ladies; and Sir William, to Elizabeth’s high diversion,	“diversion”: Origin: Medieval Latin diversiō; earlier Latin divertō (“to divert”). (Liber et Libri origin note, amuses or stimulates	was stationed in the doorway, in earnest contemplation of the greatness before him, and constantly bowing whenever Miss de Bourgh looked that way.	https://en.wiktionary.org/wiki/diversion#Etymology)

congratulate (verb)	to express pleasure at someone's good fortune	Collins no sooner saw the two girls than he began to congratulate them on their good fortune, which Charlotte explained by letting them know that the whole party was asked to dine at Rosings the next day.

Discussion questions

1. How has Charlotte made her marriage work?
2. Where does setting appear in this chapter, and what effect does it have? Point to one passage.
3. How does this chapter connect to the book's larger concern with marriage and money?

Classroom discussion questions (30, tiered)

Wait time after every question (3 s for DOK 1, 5 s for DOK 2, 8 to 10 s for DOK 3 and 4); think-pair-share on DOK 3 and 4; answer each response with a follow-up probe; close with student-generated questions. Focus sets by rigor level: Scaffolded support: 1, 2, 3, 4, 5, 6, 11, 12, 13, 14, 21, 22; HS Freshman: 1, 2, 3, 4, 5, 12, 13, 14, 15, 22, 23, 24; HS Sophomore: 1, 2, 3, 4, 13, 14, 15, 16, 17, 23, 24, 25; HS Junior: 1, 2, 3, 14, 15, 16, 17, 18, 24, 25, 26, 27; HS Senior: 1, 2, 3, 15, 16, 17, 18, 25, 26, 27, 28, 29; AP: 1, 2, 16, 17, 18, 19, 20, 26, 27, 28, 29, 30; College Freshman: 1, 2, 17, 18, 19, 20, 21, 22, 27, 28, 29, 30; College Sophomore: 1, 2, 11, 18, 19, 20, 21, 22, 23, 28, 29, 30; College Junior: 1, 11, 12, 19, 20, 21, 22, 23, 24, 25, 29, 30; College Senior: 1, 11, 12, 13, 20, 21, 22, 23, 24, 25, 26, 30; Graduate / PhD: 1, 11, 12, 13, 21, 22, 23, 24, 25, 26, 27, 28

Literal / recall

1. Where does Elizabeth visit Charlotte? [DOK 1 · coldCallWithSupport · wait 3 s · AP: unit standards] Look for: Hunsford parsonage
2. What room does Charlotte keep for herself? [DOK 1 · turnAndTalk · wait 3 s · AP: unit standards] Look for: A back sitting room Collins rarely enters
3. What does Collins show off? [DOK 1 · coldCallWithSupport · wait 3 s · AP: unit standards] Look for: His house and garden
4. How does Charlotte handle Collins? [DOK 1 · turnAndTalk · wait 3 s · AP: unit standards] Look for: She manages him skillfully
5. Who is Anne de Bourgh? [DOK 1 · coldCallWithSupport · wait 3 s · AP: unit standards] Look for: Lady Catherine's sickly daughter
6. Retell the three most important events of “Chapter XXVIII” in order, in one sentence each. [DOK 1 · turnAndTalk · wait 3 s · AP: unit standards] Look for: Arriving at Hunsford, Elizabeth is shown every room and the garden by Collins, who praises Lady Catherine constantly. Charlotte manages him skillfully and keeps her own sitting room. They glimpse Lady Catherine's sickly daughter, Anne.
7. Which characters appear or are mentioned in “Chapter XXVIII”? Name two and one thing each says or does. [DOK 1 · coldCallWithSupport · wait 3 s · AP: unit standards] Look for: Names and actions taken from the chapter; check against the teacher summary.

8. Where and when does “Chapter XXVIII” take place? Point to the line that tells you. [DOK 1 · turnAndTalk · wait 3 s · AP: unit standards] Look for: A place/time detail quoted from the chapter.
9. Reread: “It was rather small, but well built and convenient; and everything was fitted up and arranged with a neatness and consistency of which Elizabeth gave Charlotte all the credit.” What does “neatness” mean here, and what is literally happening in this line? [DOK 1 · turnAndTalk · wait 3 s · AP: unit standards] Look for: neatness: tidiness and order.
10. Reread: “After sitting long enough to admire every article of furniture in the room, from the sideboard to the fender, to give an account of their journey and of all that had happened in London, Mr.” What does “sideboard” mean here, and what is literally happening in this line? [DOK 1 · turnAndTalk · wait 3 s · AP: unit standards] Look for: sideboard: a long dining-room cabinet with a flat top.

Inferential / analytical

1. What does “Chapter XXVIII” suggest about visit to Hunsford? State the inference and the line that supports it. [DOK 2 · thinkPairShare · wait 5 s · AP-LIT.LAN] Look for: Charlotte has built a contented life by managing her husband's absurdity.
2. Find one example of setting in this chapter. What does it reveal that a plain statement would not? [DOK 2 · followUp · wait 5 s · AP-LIT.SET] Look for: Look for where and when events happen and how place shapes action or feeling.
3. How does the characterization in this chapter shape what we understand about visit to Hunsford? [DOK 3 · thinkPairShare · wait 8 s · AP-LIT.CHR] Look for: Look for what characters say, do and think, and how others react to them.

   Answer guidance: A defensible line of argument: Charlotte's marriage is bearable because she has arranged a life apart from her husband. Useful evidence: “When Mr. Collins could be forgotten, there was really a great air of comfort throughout” (Chapter XXVIII, paragraph 5): The key to Charlotte's marriage. On characterization: Collins shows off; Charlotte manages him by encouraging gardening. Credit any position that is supported by quotation and reasoning; push one-sided answers to address the strongest counterpoint.
4. In the passage that begins “From his garden, Mr.”, why might Austen have chosen these particular words? Pick two and explain their connotations. [DOK 2 · followUp · wait 5 s · AP-LIT.FIG] Look for: Diction analysis of two words in the anchor passage.
5. What causes the main turn in “Chapter XXVIII”, and what effect is it likely to have on what follows? [DOK 2 · followUp · wait 5 s · AP-LIT.STR] Look for: Arriving at Hunsford, Elizabeth is shown every room and the garden by Collins, who praises Lady Catherine constantly. Charlotte manages him skillfully and keeps her own sitting room. They glimpse Lady Catherine's sickly daughter, Anne.
6. How does “Chapter XXVIII” build on “Chapter XXVII”? Name one link of cause and effect. [DOK 3 · thinkPairShare · wait 8 s · AP-LIT.STR] Look for: A causal or structural link between this and the previous chapter.

   Answer guidance: A defensible line of argument: Charlotte's marriage is bearable because she has arranged a life apart from her husband. Useful evidence: “I expected at least that the pigs were got into the garden, and here is nothing but Lady Catherine and her daughter” (Chapter XXVIII, paragraph 14): Elizabeth deflates the household's awe of rank with a joke. Theme link: Charlotte's marriage works because she arranges her life to see little of him. Credit any position that is supported by quotation and reasoning; push one-sided answers to address the strongest counterpoint.

7. What can we infer about a character's motives from what they say and do here, as opposed to what they claim? [DOK 3 · followUp · wait 8 s · AP-LIT.CHR] Look for: An inference about motive supported by a quoted line.
   Answer guidance: A defensible line of argument: Charlotte's marriage is bearable because she has arranged a life apart from her husband. Useful evidence: “Every object in the next day’s journey was new and interesting to Elizabeth” (Chapter XXVIII, paragraph 1): Opening; Elizabeth's openness. On characterization: Collins shows off; Charlotte manages him by encouraging gardening. Credit any position that is supported by quotation and reasoning; push one-sided answers to address the strongest counterpoint.
8. The bell-ringer asked: “How has Charlotte made her marriage work?” Now that we have read closely, how would you revise your first answer, and which line changed your mind? [DOK 2 · thinkPairShare · wait 5 s · AP-LIT.LAN] Look for: A revised answer anchored in the text.
9. Where does irony appear, and how does it connect this chapter to the larger concern with marriage and money? [DOK 3 · followUp · wait 8 s · AP-LIT.NAR] Look for: Look for gaps between what characters expect or say and what is true.
   Answer guidance: A defensible line of argument: Charlotte's marriage is bearable because she has arranged a life apart from her husband. Useful evidence: “When Mr. Collins could be forgotten, there was really a great air of comfort throughout” (Chapter XXVIII, paragraph 5): The key to Charlotte's marriage. Theme link: Charlotte's marriage works because she arranges her life to see little of him. Credit any position that is supported by quotation and reasoning; push one-sided answers to address the strongest counterpoint.
10. Background: Rosings Park in Kent represents aristocratic wealth and patronage. How does knowing this change the way you read one moment in the chapter? [DOK 3 · thinkPairShare · wait 8 s · AP-LIT.SET] Look for: A specific moment reread in light of the context.
    Answer guidance: A defensible line of argument: Charlotte's marriage is bearable because she has arranged a life apart from her husband. Useful evidence: “I expected at least that the pigs were got into the garden, and here is nothing but Lady Catherine and her daughter” (Chapter XXVIII, paragraph 14): Elizabeth deflates the household's awe of rank with a joke. On setting: Hunsford parsonage and Rosings: the material world Charlotte chose. Credit any position that is supported by quotation and reasoning; push one-sided answers to address the strongest counterpoint.

Evaluative / synthesis / creative

1. A critic might argue: “Charlotte has built a contented life by managing her husband's absurdity.” How far do you agree? Take a stand and defend it with two lines from the chapter. [DOK 3 · fourCorners · wait 8 s · AP-LIT.LAN] Look for: A defended position with evidence and one counterpoint.
   Answer guidance: A defensible line of argument: Charlotte's marriage is bearable because she has arranged a life apart from her husband. Useful evidence: “Every object in the next day’s journey was new and interesting to Elizabeth” (Chapter XXVIII, paragraph 1): Opening; Elizabeth's openness. Theme link: Charlotte's marriage works because she arranges her life to see little of him. Credit any position that is supported by quotation and reasoning; push one-sided answers to address the strongest counterpoint.
2. Which character in this chapter acts most wisely, and which least? Judge them by a standard you name. [DOK 3 · thinkPairShare · wait 8 s · AP-LIT.CHR, AP-LIT.LAN] Look for: An evaluation using an explicit criterion and evidence.
   Answer guidance: A defensible line of argument: Charlotte's marriage is bearable because she has arranged a life apart from her husband. Useful evidence: “When Mr. Collins could be forgotten, there was really a great air of comfort throughout” (Chapter XXVIII, paragraph 5): The key to Charlotte's marriage. On characterization: Collins shows off; Charlotte manages him by encouraging gardening. Credit any position that is supported by quotation and reasoning; push one-sided answers to address the strongest counterpoint.

3. Rewrite one moment of “Chapter XXVIII” from the point of view of a different character. What does the new angle reveal or hide about visit to Hunsford? [DOK 4 · thinkPairShare · wait 8 s · AP-LIT.LAN, AP-LIT.NAR] Look for: A creative product with a rationale tied to the text.

   Answer guidance: A defensible line of argument: Charlotte's marriage is bearable because she has arranged a life apart from her husband. Useful evidence: “I expected at least that the pigs were got into the garden, and here is nothing but Lady Catherine and her daughter” (Chapter XXVIII, paragraph 14): Elizabeth deflates the household's awe of rank with a joke. Theme link: Charlotte's marriage works because she arranges her life to see little of him. Credit any position that is supported by quotation and reasoning; push one-sided answers to address the strongest counterpoint.

4. Write three questions of your own about “Chapter XXVIII”: one recall, one “why/how”, and one “should/what if”. Trade with a partner and answer theirs. [DOK 3 · studentGenerated · wait 8 s · AP-LIT.LAN] Look for: Student-generated questions at three levels.

   Answer guidance: A defensible line of argument: Charlotte's marriage is bearable because she has arranged a life apart from her husband. Useful evidence: “Every object in the next day’s journey was new and interesting to Elizabeth” (Chapter XXVIII, paragraph 1): Opening; Elizabeth's openness. Theme link: Charlotte's marriage works because she arranges her life to see little of him. Credit any position that is supported by quotation and reasoning; push one-sided answers to address the strongest counterpoint.

5. Connect this chapter to class and social mobility: is the link strong or weak so far? What would Austen need to show next to strengthen it? [DOK 4 · socraticCircle · wait 8 s · AP-LIT.LAN] Look for: A judgment of thematic development across the work.

   Answer guidance: A defensible line of argument: Charlotte's marriage is bearable because she has arranged a life apart from her husband. Useful evidence: “When Mr. Collins could be forgotten, there was really a great air of comfort throughout” (Chapter XXVIII, paragraph 5): The key to Charlotte's marriage. Theme link: Charlotte's marriage works because she arranges her life to see little of him. Credit any position that is supported by quotation and reasoning; push one-sided answers to address the strongest counterpoint.

6. Is the setting in this chapter effective, or does it feel heavy-handed? Evaluate it as a reader would in a review. [DOK 3 · fourCorners · wait 8 s · AP-LIT.LAN, AP-LIT.SET] Look for: An evaluative judgment with criteria and evidence.

   Answer guidance: A defensible line of argument: Charlotte's marriage is bearable because she has arranged a life apart from her husband. Useful evidence: “I expected at least that the pigs were got into the garden, and here is nothing but Lady Catherine and her daughter” (Chapter XXVIII, paragraph 14): Elizabeth deflates the household's awe of rank with a joke. On setting: Hunsford parsonage and Rosings: the material world Charlotte chose. Credit any position that is supported by quotation and reasoning; push one-sided answers to address the strongest counterpoint.

7. Compare how “Chapter XXVIII” treats visit to Hunsford with how another text, film or event you know treats a similar idea. What does Pride and Prejudice see that the other misses? [DOK 4 · socraticCircle · wait 8 s · AP-LIT.LAN] Look for: A cross-text synthesis.

Answer guidance: A defensible line of argument: Charlotte's marriage is bearable because she has arranged a life apart from her husband. Useful evidence: “Every object in the next day’s journey was new and interesting to Elizabeth” (Chapter XXVIII, paragraph 1): Opening; Elizabeth's openness. Theme link: Charlotte's marriage works because she arranges her life to see little of him. Credit any position that is supported by quotation and reasoning; push one-sided answers to address the strongest counterpoint.

8. Predict what “Chapter XXIX” will bring, using two clues from this chapter. After reading, evaluate your prediction. [DOK 3 · thinkPairShare · wait 8 s · AP-LIT.LAN, AP-LIT.STR] Look for: A prediction or judgment justified with textual clues.

   Answer guidance: A defensible line of argument: Charlotte's marriage is bearable because she has arranged a life apart from her husband. Useful evidence: “When Mr. Collins could be forgotten, there was really a great air of comfort throughout” (Chapter XXVIII, paragraph 5): The key to Charlotte's marriage. Theme link: Charlotte's marriage works because she arranges her life to see little of him. Credit any position that is supported by quotation and reasoning; push one-sided answers to address the strongest counterpoint.

9. Design a one-paragraph modern adaptation of this chapter (setting, characters, conflict). What must stay the same for it to still be about visit to Hunsford? [DOK 4 · thinkPairShare · wait 8 s · AP-LIT.LAN] Look for: A creative transfer that keeps the core idea.

   Answer guidance: A defensible line of argument: Charlotte's marriage is bearable because she has arranged a life apart from her husband. Useful evidence: “I expected at least that the pigs were got into the garden, and here is nothing but Lady Catherine and her daughter” (Chapter XXVIII, paragraph 14): Elizabeth deflates the household's awe of rank with a joke. Theme link: Charlotte's marriage works because she arranges her life to see little of him. Credit any position that is supported by quotation and reasoning; push one-sided answers to address the strongest counterpoint.

10. What question would you most like to ask Jane Austen about this chapter, and what answer do you think the text itself gives? [DOK 4 · studentGenerated · wait 8 s · AP-LIT.LAN] Look for: A student-generated question answered from evidence.

    Answer guidance: A defensible line of argument: Charlotte's marriage is bearable because she has arranged a life apart from her husband. Useful evidence: “Every object in the next day’s journey was new and interesting to Elizabeth” (Chapter XXVIII, paragraph 1): Opening; Elizabeth's openness. Theme link: Charlotte's marriage works because she arranges her life to see little of him. Credit any position that is supported by quotation and reasoning; push one-sided answers to address the strongest counterpoint.

Annotation focus

- Setting: look for where and when events happen and how place shapes action or feeling (anchor passage in the We do segment)
- Also notice Characterization: what characters say, do and think, and how others react to them
- Also notice Irony: gaps between what characters expect or say and what is true

Chapter quiz: item bank (all eleven rigor versions)

1. [mc · recall · DOK 1] Which word completes this sentence from Chapter XXVIII, paragraph 3? “She saw _____ that her cousin’s manners were not altered by his marriage; his formal civility was just what it had been, and he detained her some minutes at the gate to hear and satisfy his enquiries after all her family.”

   A. condescension

B. instantly

C. minuteness

D. recollection

Key: B (instantly)

2. [mc · recall · DOK 1] What does Collins show off?

A. His house and garden

B. His library

C. His horses

D. His sermons

Key: A (His house and garden)

3. [mc · recall · DOK 1] What room does Charlotte keep for herself?

A. The garden

B. A back sitting room Collins rarely enters

C. The kitchen

D. The library

Key: B (A back sitting room Collins rarely enters)

4. [fill · recall · DOK 1] Complete the quotation from Chapter XXVIII, paragraph 4: “Here, leading the way through every walk and cross walk, and scarcely allowing them an interval to utter the praises he asked for, every view was pointed out with a _____ which left beauty entirely behind.” Word bank: minuteness, respectable, expected, deference

Key: minuteness

5. [mc · recall · DOK 1] How does Charlotte handle Collins?

A. She ignores him

B. She leaves him

C. She fights with him

D. She manages him skillfully

Key: D (She manages him skillfully)

6. [mc · recall · DOK 1] In the line “It was rather small, but well built and convenient; and everything was fitted up and arranged with a neatness and consistency of which Elizabeth gave Charlotte all the credit.”, what does “consistency” most nearly mean?

A. clever, funny remarks

B. moving suddenly and quickly

C. willingness to please others

D. harmony of all the parts; good order

Key: D (harmony of all the parts; good order)

7. [mc · recall · DOK 1] Where does Elizabeth visit Charlotte?

A. Netherfield

B. Bath

C. Hunsford parsonage

D. Pemberley

Key: C (Hunsford parsonage)

8. [mc · recall · DOK 1] Which word completes this sentence from Chapter XXVIII, paragraph 6? “It was spoken of again while they were at dinner, when Mr. Collins joining in, _____—”

   A. observed

   B. minuteness

   C. encounter

   D. deference

   Key: A (observed)

9. [fill · recall · DOK 1] Fill in the blank with the vocabulary word that fits: “Collins and Charlotte were both standing at the gate in conversation with the ladies; and Sir William, to Elizabeth’s high _____, was stationed in the doorway, in earnest contemplation of the greatness before him, and constantly bowing whenever Miss de Bourgh…” Word bank: sideboard, neatness, sloping, diversion

   Key: diversion

10. [mc · inference · DOK 2] Which choice best states a central concern of “Chapter XXVIII”?

    A. Visit to Hunsford

    B. Doubts and preparations

    C. Departure and relief

    D. Pompous flattery

    Key: A (Visit to Hunsford)

11. [short · inference · DOK 2] What does this passage from Chapter XXVIII, paragraph 11 reveal about the character or situation? “About the middle of the next day, as she was in her room getting ready for a walk, a sudden noise below seemed to speak the whole house in confusion” Answer in two or three sentences with one detail.

    Sample answer: The passage (Chapter XXVIII, paragraph 11) shows the situation turning on first impressions and prejudice: Charlotte's marriage works because she arranges her life to see little of him. The words “confusion” and “getting” are the proof, because they show how the moment looks to the people in it. They suggest more than the narrator states outright.

12. [short · inference · DOK 2] What does this passage from Chapter XXVIII, paragraph 2 reveal about the character or situation? “The paling of Rosings Park was their boundary on one side.” Answer in two or three sentences with one detail.

    Sample answer: The passage (Chapter XXVIII, paragraph 2) shows the situation turning on first impressions and prejudice: Charlotte's marriage works because she arranges her life to see little of him. The words “boundary” and “paling” are the proof, because they show how the moment looks to the people in it. They suggest more than the narrator states outright.

13. [short · inference · DOK 2] What can you infer from this line? “I expected at least that the pigs were got into the garden, and here is nothing but Lady Catherine and her daughter” (Chapter XXVIII, paragraph 14) Answer in two or three sentences with one detail.

    Sample answer: Elizabeth deflates the household's awe of rank with a joke. The evidence is “I expected at least that the pigs were got into the garden, and here is nothing but Lady Catherine and her daughter” (Chapter XXVIII, paragraph 14).

14. [short · analysis · DOK 3] Analyze how the word choice in this passage from Chapter XXVIII, paragraph 3 shapes its tone: “They were then, with no other delay than his pointing out the neatness of the entrance, taken into the house” Pick two words and explain their effect.

    Sample answer: The words “neatness” and “entrance” (Chapter XXVIII, paragraph 3) make the tone heavy and deliberate rather than neutral. That weight points the reader to class and social mobility: Charlotte's marriage works because she arranges her life to see little of him. The author chooses them so the moment feels significant instead of passing.

15. [short · analysis · DOK 3] Analyze the word choice in "Every object in the next day's journey was new and interesting to Elizabeth" (Chapter XXVIII, paragraph 1). Pick two words and explain what they suggest.
    Sample answer: Opening; Elizabeth's openness. The evidence is "Every object in the next day's journey was new and interesting to Elizabeth" (Chapter XXVIII, paragraph 1). This develops marriage and money: Charlotte's marriage works because she arranges her life to see little of him. The words "interesting" and "journey" carry that meaning: they are the charged choices in the line, and changing either would soften the effect.
16. [short · synthesis · DOK 4] Close reading: how do the diction and syntax of "When Mr. Collins could be forgotten, there was really a great air of comfort throughout" (Chapter XXVIII, paragraph 5) shape its meaning? Consider a second, competing reading.
    Sample answer: The key to Charlotte's marriage. The evidence is "When Mr. Collins could be forgotten, there was really a great air of comfort throughout" (Chapter XXVIII, paragraph 5). This develops marriage and money: Charlotte's marriage works because she arranges her life to see little of him. The words "throughout" and "forgotten" carry that meaning: they are the charged choices in the line, and changing either would soften the effect. "When Mr. Collins could be forgotten, there was really a great air of comfort," the narrator says, a precise description of a compromise.
17. [fill · recall · DOK 1] Fill in the blank with the vocabulary word that fits: "Collins no sooner saw the two girls than he began to _____ them on their good fortune, which Charlotte explained by letting them know that the whole party was asked to dine at Rosings the next day." Word bank: neatness, sloping, sideboard, congratulate Key: congratulate
18. [mc · recall · DOK 1] Who is Anne de Bourgh?

    A. Darcy's sister

    B. A servant

    C. Lady Catherine's sickly daughter

    D. Charlotte's sister

    Key: C (Lady Catherine's sickly daughter)
19. [fill · recall · DOK 1] Complete the quotation from Chapter XXVIII, paragraph 2: "When they left the high road for the lane to Hunsford, every eye was in search of the Parsonage, and every turning _____ to bring it in view." Word bank: behaviour, deference, expected, compared Key: expected
20. [fill · recall · DOK 1] Complete the quotation from Chapter XXVIII, paragraph 7: "Her ladyship's carriage is _____ ordered for us." Word bank: deference, behaviour, recollection, regularly
    Key: regularly
21. [fill · recall · DOK 1] Complete the quotation from Chapter XXVIII, paragraph 5: "When Mr. Collins could be forgotten, there was really a great air of comfort _____"
    Key: throughout
22. [short · analysis · DOK 3] Analyze how the word choice in this passage from Chapter XXVIII, paragraph 4 shapes its tone: "To work in his garden was one of his most respectable pleasures; and Elizabeth admired the command of countenance with which Charlotte talked of the healthfulness of the exercise, and owned she encouraged it as much as possible." Pick two words and explain their effect.
    Sample answer: The words "healthfulness" and "countenance" (Chapter XXVIII, paragraph 4) make the tone heavy and deliberate rather than neutral. That weight points the reader to pride and self-knowledge: Charlotte's marriage works because she arranges her life to see little of him. The author chooses them so the moment feels significant instead of passing.

23. [short · analysis · DOK 3] Analyze how the word choice in this passage from Chapter XXVIII, paragraph 15 shapes its tone: “The old lady is Mrs. Jenkinson, who lives with them.” Pick two words and explain their effect.
    Sample answer: The words its wording (Chapter XXVIII, paragraph 15) make the tone heavy and deliberate rather than neutral. That weight points the reader to class and social mobility: Charlotte's marriage works because she arranges her life to see little of him. The author chooses them so the moment feels significant instead of passing.

24. [short · synthesis · DOK 4] Synthesis: trace how marriage and money develops from Chapter XXVII to Chapter XXVIII. Use one quotation from each.
    Sample answer: Earlier, in Chapter XXVII, paragraph 9, the text reads “what is the difference in matrimonial affairs, between the mercenary and the prudent motive” — Elizabeth's own question. In Chapter XXVIII, “When Mr. Collins could be forgotten, there was really a great air of comfort throughout” (Chapter XXVIII, paragraph 5), which shows the key to Charlotte's marriage. Charlotte's marriage works because she arranges her life to see little of him.

25. [fill · recall · DOK 1] Complete the quotation from Chapter XXVIII, paragraph 1: “Every object in the next day’s journey was new and _____ to Elizabeth”
    Key: interesting

26. [short · analysis · DOK 3] Analyze how the word choice in this passage from Chapter XXVIII, paragraph 20 shapes its tone: “At length there was nothing more to be said; the ladies drove on, and the others returned into the house.” Pick two words and explain their effect.
    Sample answer: The words “returned” and “nothing” (Chapter XXVIII, paragraph 20) make the tone heavy and deliberate rather than neutral. That weight points the reader to pride and self-knowledge: Charlotte's marriage works because she arranges her life to see little of him. The author chooses them so the moment feels significant instead of passing.

27. [mc · analysis · DOK 3] In this chapter, which theme does the following most directly develop? Charlotte's marriage works because she arranges her life to see little of him.
    A. First impressions and prejudice
    B. Pride and self-knowledge
    C. Class and social mobility
    D. Marriage and money

    Key: D (Marriage and money)

28. [short · synthesis · DOK 4] Connect this passage from Chapter XXVIII, paragraph 7 to the story's treatment of women's limited choices: “I have scarcely any hesitation in saying that she will include you and my sister Maria in every invitation with which she honours us during your stay here.” Use one other moment from the story as well.
    Sample answer: This passage (Chapter XXVIII, paragraph 7) develops women's limited choices: Charlotte's marriage works because she arranges her life to see little of him. Its words “hesitation” and “invitation” carry that idea into this moment. The same concern returns in “I should say, one of her ladyship’s carriages, for she has several.” (Chapter XXVIII, paragraph 7), so the two passages read as a pattern, not a single moment. Together they show the story treating women's limited choices as central.

29. [short · synthesis · DOK 4] Connect this passage from Chapter XXVIII, paragraph 7 to the story's treatment of marriage and money: “Yes, Miss Elizabeth, you will have the honour of seeing Lady Catherine de Bourgh on the ensuing Sunday at church, and I need not say you will be delighted with her.” Use one other moment from the story as well.

Sample answer: This passage (Chapter XXVIII, paragraph 7) develops marriage and money: Charlotte's marriage works because she arranges her life to see little of him. Its words “delighted” and “ensuing” carry that idea into this moment. The same concern returns in “Very true, my dear, that is exactly what I say.” (Chapter XXVIII, paragraph 9), so the two passages read as a pattern, not a single moment. Together they show the story treating marriage and money as central.

30. [mc · recall · DOK 1 · AP: AP-LIT.FIG] In the line “The garden sloping to the road, the house standing in it, the green pales and the laurel hedge, everything declared they were arriving.”, what does “sloping” most nearly mean?

    A. slanting

    B. running about hurriedly

    C. treated lightly; toyed with

    D. liveliness and eagerness

    Key: A (slanting)

31. [short · inference · DOK 2 · AP: AP-LIT.CHR] What can you infer from this line? “When Mr. Collins could be forgotten, there was really a great air of comfort throughout” (Chapter XXVIII, paragraph 5) Answer in two or three sentences with one detail.

    Sample answer: The key to Charlotte's marriage. The evidence is “When Mr. Collins could be forgotten, there was really a great air of comfort throughout” (Chapter XXVIII, paragraph 5). This develops marriage and money: Charlotte's marriage works because she arranges her life to see little of him.

32. [mc · analysis · DOK 3 · AP: AP-LIT.SET] Which literary element does this describe in “Chapter XXVIII”? Hunsford parsonage and Rosings: the material world Charlotte chose.

    A. Theme

    B. Setting

    C. Plot

    D. Foreshadowing

    Key: B (Setting)

33. [mc · analysis · DOK 3 · AP: AP-LIT.CHR] Which literary element does this describe in “Chapter XXVIII”? Collins shows off; Charlotte manages him by encouraging gardening.

    A. Characterization

    B. Irony

    C. Imagery

    D. Symbolism

    Key: A (Characterization)

34. [short · analysis · DOK 3 · AP: AP-LIT.LAN] Claim: Charlotte's marriage is bearable because she has arranged a life apart from her husband. Explain how this evidence supports the claim: “When Mr. Collins could be forgotten, there was really a great air of comfort throughout” (Chapter XXVIII, paragraph 5).

    Sample answer: "When Mr. Collins could be forgotten, there was really a great air of comfort," the narrator says, a precise description of a compromise. The evidence is “When Mr. Collins could be forgotten, there was really a great air of comfort throughout” (Chapter XXVIII, paragraph 5), which shows the key to Charlotte's marriage. This develops marriage and money: Charlotte's marriage works because she arranges her life to see little of him.

35. [short · synthesis · DOK 4 · Dual Credit (Indiana College Core): ICC-WC-1.5] Close reading: how do the diction and syntax of "I expected at least that the pigs were got into the garden, and here is nothing but Lady Catherine and her daughter" (Chapter XXVIII, paragraph 14) shape its meaning? Consider a second, competing reading.

    Sample answer: Elizabeth deflates the household's awe of rank with a joke. The evidence is "I expected at least that the pigs were got into the garden, and here is nothing but Lady Catherine and her daughter" (Chapter XXVIII, paragraph 14). This develops marriage and money: Charlotte's marriage works because she arranges her life to see little of him. The words "expected" and "daughter" carry that meaning: they are the charged choices in the line, and changing either would soften the effect. "When Mr. Collins could be forgotten, there was really a great air of comfort," the narrator says, a precise description of a compromise.

36. [mc · recall · DOK 1 · Program outcome: LeL-C2-LIT-1] In the line "It was rather small, but well built and convenient; and everything was fitted up and arranged with a neatness and consistency of which Elizabeth gave Charlotte all the credit.", what does "neatness" most nearly mean?

    A. tidiness and order

    B. slanting

    C. harmony of all the parts; good order

    D. a long dining-room cabinet with a flat top

    Key: A (tidiness and order)

37. [mc · recall · DOK 1 · Program outcome: LeL-C3-LIT-1] In the line "After sitting long enough to admire every article of furniture in the room, from the sideboard to the fender, to give an account of their journey and of all that had happened in London, Mr.", what does "sideboard" most nearly mean?

    A. tidiness and order

    B. slanting

    C. harmony of all the parts; good order

    D. a long dining-room cabinet with a flat top

    Key: D (a long dining-room cabinet with a flat top)

38. [mc · inference · DOK 2 · Program outcome: LeL-C3-LIT-1] What does this passage most clearly show? "I expected at least that the pigs were got into the garden, and here is nothing but Lady Catherine and her daughter" (Chapter XXVIII, paragraph 14)

    A. Ironic praise of the Bingley sisters.

    B. Elizabeth deflates the household's awe of rank with a joke.

    C. The narrator's list of five adjectives.

    D. Lydia's first close portrait: young, bold, indulged; it prepares her role later.

    Key: B (Elizabeth deflates the household's awe of rank with a joke.)

Rigor version	Items (in order)	Mix
Scaffolded support	1, 2, 3, 4, 5, 6, 7, 8, 9, 10, 11, 12, 13, 14, 15, 16	recall 9, inference 4, analysis 2, synthesis 1
HS Freshman	8, 17, 18, 5, 9, 19, 20, 2, 21, 11, 10, 12, 22, 14, 23, 24	recall 9, inference 3, analysis 3, synthesis 1
HS Sophomore	25, 7, 2, 20, 5, 9, 17, 11, 13, 12, 10, 26, 22, 27, 28, 29	recall 7, inference 4, analysis 3, synthesis 2

HS Junior	2, 4, 7, 30, 9, 1, 6, 31, 12, 11, 14, 23, 22, 27, 29, 28	recall 7, inference 3, analysis 4, synthesis 2
HS Senior	7, 6, 9, 25, 20, 3, 11, 13, 12, 26, 22, 32, 14, 28, 29, 24	recall 6, inference 3, analysis 4, synthesis 3
AP	4, 17, 6, 7, 11, 13, 33, 34, 27, 23, 22, 14, 15, 29, 28, 24	recall 4, inference 2, analysis 7, synthesis 3
College Freshman	1, 3, 30, 9, 17, 11, 26, 15, 14, 32, 23, 22, 35, 29, 28, 24	recall 5, inference 1, analysis 6, synthesis 4
College Sophomore	18, 36, 9, 17, 27, 26, 34, 15, 23, 22, 32, 14, 35, 28, 29, 24	recall 4, inference 0, analysis 8, synthesis 4
College Junior	9, 37, 17, 38, 31, 11, 15, 26, 33, 23, 27, 14, 22, 28, 29, 24	recall 3, inference 3, analysis 7, synthesis 3
College Senior	17, 9, 3, 38, 31, 12, 27, 14, 26, 22, 15, 23, 33, 29, 24, 28	recall 3, inference 3, analysis 7, synthesis 3
Graduate / PhD	20, 9, 5, 12, 38, 11, 15, 27, 22, 14, 26, 33, 23, 28, 24, 29	recall 3, inference 3, analysis 7, synthesis 3

Writing prompts (eleven rigor levels)

Scaffolded support (250 words; AP: see unit standards): Supported track (work from the passage your teacher selects). In “Chapter XXVIII,” how does Austen show visit to Hunsford? Write a paragraph that states your claim, quotes two details from the passage, and explains how each detail supports your idea. Use the setting you noticed as one piece of evidence.

HS Freshman (350 words; AP: see unit standards): In Chapter XXVIII, how does Austen develop the idea of visit to Hunsford? State a clear claim, support it with two or three quotations, and explain how the setting in the chapter helps build that idea.

HS Sophomore (450 words; AP: see unit standards): Analyze how Chapter XXVIII develops the idea of visit to Hunsford. Make a precise claim, support it with at least three pieces of textual evidence, and explain how the author's use of setting and characterization shapes that idea. Address one possible counterclaim.

HS Junior (550 words; AP: see unit standards): Analyze how the structure of Chapter XXVIII (where it begins, turns and ends) and its setting shape the reader's understanding of visit to Hunsford. Identify one place where the text leaves matters uncertain and explain how that uncertainty adds to its meaning.

HS Senior (600 words; AP: see unit standards): Two readers disagree about what Chapter XXVIII suggests about visit to Hunsford. Lay out two plausible interpretations, weigh the evidence for each (including the chapter's setting and characterization), and argue for the stronger one in a sustained, well-organized essay.

AP (650 words; AP: AP-LIT.SET, AP-LIT.LAN): Write a literary argument in which you analyze how Jane Austen uses setting in Chapter XXVIII to complicate the reader's understanding of visit to Hunsford. Develop a defensible thesis, select evidence purposefully, and explain how specific choices of diction and syntax create meaning.

College Freshman (1000 words; AP: see unit standards): Situate Chapter XXVIII within its historical and literary context and argue how the chapter's treatment of visit to Hunsford responds to that context. Engage with at least one secondary perspective (a critic, historian or the author's own statements), integrate quotations smoothly, and cite in MLA style.

College Sophomore (1250 words; AP: see unit standards): Read Chapter XXVIII alongside the conventions of its genre and period. Argue how the chapter's handling of visit to Hunsford follows or bends those conventions, using the setting as evidence, and test your reading against one published critic. Document two secondary sources in MLA.

College Junior (1500 words; AP: see unit standards): Apply a named critical approach (for example formalist, historicist, feminist, psychoanalytic or ecocritical) to Chapter XXVIII and its treatment of visit to Hunsford. State your method, show what it reveals in the chapter's setting and characterization, and identify where the text resists it.

College Senior (2000 words; AP: see unit standards): Develop a research argument that reads Chapter XXVIII as evidence for a larger claim about visit to Hunsford in Pride and Prejudice. Connect close reading of the chapter to the whole novel, engage at least four scholarly sources, and state precisely where your reading departs from theirs (Chicago style).

Graduate / PhD (2500 words; AP: see unit standards): Develop an original argument that reads Chapter XXVIII as a hinge in the novel's larger treatment of visit to Hunsford. Position your reading within a named critical conversation (for example formalist, historicist, psychoanalytic, feminist or postcolonial approaches), account for the textual history where relevant, and articulate the stakes of your intervention for scholarship on Pride and Prejudice.

SAT-style questions

1. The garden sloping to the road, the house standing in it, the green pales and the laurel hedge, everything declared they were arriving.

   As used in the text, what does the word “sloping” most nearly mean?

   A. harmony of all the parts; good order

   B. an activity that diverts or amuses or stimulates

   C. slanting

   D. to express pleasure at someone's good fortune

2. From his garden, Mr. Collins would have led them round his two meadows, but the ladies not having shoes to encounter the remains of a white frost, turned back; and while Sir William accompanied him, Charlotte took her sister and friend over the house, extremely well pleased, probably, to have the opportunity of showing it without her husband’s help. It was rather small, but well built and convenient; and everything was fitted up and arranged with a neatness and consistency of which Elizabeth gave Charlotte all the credit. When Mr. Collins could be forgotten, there was really a great air of comfort throughout, and by Charlotte’s evident enjoyment of it, Elizabeth supposed he must be often forgotten.

   Which choice best states a central concern of “Chapter XXVIII”?

   A. Visit to Hunsford

B. Consequences of refusal

C. Renewed hope

D. A changed Darcy

SAT key: 1. C (slanting); 2. A (Visit to Hunsford)

Lesson 30: Chapter XXIX

Focus: an imperious hostess

Objective: Students will analyze how characterization develops in "Chapter XXIX" by writing a claim-evidence-reasoning paragraph that cites at least 2 quotations from the section, and will score at least 80% on the section quiz.

Standards: AP: see the unit standards

Content note (alcohol or drugs (mentioned)): This section mentions drinking or a drug ("…urprised by her Ladyship's asking us on Sunday to drink tea and spend the evening at Rosings. I…"). Treat it as period custom or plot detail; name it plainly and don't glamorize it.
Student preview: This section mentions drinking or a drug.
Suggested language: "What does this detail add to the scene?"

Teacher only · spoilers

At Rosings, Lady Catherine dominates the conversation, questions Elizabeth about her family and education, and is surprised when Elizabeth answers boldly and will not state her age.

Background: Aristocrats expected deference; governesses and accomplishments signaled status.

Significance: Elizabeth's independence before rank sets up her later confrontation with Lady Catherine.

Lesson plan and lecture script (90 minutes)

0–8 min · Bell-ringer · You do (8 min)
Students write to the bell-ringer, then pair-share.
What does Elizabeth's refusal to state her age show? Write for five minutes. Starters: I think... because... / This connects to pride and prejudice because.... Content note before we start: This section mentions drinking or a drug.
Prompt: What does Elizabeth's refusal to state her age show?
Sentence starters: I think… because… · This connects to pride and prejudice because…
Strong response: A strong response takes a position and anticipates this: aristocratic pride in its purest form.

8–18 min · Vocabulary with etymology notes · I do (10 min)
Five key words in context, with verified word histories.
Today's words: cassino — a card game (also spelled casino); conciliating — friendly and trying to win good will; dictating — issue commands or orders for; strenuously — in a strenuous manner; strongly or vigorously; indisposed — slightly ill. "conciliating": Origin of "conciliate": Latin conciliātus. "indisposed": Origin of "indispose": Middle French indisposer.
Words: cassino: a card game (also spelled casino) · conciliating: friendly and trying to win good will · dictating: issue commands or orders for · strenuously: in a strenuous manner; strongly or vigorously · indisposed: slightly ill

18–28 min · Background and context · I do (10 min)
Mini-lecture (read or adapt the script).
Aristocrats expected deference; governesses and accomplishments signaled status. Elizabeth's independence before rank sets up her later confrontation with Lady Catherine. Characterization: Lady Catherine dominates dinner, interrogates Elizabeth, and is answered with unusual frankness. Dialogue: Elizabeth's refusal to state her age is a small rebellion. Watch for rank and condescension: Rank is displayed and enforced, above all at Rosings by Lady Catherine; Elizabeth refuses to be cowed. In this chapter: "given so soon, was such an instance of Lady Catherine's condescension as he knew not how to admire enough" (Chapter XXIX, paragraph 1).

28–40 min · I do: modeled close reading · I do (12 min)
Model the close reading of the anchor quotation using the written think-aloud below.
First, meaning. I read "Lady Catherine was a tall, large woman, with strongly-marked features" slowly and put it in my own words: Lady Catherine is described as tall and large, with strongly-marked features. Next, craft. I notice the hard, physical adjectives with no softening. The strongest word is "strongly-marked": it suggests a face that commands. Then, effect. What does the description of Lady Catherine prepare us for? My answer: The description of Lady Catherine prepares us for a domineering woman whose appearance matches her manner; we expect someone who gives orders and is used to being obeyed.

> Lady Catherine was a tall, large woman, with strongly-marked features (Chapter XXIX, paragraph 11)

Think-aloud: First, meaning. I read "Lady Catherine was a tall, large woman, with strongly-marked features" slowly and put it in my own words: Lady Catherine is described as tall and large, with strongly-marked features. Next, craft. I notice the hard, physical adjectives with no softening. The strongest word is "strongly-marked": it suggests a face that commands. Then, effect. What does the description of Lady Catherine prepare us for? My answer: The description of Lady Catherine prepares us for a domineering woman whose appearance matches her manner; we expect someone who gives orders and is used to being obeyed.

40–55 min · We do: guided annotation · We do (15 min)
Guided analysis of a second quotation; expected answers given.
Ask: What words in this line stand out, and what do they suggest? Expected: Lady Catherine on Elizabeth. Look at the craft: Elizabeth's refusal to state her age is a small rebellion. Ask: How does this line connect to pride and prejudice? Expected: Aristocratic pride in its purest form. (Lady Catherine on Elizabeth.)

> you give your opinion very decidedly for so young a person (Chapter XXIX, paragraph 35)

Ask: What words in this line stand out, and what do they suggest?
Expected answer: Lady Catherine on Elizabeth. Look at the craft: Elizabeth's refusal to state her age is a small rebellion.
Ask: How does this line connect to pride and prejudice?
Expected answer: Aristocratic pride in its purest form. (Lady Catherine on Elizabeth.)

55–70 min · You do: independent annotation · You do (15 min)
Independent annotation and a claim-evidence-reasoning paragraph (exemplar given).
Annotate the chapter for characterization, dialogue (three marks with a margin note each), then write one claim-evidence-reasoning paragraph: what does this chapter suggest about an imperious hostess? Then start your writing prompt at your assigned level (HS Sophomore: Analyze how Chapter XXIX develops the idea of an imperious hostess. Make a precise claim, support it with at least three pieces of textual evidence, and explain how the author's use of characterization and irony shapes that idea. Address one possible counterclaim.) Exemplar: Elizabeth refuses to be intimidated by rank. When the text says "you give your opinion very decidedly for so young a person" (Chapter XXIX, paragraph 35), it shows this directly. Lady Catherine tells her she gives "your opinion very decidedly for so young a person," a rebuke for not deferring, and Elizabeth goes on doing it.
Task: Annotate the chapter for characterization, dialogue (three marks with a margin note each), then write one claim-evidence-reasoning paragraph: what does this chapter suggest about an imperious hostess? Then start your writing prompt at your assigned level (HS Sophomore: Analyze how Chapter XXIX develops the idea of an imperious hostess. Make a precise claim, support it with at least three pieces of textual evidence, and explain how the author's use of characterization and irony shapes that idea. Address one possible counterclaim.)
Exemplar: Elizabeth refuses to be intimidated by rank. When the text says "you give your opinion very decidedly for so young a person" (Chapter XXIX, paragraph 35), it shows this directly. Lady Catherine tells her she gives "your opinion very decidedly for so young a person," a rebuke for not deferring, and Elizabeth goes on doing it.

70–80 min · Discussion · We do (10 min)
Structured discussion from the 30 tiered questions, with facilitation notes.
Anchor question: What does Elizabeth's refusal to state her age show? Ask: where does Elizabeth get her confidence?
Anchor question: What does Elizabeth's refusal to state her age show?
Facilitation: Ask: where does Elizabeth get her confidence?

80–87 min · Exit ticket / chapter quiz · You do (7 min)
Chapter quiz in the app and an exit ticket (answer given).
Chapter quiz in the app, then: In one sentence, what does this chapter suggest about an imperious hostess? Support it with one short quotation. Model answer: Elizabeth refuses to be intimidated by rank. ("you give your opinion very decidedly for so young a person", Chapter XXIX, paragraph 35). Accept any defensible claim backed by a quotation from the chapter; the answer key for the quiz is in the Quiz section.
Exit ticket: In one sentence, what does this chapter suggest about an imperious hostess? Support it with one short quotation.
Answer: Model answer: Elizabeth refuses to be intimidated by rank. ("you give your opinion very decidedly for so young a person", Chapter XXIX, paragraph 35). Accept any defensible claim backed by a quotation from the chapter; the answer key for the quiz is in the Quiz section.

87–90 min · Closure · I do (3 min)
Summarize the lesson and preview the next reading.
Today we saw how characterization shapes an imperious hostess. Key takeaway: aristocratic pride in its purest form.

Total: 90 minutes.

Teacher analysis (spoilers)

Literary elements

- Characterization: Lady Catherine dominates dinner, interrogates Elizabeth, and is answered with unusual frankness.
- Dialogue: Elizabeth's refusal to state her age is a small rebellion.

Themes and how they develop

- pride and prejudice: aristocratic pride in its purest form.

Symbols and motifs

- rank and condescension: Rank is displayed and enforced, above all at Rosings by Lady Catherine; Elizabeth refuses to be cowed. In this chapter: “given so soon, was such an instance of Lady Catherine’s condescension as he knew not how to admire enough” (Chapter XXIX, paragraph 1).
- silence and reserve: What characters leave unsaid (Darcy's reserve, Jane's composure, Elizabeth's secrets) drives misunderstanding. In this chapter: “forget their inferior rank. She was not rendered formidable by silence; but whatever she said, was spoken in so authoritative a tone” (Chapter XXIX, paragraph 11).

Key quotations (checked against the reading text)

- “Lady Catherine was a tall, large woman, with strongly-marked features” (Chapter XXIX, paragraph 11) Description.
- “you give your opinion very decidedly for so young a person” (Chapter XXIX, paragraph 35) Lady Catherine on Elizabeth.
- “With three younger sisters grown up … your Ladyship can hardly expect me to own it” (Chapter XXIX, paragraph 36) Elizabeth's evasion.

Model claim-evidence-reasoning

Claim: Elizabeth refuses to be intimidated by rank.
Evidence: “you give your opinion very decidedly for so young a person” (Chapter XXIX, paragraph 35)
Reasoning: Lady Catherine tells her she gives "your opinion very decidedly for so young a person," a rebuke for not deferring, and Elizabeth goes on doing it.

Vocabulary with etymology notes

Word	Definition (in this sentence)	In context	Word history
cassino (noun)	a card game (also spelled casino)	Collins sat down to quadrille; and as Miss de Bourgh chose to play at cassino, the two girls had the honour of assisting Mrs.

conciliating (adjective)	friendly and trying to win good will	Her air was not conciliating, nor was her manner of receiving them, such as to make her visitors forget their inferior rank.	"conciliating": Origin of "conciliate": Latin conciliātus. (Liber et Libri origin note, https://en.wiktionary.org/wiki/conciliate#Etymology)
dictating (verb)	issue commands or orders for	Elizabeth found that nothing was beneath this great Lady's attention, which could furnish her with an occasion of dictating to others.
strenuously (adverb)	in a strenuous manner; strongly or vigorously	"Aye, no doubt; but that is what a governess will prevent, and if I had known your mother, I should have advised her most strenuously to engage one.
indisposed (adjective)	slightly ill	Jenkinson was chiefly employed in watching how little Miss de Bourgh ate, pressing her to try some other dish, and fearing she were indisposed.	"indisposed": Origin of "indispose": Middle French indisposer. (Liber et Libri origin note, https://en.wiktionary.org/wiki/indispose#Etymology)
trepidation (noun)	a feeling of alarm or dread	She had heard nothing of Lady Catherine that spoke her awful from any extraordinary talents or miraculous virtue, and the mere stateliness of money and rank, she thought she could witness without trepidation.	"trepidation": Origin: Latin trepidātiō. (Liber et Libri origin note, https://en.wiktionary.org/wiki/trepidation#Etymology)
antechamber (noun)	a large entrance or reception room or area	Collins pointed out, with a rapturous air, the fine proportion and finished ornaments, they followed the servants through an antechamber, to the room where Lady Catherine, her daughter, and Mrs.	"antechamber": Origin: Middle French antichambre. (Liber et Libri origin note, https://en.wiktionary.org/wiki/antechamber#Etymology)
informing (verb)	impart knowledge of some fact, state or affairs, or event to	Collins attending them to point out its beauties, and Lady Catherine kindly informing them that it was much better worth looking at in the summer.	"informing": Origin of "inform": Old French enformer; earlier Latin īnfōrmō ("to shape"). (Liber et Libri origin note, https://en.wiktionary.org/wiki/inform#Etymology)
gratefully (adverb)	with appreciation; in a grateful manner	Collins, gratefully accepted, and immediately ordered.
syllable (noun)	a single word or sound (here, "a syllable said" = a word said)	Scarcely a syllable was uttered that did not relate to the game, except when Mrs.	"syllable": Origin: Anglo-Norman sillable; earlier Latin syllaba. (Liber et Libri origin note, https://en.wiktionary.org/wiki/syllable#Etymology)

Discussion questions

1. What does Elizabeth's refusal to state her age show?
2. Where does characterization appear in this chapter, and what effect does it have? Point to one passage.
3. How does this chapter connect to the book's larger concern with class and social mobility?

Classroom discussion questions (30, tiered)

Wait time after every question (3 s for DOK 1, 5 s for DOK 2, 8 to 10 s for DOK 3 and 4); think-pair-share on DOK 3 and 4; answer each response with a follow-up probe; close with student-generated questions. Focus sets by rigor level: Scaffolded support: 1, 2, 3, 4, 5, 6, 11, 12, 13, 14, 21, 22; HS Freshman: 1, 2, 3, 4, 5, 12, 13, 14, 15, 22, 23, 24; HS Sophomore: 1, 2, 3, 4, 13, 14, 15, 16, 17, 23, 24, 25; HS Junior: 1, 2, 3, 14, 15, 16, 17, 18, 24, 25, 26, 27; HS Senior: 1, 2, 3, 15, 16, 17, 18, 25, 26, 27, 28, 29; AP: 1, 2, 16, 17, 18, 19, 20, 26, 27, 28, 29, 30; College Freshman: 1, 2, 17, 18, 19, 20, 21, 22, 27, 28, 29, 30; College Sophomore: 1, 2, 11, 18, 19, 20, 21, 22, 23, 28, 29, 30; College Junior: 1, 11, 12, 19, 20, 21, 22, 23, 24, 25, 29, 30; College Senior: 1, 11, 12, 13, 20, 21, 22, 23, 24, 25, 26, 30; Graduate / PhD: 1, 11, 12, 13, 21, 22, 23, 24, 25, 26, 27, 28

Literal / recall

1. Who dominates the conversation at Rosings? [DOK 1 · coldCallWithSupport · wait 3 s · AP: unit standards] Look for: Lady Catherine
2. What surprises Lady Catherine? [DOK 1 · turnAndTalk · wait 3 s · AP: unit standards] Look for: Elizabeth's bold answers
3. What does Lady Catherine ask about? [DOK 1 · coldCallWithSupport · wait 3 s · AP: unit standards] Look for: Elizabeth's family and education
4. What does Elizabeth decline to tell? [DOK 1 · turnAndTalk · wait 3 s · AP: unit standards] Look for: Her exact age
5. What does the dinner reveal about rank? [DOK 1 · coldCallWithSupport · wait 3 s · AP: unit standards] Look for: Aristocrats expected deference
6. Retell the three most important events of "Chapter XXIX" in order, in one sentence each. [DOK 1 · turnAndTalk · wait 3 s · AP: unit standards] Look for: At Rosings, Lady Catherine dominates the conversation, questions Elizabeth about her family and education, and is surprised when Elizabeth answers boldly and will not state her age.
7. Which characters appear or are mentioned in "Chapter XXIX"? Name two and one thing each says or does. [DOK 1 · coldCallWithSupport · wait 3 s · AP: unit standards] Look for: Names and actions taken from the chapter; check against the teacher summary.
8. Where and when does "Chapter XXIX" take place? Point to the line that tells you. [DOK 1 · turnAndTalk · wait 3 s · AP: unit standards] Look for: A place/time detail quoted from the chapter.
9. Reread: "Collins sat down to quadrille; and as Miss de Bourgh chose to play at cassino, the two girls had the honour of assisting Mrs." What does "cassino" mean here, and what is literally happening in this line? [DOK 1 · turnAndTalk · wait 3 s · AP: unit standards] Look for: cassino: a card game (also spelled casino).
10. Reread: "Her air was not conciliating, nor was her manner of receiving them, such as to make her visitors forget their inferior rank." What does "conciliating" mean here, and what is literally happening in this line? [DOK 1 · turnAndTalk · wait 3 s · AP: unit standards] Look for: conciliating: friendly and trying to win good will.

Inferential / analytical

1. What does “Chapter XXIX” suggest about an imperious hostess? State the inference and the line that supports it. [DOK 2 · thinkPairShare · wait 5 s · AP-LIT.LAN] Look for: Elizabeth's independence before rank sets up her later confrontation with Lady Catherine.
2. Find one example of characterization in this chapter. What does it reveal that a plain statement would not? [DOK 2 · followUp · wait 5 s · AP-LIT.CHR] Look for: Look for what characters say, do and think, and how others react to them.
3. How does the irony in this chapter shape what we understand about an imperious hostess? [DOK 3 · thinkPairShare · wait 8 s · AP-LIT.NAR] Look for: Look for gaps between what characters expect or say and what is true.
   Answer guidance: A defensible line of argument: Elizabeth refuses to be intimidated by rank. Useful evidence: “Lady Catherine was a tall, large woman, with strongly-marked features” (Chapter XXIX, paragraph 11): Description. Theme link: aristocratic pride in its purest form. Credit any position that is supported by quotation and reasoning; push one-sided answers to address the strongest counterpoint.
4. In the passage that begins “When they ascended the steps to the hall, Maria’s alarm was every moment increasing, and even Sir William did not look perfectly calm.”, why might Austen have chosen these particular words? Pick two and explain their connotations. [DOK 2 · followUp · wait 5 s · AP-LIT.FIG] Look for: Diction analysis of two words in the anchor passage.
5. What causes the main turn in “Chapter XXIX”, and what effect is it likely to have on what follows? [DOK 2 · followUp · wait 5 s · AP-LIT.STR] Look for: At Rosings, Lady Catherine dominates the conversation, questions Elizabeth about her family and education, and is surprised when Elizabeth answers boldly and will not state her age.
6. How does “Chapter XXIX” build on “Chapter XXVIII”? Name one link of cause and effect. [DOK 3 · thinkPairShare · wait 8 s · AP-LIT.STR] Look for: A causal or structural link between this and the previous chapter.
   Answer guidance: A defensible line of argument: Elizabeth refuses to be intimidated by rank. Useful evidence: “you give your opinion very decidedly for so young a person” (Chapter XXIX, paragraph 35): Lady Catherine on Elizabeth. Theme link: aristocratic pride in its purest form. Credit any position that is supported by quotation and reasoning; push one-sided answers to address the strongest counterpoint.
7. What can we infer about a character's motives from what they say and do here, as opposed to what they claim? [DOK 3 · followUp · wait 8 s · AP-LIT.CHR] Look for: An inference about motive supported by a quoted line.
   Answer guidance: A defensible line of argument: Elizabeth refuses to be intimidated by rank. Useful evidence: “With three younger sisters grown up … your Ladyship can hardly expect me to own it” (Chapter XXIX, paragraph 36): Elizabeth's evasion. On characterization: Lady Catherine dominates dinner, interrogates Elizabeth, and is answered with unusual frankness. Credit any position that is supported by quotation and reasoning; push one-sided answers to address the strongest counterpoint.
8. The bell-ringer asked: “What does Elizabeth's refusal to state her age show?” Now that we have read closely, how would you revise your first answer, and which line changed your mind? [DOK 2 · thinkPairShare · wait 5 s · AP-LIT.LAN] Look for: A revised answer anchored in the text.
9. Where does setting appear, and how does it connect this chapter to the larger concern with class and social mobility? [DOK 3 · followUp · wait 8 s · AP-LIT.SET] Look for: Look for where and when events happen and how place shapes action or feeling.
   Answer guidance: A defensible line of argument: Elizabeth refuses to be intimidated by rank. Useful evidence: “Lady Catherine was a tall, large woman, with strongly-marked features” (Chapter XXIX, paragraph 11): Description. Theme link: aristocratic pride in its purest form. Credit any position that is supported by quotation and reasoning; push one-sided answers to address the strongest counterpoint.

10. Background: Aristocrats expected deference; governesses and accomplishments signaled status. How does knowing this change the way you read one moment in the chapter? [DOK 3 · thinkPairShare · wait 8 s · AP-LIT.SET] Look for: A specific moment reread in light of the context.
    Answer guidance: A defensible line of argument: Elizabeth refuses to be intimidated by rank. Useful evidence: “you give your opinion very decidedly for so young a person” (Chapter XXIX, paragraph 35): Lady Catherine on Elizabeth. Theme link: aristocratic pride in its purest form. Credit any position that is supported by quotation and reasoning; push one-sided answers to address the strongest counterpoint.

Evaluative / synthesis / creative

1. A critic might argue: “Elizabeth's independence before rank sets up her later confrontation with Lady Catherine.” How far do you agree? Take a stand and defend it with two lines from the chapter. [DOK 3 · fourCorners · wait 8 s · AP-LIT.LAN] Look for: A defended position with evidence and one counterpoint.
   Answer guidance: A defensible line of argument: Elizabeth refuses to be intimidated by rank. Useful evidence: “With three younger sisters grown up … your Ladyship can hardly expect me to own it” (Chapter XXIX, paragraph 36): Elizabeth's evasion. Theme link: aristocratic pride in its purest form. Credit any position that is supported by quotation and reasoning; push one-sided answers to address the strongest counterpoint.
2. Which character in this chapter acts most wisely, and which least? Judge them by a standard you name. [DOK 3 · thinkPairShare · wait 8 s · AP-LIT.CHR, AP-LIT.LAN] Look for: An evaluation using an explicit criterion and evidence.
   Answer guidance: A defensible line of argument: Elizabeth refuses to be intimidated by rank. Useful evidence: “Lady Catherine was a tall, large woman, with strongly-marked features” (Chapter XXIX, paragraph 11): Description. On characterization: Lady Catherine dominates dinner, interrogates Elizabeth, and is answered with unusual frankness. Credit any position that is supported by quotation and reasoning; push one-sided answers to address the strongest counterpoint.
3. Rewrite one moment of “Chapter XXIX” from the point of view of a different character. What does the new angle reveal or hide about an imperious hostess? [DOK 4 · thinkPairShare · wait 8 s · AP-LIT.LAN, AP-LIT.NAR] Look for: A creative product with a rationale tied to the text.
   Answer guidance: A defensible line of argument: Elizabeth refuses to be intimidated by rank. Useful evidence: “you give your opinion very decidedly for so young a person” (Chapter XXIX, paragraph 35): Lady Catherine on Elizabeth. Theme link: aristocratic pride in its purest form. Credit any position that is supported by quotation and reasoning; push one-sided answers to address the strongest counterpoint.
4. Write three questions of your own about “Chapter XXIX”: one recall, one “why/how”, and one “should/what if”. Trade with a partner and answer theirs. [DOK 3 · studentGenerated · wait 8 s · AP-LIT.LAN] Look for: Student-generated questions at three levels.
   Answer guidance: A defensible line of argument: Elizabeth refuses to be intimidated by rank. Useful evidence: “With three younger sisters grown up … your Ladyship can hardly expect me to own it” (Chapter XXIX, paragraph 36): Elizabeth's evasion. Theme link: aristocratic pride in its purest form. Credit any position that is supported by quotation and reasoning; push one-sided answers to address the strongest counterpoint.

5. Connect this chapter to women's limited choices: is the link strong or weak so far? What would Austen need to show next to strengthen it? [DOK 4 · socraticCircle · wait 8 s · AP-LIT.LAN] Look for: A judgment of thematic development across the work.

   Answer guidance: A defensible line of argument: Elizabeth refuses to be intimidated by rank. Useful evidence: “Lady Catherine was a tall, large woman, with strongly-marked features” (Chapter XXIX, paragraph 11): Description. Theme link: aristocratic pride in its purest form. Credit any position that is supported by quotation and reasoning; push one-sided answers to address the strongest counterpoint.

6. Is the characterization in this chapter effective, or does it feel heavy-handed? Evaluate it as a reader would in a review. [DOK 3 · fourCorners · wait 8 s · AP-LIT.CHR, AP-LIT.LAN] Look for: An evaluative judgment with criteria and evidence.

   Answer guidance: A defensible line of argument: Elizabeth refuses to be intimidated by rank. Useful evidence: “you give your opinion very decidedly for so young a person” (Chapter XXIX, paragraph 35): Lady Catherine on Elizabeth. On characterization: Lady Catherine dominates dinner, interrogates Elizabeth, and is answered with unusual frankness. Credit any position that is supported by quotation and reasoning; push one-sided answers to address the strongest counterpoint.

7. Compare how “Chapter XXIX” treats an imperious hostess with how another text, film or event you know treats a similar idea. What does Pride and Prejudice see that the other misses? [DOK 4 · socraticCircle · wait 8 s · AP-LIT.LAN] Look for: A cross-text synthesis.

   Answer guidance: A defensible line of argument: Elizabeth refuses to be intimidated by rank. Useful evidence: “With three younger sisters grown up … your Ladyship can hardly expect me to own it” (Chapter XXIX, paragraph 36): Elizabeth's evasion. Theme link: aristocratic pride in its purest form. Credit any position that is supported by quotation and reasoning; push one-sided answers to address the strongest counterpoint.

8. Predict what “Chapter XXX” will bring, using two clues from this chapter. After reading, evaluate your prediction. [DOK 3 · thinkPairShare · wait 8 s · AP-LIT.LAN, AP-LIT.STR] Look for: A prediction or judgment justified with textual clues.

   Answer guidance: A defensible line of argument: Elizabeth refuses to be intimidated by rank. Useful evidence: “Lady Catherine was a tall, large woman, with strongly-marked features” (Chapter XXIX, paragraph 11): Description. Theme link: aristocratic pride in its purest form. Credit any position that is supported by quotation and reasoning; push one-sided answers to address the strongest counterpoint.

9. Design a one-paragraph modern adaptation of this chapter (setting, characters, conflict). What must stay the same for it to still be about an imperious hostess? [DOK 4 · thinkPairShare · wait 8 s · AP-LIT.LAN] Look for: A creative transfer that keeps the core idea.

   Answer guidance: A defensible line of argument: Elizabeth refuses to be intimidated by rank. Useful evidence: “you give your opinion very decidedly for so young a person” (Chapter XXIX, paragraph 35): Lady Catherine on Elizabeth. Theme link: aristocratic pride in its purest form. Credit any position that is supported by quotation and reasoning; push one-sided answers to address the strongest counterpoint.

10. What question would you most like to ask Jane Austen about this chapter, and what answer do you think the text itself gives? [DOK 4 · studentGenerated · wait 8 s · AP-LIT.LAN] Look for: A student-generated question answered from evidence.

    Answer guidance: A defensible line of argument: Elizabeth refuses to be intimidated by rank. Useful evidence: “With three younger sisters grown up … your Ladyship can hardly expect me to own it” (Chapter XXIX, paragraph 36): Elizabeth's evasion. Theme link: aristocratic pride in its purest form. Credit any position that is supported by quotation and reasoning; push one-sided answers to address the strongest counterpoint.

Annotation focus

- Characterization: look for what characters say, do and think, and how others react to them (anchor passage in the We do segment)
- Also notice Irony: gaps between what characters expect or say and what is true
- Also notice Setting: where and when events happen and how place shapes action or feeling

Chapter quiz: item bank (all eleven rigor versions)

1. [mc · recall · DOK 1] What does the dinner reveal about rank?

   A. Everyone was equal

   B. Merchants led

   C. Aristocrats expected deference

   D. Clergy ruled society

   Key: C (Aristocrats expected deference)

2. [mc · recall · DOK 1] What does Lady Catherine ask about?

   A. Wickham

   B. Elizabeth's family and education

   C. Bingley

   D. Military news

   Key: B (Elizabeth's family and education)

3. [fill · recall · DOK 1] Complete the quotation from Chapter XXIX, paragraph 36: “With three _____ sisters grown up … your Ladyship can hardly expect me to own it”

   Key: younger

4. [mc · recall · DOK 1] In the line “Collins sat down to quadrille; and as Miss de Bourgh chose to play at cassino, the two girls had the honour of assisting Mrs.”, what does “cassino” most nearly mean?

   A. fairly good; moderate

   B. pick out, select, or choose from a number of alternatives

   C. a card game (also spelled casino)

   D. drawn out with difficulty

   Key: C (a card game (also spelled casino))

5. [mc · recall · DOK 1] Which word completes this sentence from Chapter XXIX, paragraph 30? “Compared with some _____, I believe we were; but such of us as wished to learn, never wanted the means.”

   A. families

   B. father

   C. impertinence

   D. pleasures

   Key: A (families)

6. [mc · recall · DOK 1] What surprises Lady Catherine?

   A. Maria's wit

   B. Elizabeth's bold answers

   C. The food

   D. Collins's silence

   Key: B (Elizabeth's bold answers)

7. [fill · recall · DOK 1] Fill in the blank with the vocabulary word that fits: “She had heard nothing of Lady Catherine that spoke her awful from any extraordinary talents or miraculous virtue, and the mere stateliness of money and rank, she thought she could witness without _____.” Word bank: conciliating, cassino, trepidation, dictating

   Key: trepidation

8. [fill · recall · DOK 1] Fill in the blank with the vocabulary word that fits: “Collins pointed out, with a rapturous air, the fine proportion and finished ornaments, they followed the servants through an _____, to the room where Lady Catherine, her daughter, and Mrs.” Word bank: dictating, cassino, antechamber, conciliating

   Key: antechamber

9. [fill · recall · DOK 1] Fill in the blank with the vocabulary word that fits: “Collins attending them to point out its beauties, and Lady Catherine kindly _____ them that it was much better worth looking at in the summer.” Word bank: dictating, conciliating, informing, cassino

   Key: informing

10. [mc · recall · DOK 1] In the line “Her air was not conciliating, nor was her manner of receiving them, such as to make her visitors forget their inferior rank.”, what does “conciliating” most nearly mean?

    A. saying that one disagrees

    B. changing to a lower state (a less respected state)

    C. friendly and trying to win good will

    D. mixed up in a confused way

    Key: C (friendly and trying to win good will)

11. [mc · recall · DOK 1] Who dominates the conversation at Rosings?

    A. Lady Catherine

    B. Charlotte

    C. Elizabeth

    D. Collins

    Key: A (Lady Catherine)

12. [short · inference · DOK 2] What does this passage from Chapter XXIX, paragraph 34 reveal about the character or situation? “And to be kept back on such a motive!—I think it would not be very likely to promote sisterly affection or delicacy of mind.” Answer in two or three sentences with one detail.

    Sample answer: The passage (Chapter XXIX, paragraph 34) shows the situation turning on first impressions and prejudice: aristocratic pride in its purest form. The words “affection” and “delicacy” are the proof, because they show how the moment looks to the people in it. They suggest more than the narrator states outright.

13. [short · inference · DOK 2] What does this passage from Chapter XXIX, paragraph 1 reveal about the character or situation? “The power of displaying the grandeur of his patroness to his wondering visitors, and of letting them see her civility towards himself and his wife, was exactly what he had wished for; and that an opportunity of doing it should be given so…" Answer in two or three sentences with one detail.

Sample answer: The passage (Chapter XXIX, paragraph 1) shows the situation turning on first impressions and prejudice: aristocratic pride in its purest form. The words "condescension" and "opportunity" are the proof, because they show how the moment looks to the people in it. They suggest more than the narrator states outright.

14. [mc · analysis · DOK 3] Which literary element does this describe in "Chapter XXIX"? Elizabeth's refusal to state her age is a small rebellion.

    A. Imagery

    B. Conflict

    C. Diction / vocabulary

    D. Dialogue

    Key: D (Dialogue)

15. [short · analysis · DOK 3] Analyze how the word choice in this passage from Chapter XXIX, paragraph 4 shapes its tone: "Mr. Collins was carefully instructing them in what they were to expect, that the sight of such rooms, so many servants, and so splendid a dinner might not wholly overpower them." Pick two words and explain their effect.

    Sample answer: The words "instructing" and "carefully" (Chapter XXIX, paragraph 4) make the tone heavy and deliberate rather than neutral. That weight points the reader to class and social mobility: aristocratic pride in its purest form. The author chooses them so the moment feels significant instead of passing.

16. [short · synthesis · DOK 4] Connect this passage from Chapter XXIX, paragraph 23 to the story's treatment of marriage and money: "Your mother should have taken you to town every spring for the benefit of masters." Use one other moment from the story as well.

    Sample answer: This passage (Chapter XXIX, paragraph 23) develops marriage and money: aristocratic pride in its purest form. Its words "benefit" and "masters" carry that idea into this moment. The same concern returns in "Five daughters brought up at home without a governess!—I never heard of such a thing." (Chapter XXIX, paragraph 27), so the two passages read as a pattern, not a single moment. Together they show the story treating marriage and money as central.

17. [fill · recall · DOK 1] Complete the quotation from Chapter XXIX, paragraph 2: "I confess,' said he, 'that I should not have been at all _____ by her Ladyship's asking us on Sunday to drink tea and spend the evening at Rosings." Word bank: immediately, families, father, surprised

    Key: surprised

18. [mc · recall · DOK 1] In the line "Elizabeth found that nothing was beneath this great Lady's attention, which could furnish her with an occasion of dictating to others.", what does "dictating" most nearly mean?

    A. attract; cause to be enamored

    B. issue commands or orders for

    C. praised

    D. feel happiness or joy

    Key: B (issue commands or orders for)

19. [mc · recall · DOK 1] In the line "Aye, no doubt; but that is what a governess will prevent, and if I had known your mother, I should have advised her most strenuously to engage one.", what does "strenuously" most nearly mean?

    A. clever, funny remarks

    B. to act as host; to be in charge

    C. an entrance hall

D. in a strenuous manner; strongly or vigorously

Key: D (in a strenuous manner; strongly or vigorously)

20. [short · inference · DOK 2] What can you infer from this line? “you give your opinion very decidedly for so young a person” (Chapter XXIX, paragraph 35) Answer in two or three sentences with one detail.
Sample answer: Lady Catherine on Elizabeth. The evidence is “you give your opinion very decidedly for so young a person” (Chapter XXIX, paragraph 35). This develops pride and prejudice: aristocratic pride in its purest form.

21. [mc · inference · DOK 2] Which choice best states a central concern of “Chapter XXIX”?

A. Wit as courtship

B. Family uproar

C. An imperious hostess

D. Darcy at Rosings

Key: C (An imperious hostess)

22. [short · analysis · DOK 3] Analyze how the word choice in this passage from Chapter XXIX, paragraph 7 shapes its tone: “Such formidable accounts of her Ladyship, and her manner of living, quite frightened Maria Lucas, who had been little used to company, and she looked forward to her introduction at Rosings with as much apprehension as her father had done…” Pick two words and explain their effect.
Sample answer: The words “introduction” and “apprehension” (Chapter XXIX, paragraph 7) make the tone heavy and deliberate rather than neutral. That weight points the reader to pride and self-knowledge: aristocratic pride in its purest form. The author chooses them so the moment feels significant instead of passing.

23. [short · analysis · DOK 3] Analyze the word choice in “With three younger sisters grown up … your Ladyship can hardly expect me to own it” (Chapter XXIX, paragraph 36). Pick two words and explain what they suggest.
Sample answer: Elizabeth's evasion. The evidence is “With three younger sisters grown up … your Ladyship can hardly expect me to own it” (Chapter XXIX, paragraph 36). This develops pride and prejudice: aristocratic pride in its purest form. The words “younger” and “sisters” carry that meaning: they are the charged choices in the line, and changing either would soften the effect.

24. [short · synthesis · DOK 4] Connect this passage from Chapter XXIX, paragraph 12 to the story's treatment of women's limited choices: “Miss de Bourgh was pale and sickly; her features, though not plain, were insignificant; and she spoke very little, except in a low voice, to Mrs. Jenkinson, in whose appearance there was nothing remarkable, and who was entirely engaged in…” Use one other moment from the story as well.
Sample answer: This passage (Chapter XXIX, paragraph 12) develops women's limited choices: aristocratic pride in its purest form. Its words “insignificant” and “appearance” carry that idea into this moment. The same concern returns in “There was neither in figure nor face any likeness between the ladies.” (Chapter XXIX, paragraph 12), so the two passages read as a pattern, not a single moment. Together they show the story treating women's limited choices as central.

25. [fill · recall · DOK 1] Complete the quotation from Chapter XXIX, paragraph 12: “When, after examining the mother, in whose countenance and deportment she soon found some resemblance of Mr. Darcy, she turned her eyes on the daughter, she could almost have joined in Maria’s _____, at her being so thin, and so small.” Word bank: astonishment, impertinence, pleasures, younger
Key: astonishment

26. [short · synthesis · DOK 4] Close reading: how do the diction and syntax of “Lady Catherine was a tall, large woman, with strongly-marked features” (Chapter XXIX, paragraph 11) shape its meaning? Consider a second, competing reading.

Sample answer: Description. The evidence is “Lady Catherine was a tall, large woman, with strongly-marked features” (Chapter XXIX, paragraph 11). This develops pride and prejudice: aristocratic pride in its purest form. The words “features” and “strongly” carry that meaning: they are the charged choices in the line, and changing either would soften the effect. Lady Catherine tells her she gives "your opinion very decidedly for so young a person," a rebuke for not deferring, and Elizabeth goes on doing it.

27. [fill · recall · DOK 1 · AP: AP-LIT.STR] Complete the quotation from Chapter XXIX, paragraph 35: “you give your opinion very _____ for so young a person”

    Key: decidedly

28. [fill · recall · DOK 1 · AP: AP-LIT.FIG] Complete the quotation from Chapter XXIX, paragraph 37: “Lady Catherine seemed quite astonished at not receiving a direct answer; and Elizabeth suspected herself to be the first creature who had ever dared to trifle with so much dignified _____.” Word bank: different, impertinence, immediately, objection

    Key: impertinence

29. [short · inference · DOK 2 · AP: AP-LIT.CHR] What can you infer from this line? “Lady Catherine was a tall, large woman, with strongly-marked features” (Chapter XXIX, paragraph 11) Answer in two or three sentences with one detail.

    Sample answer: Description. The evidence is “Lady Catherine was a tall, large woman, with strongly-marked features” (Chapter XXIX, paragraph 11). This develops pride and prejudice: aristocratic pride in its purest form.

30. [mc · analysis · DOK 3 · AP: AP-LIT.CHR] Which literary element does this describe in “Chapter XXIX”? Lady Catherine dominates dinner, interrogates Elizabeth, and is answered with unusual frankness.

    A. Tone / mood

    B. Characterization

    C. Hyperbole

    D. Allusion

    Key: B (Characterization)

31. [short · synthesis · DOK 4 · AP: AP-LIT.LAN] Synthesis: trace how pride and prejudice develops from Chapter XXVI to Chapter XXIX. Use one quotation from each.

    Sample answer: Earlier, in Chapter XXVI, paragraph 26, the text reads “I am sure I should be deceived again” — Jane's honesty. In Chapter XXIX, “Lady Catherine was a tall, large woman, with strongly-marked features” (Chapter XXIX, paragraph 11) — Description. Aristocratic pride in its purest form.

32. [mc · inference · DOK 2 · AP: AP-LIT.LAN] What does this passage most clearly show? “you give your opinion very decidedly for so young a person” (Chapter XXIX, paragraph 35)

    A. Jane admits her error.

    B. Her judgment follows her feelings.

    C. Lady Catherine on Elizabeth.

    D. The narrator steps in to defend a love based on esteem rather than "first sight."

    Key: C (Lady Catherine on Elizabeth.)

33. [short · synthesis · DOK 4 · Dual Credit (Indiana College Core): ICC-WC-1.5] Close reading: how do the diction and syntax of “you give your opinion very decidedly for so young a person” (Chapter XXIX, paragraph 35) shape its meaning? Consider a second, competing reading.

    Sample answer: Lady Catherine on Elizabeth. The evidence is “you give your opinion very decidedly for so young a person”

(Chapter XXIX, paragraph 35). This develops pride and prejudice: aristocratic pride in its purest form. The words “decidedly” and “opinion” carry that meaning: they are the charged choices in the line, and changing either would soften the effect. Lady Catherine tells her she gives "your opinion very decidedly for so young a person," a rebuke for not deferring, and Elizabeth goes on doing it.

34. [short · analysis · DOK 3 · Program outcome: LeL-C4-LIT-1] Claim: Elizabeth refuses to be intimidated by rank. Explain how this evidence supports the claim: “you give your opinion very decidedly for so young a person” (Chapter XXIX, paragraph 35).

    Sample answer: Lady Catherine tells her she gives "your opinion very decidedly for so young a person," a rebuke for not deferring, and Elizabeth goes on doing it. The evidence is “you give your opinion very decidedly for so young a person” (Chapter XXIX, paragraph 35) — Lady Catherine on Elizabeth. This develops pride and prejudice: aristocratic pride in its purest form.

35. [mc · recall · DOK 1 · Program outcome: LeL-GR-LIT-1] Which word completes this sentence from Chapter XXIX, paragraph 5? “When the ladies were _____ for the toilette, he said to Elizabeth—”

    A. surprised

    B. separating

    C. anything

    D. families

    Key: B (separating)

Rigor version	Items (in order)	Mix
Scaffolded support	1, 2, 3, 4, 5, 6, 7, 8, 9, 10, 11, 12, 13, 14, 15, 16	recall 11, inference 2, analysis 2, synthesis 1
HS Freshman	6, 3, 7, 17, 9, 18, 1, 19, 20, 21, 13, 12, 22, 23, 15, 24	recall 8, inference 4, analysis 3, synthesis 1
HS Sophomore	25, 9, 3, 17, 6, 2, 4, 18, 13, 12, 20, 14, 23, 22, 16, 26	recall 8, inference 3, analysis 3, synthesis 2
HS Junior	3, 27, 10, 28, 4, 6, 18, 13, 12, 29, 15, 30, 23, 22, 31, 24	recall 7, inference 3, analysis 4, synthesis 2
HS Senior	25, 19, 9, 6, 4, 2, 13, 12, 21, 20, 15, 23, 22, 31, 24, 16	recall 6, inference 4, analysis 3, synthesis 3
AP	8, 4, 3, 18, 17, 12, 21, 13, 32, 15, 22, 23, 31, 26, 16, 24	recall 5, inference 4, analysis 3, synthesis 4
College Freshman	11, 6, 7, 19, 3, 21, 13, 12, 29, 23, 22, 15, 24, 31, 33, 16	recall 5, inference 4, analysis 3, synthesis 4
College Sophomore	8, 19, 6, 17, 2, 7, 13, 12, 29, 14, 23, 15, 22, 16, 24, 31	recall 6, inference 3, analysis 4, synthesis 3
College Junior	11, 3, 2, 25, 7, 17, 13, 32, 12, 22, 15, 23, 30, 24, 31, 16	recall 6, inference 3, analysis 4, synthesis 3
College Senior	11, 6, 8, 4, 7, 13, 29, 21, 12, 22, 15, 23, 34, 16, 31, 24	recall 5, inference 4, analysis 4, synthesis 3
Graduate / PhD	9, 19, 35, 11, 25, 29, 12, 20, 13, 15, 30, 22, 23, 24, 16, 31	recall 5, inference 4, analysis 4, synthesis 3

Writing prompts (eleven rigor levels)

Scaffolded support (250 words; AP: see unit standards): Supported track (work from the passage your teacher selects). In “Chapter XXIX,” how does Austen show an imperious hostess? Write a paragraph that states your claim, quotes two details from the passage, and explains how each detail supports your idea. Use the characterization you noticed as one piece of evidence.

HS Freshman (350 words; AP: see unit standards): In Chapter XXIX, how does Austen develop the idea of an imperious hostess? State a clear claim, support it with two or three quotations, and explain how the characterization in the chapter helps build that idea.

HS Sophomore (450 words; AP: see unit standards): Analyze how Chapter XXIX develops the idea of an imperious hostess. Make a precise claim, support it with at least three pieces of textual evidence, and explain how the author's use of characterization and irony shapes that idea. Address one possible counterclaim.

HS Junior (550 words; AP: see unit standards): Analyze how the structure of Chapter XXIX (where it begins, turns and ends) and its characterization shape the reader's understanding of an imperious hostess. Identify one place where the text leaves matters uncertain and explain how that uncertainty adds to its meaning.

HS Senior (600 words; AP: see unit standards): Two readers disagree about what Chapter XXIX suggests about an imperious hostess. Lay out two plausible interpretations, weigh the evidence for each (including the chapter's characterization and irony), and argue for the stronger one in a sustained, well-organized essay.

AP (650 words; AP: AP-LIT.CHR, AP-LIT.LAN): Write a literary argument in which you analyze how Jane Austen uses characterization in Chapter XXIX to complicate the reader's understanding of an imperious hostess. Develop a defensible thesis, select evidence purposefully, and explain how specific choices of diction and syntax create meaning.

College Freshman (1000 words; AP: see unit standards): Situate Chapter XXIX within its historical and literary context and argue how the chapter's treatment of an imperious hostess responds to that context. Engage with at least one secondary perspective (a critic, historian or the author's own statements), integrate quotations smoothly, and cite in MLA style.

College Sophomore (1250 words; AP: see unit standards): Read Chapter XXIX alongside the conventions of its genre and period. Argue how the chapter's handling of an imperious hostess follows or bends those conventions, using the characterization as evidence, and test your reading against one published critic. Document two secondary sources in MLA.

College Junior (1500 words; AP: see unit standards): Apply a named critical approach (for example formalist, historicist, feminist, psychoanalytic or ecocritical) to Chapter XXIX and its treatment of an imperious hostess. State your method, show what it reveals in the chapter's characterization and irony, and identify where the text resists it.

College Senior (2000 words; AP: see unit standards): Develop a research argument that reads Chapter XXIX as evidence for a larger claim about an imperious hostess in Pride and Prejudice. Connect close reading of the chapter to the whole novel, engage at least four scholarly sources, and state precisely where your reading departs from theirs (Chicago style).

Graduate / PhD (2500 words; AP: see unit standards): Develop an original argument that reads Chapter XXIX as a hinge in the novel's larger treatment of an imperious hostess. Position your reading within a named critical conversation (for example formalist, historicist, psychoanalytic, feminist or postcolonial approaches), account for the textual history where relevant, and articulate the stakes of your intervention for scholarship on Pride and Prejudice.

SAT-style questions

1. Elizabeth found that nothing was beneath this great Lady's attention, which could furnish her with an occasion of dictating to others.

   As used in the text, what does the word "dictating" most nearly mean?

   A. impart knowledge of some fact, state or affairs, or event to
   B. with appreciation; in a grateful manner
   C. a single word or sound (here, "a syllable said" = a word said)
   D. issue commands or orders for

2. When they ascended the steps to the hall, Maria's alarm was every moment increasing, and even Sir William did not look perfectly calm. Elizabeth's courage did not fail her. She had heard nothing of Lady Catherine that spoke her awful from any extraordinary talents or miraculous virtue, and the mere stateliness of money and rank, she thought she could witness without trepidation.

   Which choice best states a central concern of "Chapter XXIX"?

   A. Bingley returns
   B. Disappointment and philosophy
   C. Jealousy at Pemberley
   D. An imperious hostess

SAT key: 1. D (issue commands or orders for); 2. D (An imperious hostess)

Lesson 31: Chapter XXX

Focus: Darcy at Rosings

Objective: Students will analyze how characterization develops in "Chapter XXX" by writing a claim-evidence-reasoning paragraph that cites at least 2 quotations from the section, and will score at least 80% on the section quiz.

Standards: AP: see the unit standards

Teacher only · spoilers

Darcy and his cousin Colonel Fitzwilliam arrive at Rosings and promptly call at the parsonage. Fitzwilliam is pleasant and easy; Darcy is stiff and quiet. Charlotte guesses the visit is a compliment to Elizabeth.

Background: Younger sons like Fitzwilliam could not inherit and needed to marry money.

Significance: Darcy's repeated visits show his feelings while Elizabeth misreads them.

Lesson plan and lecture script (90 minutes)

0–8 min · Bell-ringer · You do (8 min)
Students write to the bell-ringer, then pair-share.
Why does Darcy visit the parsonage so often? Write for five minutes. Starters: I think... because... / This connects to first impressions because....
Prompt: Why does Darcy visit the parsonage so often?
Sentence starters: I think… because… · This connects to first impressions because…
Strong response: A strong response takes a position and anticipates this: Elizabeth's settled opinion blinds her to evidence in front of her.

8–18 min · Vocabulary with etymology notes · I do (10 min)
Five key words in context, with verified word histories.
Today's words: counterpart — something very like another; a copy; nephews — sons of one's brother or sister; indebted — owing thanks to someone; magistrate — a local official who judges minor cases; awakened — stirred up. "counterpart": Origin: an English formation from counter- + part. "magistrate": Origin: Latin magistrātus. "awakened": Origin of "awaken": Old English awæcnan.
Words: counterpart: something very like another; a copy · nephews: sons of one's brother or sister · indebted: owing thanks to someone · magistrate: a local official who judges minor cases · awakened: stirred up

18–28 min · Background and context · I do (10 min)
Mini-lecture (read or adapt the script).
Younger sons like Fitzwilliam could not inherit and needed to marry money. Darcy's repeated visits show his feelings while Elizabeth misreads them. Characterization: Darcy and Colonel Fitzwilliam arrive at Rosings; Darcy calls at the parsonage. Charlotte suspects he is in love with Elizabeth; Elizabeth laughs at the idea. Irony: The one person who reads Darcy correctly is the practical Charlotte, not the clever Elizabeth. Watch for rank and condescension: Rank is displayed and enforced, above all at Rosings by Lady Catherine; Elizabeth refuses to be cowed. In this chapter: "days passed in which Mr. Collins did not walk to Rosings, and not many in which his wife did not think it" (Chapter XXX, paragraph 3).

28–40 min · I do: modeled close reading · I do (12 min)
Model the close reading of the anchor quotation using the written think-aloud below.
First, meaning. I read "Sir William stayed only a week at Hunsford" slowly and put it in my own words: Austen notes simply that Sir William stayed only a week at Hunsford with his daughter Charlotte. Next, craft. I notice the brisk, plain sentence, which dismisses his visit in a few words as of little importance. The strongest word is "only": it stresses how short and unremarkable his stay was. Then, effect. What does the length of Sir William's visit tell us about him? My answer: Sir William's brief visit is mainly a chance for him to admire Charlotte's comfortable marriage; once he leaves, Austen shifts focus to Elizabeth's quiet life at Hunsford.

> Sir William stayed only a week at Hunsford (Chapter XXX, paragraph 1)

Think-aloud: First, meaning. I read "Sir William stayed only a week at Hunsford" slowly and put it in my own words: Austen notes simply that Sir William stayed only a week at Hunsford with his daughter Charlotte. Next, craft. I notice the brisk, plain sentence, which dismisses his visit in a few words as of little importance. The strongest word is "only": it stresses how short and unremarkable his stay was. Then, effect. What does the length of Sir William's visit tell us about him? My answer: Sir William's brief visit is mainly a chance for him to admire Charlotte's comfortable marriage; once he leaves, Austen shifts focus to Elizabeth's quiet life at Hunsford.

40–55 min · We do: guided annotation · We do (15 min)
Guided analysis of a second quotation; expected answers given.
Ask: What words in this line stand out, and what do they suggest? Expected: The colonel's easy manners make Darcy's stiffness look worse by contrast. Look at the craft: The one person who reads Darcy correctly is the practical Charlotte, not the clever Elizabeth. Ask: How does this line connect to first impressions? Expected: Elizabeth's settled opinion blinds her to evidence in front of her. (The colonel's easy manners make Darcy's stiffness look worse by contrast.)

> Colonel Fitzwilliam entered into conversation directly with the readiness and ease of a well-bred man (Chapter XXX, paragraph 10)

Ask: What words in this line stand out, and what do they suggest?
Expected answer: The colonel's easy manners make Darcy's stiffness look worse by contrast. Look at the craft: The one person who reads Darcy correctly is the practical Charlotte, not the clever Elizabeth.
Ask: How does this line connect to first impressions?
Expected answer: Elizabeth's settled opinion blinds her to evidence in front of her. (The colonel's easy manners make Darcy's stiffness look worse by contrast.)

55–70 min · You do: independent annotation · You do (15 min)
Independent annotation and a claim-evidence-reasoning paragraph (exemplar given).
Annotate the chapter for characterization, irony (three marks with a margin note each), then write one claim-evidence-reasoning paragraph: what does this chapter suggest about Darcy at Rosings? Then start your writing prompt at your assigned level (HS Sophomore: Analyze how Chapter XXX develops the idea of Darcy at Rosings. Make a precise claim, support it with at least three pieces of textual evidence, and explain how the author's use of characterization and irony shapes that idea. Address one possible counterclaim.) Exemplar: Charlotte's realism makes her a better reader of Darcy than Elizabeth. When the text says “I may thank you, Eliza, for this piece of civility” (Chapter XXX, paragraph 8), it shows this directly. She tells Elizabeth "I may thank you, Eliza, for this piece of civility," guessing his motive, while Elizabeth, contrasting him with the colonel's "readiness and ease," sees only pride.
Task: Annotate the chapter for characterization, irony (three marks with a margin note each), then write one claim-evidence-reasoning paragraph: what does this chapter suggest about Darcy at Rosings? Then start your writing prompt at your assigned level (HS Sophomore: Analyze how Chapter XXX develops the idea of Darcy at Rosings. Make a precise claim, support it with at least three pieces of textual evidence, and explain how the author's use of characterization and irony shapes that idea. Address one possible counterclaim.)
Exemplar: Charlotte's realism makes her a better reader of Darcy than Elizabeth. When the text says “I may thank you, Eliza, for this piece of civility” (Chapter XXX, paragraph 8), it shows this directly. She tells Elizabeth "I may thank you, Eliza, for this piece of civility," guessing his motive, while Elizabeth, contrasting him with the colonel's "readiness and ease," sees only pride.

70–80 min · Discussion · We do (10 min)
Structured discussion from the 30 tiered questions, with facilitation notes.
Anchor question: Why does Darcy visit the parsonage so often? Ask: why can Charlotte see what Elizabeth cannot?
Anchor question: Why does Darcy visit the parsonage so often?
Facilitation: Ask: why can Charlotte see what Elizabeth cannot?

80–87 min · Exit ticket / chapter quiz · You do (7 min)
Chapter quiz in the app and an exit ticket (answer given).
Chapter quiz in the app, then: In one sentence, what does this chapter suggest about Darcy at Rosings? Support it with one short quotation. Model answer: Charlotte's realism makes her a better reader of Darcy than Elizabeth. ("I may thank you, Eliza, for this piece of civility", Chapter XXX, paragraph 8). Accept any defensible claim backed by a quotation from the chapter; the answer key for the quiz is in the Quiz section.
Exit ticket: In one sentence, what does this chapter suggest about Darcy at Rosings? Support it with one short quotation.
Answer: Model answer: Charlotte's realism makes her a better reader of Darcy than Elizabeth. ("I may thank you, Eliza, for this piece of civility", Chapter XXX, paragraph 8). Accept any defensible claim backed by a quotation from the chapter; the answer key for the quiz is in the Quiz section.

87–90 min · Closure · I do (3 min)
Summarize the lesson and preview the next reading.
Today we saw how characterization shapes Darcy at Rosings. Key takeaway: Elizabeth's settled opinion blinds her to evidence in front of her.

Total: 90 minutes.

Teacher analysis (spoilers)

Literary elements

- Characterization: Darcy and Colonel Fitzwilliam arrive at Rosings; Darcy calls at the parsonage. Charlotte suspects he is in love with Elizabeth; Elizabeth laughs at the idea.
- Irony: The one person who reads Darcy correctly is the practical Charlotte, not the clever Elizabeth.

Themes and how they develop

- first impressions: Elizabeth's settled opinion blinds her to evidence in front of her.

Symbols and motifs

- rank and condescension: Rank is displayed and enforced, above all at Rosings by Lady Catherine; Elizabeth refuses to be cowed. In this chapter: "days passed in which Mr. Collins did not walk to Rosings, and not many in which his wife did not think it" (Chapter XXX, paragraph 3).
- silence and reserve: What characters leave unsaid (Darcy's reserve, Jane's composure, Elizabeth's secrets) drives misunderstanding. In this chapter: "she sallied forth into the village to settle their differences, silence their complaints, and scold them into harmony and plenty" (Chapter XXX, paragraph 4).

Key quotations (checked against the reading text)

- "Sir William stayed only a week at Hunsford" (Chapter XXX, paragraph 1) The chapter opens by clearing the stage for new arrivals.

- “Colonel Fitzwilliam entered into conversation directly with the readiness and ease of a well-bred man” (Chapter XXX, paragraph 10) The colonel's easy manners make Darcy's stiffness look worse by contrast.
- “I may thank you, Eliza, for this piece of civility” (Chapter XXX, paragraph 8) Charlotte jokes that Darcy's visit is for Elizabeth.

Model claim-evidence-reasoning

Claim: Charlotte's realism makes her a better reader of Darcy than Elizabeth.
Evidence: “I may thank you, Eliza, for this piece of civility” (Chapter XXX, paragraph 8)
Reasoning: She tells Elizabeth "I may thank you, Eliza, for this piece of civility," guessing his motive, while Elizabeth, contrasting him with the colonel's "readiness and ease," sees only pride.

Vocabulary with etymology notes

Word	Definition (in this sentence)	In context	Word history
counterpart (noun)	something very like another; a copy	The entertainment of dining at Rosings was repeated about twice a week; and, allowing for the loss of Sir William, and there being only one card table in the evening, every such entertainment was the counterpart of the first.	“counterpart”: Origin: an English formation from counter- + part. (Liber et Libri origin note, https://en.wiktionary.org/wiki/counterpart#Etymology)
nephews (noun)	sons of one's brother or sister	There were two nephews of Lady Catherine to require them, for Mr.
indebted (adjective)	owing thanks to someone	From the drawing-room they could distinguish nothing in the lane, and were indebted to Mr.
magistrate (noun)	a local official who judges minor cases	Elizabeth soon perceived that though this great lady was not in the commission of the peace for the county, she was a most active magistrate in her own parish, the minutest concerns of which were carried to her by Mr.	“magistrate”: Origin: Latin magistrātus. (Liber et Libri origin note, https://en.wiktionary.org/wiki/magistrate#Etymology)
awakened (verb)	stirred up	At length, however, his civility was so far awakened as to enquire of Elizabeth after the health of her family.	“awakened”: Origin of “awaken”: Old English awæcnan. (Liber et Libri origin note, https://en.wiktionary.org/wiki/awaken#Etymology)

Discussion questions

1. Why does Darcy visit the parsonage so often?
2. Where does characterization appear in this chapter, and what effect does it have? Point to one passage.
3. How does this chapter connect to the book's larger concern with women's limited choices?

Classroom discussion questions (30, tiered)

Wait time after every question (3 s for DOK 1, 5 s for DOK 2, 8 to 10 s for DOK 3 and 4); think-pair-share on DOK 3 and 4; answer each response with a follow-up probe; close with student-generated questions. Focus sets by rigor level: Scaffolded support: 1, 2, 3, 4, 5, 6, 11, 12, 13, 14, 21, 22; HS Freshman: 1, 2, 3, 4, 5, 12, 13, 14, 15, 22, 23, 24; HS Sophomore: 1, 2, 3, 4, 13, 14, 15, 16, 17, 23, 24, 25; HS Junior: 1, 2, 3, 14, 15, 16, 17, 18, 24, 25, 26, 27; HS Senior: 1, 2, 3, 15, 16, 17, 18, 25, 26, 27, 28, 29; AP: 1, 2, 16, 17, 18, 19, 20, 26, 27, 28, 29, 30; College Freshman: 1, 2, 17, 18, 19, 20, 21, 22, 27, 28, 29, 30; College Sophomore: 1, 2, 11, 18, 19, 20, 21, 22, 23, 28, 29, 30; College Junior: 1, 11, 12, 19, 20, 21, 22, 23, 24, 25, 29, 30; College Senior: 1, 11, 12, 13, 20, 21, 22, 23, 24, 25, 26, 30; Graduate / PhD: 1, 11, 12, 13, 21, 22, 23, 24, 25, 26, 27, 28

Literal / recall

1. Who arrives with Darcy? [DOK 1 · coldCallWithSupport · wait 3 s · AP: unit standards] Look for: Colonel Fitzwilliam
2. How is Fitzwilliam described? [DOK 1 · turnAndTalk · wait 3 s · AP: unit standards] Look for: Pleasant and easy
3. Whom does Charlotte think the visit compliments? [DOK 1 · coldCallWithSupport · wait 3 s · AP: unit standards] Look for: Elizabeth
4. Where do Darcy and Colonel Fitzwilliam stay in Kent? [DOK 1 · turnAndTalk · wait 3 s · AP: unit standards] Look for: At Rosings, with their aunt
5. How does Darcy behave on his first call? [DOK 1 · coldCallWithSupport · wait 3 s · AP: unit standards] Look for: Stiff and quiet
6. Retell the three most important events of "Chapter XXX" in order, in one sentence each. [DOK 1 · turnAndTalk · wait 3 s · AP: unit standards] Look for: Darcy and his cousin Colonel Fitzwilliam arrive at Rosings and promptly call at the parsonage. Fitzwilliam is pleasant and easy; Darcy is stiff and quiet. Charlotte guesses the visit is a compliment to Elizabeth.
7. Which characters appear or are mentioned in "Chapter XXX"? Name two and one thing each says or does. [DOK 1 · coldCallWithSupport · wait 3 s · AP: unit standards] Look for: Names and actions taken from the chapter; check against the teacher summary.
8. Where and when does "Chapter XXX" take place? Point to the line that tells you. [DOK 1 · turnAndTalk · wait 3 s · AP: unit standards] Look for: A place/time detail quoted from the chapter.
9. Reread: "The entertainment of dining at Rosings was repeated about twice a week; and, allowing for the loss of Sir William, and there being only one card table in the evening, every such entertainment was the counterpart of the…" What does "counterpart" mean here, and what is literally happening in this line? [DOK 1 · turnAndTalk · wait 3 s · AP: unit standards] Look for: counterpart: something very like another; a copy.
10. Reread: "There were two nephews of Lady Catherine to require them, for Mr." What does "nephews" mean here, and what is literally happening in this line? [DOK 1 · turnAndTalk · wait 3 s · AP: unit standards] Look for: nephews: sons of one's brother or sister.

Inferential / analytical

1. What does "Chapter XXX" suggest about Darcy at Rosings? State the inference and the line that supports it. [DOK 2 · thinkPairShare · wait 5 s · AP-LIT.LAN] Look for: Darcy's repeated visits show his feelings while Elizabeth misreads them.
2. Find one example of characterization in this chapter. What does it reveal that a plain statement would not? [DOK 2 · followUp · wait 5 s · AP-LIT.CHR] Look for: Look for what characters say, do and think, and how others react to them.

3. How does the irony in this chapter shape what we understand about Darcy at Rosings? [DOK 3 · thinkPairShare · wait 8 s · AP-LIT.NAR] Look for: Look for gaps between what characters expect or say and what is true.
   Answer guidance: A defensible line of argument: Charlotte's realism makes her a better reader of Darcy than Elizabeth. Useful evidence: “Sir William stayed only a week at Hunsford” (Chapter XXX, paragraph 1): The chapter opens by clearing the stage for new arrivals. On irony: The one person who reads Darcy correctly is the practical Charlotte, not the clever Elizabeth. Credit any position that is supported by quotation and reasoning; push one-sided answers to address the strongest counterpoint.
4. In the passage that begins “From the drawing-room they could distinguish nothing in the lane, and were indebted to Mr.”, why might Austen have chosen these particular words? Pick two and explain their connotations. [DOK 2 · followUp · wait 5 s · AP-LIT.FIG] Look for: Diction analysis of two words in the anchor passage.
5. What causes the main turn in “Chapter XXX”, and what effect is it likely to have on what follows? [DOK 2 · followUp · wait 5 s · AP-LIT.STR] Look for: Darcy and his cousin Colonel Fitzwilliam arrive at Rosings and promptly call at the parsonage. Fitzwilliam is pleasant and easy; Darcy is stiff and quiet. Charlotte guesses the visit is a compliment to Elizabeth.
6. How does “Chapter XXX” build on “Chapter XXIX”? Name one link of cause and effect. [DOK 3 · thinkPairShare · wait 8 s · AP-LIT.STR] Look for: A causal or structural link between this and the previous chapter.
   Answer guidance: A defensible line of argument: Charlotte's realism makes her a better reader of Darcy than Elizabeth. Useful evidence: “Colonel Fitzwilliam entered into conversation directly with the readiness and ease of a well-bred man” (Chapter XXX, paragraph 10): The colonel's easy manners make Darcy's stiffness look worse by contrast. Theme link: Elizabeth's settled opinion blinds her to evidence in front of her. Credit any position that is supported by quotation and reasoning; push one-sided answers to address the strongest counterpoint.
7. What can we infer about a character's motives from what they say and do here, as opposed to what they claim? [DOK 3 · followUp · wait 8 s · AP-LIT.CHR] Look for: An inference about motive supported by a quoted line.
   Answer guidance: A defensible line of argument: Charlotte's realism makes her a better reader of Darcy than Elizabeth. Useful evidence: “I may thank you, Eliza, for this piece of civility” (Chapter XXX, paragraph 8): Charlotte jokes that Darcy's visit is for Elizabeth. On characterization: Darcy and Colonel Fitzwilliam arrive at Rosings; Darcy calls at the parsonage. Charlotte suspects he is in love with Elizabeth; Elizabeth laughs at the idea. Credit any position that is supported by quotation and reasoning; push one-sided answers to address the strongest counterpoint.
8. The bell-ringer asked: “Why does Darcy visit the parsonage so often?” Now that we have read closely, how would you revise your first answer, and which line changed your mind? [DOK 2 · thinkPairShare · wait 5 s · AP-LIT.LAN] Look for: A revised answer anchored in the text.
9. Where does plot appear, and how does it connect this chapter to the larger concern with women's limited choices? [DOK 3 · followUp · wait 8 s · AP-LIT.STR] Look for: Look for key events and the causes linking them.
   Answer guidance: A defensible line of argument: Charlotte's realism makes her a better reader of Darcy than Elizabeth. Useful evidence: “Sir William stayed only a week at Hunsford” (Chapter XXX, paragraph 1): The chapter opens by clearing the stage for new arrivals. Theme link: Elizabeth's settled opinion blinds her to evidence in front of her. Credit any position that is supported by quotation and reasoning; push one-sided answers to address the strongest counterpoint.
10. Background: Younger sons like Fitzwilliam could not inherit and needed to marry money. How does knowing this change the way you read one moment in the chapter? [DOK 3 · thinkPairShare · wait 8 s · AP-LIT.SET] Look for: A specific moment reread in light of the context.

Answer guidance: A defensible line of argument: Charlotte's realism makes her a better reader of Darcy than Elizabeth. Useful evidence: “Colonel Fitzwilliam entered into conversation directly with the readiness and ease of a well-bred man” (Chapter XXX, paragraph 10): The colonel's easy manners make Darcy's stiffness look worse by contrast. Theme link: Elizabeth's settled opinion blinds her to evidence in front of her. Credit any position that is supported by quotation and reasoning; push one-sided answers to address the strongest counterpoint.

Evaluative / synthesis / creative

1. A critic might argue: “Darcy's repeated visits show his feelings while Elizabeth misreads them.” How far do you agree? Take a stand and defend it with two lines from the chapter. [DOK 3 · fourCorners · wait 8 s · AP-LIT.LAN] Look for: A defended position with evidence and one counterpoint.
   Answer guidance: A defensible line of argument: Charlotte's realism makes her a better reader of Darcy than Elizabeth. Useful evidence: “I may thank you, Eliza, for this piece of civility” (Chapter XXX, paragraph 8): Charlotte jokes that Darcy's visit is for Elizabeth. Theme link: Elizabeth's settled opinion blinds her to evidence in front of her. Credit any position that is supported by quotation and reasoning; push one-sided answers to address the strongest counterpoint.
2. Which character in this chapter acts most wisely, and which least? Judge them by a standard you name. [DOK 3 · thinkPairShare · wait 8 s · AP-LIT.CHR, AP-LIT.LAN] Look for: An evaluation using an explicit criterion and evidence.
   Answer guidance: A defensible line of argument: Charlotte's realism makes her a better reader of Darcy than Elizabeth. Useful evidence: “Sir William stayed only a week at Hunsford” (Chapter XXX, paragraph 1): The chapter opens by clearing the stage for new arrivals. On characterization: Darcy and Colonel Fitzwilliam arrive at Rosings; Darcy calls at the parsonage. Charlotte suspects he is in love with Elizabeth; Elizabeth laughs at the idea. Credit any position that is supported by quotation and reasoning; push one-sided answers to address the strongest counterpoint.
3. Rewrite one moment of “Chapter XXX” from the point of view of a different character. What does the new angle reveal or hide about Darcy at Rosings? [DOK 4 · thinkPairShare · wait 8 s · AP-LIT.LAN, AP-LIT.NAR] Look for: A creative product with a rationale tied to the text.
   Answer guidance: A defensible line of argument: Charlotte's realism makes her a better reader of Darcy than Elizabeth. Useful evidence: “Colonel Fitzwilliam entered into conversation directly with the readiness and ease of a well-bred man” (Chapter XXX, paragraph 10): The colonel's easy manners make Darcy's stiffness look worse by contrast. Theme link: Elizabeth's settled opinion blinds her to evidence in front of her. Credit any position that is supported by quotation and reasoning; push one-sided answers to address the strongest counterpoint.
4. Write three questions of your own about “Chapter XXX”: one recall, one “why/how”, and one “should/what if”. Trade with a partner and answer theirs. [DOK 3 · studentGenerated · wait 8 s · AP-LIT.LAN] Look for: Student-generated questions at three levels.
   Answer guidance: A defensible line of argument: Charlotte's realism makes her a better reader of Darcy than Elizabeth. Useful evidence: “I may thank you, Eliza, for this piece of civility” (Chapter XXX, paragraph 8): Charlotte jokes that Darcy's visit is for Elizabeth. Theme link: Elizabeth's settled opinion blinds her to evidence in front of her. Credit any position that is supported by quotation and reasoning; push one-sided answers to address the strongest counterpoint.

5. Connect this chapter to first impressions and prejudice: is the link strong or weak so far? What would Austen need to show next to strengthen it? [DOK 4 · socraticCircle · wait 8 s · AP-LIT.LAN] Look for: A judgment of thematic development across the work.

   Answer guidance: A defensible line of argument: Charlotte's realism makes her a better reader of Darcy than Elizabeth. Useful evidence: “Sir William stayed only a week at Hunsford” (Chapter XXX, paragraph 1): The chapter opens by clearing the stage for new arrivals. Theme link: Elizabeth's settled opinion blinds her to evidence in front of her. Credit any position that is supported by quotation and reasoning; push one-sided answers to address the strongest counterpoint.

6. Is the characterization in this chapter effective, or does it feel heavy-handed? Evaluate it as a reader would in a review. [DOK 3 · fourCorners · wait 8 s · AP-LIT.CHR, AP-LIT.LAN] Look for: An evaluative judgment with criteria and evidence.

   Answer guidance: A defensible line of argument: Charlotte's realism makes her a better reader of Darcy than Elizabeth. Useful evidence: “Colonel Fitzwilliam entered into conversation directly with the readiness and ease of a well-bred man” (Chapter XXX, paragraph 10): The colonel's easy manners make Darcy's stiffness look worse by contrast. On characterization: Darcy and Colonel Fitzwilliam arrive at Rosings; Darcy calls at the parsonage. Charlotte suspects he is in love with Elizabeth; Elizabeth laughs at the idea. Credit any position that is supported by quotation and reasoning; push one-sided answers to address the strongest counterpoint.

7. Compare how “Chapter XXX” treats Darcy at Rosings with how another text, film or event you know treats a similar idea. What does Pride and Prejudice see that the other misses? [DOK 4 · socraticCircle · wait 8 s · AP-LIT.LAN] Look for: A cross-text synthesis.

   Answer guidance: A defensible line of argument: Charlotte's realism makes her a better reader of Darcy than Elizabeth. Useful evidence: “I may thank you, Eliza, for this piece of civility” (Chapter XXX, paragraph 8): Charlotte jokes that Darcy's visit is for Elizabeth. Theme link: Elizabeth's settled opinion blinds her to evidence in front of her. Credit any position that is supported by quotation and reasoning; push one-sided answers to address the strongest counterpoint.

8. Predict what “Chapter XXXI” will bring, using two clues from this chapter. After reading, evaluate your prediction. [DOK 3 · thinkPairShare · wait 8 s · AP-LIT.LAN, AP-LIT.STR] Look for: A prediction or judgment justified with textual clues.

   Answer guidance: A defensible line of argument: Charlotte's realism makes her a better reader of Darcy than Elizabeth. Useful evidence: “Sir William stayed only a week at Hunsford” (Chapter XXX, paragraph 1): The chapter opens by clearing the stage for new arrivals. Theme link: Elizabeth's settled opinion blinds her to evidence in front of her. Credit any position that is supported by quotation and reasoning; push one-sided answers to address the strongest counterpoint.

9. Design a one-paragraph modern adaptation of this chapter (setting, characters, conflict). What must stay the same for it to still be about Darcy at Rosings? [DOK 4 · thinkPairShare · wait 8 s · AP-LIT.LAN] Look for: A creative transfer that keeps the core idea.

   Answer guidance: A defensible line of argument: Charlotte's realism makes her a better reader of Darcy than Elizabeth. Useful evidence: “Colonel Fitzwilliam entered into conversation directly with the readiness and ease of a well-bred man” (Chapter XXX, paragraph 10): The colonel's easy manners make Darcy's stiffness look worse by contrast. Theme link: Elizabeth's settled opinion blinds her to evidence in front of her. Credit any position that is supported by quotation and reasoning; push one-sided answers to address the strongest counterpoint.

10. What question would you most like to ask Jane Austen about this chapter, and what answer do you think the text itself gives? [DOK 4 · studentGenerated · wait 8 s · AP-LIT.LAN] Look for: A student-generated question answered from evidence.

    Answer guidance: A defensible line of argument: Charlotte's realism makes her a better reader of Darcy than Elizabeth. Useful evidence: “I may thank you, Eliza, for this piece of civility” (Chapter XXX, paragraph 8): Charlotte jokes that Darcy's visit is for Elizabeth. Theme link: Elizabeth's settled opinion blinds her to evidence in front of her. Credit any position that is supported by quotation and reasoning; push one-sided answers to address the strongest counterpoint.

Annotation focus

- Characterization: look for what characters say, do and think, and how others react to them (anchor passage in the We do segment)
- Also notice Irony: gaps between what characters expect or say and what is true
- Also notice Plot: key events and the causes linking them

Chapter quiz: item bank (all eleven rigor versions)

1. [fill · recall · DOK 1] Complete the quotation from Chapter XXX, paragraph 8: “I may thank you, Eliza, for this piece of _____”

   Key: civility

2. [fill · recall · DOK 1] Complete the quotation from Chapter XXX, paragraph 1: “Sir William _____ only a week at Hunsford”

   Key: stayed

3. [fill · recall · DOK 1] Fill in the blank with the vocabulary word that fits: “At length, however, his civility was so far _____ as to enquire of Elizabeth after the health of her family.” Word bank: awakened, counterpart, nephews, indebted

   Key: awakened

4. [mc · recall · DOK 1] In the line “From the drawing-room they could distinguish nothing in the lane, and were indebted to Mr.”, what does “indebted” most nearly mean?

   A. pyramid-shaped piles
   B. owing thanks to someone
   C. to frighten in order to control
   D. the acquisition of something for payment

   Key: B (owing thanks to someone)

5. [mc · recall · DOK 1] In the line “Elizabeth soon perceived that though this great lady was not in the commission of the peace for the county, she was a most active magistrate in her own parish, the minutest concerns of which were carried to her by Mr.”, what does “magistrate” most nearly mean?

   A. the act of preparing something (as food) by the application of heat
   B. a long dining-room cabinet with a flat top
   C. a local official who judges minor cases
   D. varied

   Key: C (a local official who judges minor cases)

6. [mc · recall · DOK 1] Who arrives with Darcy?

   A. Mr. Hurst

   B. Wickham

   C. Colonel Fitzwilliam

   D. Bingley

   Key: C (Colonel Fitzwilliam)

7. [mc · recall · DOK 1] Where do Darcy and Colonel Fitzwilliam stay in Kent?

   A. At Pemberley

   B. At the parsonage

   C. At an inn in Hunsford

   D. At Rosings, with their aunt

   Key: D (At Rosings, with their aunt)

8. [mc · recall · DOK 1] How is Fitzwilliam described?

   A. Rude

   B. Foolish

   C. Pleasant and easy

   D. Silent

   Key: C (Pleasant and easy)

9. [fill · recall · DOK 1] Complete the quotation from Chapter XXX, paragraph 10: “Colonel Fitzwilliam entered into _____ directly with the readiness and ease of a well-bred man”

   Key: conversation

10. [mc · recall · DOK 1] In the line “The entertainment of dining at Rosings was repeated about twice a week; and, allowing for the loss of Sir William, and there being only one card table in the evening, every such entertainment was the counterpart of the…”, what does “counterpart” most nearly mean?

    A. make a more or less disguised reference to

    B. something very like another; a copy

    C. packages

    D. qualities that make someone attractive

    Key: B (something very like another; a copy)

11. [mc · recall · DOK 1] Whom does Charlotte think the visit compliments?

    A. Elizabeth

    B. Herself

    C. Collins

    D. Maria

    Key: A (Elizabeth)

12. [short · inference · DOK 2] What can you infer from this line? “Sir William stayed only a week at Hunsford” (Chapter XXX, paragraph 1) Answer in two or three sentences with one detail.

    Sample answer: The chapter opens by clearing the stage for new arrivals. The evidence is “Sir William stayed only a week at Hunsford” (Chapter XXX, paragraph 1). This develops first impressions: Elizabeth's settled opinion blinds her to evidence in front of her.

13. [mc · inference · DOK 2] Which choice best states a central concern of “Chapter XXX”?

    A. A changed Darcy

    B. Too late

    C. Disappointment and philosophy

    D. Darcy at Rosings

    Key: D (Darcy at Rosings)

14. [mc · analysis · DOK 3] Which literary element does this describe in “Chapter XXX”? Darcy and Colonel Fitzwilliam arrive at Rosings; Darcy calls at the parsonage. Charlotte suspects he is in love with Elizabeth; Elizabeth laughs at the idea.

    A. Alliteration

    B. Hyperbole

    C. Imagery

    D. Characterization

    Key: D (Characterization)

15. [mc · analysis · DOK 3] Which literary element does this describe in “Chapter XXX”? The one person who reads Darcy correctly is the practical Charlotte, not the clever Elizabeth.

    A. Irony

    B. Tone / mood

    C. Simile

    D. Structure

    Key: A (Irony)

16. [short · synthesis · DOK 4] Synthesis: trace how first impressions develops from Chapter XXI to Chapter XXX. Use one quotation from each.

    Sample answer: Earlier, in Chapter XXI, paragraph 21, the text reads “Caroline is incapable of wilfully deceiving anyone” — Jane's charity. In Chapter XXX, “Sir William stayed only a week at Hunsford” (Chapter XXX, paragraph 1), which shows the chapter opens by clearing the stage for new arrivals. Elizabeth's settled opinion blinds her to evidence in front of her.

17. [mc · recall · DOK 1] Which word completes this sentence from Chapter XXX, paragraph 11? “My _____ sister has been in town these three months.”

    A. necessary

    B. eldest

    C. afterwards

    D. mornings

    Key: B (eldest)

18. [mc · recall · DOK 1] In the line “There were two nephews of Lady Catherine to require them, for Mr.”, what does “nephews” most nearly mean?

    A. be contingent upon (something that is elided)

    B. get or find back; recover the use of

    C. something immaterial that stands in the way and must be circumvented or surmounted

    D. sons of one's brother or sister

    Key: D (sons of one's brother or sister)

19. [fill · recall · DOK 1] Complete the quotation from Chapter XXX, paragraph 1: “While Sir William was with them, Mr. Collins devoted his _____ to driving him out in his gig, and showing him the country” Word bank: employments, following, mornings, comfortably

    Key: mornings

20. [mc · inference · DOK 2] Which of these passages comes earliest in Chapter XXX?

    A. “Very few days passed in which Mr. Collins did not walk to Rosings, and not many in which his wife did not think it necessary to go likewise”

    B. “Their other engagements were few; as the style of living of the neighbourhood in general, was beyond the Collinses’ reach.”

    C. “Now and then, they were honoured with a call from her Ladyship, and nothing escaped her observation that was passing in the room during…”

    D. “She examined into their employments, looked at their work, and advised them to do it differently”

    Key: A (“Very few days passed in which Mr. Collins did not walk to Rosings, and not many in which his wife did not think it necessary to go likewise”)

21. [short · inference · DOK 2] What does this passage from Chapter XXX, paragraph 7 reveal about the character or situation? “Charlotte had seen them from her husband’s room, crossing the road, and immediately running into the other, told the girls what an honour they might expect, adding—” Answer in two or three sentences with one detail.

    Sample answer: The passage (Chapter XXX, paragraph 7) shows the situation turning on first impressions and prejudice: Elizabeth's settled opinion blinds her to evidence in front of her. The words “immediately” and “crossing” are the proof, because they show how the moment looks to the people in it. They suggest more than the narrator states outright.

22. [short · analysis · DOK 3] Analyze how the word choice in this passage from Chapter XXX, paragraph 9 shapes its tone: “Mr. Darcy looked just as he had been used to look in Hertfordshire, paid his compliments, with his usual reserve, to Mrs. Collins; and whatever might be his feelings towards her friend, met her with every appearance of composure.” Pick two words and explain their effect.

    Sample answer: The words “compliments” and “appearance” (Chapter XXX, paragraph 9) make the tone heavy and deliberate rather than neutral. That weight points the reader to class and social mobility: Elizabeth's settled opinion blinds her to evidence in front of her. The author chooses them so the moment feels significant instead of passing.

23. [short · synthesis · DOK 4] Close reading: how do the diction and syntax of “Sir William stayed only a week at Hunsford” (Chapter XXX, paragraph 1) shape its meaning? Consider a second, competing reading.

    Sample answer: The chapter opens by clearing the stage for new arrivals. The evidence is “Sir William stayed only a week at Hunsford” (Chapter XXX, paragraph 1). This develops first impressions: Elizabeth's settled opinion blinds her to evidence in front of her. The words “stayed” and “week” carry that meaning: they are the charged choices in the line, and changing either would soften the effect. She tells Elizabeth "I may thank you, Eliza, for this piece of civility," guessing his motive, while Elizabeth, contrasting him with the colonel's "readiness and ease," sees only pride.

24. [mc · recall · DOK 1] How does Darcy behave on his first call?

    A. Flirtatious

    B. Rude

    C. Lively

    D. Stiff and quiet

    Key: D (Stiff and quiet)

25. [fill · recall · DOK 1] Complete the quotation from Chapter XXX, paragraph 7: “On the _____ morning he hastened to Rosings to pay his respects.” Word bank: approaching, following, eldest, gentleman

    Key: following

26. [short · synthesis · DOK 4] Connect this passage from Chapter XXX, paragraph 3 to the story's treatment of marriage and money: “Now and then, they were honoured with a call from her Ladyship, and nothing escaped her observation that was passing in the room during these visits.” Use one other moment from the story as well.

    Sample answer: This passage (Chapter XXX, paragraph 3) develops marriage and money: Elizabeth's settled opinion blinds her to evidence in front of her. Its words “observation” and “honoured” carry that idea into this moment. The same concern returns in “Their other engagements were few; as the style of living of the neighbourhood in general, was beyond the Collinses'…” (Chapter XXX, paragraph 5), so the two passages read as a pattern, not a single moment. Together they show the story treating marriage and money as central.

27. [mc · recall · DOK 1 · AP: AP-LIT.FIG] Which word completes this sentence from Chapter XXX, paragraph 3? “She examined into their _____, looked at their work, and advised them to do it differently”

    A. approaching

    B. employments

    C. mornings

    D. curtseyed

    Key: B (employments)

28. [short · inference · DOK 2 · AP: AP-LIT.CHR] What can you infer from this line? “Colonel Fitzwilliam entered into conversation directly with the readiness and ease of a well-bred man” (Chapter XXX, paragraph 10) Answer in two or three sentences with one detail.

    Sample answer: The colonel's easy manners make Darcy's stiffness look worse by contrast. The evidence is “Colonel Fitzwilliam entered into conversation directly with the readiness and ease of a well-bred man” (Chapter XXX, paragraph 10).

29. [short · analysis · DOK 3 · AP: AP-LIT.LAN] Claim: Charlotte's realism makes her a better reader of Darcy than Elizabeth. Explain how this evidence supports the claim: “I may thank you, Eliza, for this piece of civility” (Chapter XXX, paragraph 8).

    Sample answer: She tells Elizabeth "I may thank you, Eliza, for this piece of civility," guessing his motive, while Elizabeth, contrasting him with the colonel's "readiness and ease," sees only pride. The evidence is “I may thank you, Eliza, for this piece of civility” (Chapter XXX, paragraph 8) — Charlotte jokes that Darcy's visit is for Elizabeth. This develops first impressions: Elizabeth's settled opinion blinds her to evidence in front of her.

30. [short · analysis · DOK 3 · AP: AP-LIT.FIG] Analyze the word choice in “I may thank you, Eliza, for this piece of civility” (Chapter XXX, paragraph 8). Pick two words and explain what they suggest.

    Sample answer: Charlotte jokes that Darcy's visit is for Elizabeth. The evidence is “I may thank you, Eliza, for this piece of civility” (Chapter XXX, paragraph 8). This develops first impressions: Elizabeth's settled opinion blinds her to evidence in front of her. The words “civility” and “thank” carry that meaning: they are the charged choices in the line, and changing either would soften the effect.

31. [short · synthesis · DOK 4 · Program outcome: LeL-C3-LIT-1] Close reading: how do the diction and syntax of “Colonel Fitzwilliam entered into conversation directly with the readiness and ease of a well-bred man” (Chapter XXX, paragraph 10) shape its meaning? Consider a second, competing reading.

    Sample answer: The colonel's easy manners make Darcy's stiffness look worse by contrast. The evidence is “Colonel Fitzwilliam entered into conversation directly with the readiness and ease of a well-bred man” (Chapter XXX, paragraph 10). This develops first impressions: Elizabeth's settled opinion blinds her to evidence in front of her. The words “conversation” and “readiness” carry that meaning: they are the charged choices in the line, and changing either would soften the effect. She tells Elizabeth "I may thank you, Eliza, for this piece of civility," guessing his motive, while Elizabeth, contrasting him with the colonel's "readiness and ease," sees only pride.

32. [mc · inference · DOK 2 · Program outcome: LeL-GR-LIT-1] What does this passage most clearly show? “I may thank you, Eliza, for this piece of civility” (Chapter XXX, paragraph 8)

    A. Why Mr. Bennet married.

    B. Charlotte jokes that Darcy's visit is for Elizabeth.

    C. Wickham's charm consoles the family; irony in hindsight.

    D. Public opinion shifts on manners, not character.

    Key: B (Charlotte jokes that Darcy's visit is for Elizabeth.)

Rigor version	Items (in order)	Mix
Scaffolded support	1, 2, 3, 4, 5, 6, 7, 8, 9, 10, 11, 12, 13, 14, 15, 16	recall 11, inference 2, analysis 2, synthesis 1
HS Freshman	17, 3, 7, 18, 5, 2, 19, 4, 10, 20, 21, 13, 22, 14, 15, 23	recall 9, inference 3, analysis 3, synthesis 1
HS Sophomore	24, 8, 5, 6, 25, 1, 18, 11, 13, 20, 21, 14, 22, 15, 23, 26	recall 8, inference 3, analysis 3, synthesis 2
HS Junior	10, 5, 19, 27, 2, 12, 28, 20, 21, 13, 22, 15, 29, 14, 26, 16	recall 5, inference 5, analysis 4, synthesis 2
HS Senior	3, 17, 7, 2, 4, 27, 21, 20, 12, 13, 14, 22, 30, 15, 16, 26	recall 6, inference 4, analysis 4, synthesis 2
AP	2, 5, 10, 17, 24, 9, 13, 20, 21, 15, 30, 22, 14, 26, 23, 16	recall 6, inference 3, analysis 4, synthesis 3
College Freshman	25, 3, 17, 24, 7, 19, 13, 21, 20, 14, 22, 30, 15, 23, 26, 16	recall 6, inference 3, analysis 4, synthesis 3
College Sophomore	3, 6, 5, 11, 8, 24, 9, 13, 21, 20, 15, 22, 14, 23, 16, 26	recall 7, inference 3, analysis 3, synthesis 3
College Junior	3, 2, 17, 18, 8, 6, 13, 21, 20, 12, 22, 15, 14, 26, 31, 16	recall 6, inference 4, analysis 3, synthesis 3
College Senior	19, 8, 27, 2, 9, 7, 21, 12, 13, 20, 22, 30, 15, 14, 16, 26	recall 6, inference 4, analysis 4, synthesis 2
Graduate / PhD	3, 17, 10, 19, 24, 5, 32, 21, 13, 20, 14, 22, 15, 26, 16, 23	recall 6, inference 4, analysis 3, synthesis 3

Writing prompts (eleven rigor levels)

Scaffolded support (250 words; AP: see unit standards): Supported track (work from the passage your teacher selects). In “Chapter XXX,” how does Austen show Darcy at Rosings? Write a paragraph that states your claim, quotes two details from the passage, and explains how each detail supports your idea. Use the characterization you noticed as one piece of evidence.

HS Freshman (350 words; AP: see unit standards): In Chapter XXX, how does Austen develop the idea of Darcy at Rosings? State a clear claim, support it with two or three quotations, and explain how the characterization in the chapter helps build that idea.

HS Sophomore (450 words; AP: see unit standards): Analyze how Chapter XXX develops the idea of Darcy at Rosings. Make a precise claim, support it with at least three pieces of textual evidence, and explain how the author's use of characterization and irony shapes that idea. Address one possible counterclaim.

HS Junior (550 words; AP: see unit standards): Analyze how the structure of Chapter XXX (where it begins, turns and ends) and its characterization shape the reader's understanding of Darcy at Rosings. Identify one place where the text leaves matters uncertain and explain how that uncertainty adds to its meaning.

HS Senior (600 words; AP: see unit standards): Two readers disagree about what Chapter XXX suggests about Darcy at Rosings. Lay out two plausible interpretations, weigh the evidence for each (including the chapter's characterization and irony), and argue for the stronger one in a sustained, well-organized essay.

AP (650 words; AP: AP-LIT.CHR, AP-LIT.LAN): Write a literary argument in which you analyze how Jane Austen uses characterization in Chapter XXX to complicate the reader's understanding of Darcy at Rosings. Develop a defensible thesis, select evidence purposefully, and explain how specific choices of diction and syntax create meaning.

College Freshman (1000 words; AP: see unit standards): Situate Chapter XXX within its historical and literary context and argue how the chapter's treatment of Darcy at Rosings responds to that context. Engage with at least one secondary perspective (a critic, historian or the author's own statements), integrate quotations smoothly, and cite in MLA style.

College Sophomore (1250 words; AP: see unit standards): Read Chapter XXX alongside the conventions of its genre and period. Argue how the chapter's handling of Darcy at Rosings follows or bends those conventions, using the characterization as evidence, and test your reading against one published critic. Document two secondary sources in MLA.

College Junior (1500 words; AP: see unit standards): Apply a named critical approach (for example formalist, historicist, feminist, psychoanalytic or ecocritical) to Chapter XXX and its treatment of Darcy at Rosings. State your method, show what it reveals in the chapter's characterization and irony, and identify where the text resists it.

College Senior (2000 words; AP: see unit standards): Develop a research argument that reads Chapter XXX as evidence for a larger claim about Darcy at Rosings in Pride and Prejudice. Connect close reading of the chapter to the whole novel, engage at least four scholarly sources, and state precisely where your reading departs from theirs (Chicago style).

Graduate / PhD (2500 words; AP: see unit standards): Develop an original argument that reads Chapter XXX as a hinge in the novel's larger treatment of Darcy at Rosings. Position your reading within a named critical conversation (for example formalist, historicist, psychoanalytic, feminist or postcolonial approaches), account for the textual history where relevant, and articulate the stakes of your intervention for scholarship on Pride and Prejudice.

SAT-style questions

1. The entertainment of dining at Rosings was repeated about twice a week; and, allowing for the loss of Sir William, and there being only one card table in the evening, every such entertainment was the counterpart of the first.

   As used in the text, what does the word “counterpart” most nearly mean?

   A. something very like another; a copy

B. a local official who judges minor cases

C. owing thanks to someone

D. stirred up

2. From the drawing-room they could distinguish nothing in the lane, and were indebted to Mr. Collins for the knowledge of what carriages went along, and how often especially Miss de Bourgh drove by in her phaeton, which he never failed coming to inform them of, though it happened almost every day. She not unfrequently stopped at the Parsonage, and had a few minutes' conversation with Charlotte, but was scarcely ever prevailed on to get out.

Which choice best states a central concern of "Chapter XXX"?

A. An imperious hostess

B. A ridiculous proposal

C. Darcy at Rosings

D. An unhappy marriage observed

SAT key: 1. A (something very like another; a copy); 2. C (Darcy at Rosings)

Lesson 32: Chapter XXXI

Focus: music, wit and manners

Objective: Students will analyze how characterization develops in "Chapter XXXI" by writing a claim-evidence-reasoning paragraph that cites at least 2 quotations from the section, and will score at least 80% on the section quiz.

Standards: AP: see the unit standards

Teacher only · spoilers

At Rosings, Colonel Fitzwilliam's lively talk draws Elizabeth to the piano. Darcy stands near, and she teases him about refusing to dance at Meryton. Darcy says he lacks the talent of conversing easily with strangers; Elizabeth replies that her playing would improve with practice, as his manners might. Lady Catherine interrupts with loud opinions.

Background: Musical performance was a social display for marriageable young women.

Significance: Elizabeth's analogy about practice suggests manners, like skills, can be learned—an idea about self-improvement.

Lesson plan and lecture script (90 minutes)

0–8 min · Bell-ringer · You do (8 min)
Students write to the bell-ringer, then pair-share.
Elizabeth compares manners to piano practice. Is that a fair comparison? Write for five minutes. Starters: I think... because... / This connects to pride and prejudice because....
Prompt: Elizabeth compares manners to piano practice. Is that a fair comparison?
Sentence starters: I think… because… · This connects to pride and prejudice because…
Strong response: A strong response takes a position and anticipates this: Elizabeth answers with an analogy to her own unpractised playing: skill comes from practice, not talent.

8–18 min · Vocabulary with etymology notes · I do (10 min)
Five key words in context, with verified word histories.
Today's words: intimidate — to frighten in order to control; proficient — an expert; a skilled person; retaliate — to strike back; applying — asking; appealing (to someone); scruple — to hesitate because of moral doubt. "intimidate": Origin: Medieval Latin intimidātus; earlier Latin intimidō ("to intimidate"). "retaliate": Origin: Latin retāliātus.
Words: intimidate: to frighten in order to control · proficient: an expert; a skilled person · retaliate: to strike back · applying: asking; appealing (to someone) · scruple: to hesitate because of moral doubt

18–28 min · Background and context · I do (10 min)
Mini-lecture (read or adapt the script).
Musical performance was a social display for marriageable young women. Elizabeth's analogy about practice suggests manners, like skills, can be learned—an idea about self-improvement. Dialogue: At the piano Elizabeth teases Darcy about his behaviour at the Meryton ball; he answers that he lacks the "talent" of conversing easily with strangers. Characterization: Darcy's reply, possibly shy rather than proud, is the first sign of another explanation for his manner. Watch for rank and condescension: Rank is displayed and enforced, above all at Rosings by Lady Catherine; Elizabeth refuses to be cowed. In this chapter: "must add considerably to the pleasure of their engagements at Rosings. It was some days, however, before they received any invitation thither" (Chapter XXXI, paragraph 1).

28–40 min · I do: modeled close reading · I do (12 min)
Model the close reading of the anchor quotation using the written think-aloud below.
First, meaning. I read "I certainly have not the talent which some people possess … of conversing easily with those I have never seen before" slowly and put it in my own words: Darcy says he lacks the talent some people have of talking easily with strangers. Next, craft. I notice he describes his reserve as a missing skill, not as pride. The strongest word is "talent": it reframes his rudeness as a weakness he is aware of. Then, effect. What does Darcy admit to Elizabeth at the piano? My answer: Darcy hints that his coldness is shyness; Elizabeth answers that he should practice, but the line plants the idea that she has misjudged him.

> I certainly have not the talent which some people possess … of conversing easily with those I have never seen before (Chapter XXXI, paragraph 24)

Think-aloud: First, meaning. I read "I certainly have not the talent which some people possess … of conversing easily with those I have never seen before" slowly and put it in my own words: Darcy says he lacks the talent some people have of talking easily with strangers. Next, craft. I notice he describes his reserve as a missing skill, not as pride. The strongest word is "talent": it reframes his rudeness as a weakness he is aware of. Then, effect. What does Darcy admit to Elizabeth at the piano? My answer: Darcy hints that his coldness is shyness; Elizabeth answers that he should practice, but the line plants the idea that she has misjudged him.

40–55 min · We do: guided annotation · We do (15 min)
Guided analysis of a second quotation; expected answers given.
Ask: What words in this line stand out, and what do they suggest? Expected: "Talent" suggests shyness, not contempt. "We neither of us" links them; this complicates first impressions. Ask: How does this line connect to pride and prejudice? Expected: Elizabeth answers with an analogy to her own unpractised playing: skill comes from practice, not talent. (Elizabeth's rebuttal by analogy.)

> My fingers … do not move over this instrument in the masterly manner which I see so many women's do
> (Chapter XXXI, paragraph 25)

Ask: What words in this line stand out, and what do they suggest?
Expected answer: "Talent" suggests shyness, not contempt. "We neither of us" links them; this complicates first impressions.
Ask: How does this line connect to pride and prejudice?
Expected answer: Elizabeth answers with an analogy to her own unpractised playing: skill comes from practice, not talent. (Elizabeth's rebuttal by analogy.)

55–70 min · You do: independent annotation · You do (15 min)
Independent annotation and a claim-evidence-reasoning paragraph (exemplar given).
Annotate the chapter for dialogue, characterization (three marks with a margin note each), then write one claim-evidence-reasoning paragraph: what does this chapter suggest about music, wit and manners? Then start your writing prompt at your assigned level (HS Sophomore: Analyze how Chapter XXXI develops the idea of music, wit and manners. Make a precise claim, support it with at least three pieces of textual evidence, and explain how the author's use of characterization and irony shapes that idea. Address one possible counterclaim.) Exemplar: The piano scene offers a sympathetic explanation of Darcy's manners that Elizabeth does not take seriously. When the text says "We neither of us perform to strangers" (Chapter XXXI, paragraph 26), it shows this directly. He says he lacks "the talent which some people possess … of conversing easily with those I have never seen before," and adds "we neither of us perform to strangers," suggesting shyness and a likeness between them; she treats it as a joke.
Task: Annotate the chapter for dialogue, characterization (three marks with a margin note each), then write one claim-evidence-reasoning paragraph: what does this chapter suggest about music, wit and manners? Then start your writing prompt at your assigned level (HS Sophomore: Analyze how Chapter XXXI develops the idea of music, wit and manners. Make a precise claim, support it with at least three pieces of textual evidence, and explain how the author's use of characterization and irony shapes that idea. Address one possible counterclaim.)
Exemplar: The piano scene offers a sympathetic explanation of Darcy's manners that Elizabeth does not take seriously. When the text says "We neither of us perform to strangers" (Chapter XXXI, paragraph 26), it shows this directly. He says he lacks "the talent which some people possess … of conversing easily with those I have never seen before," and adds "we neither of us perform to strangers," suggesting shyness and a likeness between them; she treats it as a joke.

70–80 min · Discussion · We do (10 min)
Structured discussion from the 30 tiered questions, with facilitation notes.
Anchor question: Elizabeth compares manners to piano practice. Is that a fair comparison? Reopen the question from Chapter III: is Darcy proud or shy? Has the evidence changed?
Anchor question: Elizabeth compares manners to piano practice. Is that a fair comparison?
Facilitation: Reopen the question from Chapter III: is Darcy proud or shy? Has the evidence changed?

80–87 min · Exit ticket / chapter quiz · You do (7 min)
Chapter quiz in the app and an exit ticket (answer given).
Chapter quiz in the app, then: In one sentence, what does this chapter suggest about music, wit and manners? Support it with one short quotation. Model answer: The piano scene offers a sympathetic explanation of Darcy's manners that Elizabeth does not take seriously. ("We neither of us perform to strangers", Chapter XXXI, paragraph 26). Accept any defensible claim backed by a quotation from the chapter; the answer key for the quiz is in the Quiz section.
Exit ticket: In one sentence, what does this chapter suggest about music, wit and manners? Support it with one short quotation.
Answer: Model answer: The piano scene offers a sympathetic explanation of Darcy's manners that Elizabeth does not take seriously. ("We neither of us perform to strangers", Chapter XXXI, paragraph 26). Accept any defensible claim backed by a quotation from the chapter; the answer key for the quiz is in the Quiz section.

87–90 min · Closure · I do (3 min)
Summarize the lesson and preview the next reading.
Today we saw how dialogue shapes music, wit and manners. Key takeaway: Elizabeth answers with an analogy to her own unpractised playing: skill comes from practice, not talent.

Total: 90 minutes.

Teacher analysis (spoilers)

Literary elements

- Dialogue: At the piano Elizabeth teases Darcy about his behaviour at the Meryton ball; he answers that he lacks the "talent" of conversing easily with strangers.
- Characterization: Darcy's reply, possibly shy rather than proud, is the first sign of another explanation for his manner.

Themes and how they develop

- pride and prejudice: Elizabeth answers with an analogy to her own unpractised playing: skill comes from practice, not talent.

Symbols and motifs

- rank and condescension: Rank is displayed and enforced, above all at Rosings by Lady Catherine; Elizabeth refuses to be cowed. In this chapter: "must add considerably to the pleasure of their engagements at Rosings. It was some days, however, before they received any invitation thither" (Chapter XXXI, paragraph 1).

- letters: Letters carry news, reveal character and change minds; Darcy's letter is the turning point of the novel. In this chapter: "It cannot be done too much; and when I next write to her, I shall charge her not to neglect it on" (Chapter XXXI, paragraph 10).

Key quotations (checked against the reading text)

- "I certainly have not the talent which some people possess … of conversing easily with those I have never seen before" (Chapter XXXI, paragraph 24) Darcy's self-defense: shyness, not contempt?
- "My fingers … do not move over this instrument in the masterly manner which I see so many women's do" (Chapter XXXI, paragraph 25) Elizabeth's rebuttal by analogy.
- "We neither of us perform to strangers" (Chapter XXXI, paragraph 26) Darcy's reply suggests kinship between them.

Model claim-evidence-reasoning

Claim: The piano scene offers a sympathetic explanation of Darcy's manners that Elizabeth does not take seriously.
Evidence: "We neither of us perform to strangers" (Chapter XXXI, paragraph 26)
Reasoning: He says he lacks "the talent which some people possess ... of conversing easily with those I have never seen before," and adds "we neither of us perform to strangers," suggesting shyness and a likeness between them; she treats it as a joke.

Vocabulary with etymology notes

Word	Definition (in this sentence)	In context	Word history
intimidate (verb)	to frighten in order to control	My courage always rises with every attempt to intimidate me."	"intimidate": Origin: Medieval Latin intimidātus; earlier Latin intimidō ("to intimidate"). (Liber et Libri origin note, https://en.wiktionary.org/wiki/intimidate#Etymology)
proficient (noun)	an expert; a skilled person	If I had ever learnt, I should have been a great proficient.
retaliate (verb)	to strike back	Darcy, it is very ungenerous in you to mention all that you knew to my disadvantage in Hertfordshire—and, give me leave to say, very impolitic too—for it is provoking me to retaliate, and such things may come out, as will shock your relations to hear."	"retaliate": Origin: Latin retāliātus. (Liber et Libri origin note, https://en.wiktionary.org/wiki/retaliate#Etymology)
applying (verb)	asking; appealing (to someone)	"I can answer your question," said Fitzwilliam, "without applying to him.

scruple (verb)	to hesitate because of moral doubt	His eyes had been soon and repeatedly turned towards them with a look of curiosity; and that her ladyship after a while shared the feeling, was more openly acknowledged, for she did not scruple to call out—
conversing (verb)	carry on a conversation	"I certainly have not the talent which some people possess," said Darcy, "of conversing easily with those I have never seen before.
frighten (verb)	cause fear in	"You mean to frighten me, Mr.
considerably (adverb)	to a great extent or degree	Colonel Fitzwilliam's manners were very much admired at the parsonage, and the ladies all felt that he must add considerably to the pleasure of their engagements at Rosings.

Discussion questions

1. Elizabeth compares manners to piano practice. Is that a fair comparison?
2. Where does characterization appear in this chapter, and what effect does it have? Point to one passage.
3. How does this chapter connect to the book's larger concern with first impressions and prejudice?

Classroom discussion questions (30, tiered)

Wait time after every question (3 s for DOK 1, 5 s for DOK 2, 8 to 10 s for DOK 3 and 4); think-pair-share on DOK 3 and 4; answer each response with a follow-up probe; close with student-generated questions. Focus sets by rigor level: Scaffolded support: 1, 2, 3, 4, 5, 6, 11, 12, 13, 14, 21, 22; HS Freshman: 1, 2, 3, 4, 5, 12, 13, 14, 15, 22, 23, 24; HS Sophomore: 1, 2, 3, 4, 13, 14, 15, 16, 17, 23, 24, 25; HS Junior: 1, 2, 3, 14, 15, 16, 17, 18, 24, 25, 26, 27; HS Senior: 1, 2, 3, 15, 16, 17, 18, 25, 26, 27, 28, 29; AP: 1, 2, 16, 17, 18, 19, 20, 26, 27, 28, 29, 30; College Freshman: 1, 2, 17, 18, 19, 20, 21, 22, 27, 28, 29, 30; College Sophomore: 1, 2, 11, 18, 19, 20, 21, 22, 23, 28, 29, 30; College Junior: 1, 11, 12, 19, 20, 21, 22, 23, 24, 25, 29, 30; College Senior: 1, 11, 12, 13, 20, 21, 22, 23, 24, 25, 26, 30; Graduate / PhD: 1, 11, 12, 13, 21, 22, 23, 24, 25, 26, 27, 28

Literal / recall

1. Who draws Elizabeth into lively conversation? [DOK 1 · coldCallWithSupport · wait 3 s · AP: unit standards] Look for: Colonel Fitzwilliam
2. What instrument does Elizabeth play? [DOK 1 · turnAndTalk · wait 3 s · AP: unit standards] Look for: The piano
3. What earlier event does she tease Darcy about? [DOK 1 · coldCallWithSupport · wait 3 s · AP: unit standards] Look for: Not dancing at Meryton
4. What does Darcy say he lacks? [DOK 1 · turnAndTalk · wait 3 s · AP: unit standards] Look for: The talent of easy conversation with strangers
5. What idea does Elizabeth's reply suggest? [DOK 1 · coldCallWithSupport · wait 3 s · AP: unit standards] Look for: Manners can improve with practice
6. Retell the three most important events of "Chapter XXXI" in order, in one sentence each. [DOK 1 · turnAndTalk · wait 3 s · AP: unit standards] Look for: At Rosings, Colonel Fitzwilliam's lively talk draws Elizabeth to the piano. Darcy stands near, and she teases him about refusing to dance at Meryton. Darcy says he lacks the talent of conversing easily with strangers; Elizabeth replies that her playing would improve with practice, as his manners might. Lady Catherine interrupts with loud opinions.

7. Which characters appear or are mentioned in “Chapter XXXI”? Name two and one thing each says or does. [DOK 1 · coldCallWithSupport · wait 3 s · AP: unit standards] Look for: Names and actions taken from the chapter; check against the teacher summary.
8. Where and when does “Chapter XXXI” take place? Point to the line that tells you. [DOK 1 · turnAndTalk · wait 3 s · AP: unit standards] Look for: A place/time detail quoted from the chapter.
9. Reread: “My courage always rises with every attempt to intimidate me.”” What does “intimidate” mean here, and what is literally happening in this line? [DOK 1 · turnAndTalk · wait 3 s · AP: unit standards] Look for: intimidate: to frighten in order to control.
10. Reread: “If I had ever learnt, I should have been a great proficient.” What does “proficient” mean here, and what is literally happening in this line? [DOK 1 · turnAndTalk · wait 3 s · AP: unit standards] Look for: proficient: an expert; a skilled person.

Inferential / analytical

1. What does “Chapter XXXI” suggest about music, wit and manners? State the inference and the line that supports it. [DOK 2 · thinkPairShare · wait 5 s · AP-LIT.LAN] Look for: Elizabeth's analogy about practice suggests manners, like skills, can be learned—an idea about self-improvement.
2. Find one example of characterization in this chapter. What does it reveal that a plain statement would not? [DOK 2 · followUp · wait 5 s · AP-LIT.CHR] Look for: Look for what characters say, do and think, and how others react to them.
3. How does the irony in this chapter shape what we understand about music, wit and manners? [DOK 3 · thinkPairShare · wait 8 s · AP-LIT.NAR] Look for: Look for gaps between what characters expect or say and what is true. Answer guidance: A defensible line of argument: The piano scene offers a sympathetic explanation of Darcy's manners that Elizabeth does not take seriously. Useful evidence: “I certainly have not the talent which some people possess … of conversing easily with those I have never seen before” (Chapter XXXI, paragraph 24): Darcy's self-defense: shyness, not contempt? Theme link: Elizabeth answers with an analogy to her own unpractised playing: skill comes from practice, not talent. Credit any position that is supported by quotation and reasoning; push one-sided answers to address the strongest counterpoint.
4. In the passage that begins “Colonel Fitzwilliam’s manners were very much admired at the parsonage, and the ladies all felt that he must add considerably to the pleasure of their engagements at Rosings.”, why might Austen have chosen these particular words? Pick two and explain their connotations. [DOK 2 · followUp · wait 5 s · AP-LIT.FIG] Look for: Diction analysis of two words in the anchor passage.
5. What causes the main turn in “Chapter XXXI”, and what effect is it likely to have on what follows? [DOK 2 · followUp · wait 5 s · AP-LIT.STR] Look for: At Rosings, Colonel Fitzwilliam's lively talk draws Elizabeth to the piano. Darcy stands near, and she teases him about refusing to dance at Meryton. Darcy says he lacks the talent of conversing easily with strangers; Elizabeth replies that her playing would improve with practice, as his manners…
6. How does “Chapter XXXI” build on “Chapter XXX”? Name one link of cause and effect. [DOK 3 · thinkPairShare · wait 8 s · AP-LIT.STR] Look for: A causal or structural link between this and the previous chapter. Answer guidance: A defensible line of argument: The piano scene offers a sympathetic explanation of Darcy's manners that Elizabeth does not take seriously. Useful evidence: “My fingers … do not move over this instrument in the masterly manner which I see so many women’s do” (Chapter XXXI, paragraph 25):

Elizabeth's rebuttal by analogy. Theme link: Elizabeth answers with an analogy to her own unpractised playing: skill comes from practice, not talent. Credit any position that is supported by quotation and reasoning; push one-sided answers to address the strongest counterpoint.

7. What can we infer about a character's motives from what they say and do here, as opposed to what they claim? [DOK 3 · followUp · wait 8 s · AP-LIT.CHR] Look for: An inference about motive supported by a quoted line.
   Answer guidance: A defensible line of argument: The piano scene offers a sympathetic explanation of Darcy's manners that Elizabeth does not take seriously. Useful evidence: “We neither of us perform to strangers” (Chapter XXXI, paragraph 26): Darcy's reply suggests kinship between them. On characterization: Darcy's reply, possibly shy rather than proud, is the first sign of another explanation for his manner. Credit any position that is supported by quotation and reasoning; push one-sided answers to address the strongest counterpoint.
8. The bell-ringer asked: “Elizabeth compares manners to piano practice. Is that a fair comparison?” Now that we have read closely, how would you revise your first answer, and which line changed your mind? [DOK 2 · thinkPairShare · wait 5 s · AP-LIT.LAN] Look for: A revised answer anchored in the text.
9. Where does theme appear, and how does it connect this chapter to the larger concern with first impressions and prejudice? [DOK 3 · followUp · wait 8 s · AP-LIT.LAN] Look for: Look for statements or moments that connect to the book's big ideas.
   Answer guidance: A defensible line of argument: The piano scene offers a sympathetic explanation of Darcy's manners that Elizabeth does not take seriously. Useful evidence: “I certainly have not the talent which some people possess … of conversing easily with those I have never seen before” (Chapter XXXI, paragraph 24): Darcy's self-defense: shyness, not contempt? Theme link: Elizabeth answers with an analogy to her own unpractised playing: skill comes from practice, not talent. Credit any position that is supported by quotation and reasoning; push one-sided answers to address the strongest counterpoint.
10. Background: Musical performance was a social display for marriageable young women. How does knowing this change the way you read one moment in the chapter? [DOK 3 · thinkPairShare · wait 8 s · AP-LIT.SET] Look for: A specific moment reread in light of the context.
    Answer guidance: A defensible line of argument: The piano scene offers a sympathetic explanation of Darcy's manners that Elizabeth does not take seriously. Useful evidence: “My fingers … do not move over this instrument in the masterly manner which I see so many women’s do” (Chapter XXXI, paragraph 25): Elizabeth's rebuttal by analogy. Theme link: Elizabeth answers with an analogy to her own unpractised playing: skill comes from practice, not talent. Credit any position that is supported by quotation and reasoning; push one-sided answers to address the strongest counterpoint.

Evaluative / synthesis / creative

1. A critic might argue: “Elizabeth's analogy about practice suggests manners, like skills, can be learned—an idea about self-improvement.” How far do you agree? Take a stand and defend it with two lines from the chapter. [DOK 3 · fourCorners · wait 8 s · AP-LIT.LAN] Look for: A defended position with evidence and one counterpoint.
   Answer guidance: A defensible line of argument: The piano scene offers a sympathetic explanation of Darcy's manners that Elizabeth does not take seriously. Useful evidence: “We neither of us perform to strangers” (Chapter XXXI, paragraph 26): Darcy's reply suggests kinship between them. Theme link: Elizabeth answers with an analogy to her own unpractised playing: skill comes from practice, not talent.

Credit any position that is supported by quotation and reasoning; push one-sided answers to address the strongest counterpoint.

2. Which character in this chapter acts most wisely, and which least? Judge them by a standard you name. [DOK 3 · thinkPairShare · wait 8 s · AP-LIT.CHR, AP-LIT.LAN] Look for: An evaluation using an explicit criterion and evidence.

   Answer guidance: A defensible line of argument: The piano scene offers a sympathetic explanation of Darcy's manners that Elizabeth does not take seriously. Useful evidence: “I certainly have not the talent which some people possess … of conversing easily with those I have never seen before” (Chapter XXXI, paragraph 24): Darcy's self-defense: shyness, not contempt? On characterization: Darcy's reply, possibly shy rather than proud, is the first sign of another explanation for his manner. Credit any position that is supported by quotation and reasoning; push one-sided answers to address the strongest counterpoint.

3. Rewrite one moment of “Chapter XXXI” from the point of view of a different character. What does the new angle reveal or hide about music, wit and manners? [DOK 4 · thinkPairShare · wait 8 s · AP-LIT.LAN, AP-LIT.NAR] Look for: A creative product with a rationale tied to the text.

   Answer guidance: A defensible line of argument: The piano scene offers a sympathetic explanation of Darcy's manners that Elizabeth does not take seriously. Useful evidence: “My fingers … do not move over this instrument in the masterly manner which I see so many women’s do” (Chapter XXXI, paragraph 25): Elizabeth's rebuttal by analogy. Theme link: Elizabeth answers with an analogy to her own unpractised playing: skill comes from practice, not talent. Credit any position that is supported by quotation and reasoning; push one-sided answers to address the strongest counterpoint.

4. Write three questions of your own about “Chapter XXXI”: one recall, one “why/how”, and one “should/what if”. Trade with a partner and answer theirs. [DOK 3 · studentGenerated · wait 8 s · AP-LIT.LAN] Look for: Student-generated questions at three levels.

   Answer guidance: A defensible line of argument: The piano scene offers a sympathetic explanation of Darcy's manners that Elizabeth does not take seriously. Useful evidence: “We neither of us perform to strangers” (Chapter XXXI, paragraph 26): Darcy's reply suggests kinship between them. Theme link: Elizabeth answers with an analogy to her own unpractised playing: skill comes from practice, not talent. Credit any position that is supported by quotation and reasoning; push one-sided answers to address the strongest counterpoint.

5. Connect this chapter to pride and self-knowledge: is the link strong or weak so far? What would Austen need to show next to strengthen it? [DOK 4 · socraticCircle · wait 8 s · AP-LIT.LAN] Look for: A judgment of thematic development across the work.

   Answer guidance: A defensible line of argument: The piano scene offers a sympathetic explanation of Darcy's manners that Elizabeth does not take seriously. Useful evidence: “I certainly have not the talent which some people possess … of conversing easily with those I have never seen before” (Chapter XXXI, paragraph 24): Darcy's self-defense: shyness, not contempt? Theme link: Elizabeth answers with an analogy to her own unpractised playing: skill comes from practice, not talent. Credit any position that is supported by quotation and reasoning; push one-sided answers to address the strongest counterpoint.

6. Is the characterization in this chapter effective, or does it feel heavy-handed? Evaluate it as a reader would in a review. [DOK 3 · fourCorners · wait 8 s · AP-LIT.CHR, AP-LIT.LAN] Look for: An evaluative judgment with criteria and evidence.

   Answer guidance: A defensible line of argument: The piano scene offers a sympathetic explanation of Darcy's manners that Elizabeth does not take seriously. Useful evidence: “My fingers … do not move over this instrument in the masterly manner which I see so many women's do" (Chapter XXXI, paragraph 25): Elizabeth's rebuttal by analogy. On characterization: Darcy's reply, possibly shy rather than proud, is the first sign of another explanation for his manner. Credit any position that is supported by quotation and reasoning; push one-sided answers to address the strongest counterpoint.

7. Compare how "Chapter XXXI" treats music, wit and manners with how another text, film or event you know treats a similar idea. What does Pride and Prejudice see that the other misses? [DOK 4 · socraticCircle · wait 8 s · AP-LIT.LAN] Look for: A cross-text synthesis.

   Answer guidance: A defensible line of argument: The piano scene offers a sympathetic explanation of Darcy's manners that Elizabeth does not take seriously. Useful evidence: "We neither of us perform to strangers" (Chapter XXXI, paragraph 26): Darcy's reply suggests kinship between them. Theme link: Elizabeth answers with an analogy to her own unpractised playing: skill comes from practice, not talent. Credit any position that is supported by quotation and reasoning; push one-sided answers to address the strongest counterpoint.

8. Predict what "Chapter XXXII" will bring, using two clues from this chapter. After reading, evaluate your prediction. [DOK 3 · thinkPairShare · wait 8 s · AP-LIT.LAN, AP-LIT.STR] Look for: A prediction or judgment justified with textual clues.

   Answer guidance: A defensible line of argument: The piano scene offers a sympathetic explanation of Darcy's manners that Elizabeth does not take seriously. Useful evidence: "I certainly have not the talent which some people possess … of conversing easily with those I have never seen before" (Chapter XXXI, paragraph 24): Darcy's self-defense: shyness, not contempt? Theme link: Elizabeth answers with an analogy to her own unpractised playing: skill comes from practice, not talent. Credit any position that is supported by quotation and reasoning; push one-sided answers to address the strongest counterpoint.

9. Design a one-paragraph modern adaptation of this chapter (setting, characters, conflict). What must stay the same for it to still be about music, wit and manners? [DOK 4 · thinkPairShare · wait 8 s · AP-LIT.LAN] Look for: A creative transfer that keeps the core idea.

   Answer guidance: A defensible line of argument: The piano scene offers a sympathetic explanation of Darcy's manners that Elizabeth does not take seriously. Useful evidence: "My fingers … do not move over this instrument in the masterly manner which I see so many women's do" (Chapter XXXI, paragraph 25): Elizabeth's rebuttal by analogy. Theme link: Elizabeth answers with an analogy to her own unpractised playing: skill comes from practice, not talent. Credit any position that is supported by quotation and reasoning; push one-sided answers to address the strongest counterpoint.

10. What question would you most like to ask Jane Austen about this chapter, and what answer do you think the text itself gives? [DOK 4 · studentGenerated · wait 8 s · AP-LIT.LAN] Look for: A student-generated question answered from evidence.

    Answer guidance: A defensible line of argument: The piano scene offers a sympathetic explanation of Darcy's manners that Elizabeth does not take seriously. Useful evidence: "We neither of us perform to strangers" (Chapter XXXI, paragraph 26): Darcy's reply suggests kinship between them. Theme link: Elizabeth answers with an analogy to her own unpractised playing: skill comes from practice, not talent. Credit any position that is supported by quotation and reasoning; push one-sided answers to address the strongest counterpoint.

Annotation focus

- Characterization: look for what characters say, do and think, and how others react to them (anchor passage in the We do segment)
- Also notice Irony: gaps between what characters expect or say and what is true
- Also notice Theme: statements or moments that connect to the book's big ideas

Chapter quiz: item bank (all eleven rigor versions)

1. [fill · recall · DOK 1] Complete the quotation from Chapter XXXI, paragraph 25: “My fingers … do not move over this _____ in the masterly manner which I see so many women’s do”
   Key: instrument
2. [mc · recall · DOK 1] Which word completes this sentence from Chapter XXXI, paragraph 3? “He now seated himself by her, and talked so agreeably of Kent and Hertfordshire, of travelling and staying at home, of new books and music, that Elizabeth had never been half so well _____ in that room before”
   A. parsonage
   B. entertained
   C. gentlemen
   D. delightfully
   Key: B (entertained)
3. [fill · recall · DOK 1] Complete the quotation from Chapter XXXI, paragraph 8: “I am very glad to hear such a good account of her,’ said Lady Catherine; ‘and pray tell her from me, that she cannot expect to excel, if she does not _____ a great deal.” Word bank: parsonage, breeding, practise, listened
   Key: practise
4. [fill · recall · DOK 1] Fill in the blank with the vocabulary word that fits: “You mean to _____ me, Mr.” Word bank: intimidate, retaliate, proficient, frighten
   Key: frighten
5. [mc · recall · DOK 1] In the line “I can answer your question,’ said Fitzwilliam, ‘without applying to him.”, what does “applying” most nearly mean?
   A. be a witness to
   B. leave or give by will after one's death
   C. asking; appealing (to someone)
   D. helped; given an advantage
   Key: C (asking; appealing (to someone))
6. [mc · recall · DOK 1] What earlier event does she tease Darcy about?
   A. His wealth
   B. Wickham
   C. Not dancing at Meryton
   D. His letter
   Key: C (Not dancing at Meryton)

7. [fill · recall · DOK 1] Complete the quotation from Chapter XXXI, paragraph 24: “I certainly have not the talent which some people possess … of _____ easily with those I have never seen before”

   Key: conversing

8. [mc · recall · DOK 1] What idea does Elizabeth's reply suggest?

   A. Manners can improve with practice

   B. Rank is everything

   C. Talent is fixed

   D. Music is useless

   Key: A (Manners can improve with practice)

9. [mc · recall · DOK 1] Who draws Elizabeth into lively conversation?

   A. Mr. Collins

   B. Sir William

   C. Colonel Fitzwilliam

   D. Mr. Bingley

   Key: C (Colonel Fitzwilliam)

10. [mc · recall · DOK 1] Which word completes this sentence from Chapter XXXI, paragraph 18? “He danced only four dances, though _____ were scarce; and, to my certain knowledge, more than one young lady was sitting down in want of a partner.”

    A. alarmed

    B. seeing

    C. gentlemen

    D. listened

    Key: C (gentlemen)

11. [short · inference · DOK 2] What does this passage from Chapter XXXI, paragraph 19 reveal about the character or situation? “I had not at that time the honour of knowing any lady in the assembly beyond my own party.” Answer in two or three sentences with one detail.

    Sample answer: The passage (Chapter XXXI, paragraph 19) shows the situation turning on first impressions and prejudice: Elizabeth answers with an analogy to her own unpractised playing: skill comes from practice, not talent. The words “assembly” and “knowing” are the proof, because they show how the moment looks to the people in it. They suggest more than the narrator states outright.

12. [short · inference · DOK 2] What does this passage from Chapter XXXI, paragraph 1 reveal about the character or situation? “For the last week they had seen very little of either Lady Catherine or her daughter.” Answer in two or three sentences with one detail.

    Sample answer: The passage (Chapter XXXI, paragraph 1) shows the situation turning on first impressions and prejudice: Elizabeth answers with an analogy to her own unpractised playing: skill comes from practice, not talent. The words “daughter” and “either” are the proof, because they show how the moment looks to the people in it. They suggest more than the narrator states outright.

13. [mc · inference · DOK 2] Which choice best states a central concern of “Chapter XXXI”?

    A. The second proposal

    B. Family uproar

    C. The Brighton plan

D. Music, wit and manners

Key: D (Music, wit and manners)

14. [short · analysis · DOK 3] Analyze how the word choice in this passage from Chapter XXXI, paragraph 24 shapes its tone: “I cannot catch their tone of conversation, or appear interested in their concerns, as I often see done.” Pick two words and explain their effect.
Sample answer: The words “conversation” and “interested” (Chapter XXXI, paragraph 24) make the tone heavy and deliberate rather than neutral. That weight points the reader to class and social mobility: Elizabeth answers with an analogy to her own unpractised playing: skill comes from practice, not talent. The author chooses them so the moment feels significant instead of passing.

15. [short · analysis · DOK 3] Analyze how the word choice in this passage from Chapter XXXI, paragraph 9 shapes its tone: “I assure you, Madam,’ he replied, ‘that she does not need such advice.” Pick two words and explain their effect.
Sample answer: The words “replied” and “advice” (Chapter XXXI, paragraph 9) make the tone heavy and deliberate rather than neutral. That weight points the reader to pride and self-knowledge: Elizabeth answers with an analogy to her own unpractised playing: skill comes from practice, not talent. The author chooses them so the moment feels significant instead of passing.

16. [short · synthesis · DOK 4] Connect this passage from Chapter XXXI, paragraph 30 to the story's treatment of women's limited choices: “Lady Catherine continued her remarks on Elizabeth’s performance, mixing with them many instructions on execution and taste.” Use one other moment from the story as well.
Sample answer: This passage (Chapter XXXI, paragraph 30) develops women's limited choices: Elizabeth answers with an analogy to her own unpractised playing: skill comes from practice, not talent. Its words “instructions” and “performance” carry that idea into this moment. The same concern returns in “For the last week they had seen very little of either Lady Catherine or her daughter.” (Chapter XXXI, paragraph 1), so the two passages read as a pattern, not a single moment. Together they show the story treating women's limited choices as central.

17. [mc · recall · DOK 1] What instrument does Elizabeth play?
A. The violin
B. The flute
C. The piano
D. The harp

Key: C (The piano)

18. [fill · recall · DOK 1] Fill in the blank with the vocabulary word that fits: “Colonel Fitzwilliam’s manners were very much admired at the parsonage, and the ladies all felt that he must add _____ to the pleasure of their engagements at Rosings.” Word bank: considerably, intimidate, proficient, retaliate
Key: considerably

19. [fill · recall · DOK 1] Complete the quotation from Chapter XXXI, paragraph 14: “I shall not say that you are mistaken,’ he replied, ‘because you could not really believe me to _____ any design of alarming you” Word bank: breeding, listened, entertain, alarmed
Key: entertain

20. [fill · recall · DOK 1] Fill in the blank with the vocabulary word that fits: “I certainly have not the talent which some people possess,’ said Darcy, ‘of _____ easily with those I have never seen before.” Word bank: retaliate, conversing, intimidate, proficient
Key: conversing

21. [fill · recall · DOK 1] Complete the quotation from Chapter XXXI, paragraph 1: “It was some days, however, before they received any _____ thither, for while there were visitors in the house, they could not be necessary” Word bank: breeding, invitation, acceptable, parsonage

    Key: invitation

22. [short · analysis · DOK 3] Claim: The piano scene offers a sympathetic explanation of Darcy's manners that Elizabeth does not take seriously. Explain how this evidence supports the claim: “We neither of us perform to strangers” (Chapter XXXI, paragraph 26).

    Sample answer: He says he lacks "the talent which some people possess ... of conversing easily with those I have never seen before," and adds "we neither of us perform to strangers," suggesting shyness and a likeness between them; she treats it as a joke. The evidence is “We neither of us perform to strangers” (Chapter XXXI, paragraph 26) — Darcy's reply suggests kinship between them. This develops pride and prejudice: Elizabeth answers with an analogy to her own unpractised playing: skill comes from practice, not talent.

23. [mc · analysis · DOK 3] Which literary element does this describe in “Chapter XXXI”? Darcy's reply, possibly shy rather than proud, is the first sign of another explanation for his manner.

    A. Setting

    B. Alliteration

    C. Characterization

    D. Simile

    Key: C (Characterization)

24. [short · synthesis · DOK 4] Connect this passage from Chapter XXXI, paragraph 12 to the story's treatment of women's limited choices: “Elizabeth saw what he was doing, and at the first convenient pause, turned to him with an arch smile, and said—” Use one other moment from the story as well.

    Sample answer: This passage (Chapter XXXI, paragraph 12) develops women's limited choices: Elizabeth answers with an analogy to her own unpractised playing: skill comes from practice, not talent. Its words “convenient” and “turned” carry that idea into this moment. The same concern returns in “When coffee was over, Colonel Fitzwilliam reminded Elizabeth of having promised to play to him; and she sat down…” (Chapter XXXI, paragraph 12), so the two passages read as a pattern, not a single moment. Together they show the story treating women's limited choices as central.

25. [fill · recall · DOK 1] Complete the quotation from Chapter XXXI, paragraph 26: “We neither of us perform to _____”

    Key: strangers

26. [fill · recall · DOK 1] Fill in the blank with the vocabulary word that fits: “His eyes had been soon and repeatedly turned towards them with a look of curiosity; and that her ladyship after a while shared the feeling, was more openly acknowledged, for she did not _____ to call out—” Word bank: retaliate, proficient, scruple, intimidate

    Key: scruple

27. [mc · recall · DOK 1] In the line “If I had ever learnt, I should have been a great proficient.”, what does “proficient” most nearly mean?

    A. calmed

    B. pause or hold back in uncertainty or unwillingness

    C. an expert; a skilled person

    D. leads into a wrong idea

    Key: C (an expert; a skilled person)

28. [mc · recall · DOK 1] In the line “Darcy, it is very ungenerous in you to mention all that you knew to my disadvantage in Hertfordshire—and, give me leave to say, very impolitic too—for it is provoking me to retaliate, and such things may come out, as…”, what does “retaliate” most nearly mean?

    A. get or ask advice from

    B. receiving property after someone's death

    C. running away secretly to marry

    D. to strike back

    Key: D (to strike back)

29. [mc · recall · DOK 1] What does Darcy say he lacks?

    A. Courage

    B. The talent of easy conversation with strangers

    C. Money

    D. Taste

    Key: B (The talent of easy conversation with strangers)

30. [short · analysis · DOK 3] Analyze how the word choice in this passage from Chapter XXXI, paragraph 6 shapes its tone: “And so would Anne, if her health had allowed her to apply.” Pick two words and explain their effect.

    Sample answer: The words “allowed” and “health” (Chapter XXXI, paragraph 6) make the tone heavy and deliberate rather than neutral. That weight points the reader to class and social mobility: Elizabeth answers with an analogy to her own unpractised playing: skill comes from practice, not talent. The author chooses them so the moment feels significant instead of passing.

31. [short · synthesis · DOK 4] Synthesis: trace how pride and prejudice develops from Chapter XXIX to Chapter XXXI. Use one quotation from each.

    Sample answer: Earlier, in Chapter XXIX, paragraph 11, the text reads “Lady Catherine was a tall, large woman, with strongly-marked features” — Description. In Chapter XXXI, “I certainly have not the talent which some people possess … of conversing easily with those I have never seen before” (Chapter XXXI, paragraph 24) — Darcy's self-defense: shyness, not contempt?. Elizabeth answers with an analogy to her own unpractised playing: skill comes from practice, not talent.

32. [mc · recall · DOK 1 · AP: AP-LIT.FIG] In the line “My courage always rises with every attempt to intimidate me.”, what does “intimidate” most nearly mean?

    A. pick out, select, or choose from a number of alternatives

    B. a word of one syllable

    C. people who have recently arrived

    D. to frighten in order to control

    Key: D (to frighten in order to control)

33. [short · analysis · DOK 3 · AP: AP-LIT.FIG] Analyze how the word choice in this passage from Chapter XXXI, paragraph 27 shapes its tone: “Here they were interrupted by Lady Catherine, who called out to know what they were talking of.” Pick two words and explain their effect.

    Sample answer: The words “interrupted” and “talking” (Chapter XXXI, paragraph 27) make the tone heavy and deliberate rather than neutral. That weight points the reader to pride and self-knowledge: Elizabeth answers with an analogy to her own unpractised playing: skill comes from practice, not talent. The author chooses them so the moment feels significant instead of passing.

34. [short · synthesis · DOK 4 · AP: AP-LIT.LAN] Evaluate this claim about the chapter: “The piano scene offers a sympathetic explanation of Darcy's manners that Elizabeth does not take seriously.” Is it fully persuasive? Argue with evidence, including a passage that complicates it.

    Sample answer: The claim is persuasive in part. “We neither of us perform to strangers” (Chapter XXXI, paragraph 26) supports it: He says he lacks "the talent which some people possess ... of conversing easily with those I have never seen before," and adds "we neither of us perform to strangers," suggesting shyness and a likeness between them; she treats it as a joke. But “I certainly have not the talent which some people possess … of conversing easily with those I have never seen before” (Chapter XXXI, paragraph 24) complicates it: Darcy's self-defense: shyness, not contempt?, and its “not” marks a limit or reversal the claim passes over. Weighing the two passages, the claim survives, but only once it admits the tension the second passage creates.

35. [short · inference · DOK 2 · AP: AP-LIT.CHR] What can you infer from this line? “My fingers … do not move over this instrument in the masterly manner which I see so many women’s do” (Chapter XXXI, paragraph 25) Answer in two or three sentences with one detail.

    Sample answer: Elizabeth's rebuttal by analogy. The evidence is “My fingers … do not move over this instrument in the masterly manner which I see so many women’s do” (Chapter XXXI, paragraph 25).

36. [short · synthesis · DOK 4 · AP: AP-LIT.LAN] Connect this passage from Chapter XXXI, paragraph 15 to the story's treatment of marriage and money: “I am particularly unlucky in meeting with a person so well able to expose my real character, in a part of the world, where I had hoped to pass myself off with some degree of credit.” Use one other moment from the story as well.

    Sample answer: This passage (Chapter XXXI, paragraph 15) develops marriage and money: Elizabeth answers with an analogy to her own unpractised playing: skill comes from practice, not talent. Its words “particularly” and “character” carry that idea into this moment. The same concern returns in “I am sorry to pain you—but so it was.” (Chapter XXXI, paragraph 18), so the two passages read as a pattern, not a single moment. Together they show the story treating marriage and money as central.

37. [mc · recall · DOK 1 · Dual Credit (Indiana College Core): ICC-WC-1.5] Which word completes this sentence from Chapter XXXI, paragraph 11? “Mr. Darcy looked a little ashamed of his aunt’s ill _____, and made no answer.”

    A. delightfully
    B. breeding
    C. acceptable
    D. invitation

    Key: B (breeding)

38. [mc · analysis · DOK 3 · Dual Credit (Indiana College Core): ICC-WC-1.5] Which literary element does this describe in “Chapter XXXI”? At the piano Elizabeth teases Darcy about his behaviour at the Meryton ball; he answers that he lacks the ‘talent’ of conversing easily with strangers.

    A. Personification
    B. Dialogue
    C. Theme
    D. Imagery

    Key: B (Dialogue)

39. [short · synthesis · DOK 4 · Dual Credit (Indiana College Core): ICC-WC-1.5] Close reading: how do the diction and syntax of “I certainly have not the talent which some people possess … of conversing easily with those I have never seen before” (Chapter XXXI, paragraph 24) shape its meaning? Consider a second, competing reading.

Sample answer: Darcy's self-defense: shyness, not contempt?. The evidence is “I certainly have not the talent which some people possess … of conversing easily with those I have never seen before” (Chapter XXXI, paragraph 24). This develops pride and prejudice: Elizabeth answers with an analogy to her own unpractised playing: skill comes from practice, not talent. The words “conversing” and “certainly” carry that meaning: they are the charged choices in the line, and changing either would soften the effect. He says he lacks "the talent which some people possess ... of conversing easily with those I have never seen before," and adds "we neither of us perform to strangers," suggesting shyness and a likeness between them; she treats it as a joke.

40. [mc · inference · DOK 2 · Program outcome: LeL-C2-LIT-1] What does this passage most clearly show? “We neither of us perform to strangers” (Chapter XXXI, paragraph 26)

    A. Lydia treats the elopement as a joke at her friend's expense.

    B. Pemberley's taste mirrors character.

    C. Darcy's reply suggests kinship between them.

    D. The narrator steps in to defend a love based on esteem rather than "first sight."

    Key: C (Darcy's reply suggests kinship between them.)

41. [short · synthesis · DOK 4 · Program outcome: LeL-C2-LIT-1] Close reading: how do the diction and syntax of “My fingers … do not move over this instrument in the masterly manner which I see so many women’s do” (Chapter XXXI, paragraph 25) shape its meaning? Consider a second, competing reading.

    Sample answer: Elizabeth's rebuttal by analogy. The evidence is “My fingers … do not move over this instrument in the masterly manner which I see so many women’s do” (Chapter XXXI, paragraph 25). This develops pride and prejudice: Elizabeth answers with an analogy to her own unpractised playing: skill comes from practice, not talent. The words “instrument” and “masterly” carry that meaning: they are the charged choices in the line, and changing either would soften the effect. He says he lacks "the talent which some people possess ... of conversing easily with those I have never seen before," and adds "we neither of us perform to strangers," suggesting shyness and a likeness between them; she treats it as a joke.

42. [mc · inference · DOK 2 · Program outcome: LeL-C4-LIT-1] What does this passage most clearly show? “I certainly have not the talent which some people possess … of conversing easily with those I have never seen before” (Chapter XXXI, paragraph 24)

    A. Darcy's self-defense: shyness, not contempt?

    B. Elizabeth's judgment of Collins from his style: here her quick judgment is right.

    C. Wickham's interest shifts to an heiress, Miss King.

    D. Mrs. Bennet swears off Bingley moments before her husband reveals he has already visited him.

    Key: A (Darcy's self-defense: shyness, not contempt?)

43. [short · analysis · DOK 3 · Program outcome: LeL-C4-LIT-1] Analyze the word choice in “We neither of us perform to strangers” (Chapter XXXI, paragraph 26). Pick two words and explain what they suggest.

    Sample answer: Darcy's reply suggests kinship between them. The evidence is “We neither of us perform to strangers” (Chapter XXXI, paragraph 26). This develops pride and prejudice: Elizabeth answers with an analogy to her own unpractised playing: skill comes from practice, not talent. The words “strangers” and “neither” carry that meaning: they are the charged choices in the line, and changing either would soften the effect.

Rigor version	Items (in order)	Mix

Scaffolded support	1, 2, 3, 4, 5, 6, 7, 8, 9, 10, 11, 12, 13, 14, 15, 16	recall 10, inference 3, analysis 2, synthesis 1
HS Freshman	10, 17, 6, 18, 19, 20, 21, 1, 3, 4, 12, 11, 15, 22, 23, 24	recall 10, inference 2, analysis 3, synthesis 1
HS Sophomore	10, 25, 26, 2, 8, 27, 21, 28, 29, 12, 11, 30, 14, 15, 16, 31	recall 9, inference 2, analysis 3, synthesis 2
HS Junior	26, 10, 4, 20, 9, 32, 27, 8, 11, 12, 14, 15, 33, 23, 24, 31	recall 8, inference 2, analysis 4, synthesis 2
HS Senior	26, 2, 3, 8, 29, 17, 21, 12, 11, 33, 14, 15, 22, 34, 24, 16	recall 7, inference 2, analysis 4, synthesis 3
AP	9, 4, 3, 17, 6, 13, 35, 30, 33, 14, 15, 24, 34, 31, 16, 36	recall 5, inference 2, analysis 4, synthesis 5
College Freshman	8, 9, 37, 26, 4, 35, 14, 15, 30, 33, 38, 34, 31, 16, 24, 39	recall 5, inference 1, analysis 5, synthesis 5
College Sophomore	17, 32, 26, 20, 13, 40, 15, 14, 33, 30, 36, 24, 31, 34, 41, 16	recall 4, inference 2, analysis 4, synthesis 6
College Junior	4, 17, 26, 9, 6, 13, 35, 33, 30, 14, 15, 24, 31, 36, 34, 16	recall 5, inference 2, analysis 4, synthesis 5
College Senior	28, 26, 4, 9, 42, 15, 30, 33, 23, 14, 43, 24, 31, 34, 36, 16	recall 4, inference 1, analysis 6, synthesis 5
Graduate / PhD	9, 17, 6, 3, 21, 14, 33, 22, 23, 30, 15, 34, 24, 31, 16, 36	recall 5, inference 0, analysis 6, synthesis 5

Writing prompts (eleven rigor levels)

Scaffolded support (250 words; AP: see unit standards): Supported track (work from the passage your teacher selects). In “Chapter XXXI,” how does Austen show music, wit and manners? Write a paragraph that states your claim, quotes two details from the passage, and explains how each detail supports your idea. Use the characterization you noticed as one piece of evidence.

HS Freshman (350 words; AP: see unit standards): In Chapter XXXI, how does Austen develop the idea of music, wit and manners? State a clear claim, support it with two or three quotations, and explain how the characterization in the chapter helps build that idea.

HS Sophomore (450 words; AP: see unit standards): Analyze how Chapter XXXI develops the idea of music, wit and manners. Make a precise claim, support it with at least three pieces of textual evidence, and explain how the author's use of characterization and irony shapes that idea. Address one possible counterclaim.

HS Junior (550 words; AP: see unit standards): Analyze how the structure of Chapter XXXI (where it begins, turns and ends) and its characterization shape the reader's understanding of music, wit and manners. Identify one place where the text leaves matters uncertain and explain how that uncertainty adds to its meaning.

HS Senior (600 words; AP: see unit standards): Two readers disagree about what Chapter XXXI suggests about music, wit and manners. Lay out two plausible interpretations, weigh the evidence for each (including the chapter's characterization and irony), and argue for the stronger one in a sustained, well-organized essay.

AP (650 words; AP: AP-LIT.CHR, AP-LIT.LAN): Write a literary argument in which you analyze how Jane Austen uses characterization in Chapter XXXI to complicate the reader's understanding of music, wit and manners. Develop a defensible thesis, select evidence purposefully, and explain how specific choices of diction and syntax create meaning.

College Freshman (1000 words; AP: see unit standards): Situate Chapter XXXI within its historical and literary context and argue how the chapter's treatment of music, wit and manners responds to that context. Engage with at least one secondary perspective (a critic, historian or the author's own statements), integrate quotations smoothly, and cite in MLA style.

College Sophomore (1250 words; AP: see unit standards): Read Chapter XXXI alongside the conventions of its genre and period. Argue how the chapter's handling of music, wit and manners follows or bends those conventions, using the characterization as evidence, and test your reading against one published critic. Document two secondary sources in MLA.

College Junior (1500 words; AP: see unit standards): Apply a named critical approach (for example formalist, historicist, feminist, psychoanalytic or ecocritical) to Chapter XXXI and its treatment of music, wit and manners. State your method, show what it reveals in the chapter's characterization and irony, and identify where the text resists it.

College Senior (2000 words; AP: see unit standards): Develop a research argument that reads Chapter XXXI as evidence for a larger claim about music, wit and manners in Pride and Prejudice. Connect close reading of the chapter to the whole novel, engage at least four scholarly sources, and state precisely where your reading departs from theirs (Chicago style).

Graduate / PhD (2500 words; AP: see unit standards): Develop an original argument that reads Chapter XXXI as a hinge in the novel's larger treatment of music, wit and manners. Position your reading within a named critical conversation (for example formalist, historicist, psychoanalytic, feminist or postcolonial approaches), account for the textual history where relevant, and articulate the stakes of your intervention for scholarship on Pride and Prejudice.

SAT-style questions

1. Darcy, it is very ungenerous in you to mention all that you knew to my disadvantage in Hertfordshire—and, give me leave to say, very impolitic too—for it is provoking me to retaliate, and such things may come out, as will shock your relations to hear."

   As used in the text, what does the word "retaliate" most nearly mean?

   A. to strike back

   B. cause fear in

   C. carry on a conversation

   D. to a great extent or degree

2. Colonel Fitzwilliam's manners were very much admired at the parsonage, and the ladies all felt that he must add considerably to the pleasure of their engagements at Rosings. It was some days, however, before they received any invitation thither, for while there were visitors in the house, they could not be necessary; and it was not till Easter-day, almost a week after the gentlemen's arrival, that they were honoured by such an attention, and then they were merely asked on leaving church to come there in the evening. For the last week they had seen very little of either Lady Catherine or her daughter. Colonel Fitzwilliam had called at the parsonage more than once during the time, but Mr. Darcy they had only seen at church.

Which choice best states a central concern of "Chapter XXXI"?

A. Scandal

B. Music, wit and manners

C. Disappointment and philosophy

D. An absurd cousin's letter

SAT key: 1. A (to strike back); 2. B (Music, wit and manners)

Lesson 33: Chapter XXXII

Focus: puzzling visits

Objective: Students will analyze how irony develops in “Chapter XXXII” by writing a claim-evidence-reasoning paragraph that cites at least 2 quotations from the section, and will score at least 80% on the section quiz.

Standards: AP: see the unit standards

Teacher only · spoilers

Darcy calls on Elizabeth alone and is uneasy. Charlotte suspects he is in love; Elizabeth dismisses the idea. Darcy keeps meeting her on walks.

Background: Unchaperoned meetings were noticeable in a small community.

Significance: Dramatic irony: readers see what Elizabeth refuses to see.

Lesson plan and lecture script (90 minutes)

0–8 min · Bell-ringer · You do (8 min)
Students write to the bell-ringer, then pair-share.
What clues does Elizabeth miss? Write for five minutes. Starters: I think... because... / This connects to marriage and money because....
Prompt: What clues does Elizabeth miss?
Sentence starters: I think… because… · This connects to marriage and money because…
Strong response: A strong response takes a position and anticipates this: Darcy's comment that "fifty miles of good road" is "a very easy distance" hints at his thoughts.

8–18 min · Vocabulary with etymology notes · I do (10 min)
Four key words in context, with verified word histories.
Today's words: emergence — an emergency; a sudden difficulty (older usage); concise — brief and to the point; recollecting — recall knowledge from memory; have a recollection; steadfast — marked by firm determination or resolution; not shakable. “concise”: Origin: Latin concīsus (“cut short”).
Words: emergence: an emergency; a sudden difficulty (older usage) · concise: brief and to the point · recollecting: recall knowledge from memory; have a recollection · steadfast: marked by firm determination or resolution; not shakable

18–28 min · Background and context · I do (10 min)
Mini-lecture (read or adapt the script).
Unchaperoned meetings were noticeable in a small community. Dramatic irony: readers see what Elizabeth refuses to see. Characterization: Darcy calls alone and finds Elizabeth by herself; their conversation is awkward and strangely personal (about the distance from home and Charlotte's marriage). Irony: The reader sees Darcy considering marriage; Elizabeth is puzzled. Watch for rank and condescension: Rank is displayed and enforced, above all at Rosings by Lady Catherine; Elizabeth refuses to be cowed. In this chapter: "They then sat down, and when her enquiries after Rosings were made, seemed in danger of sinking into total silence. It" (Chapter XXXII, paragraph 3).

28–40 min · I do: modeled close reading · I do (12 min)
Model the close reading of the anchor quotation using the written think-aloud below.
First, meaning. I read "Elizabeth was sitting by herself the next morning, and writing to Jane" slowly and put it in my own words: Elizabeth is alone at the parsonage, writing to Jane, when the doorbell rings. Next, craft. I notice the quiet domestic setting and her private letter to her sister. The strongest word is "writing": her letter to Jane keeps Jane's injury in her mind. Then, effect. Why does Austen show Elizabeth alone and writing to Jane before the visitor arrives? My answer: The quiet scene sets up Darcy's unexpected visit; her thoughts of Jane prepare the anger that will explode at his proposal.

> Elizabeth was sitting by herself the next morning, and writing to Jane (Chapter XXXII, paragraph 1)

Think-aloud: First, meaning. I read "Elizabeth was sitting by herself the next morning, and writing to Jane" slowly and put it in my own words: Elizabeth is alone at the parsonage, writing to Jane, when the doorbell rings. Next, craft. I notice the quiet domestic setting and her private letter to her sister. The strongest word is "writing": her letter to Jane keeps Jane's injury in her mind. Then, effect. Why does Austen show Elizabeth alone and writing to Jane before the visitor arrives? My answer: The quiet scene sets up Darcy's unexpected visit; her thoughts of Jane prepare the anger that will explode at his proposal.

40–55 min · We do: guided annotation · We do (15 min)
Guided analysis of a second quotation; expected answers given.
Ask: What words in this line stand out, and what do they suggest? Expected: Elizabeth's comment on distance. Look at the craft: The reader sees Darcy considering marriage; Elizabeth is puzzled. Ask: How does this line connect to marriage and money? Expected: Darcy's comment that "fifty miles of good road" is "a very easy distance" hints at his thoughts. (Elizabeth's comment on distance.)

> I should never have said Mrs. Collins was settled near her family (Chapter XXXII, paragraph 19)

Ask: What words in this line stand out, and what do they suggest?
Expected answer: Elizabeth's comment on distance. Look at the craft: The reader sees Darcy considering marriage; Elizabeth is puzzled.
Ask: How does this line connect to marriage and money?
Expected answer: Darcy's comment that "fifty miles of good road" is "a very easy distance" hints at his thoughts. (Elizabeth's comment on distance.)

55–70 min · You do: independent annotation · You do (15 min)
Independent annotation and a claim-evidence-reasoning paragraph (exemplar given).
Annotate the chapter for characterization, irony (three marks with a margin note each), then write one claim-evidence-reasoning paragraph: what does this chapter suggest about puzzling visits? Then start your writing prompt at your assigned level (HS Sophomore: Analyze how Chapter XXXII develops the idea of puzzling visits. Make a precise claim, support it with at least three pieces of textual evidence, and explain how the author's use of irony and characterization shapes that idea. Address one possible counterclaim.) Exemplar: Darcy's odd remarks show his intentions to the reader while Elizabeth misses them. When the text says “You cannot have been always at Longbourn” (Chapter XXXII, paragraph 23), it shows this directly. When he says "you cannot have been always at Longbourn," he is suggesting she could live far from home, a hint she does not read.
Task: Annotate the chapter for characterization, irony (three marks with a margin note each), then write one claim-evidence-reasoning paragraph: what does this chapter suggest about puzzling visits? Then start your writing prompt at your assigned level (HS Sophomore: Analyze how Chapter XXXII develops the idea of puzzling visits. Make a precise claim, support it with at least three pieces of textual evidence, and explain how the author's use of irony and characterization shapes that idea. Address one possible counterclaim.)
Exemplar: Darcy's odd remarks show his intentions to the reader while Elizabeth misses them. When the text says “You cannot have been always at Longbourn” (Chapter XXXII, paragraph 23), it shows this directly. When he says "you cannot have been always at Longbourn," he is suggesting she could live far from home, a hint she does not read.

70–80 min · Discussion · We do (10 min)
Structured discussion from the 30 tiered questions, with facilitation notes.
Anchor question: What clues does Elizabeth miss? Ask students to find each moment where Darcy almost says what he means.
Anchor question: What clues does Elizabeth miss?
Facilitation: Ask students to find each moment where Darcy almost says what he means.

80–87 min · Exit ticket / chapter quiz · You do (7 min)
Chapter quiz in the app and an exit ticket (answer given).
Chapter quiz in the app, then: In one sentence, what does this chapter suggest about puzzling visits? Support it with one short quotation. Model answer: Darcy's odd remarks show his intentions to the reader while Elizabeth misses them. (“You cannot have been always at Longbourn”, Chapter XXXII, paragraph 23). Accept any defensible claim backed by a quotation from the chapter; the answer key for the quiz is in the Quiz section.
Exit ticket: In one sentence, what does this chapter suggest about puzzling visits? Support it with one short quotation.
Answer: Model answer: Darcy's odd remarks show his intentions to the reader while Elizabeth misses them. (“You cannot have been always at Longbourn”, Chapter XXXII, paragraph 23). Accept any defensible claim backed by a quotation from the chapter; the answer key for the quiz is in the Quiz section.

> 87–90 min · Closure · I do (3 min)
> Summarize the lesson and preview the next reading.
> Today we saw how characterization shapes puzzling visits. Key takeaway: Darcy's comment that "fifty miles of good road" is "a very easy distance" hints at his thoughts.

Total: 90 minutes.

Teacher analysis (spoilers)

Literary elements

- Characterization: Darcy calls alone and finds Elizabeth by herself; their conversation is awkward and strangely personal (about the distance from home and Charlotte's marriage).
- Irony: The reader sees Darcy considering marriage; Elizabeth is puzzled.

Themes and how they develop

- marriage and money: Darcy's comment that "fifty miles of good road" is "a very easy distance" hints at his thoughts.

Symbols and motifs

- rank and condescension: Rank is displayed and enforced, above all at Rosings by Lady Catherine; Elizabeth refuses to be cowed. In this chapter: “They then sat down, and when her enquiries after Rosings were made, seemed in danger of sinking into total silence. It” (Chapter XXXII, paragraph 3).
- silence and reserve: What characters leave unsaid (Darcy's reserve, Jane's composure, Elizabeth's secrets) drives misunderstanding. In this chapter: “Rosings were made, seemed in danger of sinking into total silence. It was absolutely necessary, therefore, to think of something, and in” (Chapter XXXII, paragraph 3).

Key quotations (checked against the reading text)

- “Elizabeth was sitting by herself the next morning, and writing to Jane” (Chapter XXXII, paragraph 1) Opening.
- “I should never have said Mrs. Collins was settled near her family” (Chapter XXXII, paragraph 19) Elizabeth's comment on distance.
- “You cannot have been always at Longbourn” (Chapter XXXII, paragraph 23) Darcy's personal remark, which startles Elizabeth.

Model claim-evidence-reasoning

Claim: Darcy's odd remarks show his intentions to the reader while Elizabeth misses them.
Evidence: “You cannot have been always at Longbourn” (Chapter XXXII, paragraph 23)
Reasoning: When he says "you cannot have been always at Longbourn," he is suggesting she could live far from home, a hint she does not read.

Vocabulary with etymology notes

Word	Definition (in this sentence)	In context	Word history
emergence (noun)	an emergency; a sudden difficulty (older usage)	It was absolutely necessary, therefore, to think of something, and in this emergence recollecting when she had seen him last in Hertfordshire, and feeling curious to know what he would say on the subject of their hasty departure, she observed—
concise (adjective)	brief and to the point	A short dialogue on the subject of the country ensued, on either side calm and concise—and soon put an end to by the entrance of Charlotte and her sister, just returned from their walk.	"concise": Origin: Latin concīsus ("cut short"). (Liber et Libri origin note, https://en.wiktionary.org/wiki/concise#Etymology)
recollecting (verb)	recall knowledge from memory; have a recollection	It was absolutely necessary, therefore, to think of something, and in this emergence recollecting when she had seen him last in Hertfordshire, and feeling curious to know what he would say on the subject of their hasty departure, she observed—
steadfast (adjective)	marked by firm determination or resolution; not shakable	It was an earnest, steadfast gaze, but she often doubted whether there were much admiration in it, and sometimes it seemed nothing but absence of mind.

Discussion questions

1. What clues does Elizabeth miss?
2. Where does irony appear in this chapter, and what effect does it have? Point to one passage.
3. How does this chapter connect to the book's larger concern with pride and self-knowledge?

Classroom discussion questions (30, tiered)

Wait time after every question (3 s for DOK 1, 5 s for DOK 2, 8 to 10 s for DOK 3 and 4); think-pair-share on DOK 3 and 4; answer each response with a follow-up probe; close with student-generated questions. Focus sets by rigor level: Scaffolded support: 1, 2, 3, 4, 5, 6, 11, 12, 13, 14, 21, 22; HS Freshman: 1, 2, 3, 4, 5, 12, 13, 14, 15, 22, 23, 24; HS Sophomore: 1, 2, 3, 4, 13, 14, 15, 16, 17, 23, 24, 25; HS Junior: 1, 2, 3, 14, 15, 16, 17, 18, 24, 25, 26, 27; HS Senior: 1, 2, 3, 15, 16, 17, 18, 25, 26, 27, 28, 29; AP: 1, 2, 16, 17, 18, 19, 20, 26, 27, 28, 29, 30; College Freshman: 1, 2, 17, 18, 19, 20, 21, 22, 27, 28, 29, 30; College Sophomore: 1, 2, 11, 18, 19, 20, 21, 22, 23, 28, 29, 30; College Junior: 1, 11, 12, 19, 20, 21, 22, 23, 24, 25, 29, 30; College Senior: 1, 11, 12, 13, 20, 21, 22, 23, 24, 25, 26, 30; Graduate / PhD: 1, 11, 12, 13, 21, 22, 23, 24, 25, 26, 27, 28

Literal / recall

1. Who calls on Elizabeth unexpectedly? [DOK 1 · coldCallWithSupport · wait 3 s · AP: unit standards] Look for: Darcy
2. What does Charlotte suspect? [DOK 1 · turnAndTalk · wait 3 s · AP: unit standards] Look for: Darcy is in love with Elizabeth

3. How does Elizabeth respond to the idea? [DOK 1 · coldCallWithSupport · wait 3 s · AP: unit standards] Look for: She dismisses it
4. Where does Darcy keep meeting her? [DOK 1 · turnAndTalk · wait 3 s · AP: unit standards] Look for: On walks in the park
5. What device creates tension here? [DOK 1 · coldCallWithSupport · wait 3 s · AP: unit standards] Look for: Dramatic irony
6. Retell the three most important events of "Chapter XXXII" in order, in one sentence each. [DOK 1 · turnAndTalk · wait 3 s · AP: unit standards] Look for: Darcy calls on Elizabeth alone and is uneasy. Charlotte suspects he is in love; Elizabeth dismisses the idea. Darcy keeps meeting her on walks.
7. Which characters appear or are mentioned in "Chapter XXXII"? Name two and one thing each says or does. [DOK 1 · coldCallWithSupport · wait 3 s · AP: unit standards] Look for: Names and actions taken from the chapter; check against the teacher summary.
8. Where and when does "Chapter XXXII" take place? Point to the line that tells you. [DOK 1 · turnAndTalk · wait 3 s · AP: unit standards] Look for: A place/time detail quoted from the chapter.
9. Reread: "It was absolutely necessary, therefore, to think of something, and in this emergence recollecting when she had seen him last in Hertfordshire, and feeling curious to know what he would say on the subject of their hasty…" What does "emergence" mean here, and what is literally happening in this line? [DOK 1 · turnAndTalk · wait 3 s · AP: unit standards] Look for: emergence: an emergency; a sudden difficulty (older usage).
10. Reread: "A short dialogue on the subject of the country ensued, on either side calm and concise—and soon put an end to by the entrance of Charlotte and her sister, just returned from their walk." What does "concise" mean here, and what is literally happening in this line? [DOK 1 · turnAndTalk · wait 3 s · AP: unit standards] Look for: concise: brief and to the point.

Inferential / analytical

1. What does "Chapter XXXII" suggest about puzzling visits? State the inference and the line that supports it. [DOK 2 · thinkPairShare · wait 5 s · AP-LIT.LAN] Look for: Dramatic irony: readers see what Elizabeth refuses to see.
2. Find one example of irony in this chapter. What does it reveal that a plain statement would not? [DOK 2 · followUp · wait 5 s · AP-LIT.NAR] Look for: Look for gaps between what characters expect or say and what is true.
3. How does the characterization in this chapter shape what we understand about puzzling visits? [DOK 3 · thinkPairShare · wait 8 s · AP-LIT.CHR] Look for: Look for what characters say, do and think, and how others react to them.

   Answer guidance: A defensible line of argument: Darcy's odd remarks show his intentions to the reader while Elizabeth misses them. Useful evidence: "Elizabeth was sitting by herself the next morning, and writing to Jane" (Chapter XXXII, paragraph 1): Opening. On characterization: Darcy calls alone and finds Elizabeth by herself; their conversation is awkward and strangely personal (about the distance from home and Charlotte's marriage). Credit any position that is supported by quotation and reasoning; push one-sided answers to address the strongest counterpoint.
4. In the passage that begins "They then sat down, and when her enquiries after Rosings were made, seemed in danger of sinking into total silence.", why might Austen have chosen these particular words? Pick two and explain their connotations. [DOK 2 · followUp · wait 5 s · AP-LIT.FIG] Look for: Diction analysis of two words in the anchor passage.

5. What causes the main turn in “Chapter XXXII”, and what effect is it likely to have on what follows? [DOK 2 · followUp · wait 5 s · AP-LIT.STR] Look for: Darcy calls on Elizabeth alone and is uneasy. Charlotte suspects he is in love; Elizabeth dismisses the idea. Darcy keeps meeting her on walks.
6. How does “Chapter XXXII” build on “Chapter XXXI”? Name one link of cause and effect. [DOK 3 · thinkPairShare · wait 8 s · AP-LIT.STR] Look for: A causal or structural link between this and the previous chapter.
   Answer guidance: A defensible line of argument: Darcy's odd remarks show his intentions to the reader while Elizabeth misses them. Useful evidence: “I should never have said Mrs. Collins was settled near her family” (Chapter XXXII, paragraph 19): Elizabeth's comment on distance. Theme link: Darcy's comment that "fifty miles of good road" is "a very easy distance" hints at his thoughts. Credit any position that is supported by quotation and reasoning; push one-sided answers to address the strongest counterpoint.
7. What can we infer about a character's motives from what they say and do here, as opposed to what they claim? [DOK 3 · followUp · wait 8 s · AP-LIT.CHR] Look for: An inference about motive supported by a quoted line.
   Answer guidance: A defensible line of argument: Darcy's odd remarks show his intentions to the reader while Elizabeth misses them. Useful evidence: “You cannot have been always at Longbourn” (Chapter XXXII, paragraph 23): Darcy's personal remark, which startles Elizabeth. On characterization: Darcy calls alone and finds Elizabeth by herself; their conversation is awkward and strangely personal (about the distance from home and Charlotte's marriage). Credit any position that is supported by quotation and reasoning; push one-sided answers to address the strongest counterpoint.
8. The bell-ringer asked: “What clues does Elizabeth miss?” Now that we have read closely, how would you revise your first answer, and which line changed your mind? [DOK 2 · thinkPairShare · wait 5 s · AP-LIT.LAN] Look for: A revised answer anchored in the text.
9. Where does foreshadowing appear, and how does it connect this chapter to the larger concern with pride and self-knowledge? [DOK 3 · followUp · wait 8 s · AP-LIT.STR] Look for: Look for hints, warnings or images that point to later events.
   Answer guidance: A defensible line of argument: Darcy's odd remarks show his intentions to the reader while Elizabeth misses them. Useful evidence: “Elizabeth was sitting by herself the next morning, and writing to Jane” (Chapter XXXII, paragraph 1): Opening. Theme link: Darcy's comment that "fifty miles of good road" is "a very easy distance" hints at his thoughts. Credit any position that is supported by quotation and reasoning; push one-sided answers to address the strongest counterpoint.
10. Background: Unchaperoned meetings were noticeable in a small community. How does knowing this change the way you read one moment in the chapter? [DOK 3 · thinkPairShare · wait 8 s · AP-LIT.SET] Look for: A specific moment reread in light of the context.
    Answer guidance: A defensible line of argument: Darcy's odd remarks show his intentions to the reader while Elizabeth misses them. Useful evidence: “I should never have said Mrs. Collins was settled near her family” (Chapter XXXII, paragraph 19): Elizabeth's comment on distance. Theme link: Darcy's comment that "fifty miles of good road" is "a very easy distance" hints at his thoughts. Credit any position that is supported by quotation and reasoning; push one-sided answers to address the strongest counterpoint.

Evaluative / synthesis / creative

1. A critic might argue: “Dramatic irony: readers see what Elizabeth refuses to see.” How far do you agree? Take a stand and defend it with two lines from the chapter. [DOK 3 · fourCorners · wait 8 s · AP-LIT.LAN] Look for: A defended position with evidence and one counterpoint.
   Answer guidance: A defensible line of argument: Darcy's odd remarks show his intentions to the reader

while Elizabeth misses them. Useful evidence: “You cannot have been always at Longbourn” (Chapter XXXII, paragraph 23): Darcy's personal remark, which startles Elizabeth. Theme link: Darcy's comment that "fifty miles of good road" is "a very easy distance" hints at his thoughts. Credit any position that is supported by quotation and reasoning; push one-sided answers to address the strongest counterpoint.

2. Which character in this chapter acts most wisely, and which least? Judge them by a standard you name. [DOK 3 · thinkPairShare · wait 8 s · AP-LIT.CHR, AP-LIT.LAN] Look for: An evaluation using an explicit criterion and evidence.

   Answer guidance: A defensible line of argument: Darcy's odd remarks show his intentions to the reader while Elizabeth misses them. Useful evidence: “Elizabeth was sitting by herself the next morning, and writing to Jane” (Chapter XXXII, paragraph 1): Opening. On characterization: Darcy calls alone and finds Elizabeth by herself; their conversation is awkward and strangely personal (about the distance from home and Charlotte's marriage). Credit any position that is supported by quotation and reasoning; push one-sided answers to address the strongest counterpoint.

3. Rewrite one moment of “Chapter XXXII” from the point of view of a different character. What does the new angle reveal or hide about puzzling visits? [DOK 4 · thinkPairShare · wait 8 s · AP-LIT.LAN, AP-LIT.NAR] Look for: A creative product with a rationale tied to the text.

   Answer guidance: A defensible line of argument: Darcy's odd remarks show his intentions to the reader while Elizabeth misses them. Useful evidence: “I should never have said Mrs. Collins was settled near her family” (Chapter XXXII, paragraph 19): Elizabeth's comment on distance. Theme link: Darcy's comment that "fifty miles of good road" is "a very easy distance" hints at his thoughts. Credit any position that is supported by quotation and reasoning; push one-sided answers to address the strongest counterpoint.

4. Write three questions of your own about “Chapter XXXII”: one recall, one “why/how”, and one “should/what if”. Trade with a partner and answer theirs. [DOK 3 · studentGenerated · wait 8 s · AP-LIT.LAN] Look for: Student-generated questions at three levels.

   Answer guidance: A defensible line of argument: Darcy's odd remarks show his intentions to the reader while Elizabeth misses them. Useful evidence: “You cannot have been always at Longbourn” (Chapter XXXII, paragraph 23): Darcy's personal remark, which startles Elizabeth. Theme link: Darcy's comment that "fifty miles of good road" is "a very easy distance" hints at his thoughts. Credit any position that is supported by quotation and reasoning; push one-sided answers to address the strongest counterpoint.

5. Connect this chapter to marriage and money: is the link strong or weak so far? What would Austen need to show next to strengthen it? [DOK 4 · socraticCircle · wait 8 s · AP-LIT.LAN] Look for: A judgment of thematic development across the work.

   Answer guidance: A defensible line of argument: Darcy's odd remarks show his intentions to the reader while Elizabeth misses them. Useful evidence: “Elizabeth was sitting by herself the next morning, and writing to Jane” (Chapter XXXII, paragraph 1): Opening. Theme link: Darcy's comment that "fifty miles of good road" is "a very easy distance" hints at his thoughts. Credit any position that is supported by quotation and reasoning; push one-sided answers to address the strongest counterpoint.

6. Is the irony in this chapter effective, or does it feel heavy-handed? Evaluate it as a reader would in a review. [DOK 3 · fourCorners · wait 8 s · AP-LIT.LAN, AP-LIT.NAR] Look for: An evaluative judgment with criteria and evidence.

   Answer guidance: A defensible line of argument: Darcy's odd remarks show his intentions to the reader while Elizabeth misses them. Useful evidence: “I should never have said Mrs. Collins was settled near her family” (Chapter XXXII, paragraph 19): Elizabeth's comment on distance. On irony: The reader sees Darcy considering marriage; Elizabeth is puzzled. Credit any position that is supported by quotation and reasoning; push one-sided answers to address the strongest counterpoint.

7. Compare how “Chapter XXXII” treats puzzling visits with how another text, film or event you know treats a similar idea. What does Pride and Prejudice see that the other misses? [DOK 4 · socraticCircle · wait 8 s · AP-LIT.LAN] Look for: A cross-text synthesis.

   Answer guidance: A defensible line of argument: Darcy's odd remarks show his intentions to the reader while Elizabeth misses them. Useful evidence: “You cannot have been always at Longbourn” (Chapter XXXII, paragraph 23): Darcy's personal remark, which startles Elizabeth. Theme link: Darcy's comment that "fifty miles of good road" is "a very easy distance" hints at his thoughts. Credit any position that is supported by quotation and reasoning; push one-sided answers to address the strongest counterpoint.

8. Predict what “Chapter XXXIII” will bring, using two clues from this chapter. After reading, evaluate your prediction. [DOK 3 · thinkPairShare · wait 8 s · AP-LIT.LAN, AP-LIT.STR] Look for: A prediction or judgment justified with textual clues.

   Answer guidance: A defensible line of argument: Darcy's odd remarks show his intentions to the reader while Elizabeth misses them. Useful evidence: “Elizabeth was sitting by herself the next morning, and writing to Jane” (Chapter XXXII, paragraph 1): Opening. Theme link: Darcy's comment that "fifty miles of good road" is "a very easy distance" hints at his thoughts. Credit any position that is supported by quotation and reasoning; push one-sided answers to address the strongest counterpoint.

9. Design a one-paragraph modern adaptation of this chapter (setting, characters, conflict). What must stay the same for it to still be about puzzling visits? [DOK 4 · thinkPairShare · wait 8 s · AP-LIT.LAN] Look for: A creative transfer that keeps the core idea.

   Answer guidance: A defensible line of argument: Darcy's odd remarks show his intentions to the reader while Elizabeth misses them. Useful evidence: “I should never have said Mrs. Collins was settled near her family” (Chapter XXXII, paragraph 19): Elizabeth's comment on distance. Theme link: Darcy's comment that "fifty miles of good road" is "a very easy distance" hints at his thoughts. Credit any position that is supported by quotation and reasoning; push one-sided answers to address the strongest counterpoint.

10. What question would you most like to ask Jane Austen about this chapter, and what answer do you think the text itself gives? [DOK 4 · studentGenerated · wait 8 s · AP-LIT.LAN] Look for: A student-generated question answered from evidence.

    Answer guidance: A defensible line of argument: Darcy's odd remarks show his intentions to the reader while Elizabeth misses them. Useful evidence: “You cannot have been always at Longbourn” (Chapter XXXII, paragraph 23): Darcy's personal remark, which startles Elizabeth. Theme link: Darcy's comment that "fifty miles of good road" is "a very easy distance" hints at his thoughts. Credit any position that is supported by quotation and reasoning; push one-sided answers to address the strongest counterpoint.

Annotation focus

- Irony: look for gaps between what characters expect or say and what is true (anchor passage in the We do segment)
- Also notice Characterization: what characters say, do and think, and how others react to them
- Also notice Foreshadowing: hints, warnings or images that point to later events

Chapter quiz: item bank (all eleven rigor versions)

1. [mc · recall · DOK 1] What device creates tension here?
   A. Comedy of errors with twins
   B. Dramatic irony
   C. Flashback
   D. Allegory

   Key: B (Dramatic irony)
2. [mc · recall · DOK 1] How does Elizabeth respond to the idea?
   A. She tells Jane
   B. She agrees
   C. She is thrilled
   D. She dismisses it

   Key: D (She dismisses it)
3. [fill · recall · DOK 1] Fill in the blank with the vocabulary word that fits: "A short dialogue on the subject of the country ensued, on either side calm and _____—and soon put an end to by the entrance of Charlotte and her sister, just returned from their walk." Word bank: emergence, recollecting, steadfast, concise

   Key: concise
4. [mc · recall · DOK 1] In the line "It was an earnest, steadfast gaze, but she often doubted whether there were much admiration in it, and sometimes it seemed nothing but absence of mind.", what does "steadfast" most nearly mean?
   A. an entrance hall
   B. marked by firm determination or resolution; not shakable
   C. made to feel ashamed or less proud
   D. friendly and trying to win good will

   Key: B (marked by firm determination or resolution; not shakable)
5. [fill · recall · DOK 1] Fill in the blank with the vocabulary word that fits: "It was absolutely necessary, therefore, to think of something, and in this _____ recollecting when she had seen him last in Hertfordshire, and feeling curious to know what he would say on the subject of their hasty departure, she observed—" Word bank: concise, emergence, steadfast, recollecting

   Key: emergence
6. [mc · recall · DOK 1] Where does Darcy keep meeting her?
   A. In London
   B. At Pemberley
   C. At church only
   D. On walks in the park

   Key: D (On walks in the park)
7. [mc · recall · DOK 1] Who calls on Elizabeth unexpectedly?
   A. Darcy
   B. Bingley
   C. Collins

D. Wickham

Key: A (Darcy)

8. [fill · recall · DOK 1] Complete the quotation from Chapter XXXII, paragraph 23: “You _____ have been always at Longbourn”

   Key: cannot

9. [mc · recall · DOK 1] What does Charlotte suspect?

   A. Darcy dislikes Collins

   B. Darcy is ill

   C. Darcy will marry Anne soon

   D. Darcy is in love with Elizabeth

   Key: D (Darcy is in love with Elizabeth)

10. [fill · recall · DOK 1] Complete the quotation from Chapter XXXII, paragraph 1: “Elizabeth was _____ by herself the next morning, and writing to Jane”

    Key: sitting

11. [short · inference · DOK 2] What can you infer from this line? “Elizabeth was sitting by herself the next morning, and writing to Jane” (Chapter XXXII, paragraph 1) Answer in two or three sentences with one detail.

    Sample answer: Opening. The evidence is “Elizabeth was sitting by herself the next morning, and writing to Jane” (Chapter XXXII, paragraph 1). This develops marriage and money: Darcy's comment that "fifty miles of good road" is "a very easy distance" hints at his thoughts.

12. [mc · analysis · DOK 3] In this chapter, which theme does the following most directly develop? Darcy's comment that ‘fifty miles of good road’ is ‘a very easy distance’ hints at his thoughts.

    A. First impressions and prejudice

    B. Pride and self-knowledge

    C. Class and social mobility

    D. Marriage and money

    Key: D (Marriage and money)

13. [mc · analysis · DOK 3] Which literary element does this describe in “Chapter XXXII”? The reader sees Darcy considering marriage; Elizabeth is puzzled.

    A. Imagery

    B. Irony

    C. Setting

    D. Alliteration

    Key: B (Irony)

14. [short · analysis · DOK 3] Analyze the word choice in “You cannot have been always at Longbourn” (Chapter XXXII, paragraph 23). Pick two words and explain what they suggest.

    Sample answer: Darcy's personal remark, which startles Elizabeth. The evidence is “You cannot have been always at Longbourn” (Chapter XXXII, paragraph 23). This develops marriage and money: Darcy's comment that "fifty miles of good road" is "a very easy distance" hints at his thoughts. The words “always” and “cannot” carry that meaning: they are the charged choices in the line, and changing either would soften the effect.

15. [short · synthesis · DOK 4] Evaluate this claim about the chapter: “Darcy's odd remarks show his intentions to the reader while Elizabeth misses them.” Is it fully persuasive? Argue with evidence, including a passage that complicates it.

    Sample answer: The claim is persuasive in part. “You cannot have been always at Longbourn” (Chapter XXXII, paragraph 23) supports it: When he says "you cannot have been always at Longbourn," he is suggesting she could live far from home, a hint she does not read. But “I should never have said Mrs. Collins was settled near her family” (Chapter XXXII, paragraph 19) complicates it: the line (Elizabeth's comment on distance) shows the same issue from another side, and its “never” marks a limit or reversal the claim passes over. A fair verdict is that the claim is mostly right but overstated; it needs a limiting clause to cover that passage.

16. [short · synthesis · DOK 4] Synthesis: trace how marriage and money develops from Chapter XXVIII to Chapter XXXII. Use one quotation from each.

    Sample answer: Earlier, in Chapter XXVIII, paragraph 5, the text reads “When Mr. Collins could be forgotten, there was really a great air of comfort throughout”, which shows the key to Charlotte's marriage. In Chapter XXXII, “Elizabeth was sitting by herself the next morning, and writing to Jane” (Chapter XXXII, paragraph 1) — Opening. Darcy's comment that "fifty miles of good road" is "a very easy distance" hints at his thoughts.

17. [mc · recall · DOK 1] Which word completes this sentence from Chapter XXXII, paragraph 15? “She seems perfectly happy, however, and in a _____ light, it is certainly a very good match for her.”

    A. prudential

    B. circumstances

    C. determined

    D. understood

    Key: A (prudential)

18. [fill · recall · DOK 1] Complete the quotation from Chapter XXXII, paragraph 22: “The far and the near must be relative, and depend on many varying _____.” Word bank: neighbourhood, attachment, comfortable, circumstances

    Key: circumstances

19. [fill · recall · DOK 1] Complete the quotation from Chapter XXXII, paragraph 2: “He seemed _____ too on finding her alone, and apologised for his intrusion, by letting her know that he had understood all the ladies to be within.” Word bank: bestowed, sensible, astonished, comfortable

    Key: astonished

20. [mc · inference · DOK 2] Which of these passages comes earliest in Chapter XXXII?

    A. “They then sat down, and when her enquiries after Rosings were made, seemed in danger of sinking into total silence.”

    B. “It must have been a most agreeable surprise to Mr. Bingley to see you all after him so soon; for, if I recollect right, he went but the day…”

    C. “He seemed astonished too on finding her alone, and apologised for his intrusion, by letting her know that he had understood all the ladies…”

    D. “How very suddenly you all quitted Netherfield last November, Mr. Darcy!”

    Key: C (“He seemed astonished too on finding her alone, and apologised for his intrusion, by letting her know that he had understood all the ladies…”)

21. [short · inference · DOK 2] What does this passage from Chapter XXXII, paragraph 18 reveal about the character or situation? “Yes, I call it a very easy distance.” Answer in two or three sentences with one detail.

Sample answer: The passage (Chapter XXXII, paragraph 18) shows the situation turning on first impressions and prejudice: Darcy's comment that "fifty miles of good road" is "a very easy distance" hints at his thoughts. The words “distance” are the proof, because they show how the moment looks to the people in it. They suggest more than the narrator states outright.

22. [short · analysis · DOK 3] Analyze how the word choice in this passage from Chapter XXXII, paragraph 4 shapes its tone: “It must have been a most agreeable surprise to Mr. Bingley to see you all after him so soon; for, if I recollect right, he went but the day before.” Pick two words and explain their effect.
Sample answer: The words “agreeable” and “recollect” (Chapter XXXII, paragraph 4) make the tone heavy and deliberate rather than neutral. That weight points the reader to pride and self-knowledge: Darcy's comment that "fifty miles of good road" is "a very easy distance" hints at his thoughts. The author chooses them so the moment feels significant instead of passing.

23. [short · synthesis · DOK 4] Connect this passage from Chapter XXXII, paragraph 14 to the story's treatment of marriage and money: “Mr. Collins appears very fortunate in his choice of a wife.” Use one other moment from the story as well.
Sample answer: This passage (Chapter XXXII, paragraph 14) develops marriage and money: Darcy's comment that "fifty miles of good road" is "a very easy distance" hints at his thoughts. Its words “fortunate” and “appears” carry that idea into this moment. The same concern returns in “My friend has an excellent understanding—though I am not certain that I consider her marrying Mr. Collins as the wisest…” (Chapter XXXII, paragraph 15), so the two passages read as a pattern, not a single moment. Together they show the story treating marriage and money as central.

24. [mc · recall · DOK 1] Which word completes this sentence from Chapter XXXII, paragraph 7? “I think I have _____ that Mr. Bingley has not much idea of ever returning to Netherfield again?”
A. sensible
B. understood
C. bestowed
D. sisters
Key: B (understood)

25. [short · analysis · DOK 3] Analyze how the word choice in this passage from Chapter XXXII, paragraph 22 shapes its tone: “Where there is fortune to make the expense of travelling unimportant, distance becomes no evil.” Pick two words and explain their effect.
Sample answer: The words “unimportant” and “travelling” (Chapter XXXII, paragraph 22) make the tone heavy and deliberate rather than neutral. That weight points the reader to class and social mobility: Darcy's comment that "fifty miles of good road" is "a very easy distance" hints at his thoughts. The author chooses them so the moment feels significant instead of passing.

26. [mc · analysis · DOK 3] Which literary element does this describe in “Chapter XXXII”? Darcy calls alone and finds Elizabeth by herself; their conversation is awkward and strangely personal (about the distance from home and Charlotte's marriage).
A. Symbolism
B. Characterization
C. Setting
D. Allusion
Key: B (Characterization)

27. [short · synthesis · DOK 4] Connect this passage from Chapter XXXII, paragraph 29 to the story's treatment of women's limited choices: “She watched him whenever they were at Rosings, and whenever he came to Hunsford; but without much success." Use one other moment from the story as well.

Sample answer: This passage (Chapter XXXII, paragraph 29) develops women's limited choices: Darcy's comment that "fifty miles of good road" is "a very easy distance" hints at his thoughts. Its words "whenever" and "without" carry that idea into this moment. The same concern returns in "She had once or twice suggested to Elizabeth the possibility of his being partial to her, but Elizabeth always laughed…" (Chapter XXXII, paragraph 30), so the two passages read as a pattern, not a single moment. Together they show the story treating women's limited choices as central.

28. [fill · recall · DOK 1 · AP: AP-LIT.FIG] Complete the quotation from Chapter XXXII, paragraph 11: "She was afraid of talking longer of his friend; and, having nothing else to say, was now _____ to leave the trouble of finding a subject to him." Word bank: determined, prudential, neighbourhood, suddenly

    Key: determined

29. [short · inference · DOK 2 · AP: AP-LIT.CHR] What can you infer from this line? "I should never have said Mrs. Collins was settled near her family" (Chapter XXXII, paragraph 19) Answer in two or three sentences with one detail.

    Sample answer: Elizabeth's comment on distance. The evidence is "I should never have said Mrs. Collins was settled near her family" (Chapter XXXII, paragraph 19). This develops marriage and money: Darcy's comment that "fifty miles of good road" is "a very easy distance" hints at his thoughts.

30. [short · synthesis · DOK 4 · AP: AP-LIT.LAN] Connect this passage from Chapter XXXII, paragraph 9 to the story's treatment of women's limited choices: "If he means to be but little at Netherfield, it would be better for the neighbourhood that he should give up the place entirely, for then we might possibly get a settled family there." Use one other moment from the story as well.

    Sample answer: This passage (Chapter XXXII, paragraph 9) develops women's limited choices: Darcy's comment that "fifty miles of good road" is "a very easy distance" hints at his thoughts. Its words "neighbourhood" and "entirely" carry that idea into this moment. The same concern returns in "I should not be surprised,' said Darcy, 'if he were to give it up, as soon as any eligible purchase offers." (Chapter XXXII, paragraph 10), so the two passages read as a pattern, not a single moment. Together they show the story treating women's limited choices as central.

31. [mc · inference · DOK 2 · AP: AP-LIT.LAN] Which choice best states a central concern of "Chapter XXXII"?

    A. Letters of judgment

    B. The great confrontation

    C. Puzzling visits

    D. A misguided warning

    Key: C (Puzzling visits)

32. [short · analysis · DOK 3 · AP: AP-LIT.FIG] Analyze how the word choice in this passage from Chapter XXXII, paragraph 28 shapes its tone: "Within doors there was Lady Catherine, books, and a billiard table, but gentlemen cannot be always within doors" Pick two words and explain their effect.

    Sample answer: The words "gentlemen" and "billiard" (Chapter XXXII, paragraph 28) make the tone heavy and deliberate rather than neutral. That weight points the reader to pride and self-knowledge: Darcy's comment that "fifty miles of good road" is "a very easy distance" hints at his thoughts. The author chooses them so the moment feels significant instead of passing.

33. [short · synthesis · DOK 4 · AP: AP-LIT.FIG] Close reading: how do the diction and syntax of "Elizabeth was sitting by herself the next morning, and writing to Jane" (Chapter XXXII, paragraph 1) shape its meaning? Consider a second, competing reading.

    Sample answer: Opening. The evidence is "Elizabeth was sitting by herself the next morning, and writing to Jane" (Chapter XXXII, paragraph 1). This develops marriage and money: Darcy's comment that "fifty miles of good road" is "a very easy distance" hints at his thoughts. The words “morning” and “writing” carry that meaning: they are the charged choices in the line, and changing either would soften the effect. When he says "you cannot have been always at Longbourn," he is suggesting she could live far from home, a hint she does not read.

34. [mc · recall · DOK 1 · Dual Credit (Indiana College Core): ICC-WC-1.5] In the line “A short dialogue on the subject of the country ensued, on either side calm and concise—and soon put an end to by the entrance of Charlotte and her sister, just returned from their walk.”, what does “concise” most nearly mean?

    A. brief and to the point

    B. recall knowledge from memory; have a recollection

    C. marked by firm determination or resolution; not shakable

    D. an emergency; a sudden difficulty (older usage)

    Key: A (brief and to the point)

35. [fill · recall · DOK 1 · Program outcome: LeL-C3-LIT-1] Complete the quotation from Chapter XXXII, paragraph 19: “I should never have said Mrs. Collins was _____ near her family”

    Key: settled

Rigor version	Items (in order)	Mix
Scaffolded support	1, 2, 3, 4, 5, 6, 7, 8, 9, 10, 11, 12, 13, 14, 15, 16	recall 10, inference 1, analysis 3, synthesis 2
HS Freshman	9, 6, 10, 17, 18, 2, 3, 4, 19, 7, 20, 21, 13, 22, 12, 23	recall 10, inference 2, analysis 3, synthesis 1
HS Sophomore	6, 3, 7, 24, 4, 9, 19, 1, 8, 21, 20, 25, 26, 22, 15, 27	recall 9, inference 2, analysis 3, synthesis 2
HS Junior	28, 19, 1, 3, 2, 8, 20, 29, 21, 11, 26, 22, 25, 12, 30, 27	recall 6, inference 4, analysis 4, synthesis 2
HS Senior	5, 3, 17, 9, 24, 2, 31, 20, 21, 25, 22, 12, 32, 23, 30, 33	recall 6, inference 3, analysis 4, synthesis 3
AP	10, 28, 24, 21, 20, 22, 32, 13, 14, 12, 30, 23, 16, 27, 15, 33	recall 3, inference 2, analysis 5, synthesis 6
College Freshman	34, 10, 28, 7, 20, 26, 25, 32, 22, 14, 33, 16, 27, 23, 30, 15	recall 4, inference 1, analysis 5, synthesis 6
College Sophomore	2, 19, 5, 20, 21, 31, 32, 25, 22, 14, 12, 33, 30, 16, 15, 27	recall 3, inference 3, analysis 5, synthesis 5
College Junior	10, 9, 35, 20, 31, 21, 32, 25, 12, 22, 14, 30, 23, 16, 27, 15	recall 3, inference 3, analysis 5, synthesis 5
College Senior	18, 5, 7, 20, 14, 12, 22, 26, 32, 25, 33, 16, 23, 30, 27, 15	recall 3, inference 1, analysis 6, synthesis 6
Graduate / PhD	28, 7, 19, 20, 11, 22, 32, 12, 14, 25, 26, 15, 27, 23, 16, 30	recall 3, inference 2, analysis 6, synthesis 5

Writing prompts (eleven rigor levels)

Scaffolded support (250 words; AP: see unit standards): Supported track (work from the passage your teacher selects). In “Chapter XXXII,” how does Austen show puzzling visits? Write a paragraph that states your claim, quotes two details from the passage, and explains how each detail supports your idea. Use the irony you noticed as one piece of evidence.

HS Freshman (350 words; AP: see unit standards): In Chapter XXXII, how does Austen develop the idea of puzzling visits? State a clear claim, support it with two or three quotations, and explain how the irony in the chapter helps build that idea.

HS Sophomore (450 words; AP: see unit standards): Analyze how Chapter XXXII develops the idea of puzzling visits. Make a precise claim, support it with at least three pieces of textual evidence, and explain how the author's use of irony and characterization shapes that idea. Address one possible counterclaim.

HS Junior (550 words; AP: see unit standards): Analyze how the structure of Chapter XXXII (where it begins, turns and ends) and its irony shape the reader's understanding of puzzling visits. Identify one place where the text leaves matters uncertain and explain how that uncertainty adds to its meaning. Distinguish what is directly stated from what is really meant.

HS Senior (600 words; AP: see unit standards): Two readers disagree about what Chapter XXXII suggests about puzzling visits. Lay out two plausible interpretations, weigh the evidence for each (including the chapter's irony and characterization), and argue for the stronger one in a sustained, well-organized essay. Distinguish what is directly stated from what is really meant.

AP (650 words; AP: AP-LIT.NAR, AP-LIT.LAN): Write a literary argument in which you analyze how Jane Austen uses irony in Chapter XXXII to complicate the reader's understanding of puzzling visits. Develop a defensible thesis, select evidence purposefully, and explain how specific choices of diction and syntax create meaning.

College Freshman (1000 words; AP: see unit standards): Situate Chapter XXXII within its historical and literary context and argue how the chapter's treatment of puzzling visits responds to that context. Engage with at least one secondary perspective (a critic, historian or the author's own statements), integrate quotations smoothly, and cite in MLA style.

College Sophomore (1250 words; AP: see unit standards): Read Chapter XXXII alongside the conventions of its genre and period. Argue how the chapter's handling of puzzling visits follows or bends those conventions, using the irony as evidence, and test your reading against one published critic. Document two secondary sources in MLA.

College Junior (1500 words; AP: see unit standards): Apply a named critical approach (for example formalist, historicist, feminist, psychoanalytic or ecocritical) to Chapter XXXII and its treatment of puzzling visits. State your method, show what it reveals in the chapter's irony and characterization, and identify where the text resists it.

College Senior (2000 words; AP: see unit standards): Develop a research argument that reads Chapter XXXII as evidence for a larger claim about puzzling visits in Pride and Prejudice. Connect close reading of the chapter to the whole novel, engage at least four scholarly sources, and state precisely where your reading departs from theirs (Chicago style).

Graduate / PhD (2500 words; AP: see unit standards): Develop an original argument that reads Chapter XXXII as a hinge in the novel's larger treatment of puzzling visits. Position your reading within a named critical conversation (for example formalist, historicist, psychoanalytic, feminist or postcolonial approaches), account for the textual history where relevant, and articulate the stakes of your intervention for scholarship on Pride and Prejudice.

SAT-style questions

1. It was absolutely necessary, therefore, to think of something, and in this emergence recollecting when she had seen him last in Hertfordshire, and feeling curious to know what he would say on the subject of their hasty departure, she observed—

   As used in the text, what does the word “emergence” most nearly mean?

   A. marked by firm determination or resolution; not shakable

   B. brief and to the point

   C. an emergency; a sudden difficulty (older usage)

   D. recall knowledge from memory; have a recollection

2. They then sat down, and when her enquiries after Rosings were made, seemed in danger of sinking into total silence. It was absolutely necessary, therefore, to think of something, and in this emergence recollecting when she had seen him last in Hertfordshire, and feeling curious to know what he would say on the subject of their hasty departure, she observed—

   Which choice best states a central concern of “Chapter XXXII”?

   A. Pemberley

   B. Consequences of refusal

   C. Music, wit and manners

   D. Puzzling visits

SAT key: 1. C (an emergency; a sudden difficulty (older usage)); 2. D (Puzzling visits)

Lesson 34: Chapter XXXIII

Focus: a revelation from the colonel

Objective: Students will analyze how plot develops in "Chapter XXXIII" by writing a claim-evidence-reasoning paragraph that cites at least 2 quotations from the section, and will score at least 80% on the section quiz.

Standards: AP: see the unit standards

Content note (alcohol or drugs (mentioned)): This section mentions drinking or a drug ("…er cousins to Rosings, where they were engaged to drink tea. Mrs. Collins, seeing that she was…"). Treat it as period custom or plot detail; name it plainly and don't glamorize it.
Student preview: This section mentions drinking or a drug.
Suggested language: "What does this detail add to the scene?"

Teacher only · spoilers

Colonel Fitzwilliam mentions that Darcy recently saved a friend from an 'imprudent marriage.' Elizabeth realizes this means Jane and Bingley, and she weeps and stays home with a headache.

Background: Interfering in a friend's courtship was seen as a sign of loyalty or arrogance, depending on view.

Significance: The revelation primes Elizabeth's anger for the proposal to come.

Lesson plan and lecture script (90 minutes)

0–8 min · Bell-ringer · You do (8 min)
Students write to the bell-ringer, then pair-share.
Why does Fitzwilliam's casual remark hurt Elizabeth so deeply? Write for five minutes. Starters: I think... because... / This connects to marriage and money because.... Content note before we start: This section mentions drinking or a drug.
Prompt: Why does Fitzwilliam's casual remark hurt Elizabeth so deeply?
Sentence starters: I think… because… · This connects to marriage and money because…
Strong response: A strong response takes a position and anticipates this: even an earl's son must consider fortune.

8–18 min · Vocabulary with etymology notes · I do (10 min)
Five key words in context, with verified word histories.
Today's words: tractable — easy to manage or control; lessening — making smaller or less; officious — too eager to interfere; procuring — get by special effort; recovering — regaining self-control. "tractable": Origin: Latin tractābilis ("that may be touched"). "lessening": Origin of "lessen": an English formation from less + -en. "officious": Origin: Latin officiōsus ("kindly"). "recovering": Origin: an English formation from recover + -ing.
Words: tractable: easy to manage or control · lessening: making smaller or less · officious: too eager to interfere · procuring: get by special effort · recovering: regaining self-control

18–28 min · Background and context · I do (10 min)
Mini-lecture (read or adapt the script).
Interfering in a friend's courtship was seen as a sign of loyalty or arrogance, depending on view. The revelation primes Elizabeth's anger for the proposal to come. Plot: Colonel Fitzwilliam tells Elizabeth that Darcy saved a friend from "a most imprudent marriage"; she realizes it is Bingley and Jane. Characterization: The colonel explains that as a younger son he must marry money. Watch for rank and condescension: Rank is displayed and enforced, above all at Rosings by Lady Catherine; Elizabeth refuses to be cowed. In this chapter: "Mr. and Mrs. Collins's happiness; and that in speaking of Rosings and her not perfectly understanding the house, he seemed to expect" (Chapter XXXIII, paragraph 1).

28–40 min · I do: modeled close reading · I do (12 min)
Model the close reading of the anchor quotation using the written think-aloud below.
First, meaning. I read "Younger sons cannot marry where they like" slowly and put it in my own words: Fitzwilliam says younger sons cannot marry wherever they like. Next, craft. I notice the general statement, which is really a personal message. The strongest word is "Younger": it marks his lack of inheritance. Then, effect. What is Colonel Fitzwilliam hinting to Elizabeth? My answer: Colonel Fitzwilliam is hinting to Elizabeth that a younger son cannot afford to marry a woman without money; Elizabeth sees again how money limits choice even for gentlemen.

> Younger sons cannot marry where they like (Chapter XXXIII, paragraph 12)

Think-aloud: First, meaning. I read "Younger sons cannot marry where they like" slowly and put it in my own words: Fitzwilliam says younger sons cannot marry wherever they like. Next, craft. I notice the general statement, which is really a personal message. The strongest word is "Younger": it marks his lack of inheritance. Then, effect. What is Colonel Fitzwilliam hinting to Elizabeth? My answer: Colonel Fitzwilliam is hinting to Elizabeth that a younger son cannot afford to marry a woman without money; Elizabeth sees again how money limits choice even for gentlemen.

40–55 min · We do: guided annotation · We do (15 min)
Guided analysis of a second quotation; expected answers given.
Ask: What words in this line stand out, and what do they suggest? Expected: "Imprudent" is Darcy's judgment of Jane's family; Elizabeth hears an insult to her sister. Ask: How does this line connect to marriage and money? Expected: Even an earl's son must consider fortune. (The revelation.)

> having lately saved a friend from the inconveniences of a most imprudent marriage (Chapter XXXIII, paragraph 28)

Ask: What words in this line stand out, and what do they suggest?
Expected answer: "Imprudent" is Darcy's judgment of Jane's family; Elizabeth hears an insult to her sister.
Ask: How does this line connect to marriage and money?
Expected answer: Even an earl's son must consider fortune. (The revelation.)

55–70 min · You do: independent annotation · You do (15 min)
Independent annotation and a claim-evidence-reasoning paragraph (exemplar given).
Annotate the chapter for plot, characterization (three marks with a margin note each), then write one claim-evidence-reasoning paragraph: what does this chapter suggest about a revelation from the colonel? Then start your writing prompt at your assigned level (HS Sophomore: Analyze how Chapter XXXIII develops the idea of a revelation from the colonel. Make a precise claim, support it with at least three pieces of textual evidence, and explain how the author's use of plot and irony shapes that idea. Address one possible counterclaim.) Exemplar: The colonel's disclosure confirms Elizabeth's worst view of Darcy and sets up the proposal. When the text says “having lately saved a friend from the inconveniences of a most imprudent marriage” (Chapter XXXIII, paragraph 28), it shows this directly. He says Darcy congratulated himself on "having lately saved a friend from the inconveniences of a most imprudent marriage," which Elizabeth instantly understands as Jane's ruin.
Task: Annotate the chapter for plot, characterization (three marks with a margin note each), then write one claim-evidence-reasoning paragraph: what does this chapter suggest about a revelation from the colonel? Then start your writing prompt at your assigned level (HS Sophomore: Analyze how Chapter XXXIII develops the idea of a revelation from the colonel. Make a precise claim, support it with at least three pieces of textual evidence, and explain how the author's use of plot and irony shapes that idea. Address one possible counterclaim.)
Exemplar: The colonel's disclosure confirms Elizabeth's worst view of Darcy and sets up the proposal. When the text says “having lately saved a friend from the inconveniences of a most imprudent marriage” (Chapter XXXIII, paragraph 28), it shows this directly. He says Darcy congratulated himself on "having lately saved a friend from the inconveniences of a most imprudent marriage," which Elizabeth instantly understands as Jane's ruin.

70–80 min · Discussion · We do (10 min)
Structured discussion from the 30 tiered questions, with facilitation notes.
Anchor question: Why does Fitzwilliam's casual remark hurt Elizabeth so deeply? Ask: what are the "very strong objections"? Are any fair?
Anchor question: Why does Fitzwilliam's casual remark hurt Elizabeth so deeply?
Facilitation: Ask: what are the "very strong objections"? Are any fair?

80–87 min · Exit ticket / chapter quiz · You do (7 min)
Chapter quiz in the app and an exit ticket (answer given).
Chapter quiz in the app, then: In one sentence, what does this chapter suggest about a revelation from the colonel? Support it with one short quotation. Model answer: The colonel's disclosure confirms Elizabeth's worst view of Darcy and sets up the proposal. (“having lately saved a friend from the inconveniences of a most imprudent marriage”, Chapter XXXIII, paragraph 28). Accept any defensible claim backed by a quotation from the chapter; the answer key for the quiz is in the Quiz section.
Exit ticket: In one sentence, what does this chapter suggest about a revelation from the colonel? Support it with one short quotation.
Answer: Model answer: The colonel's disclosure confirms Elizabeth's worst view of Darcy and sets up the proposal. (“having lately saved a friend from the inconveniences of a most imprudent marriage”, Chapter XXXIII, paragraph 28). Accept any defensible claim backed by a quotation from the chapter; the answer key for the quiz is in the Quiz section.

> 87–90 min · Closure · I do (3 min)
> Summarize the lesson and preview the next reading.
> Today we saw how plot shapes a revelation from the colonel. Key takeaway: even an earl's son must consider fortune.

Total: 90 minutes.

Teacher analysis (spoilers)

Literary elements

- Plot: Colonel Fitzwilliam tells Elizabeth that Darcy saved a friend from "a most imprudent marriage"; she realizes it is Bingley and Jane.
- Characterization: The colonel explains that as a younger son he must marry money.

Themes and how they develop

- marriage and money: even an earl's son must consider fortune.

Symbols and motifs

- rank and condescension: Rank is displayed and enforced, above all at Rosings by Lady Catherine; Elizabeth refuses to be cowed. In this chapter: “Mr. and Mrs. Collins’s happiness; and that in speaking of Rosings and her not perfectly understanding the house, he seemed to expect” (Chapter XXXIII, paragraph 1).
- silence and reserve: What characters leave unsaid (Darcy's reserve, Jane's composure, Elizabeth's secrets) drives misunderstanding. In this chapter: “the same style, and the subject dropped. To interrupt a silence which might make him fancy her affected with what had passed” (Chapter XXXIII, paragraph 16).

Key quotations (checked against the reading text)

- “Younger sons cannot marry where they like” (Chapter XXXIII, paragraph 12) The colonel on money.
- “there were some very strong objections against the lady” (Chapter XXXIII, paragraph 30) The cause of separation.
- “having lately saved a friend from the inconveniences of a most imprudent marriage” (Chapter XXXIII, paragraph 28) The revelation.

Model claim-evidence-reasoning

Claim: The colonel's disclosure confirms Elizabeth's worst view of Darcy and sets up the proposal.
Evidence: “having lately saved a friend from the inconveniences of a most imprudent marriage” (Chapter XXXIII, paragraph 28)
Reasoning: He says Darcy congratulated himself on "having lately saved a friend from the inconveniences of a most imprudent marriage," which Elizabeth instantly understands as Jane's ruin.

Vocabulary with etymology notes

Word	Definition (in this sentence)	In context	Word history
tractable (adjective)	easy to manage or control	I never heard any harm of her; and I dare say she is one of the most tractable creatures in the world.	"tractable": Origin: Latin tractābilis ("that may be touched"). (Liber et Libri origin note, https://en.wiktionary.org/wiki/tractable#Etymology)
lessening (verb)	making smaller or less	"That is not an unnatural surmise," said Fitzwilliam, "but it is lessening the honour of my cousin's triumph very sadly."	"lessening": Origin of "lessen": an English formation from less + -en. (Liber et Libri origin note, https://en.wiktionary.org/wiki/lessen#Etymology)
officious (adjective)	too eager to interfere	"You are rather disposed to call his interference officious?"	"officious": Origin: Latin officiōsus ("kindly"). (Liber et Libri origin note, https://en.wiktionary.org/wiki/officious#Etymology)
procuring (verb)	get by special effort	When have you been prevented by want of money from going wherever you chose, or procuring anything you had a fancy for?"
recovering (verb)	regaining self-control	"Is this," thought Elizabeth, "meant for me?" and she coloured at the idea; but, recovering herself, said in a lively tone, "And pray, what is the usual price of an Earl's younger son?	"recovering": Origin: an English formation from recover + -ing. (Liber et Libri origin note, https://en.wiktionary.org/wiki/recovering#Etymology)

Discussion questions

1. Why does Fitzwilliam's casual remark hurt Elizabeth so deeply?
2. Where does plot appear in this chapter, and what effect does it have? Point to one passage.
3. How does this chapter connect to the book's larger concern with marriage and money?

Classroom discussion questions (30, tiered)

Wait time after every question (3 s for DOK 1, 5 s for DOK 2, 8 to 10 s for DOK 3 and 4); think-pair-share on DOK 3 and 4; answer each response with a follow-up probe; close with student-generated questions. Focus sets by rigor level: Scaffolded support: 1, 2, 3, 4, 5, 6, 11, 12, 13, 14, 21, 22; HS Freshman: 1, 2, 3, 4, 5, 12, 13, 14, 15, 22, 23, 24; HS Sophomore: 1, 2, 3, 4, 13, 14, 15, 16, 17, 23, 24, 25; HS Junior: 1, 2, 3, 14, 15, 16, 17, 18, 24, 25, 26, 27; HS Senior: 1, 2, 3, 15, 16, 17, 18, 25, 26, 27, 28, 29; AP: 1, 2, 16, 17, 18, 19, 20, 26, 27, 28, 29, 30; College Freshman: 1, 2, 17, 18, 19, 20, 21, 22, 27, 28, 29, 30; College Sophomore: 1, 2, 11, 18, 19, 20, 21, 22, 23, 28, 29, 30; College Junior: 1, 11, 12, 19, 20, 21, 22, 23, 24, 25, 29, 30; College Senior: 1, 11, 12, 13, 20, 21, 22, 23, 24, 25, 26, 30; Graduate / PhD: 1, 11, 12, 13, 21, 22, 23, 24, 25, 26, 27, 28

Literal / recall

1. What does Fitzwilliam reveal? [DOK 1 · coldCallWithSupport · wait 3 s · AP: unit standards] Look for: Darcy saved a friend from an imprudent marriage
2. Whom does Elizabeth realize the friend is? [DOK 1 · turnAndTalk · wait 3 s · AP: unit standards] Look for: Bingley
3. How does Elizabeth react to Colonel Fitzwilliam's remark about an 'imprudent marriage'? [DOK 1 · coldCallWithSupport · wait 3 s · AP: unit standards] Look for: She weeps and stays home
4. Why does Fitzwilliam say he must marry money? [DOK 1 · turnAndTalk · wait 3 s · AP: unit standards] Look for: He is a younger son
5. What effect does this chapter set up? [DOK 1 · coldCallWithSupport · wait 3 s · AP: unit standards] Look for: Elizabeth's anger at the proposal
6. Retell the three most important events of “Chapter XXXIII” in order, in one sentence each. [DOK 1 · turnAndTalk · wait 3 s · AP: unit standards] Look for: Colonel Fitzwilliam mentions that Darcy recently saved a friend from an 'imprudent marriage.' Elizabeth realizes this means Jane and Bingley, and she weeps and stays home with a headache.
7. Which characters appear or are mentioned in “Chapter XXXIII”? Name two and one thing each says or does. [DOK 1 · coldCallWithSupport · wait 3 s · AP: unit standards] Look for: Names and actions taken from the chapter; check against the teacher summary.
8. Where and when does “Chapter XXXIII” take place? Point to the line that tells you. [DOK 1 · turnAndTalk · wait 3 s · AP: unit standards] Look for: A place/time detail quoted from the chapter.
9. Reread: “I never heard any harm of her; and I dare say she is one of the most tractable creatures in the world.” What does “tractable” mean here, and what is literally happening in this line? [DOK 1 · turnAndTalk · wait 3 s · AP: unit standards] Look for: tractable: easy to manage or control.
10. Reread: ““That is not an unnatural surmise,” said Fitzwilliam, “but it is lessening the honour of my cousin’s triumph very sadly.”” What does “lessening” mean here, and what is literally happening in this line? [DOK 1 · turnAndTalk · wait 3 s · AP: unit standards] Look for: lessening: making smaller or less.

Inferential / analytical

1. What does “Chapter XXXIII” suggest about a revelation from the colonel? State the inference and the line that supports it. [DOK 2 · thinkPairShare · wait 5 s · AP-LIT.LAN] Look for: The revelation primes Elizabeth's anger for the proposal to come.
2. Find one example of plot in this chapter. What does it reveal that a plain statement would not? [DOK 2 · followUp · wait 5 s · AP-LIT.STR] Look for: Look for key events and the causes linking them.
3. How does the irony in this chapter shape what we understand about a revelation from the colonel? [DOK 3 · thinkPairShare · wait 8 s · AP-LIT.NAR] Look for: Look for gaps between what characters expect or say and what is true.
   Answer guidance: A defensible line of argument: The colonel's disclosure confirms Elizabeth's worst view of Darcy and sets up the proposal. Useful evidence: “Younger sons cannot marry where they like” (Chapter XXXIII, paragraph 12): The colonel on money. Theme link: even an earl's son must consider fortune. Credit any position that is supported by quotation and reasoning; push one-sided answers to address the strongest counterpoint.
4. In the passage that begins ““In my opinion, the younger son of an Earl can know very little of either.”, why might Austen have chosen these particular words? Pick two and explain their connotations. [DOK 2 · followUp · wait 5 s · AP-LIT.FIG] Look for: Diction analysis of two words in the anchor passage.

5. What causes the main turn in “Chapter XXXIII”, and what effect is it likely to have on what follows? [DOK 2 · followUp · wait 5 s · AP-LIT.STR] Look for: Colonel Fitzwilliam mentions that Darcy recently saved a friend from an 'imprudent marriage.' Elizabeth realizes this means Jane and Bingley, and she weeps and stays home with a headache.
6. How does “Chapter XXXIII” build on “Chapter XXXII”? Name one link of cause and effect. [DOK 3 · thinkPairShare · wait 8 s · AP-LIT.STR] Look for: A causal or structural link between this and the previous chapter.
   Answer guidance: A defensible line of argument: The colonel's disclosure confirms Elizabeth's worst view of Darcy and sets up the proposal. Useful evidence: “there were some very strong objections against the lady” (Chapter XXXIII, paragraph 30): The cause of separation. Theme link: even an earl's son must consider fortune. Credit any position that is supported by quotation and reasoning; push one-sided answers to address the strongest counterpoint.
7. What can we infer about a character's motives from what they say and do here, as opposed to what they claim? [DOK 3 · followUp · wait 8 s · AP-LIT.CHR] Look for: An inference about motive supported by a quoted line.
   Answer guidance: A defensible line of argument: The colonel's disclosure confirms Elizabeth's worst view of Darcy and sets up the proposal. Useful evidence: “having lately saved a friend from the inconveniences of a most imprudent marriage” (Chapter XXXIII, paragraph 28): The revelation. On characterization: The colonel explains that as a younger son he must marry money. Credit any position that is supported by quotation and reasoning; push one-sided answers to address the strongest counterpoint.
8. The bell-ringer asked: “Why does Fitzwilliam's casual remark hurt Elizabeth so deeply?” Now that we have read closely, how would you revise your first answer, and which line changed your mind? [DOK 2 · thinkPairShare · wait 5 s · AP-LIT.LAN] Look for: A revised answer anchored in the text.
9. Where does characterization appear, and how does it connect this chapter to the larger concern with marriage and money? [DOK 3 · followUp · wait 8 s · AP-LIT.CHR] Look for: Look for what characters say, do and think, and how others react to them.
   Answer guidance: A defensible line of argument: The colonel's disclosure confirms Elizabeth's worst view of Darcy and sets up the proposal. Useful evidence: “Younger sons cannot marry where they like” (Chapter XXXIII, paragraph 12): The colonel on money. On characterization: The colonel explains that as a younger son he must marry money. Credit any position that is supported by quotation and reasoning; push one-sided answers to address the strongest counterpoint.
10. Background: Interfering in a friend's courtship was seen as a sign of loyalty or arrogance, depending on view. How does knowing this change the way you read one moment in the chapter? [DOK 3 · thinkPairShare · wait 8 s · AP-LIT.SET] Look for: A specific moment reread in light of the context.
    Answer guidance: A defensible line of argument: The colonel's disclosure confirms Elizabeth's worst view of Darcy and sets up the proposal. Useful evidence: “there were some very strong objections against the lady” (Chapter XXXIII, paragraph 30): The cause of separation. Theme link: even an earl's son must consider fortune. Credit any position that is supported by quotation and reasoning; push one-sided answers to address the strongest counterpoint.

Evaluative / synthesis / creative

1. A critic might argue: “The revelation primes Elizabeth's anger for the proposal to come.” How far do you agree? Take a stand and defend it with two lines from the chapter. [DOK 3 · fourCorners · wait 8 s · AP-LIT.LAN] Look for: A defended position with evidence and one counterpoint.
   Answer guidance: A defensible line of argument: The colonel's disclosure confirms Elizabeth's worst view of Darcy and sets up the proposal. Useful evidence: “having lately saved a friend from the inconveniences of a most imprudent marriage" (Chapter XXXIII, paragraph 28): The revelation. Theme link: even an earl's son must consider fortune. Credit any position that is supported by quotation and reasoning; push one-sided answers to address the strongest counterpoint.

2. Which character in this chapter acts most wisely, and which least? Judge them by a standard you name. [DOK 3 · thinkPairShare · wait 8 s · AP-LIT.CHR, AP-LIT.LAN] Look for: An evaluation using an explicit criterion and evidence.

   Answer guidance: A defensible line of argument: The colonel's disclosure confirms Elizabeth's worst view of Darcy and sets up the proposal. Useful evidence: "Younger sons cannot marry where they like" (Chapter XXXIII, paragraph 12): The colonel on money. On characterization: The colonel explains that as a younger son he must marry money. Credit any position that is supported by quotation and reasoning; push one-sided answers to address the strongest counterpoint.

3. Rewrite one moment of "Chapter XXXIII" from the point of view of a different character. What does the new angle reveal or hide about a revelation from the colonel? [DOK 4 · thinkPairShare · wait 8 s · AP-LIT.LAN, AP-LIT.NAR] Look for: A creative product with a rationale tied to the text.

   Answer guidance: A defensible line of argument: The colonel's disclosure confirms Elizabeth's worst view of Darcy and sets up the proposal. Useful evidence: "there were some very strong objections against the lady" (Chapter XXXIII, paragraph 30): The cause of separation. Theme link: even an earl's son must consider fortune. Credit any position that is supported by quotation and reasoning; push one-sided answers to address the strongest counterpoint.

4. Write three questions of your own about "Chapter XXXIII": one recall, one "why/how", and one "should/what if". Trade with a partner and answer theirs. [DOK 3 · studentGenerated · wait 8 s · AP-LIT.LAN] Look for: Student-generated questions at three levels.

   Answer guidance: A defensible line of argument: The colonel's disclosure confirms Elizabeth's worst view of Darcy and sets up the proposal. Useful evidence: "having lately saved a friend from the inconveniences of a most imprudent marriage" (Chapter XXXIII, paragraph 28): The revelation. Theme link: even an earl's son must consider fortune. Credit any position that is supported by quotation and reasoning; push one-sided answers to address the strongest counterpoint.

5. Connect this chapter to class and social mobility: is the link strong or weak so far? What would Austen need to show next to strengthen it? [DOK 4 · socraticCircle · wait 8 s · AP-LIT.LAN] Look for: A judgment of thematic development across the work.

   Answer guidance: A defensible line of argument: The colonel's disclosure confirms Elizabeth's worst view of Darcy and sets up the proposal. Useful evidence: "Younger sons cannot marry where they like" (Chapter XXXIII, paragraph 12): The colonel on money. Theme link: even an earl's son must consider fortune. Credit any position that is supported by quotation and reasoning; push one-sided answers to address the strongest counterpoint.

6. Is the plot in this chapter effective, or does it feel heavy-handed? Evaluate it as a reader would in a review. [DOK 3 · fourCorners · wait 8 s · AP-LIT.LAN, AP-LIT.STR] Look for: An evaluative judgment with criteria and evidence.

   Answer guidance: A defensible line of argument: The colonel's disclosure confirms Elizabeth's worst view of Darcy and sets up the proposal. Useful evidence: "there were some very strong objections against the lady" (Chapter XXXIII, paragraph 30): The cause of separation. On plot: Colonel Fitzwilliam tells Elizabeth that Darcy saved a friend from "a most imprudent marriage"; she realizes it is Bingley and Jane. Credit any position that is supported by quotation and reasoning; push one-sided answers to address the strongest counterpoint.

7. Compare how “Chapter XXXIII” treats a revelation from the colonel with how another text, film or event you know treats a similar idea. What does Pride and Prejudice see that the other misses? [DOK 4 · socraticCircle · wait 8 s · AP-LIT.LAN] Look for: A cross-text synthesis.
   Answer guidance: A defensible line of argument: The colonel's disclosure confirms Elizabeth's worst view of Darcy and sets up the proposal. Useful evidence: “having lately saved a friend from the inconveniences of a most imprudent marriage” (Chapter XXXIII, paragraph 28): The revelation. Theme link: even an earl's son must consider fortune. Credit any position that is supported by quotation and reasoning; push one-sided answers to address the strongest counterpoint.
8. Predict what “Chapter XXXIV” will bring, using two clues from this chapter. After reading, evaluate your prediction. [DOK 3 · thinkPairShare · wait 8 s · AP-LIT.LAN, AP-LIT.STR] Look for: A prediction or judgment justified with textual clues.
   Answer guidance: A defensible line of argument: The colonel's disclosure confirms Elizabeth's worst view of Darcy and sets up the proposal. Useful evidence: “Younger sons cannot marry where they like” (Chapter XXXIII, paragraph 12): The colonel on money. Theme link: even an earl's son must consider fortune. Credit any position that is supported by quotation and reasoning; push one-sided answers to address the strongest counterpoint.
9. Design a one-paragraph modern adaptation of this chapter (setting, characters, conflict). What must stay the same for it to still be about a revelation from the colonel? [DOK 4 · thinkPairShare · wait 8 s · AP-LIT.LAN] Look for: A creative transfer that keeps the core idea.
   Answer guidance: A defensible line of argument: The colonel's disclosure confirms Elizabeth's worst view of Darcy and sets up the proposal. Useful evidence: “there were some very strong objections against the lady” (Chapter XXXIII, paragraph 30): The cause of separation. Theme link: even an earl's son must consider fortune. Credit any position that is supported by quotation and reasoning; push one-sided answers to address the strongest counterpoint.
10. What question would you most like to ask Jane Austen about this chapter, and what answer do you think the text itself gives? [DOK 4 · studentGenerated · wait 8 s · AP-LIT.LAN] Look for: A student-generated question answered from evidence.
    Answer guidance: A defensible line of argument: The colonel's disclosure confirms Elizabeth's worst view of Darcy and sets up the proposal. Useful evidence: “having lately saved a friend from the inconveniences of a most imprudent marriage” (Chapter XXXIII, paragraph 28): The revelation. Theme link: even an earl's son must consider fortune. Credit any position that is supported by quotation and reasoning; push one-sided answers to address the strongest counterpoint.

Annotation focus

- Plot: look for key events and the causes linking them (anchor passage in the We do segment)
- Also notice Irony: gaps between what characters expect or say and what is true
- Also notice Characterization: what characters say, do and think, and how others react to them

Chapter quiz: item bank (all eleven rigor versions)

1. [mc · recall · DOK 1] What effect does this chapter set up?
   A. Elizabeth's anger at the proposal
   B. Jane's engagement

C. A trip to Bath

D. A new romance

Key: A (Elizabeth's anger at the proposal)

2. [mc · recall · DOK 1] Which word completes this sentence from Chapter XXXIII, paragraph 18? “No,’ said Colonel Fitzwilliam, ‘that is an _____ which he must divide with me.”

   A. supposed

   B. advantage

   C. fortune

   D. therefore

   Key: B (advantage)

3. [fill · recall · DOK 1] Complete the quotation from Chapter XXXIII, paragraph 1: “More than once did Elizabeth in her ramble within the Park, _____ meet Mr. Darcy.” Word bank: unexpectedly, thoughtful, afterwards, therefore

   Key: unexpectedly

4. [fill · recall · DOK 1] Complete the quotation from Chapter XXXIII, paragraph 30: “there were some very strong _____ against the lady”

   Key: objections

5. [mc · recall · DOK 1] In the line “That is not an unnatural surmise,’ said Fitzwilliam, ‘but it is lessening the honour of my cousin’s triumph very sadly.”, what does “lessening” most nearly mean?

   A. cause to feel shame; hurt the pride of

   B. guesses

   C. making smaller or less

   D. a carriage with its horses and servants

   Key: C (making smaller or less)

6. [mc · recall · DOK 1] In the line “You are rather disposed to call his interference officious?”, what does “officious” most nearly mean?

   A. get or find back; recover the use of

   B. too eager to interfere

   C. formal or perfunctory politeness

   D. call forth (emotions, feelings, and responses)

   Key: B (too eager to interfere)

7. [mc · recall · DOK 1] What does Fitzwilliam reveal?

   A. Lydia eloped

   B. Wickham is a thief

   C. Darcy saved a friend from an imprudent marriage

   D. Darcy is engaged

   Key: C (Darcy saved a friend from an imprudent marriage)

8. [mc · recall · DOK 1] Which word completes this sentence from Chapter XXXIII, paragraph 36? “But,’ she continued, _____ herself, ‘as we know none of the particulars, it is not fair to condemn him.”

   A. recollecting

B. fortune

C. therefore

D. uncommonly

Key: A (recollecting)

9. [mc · recall · DOK 1] In the line “When have you been prevented by want of money from going wherever you chose, or procuring anything you had a fancy for?”, what does “procuring” most nearly mean?

   A. showy; ostentatious

   B. offset; reduced the effect of

   C. get by special effort

   D. attract; cause to be enamored

   Key: C (get by special effort)

10. [fill · recall · DOK 1] Fill in the blank with the vocabulary word that fits: “Is this,’ thought Elizabeth, ‘meant for me?’ and she coloured at the idea; but, _____ herself, said in a lively tone, ‘And pray, what is the usual price of an Earl’s younger son?” Word bank: tractable, recovering, lessening, officious

    Key: recovering

11. [fill · recall · DOK 1] Complete the quotation from Chapter XXXIII, paragraph 24: “From _____ that he told me in our journey hither, I have reason to think Bingley very much indebted to him.” Word bank: immediately, uncommonly, something, fortune

    Key: something

12. [short · inference · DOK 2] What does this passage from Chapter XXXIII, paragraph 33 reveal about the character or situation? “Elizabeth made no answer, and walked on, her heart swelling with indignation.” Answer in two or three sentences with one detail.

    Sample answer: The passage (Chapter XXXIII, paragraph 33) shows the situation turning on first impressions and prejudice: even an earl's son must consider fortune. The words “indignation” and “swelling” are the proof, because they show how the moment looks to the people in it. They suggest more than the narrator states outright.

13. [short · inference · DOK 2] What does this passage from Chapter XXXIII, paragraph 1 reveal about the character or situation? “He never said a great deal, nor did she give herself the trouble of talking or of listening much; but it struck her in the course of their third rencontre that he was asking some odd unconnected questions—about her pleasure in being at…” Answer in two or three sentences with one detail.

    Sample answer: The passage (Chapter XXXIII, paragraph 1) shows the situation turning on first impressions and prejudice: even an earl's son must consider fortune. The words “understanding” and “unconnected” are the proof, because they show how the moment looks to the people in it. They suggest more than the narrator states outright.

14. [short · analysis · DOK 3] Analyze how the word choice in this passage from Chapter XXXIII, paragraph 38 shapes its tone: “If his own vanity, however, did not mislead him, he was the cause, his pride and caprice were the cause of all that Jane had suffered, and still continued to suffer.” Pick two words and explain their effect.

    Sample answer: The words “continued” and “suffered” (Chapter XXXIII, paragraph 38) make the tone heavy and deliberate rather than neutral. That weight points the reader to class and social mobility: even an earl's son must consider fortune. The author chooses them so the moment feels significant instead of passing.

15. [short · analysis · DOK 3] Analyze how the word choice in this passage from Chapter XXXIII, paragraph 9 shapes its tone: “I do not know anybody who seems more to enjoy the power of doing what he likes than

Mr. Darcy." Pick two words and explain their effect.

Sample answer: The words "anybody" (Chapter XXXIII, paragraph 9) make the tone heavy and deliberate rather than neutral. That weight points the reader to pride and self-knowledge: even an earl's son must consider fortune. The author chooses them so the moment feels significant instead of passing.

16. [short · synthesis · DOK 4] Close reading: how do the diction and syntax of "Younger sons cannot marry where they like" (Chapter XXXIII, paragraph 12) shape its meaning? Consider a second, competing reading.

    Sample answer: The colonel on money. The evidence is "Younger sons cannot marry where they like" (Chapter XXXIII, paragraph 12). This develops marriage and money: even an earl's son must consider fortune. The words "cannot" and "marry" carry that meaning: they are the charged choices in the line, and changing either would soften the effect. He says Darcy congratulated himself on "having lately saved a friend from the inconveniences of a most imprudent marriage," which Elizabeth instantly understands as Jane's ruin.

17. [mc · recall · DOK 1] Which word completes this sentence from Chapter XXXIII, paragraph 4? "I have been making the tour of the Park,' he replied, 'as I _____ do every year, and intend to close it with a call at the Parsonage."

    A. generally

    B. unexpectedly

    C. advantage

    D. therefore

    Key: A (generally)

18. [fill · recall · DOK 1] Complete the quotation from Chapter XXXIII, paragraph 12: "Younger sons _____ marry where they like"

    Key: cannot

19. [mc · recall · DOK 1] In the line "I never heard any harm of her; and I dare say she is one of the most tractable creatures in the world.", what does "tractable" most nearly mean?

    A. pull back or move away or backward

    B. react verbally

    C. easy to manage or control

    D. sternness; severity

    Key: C (easy to manage or control)

20. [short · analysis · DOK 3] Analyze how the word choice in this passage from Chapter XXXIII, paragraph 1 shapes its tone: "She felt all the perverseness of the mischance that should bring him where no one else was brought; and to prevent its ever happening again, took care to inform him at first, that it was a favourite haunt of hers." Pick two words and explain their effect.

    Sample answer: The words "perverseness" and "mischance" (Chapter XXXIII, paragraph 1) make the tone heavy and deliberate rather than neutral. That weight points the reader to class and social mobility: even an earl's son must consider fortune. The author chooses them so the moment feels significant instead of passing.

21. [mc · recall · DOK 1] Why does Fitzwilliam say he must marry money?

    A. He is a clergyman

    B. He is in debt

    C. He is a younger son

    D. His father insists

Key: C (He is a younger son)

22. [mc · recall · DOK 1] Whom does Elizabeth realize the friend is?

    A. Fitzwilliam

    B. Collins

    C. Wickham

    D. Bingley

    Key: D (Bingley)

23. [short · inference · DOK 2] What can you infer from this line? “Younger sons cannot marry where they like” (Chapter XXXIII, paragraph 12) Answer in two or three sentences with one detail.

    Sample answer: The colonel on money. The evidence is “Younger sons cannot marry where they like” (Chapter XXXIII, paragraph 12). This develops marriage and money: even an earl's son must consider fortune.

24. [mc · analysis · DOK 3] Which literary element does this describe in “Chapter XXXIII”? Colonel Fitzwilliam tells Elizabeth that Darcy saved a friend from ‘a most imprudent marriage’; she realizes it is Bingley and Jane.

    A. Hyperbole

    B. Plot

    C. Simile

    D. Theme

    Key: B (Plot)

25. [mc · analysis · DOK 3] In this chapter, which theme does the following most directly develop? Even an earl's son must consider fortune.

    A. Class and social mobility

    B. First impressions and prejudice

    C. Pride and self-knowledge

    D. Marriage and money

    Key: D (Marriage and money)

26. [short · synthesis · DOK 4] Connect this passage from Chapter XXXIII, paragraph 22 to the story's treatment of marriage and money: “Their brother is a pleasant gentleman-like man—he is a great friend of Darcy’s.” Use one other moment from the story as well.

    Sample answer: This passage (Chapter XXXIII, paragraph 22) develops marriage and money: even an earl's son must consider fortune. Its words “gentleman” and “pleasant” carry that idea into this moment. The same concern returns in “But I ought to beg his pardon, for I have no right to suppose that Bingley was the person meant.” (Chapter XXXIII, paragraph 24), so the two passages read as a pattern, not a single moment. Together they show the story treating marriage and money as central.

27. [short · synthesis · DOK 4] Connect this passage from Chapter XXXIII, paragraph 17 to the story's treatment of women's limited choices: “But, perhaps his sister does as well for the present, and, as she is under his sole care, he may do what he likes with her.” Use one other moment from the story as well.

    Sample answer: This passage (Chapter XXXIII, paragraph 17) develops women's limited choices: even an earl's son must consider fortune. Its words “perhaps” and “present” carry that idea into this moment. The same concern returns in “I imagine your cousin brought you down with him chiefly for the sake of having somebody at his disposal.” (Chapter XXXIII, paragraph 17), so the two passages read as a pattern, not a single moment. Together they show the story treating women's limited choices as central.

28. [short · analysis · DOK 3 · AP: AP-LIT.LAN] Claim: The colonel's disclosure confirms Elizabeth's worst view of Darcy and sets up the proposal. Explain how this evidence supports the claim: “having lately saved a friend from the inconveniences of a most imprudent marriage” (Chapter XXXIII, paragraph 28).
    Sample answer: He says Darcy congratulated himself on "having lately saved a friend from the inconveniences of a most imprudent marriage," which Elizabeth instantly understands as Jane's ruin. The evidence is “having lately saved a friend from the inconveniences of a most imprudent marriage” (Chapter XXXIII, paragraph 28) — The revelation. This develops marriage and money: even an earl's son must consider fortune.

29. [short · synthesis · DOK 4 · AP: AP-LIT.LAN] Evaluate this claim about the chapter: “The colonel's disclosure confirms Elizabeth's worst view of Darcy and sets up the proposal.” Is it fully persuasive? Argue with evidence, including a passage that complicates it.
    Sample answer: The claim is persuasive in part. “having lately saved a friend from the inconveniences of a most imprudent marriage” (Chapter XXXIII, paragraph 28) supports it: He says Darcy congratulated himself on "having lately saved a friend from the inconveniences of a most imprudent marriage," which Elizabeth instantly understands as Jane's ruin. But “Younger sons cannot marry where they like” (Chapter XXXIII, paragraph 12) complicates it: the line (the colonel on money) shows the same issue from another side, and its “cannot” marks a limit or reversal the claim passes over. Weighing the two passages, the claim survives, but only once it admits the tension the second passage creates.

30. [fill · recall · DOK 1 · AP: AP-LIT.FIG] Complete the quotation from Chapter XXXIII, paragraph 13: “Unless where they like women of _____, which I think they very often do.” Word bank: fortune, uncommonly, generally, thoughtful
    Key: fortune

31. [short · analysis · DOK 3 · AP: AP-LIT.FIG] Analyze how the word choice in this passage from Chapter XXXIII, paragraph 40 shapes its tone: “To Jane herself,’ she exclaimed, ‘there could be no possibility of objection.” Pick two words and explain their effect.
    Sample answer: The words “possibility” and “exclaimed” (Chapter XXXIII, paragraph 40) make the tone heavy and deliberate rather than neutral. That weight points the reader to pride and self-knowledge: even an earl's son must consider fortune. The author chooses them so the moment feels significant instead of passing.

32. [short · synthesis · DOK 4 · AP: AP-LIT.LAN] Synthesis: trace how marriage and money develops from Chapter XXXII to Chapter XXXIII. Use one quotation from each.
    Sample answer: Earlier, in Chapter XXXII, paragraph 1, the text reads “Elizabeth was sitting by herself the next morning, and writing to Jane” — Opening. In Chapter XXXIII, “Younger sons cannot marry where they like” (Chapter XXXIII, paragraph 12), which shows the colonel on money. Even an earl's son must consider fortune.

33. [mc · recall · DOK 1 · AP: AP-LIT.CHR] How does Elizabeth react to Colonel Fitzwilliam's remark about an 'imprudent marriage'?
    A. She confronts Lady Catherine
    B. She laughs
    C. She weeps and stays home
    D. She leaves Kent

    Key: C (She weeps and stays home)

34. [short · synthesis · DOK 4 · AP: AP-LIT.FIG] Close reading: how do the diction and syntax of “there were some very strong objections against the lady” (Chapter XXXIII, paragraph 30) shape its meaning? Consider a second, competing reading.

Sample answer: The cause of separation. The evidence is “there were some very strong objections against the lady” (Chapter XXXIII, paragraph 30). This develops marriage and money: even an earl's son must consider fortune. The words “objections” and “against” carry that meaning: they are the charged choices in the line, and changing either would soften the effect. He says Darcy congratulated himself on "having lately saved a friend from the inconveniences of a most imprudent marriage," which Elizabeth instantly understands as Jane's ruin.

35. [mc · inference · DOK 2 · Dual Credit (Indiana College Core): ICC-WC-1.5] What does this passage most clearly show? “Younger sons cannot marry where they like” (Chapter XXXIII, paragraph 12)

    A. Wickham's interest shifts to an heiress, Miss King.

    B. Elizabeth's comment on distance.

    C. The colonel on money.

    D. Her judgment follows her feelings.

    Key: C (The colonel on money.)

36. [short · inference · DOK 2 · Program outcome: LeL-C2-LIT-1] What can you infer from this line? “there were some very strong objections against the lady” (Chapter XXXIII, paragraph 30) Answer in two or three sentences with one detail.

    Sample answer: The cause of separation. The evidence is “there were some very strong objections against the lady” (Chapter XXXIII, paragraph 30). This develops marriage and money: even an earl's son must consider fortune.

37. [mc · inference · DOK 2 · Program outcome: LeL-C2-LIT-1] Which choice best states a central concern of “Chapter XXXIII”?

    A. A revelation from the colonel

    B. Confiding and consent

    C. Character flaws examined

    D. A persuasive tale

    Key: A (A revelation from the colonel)

38. [short · analysis · DOK 3 · Program outcome: LeL-C2-LIT-1] Analyze the word choice in “having lately saved a friend from the inconveniences of a most imprudent marriage” (Chapter XXXIII, paragraph 28). Pick two words and explain what they suggest.

    Sample answer: The revelation. The evidence is “having lately saved a friend from the inconveniences of a most imprudent marriage” (Chapter XXXIII, paragraph 28). This develops marriage and money: even an earl's son must consider fortune. The words “inconveniences” and “imprudent” carry that meaning: they are the charged choices in the line, and changing either would soften the effect.

39. [mc · analysis · DOK 3 · Program outcome: LeL-GR-LIT-1] Which literary element does this describe in “Chapter XXXIII”? The colonel explains that as a younger son he must marry money.

    A. Simile

    B. Hyperbole

    C. Characterization

    D. Tone / mood

    Key: C (Characterization)

Rigor version	Items (in order)	Mix

Scaffolded support	1, 2, 3, 4, 5, 6, 7, 8, 9, 10, 11, 12, 13, 14, 15, 16	recall 11, inference 2, analysis 2, synthesis 1
HS Freshman	4, 9, 17, 5, 8, 18, 2, 19, 11, 10, 12, 13, 15, 20, 14, 16	recall 10, inference 2, analysis 3, synthesis 1
HS Sophomore	8, 4, 5, 21, 6, 17, 22, 3, 13, 12, 23, 14, 24, 25, 26, 27	recall 8, inference 3, analysis 3, synthesis 2
HS Junior	10, 11, 17, 6, 9, 3, 18, 13, 12, 23, 28, 25, 20, 15, 26, 29	recall 7, inference 3, analysis 4, synthesis 2
HS Senior	1, 22, 4, 8, 30, 17, 23, 13, 12, 15, 31, 24, 25, 26, 29, 32	recall 6, inference 3, analysis 4, synthesis 3
AP	8, 17, 33, 10, 18, 12, 14, 15, 20, 25, 31, 27, 26, 34, 32, 29	recall 5, inference 1, analysis 5, synthesis 5
College Freshman	18, 10, 7, 12, 13, 35, 24, 14, 25, 31, 28, 32, 29, 27, 34, 26	recall 3, inference 3, analysis 5, synthesis 5
College Sophomore	17, 33, 10, 18, 36, 37, 15, 31, 25, 20, 14, 38, 26, 32, 29, 27	recall 4, inference 2, analysis 6, synthesis 4
College Junior	18, 9, 10, 7, 37, 13, 14, 15, 38, 25, 20, 31, 32, 27, 29, 26	recall 4, inference 2, analysis 6, synthesis 4
College Senior	19, 18, 10, 35, 37, 13, 14, 31, 25, 15, 20, 27, 26, 32, 34, 29	recall 3, inference 3, analysis 5, synthesis 5
Graduate / PhD	18, 10, 7, 22, 23, 25, 14, 20, 39, 31, 15, 34, 32, 27, 26, 29	recall 4, inference 1, analysis 6, synthesis 5

Writing prompts (eleven rigor levels)

Scaffolded support (250 words; AP: see unit standards): Supported track (work from the passage your teacher selects). In “Chapter XXXIII,” how does Austen show a revelation from the colonel? Write a paragraph that states your claim, quotes two details from the passage, and explains how each detail supports your idea. Use the plot you noticed as one piece of evidence.

HS Freshman (350 words; AP: see unit standards): In Chapter XXXIII, how does Austen develop the idea of a revelation from the colonel? State a clear claim, support it with two or three quotations, and explain how the plot in the chapter helps build that idea.

HS Sophomore (450 words; AP: see unit standards): Analyze how Chapter XXXIII develops the idea of a revelation from the colonel. Make a precise claim, support it with at least three pieces of textual evidence, and explain how the author's use of plot and irony shapes that idea. Address one possible counterclaim.

HS Junior (550 words; AP: see unit standards): Analyze how the structure of Chapter XXXIII (where it begins, turns and ends) and its plot shape the reader's understanding of a revelation from the colonel. Identify one place where the text leaves matters uncertain and explain how that uncertainty adds to its meaning.

HS Senior (600 words; AP: see unit standards): Two readers disagree about what Chapter XXXIII suggests about a revelation from the colonel. Lay out two plausible interpretations, weigh the evidence for each (including the chapter's plot and irony), and argue for the stronger one in a sustained, well-organized essay.

AP (650 words; AP: AP-LIT.STR, AP-LIT.LAN): Write a literary argument in which you analyze how Jane Austen uses plot in Chapter XXXIII to complicate the reader's understanding of a revelation from the colonel. Develop a defensible thesis, select evidence purposefully, and explain how specific choices of diction and syntax create meaning.

College Freshman (1000 words; AP: see unit standards): Situate Chapter XXXIII within its historical and literary context and argue how the chapter's treatment of a revelation from the colonel responds to that context. Engage with at least one secondary perspective (a critic, historian or the author's own statements), integrate quotations smoothly, and cite in MLA style.

College Sophomore (1250 words; AP: see unit standards): Read Chapter XXXIII alongside the conventions of its genre and period. Argue how the chapter's handling of a revelation from the colonel follows or bends those conventions, using the plot as evidence, and test your reading against one published critic. Document two secondary sources in MLA.

College Junior (1500 words; AP: see unit standards): Apply a named critical approach (for example formalist, historicist, feminist, psychoanalytic or ecocritical) to Chapter XXXIII and its treatment of a revelation from the colonel. State your method, show what it reveals in the chapter's plot and irony, and identify where the text resists it.

College Senior (2000 words; AP: see unit standards): Develop a research argument that reads Chapter XXXIII as evidence for a larger claim about a revelation from the colonel in Pride and Prejudice. Connect close reading of the chapter to the whole novel, engage at least four scholarly sources, and state precisely where your reading departs from theirs (Chicago style).

Graduate / PhD (2500 words; AP: see unit standards): Develop an original argument that reads Chapter XXXIII as a hinge in the novel's larger treatment of a revelation from the colonel. Position your reading within a named critical conversation (for example formalist, historicist, psychoanalytic, feminist or postcolonial approaches), account for the textual history where relevant, and articulate the stakes of your intervention for scholarship on Pride and Prejudice.

SAT-style questions

1. I never heard any harm of her; and I dare say she is one of the most tractable creatures in the world.

   As used in the text, what does the word “tractable” most nearly mean?

   A. easy to manage or control

   B. regaining self-control

   C. too eager to interfere

   D. get by special effort

2. "In my opinion, the younger son of an Earl can know very little of either. Now, seriously, what have you ever known of self-denial and dependence? When have you been prevented by want of money from going wherever you chose, or procuring anything you had a fancy for?"

Which choice best states a central concern of "Chapter XXXIII"?

A. Disappointment and philosophy

B. Self-recognition

C. A disastrous ball

D. A revelation from the colonel

SAT key: 1. A (easy to manage or control); 2. D (A revelation from the colonel)

Lesson 35: Chapter XXXIV

Focus: the first proposal

Objective: Students will analyze how conflict develops in "Chapter XXXIV" by writing a claim-evidence-reasoning paragraph that cites at least 2 quotations from the section, and will score at least 80% on the section quiz.

Standards: AP: see the unit standards

Teacher only · spoilers

Darcy unexpectedly proposes, insulting her family and confessing he loves her against his will. Elizabeth rejects him angrily, accusing him of ruining Jane's happiness and wronging Wickham, and telling him he would not have moved her "had you behaved in a more gentleman-like manner."

Background: A proposal from a man of Darcy's wealth was extraordinary for a woman of Elizabeth's means.

Significance: The climax of the first half: pride and prejudice collide openly.

Lesson plan and lecture script (90 minutes)

0–8 min · Bell-ringer · You do (8 min)
Students write to the bell-ringer, then pair-share.
Which of Elizabeth's accusations is fair, and which is mistaken? Write for five minutes. Starters: I think... because... / This connects to pride and prejudice because....
Prompt: Which of Elizabeth's accusations is fair, and which is mistaken?
Sentence starters: I think… because… · This connects to pride and prejudice because…
Strong response: A strong response takes a position and anticipates this: his pride shapes the proposal; her prejudice shapes the refusal.

8–18 min · Vocabulary with etymology notes · I do (10 min)
Five key words in context, with verified word histories.
Today's words: agitating — upsetting; disturbing; perusal — a careful reading; repressed — held back; kept under control; inflict — impose something unpleasant; obstacles — something immaterial that stands in the way and must be circumvented or surmounted. "repressed": Origin of "repress": Latin repressus. "inflict": Origin: Latin īnflictus. "obstacles": Origin of "obstacle": Old French obstacle; earlier Latin obstāculum.
Words: agitating: upsetting; disturbing · perusal: a careful reading · repressed: held back; kept under control · inflict: impose something unpleasant · obstacles: something immaterial that stands in the way and must be circumvented or surmounted

18–28 min · Background and context · I do (10 min)
Mini-lecture (read or adapt the script).
A proposal from a man of Darcy's wealth was extraordinary for a woman of Elizabeth's means. The climax of the first half: pride and prejudice collide openly. Structure: The first proposal: the novel's turning point. Darcy declares love while describing his struggle against it; Elizabeth refuses and accuses him. Dialogue: Both speak with heat; each wounds the other. Watch for rank and condescension: Rank is displayed and enforced, above all at Rosings by Lady Catherine; Elizabeth refuses to be cowed. In this chapter: "It was some consolation to think that his visit to Rosings was to end on the day after the next, and a" (Chapter XXXIV, paragraph 1).

28–40 min · I do: modeled close reading · I do (12 min)
Model the close reading of the anchor quotation using the written think-aloud below.
First, meaning. I read "had you behaved in a more gentleman-like manner" slowly and put it in my own words: Elizabeth tells Darcy his proposal only spared her the guilt she might have felt in refusing him, had he behaved in a more gentleman-like manner. Next, craft. I notice she strikes at his pride with his own standard. The strongest word is "gentleman-like": it attacks the very quality Darcy prides himself on. Then, effect. Why does Elizabeth's rejection wound Darcy so deeply? My answer: Elizabeth's rejection wounds Darcy so deeply because she says he behaved in an ungentlemanlike manner, attacking his pride in his own conduct; the insult forces Darcy to examine his manners.

> had you behaved in a more gentleman-like manner (Chapter XXXIV, paragraph 24)

Think-aloud: First, meaning. I read "had you behaved in a more gentleman-like manner" slowly and put it in my own words: Elizabeth tells Darcy his proposal only spared her the guilt she might have felt in refusing him, had he behaved in a more gentleman-like manner. Next, craft. I notice she strikes at his pride with his own standard. The strongest word is "gentleman-like": it attacks the very quality Darcy prides himself on. Then, effect. Why does Elizabeth's rejection wound Darcy so deeply? My answer: Elizabeth's rejection wounds Darcy so deeply because she says he behaved in an ungentlemanlike manner, attacking his pride in his own conduct; the insult forces Darcy to examine his manners.

40–55 min · We do: guided annotation · We do (15 min)
Guided analysis of a second quotation; expected answers given.
Ask: What words in this line stand out, and what do they suggest? Expected: "Struggled" admits he fought his love, which insults her. Pride and prejudice both shape the scene. Ask: How does this line connect to pride and prejudice? Expected: His pride shapes the proposal; her prejudice shapes the refusal. (Proposal opening.)

> In vain have I struggled. It will not do. My feelings will not be repressed. You must allow me to tell you how ardently I admire and love you (Chapter XXXIV, paragraph 4)

Ask: What words in this line stand out, and what do they suggest?
Expected answer: "Struggled" admits he fought his love, which insults her. Pride and prejudice both shape the scene.
Ask: How does this line connect to pride and prejudice?
Expected answer: His pride shapes the proposal; her prejudice shapes the refusal. (Proposal opening.)

55–70 min · You do: independent annotation · You do (15 min)
Independent annotation and a claim-evidence-reasoning paragraph (exemplar given).
Annotate the chapter for structure, dialogue (three marks with a margin note each), then write one claim-evidence-reasoning paragraph: what does this chapter suggest about the first proposal? Then start your writing prompt at your assigned level (HS Sophomore: Analyze how Chapter XXXIV develops the idea of the first proposal. Make a precise claim, support it with at least three pieces of textual evidence, and explain how the author's use of conflict and characterization shapes that idea. Address one possible counterclaim.) Exemplar: The proposal fails because Darcy's pride and Elizabeth's prejudice collide. When the text says "You could not have made me the offer of your hand in any possible way that would have tempted me to accept it" (Chapter XXXIV, paragraph 26), it shows this directly. He confesses "in vain have I struggled," dwelling on her inferiority even as he declares love, and she replies that no offer "in any possible way" could have tempted her.
Task: Annotate the chapter for structure, dialogue (three marks with a margin note each), then write one claim-evidence-reasoning paragraph: what does this chapter suggest about the first proposal? Then start your writing prompt at your assigned level (HS Sophomore: Analyze how Chapter XXXIV develops the idea of the first proposal. Make a precise claim, support it with at least three pieces of textual evidence, and explain how the author's use of conflict and characterization shapes that idea. Address one possible counterclaim.)
Exemplar: The proposal fails because Darcy's pride and Elizabeth's prejudice collide. When the text says "You could not have made me the offer of your hand in any possible way that would have tempted me to accept it" (Chapter XXXIV, paragraph 26), it shows this directly. He confesses "in vain have I struggled," dwelling on her inferiority even as he declares love, and she replies that no offer "in any possible way" could have tempted her.

70–80 min · Discussion · We do (10 min)
Structured discussion from the 30 tiered questions, with facilitation notes.
Anchor question: Which of Elizabeth's accusations is fair, and which is mistaken? Ask: what does each get wrong, and what does each get right?
Anchor question: Which of Elizabeth's accusations is fair, and which is mistaken?
Facilitation: Ask: what does each get wrong, and what does each get right?

80–87 min · Exit ticket / chapter quiz · You do (7 min)
Chapter quiz in the app and an exit ticket (answer given).
Chapter quiz in the app, then: In one sentence, what does this chapter suggest about the first proposal? Support it with one short quotation. Model answer: The proposal fails because Darcy's pride and Elizabeth's prejudice collide. ("You could not have made me the offer of your hand in any possible way that would have tempted me to accept it", Chapter XXXIV, paragraph 26). Accept any defensible claim backed by a quotation from the chapter; the answer key for the quiz is in the Quiz section.
Exit ticket: In one sentence, what does this chapter suggest about the first proposal? Support it with one short quotation.
Answer: Model answer: The proposal fails because Darcy's pride and Elizabeth's prejudice collide. ("You could not have made me the offer of your hand in any possible way that would have tempted me to accept it", Chapter XXXIV, paragraph 26). Accept any defensible claim backed by a quotation from the chapter; the answer key for the quiz is in the Quiz section.

> 87–90 min · Closure · I do (3 min)
> Summarize the lesson and preview the next reading.
> Today we saw how structure shapes the first proposal. Key takeaway: his pride shapes the proposal; her prejudice shapes the refusal.

Total: 90 minutes.

Teacher analysis (spoilers)

Literary elements

- Structure: The first proposal: the novel's turning point. Darcy declares love while describing his struggle against it; Elizabeth refuses and accuses him.
- Dialogue: Both speak with heat; each wounds the other.

Themes and how they develop

- pride and prejudice: his pride shapes the proposal; her prejudice shapes the refusal.

Symbols and motifs

- rank and condescension: Rank is displayed and enforced, above all at Rosings by Lady Catherine; Elizabeth refuses to be cowed. In this chapter: “It was some consolation to think that his visit to Rosings was to end on the day after the next, and a” (Chapter XXXIV, paragraph 1).
- silence and reserve: What characters leave unsaid (Darcy's reserve, Jane's composure, Elizabeth's secrets) drives misunderstanding. In this chapter: “Elizabeth was surprised, but said not a word. After a silence of several minutes he came towards her in an agitated manner” (Chapter XXXIV, paragraph 3).

Key quotations (checked against the reading text)

- “In vain have I struggled. It will not do. My feelings will not be repressed. You must allow me to tell you how ardently I admire and love you” (Chapter XXXIV, paragraph 4) Proposal opening.
- “had you behaved in a more gentleman-like manner” (Chapter XXXIV, paragraph 24) Elizabeth's charge that wounds him most.
- “You could not have made me the offer of your hand in any possible way that would have tempted me to accept it” (Chapter XXXIV, paragraph 26) Final refusal.

Model claim-evidence-reasoning

Claim: The proposal fails because Darcy's pride and Elizabeth's prejudice collide.
Evidence: “You could not have made me the offer of your hand in any possible way that would have tempted me to accept it” (Chapter XXXIV, paragraph 26)
Reasoning: He confesses "in vain have I struggled," dwelling on her inferiority even as he declares love, and she replies that no offer "in any possible way" could have tempted her.

Vocabulary with etymology notes

Word	Definition (in this sentence)	In context	Word history
agitating (adjective)	upsetting; disturbing	She continued in very agitating reflections till the sound of Lady Catherine's carriage made her feel how unequal she was to encounter Charlotte's observation, and hurried her away to her room.
perusal (noun)	a careful reading	Elizabeth noticed every sentence conveying the idea of uneasiness, with an attention which it had hardly received on the first perusal.
repressed (verb)	held back; kept under control	My feelings will not be repressed.	"repressed": Origin of "repress": Latin repressus. (Liber et Libri origin note, https://en.wiktionary.org/wiki/repress#Etymology)
inflict (verb)	impose something unpleasant	Darcy's shameful boast of what misery he had been able to inflict, gave her a keener sense of her sister's sufferings.	"inflict": Origin: Latin īnflīctus. (Liber et Libri origin note, https://en.wiktionary.org/wiki/inflict#Etymology)
obstacles (noun)	something immaterial that stands in the way and must be circumvented or surmounted	His sense of her inferiority—of its being a degradation—of the family obstacles which judgment had always opposed to inclination, were dwelt on with a warmth which seemed due to the consequence he was wounding, but was very unlikely to recommend his suit.	"obstacles": Origin of "obstacle": Old French obstacle; earlier Latin obstāculum. (Liber et Libri origin note, https://en.wiktionary.org/wiki/obstacle#Etymology)
degradation (noun)	changing to a lower state (a less respected state)	His sense of her inferiority—of its being a degradation—of the family obstacles which judgment had always opposed to inclination, were dwelt on with a warmth which seemed due to the consequence he was wounding, but was very unlikely to recommend his suit.	"degradation": Origin: French dégradation. (Liber et Libri origin note, https://en.wiktionary.org/wiki/degradation#Etymology)
disturbance (noun)	agitation; a troubled state	His complexion became pale with anger, and the disturbance of his mind was visible in every feature.	"disturbance": From Latin disturbare "to throw into disorder," from dis- "completely" + turbare "to disorder," from turba "turmoil." (Online Etymology Dictionary (hand-checked note), https://www.etymonline.com/word/disturbance)

compose (verb)	to calm (oneself)	She tried, however, to compose herself to answer him with patience, when he should have done.	"compose": Origin: Old French composer ("to compose"); earlier Latin componere ("to put together"). (Liber et Libri origin note, https://en.wiktionary.org/wiki/compose#Etymology)

Discussion questions

1. Which of Elizabeth's accusations is fair, and which is mistaken?
2. Where does conflict appear in this chapter, and what effect does it have? Point to one passage.
3. How does this chapter connect to the book's larger concern with class and social mobility?

Classroom discussion questions (30, tiered)

Wait time after every question (3 s for DOK 1, 5 s for DOK 2, 8 to 10 s for DOK 3 and 4); think-pair-share on DOK 3 and 4; answer each response with a follow-up probe; close with student-generated questions. Focus sets by rigor level: Scaffolded support: 1, 2, 3, 4, 5, 6, 11, 12, 13, 14, 21, 22; HS Freshman: 1, 2, 3, 4, 5, 12, 13, 14, 15, 22, 23, 24; HS Sophomore: 1, 2, 3, 4, 13, 14, 15, 16, 17, 23, 24, 25; HS Junior: 1, 2, 3, 14, 15, 16, 17, 18, 24, 25, 26, 27; HS Senior: 1, 2, 3, 15, 16, 17, 18, 25, 26, 27, 28, 29; AP: 1, 2, 16, 17, 18, 19, 20, 26, 27, 28, 29, 30; College Freshman: 1, 2, 17, 18, 19, 20, 21, 22, 27, 28, 29, 30; College Sophomore: 1, 2, 11, 18, 19, 20, 21, 22, 23, 28, 29, 30; College Junior: 1, 11, 12, 19, 20, 21, 22, 23, 24, 25, 29, 30; College Senior: 1, 11, 12, 13, 20, 21, 22, 23, 24, 25, 26, 30; Graduate / PhD: 1, 11, 12, 13, 21, 22, 23, 24, 25, 26, 27, 28

Literal / recall

1. What does Darcy do? [DOK 1 · coldCallWithSupport · wait 3 s · AP: unit standards] Look for: Proposes to Elizabeth
2. How does Darcy describe his love? [DOK 1 · turnAndTalk · wait 3 s · AP: unit standards] Look for: Against his will and judgment
3. What two charges does Elizabeth make? [DOK 1 · coldCallWithSupport · wait 3 s · AP: unit standards] Look for: Ruining Jane's happiness and wronging Wickham
4. Which phrase of Elizabeth's stings Darcy most? [DOK 1 · turnAndTalk · wait 3 s · AP: unit standards] Look for: "had you behaved in a more gentleman-like manner"
5. What is ironic about the proposal? [DOK 1 · coldCallWithSupport · wait 3 s · AP: unit standards] Look for: Darcy expects acceptance but is rejected
6. Retell the three most important events of "Chapter XXXIV" in order, in one sentence each. [DOK 1 · turnAndTalk · wait 3 s · AP: unit standards] Look for: Darcy unexpectedly proposes, insulting her family and confessing he loves her against his will. Elizabeth rejects him angrily, accusing him of ruining Jane's happiness and wronging Wickham, and telling him he would not have moved her "had you behaved in a more gentleman-like manner."
7. Which characters appear or are mentioned in "Chapter XXXIV"? Name two and one thing each says or does. [DOK 1 · coldCallWithSupport · wait 3 s · AP: unit standards] Look for: Names and actions taken from the chapter; check against the teacher summary.
8. Where and when does "Chapter XXXIV" take place? Point to the line that tells you. [DOK 1 · turnAndTalk · wait 3 s · AP: unit standards] Look for: A place/time detail quoted from the chapter.
9. Reread: "She continued in very agitating reflections till the sound of Lady Catherine's carriage made her feel how unequal she was to encounter Charlotte's observation, and hurried her away to her room." What does “agitating” mean here, and what is literally happening in this line? [DOK 1 · turnAndTalk · wait 3 s · AP: unit standards] Look for: agitating: upsetting; disturbing.

10. Reread: “Elizabeth noticed every sentence conveying the idea of uneasiness, with an attention which it had hardly received on the first perusal.” What does “perusal” mean here, and what is literally happening in this line? [DOK 1 · turnAndTalk · wait 3 s · AP: unit standards] Look for: perusal: a careful reading.

Inferential / analytical

1. What does “Chapter XXXIV” suggest about the first proposal? State the inference and the line that supports it. [DOK 2 · thinkPairShare · wait 5 s · AP-LIT.LAN] Look for: The climax of the first half: pride and prejudice collide openly.
2. Find one example of conflict in this chapter. What does it reveal that a plain statement would not? [DOK 2 · followUp · wait 5 s · AP-LIT.STR] Look for: Look for the forces, people or desires pulling against each other.
3. How does the characterization in this chapter shape what we understand about the first proposal? [DOK 3 · thinkPairShare · wait 8 s · AP-LIT.CHR] Look for: Look for what characters say, do and think, and how others react to them.
   Answer guidance: A defensible line of argument: The proposal fails because Darcy's pride and Elizabeth's prejudice collide. Useful evidence: “In vain have I struggled. It will not do. My feelings will not be repressed. You must allow me to tell you how ardently I admire and love you” (Chapter XXXIV, paragraph 4): Proposal opening. Theme link: his pride shapes the proposal; her prejudice shapes the refusal. Credit any position that is supported by quotation and reasoning; push one-sided answers to address the strongest counterpoint.
4. In the passage that begins “Elizabeth’s astonishment was beyond expression.”, why might Austen have chosen these particular words? Pick two and explain their connotations. [DOK 2 · followUp · wait 5 s · AP-LIT.FIG] Look for: Diction analysis of two words in the anchor passage.
5. What causes the main turn in “Chapter XXXIV”, and what effect is it likely to have on what follows? [DOK 2 · followUp · wait 5 s · AP-LIT.STR] Look for: Darcy unexpectedly proposes, insulting her family and confessing he loves her against his will. Elizabeth rejects him angrily, accusing him of ruining Jane's happiness and wronging Wickham, and telling him he would not have moved her “had you behaved in a more gentleman-like manner.”
6. How does “Chapter XXXIV” build on “Chapter XXXIII”? Name one link of cause and effect. [DOK 3 · thinkPairShare · wait 8 s · AP-LIT.STR] Look for: A causal or structural link between this and the previous chapter.
   Answer guidance: A defensible line of argument: The proposal fails because Darcy's pride and Elizabeth's prejudice collide. Useful evidence: “had you behaved in a more gentleman-like manner” (Chapter XXXIV, paragraph 24): Elizabeth's charge that wounds him most. On structure: The first proposal: the novel's turning point. Darcy declares love while describing his struggle against it; Elizabeth refuses and accuses him. Credit any position that is supported by quotation and reasoning; push one-sided answers to address the strongest counterpoint.
7. What can we infer about a character's motives from what they say and do here, as opposed to what they claim? [DOK 3 · followUp · wait 8 s · AP-LIT.CHR] Look for: An inference about motive supported by a quoted line.
   Answer guidance: A defensible line of argument: The proposal fails because Darcy's pride and Elizabeth's prejudice collide. Useful evidence: “You could not have made me the offer of your hand in any possible way that would have tempted me to accept it” (Chapter XXXIV, paragraph 26): Final refusal. Theme link: his pride shapes the proposal; her prejudice shapes the refusal. Credit any position that is supported by quotation and reasoning; push one-sided answers to address the strongest counterpoint.

8. The bell-ringer asked: "Which of Elizabeth's accusations is fair, and which is mistaken?" Now that we have read closely, how would you revise your first answer, and which line changed your mind? [DOK 2 · thinkPairShare · wait 5 s · AP-LIT.LAN] Look for: A revised answer anchored in the text.
9. Where does irony appear, and how does it connect this chapter to the larger concern with class and social mobility? [DOK 3 · followUp · wait 8 s · AP-LIT.NAR] Look for: Look for gaps between what characters expect or say and what is true.

   Answer guidance: A defensible line of argument: The proposal fails because Darcy's pride and Elizabeth's prejudice collide. Useful evidence: "In vain have I struggled. It will not do. My feelings will not be repressed. You must allow me to tell you how ardently I admire and love you" (Chapter XXXIV, paragraph 4): Proposal opening. Theme link: his pride shapes the proposal; her prejudice shapes the refusal. Credit any position that is supported by quotation and reasoning; push one-sided answers to address the strongest counterpoint.
10. Background: A proposal from a man of Darcy's wealth was extraordinary for a woman of Elizabeth's means. How does knowing this change the way you read one moment in the chapter? [DOK 3 · thinkPairShare · wait 8 s · AP-LIT.SET] Look for: A specific moment reread in light of the context.

    Answer guidance: A defensible line of argument: The proposal fails because Darcy's pride and Elizabeth's prejudice collide. Useful evidence: "had you behaved in a more gentleman-like manner" (Chapter XXXIV, paragraph 24): Elizabeth's charge that wounds him most. Theme link: his pride shapes the proposal; her prejudice shapes the refusal. Credit any position that is supported by quotation and reasoning; push one-sided answers to address the strongest counterpoint.

Evaluative / synthesis / creative

1. A critic might argue: "The climax of the first half: pride and prejudice collide openly." How far do you agree? Take a stand and defend it with two lines from the chapter. [DOK 3 · fourCorners · wait 8 s · AP-LIT.LAN] Look for: A defended position with evidence and one counterpoint.

   Answer guidance: A defensible line of argument: The proposal fails because Darcy's pride and Elizabeth's prejudice collide. Useful evidence: "You could not have made me the offer of your hand in any possible way that would have tempted me to accept it" (Chapter XXXIV, paragraph 26): Final refusal. Theme link: his pride shapes the proposal; her prejudice shapes the refusal. Credit any position that is supported by quotation and reasoning; push one-sided answers to address the strongest counterpoint.
2. Which character in this chapter acts most wisely, and which least? Judge them by a standard you name. [DOK 3 · thinkPairShare · wait 8 s · AP-LIT.CHR, AP-LIT.LAN] Look for: An evaluation using an explicit criterion and evidence.

   Answer guidance: A defensible line of argument: The proposal fails because Darcy's pride and Elizabeth's prejudice collide. Useful evidence: "In vain have I struggled. It will not do. My feelings will not be repressed. You must allow me to tell you how ardently I admire and love you" (Chapter XXXIV, paragraph 4): Proposal opening. Theme link: his pride shapes the proposal; her prejudice shapes the refusal. Credit any position that is supported by quotation and reasoning; push one-sided answers to address the strongest counterpoint.
3. Rewrite one moment of "Chapter XXXIV" from the point of view of a different character. What does the new angle reveal or hide about the first proposal? [DOK 4 · thinkPairShare · wait 8 s · AP-LIT.LAN, AP-LIT.NAR] Look for: A creative product with a rationale tied to the text.

   Answer guidance: A defensible line of argument: The proposal fails because Darcy's pride and Elizabeth's prejudice collide. Useful evidence: “had you behaved in a more gentleman-like manner” (Chapter XXXIV, paragraph 24): Elizabeth's charge that wounds him most. Theme link: his pride shapes the proposal; her prejudice shapes the refusal. Credit any position that is supported by quotation and reasoning; push one-sided answers to address the strongest counterpoint.

4. Write three questions of your own about “Chapter XXXIV”: one recall, one “why/how”, and one “should/what if”. Trade with a partner and answer theirs. [DOK 3 · studentGenerated · wait 8 s · AP-LIT.LAN] Look for: Student-generated questions at three levels.

   Answer guidance: A defensible line of argument: The proposal fails because Darcy's pride and Elizabeth's prejudice collide. Useful evidence: “You could not have made me the offer of your hand in any possible way that would have tempted me to accept it” (Chapter XXXIV, paragraph 26): Final refusal. Theme link: his pride shapes the proposal; her prejudice shapes the refusal. Credit any position that is supported by quotation and reasoning; push one-sided answers to address the strongest counterpoint.

5. Connect this chapter to women's limited choices: is the link strong or weak so far? What would Austen need to show next to strengthen it? [DOK 4 · socraticCircle · wait 8 s · AP-LIT.LAN] Look for: A judgment of thematic development across the work.

   Answer guidance: A defensible line of argument: The proposal fails because Darcy's pride and Elizabeth's prejudice collide. Useful evidence: “In vain have I struggled. It will not do. My feelings will not be repressed. You must allow me to tell you how ardently I admire and love you” (Chapter XXXIV, paragraph 4): Proposal opening. Theme link: his pride shapes the proposal; her prejudice shapes the refusal. Credit any position that is supported by quotation and reasoning; push one-sided answers to address the strongest counterpoint.

6. Is the conflict in this chapter effective, or does it feel heavy-handed? Evaluate it as a reader would in a review. [DOK 3 · fourCorners · wait 8 s · AP-LIT.LAN, AP-LIT.STR] Look for: An evaluative judgment with criteria and evidence.

   Answer guidance: A defensible line of argument: The proposal fails because Darcy's pride and Elizabeth's prejudice collide. Useful evidence: “had you behaved in a more gentleman-like manner” (Chapter XXXIV, paragraph 24): Elizabeth's charge that wounds him most. Theme link: his pride shapes the proposal; her prejudice shapes the refusal. Credit any position that is supported by quotation and reasoning; push one-sided answers to address the strongest counterpoint.

7. Compare how “Chapter XXXIV” treats the first proposal with how another text, film or event you know treats a similar idea. What does Pride and Prejudice see that the other misses? [DOK 4 · socraticCircle · wait 8 s · AP-LIT.LAN] Look for: A cross-text synthesis.

   Answer guidance: A defensible line of argument: The proposal fails because Darcy's pride and Elizabeth's prejudice collide. Useful evidence: “You could not have made me the offer of your hand in any possible way that would have tempted me to accept it” (Chapter XXXIV, paragraph 26): Final refusal. Theme link: his pride shapes the proposal; her prejudice shapes the refusal. Credit any position that is supported by quotation and reasoning; push one-sided answers to address the strongest counterpoint.

8. Predict what “Chapter XXXV” will bring, using two clues from this chapter. After reading, evaluate your prediction. [DOK 3 · thinkPairShare · wait 8 s · AP-LIT.LAN, AP-LIT.STR] Look for: A prediction or judgment justified with textual clues.

   Answer guidance: A defensible line of argument: The proposal fails because Darcy's pride and Elizabeth's prejudice collide. Useful evidence: “In vain have I struggled. It will not do. My feelings will not be repressed. You must allow me to tell you how ardently I admire and love you” (Chapter XXXIV, paragraph 4): Proposal opening. Theme link: his pride shapes the proposal; her prejudice shapes the refusal. Credit any position that is supported by quotation and reasoning; push one-sided answers to address the strongest counterpoint.

9. Design a one-paragraph modern adaptation of this chapter (setting, characters, conflict). What must stay the same for it to still be about the first proposal? [DOK 4 · thinkPairShare · wait 8 s · AP-LIT.LAN] Look for: A creative transfer that keeps the core idea.
   Answer guidance: A defensible line of argument: The proposal fails because Darcy's pride and Elizabeth's prejudice collide. Useful evidence: “had you behaved in a more gentleman-like manner” (Chapter XXXIV, paragraph 24): Elizabeth's charge that wounds him most. Theme link: his pride shapes the proposal; her prejudice shapes the refusal. Credit any position that is supported by quotation and reasoning; push one-sided answers to address the strongest counterpoint.
10. What question would you most like to ask Jane Austen about this chapter, and what answer do you think the text itself gives? [DOK 4 · studentGenerated · wait 8 s · AP-LIT.LAN] Look for: A student-generated question answered from evidence.
    Answer guidance: A defensible line of argument: The proposal fails because Darcy's pride and Elizabeth's prejudice collide. Useful evidence: “You could not have made me the offer of your hand in any possible way that would have tempted me to accept it” (Chapter XXXIV, paragraph 26): Final refusal. Theme link: his pride shapes the proposal; her prejudice shapes the refusal. Credit any position that is supported by quotation and reasoning; push one-sided answers to address the strongest counterpoint.

Annotation focus

- Conflict: look for the forces, people or desires pulling against each other (anchor passage in the We do segment)
- Also notice Characterization: what characters say, do and think, and how others react to them
- Also notice Irony: gaps between what characters expect or say and what is true

Chapter quiz: item bank (all eleven rigor versions)

1. [mc · recall · DOK 1] What does Darcy do?
   A. Proposes to Anne
   B. Leaves England
   C. Insults Charlotte
   D. Proposes to Elizabeth

   Key: D (Proposes to Elizabeth)
2. [fill · recall · DOK 1] Complete the quotation from Chapter XXXIV, paragraph 8: “At length, in a voice of forced _____, he said—” Word bank: calmness, reason, examination, tenderness

   Key: calmness
3. [mc · recall · DOK 1] In the line “Darcy’s shameful boast of what misery he had been able to inflict, gave her a keener sense of her sister’s sufferings.”, what does “inflict” most nearly mean?
   A. marked by firm determination or resolution; not shakable
   B. without purpose
   C. lessen the intensity of or calm
   D. impose something unpleasant

Key: D (impose something unpleasant)

4. [mc · recall · DOK 1] What is ironic about the proposal?

   A. Both agree

   B. Elizabeth proposes

   C. It is a joke

   D. Darcy expects acceptance but is rejected

   Key: D (Darcy expects acceptance but is rejected)

5. [mc · recall · DOK 1] Which word completes this sentence from Chapter XXXIV, paragraph 12? "I have every _____ in the world to think ill of you."

   A. representing

   B. endeavour

   C. examination

   D. reason

   Key: D (reason)

6. [fill · recall · DOK 1] Complete the quotation from Chapter XXXIV, paragraph 1: "When they were gone, Elizabeth, as if intending to exasperate herself as much as possible against Mr. Darcy, chose for her employment the _____ of all the letters which Jane had written to her since her being in Kent." Word bank: examination, immediately, reason, unconsciously

   Key: examination

7. [fill · recall · DOK 1] Fill in the blank with the vocabulary word that fits: "His sense of her inferiority—of its being a degradation—of the family _____ which judgment had always opposed to inclination, were dwelt on with a warmth which seemed due to the consequence he was wounding, but was very unlikely to recommend his suit." Word bank: agitating, perusal, repressed, obstacles

   Key: obstacles

8. [mc · recall · DOK 1] In the line "Elizabeth noticed every sentence conveying the idea of uneasiness, with an attention which it had hardly received on the first perusal.", what does "perusal" most nearly mean?

   A. bitterness and anger

   B. stirred up again

   C. rules governing socially acceptable behavior

   D. a careful reading

   Key: D (a careful reading)

9. [fill · recall · DOK 1] Complete the quotation from Chapter XXXIV, paragraph 4: "In vain have I _____. It will not do. My feelings will not be repressed. You must allow me to tell you how ardently I admire and love you"

   Key: struggled

10. [short · inference · DOK 2] What can you infer from this line? "In vain have I struggled. It will not do. My feelings will not be repressed. You must allow me to tell you how ardently I admire and love you" (Chapter XXXIV, paragraph 4) Answer in two or three sentences with one detail.

    Sample answer: Proposal opening. The evidence is "In vain have I struggled. It will not do. My feelings will not be repressed. You must allow me to tell you how ardently I admire and love…" (Chapter XXXIV, paragraph 4).

11. [short · inference · DOK 2] What can you infer from this line? “had you behaved in a more gentleman-like manner” (Chapter XXXIV, paragraph 24) Answer in two or three sentences with one detail.
    Sample answer: Elizabeth's charge that wounds him most. The evidence is “had you behaved in a more gentleman-like manner” (Chapter XXXIV, paragraph 24). This develops pride and prejudice: his pride shapes the proposal; her prejudice shapes the refusal.
12. [short · inference · DOK 2] What does this passage from Chapter XXXIV, paragraph 1 reveal about the character or situation? “They contained no actual complaint, nor was there any revival of past occurrences, or any communication of present suffering.” Answer in two or three sentences with one detail.
    Sample answer: The passage (Chapter XXXIV, paragraph 1) shows the situation turning on first impressions and prejudice: his pride shapes the proposal; her prejudice shapes the refusal. The words “communication” and “occurrences” are the proof, because they show how the moment looks to the people in it. They suggest more than the narrator states outright.
13. [short · inference · DOK 2] What does this passage from Chapter XXXIV, paragraph 12 reveal about the character or situation? “No motive can excuse the unjust and ungenerous part you acted there.” Answer in two or three sentences with one detail.
    Sample answer: The passage (Chapter XXXIV, paragraph 12) shows the situation turning on first impressions and prejudice: his pride shapes the proposal; her prejudice shapes the refusal. The words “ungenerous” and “unjust” are the proof, because they show how the moment looks to the people in it. They suggest more than the narrator states outright.
14. [short · analysis · DOK 3] Analyze how the word choice in this passage from Chapter XXXIV, paragraph 21 shapes its tone: “You have reduced him to his present state of poverty, comparative poverty.” Pick two words and explain their effect.
    Sample answer: The words “comparative” and “present” (Chapter XXXIV, paragraph 21) make the tone heavy and deliberate rather than neutral. That weight points the reader to pride and self-knowledge: his pride shapes the proposal; her prejudice shapes the refusal. The author chooses them so the moment feels significant instead of passing.
15. [short · analysis · DOK 3] Analyze how the word choice in this passage from Chapter XXXIV, paragraph 17 shapes its tone: “Long before it had taken place, my opinion of you was decided.” Pick two words and explain their effect.
    Sample answer: The words “opinion” and “decided” (Chapter XXXIV, paragraph 17) make the tone heavy and deliberate rather than neutral. That weight points the reader to class and social mobility: his pride shapes the proposal; her prejudice shapes the refusal. The author chooses them so the moment feels significant instead of passing.
16. [short · synthesis · DOK 4] Connect this passage from Chapter XXXIV, paragraph 22 to the story's treatment of women's limited choices: “I thank you for explaining it so fully.” Use one other moment from the story as well.
    Sample answer: This passage (Chapter XXXIV, paragraph 22) develops women's limited choices: his pride shapes the proposal; her prejudice shapes the refusal. Its words “explaining” carry that idea into this moment. The same concern returns in “But perhaps,’ added he, stopping in his walk, and turning towards her, ‘these offences might have been overlooked, had…” (Chapter XXXIV, paragraph 22), so the two passages read as a pattern, not a single moment. Together they show the story treating women's limited choices as central.
17. [mc · recall · DOK 1] Which word completes this sentence from Chapter XXXIV, paragraph 7? “But I cannot —I have never desired your good opinion, and you have certainly bestowed it most _____.”
    A. mantelpiece
    B. incivility
    C. unwillingly
    D. immediately

Key: C (unwillingly)

18. [mc · recall · DOK 1] In the line “She continued in very agitating reflections till the sound of Lady Catherine’s carriage made her feel how unequal she was to encounter Charlotte’s observation, and hurried her away to her room.”, what does “agitating” most nearly mean?

    A. without good reason

    B. upsetting; disturbing

    C. a deep awareness of and sympathy for another's suffering

    D. odd; unusual in behavior

    Key: B (upsetting; disturbing)

19. [mc · recall · DOK 1] What two charges does Elizabeth make?

    A. Cowardice and greed

    B. Insulting Collins

    C. Stealing money and lying

    D. Ruining Jane's happiness and wronging Wickham

    Key: D (Ruining Jane's happiness and wronging Wickham)

20. [mc · analysis · DOK 3] Which literary element does this describe in “Chapter XXXIV”? Both speak with heat; each wounds the other.

    A. Irony

    B. Hyperbole

    C. Dialogue

    D. Personification

    Key: C (Dialogue)

21. [short · analysis · DOK 3] Analyze how the word choice in this passage from Chapter XXXIV, paragraph 6 shapes its tone: “As he said this, she could easily see that he had no doubt of a favourable answer.” Pick two words and explain their effect.

    Sample answer: The words “favourable” and “answer” (Chapter XXXIV, paragraph 6) make the tone heavy and deliberate rather than neutral. That weight points the reader to pride and self-knowledge: his pride shapes the proposal; her prejudice shapes the refusal. The author chooses them so the moment feels significant instead of passing.

22. [fill · recall · DOK 1] Complete the quotation from Chapter XXXIV, paragraph 24: “had you behaved in a more _____-like manner”

    Key: gentleman

23. [fill · recall · DOK 1] Complete the quotation from Chapter XXXIV, paragraph 26: “You could not have made me the offer of your hand in any _____ way that would have tempted me to accept it”

    Key: possible

24. [mc · inference · DOK 2] Which choice best states a central concern of “Chapter XXXIV”?

    A. Letters of judgment

    B. The hidden benefactor

    C. Neighbors and gossip

    D. The first proposal

    Key: D (The first proposal)

25. [short · analysis · DOK 3] Analyze how the word choice in this passage from Chapter XXXIV, paragraph 3 shapes its tone: “After a silence of several minutes he came towards her in an agitated manner, and thus began—” Pick two words and explain their effect.
    Sample answer: The words “agitated” and “several” (Chapter XXXIV, paragraph 3) make the tone heavy and deliberate rather than neutral. That weight points the reader to class and social mobility: his pride shapes the proposal; her prejudice shapes the refusal. The author chooses them so the moment feels significant instead of passing.
26. [short · synthesis · DOK 4] Evaluate this claim about the chapter: “The proposal fails because Darcy's pride and Elizabeth's prejudice collide.” Is it fully persuasive? Argue with evidence, including a passage that complicates it.
    Sample answer: The claim is persuasive in part. “You could not have made me the offer of your hand in any possible way that would have tempted me to accept it” (Chapter XXXIV, paragraph 26) supports it: He confesses "in vain have I struggled," dwelling on her inferiority even as he declares love, and she replies that no offer "in any possible way" could have tempted her. But “In vain have I struggled. It will not do. My feelings will not be repressed. You must allow me to tell you how ardently I admire and love you” (Chapter XXXIV, paragraph 4) complicates it: the line (Proposal opening) shows the same issue from another side, and its “not” marks a limit or reversal the claim passes over. Weighing the two passages, the claim survives, but only once it admits the tension the second passage creates.
27. [short · synthesis · DOK 4] Connect this passage from Chapter XXXIV, paragraph 9 to the story's treatment of marriage and money: “And this is all the reply which I am to have the honour of expecting!” Use one other moment from the story as well.
    Sample answer: This passage (Chapter XXXIV, paragraph 9) develops marriage and money: his pride shapes the proposal; her prejudice shapes the refusal. Its words “expecting” and “honour” carry that idea into this moment. The same concern returns in “I might as well enquire,’ replied she, ‘why with so evident a design of offending and insulting me, you chose to tell…” (Chapter XXXIV, paragraph 10), so the two passages read as a pattern, not a single moment. Together they show the story treating marriage and money as central.
28. [short · synthesis · DOK 4 · AP: AP-LIT.LAN] Connect this passage from Chapter XXXIV, paragraph 22 to the story's treatment of marriage and money: “Could you expect me to rejoice in the inferiority of your connections?” Use one other moment from the story as well.
    Sample answer: This passage (Chapter XXXIV, paragraph 22) develops marriage and money: his pride shapes the proposal; her prejudice shapes the refusal. Its words “inferiority” and “connections” carry that idea into this moment. The same concern returns in “Elizabeth felt herself growing more angry every moment; yet she tried to the utmost to speak with composure when she…” (Chapter XXXIV, paragraph 23), so the two passages read as a pattern, not a single moment. Together they show the story treating marriage and money as central.
29. [fill · recall · DOK 1 · AP: AP-LIT.FIG] Fill in the blank with the vocabulary word that fits: “She tried, however, to _____ herself to answer him with patience, when he should have done.” Word bank: perusal, compose, repressed, agitating
    Key: compose
30. [fill · recall · DOK 1 · AP: AP-LIT.FIG] Fill in the blank with the vocabulary word that fits: “His complexion became pale with anger, and the _____ of his mind was visible in every feature.” Word bank: disturbance, perusal, agitating, repressed
    Key: disturbance
31. [mc · recall · DOK 1 · AP: AP-LIT.CHR] Which phrase of Elizabeth's stings Darcy most?
    A. “you are proud”
    B. “had you behaved in a more gentleman-like manner”

C. “you are dull”

D. “you are rich”

Key: B (“had you behaved in a more gentleman-like manner”)

32. [fill · recall · DOK 1 · AP: AP-LIT.FIG] Complete the quotation from Chapter XXXIV, paragraph 6: “He concluded with _____ to her the strength of that attachment which, in spite of all his endeavours, he had found impossible to conquer; and with expressing his hope that it would now be rewarded by her acceptance of his hand.” Word bank: surprised, representing, unwillingly, examination
Key: representing

33. [mc · recall · DOK 1 · AP: AP-LIT.FIG] In the line “My feelings will not be repressed.”, what does “repressed” most nearly mean?

A. impose something unpleasant

B. held back; kept under control

C. upsetting; disturbing

D. a careful reading

Key: B (held back; kept under control)

34. [fill · recall · DOK 1 · AP: AP-LIT.FIG] Fill in the blank with the vocabulary word that fits: “His sense of her inferiority—of its being a _____—of the family obstacles which judgment had always opposed to inclination, were dwelt on with a warmth which seemed due to the consequence he was wounding, but was very unlikely to recommend his suit.” Word bank: agitating, repressed, degradation, perusal
Key: degradation

35. [short · analysis · DOK 3 · AP: AP-LIT.LAN] Claim: The proposal fails because Darcy's pride and Elizabeth's prejudice collide. Explain how this evidence supports the claim: “You could not have made me the offer of your hand in any possible way that would have tempted me to accept it” (Chapter XXXIV, paragraph 26).
Sample answer: He confesses "in vain have I struggled," dwelling on her inferiority even as he declares love, and she replies that no offer "in any possible way" could have tempted her. The evidence is “You could not have made me the offer of your hand in any possible way that would have tempted me to accept it” (Chapter XXXIV, paragraph 26) — Final refusal. This develops pride and prejudice: his pride shapes the proposal; her prejudice shapes the refusal.

36. [short · synthesis · DOK 4 · AP: AP-LIT.LAN] Synthesis: trace how pride and prejudice develops from Chapter XXXI to Chapter XXXIV. Use one quotation from each.
Sample answer: Earlier, in Chapter XXXI, paragraph 24, the text reads “I certainly have not the talent which some people possess … of conversing easily with those I have never seen before” — Darcy's self-defense: shyness, not contempt?. In Chapter XXXIV, “In vain have I struggled. It will not do. My feelings will not be repressed. You must allow me to tell you how ardently I admire and love…” (Chapter XXXIV, paragraph 4) — Proposal opening. His pride shapes the proposal; her prejudice shapes the refusal.

37. [short · synthesis · DOK 4 · AP: AP-LIT.LAN] Connect this passage from Chapter XXXIV, paragraph 7 to the story's treatment of women's limited choices: “I am sorry to have occasioned pain to anyone.” Use one other moment from the story as well.
Sample answer: This passage (Chapter XXXIV, paragraph 7) develops women's limited choices: his pride shapes the proposal; her prejudice shapes the refusal. Its words “occasioned” and “anyone” carry that idea into this moment. The same concern returns in “The feelings which, you tell me, have long prevented the acknowledgment of your regard, can have little difficulty in…” (Chapter XXXIV, paragraph 7), so the two passages read as a pattern, not a single moment. Together they show the story treating women's limited choices as central.

38. [short · synthesis · DOK 4 · Dual Credit (Indiana College Core): ICC-WC-1.5] Close reading: how do the diction and syntax of “had you behaved in a more gentleman-like manner” (Chapter XXXIV, paragraph 24) shape its meaning? Consider a second, competing reading.

    Sample answer: Elizabeth's charge that wounds him most. The evidence is “had you behaved in a more gentleman-like manner” (Chapter XXXIV, paragraph 24). This develops pride and prejudice: his pride shapes the proposal; her prejudice shapes the refusal. The words “gentleman” and “behaved” carry that meaning: they are the charged choices in the line, and changing either would soften the effect. He confesses "in vain have I struggled," dwelling on her inferiority even as he declares love, and she replies that no offer "in any possible way" could have tempted her.

39. [short · synthesis · DOK 4 · Dual Credit (Indiana College Core): ICC-WC-1.5] Close reading: how do the diction and syntax of “In vain have I struggled. It will not do. My feelings will not be repressed. You must allow me to tell you how ardently I admire and love you” (Chapter XXXIV, paragraph 4) shape its meaning? Consider a second, competing reading.

    Sample answer: Proposal opening. The evidence is “In vain have I struggled. It will not do. My feelings will not be repressed. You must allow me to tell you how ardently I admire and love…” (Chapter XXXIV, paragraph 4). This develops pride and prejudice: his pride shapes the proposal; her prejudice shapes the refusal. The words “repressed” and “struggled” carry that meaning: they are the charged choices in the line, and changing either would soften the effect. He confesses "in vain have I struggled," dwelling on her inferiority even as he declares love, and she replies that no offer "in any possible way" could have tempted her.

40. [mc · recall · DOK 1 · Program outcome: LeL-C2-LIT-1] How does Darcy describe his love?

    A. Light

    B. Long-planned

    C. Joyful

    D. Against his will and judgment

    Key: D (Against his will and judgment)

41. [short · analysis · DOK 3 · Program outcome: LeL-C2-LIT-1] Analyze the word choice in “You could not have made me the offer of your hand in any possible way that would have tempted me to accept it” (Chapter XXXIV, paragraph 26). Pick two words and explain what they suggest.

    Sample answer: Final refusal. The evidence is “You could not have made me the offer of your hand in any possible way that would have tempted me to accept it” (Chapter XXXIV, paragraph 26). This develops pride and prejudice: his pride shapes the proposal; her prejudice shapes the refusal. The words “possible” and “tempted” carry that meaning: they are the charged choices in the line, and changing either would soften the effect.

42. [mc · analysis · DOK 3 · Program outcome: LeL-C2-LIT-1] Which literary element does this describe in “Chapter XXXIV”? The first proposal: the novel's turning point. Darcy declares love while describing his struggle against it; Elizabeth refuses and accuses him.

    A. Theme

    B. Irony

    C. Structure

    D. Hyperbole

    Key: C (Structure)

43. [mc · recall · DOK 1 · Program outcome: LeL-C4-LIT-1] Which word completes this sentence from Chapter XXXIV, paragraph 3? “Elizabeth was _____, but said not a word.”

    A. incivility

B. calmness

C. surprised

D. mantelpiece

Key: C (surprised)

Rigor version	Items (in order)	Mix
Scaffolded support	1, 2, 3, 4, 5, 6, 7, 8, 9, 10, 11, 12, 13, 14, 15, 16	recall 9, inference 4, analysis 2, synthesis 1
HS Freshman	17, 8, 18, 19, 7, 2, 6, 9, 10, 11, 12, 13, 14, 20, 21, 16	recall 8, inference 4, analysis 3, synthesis 1
HS Sophomore	5, 8, 22, 23, 2, 4, 3, 13, 10, 24, 12, 15, 25, 14, 26, 27	recall 7, inference 4, analysis 3, synthesis 2
HS Junior	6, 3, 23, 18, 5, 4, 24, 13, 11, 12, 15, 14, 21, 25, 16, 28	recall 6, inference 4, analysis 4, synthesis 2
HS Senior	29, 18, 3, 30, 4, 24, 13, 10, 12, 14, 25, 15, 21, 16, 27, 26	recall 5, inference 4, analysis 4, synthesis 3
AP	31, 32, 33, 34, 1, 10, 13, 15, 14, 21, 35, 20, 16, 36, 37, 28	recall 5, inference 2, analysis 5, synthesis 4
College Freshman	31, 2, 4, 34, 1, 24, 14, 21, 15, 25, 37, 38, 36, 39, 26, 16	recall 5, inference 1, analysis 4, synthesis 6
College Sophomore	6, 5, 34, 1, 40, 10, 15, 21, 41, 25, 42, 37, 26, 16, 36, 28	recall 5, inference 1, analysis 5, synthesis 5
College Junior	4, 31, 7, 30, 1, 21, 20, 25, 14, 15, 27, 16, 37, 36, 28, 26	recall 5, inference 0, analysis 5, synthesis 6
College Senior	22, 34, 1, 40, 43, 24, 25, 15, 14, 26, 27, 37, 16, 39, 28, 36	recall 5, inference 1, analysis 3, synthesis 7
Graduate / PhD	40, 7, 30, 1, 19, 11, 20, 41, 14, 21, 27, 36, 26, 37, 16, 28	recall 5, inference 1, analysis 4, synthesis 6

Writing prompts (eleven rigor levels)

Scaffolded support (250 words; AP: see unit standards): Supported track (work from the passage your teacher selects). In “Chapter XXXIV,” how does Austen show the first proposal? Write a paragraph that states your claim, quotes two details from the passage, and explains how each detail supports your idea. Use the conflict you noticed as one piece of evidence.

HS Freshman (350 words; AP: see unit standards): In Chapter XXXIV, how does Austen develop the idea of the first proposal? State a clear claim, support it with two or three quotations, and explain how the conflict in the chapter helps build that idea.

HS Sophomore (450 words; AP: see unit standards): Analyze how Chapter XXXIV develops the idea of the first proposal. Make a precise claim, support it with at least three pieces of textual evidence, and explain how the author's use of conflict and characterization shapes that idea. Address one possible counterclaim.

HS Junior (550 words; AP: see unit standards): Analyze how the structure of Chapter XXXIV (where it begins, turns and ends) and its conflict shape the reader's understanding of the first proposal. Identify one place where the text leaves matters uncertain and explain how that uncertainty adds to its meaning.

HS Senior (600 words; AP: see unit standards): Two readers disagree about what Chapter XXXIV suggests about the first proposal. Lay out two plausible interpretations, weigh the evidence for each (including the chapter's conflict and characterization), and argue for the stronger one in a sustained, well-organized essay.

AP (650 words; AP: AP-LIT.STR, AP-LIT.LAN): Write a literary argument in which you analyze how Jane Austen uses conflict in Chapter XXXIV to complicate the reader's understanding of the first proposal. Develop a defensible thesis, select evidence purposefully, and explain how specific choices of diction and syntax create meaning.

College Freshman (1000 words; AP: see unit standards): Situate Chapter XXXIV within its historical and literary context and argue how the chapter's treatment of the first proposal responds to that context. Engage with at least one secondary perspective (a critic, historian or the author's own statements), integrate quotations smoothly, and cite in MLA style.

College Sophomore (1250 words; AP: see unit standards): Read Chapter XXXIV alongside the conventions of its genre and period. Argue how the chapter's handling of the first proposal follows or bends those conventions, using the conflict as evidence, and test your reading against one published critic. Document two secondary sources in MLA.

College Junior (1500 words; AP: see unit standards): Apply a named critical approach (for example formalist, historicist, feminist, psychoanalytic or ecocritical) to Chapter XXXIV and its treatment of the first proposal. State your method, show what it reveals in the chapter's conflict and characterization, and identify where the text resists it.

College Senior (2000 words; AP: see unit standards): Develop a research argument that reads Chapter XXXIV as evidence for a larger claim about the first proposal in Pride and Prejudice. Connect close reading of the chapter to the whole novel, engage at least four scholarly sources, and state precisely where your reading departs from theirs (Chicago style).

Graduate / PhD (2500 words; AP: see unit standards): Develop an original argument that reads Chapter XXXIV as a hinge in the novel's larger treatment of the first proposal. Position your reading within a named critical conversation (for example formalist, historicist, psychoanalytic, feminist or postcolonial approaches), account for the textual history where relevant, and articulate the stakes of your intervention for scholarship on Pride and Prejudice.

SAT-style questions

1. My feelings will not be repressed.

   As used in the text, what does the word “repressed” most nearly mean?

   A. to calm (oneself)

   B. changing to a lower state (a less respected state)

   C. agitation; a troubled state

D. held back; kept under control

2. Elizabeth's astonishment was beyond expression. She stared, coloured, doubted, and was silent. This he considered sufficient encouragement, and the avowal of all that he felt and had long felt for her, immediately followed. He spoke well, but there were feelings besides those of the heart to be detailed, and he was not more eloquent on the subject of tenderness than of pride. His sense of her inferiority—of its being a degradation—of the family obstacles which judgment had always opposed to inclination, were dwelt on with a warmth which seemed due to the consequence he was wounding, but was very unlikely to recommend his suit.

Which choice best states a central concern of "Chapter XXXIV"?

A. The entail and the officers

B. Strategy in courtship

C. The first proposal

D. An absurd cousin's letter

SAT key: 1. D (held back; kept under control); 2. C (The first proposal)

Lesson 36: Chapter XXXV

Focus: the letter

Objective: Students will analyze how point of view develops in "Chapter XXXV" by writing a claim-evidence-reasoning paragraph that cites at least 2 quotations from the section, and will score at least 80% on the section quiz.

Standards: AP: see the unit standards

Content note (grooming of a minor): Wickham, an adult, tried to elope with 15-year-old Georgiana for her fortune. Name this as predatory behavior and grooming, not romance.
Student preview: Darcy's letter reveals that an adult man pursued a 15-year-old girl for her money. We will call that what it is.
Suggested language: "How does Darcy describe what Wickham did? Why does it matter that Georgiana was fifteen?"

Teacher only · spoilers

Darcy hands Elizabeth a letter explaining himself: he separated Bingley and Jane believing Jane indifferent and the Bennets improper; and Wickham squandered money, demanded more, and tried to elope with Darcy's 15-year-old sister Georgiana for her fortune.

Background: Letters in novels allow characters to speak fully; here the epistolary form reverses the plot.

Significance: The letter shifts point of view, forcing Elizabeth (and readers) to re-examine the evidence.

Lesson plan and lecture script (90 minutes)

0–8 min · Bell-ringer · You do (8 min)
Students write to the bell-ringer, then pair-share.
How does the letter change what we know? Write for five minutes. Starters: I think... because... / This connects to first impressions because.... Content note before we start: Darcy's letter reveals that an adult man pursued a 15-year-old girl for her money. We will call that what it is.
Prompt: How does the letter change what we know?
Sentence starters: I think… because… · This connects to first impressions because…
Strong response: A strong response takes a position and anticipates this: evidence replaces impression.

8–18 min · Vocabulary with etymology notes · I do (10 min)
Five key words in context, with verified word histories.
Today's words: obtruded — pushed forward unwelcome; elopement — running away secretly to marry; turnpike — a main road that charged a toll; benefited — helped; given an advantage; decease — the event of dying or departure from life. "obtruded": Origin of "obtrude": Latin obtrūdō ("thrust off or against"). "turnpike": Origin: an English formation from turn + pike. "benefited": Origin of "benefit": Anglo-Norman benfet ("well-done"). "decease": Origin: Old French deces; earlier Latin dēcessus ("departure").
Words: obtruded: pushed forward unwelcome · elopement: running away secretly to marry · turnpike: a main road that charged a toll · benefited: helped; given an advantage · decease: the event of dying or departure from life

18–28 min · Background and context · I do (10 min)
Mini-lecture (read or adapt the script).
Letters in novels allow characters to speak fully; here the epistolary form reverses the plot. The letter shifts point of view, forcing Elizabeth (and readers) to re-examine the evidence. Epistolary: Darcy's letter: the novel's longest document, explaining Jane and Bingley, and revealing Wickham's attempt to elope with Georgiana. Point of view: For the first time, Darcy's account is set against Wickham's. Watch for rank and condescension: Rank is displayed and enforced, above all at Rosings by Lady Catherine; Elizabeth refuses to be cowed. In this chapter: "the lane, she then began it. It was dated from Rosings, at eight o'clock in the morning, and was as follows" (Chapter XXXV, paragraph 3).

28–40 min · I do: modeled close reading · I do (12 min)
Model the close reading of the anchor quotation using the written think-aloud below.
First, meaning. I read "I had detached Mr. Bingley from your sister" slowly and put it in my own words: Darcy's letter admits that he separated Mr. Bingley from Jane. Next, craft. I notice the precise, legal tone of "detached," as if he were giving evidence in court. The strongest word is "detached": it is a cold, exact word that admits the act without apology. Then, effect. What does Darcy admit to in his letter to Elizabeth? My answer: Darcy accepts what he did but explains that he believed Jane indifferent; his calm honesty begins to change Elizabeth's view of him.

> I had detached Mr. Bingley from your sister (Chapter XXXV, paragraph 5)

Think-aloud: First, meaning. I read "I had detached Mr. Bingley from your sister" slowly and put it in my own words: Darcy's letter admits that he separated Mr. Bingley from Jane. Next, craft. I notice the precise, legal tone of "detached," as if he were giving evidence in court. The strongest word is "detached": it is a cold, exact word that admits the act without apology. Then, effect. What does Darcy admit to in his letter to Elizabeth? My answer: Darcy accepts what he did but explains that he believed Jane indifferent; his calm honesty begins to change Elizabeth's view of him.

40–55 min · We do: guided annotation · We do (15 min)
Guided analysis of a second quotation; expected answers given.
Ask: What words in this line stand out, and what do they suggest? Expected: The letter provides evidence, not opinion; it overturns first impressions. Ask: How does this line connect to first impressions? Expected: Evidence replaces impression. (The letter's opening.)

> Be not alarmed, Madam, on receiving this letter (Chapter XXXV, paragraph 4)

Ask: What words in this line stand out, and what do they suggest?
Expected answer: The letter provides evidence, not opinion; it overturns first impressions.
Ask: How does this line connect to first impressions?
Expected answer: Evidence replaces impression. (The letter's opening.)

55–70 min · You do: independent annotation · You do (15 min)
Independent annotation and a claim-evidence-reasoning paragraph (exemplar given).
Annotate the chapter for epistolary, point of view (three marks with a margin note each), then write one claim-evidence-reasoning paragraph: what does this chapter suggest about the letter? Then start your writing prompt at your assigned level (HS Sophomore: Analyze how Chapter XXXV develops the idea of the letter. Make a precise claim, support it with at least three pieces of textual evidence, and explain how the author's use of point of view and characterization shapes that idea. Address one possible counterclaim.) Exemplar: Darcy's letter gives Elizabeth the facts she lacked and forces her to reassess. When the text says "Wickham's chief object was unquestionably my sister's fortune, which is thirty thousand pounds" (Chapter XXXV, paragraph 5), it shows this directly. Darcy explains that "Mr. Wickham's chief object was unquestionably my sister's fortune, which is thirty thousand pounds," giving a motive for Wickham's charm that Elizabeth never questioned.
Task: Annotate the chapter for epistolary, point of view (three marks with a margin note each), then write one claim-evidence-reasoning paragraph: what does this chapter suggest about the letter? Then start your writing prompt at your assigned level (HS Sophomore: Analyze how Chapter XXXV develops the idea of the letter. Make a precise claim, support it with at least three pieces of textual evidence, and explain how the author's use of point of view and characterization shapes that idea. Address one possible counterclaim.)
Exemplar: Darcy's letter gives Elizabeth the facts she lacked and forces her to reassess. When the text says "Wickham's chief object was unquestionably my sister's fortune, which is thirty thousand pounds" (Chapter XXXV, paragraph 5), it shows this directly. Darcy explains that "Mr. Wickham's chief object was unquestionably my sister's fortune, which is thirty thousand pounds," giving a motive for Wickham's charm that Elizabeth never questioned.

70–80 min · Discussion · We do (10 min)
Structured discussion from the 30 tiered questions, with facilitation notes.
Anchor question: How does the letter change what we know? Ask: what parts of the letter are proven and what parts must Elizabeth take on trust?
Anchor question: How does the letter change what we know?
Facilitation: Ask: what parts of the letter are proven and what parts must Elizabeth take on trust?

80–87 min · Exit ticket / chapter quiz · You do (7 min)
Chapter quiz in the app and an exit ticket (answer given).
Chapter quiz in the app, then: In one sentence, what does this chapter suggest about the letter? Support it with one short quotation. Model answer: Darcy's letter gives Elizabeth the facts she lacked and forces her to reassess. ("Wickham's chief object was unquestionably my sister's fortune, which is thirty thousand pounds", Chapter XXXV, paragraph 5). Accept any defensible claim backed by a quotation from the chapter; the answer key for the quiz is in the Quiz section.
Exit ticket: In one sentence, what does this chapter suggest about the letter? Support it with one short quotation.
Answer: Model answer: Darcy's letter gives Elizabeth the facts she lacked and forces her to reassess. ("Wickham's chief object was unquestionably my sister's fortune, which is thirty thousand pounds", Chapter XXXV, paragraph 5). Accept any defensible claim backed by a quotation from the chapter; the answer key for the quiz is in the Quiz section.

87–90 min · Closure · I do (3 min)
Summarize the lesson and preview the next reading.
Today we saw how epistolary shapes the letter. Key takeaway: evidence replaces impression.

Total: 90 minutes.

Teacher analysis (spoilers)

Literary elements

- Epistolary: Darcy's letter: the novel's longest document, explaining Jane and Bingley, and revealing Wickham's attempt to elope with Georgiana.
- Point of view: For the first time, Darcy's account is set against Wickham's.

Themes and how they develop

- first impressions: evidence replaces impression.

Symbols and motifs

- rank and condescension: Rank is displayed and enforced, above all at Rosings by Lady Catherine; Elizabeth refuses to be cowed. In this chapter: "the lane, she then began it. It was dated from Rosings, at eight o'clock in the morning, and was as follows" (Chapter XXXV, paragraph 3).
- letters: Letters carry news, reveal character and change minds; Darcy's letter is the turning point of the novel. In this chapter: "by that time reached it also, and holding out a letter, which she instinctively took, said with a look of haughty composure" (Chapter XXXV, paragraph 2).

Key quotations (checked against the reading text)

- "Be not alarmed, Madam, on receiving this letter" (Chapter XXXV, paragraph 4) The letter's opening.
- "I had detached Mr. Bingley from your sister" (Chapter XXXV, paragraph 5) Darcy admits his role.

- "Wickham's chief object was unquestionably my sister's fortune, which is thirty thousand pounds" (Chapter XXXV, paragraph 5) Wickham's motive.

Model claim-evidence-reasoning

Claim: Darcy's letter gives Elizabeth the facts she lacked and forces her to reassess.
Evidence: "Wickham's chief object was unquestionably my sister's fortune, which is thirty thousand pounds" (Chapter XXXV, paragraph 5)
Reasoning: Darcy explains that "Mr. Wickham's chief object was unquestionably my sister's fortune, which is thirty thousand pounds," giving a motive for Wickham's charm that Elizabeth never questioned.

Vocabulary with etymology notes

Word	Definition (in this sentence)	In context	Word history
obtruded (verb)	pushed forward unwelcome	But last summer he was again most painfully obtruded on my notice.	"obtruded": Origin of "obtrude": Latin obtrūdō ("thrust off or against"). (Liber et Libri origin note, https://en.wiktionary.org/wiki/obtrude#Etymology)
elopement (noun)	running away secretly to marry	I joined them unexpectedly a day or two before the intended elopement, and then Georgiana, unable to support the idea of grieving and offending a brother whom she almost looked up to as a father, acknowledged the whole to me.
turnpike (noun)	a main road that charged a toll	Darcy's sometimes coming there stopped her, and instead of entering the park, she turned up the lane, which led her farther from the turnpike road.	"turnpike": Origin: an English formation from turn + pike. (Liber et Libri origin note, https://en.wiktionary.org/wiki/turnpike#Etymology)
benefited (verb)	helped; given an advantage	Wickham wrote to inform me that, having finally resolved against taking orders, he hoped I should not think it unreasonable for him to expect some more immediate pecuniary advantage, in lieu of the preferment, by which he could not be benefited.	"benefited": Origin of "benefit": Anglo-Norman benfet ("well-done"). (Liber et Libri origin note, https://en.wiktionary.org/wiki/benefit#Etymology)
decease (noun)	the event of dying or departure from life	For about three years I heard little of him; but on the decease of the incumbent of the living which had been designed for him, he applied to me again by letter for the presentation.	"decease": Origin: Old French deces; earlier Latin dēcessus ("departure"). (Liber et Libri origin note, https://en.wiktionary.org/wiki/decease#Etymology)
symptom (noun)	a sign; an indication	Her look and manners were open, cheerful and engaging as ever, but without any symptom of peculiar regard, and I remained convinced	"symptom": Origin: Middle English sinthoma; earlier Medieval Latin sinthoma. (Liber et Libri origin note, from the evening's scrutiny, that though she received his attentions with pleasure, she did not invite them by any participation of sentiment.	https://en.wiktionary.org/wiki/symptom#Etymology)

pecuniary (adjective)	relating to or involving money	Wickham wrote to inform me that, having finally resolved against taking orders, he hoped I should not think it unreasonable for him to expect some more immediate pecuniary advantage, in lieu of the preferment, by which he could not be benefited.
secrecy (noun)	the trait of keeping things secret	Having said thus much, I feel no doubt of your secrecy.	"secrecy": Origin: Middle English secretee; earlier Old French secré. (Liber et Libri origin note, https://en.wiktionary.org/wiki/secrecy#Etymology)

Discussion questions

1. How does the letter change what we know?
2. Where does point of view appear in this chapter, and what effect does it have? Point to one passage.
3. How does this chapter connect to the book's larger concern with women's limited choices?

Classroom discussion questions (30, tiered)

Wait time after every question (3 s for DOK 1, 5 s for DOK 2, 8 to 10 s for DOK 3 and 4); think-pair-share on DOK 3 and 4; answer each response with a follow-up probe; close with student-generated questions. Focus sets by rigor level: Scaffolded support: 1, 2, 3, 4, 5, 6, 11, 12, 13, 14, 21, 22; HS Freshman: 1, 2, 3, 4, 5, 12, 13, 14, 15, 22, 23, 24; HS Sophomore: 1, 2, 3, 4, 13, 14, 15, 16, 17, 23, 24, 25; HS Junior: 1, 2, 3, 14, 15, 16, 17, 18, 24, 25, 26, 27; HS Senior: 1, 2, 3, 15, 16, 17, 18, 25, 26, 27, 28, 29; AP: 1, 2, 16, 17, 18, 19, 20, 26, 27, 28, 29, 30; College Freshman: 1, 2, 17, 18, 19, 20, 21, 22, 27, 28, 29, 30; College Sophomore: 1, 2, 11, 18, 19, 20, 21, 22, 23, 28, 29, 30; College Junior: 1, 11, 12, 19, 20, 21, 22, 23, 24, 25, 29, 30; College Senior: 1, 11, 12, 13, 20, 21, 22, 23, 24, 25, 26, 30; Graduate / PhD: 1, 11, 12, 13, 21, 22, 23, 24, 25, 26, 27, 28

Literal / recall

1. How does Darcy respond to the rejection? [DOK 1 · coldCallWithSupport · wait 3 s · AP: unit standards] Look for: He writes Elizabeth a letter
2. Why did Darcy separate Jane and Bingley? [DOK 1 · turnAndTalk · wait 3 s · AP: unit standards] Look for: He believed Jane indifferent
3. What did Wickham attempt with Georgiana? [DOK 1 · coldCallWithSupport · wait 3 s · AP: unit standards] Look for: An elopement for her fortune
4. How old was Georgiana when Wickham, an adult, pursued her for her fortune? [DOK 1 · turnAndTalk · wait 3 s · AP: unit standards] Look for: Fifteen
5. What does the letter change in the narrative? [DOK 1 · coldCallWithSupport · wait 3 s · AP: unit standards] Look for: Point of view and evidence
6. Retell the three most important events of "Chapter XXXV" in order, in one sentence each. [DOK 1 · turnAndTalk · wait 3 s · AP: unit standards] Look for: Darcy hands Elizabeth a letter explaining himself: he separated

Bingley and Jane believing Jane indifferent and the Bennets improper; and Wickham squandered money, demanded more, and tried to elope with Darcy's 15-year-old sister Georgiana for her fortune.

7. Which characters appear or are mentioned in “Chapter XXXV”? Name two and one thing each says or does. [DOK 1 · coldCallWithSupport · wait 3 s · AP: unit standards] Look for: Names and actions taken from the chapter; check against the teacher summary.
8. Where and when does “Chapter XXXV” take place? Point to the line that tells you. [DOK 1 · turnAndTalk · wait 3 s · AP: unit standards] Look for: A place/time detail quoted from the chapter.
9. Reread: “But last summer he was again most painfully obtruded on my notice.” What does “obtruded” mean here, and what is literally happening in this line? [DOK 1 · turnAndTalk · wait 3 s · AP: unit standards] Look for: obtruded: pushed forward unwelcome.
10. Reread: “I joined them unexpectedly a day or two before the intended elopement, and then Georgiana, unable to support the idea of grieving and offending a brother whom she almost looked up to as a father, acknowledged the whole…” What does “elopement” mean here, and what is literally happening in this line? [DOK 1 · turnAndTalk · wait 3 s · AP: unit standards] Look for: elopement: running away secretly to marry.

Inferential / analytical

1. What does “Chapter XXXV” suggest about the letter? State the inference and the line that supports it. [DOK 2 · thinkPairShare · wait 5 s · AP-LIT.LAN] Look for: The letter shifts point of view, forcing Elizabeth (and readers) to re-examine the evidence.
2. Find one example of point of view in this chapter. What does it reveal that a plain statement would not? [DOK 2 · followUp · wait 5 s · AP-LIT.NAR] Look for: Look for who is telling the story and what that narrator can and cannot know.
3. How does the characterization in this chapter shape what we understand about the letter? [DOK 3 · thinkPairShare · wait 8 s · AP-LIT.CHR] Look for: Look for what characters say, do and think, and how others react to them.

   Answer guidance: A defensible line of argument: Darcy's letter gives Elizabeth the facts she lacked and forces her to reassess. Useful evidence: “Be not alarmed, Madam, on receiving this letter” (Chapter XXXV, paragraph 4): The letter's opening. Theme link: evidence replaces impression. Credit any position that is supported by quotation and reasoning; push one-sided answers to address the strongest counterpoint.
4. In the passage that begins “Elizabeth awoke the next morning to the same thoughts and meditations which had at length closed her eyes.”, why might Austen have chosen these particular words? Pick two and explain their connotations. [DOK 2 · followUp · wait 5 s · AP-LIT.FIG] Look for: Diction analysis of two words in the anchor passage.
5. What causes the main turn in “Chapter XXXV”, and what effect is it likely to have on what follows? [DOK 2 · followUp · wait 5 s · AP-LIT.STR] Look for: Darcy hands Elizabeth a letter explaining himself: he separated Bingley and Jane believing Jane indifferent and the Bennets improper; and Wickham squandered money, demanded more, and tried to elope with Darcy's 15-year-old sister Georgiana for her fortune.
6. How does “Chapter XXXV” build on “Chapter XXXIV”? Name one link of cause and effect. [DOK 3 · thinkPairShare · wait 8 s · AP-LIT.STR] Look for: A causal or structural link between this and the previous chapter.

   Answer guidance: A defensible line of argument: Darcy's letter gives Elizabeth the facts she lacked and forces her to reassess. Useful evidence: “I had detached Mr. Bingley from your sister” (Chapter XXXV, paragraph 5): Darcy admits his role. Theme link: evidence replaces impression. Credit any position that is supported by quotation and reasoning; push one-sided answers to address the strongest counterpoint.

7. What can we infer about a character's motives from what they say and do here, as opposed to what they claim? [DOK 3 · followUp · wait 8 s · AP-LIT.CHR] Look for: An inference about motive supported by a quoted line.
   Answer guidance: A defensible line of argument: Darcy's letter gives Elizabeth the facts she lacked and forces her to reassess. Useful evidence: “Wickham’s chief object was unquestionably my sister’s fortune, which is thirty thousand pounds” (Chapter XXXV, paragraph 5): Wickham's motive. Theme link: evidence replaces impression. Credit any position that is supported by quotation and reasoning; push one-sided answers to address the strongest counterpoint.
8. The bell-ringer asked: “How does the letter change what we know?” Now that we have read closely, how would you revise your first answer, and which line changed your mind? [DOK 2 · thinkPairShare · wait 5 s · AP-LIT.LAN] Look for: A revised answer anchored in the text.
9. Where does plot appear, and how does it connect this chapter to the larger concern with women's limited choices? [DOK 3 · followUp · wait 8 s · AP-LIT.STR] Look for: Look for key events and the causes linking them.
   Answer guidance: A defensible line of argument: Darcy's letter gives Elizabeth the facts she lacked and forces her to reassess. Useful evidence: “Be not alarmed, Madam, on receiving this letter” (Chapter XXXV, paragraph 4): The letter's opening. Theme link: evidence replaces impression. Credit any position that is supported by quotation and reasoning; push one-sided answers to address the strongest counterpoint.
10. Background: Letters in novels allow characters to speak fully; here the epistolary form reverses the plot. How does knowing this change the way you read one moment in the chapter? [DOK 3 · thinkPairShare · wait 8 s · AP-LIT.SET] Look for: A specific moment reread in light of the context.
    Answer guidance: A defensible line of argument: Darcy's letter gives Elizabeth the facts she lacked and forces her to reassess. Useful evidence: “I had detached Mr. Bingley from your sister” (Chapter XXXV, paragraph 5): Darcy admits his role. Theme link: evidence replaces impression. Credit any position that is supported by quotation and reasoning; push one-sided answers to address the strongest counterpoint.

Evaluative / synthesis / creative

1. A critic might argue: “The letter shifts point of view, forcing Elizabeth (and readers) to re-examine the evidence.” How far do you agree? Take a stand and defend it with two lines from the chapter. [DOK 3 · fourCorners · wait 8 s · AP-LIT.LAN] Look for: A defended position with evidence and one counterpoint.
   Answer guidance: A defensible line of argument: Darcy's letter gives Elizabeth the facts she lacked and forces her to reassess. Useful evidence: “Wickham’s chief object was unquestionably my sister’s fortune, which is thirty thousand pounds” (Chapter XXXV, paragraph 5): Wickham's motive. Theme link: evidence replaces impression. Credit any position that is supported by quotation and reasoning; push one-sided answers to address the strongest counterpoint.
2. Which character in this chapter acts most wisely, and which least? Judge them by a standard you name. [DOK 3 · thinkPairShare · wait 8 s · AP-LIT.CHR, AP-LIT.LAN] Look for: An evaluation using an explicit criterion and evidence.
   Answer guidance: A defensible line of argument: Darcy's letter gives Elizabeth the facts she lacked and forces her to reassess. Useful evidence: “Be not alarmed, Madam, on receiving this letter” (Chapter XXXV, paragraph 4): The letter's opening. Theme link: evidence replaces impression. Credit any position that is supported by quotation and reasoning; push one-sided answers to address the strongest counterpoint.
3. Rewrite one moment of “Chapter XXXV” from the point of view of a different character. What does the new angle reveal or hide about the letter? [DOK 4 · thinkPairShare · wait 8 s · AP-LIT.LAN, AP-LIT.NAR] Look for: A creative product with a rationale tied to the text.

Answer guidance: A defensible line of argument: Darcy's letter gives Elizabeth the facts she lacked and forces her to reassess. Useful evidence: “I had detached Mr. Bingley from your sister” (Chapter XXXV, paragraph 5): Darcy admits his role. On point of view: For the first time, Darcy's account is set against Wickham's. Credit any position that is supported by quotation and reasoning; push one-sided answers to address the strongest counterpoint.

4. Write three questions of your own about “Chapter XXXV”: one recall, one “why/how”, and one “should/what if”. Trade with a partner and answer theirs. [DOK 3 · studentGenerated · wait 8 s · AP-LIT.LAN] Look for: Student-generated questions at three levels.

   Answer guidance: A defensible line of argument: Darcy's letter gives Elizabeth the facts she lacked and forces her to reassess. Useful evidence: “Wickham’s chief object was unquestionably my sister’s fortune, which is thirty thousand pounds” (Chapter XXXV, paragraph 5): Wickham's motive. Theme link: evidence replaces impression. Credit any position that is supported by quotation and reasoning; push one-sided answers to address the strongest counterpoint.

5. Connect this chapter to first impressions and prejudice: is the link strong or weak so far? What would Austen need to show next to strengthen it? [DOK 4 · socraticCircle · wait 8 s · AP-LIT.LAN] Look for: A judgment of thematic development across the work.

   Answer guidance: A defensible line of argument: Darcy's letter gives Elizabeth the facts she lacked and forces her to reassess. Useful evidence: “Be not alarmed, Madam, on receiving this letter” (Chapter XXXV, paragraph 4): The letter's opening. Theme link: evidence replaces impression. Credit any position that is supported by quotation and reasoning; push one-sided answers to address the strongest counterpoint.

6. Is the point of view in this chapter effective, or does it feel heavy-handed? Evaluate it as a reader would in a review. [DOK 3 · fourCorners · wait 8 s · AP-LIT.LAN, AP-LIT.NAR] Look for: An evaluative judgment with criteria and evidence.

   Answer guidance: A defensible line of argument: Darcy's letter gives Elizabeth the facts she lacked and forces her to reassess. Useful evidence: “I had detached Mr. Bingley from your sister” (Chapter XXXV, paragraph 5): Darcy admits his role. On point of view: For the first time, Darcy's account is set against Wickham's. Credit any position that is supported by quotation and reasoning; push one-sided answers to address the strongest counterpoint.

7. Compare how “Chapter XXXV” treats the letter with how another text, film or event you know treats a similar idea. What does Pride and Prejudice see that the other misses? [DOK 4 · socraticCircle · wait 8 s · AP-LIT.LAN] Look for: A cross-text synthesis.

   Answer guidance: A defensible line of argument: Darcy's letter gives Elizabeth the facts she lacked and forces her to reassess. Useful evidence: “Wickham’s chief object was unquestionably my sister’s fortune, which is thirty thousand pounds” (Chapter XXXV, paragraph 5): Wickham's motive. Theme link: evidence replaces impression. Credit any position that is supported by quotation and reasoning; push one-sided answers to address the strongest counterpoint.

8. Predict what “Chapter XXXVI” will bring, using two clues from this chapter. After reading, evaluate your prediction. [DOK 3 · thinkPairShare · wait 8 s · AP-LIT.LAN, AP-LIT.STR] Look for: A prediction or judgment justified with textual clues.

   Answer guidance: A defensible line of argument: Darcy's letter gives Elizabeth the facts she lacked and forces her to reassess. Useful evidence: “Be not alarmed, Madam, on receiving this letter” (Chapter XXXV, paragraph 4): The letter's opening. Theme link: evidence replaces impression. Credit any position that is supported by quotation and reasoning; push one-sided answers to address the strongest counterpoint.

9. Design a one-paragraph modern adaptation of this chapter (setting, characters, conflict). What must stay the same for it to still be about the letter? [DOK 4 · thinkPairShare · wait 8 s · AP-LIT.LAN] Look for: A creative transfer that keeps the core idea.

   Answer guidance: A defensible line of argument: Darcy's letter gives Elizabeth the facts she lacked and forces her to reassess. Useful evidence: “I had detached Mr. Bingley from your sister” (Chapter XXXV, paragraph 5): Darcy admits his role. Theme link: evidence replaces impression. Credit any position that is supported by quotation and reasoning; push one-sided answers to address the strongest counterpoint.
10. What question would you most like to ask Jane Austen about this chapter, and what answer do you think the text itself gives? [DOK 4 · studentGenerated · wait 8 s · AP-LIT.LAN] Look for: A student-generated question answered from evidence.

    Answer guidance: A defensible line of argument: Darcy's letter gives Elizabeth the facts she lacked and forces her to reassess. Useful evidence: “Wickham’s chief object was unquestionably my sister’s fortune, which is thirty thousand pounds” (Chapter XXXV, paragraph 5): Wickham's motive. Theme link: evidence replaces impression. Credit any position that is supported by quotation and reasoning; push one-sided answers to address the strongest counterpoint.

Annotation focus

- Point of view: look for who is telling the story and what that narrator can and cannot know (anchor passage in the We do segment)
- Also notice Characterization: what characters say, do and think, and how others react to them
- Also notice Plot: key events and the causes linking them

Chapter quiz: item bank (all eleven rigor versions)

1. [mc · recall · DOK 1] In the line “Darcy’s sometimes coming there stopped her, and instead of entering the park, she turned up the lane, which led her farther from the turnpike road.”, what does “turnpike” most nearly mean?

   A. a main road that charged a toll

   B. planned in advance

   C. a card game (also spelled casino)

   D. supervised; directed

   Key: A (a main road that charged a toll)
2. [mc · recall · DOK 1] Why did Darcy separate Jane and Bingley?

   A. He believed Jane indifferent

   B. He wanted Bingley for Georgiana only

   C. He loved Jane

   D. He disliked Bingley

   Key: A (He believed Jane indifferent)
3. [mc · recall · DOK 1] How old was Georgiana when Wickham, an adult, pursued her for her fortune?

   A. Eighteen

   B. Twenty

   C. Twelve

D. Fifteen

Key: D (Fifteen)

4. [fill · recall · DOK 1] Fill in the blank with the vocabulary word that fits: “Wickham wrote to inform me that, having finally resolved against taking orders, he hoped I should not think it unreasonable for him to expect some more immediate _____ advantage, in lieu of the preferment, by which he could not be benefited.” Word bank: obtruded, elopement, turnpike, pecuniary
   Key: pecuniary
5. [fill · recall · DOK 1] Fill in the blank with the vocabulary word that fits: “Having said thus much, I feel no doubt of your _____.” Word bank: secrecy, obtruded, elopement, turnpike
   Key: secrecy
6. [fill · recall · DOK 1] Complete the quotation from Chapter XXXV, paragraph 5: “I had _____ Mr. Bingley from your sister”
   Key: detached
7. [fill · recall · DOK 1] Complete the quotation from Chapter XXXV, paragraph 5: “Your superior _____ of your sister must make the latter probable.” Word bank: knowledge, pronounced, indifferent, endeavoured
   Key: knowledge
8. [mc · recall · DOK 1] Which word completes this sentence from Chapter XXXV, paragraph 5? “But it was not till the evening of the dance at Netherfield that I had any _____ of his feeling a serious attachment.”
   A. circumstance
   B. boundary
   C. apprehension
   D. unwillingly
   Key: C (apprehension)
9. [fill · recall · DOK 1] Complete the quotation from Chapter XXXV, paragraph 5: “Wickham’s chief object was _____ my sister’s fortune, which is thirty thousand pounds”
   Key: unquestionably
10. [fill · recall · DOK 1] Complete the quotation from Chapter XXXV, paragraph 1: “Elizabeth awoke the next morning to the same thoughts and _____ which had at length closed her eyes.” Word bank: unwillingly, indifferent, meditations, pronounced
    Key: meditations
11. [short · inference · DOK 2] What does this passage from Chapter XXXV, paragraph 5 reveal about the character or situation? “The situation of your mother’s family, though objectionable, was nothing in comparison of that total want of propriety so frequently, so almost uniformly betrayed by herself, by your three younger sisters, and occasionally even by your…” Answer in two or three sentences with one detail.
    Sample answer: The passage (Chapter XXXV, paragraph 5) shows the situation turning on first impressions and prejudice: evidence replaces impression. The words “objectionable” and “occasionally” are the proof, because they show how the moment looks to the people in it. They suggest more than the narrator states outright.
12. [short · inference · DOK 2] What does this passage from Chapter XXXV, paragraph 1 reveal about the character or situation? “She could not yet recover from the surprise of what had happened; it was impossible to think of anything else, and totally indisposed for employment, she resolved soon after breakfast to indulge herself in air and exercise.” Answer in two or three sentences with one detail.
    Sample answer: The passage (Chapter XXXV, paragraph 1) shows the situation turning on first impressions and prejudice:

evidence replaces impression. The words “indisposed” and “employment” are the proof, because they show how the moment looks to the people in it. They suggest more than the narrator states outright.

13. [short · inference · DOK 2] What can you infer from this line? “Be not alarmed, Madam, on receiving this letter” (Chapter XXXV, paragraph 4) Answer in two or three sentences with one detail.
    Sample answer: The letter's opening. The evidence is “Be not alarmed, Madam, on receiving this letter” (Chapter XXXV, paragraph 4). This develops first impressions: evidence replaces impression.

14. [short · analysis · DOK 3] Analyze how the word choice in this passage from Chapter XXXV, paragraph 2 shapes its tone: “She had turned away, but on hearing herself called, though in a voice which proved it to be Mr. Darcy, she moved again towards the gate.” Pick two words and explain their effect.
    Sample answer: The words “hearing” and “towards” (Chapter XXXV, paragraph 2) make the tone heavy and deliberate rather than neutral. That weight points the reader to class and social mobility: evidence replaces impression. The author chooses them so the moment feels significant instead of passing.

15. [short · analysis · DOK 3] Analyze how the word choice in this passage from Chapter XXXV, paragraph 5 shapes its tone: “But, however this remonstrance might have staggered or delayed his determination, I do not suppose that it would ultimately have prevented the marriage, had it not been seconded by the assurance which I hesitated not in giving, of your…” Pick two words and explain their effect.
    Sample answer: The words “determination” and “remonstrance” (Chapter XXXV, paragraph 5) make the tone heavy and deliberate rather than neutral. That weight points the reader to class and social mobility: evidence replaces impression. The author chooses them so the moment feels significant instead of passing.

16. [short · synthesis · DOK 4] Evaluate this claim about the chapter: “Darcy's letter gives Elizabeth the facts she lacked and forces her to reassess.” Is it fully persuasive? Argue with evidence, including a passage that complicates it.
    Sample answer: The claim is persuasive in part. “Wickham’s chief object was unquestionably my sister’s fortune, which is thirty thousand pounds” (Chapter XXXV, paragraph 5) supports it: Darcy explains that "Mr. Wickham's chief object was unquestionably my sister's fortune, which is thirty thousand pounds," giving a motive for Wickham's charm that Elizabeth never questioned. But “Be not alarmed, Madam, on receiving this letter” (Chapter XXXV, paragraph 4) complicates it: the line (the letter's opening) shows the same issue from another side, and its “not” marks a limit or reversal the claim passes over. Weighing the two passages, the claim survives, but only once it admits the tension the second passage creates.

17. [fill · recall · DOK 1] Fill in the blank with the vocabulary word that fits: “For about three years I heard little of him; but on the _____ of the incumbent of the living which had been designed for him, he applied to me again by letter for the presentation.” Word bank: obtruded, turnpike, decease, elopement
    Key: decease

18. [mc · recall · DOK 1] How does Darcy respond to the rejection?

    A. He leaves without a word
    B. He challenges Wickham
    C. He proposes again
    D. He writes Elizabeth a letter

    Key: D (He writes Elizabeth a letter)

19. [fill · recall · DOK 1] Fill in the blank with the vocabulary word that fits: “Her look and manners were open, cheerful and engaging as ever, but without any _____ of peculiar regard, and I remained convinced from the evening’s scrutiny, that though she received his attentions with pleasure, she did not invite them by any participation…" Word bank: symptom, turnpike, obtruded, elopement

Key: symptom

20. [mc · recall · DOK 1] In the line "But last summer he was again most painfully obtruded on my notice.", what does "obtruded" most nearly mean?

    A. pushed forward unwelcome

    B. praised

    C. bands or chains worn around the wrist

    D. regaining self-control

    Key: A (pushed forward unwelcome)

21. [mc · recall · DOK 1] In the line "I joined them unexpectedly a day or two before the intended elopement, and then Georgiana, unable to support the idea of grieving and offending a brother whom she almost looked up to as a father, acknowledged the whole…", what does "elopement" most nearly mean?

    A. pyramid-shaped piles

    B. showy; ostentatious

    C. to calm (oneself)

    D. running away secretly to marry

    Key: D (running away secretly to marry)

22. [short · inference · DOK 2] What can you infer from this line? "I had detached Mr. Bingley from your sister" (Chapter XXXV, paragraph 5) Answer in two or three sentences with one detail.

    Sample answer: Darcy admits his role. The evidence is "I had detached Mr. Bingley from your sister" (Chapter XXXV, paragraph 5). This develops first impressions: evidence replaces impression.

23. [short · analysis · DOK 3] Analyze how the word choice in this passage from Chapter XXXV, paragraph 5 shapes its tone: "Two offences of a very different nature, and by no means of equal magnitude, you last night laid to my charge." Pick two words and explain their effect.

    Sample answer: The words "different" and "magnitude" (Chapter XXXV, paragraph 5) make the tone heavy and deliberate rather than neutral. That weight points the reader to pride and self-knowledge: evidence replaces impression. The author chooses them so the moment feels significant instead of passing.

24. [short · analysis · DOK 3] Analyze how the word choice in this passage from Chapter XXXV, paragraph 5 shapes its tone: "There is but one part of my conduct in the whole affair, on which I do not reflect with satisfaction; it is that I condescended to adopt the measures of art so far as to conceal from him your sister's being in town." Pick two words and explain their effect.

    Sample answer: The words "satisfaction" and "condescended" (Chapter XXXV, paragraph 5) make the tone heavy and deliberate rather than neutral. That weight points the reader to pride and self-knowledge: evidence replaces impression. The author chooses them so the moment feels significant instead of passing.

25. [mc · recall · DOK 1] Which word completes this sentence from Chapter XXXV, paragraph 2? "But the person who advanced, was now near enough to see her, and stepping forward with eagerness, _____ her name."

    A. pronounced

    B. necessity

    C. information

    D. endeavoured

Key: A (pronounced)

26. [mc · recall · DOK 1] Which word completes this sentence from Chapter XXXV, paragraph 5? “But there were other causes of repugnance;—causes which, though still existing, and existing to an equal degree in both instances, I had myself _____ to forget, because they were not immediately before me.”

    A. morning

    B. countenance

    C. endeavoured

    D. expectation

    Key: C (endeavoured)

27. [mc · analysis · DOK 3] Which literary element does this describe in “Chapter XXXV”? For the first time, Darcy's account is set against Wickham's.

    A. Personification

    B. Structure

    C. Point of view

    D. Alliteration

    Key: C (Point of view)

28. [short · synthesis · DOK 4] Connect this passage from Chapter XXXV, paragraph 5 to the story's treatment of marriage and money: “As for myself, it is many, many years since I first began to think of him in a very different manner.” Use one other moment from the story as well.

    Sample answer: This passage (Chapter XXXV, paragraph 5) develops marriage and money: evidence replaces impression. Its words “different” and “manner” carry that idea into this moment. The same concern returns in “But whatever may be the sentiments which Mr. Wickham has created, a suspicion of their nature shall not prevent me from…” (Chapter XXXV, paragraph 5), so the two passages read as a pattern, not a single moment. Together they show the story treating marriage and money as central.

29. [short · synthesis · DOK 4] Connect this passage from Chapter XXXV, paragraph 5 to the story's treatment of women's limited choices: “If I have wounded your sister’s feelings, it was unknowingly done; and though the motives which governed me may to you very naturally appear insufficient, I have not yet learnt to condemn them.” Use one other moment from the story as well.

    Sample answer: This passage (Chapter XXXV, paragraph 5) develops women's limited choices: evidence replaces impression. Its words “insufficient” and “unknowingly” carry that idea into this moment. The same concern returns in “Of what he has particularly accused me I am ignorant; but of the truth of what I shall relate, I can summon more than…” (Chapter XXXV, paragraph 5), so the two passages read as a pattern, not a single moment. Together they show the story treating women's limited choices as central.

30. [short · synthesis · DOK 4 · AP: AP-LIT.LAN] Connect this passage from Chapter XXXV, paragraph 5 to the story's treatment of women's limited choices: “I had often seen him in love before.” Use one other moment from the story as well.

    Sample answer: This passage (Chapter XXXV, paragraph 5) develops women's limited choices: evidence replaces impression. Its words “before” carry that idea into this moment. The same concern returns in “He spoke of it as a certain event, of which the time alone could be undecided.” (Chapter XXXV, paragraph 5), so the two passages read as a pattern, not a single moment. Together they show the story treating women's limited choices as central.

31. [short · synthesis · DOK 4 · AP: AP-LIT.LAN] Synthesis: trace how first impressions develops from Chapter XXX to Chapter XXXV. Use one quotation from each.

Sample answer: Earlier, in Chapter XXX, paragraph 1, the text reads “Sir William stayed only a week at Hunsford”, which shows the chapter opens by clearing the stage for new arrivals. In Chapter XXXV, “Be not alarmed, Madam, on receiving this letter” (Chapter XXXV, paragraph 4) — The letter's opening. Evidence replaces impression.

32. [mc · recall · DOK 1 · AP: AP-LIT.STR] What does the letter change in the narrative?

    A. The genre

    B. The setting only

    C. Point of view and evidence

    D. Nothing

    Key: C (Point of view and evidence)

33. [fill · recall · DOK 1 · AP: AP-LIT.FIG] Complete the quotation from Chapter XXXV, paragraph 4: “You must, therefore, pardon the freedom with which I demand your attention; your feelings, I know, will bestow it _____, but I demand it of your justice.” Word bank: unwillingly, expectation, knowledge, information

    Key: unwillingly

34. [mc · analysis · DOK 3 · AP: AP-LIT.STR] Which literary element does this describe in “Chapter XXXV”? Darcy's letter: the novel's longest document, explaining Jane and Bingley, and revealing Wickham's attempt to elope with Georgiana.

    A. Epistolary

    B. Imagery

    C. Theme

    D. Hyperbole

    Key: A (Epistolary)

35. [short · synthesis · DOK 4 · AP: AP-LIT.FIG] Close reading: how do the diction and syntax of “I had detached Mr. Bingley from your sister” (Chapter XXXV, paragraph 5) shape its meaning? Consider a second, competing reading.

    Sample answer: Darcy admits his role. The evidence is “I had detached Mr. Bingley from your sister” (Chapter XXXV, paragraph 5). This develops first impressions: evidence replaces impression. The words “detached” and “sister” carry that meaning: they are the charged choices in the line, and changing either would soften the effect. Darcy explains that "Mr. Wickham's chief object was unquestionably my sister's fortune, which is thirty thousand pounds," giving a motive for Wickham's charm that Elizabeth never questioned.

36. [mc · inference · DOK 2 · AP: AP-LIT.LAN] What does this passage most clearly show? “I had detached Mr. Bingley from your sister” (Chapter XXXV, paragraph 5)

    A. Elizabeth's ironic, honest realization.

    B. Opening: Elizabeth's wit restored.

    C. Darcy admits his role.

    D. Elizabeth's rejection of Charlotte's view.

    Key: C (Darcy admits his role.)

37. [short · analysis · DOK 3 · AP: AP-LIT.LAN] Claim: Darcy's letter gives Elizabeth the facts she lacked and forces her to reassess. Explain how this evidence supports the claim: “Wickham’s chief object was unquestionably my sister’s fortune, which is thirty thousand pounds” (Chapter XXXV, paragraph 5).

    Sample answer: Darcy explains that "Mr. Wickham's chief object was unquestionably my sister's fortune, which is thirty thousand pounds," giving a motive for Wickham's charm that Elizabeth never questioned. The evidence is “Wickham’s chief object was unquestionably my sister's fortune, which is thirty thousand pounds" (Chapter XXXV, paragraph 5) — Wickham's motive. This develops first impressions: evidence replaces impression.

38. [short · synthesis · DOK 4 · Dual Credit (Indiana College Core): ICC-WC-1.5] Close reading: how do the diction and syntax of "Be not alarmed, Madam, on receiving this letter" (Chapter XXXV, paragraph 4) shape its meaning? Consider a second, competing reading.
    Sample answer: The letter's opening. The evidence is "Be not alarmed, Madam, on receiving this letter" (Chapter XXXV, paragraph 4). This develops first impressions: evidence replaces impression. The words "receiving" and "alarmed" carry that meaning: they are the charged choices in the line, and changing either would soften the effect. Darcy explains that "Mr. Wickham's chief object was unquestionably my sister's fortune, which is thirty thousand pounds," giving a motive for Wickham's charm that Elizabeth never questioned.

39. [short · synthesis · DOK 4 · Dual Credit (Indiana College Core): ICC-WC-1.5] Connect this passage from Chapter XXXV, paragraph 5 to the story's treatment of marriage and money: "If it be so, if I have been misled by such error, to inflict pain on her, your resentment has not been unreasonable." Use one other moment from the story as well.
    Sample answer: This passage (Chapter XXXV, paragraph 5) develops marriage and money: evidence replaces impression. Its words "unreasonable" and "resentment" carry that idea into this moment. The same concern returns in "That I was desirous of believing her indifferent is certain—but I will venture to say that my investigations and…" (Chapter XXXV, paragraph 5), so the two passages read as a pattern, not a single moment. Together they show the story treating marriage and money as central.

40. [mc · recall · DOK 1 · Program outcome: LeL-C3-LIT-1] What did Wickham attempt with Georgiana?
    A. An elopement for her fortune
    B. Blackmail
    C. A theft
    D. A duel

    Key: A (An elopement for her fortune)

41. [fill · recall · DOK 1 · Program outcome: LeL-GR-LIT-1] Complete the quotation from Chapter XXXV, paragraph 4: "Be not alarmed, Madam, on _____ this letter"
    Key: receiving

Rigor version	Items (in order)	Mix
Scaffolded support	1, 2, 3, 4, 5, 6, 7, 8, 9, 10, 11, 12, 13, 14, 15, 16	recall 10, inference 3, analysis 2, synthesis 1
HS Freshman	17, 5, 8, 18, 1, 19, 20, 21, 4, 11, 12, 22, 23, 24, 14, 16	recall 9, inference 3, analysis 3, synthesis 1
HS Sophomore	25, 17, 20, 4, 1, 26, 3, 19, 11, 12, 22, 24, 15, 27, 28, 29	recall 8, inference 3, analysis 3, synthesis 2
HS Junior	2, 8, 4, 10, 7, 3, 1, 12, 11, 22, 15, 24, 23, 27, 30, 31	recall 7, inference 3, analysis 4, synthesis 2
HS Senior	32, 17, 9, 1, 33, 8, 12, 13, 11, 34, 15, 24, 14, 16, 35, 31	recall 6, inference 3, analysis 4, synthesis 3
AP	1, 10, 6, 18, 13, 11, 36, 24, 23, 37, 34, 15, 28, 31, 29, 16	recall 4, inference 3, analysis 5, synthesis 4
College Freshman	1, 7, 20, 17, 18, 11, 27, 37, 24, 23, 14, 31, 29, 38, 28, 39	recall 5, inference 1, analysis 5, synthesis 5
College Sophomore	7, 10, 18, 2, 36, 13, 34, 37, 14, 23, 15, 30, 39, 29, 16, 31	recall 4, inference 2, analysis 5, synthesis 5

College Junior	5, 6, 18, 2, 40, 15, 24, 14, 27, 23, 31, 16, 39, 38, 28, 29	recall 5, inference 0, analysis 5, synthesis 6
College Senior	5, 17, 18, 2, 40, 15, 23, 24, 27, 31, 30, 39, 16, 29, 28, 38	recall 5, inference 0, analysis 4, synthesis 7
Graduate / PhD	41, 17, 18, 2, 40, 11, 24, 27, 14, 29, 16, 35, 39, 30, 31, 28	recall 5, inference 1, analysis 3, synthesis 7

Writing prompts (eleven rigor levels)

Scaffolded support (250 words; AP: see unit standards): Supported track (work from the passage your teacher selects). In “Chapter XXXV,” how does Austen show the letter? Write a paragraph that states your claim, quotes two details from the passage, and explains how each detail supports your idea. Use the point of view you noticed as one piece of evidence.

HS Freshman (350 words; AP: see unit standards): In Chapter XXXV, how does Austen develop the idea of the letter? State a clear claim, support it with two or three quotations, and explain how the point of view in the chapter helps build that idea.

HS Sophomore (450 words; AP: see unit standards): Analyze how Chapter XXXV develops the idea of the letter. Make a precise claim, support it with at least three pieces of textual evidence, and explain how the author's use of point of view and characterization shapes that idea. Address one possible counterclaim.

HS Junior (550 words; AP: see unit standards): Analyze how the structure of Chapter XXXV (where it begins, turns and ends) and its point of view shape the reader's understanding of the letter. Identify one place where the text leaves matters uncertain and explain how that uncertainty adds to its meaning. Distinguish what is directly stated from what is really meant.

HS Senior (600 words; AP: see unit standards): Two readers disagree about what Chapter XXXV suggests about the letter. Lay out two plausible interpretations, weigh the evidence for each (including the chapter's point of view and characterization), and argue for the stronger one in a sustained, well-organized essay. Distinguish what is directly stated from what is really meant.

AP (650 words; AP: AP-LIT.NAR, AP-LIT.LAN): Write a literary argument in which you analyze how Jane Austen uses point of view in Chapter XXXV to complicate the reader's understanding of the letter. Develop a defensible thesis, select evidence purposefully, and explain how specific choices of diction and syntax create meaning.

College Freshman (1000 words; AP: see unit standards): Situate Chapter XXXV within its historical and literary context and argue how the chapter's treatment of the letter responds to that context. Engage with at least one secondary perspective (a critic, historian or the author's own statements), integrate quotations smoothly, and cite in MLA style.

College Sophomore (1250 words; AP: see unit standards): Read Chapter XXXV alongside the conventions of its genre and period. Argue how the chapter's handling of the letter follows or bends those conventions, using the point of view as evidence, and test your reading against one published critic. Document two secondary sources in MLA.

College Junior (1500 words; AP: see unit standards): Apply a named critical approach (for example formalist, historicist, feminist, psychoanalytic or ecocritical) to Chapter XXXV and its treatment of the letter. State your method, show what it reveals in the chapter's point of view and characterization, and identify where the text resists it.

College Senior (2000 words; AP: see unit standards): Develop a research argument that reads Chapter XXXV as evidence for a larger claim about the letter in Pride and Prejudice. Connect close reading of the chapter to the whole novel, engage at least four scholarly sources, and state precisely where your reading departs from theirs (Chicago style).

Graduate / PhD (2500 words; AP: see unit standards): Develop an original argument that reads Chapter XXXV as a hinge in the novel's larger treatment of the letter. Position your reading within a named critical conversation (for example formalist, historicist, psychoanalytic, feminist or postcolonial approaches), account for the textual history where relevant, and articulate the stakes of your intervention for scholarship on Pride and Prejudice.

SAT-style questions

1. Darcy's sometimes coming there stopped her, and instead of entering the park, she turned up the lane, which led her farther from the turnpike road.

   As used in the text, what does the word "turnpike" most nearly mean?

   A. relating to or involving money

   B. the trait of keeping things secret

   C. a main road that charged a toll

   D. a sign; an indication

2. Elizabeth awoke the next morning to the same thoughts and meditations which had at length closed her eyes. She could not yet recover from the surprise of what had happened; it was impossible to think of anything else, and totally indisposed for employment, she resolved soon after breakfast to indulge herself in air and exercise. She was proceeding directly to her favourite walk, when the recollection of Mr. Darcy's sometimes coming there stopped her, and instead of entering the park, she turned up the lane, which led her farther from the turnpike road. The park paling was still the boundary on one side, and she soon passed one of the gates into the ground.

   Which choice best states a central concern of "Chapter XXXV"?

   A. The letter

   B. Wit as courtship

   C. Jealousy at Pemberley

   D. A revelation from the colonel

SAT key: 1. C (a main road that charged a toll); 2. A (The letter)

Lesson 37: Chapter XXXVI

Focus: self-recognition

Objective: Students will analyze how characterization develops in “Chapter XXXVI” by writing a claim-evidence-reasoning paragraph that cites at least 2 quotations from the section, and will score at least 80% on the section quiz.

Standards: AP: see the unit standards

Critical voice: “Never did any novelist make more use of an impeccable sense of human values.” (Virginia Woolf, novelist and critic, "Jane Austen," The Common Reader (1925), "Jane Austen"; public domain). Discussion: "Till this moment I never knew myself." What "human values" does Elizabeth measure herself against in Chapter XXXVI? Objective: Trace Elizabeth's self-recognition after Darcy's letter and the novel's moral standard. Standards: AP: see the unit standards

Teacher only · spoilers

Elizabeth rereads the letter, recognizes that she has been prejudiced and blind, and exclaims, 'Till this moment I never knew myself.'

Background: Moral self-examination drew on Enlightenment ideals of reason over prejudice.

Significance: The turning point of the novel: Elizabeth's self-knowledge.

Lesson plan and lecture script (90 minutes)

0–8 min · Bell-ringer · You do (8 min)
Students write to the bell-ringer, then pair-share.
What exactly does Elizabeth realize about herself? Write for five minutes. Starters: I think... because... / This connects to pride and prejudice because....
Prompt: What exactly does Elizabeth realize about herself?
Sentence starters: I think… because… · This connects to pride and prejudice because…
Strong response: A strong response takes a position and anticipates this: Elizabeth sees that vanity, not reason, guided her.

8–18 min · Vocabulary with etymology notes · I do (10 min)
Five key words in context, with verified word histories.
Today's words: hatefully — in a hateful way; deliberated — thought carefully about; befriended — helped; came to the aid of; hazarded — risked; ventured; courted — invited; sought out. “deliberated”: From Latin deliberare "to weigh well," from de- (intensive) + librare "to balance," from libra "scales." (Not from liber "free.")
Words: hatefully: in a hateful way · deliberated: thought carefully about · befriended: helped; came to the aid of · hazarded: risked; ventured · courted: invited; sought out

18–28 min · Background and context · I do (10 min)
Mini-lecture (read or adapt the script).
Moral self-examination drew on Enlightenment ideals of reason over prejudice. The turning point of the novel: Elizabeth's self-knowledge. Characterization: Elizabeth rereads the letter and recognizes her prejudice: "Till this moment I never knew myself." Structure: Her self-recognition is the moral center of the novel. Watch for rank and condescension: Rank is displayed and enforced, above all at Rosings by Lady Catherine; Elizabeth refuses to be cowed. In this chapter: "She was immediately told, that the two gentlemen from Rosings had each called during her absence; Mr. Darcy, only for a" (Chapter XXXVI, paragraph 13).

28–40 min · I do: modeled close reading · I do (12 min)
Model the close reading of the anchor quotation using the written think-aloud below.
First, meaning. I read "How despicably have I acted" slowly and put it in my own words: Elizabeth cries out that she has acted despicably and was proud of her own discernment. Next, craft. I notice the exclamations and the repeated "I, who," which turn her pride against herself. The strongest word is "despicably": it is the harshest word she uses about herself. Then, effect. What does Elizabeth realize after reading the letter? My answer: After reading the letter, Elizabeth realizes she was blind and prejudiced about Darcy and Wickham; this self-recognition is the moral center of the novel.

> How despicably have I acted (Chapter XXXVI, paragraph 8)

Think-aloud: First, meaning. I read "How despicably have I acted" slowly and put it in my own words: Elizabeth cries out that she has acted despicably and was proud of her own discernment. Next, craft. I notice the exclamations and the repeated "I, who," which turn her pride against herself. The strongest word is "despicably": it is the harshest word she uses about herself. Then, effect. What does Elizabeth realize after reading the letter? My answer: After reading the letter, Elizabeth realizes she was blind and prejudiced about Darcy and Wickham; this self-recognition is the moral center of the novel.

40–55 min · We do: guided annotation · We do (15 min)
Guided analysis of a second quotation; expected answers given.
Ask: What words in this line stand out, and what do they suggest? Expected: She admits vanity, not reason, guided her. This is the title's theme turned inward. Ask: How does this line connect to pride and prejudice? Expected: Elizabeth sees that vanity, not reason, guided her. (Moment of recognition.)

> Till this moment, I never knew myself (Chapter XXXVI, paragraph 8)

Ask: What words in this line stand out, and what do they suggest?
Expected answer: She admits vanity, not reason, guided her. This is the title's theme turned inward.
Ask: How does this line connect to pride and prejudice?
Expected answer: Elizabeth sees that vanity, not reason, guided her. (Moment of recognition.)

55–70 min · You do: independent annotation · You do (15 min)
Independent annotation and a claim-evidence-reasoning paragraph (exemplar given).
Annotate the chapter for characterization, structure (three marks with a margin note each), then write one claim-evidence-reasoning paragraph: what does this chapter suggest about self-recognition? Then start your writing prompt at your assigned level (HS Sophomore: Analyze how Chapter XXXVI develops the idea of self-recognition. Make a precise claim, support it with at least three pieces of textual evidence, and explain how the author's use of characterization and theme shapes that idea. Address one possible counterclaim.) Exemplar: Elizabeth's recognition shows that her prejudice came from wounded vanity. When the text says “Pleased with the preference of one, and offended by the neglect of the other” (Chapter XXXVI, paragraph 8), it shows this directly. She realizes she was "pleased with the preference of one, and offended by the neglect of the other," and concludes, "Till this moment I never knew myself."
Task: Annotate the chapter for characterization, structure (three marks with a margin note each), then write one claim-evidence-reasoning paragraph: what does this chapter suggest about self-recognition? Then start your writing prompt at your assigned level (HS Sophomore: Analyze how Chapter XXXVI develops the idea of self-recognition. Make a precise claim, support it with at least three pieces of textual evidence, and explain how the author's use of characterization and theme shapes that idea. Address one possible counterclaim.)
Exemplar: Elizabeth's recognition shows that her prejudice came from wounded vanity. When the text says “Pleased with the preference of one, and offended by the neglect of the other” (Chapter XXXVI, paragraph 8), it shows this directly. She realizes she was "pleased with the preference of one, and offended by the neglect of the other," and concludes, "Till this moment I never knew myself."

70–80 min · Discussion · We do (10 min)
Structured discussion from the 30 tiered questions, with facilitation notes.
Anchor question: What exactly does Elizabeth realize about herself? Ask: what does it take to admit you were wrong? Why is this so rare in fiction?
Anchor question: What exactly does Elizabeth realize about herself?
Facilitation: Ask: what does it take to admit you were wrong? Why is this so rare in fiction?

80–87 min · Exit ticket / chapter quiz · You do (7 min)
Chapter quiz in the app and an exit ticket (answer given).
Chapter quiz in the app, then: In one sentence, what does this chapter suggest about self-recognition? Support it with one short quotation. Model answer: Elizabeth's recognition shows that her prejudice came from wounded vanity. (“Pleased with the preference of one, and offended by the neglect of the other”, Chapter XXXVI, paragraph 8). Accept any defensible claim backed by a quotation from the chapter; the answer key for the quiz is in the Quiz section.
Exit ticket: In one sentence, what does this chapter suggest about self-recognition? Support it with one short quotation.
Answer: Model answer: Elizabeth's recognition shows that her prejudice came from wounded vanity. (“Pleased with the preference of one, and offended by the neglect of the other”, Chapter XXXVI, paragraph 8). Accept any defensible claim backed by a quotation from the chapter; the answer key for the quiz is in the Quiz section.

> 87–90 min · Closure · I do (3 min)
> Summarize the lesson and preview the next reading.
> Today we saw how characterization shapes self-recognition. Key takeaway: Elizabeth sees that vanity, not reason, guided her.

Total: 90 minutes.

Teacher analysis (spoilers)

Literary elements

- Characterization: Elizabeth rereads the letter and recognizes her prejudice: "Till this moment I never knew myself."
- Structure: Her self-recognition is the moral center of the novel.

Themes and how they develop

- pride and prejudice: Elizabeth sees that vanity, not reason, guided her.

Symbols and motifs

- rank and condescension: Rank is displayed and enforced, above all at Rosings by Lady Catherine; Elizabeth refuses to be cowed. In this chapter: “She was immediately told, that the two gentlemen from Rosings had each called during her absence; Mr. Darcy, only for a” (Chapter XXXVI, paragraph 13).
- letters: Letters carry news, reveal character and change minds; Darcy's letter is the turning point of the novel. In this chapter: “If Elizabeth, when Mr. Darcy gave her the letter, did not expect it to contain a renewal of his offers” (Chapter XXXVI, paragraph 1).

Key quotations (checked against the reading text)

- “How despicably have I acted” (Chapter XXXVI, paragraph 8) Self-judgment.
- “Till this moment, I never knew myself” (Chapter XXXVI, paragraph 8) Moment of recognition.
- “Pleased with the preference of one, and offended by the neglect of the other” (Chapter XXXVI, paragraph 8) Her self-analysis.

Model claim-evidence-reasoning

Claim: Elizabeth's recognition shows that her prejudice came from wounded vanity.
Evidence: “Pleased with the preference of one, and offended by the neglect of the other” (Chapter XXXVI, paragraph 8)
Reasoning: She realizes she was "pleased with the preference of one, and offended by the neglect of the other," and concludes, "Till this moment I never knew myself."

Vocabulary with etymology notes

Word	Definition (in this sentence)	In context	Word history

hatefully (adverb)	in a hateful way	His attentions to Miss King were now the consequence of views solely and hatefully mercenary; and the mediocrity of her fortune proved no longer the moderation of his wishes, but his eagerness to grasp at anything.
deliberated (verb)	thought carefully about	She put down the letter, weighed every circumstance with what she meant to be impartiality—deliberated on the probability of each statement—but with little success.	"deliberated": From Latin deliberare "to weigh well," from de- (intensive) + librare "to balance," from libra "scales." (Not from liber "free.") (Online Etymology Dictionary (hand-checked note), https://www.etymonline.com/word/deliberate)
befriended (verb)	helped; came to the aid of	But no such recollection befriended her.
hazarded (verb)	risked; ventured	Darcy would never have hazarded such a proposal, if he had not been well assured of his cousin's corroboration.
courted (verb)	invited; sought out	Pleased with the preference of one, and offended by the neglect of the other, on the very beginning of our acquaintance, I have courted prepossession and ignorance, and driven reason away, where either were concerned.
merited (adjective)	deserved	When she came to that part of the letter in which her family were mentioned, in terms of such mortifying, yet merited reproach, her sense of shame was severe.	"merited": Origin of "merit": probably Anglo-Norman merit; earlier Latin meritum ("that which one deserves"). (Liber et Libri origin note, https://en.wiktionary.org/wiki/merit#Etymology)
penitent (adjective)	sorry for having done wrong	He expressed no regret for what he had done which satisfied her; his style was not penitent, but haughty.
exclaiming (verb)	utter aloud; often with surprise, horror, or joy	She wished to discredit it entirely, repeatedly exclaiming, "This must be false!	"exclaiming": Origin of "exclaim": Middle French exclamer; earlier Latin exclāmō ("call out"). (Liber et Libri origin note, https://en.wiktionary.org/wiki/exclaim#Etymology)
rejoiced (verb)	feel happiness or joy	Elizabeth could but just affect concern in missing him; she really rejoiced at it.

Discussion questions

1. What exactly does Elizabeth realize about herself?
2. Where does characterization appear in this chapter, and what effect does it have? Point to one passage.
3. How does this chapter connect to the book's larger concern with first impressions and prejudice?

Classroom discussion questions (30, tiered)

Wait time after every question (3 s for DOK 1, 5 s for DOK 2, 8 to 10 s for DOK 3 and 4); think-pair-share on DOK 3 and 4; answer each response with a follow-up probe; close with student-generated questions. Focus sets by rigor level: Scaffolded support: 1, 2, 3, 4, 5, 6, 11, 12, 13, 14, 21, 22; HS Freshman: 1, 2, 3, 4, 5, 12, 13, 14, 15, 22, 23, 24; HS Sophomore: 1, 2, 3, 4, 13, 14, 15, 16, 17, 23, 24, 25; HS Junior: 1, 2, 3, 14, 15, 16, 17, 18, 24, 25, 26, 27; HS Senior: 1, 2, 3, 15, 16, 17, 18, 25, 26, 27, 28, 29; AP: 1, 2, 16, 17, 18, 19, 20, 26, 27, 28, 29, 30; College Freshman: 1, 2, 17, 18, 19, 20, 21, 22, 27, 28, 29, 30; College Sophomore: 1, 2, 11, 18, 19, 20, 21, 22, 23, 28, 29, 30; College Junior: 1, 11, 12, 19, 20, 21, 22, 23, 24, 25, 29, 30; College Senior: 1, 11, 12, 13, 20, 21, 22, 23, 24, 25, 26, 30; Graduate / PhD: 1, 11, 12, 13, 21, 22, 23, 24, 25, 26, 27, 28

Literal / recall

1. What does Elizabeth do with the letter? [DOK 1 · coldCallWithSupport · wait 3 s · AP: unit standards] Look for: Rereads it repeatedly
2. What does she exclaim? [DOK 1 · turnAndTalk · wait 3 s · AP: unit standards] Look for: Till this moment I never knew myself
3. What has Elizabeth been, she realizes? [DOK 1 · coldCallWithSupport · wait 3 s · AP: unit standards] Look for: Prejudiced and blind
4. What does she now see about Wickham? [DOK 1 · turnAndTalk · wait 3 s · AP: unit standards] Look for: His story had inconsistencies
5. Why is this the turning point? [DOK 1 · coldCallWithSupport · wait 3 s · AP: unit standards] Look for: Elizabeth gains self-knowledge
6. Retell the three most important events of “Chapter XXXVI” in order, in one sentence each. [DOK 1 · turnAndTalk · wait 3 s · AP: unit standards] Look for: Elizabeth rereads the letter, recognizes that she has been prejudiced and blind, and exclaims, 'Till this moment I never knew myself.'
7. Which characters appear or are mentioned in “Chapter XXXVI”? Name two and one thing each says or does. [DOK 1 · coldCallWithSupport · wait 3 s · AP: unit standards] Look for: Names and actions taken from the chapter; check against the teacher summary.
8. Where and when does “Chapter XXXVI” take place? Point to the line that tells you. [DOK 1 · turnAndTalk · wait 3 s · AP: unit standards] Look for: A place/time detail quoted from the chapter.
9. Reread: “His attentions to Miss King were now the consequence of views solely and hatefully mercenary; and the mediocrity of her fortune proved no longer the moderation of his wishes, but his eagerness to grasp at anything.” What does “hatefully” mean here, and what is literally happening in this line? [DOK 1 · turnAndTalk · wait 3 s · AP: unit standards] Look for: hatefully: in a hateful way.
10. Reread: “She put down the letter, weighed every circumstance with what she meant to be impartiality—deliberated on the probability of each statement—but with little success.” What does “deliberated” mean here, and what is literally happening in this line? [DOK 1 · turnAndTalk · wait 3 s · AP: unit standards] Look for: deliberated: thought carefully about.

Inferential / analytical

1. What does “Chapter XXXVI” suggest about self-recognition? State the inference and the line that supports it. [DOK 2 · thinkPairShare · wait 5 s · AP-LIT.LAN] Look for: The turning point of the novel: Elizabeth's self-knowledge.
2. Find one example of characterization in this chapter. What does it reveal that a plain statement would not? [DOK 2 · followUp · wait 5 s · AP-LIT.CHR] Look for: Look for what characters say, do and think, and how others react to them.
3. How does the theme in this chapter shape what we understand about self-recognition? [DOK 3 · thinkPairShare · wait 8 s · AP-LIT.LAN] Look for: Look for statements or moments that connect to the book's big ideas.
   Answer guidance: A defensible line of argument: Elizabeth's recognition shows that her prejudice came from wounded vanity. Useful evidence: “How despicably have I acted” (Chapter XXXVI, paragraph 8): Self-judgment. Theme link: Elizabeth sees that vanity, not reason, guided her. Credit any position that is supported by quotation and reasoning; push one-sided answers to address the strongest counterpoint.
4. In the passage that begins “But when this subject was succeeded by his account of Mr.”, why might Austen have chosen these particular words? Pick two and explain their connotations. [DOK 2 · followUp · wait 5 s · AP-LIT.FIG] Look for: Diction analysis of two words in the anchor passage.
5. What causes the main turn in “Chapter XXXVI”, and what effect is it likely to have on what follows? [DOK 2 · followUp · wait 5 s · AP-LIT.STR] Look for: Elizabeth rereads the letter, recognizes that she has been prejudiced and blind, and exclaims, 'Till this moment I never knew myself.'
6. How does “Chapter XXXVI” build on “Chapter XXXV”? Name one link of cause and effect. [DOK 3 · thinkPairShare · wait 8 s · AP-LIT.STR] Look for: A causal or structural link between this and the previous chapter.
   Answer guidance: A defensible line of argument: Elizabeth's recognition shows that her prejudice came from wounded vanity. Useful evidence: “Till this moment, I never knew myself” (Chapter XXXVI, paragraph 8): Moment of recognition. On structure: Her self-recognition is the moral center of the novel. Credit any position that is supported by quotation and reasoning; push one-sided answers to address the strongest counterpoint.
7. What can we infer about a character's motives from what they say and do here, as opposed to what they claim? [DOK 3 · followUp · wait 8 s · AP-LIT.CHR] Look for: An inference about motive supported by a quoted line.
   Answer guidance: A defensible line of argument: Elizabeth's recognition shows that her prejudice came from wounded vanity. Useful evidence: “Pleased with the preference of one, and offended by the neglect of the other” (Chapter XXXVI, paragraph 8): Her self-analysis. On characterization: Elizabeth rereads the letter and recognizes her prejudice: "Till this moment I never knew myself." Credit any position that is supported by quotation and reasoning; push one-sided answers to address the strongest counterpoint.
8. The bell-ringer asked: “What exactly does Elizabeth realize about herself?” Now that we have read closely, how would you revise your first answer, and which line changed your mind? [DOK 2 · thinkPairShare · wait 5 s · AP-LIT.LAN] Look for: A revised answer anchored in the text.
9. Where does irony appear, and how does it connect this chapter to the larger concern with first impressions and prejudice? [DOK 3 · followUp · wait 8 s · AP-LIT.NAR] Look for: Look for gaps between what characters expect or say and what is true.
   Answer guidance: A defensible line of argument: Elizabeth's recognition shows that her prejudice came from wounded vanity. Useful evidence: “How despicably have I acted” (Chapter XXXVI, paragraph 8): Self-judgment. Theme link: Elizabeth sees that vanity, not reason, guided her. Credit any position that is supported by quotation and reasoning; push one-sided answers to address the strongest counterpoint.

10. Background: Moral self-examination drew on Enlightenment ideals of reason over prejudice. How does knowing this change the way you read one moment in the chapter? [DOK 3 · thinkPairShare · wait 8 s · AP-LIT.SET] Look for: A specific moment reread in light of the context.
    Answer guidance: A defensible line of argument: Elizabeth's recognition shows that her prejudice came from wounded vanity. Useful evidence: “Till this moment, I never knew myself” (Chapter XXXVI, paragraph 8): Moment of recognition. Theme link: Elizabeth sees that vanity, not reason, guided her. Credit any position that is supported by quotation and reasoning; push one-sided answers to address the strongest counterpoint.

Evaluative / synthesis / creative

1. A critic might argue: “The turning point of the novel: Elizabeth's self-knowledge.” How far do you agree? Take a stand and defend it with two lines from the chapter. [DOK 3 · fourCorners · wait 8 s · AP-LIT.LAN] Look for: A defended position with evidence and one counterpoint.
   Answer guidance: A defensible line of argument: Elizabeth's recognition shows that her prejudice came from wounded vanity. Useful evidence: “Pleased with the preference of one, and offended by the neglect of the other” (Chapter XXXVI, paragraph 8): Her self-analysis. Theme link: Elizabeth sees that vanity, not reason, guided her. Credit any position that is supported by quotation and reasoning; push one-sided answers to address the strongest counterpoint.
2. Which character in this chapter acts most wisely, and which least? Judge them by a standard you name. [DOK 3 · thinkPairShare · wait 8 s · AP-LIT.CHR, AP-LIT.LAN] Look for: An evaluation using an explicit criterion and evidence.
   Answer guidance: A defensible line of argument: Elizabeth's recognition shows that her prejudice came from wounded vanity. Useful evidence: “How despicably have I acted” (Chapter XXXVI, paragraph 8): Self-judgment. On characterization: Elizabeth rereads the letter and recognizes her prejudice: "Till this moment I never knew myself." Credit any position that is supported by quotation and reasoning; push one-sided answers to address the strongest counterpoint.
3. Rewrite one moment of “Chapter XXXVI” from the point of view of a different character. What does the new angle reveal or hide about self-recognition? [DOK 4 · thinkPairShare · wait 8 s · AP-LIT.LAN, AP-LIT.NAR] Look for: A creative product with a rationale tied to the text.
   Answer guidance: A defensible line of argument: Elizabeth's recognition shows that her prejudice came from wounded vanity. Useful evidence: “Till this moment, I never knew myself” (Chapter XXXVI, paragraph 8): Moment of recognition. Theme link: Elizabeth sees that vanity, not reason, guided her. Credit any position that is supported by quotation and reasoning; push one-sided answers to address the strongest counterpoint.
4. Write three questions of your own about “Chapter XXXVI”: one recall, one “why/how”, and one “should/what if”. Trade with a partner and answer theirs. [DOK 3 · studentGenerated · wait 8 s · AP-LIT.LAN] Look for: Student-generated questions at three levels.
   Answer guidance: A defensible line of argument: Elizabeth's recognition shows that her prejudice came from wounded vanity. Useful evidence: “Pleased with the preference of one, and offended by the neglect of the other” (Chapter XXXVI, paragraph 8): Her self-analysis. Theme link: Elizabeth sees that vanity, not reason, guided her. Credit any position that is supported by quotation and reasoning; push one-sided answers to address the strongest counterpoint.

5. Connect this chapter to pride and self-knowledge: is the link strong or weak so far? What would Austen need to show next to strengthen it? [DOK 4 · socraticCircle · wait 8 s · AP-LIT.LAN] Look for: A judgment of thematic development across the work.

   Answer guidance: A defensible line of argument: Elizabeth's recognition shows that her prejudice came from wounded vanity. Useful evidence: “How despicably have I acted” (Chapter XXXVI, paragraph 8): Self-judgment. Theme link: Elizabeth sees that vanity, not reason, guided her. Credit any position that is supported by quotation and reasoning; push one-sided answers to address the strongest counterpoint.

6. Is the characterization in this chapter effective, or does it feel heavy-handed? Evaluate it as a reader would in a review. [DOK 3 · fourCorners · wait 8 s · AP-LIT.CHR, AP-LIT.LAN] Look for: An evaluative judgment with criteria and evidence.

   Answer guidance: A defensible line of argument: Elizabeth's recognition shows that her prejudice came from wounded vanity. Useful evidence: “Till this moment, I never knew myself” (Chapter XXXVI, paragraph 8): Moment of recognition. On characterization: Elizabeth rereads the letter and recognizes her prejudice: "Till this moment I never knew myself." Credit any position that is supported by quotation and reasoning; push one-sided answers to address the strongest counterpoint.

7. Compare how “Chapter XXXVI” treats self-recognition with how another text, film or event you know treats a similar idea. What does Pride and Prejudice see that the other misses? [DOK 4 · socraticCircle · wait 8 s · AP-LIT.LAN] Look for: A cross-text synthesis.

   Answer guidance: A defensible line of argument: Elizabeth's recognition shows that her prejudice came from wounded vanity. Useful evidence: “Pleased with the preference of one, and offended by the neglect of the other” (Chapter XXXVI, paragraph 8): Her self-analysis. Theme link: Elizabeth sees that vanity, not reason, guided her. Credit any position that is supported by quotation and reasoning; push one-sided answers to address the strongest counterpoint.

8. Predict what “Chapter XXXVII” will bring, using two clues from this chapter. After reading, evaluate your prediction. [DOK 3 · thinkPairShare · wait 8 s · AP-LIT.LAN, AP-LIT.STR] Look for: A prediction or judgment justified with textual clues.

   Answer guidance: A defensible line of argument: Elizabeth's recognition shows that her prejudice came from wounded vanity. Useful evidence: “How despicably have I acted” (Chapter XXXVI, paragraph 8): Self-judgment. Theme link: Elizabeth sees that vanity, not reason, guided her. Credit any position that is supported by quotation and reasoning; push one-sided answers to address the strongest counterpoint.

9. Design a one-paragraph modern adaptation of this chapter (setting, characters, conflict). What must stay the same for it to still be about self-recognition? [DOK 4 · thinkPairShare · wait 8 s · AP-LIT.LAN] Look for: A creative transfer that keeps the core idea.

   Answer guidance: A defensible line of argument: Elizabeth's recognition shows that her prejudice came from wounded vanity. Useful evidence: “Till this moment, I never knew myself” (Chapter XXXVI, paragraph 8): Moment of recognition. Theme link: Elizabeth sees that vanity, not reason, guided her. Credit any position that is supported by quotation and reasoning; push one-sided answers to address the strongest counterpoint.

10. What question would you most like to ask Jane Austen about this chapter, and what answer do you think the text itself gives? [DOK 4 · studentGenerated · wait 8 s · AP-LIT.LAN] Look for: A student-generated question answered from evidence.

    Answer guidance: A defensible line of argument: Elizabeth's recognition shows that her prejudice came from wounded vanity. Useful evidence: “Pleased with the preference of one, and offended by the neglect of the other" (Chapter XXXVI, paragraph 8): Her self-analysis. Theme link: Elizabeth sees that vanity, not reason, guided her. Credit any position that is supported by quotation and reasoning; push one-sided answers to address the strongest counterpoint.

Annotation focus

- Characterization: look for what characters say, do and think, and how others react to them (anchor passage in the We do segment)
- Also notice Theme: statements or moments that connect to the book's big ideas
- Also notice Irony: gaps between what characters expect or say and what is true

Chapter quiz: item bank (all eleven rigor versions)

1. [fill · recall · DOK 1] Complete the quotation from Chapter XXXVI, paragraph 4: "The _____ and general profligacy which he scrupled not to lay to Mr. Wickham's charge, exceedingly shocked her; the more so, as she could bring no proof of its injustice." Word bank: insensibility, extravagance, nothing, impossible

   Key: extravagance

2. [mc · recall · DOK 1] What does she exclaim?

   A. Till this moment I never knew myself

   B. I am right

   C. I will marry Wickham

   D. I hate him more

   Key: A (Till this moment I never knew myself)

3. [mc · recall · DOK 1] Which word completes this sentence from Chapter XXXVI, paragraph 1? "His belief of her sister's _____, she instantly resolved to be false, and his account of the real, the worst objections to the match, made her too angry to have any wish of doing him justice."

   A. insensibility

   B. nothing

   C. impossible

   D. countenance

   Key: A (insensibility)

4. [mc · recall · DOK 1] In the line "But no such recollection befriended her.", what does "befriended" most nearly mean?

   A. unbearable

   B. helped; came to the aid of

   C. manners shown by one's upbringing

   D. an emergency; a sudden difficulty (older usage)

   Key: B (helped; came to the aid of)

5. [mc · recall · DOK 1] Which word completes this sentence from Chapter XXXVI, paragraph 4? "She could see him instantly before her, in every charm of air and address; but she could remember no more substantial good than the general approbation of the _____, and the regard which his social powers had gained him in the mess."

A. neighbourhood

B. inconsistency

C. expressions

D. impossible

Key: A (neighbourhood)

6. [fill · recall · DOK 1] Fill in the blank with the vocabulary word that fits: "She wished to discredit it entirely, repeatedly _____, 'This must be false!" Word bank: befriended, hatefully, exclaiming, deliberated

   Key: exclaiming

7. [mc · recall · DOK 1] In the line "She put down the letter, weighed every circumstance with what she meant to be impartiality—deliberated on the probability of each statement—but with little success.", what does "deliberated" most nearly mean?

   A. thought carefully about

   B. hurt the pride of; humiliated

   C. having risen above one's position and behaving arrogantly

   D. religious talks given by a clergyman

   Key: A (thought carefully about)

8. [fill · recall · DOK 1] Complete the quotation from Chapter XXXVI, paragraph 8: "Till this _____, I never knew myself"

   Key: moment

9. [mc · recall · DOK 1] Why is this the turning point?

   A. Lydia elopes

   B. Jane marries

   C. Darcy dies

   D. Elizabeth gains self-knowledge

   Key: D (Elizabeth gains self-knowledge)

10. [fill · recall · DOK 1] Complete the quotation from Chapter XXXVI, paragraph 1: "If Elizabeth, when Mr. Darcy gave her the letter, did not expect it to contain a renewal of his offers, she had formed no _____ at all of its contents." Word bank: connection, countenance, expectation, insensibility

    Key: expectation

11. [mc · recall · DOK 1] In the line "Darcy would never have hazarded such a proposal, if he had not been well assured of his cousin's corroboration.", what does "hazarded" most nearly mean?

    A. risked; ventured

    B. mixed up in a confused way

    C. great wickedness

    D. an expert; a skilled person

    Key: A (risked; ventured)

12. [short · inference · DOK 2] What does this passage from Chapter XXXVI, paragraph 1 reveal about the character or situation? "But such as they were, it may be well supposed how eagerly she went through them, and what a contrariety of emotion they excited." Answer in two or three sentences with one detail.

Sample answer: The passage (Chapter XXXVI, paragraph 1) shows the situation turning on first impressions and prejudice: Elizabeth sees that vanity, not reason, guided her. The words "contrariety" and "supposed" are the proof, because they show how the moment looks to the people in it. They suggest more than the narrator states outright.

13. [short · inference · DOK 2] What does this passage from Chapter XXXVI, paragraph 7 reveal about the character or situation? "Of neither Darcy nor Wickham could she think, without feeling that she had been blind, partial, prejudiced, absurd." Answer in two or three sentences with one detail.

    Sample answer: The passage (Chapter XXXVI, paragraph 7) shows the situation turning on first impressions and prejudice: Elizabeth sees that vanity, not reason, guided her. The words "prejudiced" and "neither" are the proof, because they show how the moment looks to the people in it. They suggest more than the narrator states outright.

14. [mc · analysis · DOK 3] Which literary element does this describe in "Chapter XXXVI"? Elizabeth rereads the letter and recognizes her prejudice: 'Till this moment I never knew myself.'

    A. Metaphor

    B. Characterization

    C. Personification

    D. Simile

    Key: B (Characterization)

15. [short · analysis · DOK 3] Analyze how the word choice in this passage from Chapter XXXVI, paragraph 13 shapes its tone: "She was immediately told, that the two gentlemen from Rosings had each called during her absence" Pick two words and explain their effect.

    Sample answer: The words "immediately" and "gentlemen" (Chapter XXXVI, paragraph 13) make the tone heavy and deliberate rather than neutral. That weight points the reader to pride and self-knowledge: Elizabeth sees that vanity, not reason, guided her. The author chooses them so the moment feels significant instead of passing.

16. [short · synthesis · DOK 4] Synthesis: trace how pride and prejudice develops from Chapter XXXIV to Chapter XXXVI. Use one quotation from each.

    Sample answer: Earlier, in Chapter XXXIV, paragraph 4, the text reads "In vain have I struggled. It will not do. My feelings will not be repressed. You must allow me to tell you how ardently I admire and love…" — Proposal opening. In Chapter XXXVI, "How despicably have I acted" (Chapter XXXVI, paragraph 8) — Self-judgment. Elizabeth sees that vanity, not reason, guided her.

17. [mc · recall · DOK 1] What does she now see about Wickham?

    A. He was rich

    B. His story had inconsistencies

    C. He loved her

    D. He was a hero

    Key: B (His story had inconsistencies)

18. [fill · recall · DOK 1] Fill in the blank with the vocabulary word that fits: "Pleased with the preference of one, and offended by the neglect of the other, on the very beginning of our acquaintance, I have _____ prepossession and ignorance, and driven reason away, where either were concerned." Word bank: courted, hatefully, deliberated, befriended

    Key: courted

19. [fill · recall · DOK 1] Fill in the blank with the vocabulary word that fits: "When she came to that part of the letter in which her family were mentioned, in terms of such mortifying, yet _____ reproach, her sense of shame was severe." Word bank: hatefully, deliberated, befriended, merited

Key: merited

20. [mc · recall · DOK 1] What has Elizabeth been, she realizes?

    A. Prejudiced and blind

    B. Too rich

    C. Too kind

    D. Too shy

    Key: A (Prejudiced and blind)

21. [fill · recall · DOK 1] Fill in the blank with the vocabulary word that fits: "He expressed no regret for what he had done which satisfied her; his style was not _____, but haughty." Word bank: befriended, hatefully, deliberated, penitent

    Key: penitent

22. [mc · recall · DOK 1] Which word completes this sentence from Chapter XXXVI, paragraph 6? "That had his actions been what Wickham represented them, so gross a violation of everything right could hardly have been concealed from the world; and that friendship between a person capable of it, and such an amiable man as Mr. Bingley, was _____."

    A. nothing

    B. incautiously

    C. connection

    D. incomprehensible

    Key: D (incomprehensible)

23. [short · analysis · DOK 3] Analyze how the word choice in this passage from Chapter XXXVI, paragraph 9 shapes its tone: "How could she deny that credit to his assertions, in one instance, which she had been obliged to give in the other?—He declared himself to have been totally unsuspicious of her sister's attachment;—and she could not help remembering what…" Pick two words and explain their effect.

    Sample answer: The words "unsuspicious" and "remembering" (Chapter XXXVI, paragraph 9) make the tone heavy and deliberate rather than neutral. That weight points the reader to class and social mobility: Elizabeth sees that vanity, not reason, guided her. The author chooses them so the moment feels significant instead of passing.

24. [short · analysis · DOK 3] Analyze how the word choice in this passage from Chapter XXXVI, paragraph 4 shapes its tone: "After pausing on this point a considerable while, she once more continued to read." Pick two words and explain their effect.

    Sample answer: The words "considerable" and "continued" (Chapter XXXVI, paragraph 4) make the tone heavy and deliberate rather than neutral. That weight points the reader to pride and self-knowledge: Elizabeth sees that vanity, not reason, guided her. The author chooses them so the moment feels significant instead of passing.

25. [short · synthesis · DOK 4] Close reading: how do the diction and syntax of "How despicably have I acted" (Chapter XXXVI, paragraph 8) shape its meaning? Consider a second, competing reading.

    Sample answer: Self-judgment. The evidence is "How despicably have I acted" (Chapter XXXVI, paragraph 8). This develops pride and prejudice: Elizabeth sees that vanity, not reason, guided her. The words "despicably" and "acted" carry that meaning: they are the charged choices in the line, and changing either would soften the effect. She realizes she was "pleased with the preference of one, and offended by the neglect of the other," and concludes, "Till this moment I never knew myself.".

26. [fill · recall · DOK 1] Complete the quotation from Chapter XXXVI, paragraph 5: “She saw the indelicacy of putting himself forward as he had done, and the _____ of his professions with his conduct.” Word bank: impossible, inconsistency, expectation, everything

    Key: inconsistency

27. [mc · recall · DOK 1] In the line “His attentions to Miss King were now the consequence of views solely and hatefully mercenary; and the mediocrity of her fortune proved no longer the moderation of his wishes, but his eagerness to grasp at anything.”, what does “hatefully” most nearly mean?

    A. giving careful attention to detail; hard to please; excessively concerned with cleanliness

    B. in a hateful way

    C. expressing congratulations

    D. injured by a sudden twist

    Key: B (in a hateful way)

28. [short · inference · DOK 2] What can you infer from this line? “Till this moment, I never knew myself” (Chapter XXXVI, paragraph 8) Answer in two or three sentences with one detail.

    Sample answer: Moment of recognition. The evidence is “Till this moment, I never knew myself” (Chapter XXXVI, paragraph 8). This develops pride and prejudice: Elizabeth sees that vanity, not reason, guided her.

29. [short · analysis · DOK 3] Analyze how the word choice in this passage from Chapter XXXVI, paragraph 3 shapes its tone: “But when she read, and reread with the closest attention, the particulars immediately following of Wickham’s resigning all pretensions to the living, of his receiving in lieu, so considerable a sum as three thousand pounds, again was she…” Pick two words and explain their effect.

    Sample answer: The words “considerable” and “immediately” (Chapter XXXVI, paragraph 3) make the tone heavy and deliberate rather than neutral. That weight points the reader to class and social mobility: Elizabeth sees that vanity, not reason, guided her. The author chooses them so the moment feels significant instead of passing.

30. [short · synthesis · DOK 4] Connect this passage from Chapter XXXVI, paragraph 4 to the story's treatment of women's limited choices: “She tried to recollect some instance of goodness, some distinguished trait of integrity or benevolence, that might rescue him from the attacks of Mr. Darcy” Use one other moment from the story as well.

    Sample answer: This passage (Chapter XXXVI, paragraph 4) develops women's limited choices: Elizabeth sees that vanity, not reason, guided her. Its words “distinguished” and “benevolence” carry that idea into this moment. The same concern returns in “She perfectly remembered everything that had passed in conversation between Wickham and herself, in their first evening…” (Chapter XXXVI, paragraph 5), so the two passages read as a pattern, not a single moment. Together they show the story treating women's limited choices as central.

31. [short · synthesis · DOK 4] Connect this passage from Chapter XXXVI, paragraph 5 to the story's treatment of marriage and money: “She was now struck with the impropriety of such communications to a stranger, and wondered it had escaped her before.” Use one other moment from the story as well.

    Sample answer: This passage (Chapter XXXVI, paragraph 5) develops marriage and money: Elizabeth sees that vanity, not reason, guided her. Its words “communications” and “impropriety” carry that idea into this moment. The same concern returns in “How differently did everything now appear in which he was concerned!” (Chapter XXXVI, paragraph 6), so the two passages read as a pattern, not a single moment. Together they show the story treating marriage and money as central.

32. [mc · recall · DOK 1 · AP: AP-LIT.STR] What does Elizabeth do with the letter?

    A. Shows it to Charlotte

    B. Burns it

C. Rereads it repeatedly

D. Ignores it

Key: C (Rereads it repeatedly)

33. [fill · recall · DOK 1 · AP: AP-LIT.STR] Complete the quotation from Chapter XXXVI, paragraph 8: “Pleased with the _____ of one, and offended by the neglect of the other”

    Key: preference

34. [short · inference · DOK 2 · AP: AP-LIT.CHR] What can you infer from this line? “How despicably have I acted” (Chapter XXXVI, paragraph 8) Answer in two or three sentences with one detail.

    Sample answer: Self-judgment. The evidence is “How despicably have I acted” (Chapter XXXVI, paragraph 8). This develops pride and prejudice: Elizabeth sees that vanity, not reason, guided her.

35. [short · synthesis · DOK 4 · AP: AP-LIT.LAN] Evaluate this claim about the chapter: “Elizabeth's recognition shows that her prejudice came from wounded vanity.” Is it fully persuasive? Argue with evidence, including a passage that complicates it.

    Sample answer: The claim is persuasive in part. “Pleased with the preference of one, and offended by the neglect of the other” (Chapter XXXVI, paragraph 8) supports it: She realizes she was "pleased with the preference of one, and offended by the neglect of the other," and concludes, "Till this moment I never knew myself.". But “Till this moment, I never knew myself” (Chapter XXXVI, paragraph 8) complicates it: the line (Moment of recognition) shows the same issue from another side, and its “never” marks a limit or reversal the claim passes over. Weighing the two passages, the claim survives, but only once it admits the tension the second passage creates.

36. [mc · analysis · DOK 3 · AP: AP-LIT.STR] Which literary element does this describe in “Chapter XXXVI”? Her self-recognition is the moral center of the novel.

    A. Simile

    B. Structure

    C. Allusion

    D. Metaphor

    Key: B (Structure)

37. [short · analysis · DOK 3 · AP: AP-LIT.FIG] Analyze the word choice in “Pleased with the preference of one, and offended by the neglect of the other” (Chapter XXXVI, paragraph 8). Pick two words and explain what they suggest.

    Sample answer: Her self-analysis. The evidence is “Pleased with the preference of one, and offended by the neglect of the other” (Chapter XXXVI, paragraph 8). This develops pride and prejudice: Elizabeth sees that vanity, not reason, guided her. The words “preference” and “offended” carry that meaning: they are the charged choices in the line, and changing either would soften the effect.

38. [short · synthesis · DOK 4 · Program outcome: LeL-C2-LIT-1] Close reading: how do the diction and syntax of “Till this moment, I never knew myself” (Chapter XXXVI, paragraph 8) shape its meaning? Consider a second, competing reading.

    Sample answer: Moment of recognition. The evidence is “Till this moment, I never knew myself” (Chapter XXXVI, paragraph 8). This develops pride and prejudice: Elizabeth sees that vanity, not reason, guided her. The words “moment” and “myself” carry that meaning: they are the charged choices in the line, and changing either would soften the effect. She realizes she was "pleased with the preference of one, and offended by the neglect of the other," and concludes, "Till this moment I never knew myself.".

39. [short · analysis · DOK 3 · Program outcome: LeL-C4-LIT-1] Claim: Elizabeth's recognition shows that her prejudice came from wounded vanity. Explain how this evidence supports the claim: “Pleased with the preference of one, and offended by the neglect of the other” (Chapter XXXVI, paragraph 8).
    Sample answer: She realizes she was "pleased with the preference of one, and offended by the neglect of the other," and concludes, "Till this moment I never knew myself.". The evidence is “Pleased with the preference of one, and offended by the neglect of the other” (Chapter XXXVI, paragraph 8) — Her self-analysis. This develops pride and prejudice: Elizabeth sees that vanity, not reason, guided her.

Rigor version	Items (in order)	Mix
Scaffolded support	1, 2, 3, 4, 5, 6, 7, 8, 9, 10, 11, 12, 13, 14, 15, 16	recall 11, inference 2, analysis 2, synthesis 1
HS Freshman	17, 18, 5, 19, 10, 20, 3, 21, 6, 22, 12, 13, 23, 24, 15, 25	recall 10, inference 2, analysis 3, synthesis 1
HS Sophomore	6, 2, 26, 11, 27, 22, 20, 19, 13, 28, 12, 29, 23, 15, 30, 31	recall 8, inference 3, analysis 3, synthesis 2
HS Junior	32, 8, 33, 6, 2, 27, 13, 28, 34, 12, 15, 24, 14, 23, 31, 35	recall 6, inference 4, analysis 4, synthesis 2
HS Senior	32, 18, 6, 3, 27, 28, 12, 34, 13, 29, 24, 36, 23, 16, 30, 35	recall 5, inference 4, analysis 4, synthesis 3
AP	7, 1, 4, 19, 32, 28, 13, 23, 29, 36, 24, 37, 30, 16, 31, 35	recall 5, inference 2, analysis 5, synthesis 4
College Freshman	10, 11, 9, 19, 32, 28, 15, 37, 23, 14, 24, 30, 31, 16, 35, 25	recall 5, inference 1, analysis 5, synthesis 5
College Sophomore	20, 21, 18, 32, 22, 24, 29, 23, 14, 15, 16, 38, 35, 30, 31, 25	recall 5, inference 0, analysis 5, synthesis 6
College Junior	32, 8, 2, 20, 1, 34, 24, 23, 29, 14, 15, 30, 35, 31, 16, 38	recall 5, inference 1, analysis 5, synthesis 5
College Senior	3, 19, 32, 2, 1, 12, 15, 23, 24, 39, 14, 29, 30, 35, 31, 16	recall 5, inference 1, analysis 6, synthesis 4
Graduate / PhD	4, 19, 32, 2, 26, 34, 13, 36, 39, 29, 24, 15, 30, 31, 35, 16	recall 5, inference 2, analysis 5, synthesis 4

Writing prompts (eleven rigor levels)

Scaffolded support (250 words; AP: see unit standards): Supported track (work from the passage your teacher selects). In “Chapter XXXVI,” how does Austen show self-recognition? Write a paragraph that states your claim, quotes two details from the passage, and explains how each detail supports your idea. Use the characterization you noticed as one piece of evidence.

HS Freshman (350 words; AP: see unit standards): In Chapter XXXVI, how does Austen develop the idea of self-recognition? State a clear claim, support it with two or three quotations, and explain how the characterization in the chapter helps build that idea.

HS Sophomore (450 words; AP: see unit standards): Analyze how Chapter XXXVI develops the idea of self-recognition. Make a precise claim, support it with at least three pieces of textual evidence, and explain how the author's use of characterization and theme shapes that idea. Address one possible counterclaim.

HS Junior (550 words; AP: see unit standards): Analyze how the structure of Chapter XXXVI (where it begins, turns and ends) and its characterization shape the reader's understanding of self-recognition. Identify one place where the text leaves matters uncertain and explain how that uncertainty adds to its meaning.

HS Senior (600 words; AP: see unit standards): Two readers disagree about what Chapter XXXVI suggests about self-recognition. Lay out two plausible interpretations, weigh the evidence for each (including the chapter's characterization and theme), and argue for the stronger one in a sustained, well-organized essay.

AP (650 words; AP: AP-LIT.CHR, AP-LIT.LAN): Write a literary argument in which you analyze how Jane Austen uses characterization in Chapter XXXVI to complicate the reader's understanding of self-recognition. Develop a defensible thesis, select evidence purposefully, and explain how specific choices of diction and syntax create meaning.

College Freshman (1000 words; AP: see unit standards): Situate Chapter XXXVI within its historical and literary context and argue how the chapter's treatment of self-recognition responds to that context. Engage with at least one secondary perspective (a critic, historian or the author's own statements), integrate quotations smoothly, and cite in MLA style.

College Sophomore (1250 words; AP: see unit standards): Read Chapter XXXVI alongside the conventions of its genre and period. Argue how the chapter's handling of self-recognition follows or bends those conventions, using the characterization as evidence, and test your reading against one published critic. Document two secondary sources in MLA.

College Junior (1500 words; AP: see unit standards): Apply a named critical approach (for example formalist, historicist, feminist, psychoanalytic or ecocritical) to Chapter XXXVI and its treatment of self-recognition. State your method, show what it reveals in the chapter's characterization and theme, and identify where the text resists it.

College Senior (2000 words; AP: see unit standards): Develop a research argument that reads Chapter XXXVI as evidence for a larger claim about self-recognition in Pride and Prejudice. Connect close reading of the chapter to the whole novel, engage at least four scholarly sources, and state precisely where your reading departs from theirs (Chicago style).

Graduate / PhD (2500 words; AP: see unit standards): Develop an original argument that reads Chapter XXXVI as a hinge in the novel's larger treatment of self-recognition. Position your reading within a named critical conversation (for example formalist, historicist, psychoanalytic, feminist or postcolonial approaches), account for the textual history where relevant, and articulate the stakes of your intervention for scholarship on Pride and Prejudice.

SAT-style questions

1. But no such recollection befriended her.

   As used in the text, what does the word “befriended” most nearly mean?

   A. sorry for having done wrong

   B. feel happiness or joy

   C. utter aloud; often with surprise, horror, or joy

D. helped; came to the aid of

2. But when this subject was succeeded by his account of Mr. Wickham, when she read with somewhat clearer attention, a relation of events, which, if true, must overthrow every cherished opinion of his worth, and which bore so alarming an affinity to his own history of himself, her feelings were yet more acutely painful and more difficult of definition. Astonishment, apprehension, and even horror, oppressed her. She wished to discredit it entirely, repeatedly exclaiming, "This must be false! This cannot be! This must be the grossest falsehood!"—and when she had gone through the whole letter, though scarcely knowing anything of the last page or two, put it hastily away, protesting that she would not regard it, that she would never look in it again.

Which choice best states a central concern of "Chapter XXXVI"?

A. Self-recognition

B. Too late

C. Pemberley

D. A journey and a mercenary suitor

SAT key: 1. D (helped; came to the aid of); 2. A (Self-recognition)

Lesson 38: Chapter XXXVII

Focus: leaving Kent

Objective: Students will analyze how characterization develops in "Chapter XXXVII" by writing a claim-evidence-reasoning paragraph that cites at least 2 quotations from the section, and will score at least 80% on the section quiz.

Standards: AP: see the unit standards

Teacher only · spoilers

Darcy and Fitzwilliam leave Rosings. Lady Catherine notes Elizabeth's low spirits. Elizabeth rereads Darcy's letter, ashamed of her family's conduct and sympathetic now to Darcy's objections.

Background: Travel by coach gave time for reflection and social mixing.

Significance: Elizabeth's quiet reflection marks her inner change.

Lesson plan and lecture script (90 minutes)

0–8 min · Bell-ringer · You do (8 min)
Students write to the bell-ringer, then pair-share.
How does Elizabeth seem different now? Write for five minutes. Starters: I think... because... / This connects to pride and prejudice because....
Prompt: How does Elizabeth seem different now?
Sentence starters: I think… because… · This connects to pride and prejudice because…
Strong response: A strong response takes a position and anticipates this: Elizabeth now feels the justice of Darcy's objections to her family.

8–18 min · Vocabulary with etymology notes · I do (10 min)
Five key words in context, with verified word histories.
Today's words: indecorum — improper behavior; manservant — a male servant; giddiness — silly, careless behavior; affronted — insulted; offended openly; unjustly — in an unjust manner. "indecorum": Origin: Latin indecōrum. "manservant": Origin: an English formation from man + servant. "affronted": Origin of "affront": Old French afronter. "unjustly": Origin: an English formation from unjust + -ly.
Words: indecorum: improper behavior · manservant: a male servant · giddiness: silly, careless behavior · affronted: insulted; offended openly · unjustly: in an unjust manner

18–28 min · Background and context · I do (10 min)
Mini-lecture (read or adapt the script).
Travel by coach gave time for reflection and social mixing. Elizabeth's quiet reflection marks her inner change. Characterization: Darcy and Fitzwilliam leave; Lady Catherine regrets losing company and lectures the visitors about travel and packing. Tone / mood: Comic relief after the crisis; Elizabeth's private reflections run underneath. Watch for rank and condescension: Rank is displayed and enforced, above all at Rosings by Lady Catherine; Elizabeth refuses to be cowed. In this chapter: "The two gentlemen left Rosings the next morning; and Mr. Collins having been in waiting near" (Chapter XXXVII, paragraph 1).

28–40 min · I do: modeled close reading · I do (12 min)
Model the close reading of the anchor quotation using the written think-aloud below.
First, meaning. I read "The two gentlemen left Rosings the next morning" slowly and put it in my own words: Collins proudly reports that the two gentlemen left Rosings in good health and spirits. Next, craft. I notice his eager, self-important tone over trivial news. The strongest word is "Rosings": Lady Catherine's estate is the center of Collins's world. Then, effect. What does Collins's report after Darcy's departure show? My answer: Collins treats rank as news; meanwhile, Elizabeth is privately shaken by Darcy's letter, and the contrast shows how little Collins sees.

> The two gentlemen left Rosings the next morning (Chapter XXXVII, paragraph 1)

Think-aloud: First, meaning. I read "The two gentlemen left Rosings the next morning" slowly and put it in my own words: Collins proudly reports that the two gentlemen left Rosings in good health and spirits. Next, craft. I notice his eager, self-important tone over trivial news. The strongest word is "Rosings": Lady Catherine's estate is the center of Collins's world. Then, effect. What does Collins's report after Darcy's departure show? My answer: Collins treats rank as news; meanwhile, Elizabeth is privately shaken by Darcy's letter, and the contrast shows how little Collins sees.

40–55 min · We do: guided annotation · We do (15 min)
Guided analysis of a second quotation; expected answers given.
Ask: What words in this line stand out, and what do they suggest? Expected: "Contented with laughing" names Mr. Bennet's failure; Elizabeth has adopted the critical view she resented. Theme: family and reputation. Ask: How does this line connect to pride and prejudice? Expected: Elizabeth now feels the justice of Darcy's objections to her family. (Elizabeth's new, critical view of her father.)

> Her father, contented with laughing at them, would never exert himself to restrain the wild giddiness of his youngest daughters (Chapter XXXVII, paragraph 17)

Ask: What words in this line stand out, and what do they suggest?
Expected answer: "Contented with laughing" names Mr. Bennet's failure; Elizabeth has adopted the critical view she resented. Theme: family and reputation.
Ask: How does this line connect to pride and prejudice?
Expected answer: Elizabeth now feels the justice of Darcy's objections to her family. (Elizabeth's new, critical view of her father.)

55–70 min · You do: independent annotation · You do (15 min)

Independent annotation and a claim-evidence-reasoning paragraph (exemplar given).

Annotate the chapter for characterization, tone / mood (three marks with a margin note each), then write one claim-evidence-reasoning paragraph: what does this chapter suggest about leaving Kent? Then start your writing prompt at your assigned level (HS Sophomore: Analyze how Chapter XXXVII develops the idea of leaving Kent. Make a precise claim, support it with at least three pieces of textual evidence, and explain how the author's use of characterization and tone / mood shapes that idea. Address one possible counterclaim.) Exemplar: After the letter, Elizabeth begins to judge her own family as Darcy did. When the text says "Her father, contented with laughing at them, would never exert himself to restrain the wild giddiness of his youngest daughters" (Chapter XXXVII, paragraph 17), it shows this directly. She now sees that her father, "contented with laughing at them, would never exert himself to restrain the wild giddiness of his youngest daughters," which is Darcy's objection in her own words.

Task: Annotate the chapter for characterization, tone / mood (three marks with a margin note each), then write one claim-evidence-reasoning paragraph: what does this chapter suggest about leaving Kent? Then start your writing prompt at your assigned level (HS Sophomore: Analyze how Chapter XXXVII develops the idea of leaving Kent. Make a precise claim, support it with at least three pieces of textual evidence, and explain how the author's use of characterization and tone / mood shapes that idea. Address one possible counterclaim.)

Exemplar: After the letter, Elizabeth begins to judge her own family as Darcy did. When the text says "Her father, contented with laughing at them, would never exert himself to restrain the wild giddiness of his youngest daughters" (Chapter XXXVII, paragraph 17), it shows this directly. She now sees that her father, "contented with laughing at them, would never exert himself to restrain the wild giddiness of his youngest daughters," which is Darcy's objection in her own words.

70–80 min · Discussion · We do (10 min)

Structured discussion from the 30 tiered questions, with facilitation notes.

Anchor question: How does Elizabeth seem different now? Ask: is Elizabeth's new judgment of her family fair, or is it another overcorrection?

Anchor question: How does Elizabeth seem different now?

Facilitation: Ask: is Elizabeth's new judgment of her family fair, or is it another overcorrection?

80–87 min · Exit ticket / chapter quiz · You do (7 min)

Chapter quiz in the app and an exit ticket (answer given).

Chapter quiz in the app, then: In one sentence, what does this chapter suggest about leaving Kent? Support it with one short quotation. Model answer: After the letter, Elizabeth begins to judge her own family as Darcy did. ("Her father, contented with laughing at them, would never exert himself to restrain the wild giddiness of his youngest daughters", Chapter XXXVII, paragraph 17). Accept any defensible claim backed by a quotation from the chapter; the answer key for the quiz is in the Quiz section.

Exit ticket: In one sentence, what does this chapter suggest about leaving Kent? Support it with one short quotation.

Answer: Model answer: After the letter, Elizabeth begins to judge her own family as Darcy did. ("Her father, contented with laughing at them, would never exert himself to restrain the wild giddiness of his youngest daughters", Chapter XXXVII, paragraph 17). Accept any defensible claim backed by a quotation from the chapter; the answer key for the quiz is in the Quiz section.

> 87–90 min · Closure · I do (3 min)
> Summarize the lesson and preview the next reading.
> Today we saw how characterization shapes leaving Kent. Key takeaway: Elizabeth now feels the justice of Darcy's objections to her family.

Total: 90 minutes.

Teacher analysis (spoilers)

Literary elements

- Characterization: Darcy and Fitzwilliam leave; Lady Catherine regrets losing company and lectures the visitors about travel and packing.
- Tone / mood: Comic relief after the crisis; Elizabeth's private reflections run underneath.

Themes and how they develop

- pride and prejudice: Elizabeth now feels the justice of Darcy's objections to her family.

Symbols and motifs

- rank and condescension: Rank is displayed and enforced, above all at Rosings by Lady Catherine; Elizabeth refuses to be cowed. In this chapter: “The two gentlemen left Rosings the next morning; and Mr. Collins having been in waiting near” (Chapter XXXVII, paragraph 1).
- silence and reserve: What characters leave unsaid (Darcy's reserve, Jane's composure, Elizabeth's secrets) drives misunderstanding. In this chapter: “she might have forgotten where she was. Reflection must be reserved for solitary hours; whenever she was alone, she gave way to” (Chapter XXXVII, paragraph 16).

Key quotations (checked against the reading text)

- “The two gentlemen left Rosings the next morning” (Chapter XXXVII, paragraph 1) The quiet opening after the storm.
- “I feel it exceedingly” (Chapter XXXVII, paragraph 3) Lady Catherine on the departure: she treats everything as about her.
- “Her father, contented with laughing at them, would never exert himself to restrain the wild giddiness of his youngest daughters” (Chapter XXXVII, paragraph 17) Elizabeth's new, critical view of her father.

Model claim-evidence-reasoning

Claim: After the letter, Elizabeth begins to judge her own family as Darcy did.
Evidence: “Her father, contented with laughing at them, would never exert himself to restrain the wild giddiness of his youngest daughters” (Chapter XXXVII, paragraph 17)
Reasoning: She now sees that her father, "contented with laughing at them, would never exert himself to restrain the wild giddiness of his youngest daughters," which is Darcy's objection in her own words.

Vocabulary with etymology notes

Word	Definition (in this sentence)	In context	Word history
indecorum (noun)	improper behavior	How grievous then was the thought that, of a situation so desirable in every respect, so replete with advantage, so promising for happiness, Jane had been deprived, by the folly and indecorum of her own family!	"indecorum": Origin: Latin indecōrum. (Liber et Libri origin note, https://en.wiktionary.org/wiki/indecorum#Etymology)
manservant (noun)	a male servant	"Oh!—Your uncle!—He keeps a manservant, does he?—I am very glad you have somebody who thinks of those things.	"manservant": Origin: an English formation from man + servant. (Liber et Libri origin note, https://en.wiktionary.org/wiki/manservant#Etymology)
giddiness (noun)	silly, careless behavior	Her father, contented with laughing at them, would never exert himself to restrain the wild giddiness of his youngest daughters; and her mother, with manners so far from right herself, was entirely insensible of the evil.
affronted (verb)	insulted; offended openly	Catherine, weak-spirited, irritable, and completely under Lydia's guidance, had been always affronted by their advice; and Lydia, self-willed and careless, would scarcely give them a hearing.	"affronted": Origin of "affront": Old French afronter. (Liber et Libri origin note, https://en.wiktionary.org/wiki/affront#Etymology)
unjustly (adverb)	in an unjust manner	When she remembered the style of his address, she was still full of indignation; but when she considered how unjustly she had condemned and upbraided him, her anger was turned against herself; and his disappointed feelings became the object of compassion.	"unjustly": Origin: an English formation from unjust + -ly. (Liber et Libri origin note, https://en.wiktionary.org/wiki/unjustly#Etymology)
irritable (adjective)	easily irritated or annoyed	Catherine, weak-spirited, irritable, and completely under Lydia's guidance, had been always affronted by their advice; and Lydia, self-willed and careless, would scarcely give them a hearing.	"irritable": Origin: French irritable; earlier Latin irritabilis. (Liber et Libri origin note, https://en.wiktionary.org/wiki/irritable#Etymology)

Discussion questions

1. How does Elizabeth seem different now?
2. Where does characterization appear in this chapter, and what effect does it have? Point to one passage.
3. How does this chapter connect to the book's larger concern with pride and self-knowledge?

Classroom discussion questions (30, tiered)

Wait time after every question (3 s for DOK 1, 5 s for DOK 2, 8 to 10 s for DOK 3 and 4); think-pair-share on DOK 3 and 4; answer each response with a follow-up probe; close with student-generated questions. Focus sets by rigor level: Scaffolded support: 1, 2, 3, 4, 5, 6, 11, 12, 13, 14, 21, 22; HS Freshman: 1, 2, 3, 4, 5, 12, 13, 14, 15, 22, 23, 24; HS Sophomore: 1, 2, 3, 4, 13, 14, 15, 16, 17, 23, 24, 25; HS Junior: 1, 2, 3, 14, 15, 16, 17, 18, 24, 25, 26, 27; HS Senior: 1, 2, 3, 15, 16, 17, 18, 25, 26, 27, 28, 29; AP: 1, 2, 16, 17, 18, 19, 20, 26, 27, 28, 29, 30; College Freshman: 1, 2, 17, 18, 19, 20, 21, 22, 27, 28, 29, 30; College Sophomore: 1, 2, 11, 18, 19, 20, 21, 22, 23, 28, 29, 30; College Junior: 1, 11, 12, 19, 20, 21, 22, 23, 24, 25, 29, 30; College Senior: 1, 11, 12, 13, 20, 21, 22, 23, 24, 25, 26, 30; Graduate / PhD: 1, 11, 12, 13, 21, 22, 23, 24, 25, 26, 27, 28

Literal / recall

1. Who leaves Rosings first? [DOK 1 · coldCallWithSupport · wait 3 s · AP: unit standards] Look for: Darcy and Fitzwilliam
2. How is Elizabeth's mood? [DOK 1 · turnAndTalk · wait 3 s · AP: unit standards] Look for: Thoughtful and subdued
3. Who notices Elizabeth's low spirits? [DOK 1 · coldCallWithSupport · wait 3 s · AP: unit standards] Look for: Lady Catherine
4. What does Elizabeth feel ashamed of? [DOK 1 · turnAndTalk · wait 3 s · AP: unit standards] Look for: Her family's conduct
5. What does Elizabeth reread? [DOK 1 · coldCallWithSupport · wait 3 s · AP: unit standards] Look for: Darcy's letter
6. Retell the three most important events of “Chapter XXXVII” in order, in one sentence each. [DOK 1 · turnAndTalk · wait 3 s · AP: unit standards] Look for: Darcy and Fitzwilliam leave Rosings. Lady Catherine notes Elizabeth's low spirits. Elizabeth rereads Darcy's letter, ashamed of her family's conduct and sympathetic now to Darcy's objections.
7. Which characters appear or are mentioned in “Chapter XXXVII”? Name two and one thing each says or does. [DOK 1 · coldCallWithSupport · wait 3 s · AP: unit standards] Look for: Names and actions taken from the chapter; check against the teacher summary.
8. Where and when does “Chapter XXXVII” take place? Point to the line that tells you. [DOK 1 · turnAndTalk · wait 3 s · AP: unit standards] Look for: A place/time detail quoted from the chapter.
9. Reread: “How grievous then was the thought that, of a situation so desirable in every respect, so replete with advantage, so promising for happiness, Jane had been deprived, by the folly and indecorum of her own family!” What does “indecorum” mean here, and what is literally happening in this line? [DOK 1 · turnAndTalk · wait 3 s · AP: unit standards] Look for: indecorum: improper behavior.
10. Reread: ““Oh!—Your uncle!—He keeps a manservant, does he?—I am very glad you have somebody who thinks of those things.” What does “manservant” mean here, and what is literally happening in this line? [DOK 1 · turnAndTalk · wait 3 s · AP: unit standards] Look for: manservant: a male servant.

Inferential / analytical

1. What does “Chapter XXXVII” suggest about leaving Kent? State the inference and the line that supports it. [DOK 2 · thinkPairShare · wait 5 s · AP-LIT.LAN] Look for: Elizabeth's quiet reflection marks her inner change.
2. Find one example of characterization in this chapter. What does it reveal that a plain statement would not? [DOK 2 · followUp · wait 5 s · AP-LIT.CHR] Look for: Look for what characters say, do and think, and how others react to them.

3. How does the tone / mood in this chapter shape what we understand about leaving Kent? [DOK 3 · thinkPairShare · wait 8 s · AP-LIT.FIG] Look for: Look for word choices that reveal the narrator's attitude or the scene's feeling.
   Answer guidance: A defensible line of argument: After the letter, Elizabeth begins to judge her own family as Darcy did. Useful evidence: “The two gentlemen left Rosings the next morning” (Chapter XXXVII, paragraph 1): The quiet opening after the storm. On tone / mood: Comic relief after the crisis; Elizabeth's private reflections run underneath. Credit any position that is supported by quotation and reasoning; push one-sided answers to address the strongest counterpoint.
4. In the passage that begins “Anxiety on Jane’s behalf, was another prevailing concern, and Mr.”, why might Austen have chosen these particular words? Pick two and explain their connotations. [DOK 2 · followUp · wait 5 s · AP-LIT.FIG] Look for: Diction analysis of two words in the anchor passage.
5. What causes the main turn in “Chapter XXXVII”, and what effect is it likely to have on what follows? [DOK 2 · followUp · wait 5 s · AP-LIT.STR] Look for: Darcy and Fitzwilliam leave Rosings. Lady Catherine notes Elizabeth's low spirits. Elizabeth rereads Darcy's letter, ashamed of her family's conduct and sympathetic now to Darcy's objections.
6. How does “Chapter XXXVII” build on “Chapter XXXVI”? Name one link of cause and effect. [DOK 3 · thinkPairShare · wait 8 s · AP-LIT.STR] Look for: A causal or structural link between this and the previous chapter.
   Answer guidance: A defensible line of argument: After the letter, Elizabeth begins to judge her own family as Darcy did. Useful evidence: “I feel it exceedingly” (Chapter XXXVII, paragraph 3): Lady Catherine on the departure: she treats everything as about her. Theme link: Elizabeth now feels the justice of Darcy's objections to her family. Credit any position that is supported by quotation and reasoning; push one-sided answers to address the strongest counterpoint.
7. What can we infer about a character's motives from what they say and do here, as opposed to what they claim? [DOK 3 · followUp · wait 8 s · AP-LIT.CHR] Look for: An inference about motive supported by a quoted line.
   Answer guidance: A defensible line of argument: After the letter, Elizabeth begins to judge her own family as Darcy did. Useful evidence: “Her father, contented with laughing at them, would never exert himself to restrain the wild giddiness of his youngest daughters” (Chapter XXXVII, paragraph 17): Elizabeth's new, critical view of her father. On characterization: Darcy and Fitzwilliam leave; Lady Catherine regrets losing company and lectures the visitors about travel and packing. Credit any position that is supported by quotation and reasoning; push one-sided answers to address the strongest counterpoint.
8. The bell-ringer asked: “How does Elizabeth seem different now?” Now that we have read closely, how would you revise your first answer, and which line changed your mind? [DOK 2 · thinkPairShare · wait 5 s · AP-LIT.LAN] Look for: A revised answer anchored in the text.
9. Where does plot appear, and how does it connect this chapter to the larger concern with pride and self-knowledge? [DOK 3 · followUp · wait 8 s · AP-LIT.STR] Look for: Look for key events and the causes linking them.
   Answer guidance: A defensible line of argument: After the letter, Elizabeth begins to judge her own family as Darcy did. Useful evidence: “The two gentlemen left Rosings the next morning” (Chapter XXXVII, paragraph 1): The quiet opening after the storm. Theme link: Elizabeth now feels the justice of Darcy's objections to her family. Credit any position that is supported by quotation and reasoning; push one-sided answers to address the strongest counterpoint.
10. Background: Travel by coach gave time for reflection and social mixing. How does knowing this change the way you read one moment in the chapter? [DOK 3 · thinkPairShare · wait 8 s · AP-LIT.SET] Look for: A specific moment reread in light of the context.

Answer guidance: A defensible line of argument: After the letter, Elizabeth begins to judge her own family as Darcy did. Useful evidence: “I feel it exceedingly” (Chapter XXXVII, paragraph 3): Lady Catherine on the departure: she treats everything as about her. Theme link: Elizabeth now feels the justice of Darcy's objections to her family. Credit any position that is supported by quotation and reasoning; push one-sided answers to address the strongest counterpoint.

Evaluative / synthesis / creative

1. A critic might argue: “Elizabeth's quiet reflection marks her inner change.” How far do you agree? Take a stand and defend it with two lines from the chapter. [DOK 3 · fourCorners · wait 8 s · AP-LIT.LAN] Look for: A defended position with evidence and one counterpoint.

   Answer guidance: A defensible line of argument: After the letter, Elizabeth begins to judge her own family as Darcy did. Useful evidence: “Her father, contented with laughing at them, would never exert himself to restrain the wild giddiness of his youngest daughters” (Chapter XXXVII, paragraph 17): Elizabeth's new, critical view of her father. Theme link: Elizabeth now feels the justice of Darcy's objections to her family. Credit any position that is supported by quotation and reasoning; push one-sided answers to address the strongest counterpoint.
2. Which character in this chapter acts most wisely, and which least? Judge them by a standard you name. [DOK 3 · thinkPairShare · wait 8 s · AP-LIT.CHR, AP-LIT.LAN] Look for: An evaluation using an explicit criterion and evidence.

   Answer guidance: A defensible line of argument: After the letter, Elizabeth begins to judge her own family as Darcy did. Useful evidence: “The two gentlemen left Rosings the next morning” (Chapter XXXVII, paragraph 1): The quiet opening after the storm. On characterization: Darcy and Fitzwilliam leave; Lady Catherine regrets losing company and lectures the visitors about travel and packing. Credit any position that is supported by quotation and reasoning; push one-sided answers to address the strongest counterpoint.
3. Rewrite one moment of “Chapter XXXVII” from the point of view of a different character. What does the new angle reveal or hide about leaving Kent? [DOK 4 · thinkPairShare · wait 8 s · AP-LIT.LAN, AP-LIT.NAR] Look for: A creative product with a rationale tied to the text.

   Answer guidance: A defensible line of argument: After the letter, Elizabeth begins to judge her own family as Darcy did. Useful evidence: “I feel it exceedingly” (Chapter XXXVII, paragraph 3): Lady Catherine on the departure: she treats everything as about her. Theme link: Elizabeth now feels the justice of Darcy's objections to her family. Credit any position that is supported by quotation and reasoning; push one-sided answers to address the strongest counterpoint.
4. Write three questions of your own about “Chapter XXXVII”: one recall, one “why/how”, and one “should/what if”. Trade with a partner and answer theirs. [DOK 3 · studentGenerated · wait 8 s · AP-LIT.LAN] Look for: Student-generated questions at three levels.

   Answer guidance: A defensible line of argument: After the letter, Elizabeth begins to judge her own family as Darcy did. Useful evidence: “Her father, contented with laughing at them, would never exert himself to restrain the wild giddiness of his youngest daughters” (Chapter XXXVII, paragraph 17): Elizabeth's new, critical view of her father. Theme link: Elizabeth now feels the justice of Darcy's objections to her family. Credit any position that is supported by quotation and reasoning; push one-sided answers to address the strongest counterpoint.

5. Connect this chapter to marriage and money: is the link strong or weak so far? What would Austen need to show next to strengthen it? [DOK 4 · socraticCircle · wait 8 s · AP-LIT.LAN] Look for: A judgment of thematic development across the work.

   Answer guidance: A defensible line of argument: After the letter, Elizabeth begins to judge her own family as Darcy did. Useful evidence: “The two gentlemen left Rosings the next morning” (Chapter XXXVII, paragraph 1): The quiet opening after the storm. Theme link: Elizabeth now feels the justice of Darcy's objections to her family. Credit any position that is supported by quotation and reasoning; push one-sided answers to address the strongest counterpoint.
6. Is the characterization in this chapter effective, or does it feel heavy-handed? Evaluate it as a reader would in a review. [DOK 3 · fourCorners · wait 8 s · AP-LIT.CHR, AP-LIT.LAN] Look for: An evaluative judgment with criteria and evidence.

   Answer guidance: A defensible line of argument: After the letter, Elizabeth begins to judge her own family as Darcy did. Useful evidence: “I feel it exceedingly” (Chapter XXXVII, paragraph 3): Lady Catherine on the departure: she treats everything as about her. On characterization: Darcy and Fitzwilliam leave; Lady Catherine regrets losing company and lectures the visitors about travel and packing. Credit any position that is supported by quotation and reasoning; push one-sided answers to address the strongest counterpoint.
7. Compare how “Chapter XXXVII” treats leaving Kent with how another text, film or event you know treats a similar idea. What does Pride and Prejudice see that the other misses? [DOK 4 · socraticCircle · wait 8 s · AP-LIT.LAN] Look for: A cross-text synthesis.

   Answer guidance: A defensible line of argument: After the letter, Elizabeth begins to judge her own family as Darcy did. Useful evidence: “Her father, contented with laughing at them, would never exert himself to restrain the wild giddiness of his youngest daughters” (Chapter XXXVII, paragraph 17): Elizabeth's new, critical view of her father. Theme link: Elizabeth now feels the justice of Darcy's objections to her family. Credit any position that is supported by quotation and reasoning; push one-sided answers to address the strongest counterpoint.
8. Predict what “Chapter XXXVIII” will bring, using two clues from this chapter. After reading, evaluate your prediction. [DOK 3 · thinkPairShare · wait 8 s · AP-LIT.LAN, AP-LIT.STR] Look for: A prediction or judgment justified with textual clues.

   Answer guidance: A defensible line of argument: After the letter, Elizabeth begins to judge her own family as Darcy did. Useful evidence: “The two gentlemen left Rosings the next morning” (Chapter XXXVII, paragraph 1): The quiet opening after the storm. Theme link: Elizabeth now feels the justice of Darcy's objections to her family. Credit any position that is supported by quotation and reasoning; push one-sided answers to address the strongest counterpoint.
9. Design a one-paragraph modern adaptation of this chapter (setting, characters, conflict). What must stay the same for it to still be about leaving Kent? [DOK 4 · thinkPairShare · wait 8 s · AP-LIT.LAN] Look for: A creative transfer that keeps the core idea.

   Answer guidance: A defensible line of argument: After the letter, Elizabeth begins to judge her own family as Darcy did. Useful evidence: “I feel it exceedingly” (Chapter XXXVII, paragraph 3): Lady Catherine on the departure: she treats everything as about her. Theme link: Elizabeth now feels the justice of Darcy's objections to her family. Credit any position that is supported by quotation and reasoning; push one-sided answers to address the strongest counterpoint.

10. What question would you most like to ask Jane Austen about this chapter, and what answer do you think the text itself gives? [DOK 4 · studentGenerated · wait 8 s · AP-LIT.LAN] Look for: A student-generated question answered from evidence.
    Answer guidance: A defensible line of argument: After the letter, Elizabeth begins to judge her own family as Darcy did. Useful evidence: “Her father, contented with laughing at them, would never exert himself to restrain the wild giddiness of his youngest daughters” (Chapter XXXVII, paragraph 17): Elizabeth's new, critical view of her father. Theme link: Elizabeth now feels the justice of Darcy's objections to her family. Credit any position that is supported by quotation and reasoning; push one-sided answers to address the strongest counterpoint.

Annotation focus

- Characterization: look for what characters say, do and think, and how others react to them (anchor passage in the We do segment)
- Also notice Tone / mood: word choices that reveal the narrator's attitude or the scene's feeling
- Also notice Plot: key events and the causes linking them

Chapter quiz: item bank (all eleven rigor versions)

1. [fill · recall · DOK 1] Complete the quotation from Chapter XXXVII, paragraph 1: “To Rosings he then _____ to console Lady Catherine, and her daughter” Word bank: hastened, return, company, immediately
   Key: hastened
2. [mc · recall · DOK 1] Who notices Elizabeth's low spirits?
   A. Lady Catherine
   B. Darcy
   C. Collins
   D. Jane

   Key: A (Lady Catherine)
3. [mc · recall · DOK 1] Who leaves Rosings first?
   A. Charlotte
   B. Elizabeth
   C. Darcy and Fitzwilliam
   D. Lady Catherine

   Key: C (Darcy and Fitzwilliam)
4. [mc · recall · DOK 1] Which word completes this sentence from Chapter XXXVII, paragraph 5? “Lady Catherine observed, after dinner, that Miss Bennet seemed out of spirits, and _____ accounting for it herself, by supposing that she did not like to go home again so soon, she added—”
   A. immediately
   B. servant
   C. occasion
   D. kindness

   Key: A (immediately)

5. [mc · recall · DOK 1] Which word completes this sentence from Chapter XXXVII, paragraph 13? “You know I always speak my mind, and I cannot bear the idea of two young women _____ post by themselves.”

   A. hastened

   B. diminution

   C. travelling

   D. tolerably

   Key: C (travelling)

6. [fill · recall · DOK 1] Complete the quotation from Chapter XXXVII, paragraph 17: “Her father, _____ with laughing at them, would never exert himself to restrain the wild giddiness of his youngest daughters”

   Key: contented

7. [fill · recall · DOK 1] Complete the quotation from Chapter XXXVII, paragraph 1: “The two _____ left Rosings the next morning”

   Key: gentlemen

8. [fill · recall · DOK 1] Fill in the blank with the vocabulary word that fits: “When she remembered the style of his address, she was still full of indignation; but when she considered how _____ she had condemned and upbraided him, her anger was turned against herself; and his disappointed feelings became the object of compassion.” Word bank: manservant, giddiness, unjustly, indecorum

   Key: unjustly

9. [mc · recall · DOK 1] In the line “Catherine, weak-spirited, irritable, and completely under Lydia’s guidance, had been always affronted by their advice; and Lydia, self-willed and careless, would scarcely give them a hearing.”, what does “affronted” most nearly mean?

   A. continues firmly

   B. an affront to one's dignity or self-esteem

   C. insulted; offended openly

   D. regularity; steadiness

   Key: C (insulted; offended openly)

10. [mc · recall · DOK 1] What does Elizabeth reread?

    A. Jane's letter

    B. Darcy's letter

    C. A novel

    D. Collins's sermon

    Key: B (Darcy's letter)

11. [fill · recall · DOK 1] Fill in the blank with the vocabulary word that fits: “Catherine, weak-spirited, _____, and completely under Lydia’s guidance, had been always affronted by their advice; and Lydia, self-willed and careless, would scarcely give them a hearing.” Word bank: indecorum, giddiness, irritable, manservant

    Key: irritable

12. [mc · inference · DOK 2] Which of these passages comes earliest in Chapter XXXVII?

    A. “To Rosings he then hastened to console Lady Catherine, and her daughter”

    B. “Elizabeth could not see Lady Catherine without recollecting, that had she chosen it, she might by this time have been presented to her, as…”

    C. “Their first subject was the diminution of the Rosings party.”

D. “But I am particularly attached to these young men; and know them to be so much attached to me!—They were excessively sorry to go!”

Key: A (“To Rosings he then hastened to console Lady Catherine, and her daughter”)

13. [short · inference · DOK 2] What does this passage from Chapter XXXVII, paragraph 13 reveal about the character or situation? “I am glad it occurred to me to mention it; for it would really be discreditable to you to let them go alone.” Answer in two or three sentences with one detail.
Sample answer: The passage (Chapter XXXVII, paragraph 13) shows the situation turning on first impressions and prejudice: Elizabeth now feels the justice of Darcy's objections to her family. The words “discreditable” and “occurred” are the proof, because they show how the moment looks to the people in it. They suggest more than the narrator states outright.

14. [mc · analysis · DOK 3] Which literary element does this describe in “Chapter XXXVII”? Darcy and Fitzwilliam leave; Lady Catherine regrets losing company and lectures the visitors about travel and packing.
A. Irony
B. Allusion
C. Characterization
D. Personification

Key: C (Characterization)

15. [short · analysis · DOK 3] Analyze how the word choice in this passage from Chapter XXXVII, paragraph 13 shapes its tone: “When my niece Georgiana went to Ramsgate last summer, I made a point of her having two men servants go with her.” Pick two words and explain their effect.
Sample answer: The words “servants” and “having” (Chapter XXXVII, paragraph 13) make the tone heavy and deliberate rather than neutral. That weight points the reader to class and social mobility: Elizabeth now feels the justice of Darcy's objections to her family. The author chooses them so the moment feels significant instead of passing.

16. [short · synthesis · DOK 4] Connect this passage from Chapter XXXVII, paragraph 18 to the story's treatment of women's limited choices: “His affection was proved to have been sincere, and his conduct cleared of all blame, unless any could attach to the implicitness of his confidence in his friend.” Use one other moment from the story as well.
Sample answer: This passage (Chapter XXXVII, paragraph 18) develops women's limited choices: Elizabeth now feels the justice of Darcy's objections to her family. Its words “implicitness” and “confidence” carry that idea into this moment. The same concern returns in “Their engagements at Rosings were as frequent during the last week of her stay, as they had been at first.” (Chapter XXXVII, paragraph 20), so the two passages read as a pattern, not a single moment. Together they show the story treating women's limited choices as central.

17. [fill · recall · DOK 1] Complete the quotation from Chapter XXXVII, paragraph 9: “He wrote last week to hurry my _____.” Word bank: hastened, propriety, travelling, return
Key: return

18. [mc · recall · DOK 1] In the line “Oh!—Your uncle!—He keeps a manservant, does he?—I am very glad you have somebody who thinks of those things.”, what does “manservant” most nearly mean?
A. hurt the pride of; humiliated
B. something immaterial that stands in the way and must be circumvented or surmounted
C. a male servant
D. a deep awareness of and sympathy for another's suffering

Key: C (a male servant)

19. [mc · recall · DOK 1] What does Elizabeth feel ashamed of?

    A. Her music

    B. Her letters

    C. Her family's conduct

    D. Her muddy walk

    Key: C (Her family's conduct)

20. [mc · inference · DOK 2] Which choice best states a central concern of “Chapter XXXVII”?

    A. The accomplished woman

    B. Endings and futures

    C. Leaving Kent

    D. Jealousy at Pemberley

    Key: C (Leaving Kent)

21. [short · inference · DOK 2] What can you infer from this line? “The two gentlemen left Rosings the next morning” (Chapter XXXVII, paragraph 1) Answer in two or three sentences with one detail.
    Sample answer: The quiet opening after the storm. The evidence is “The two gentlemen left Rosings the next morning” (Chapter XXXVII, paragraph 1). This develops pride and prejudice: Elizabeth now feels the justice of Darcy's objections to her family.

22. [short · analysis · DOK 3] Analyze how the word choice in this passage from Chapter XXXVII, paragraph 3 shapes its tone: “But I am particularly attached to these young men; and know them to be so much attached to me!—They were excessively sorry to go!” Pick two words and explain their effect.
    Sample answer: The words “particularly” and “excessively” (Chapter XXXVII, paragraph 3) make the tone heavy and deliberate rather than neutral. That weight points the reader to pride and self-knowledge: Elizabeth now feels the justice of Darcy's objections to her family. The author chooses them so the moment feels significant instead of passing.

23. [short · analysis · DOK 3] Claim: After the letter, Elizabeth begins to judge her own family as Darcy did. Explain how this evidence supports the claim: “Her father, contented with laughing at them, would never exert himself to restrain the wild giddiness of his youngest daughters” (Chapter XXXVII, paragraph 17).
    Sample answer: She now sees that her father, "contented with laughing at them, would never exert himself to restrain the wild giddiness of his youngest daughters," which is Darcy's objection in her own words. The evidence is “Her father, contented with laughing at them, would never exert himself to restrain the wild giddiness of his youngest daughters” (Chapter XXXVII, paragraph 17) — Elizabeth's new, critical view of her father. This develops pride and prejudice: Elizabeth now feels the justice of Darcy's objections to her family.

24. [short · analysis · DOK 3] Analyze how the word choice in this passage from Chapter XXXVII, paragraph 17 shapes its tone: “In her own past behaviour, there was a constant source of vexation and regret; and in the unhappy defects of her family a subject of yet heavier chagrin.” Pick two words and explain their effect.
    Sample answer: The words “behaviour” and “constant” (Chapter XXXVII, paragraph 17) make the tone heavy and deliberate rather than neutral. That weight points the reader to pride and self-knowledge: Elizabeth now feels the justice of Darcy's objections to her family. The author chooses them so the moment feels significant instead of passing.

25. [mc · recall · DOK 1] How is Elizabeth's mood?

    A. Thoughtful and subdued

    B. Angry

C. Indifferent

D. Joyful

Key: A (Thoughtful and subdued)

26. [mc · recall · DOK 1] In the line “How grievous then was the thought that, of a situation so desirable in every respect, so replete with advantage, so promising for happiness, Jane had been deprived, by the folly and indecorum of her own family!”, what does “indecorum” most nearly mean?

    A. a stopping

    B. improper behavior

    C. a card game played with tickets for prizes

    D. invited; sought out

    Key: B (improper behavior)

27. [short · inference · DOK 2] What can you infer from this line? “I feel it exceedingly” (Chapter XXXVII, paragraph 3) Answer in two or three sentences with one detail.
    Sample answer: Lady Catherine on the departure: she treats everything as about her. The evidence is “I feel it exceedingly” (Chapter XXXVII, paragraph 3). This develops pride and prejudice: Elizabeth now feels the justice of Darcy's objections to her family.

28. [short · synthesis · DOK 4] Connect this passage from Chapter XXXVII, paragraph 7 to the story's treatment of women's limited choices: “I am much obliged to your ladyship for your kind invitation,’ replied Elizabeth, ‘but it is not in my power to accept it.” Use one other moment from the story as well.
    Sample answer: This passage (Chapter XXXVII, paragraph 7) develops women's limited choices: Elizabeth now feels the justice of Darcy's objections to her family. Its words “invitation” and “ladyship” carry that idea into this moment. The same concern returns in “I told Mrs. Collins so before you came.” (Chapter XXXVII, paragraph 8), so the two passages read as a pattern, not a single moment. Together they show the story treating women's limited choices as central.

29. [short · synthesis · DOK 4] Connect this passage from Chapter XXXVII, paragraph 10 to the story's treatment of marriage and money: “And if you will stay another month complete, it will be in my power to take one of you as far as London, for I am going there early in June, for a week” Use one other moment from the story as well.
    Sample answer: This passage (Chapter XXXVII, paragraph 10) develops marriage and money: Elizabeth now feels the justice of Darcy's objections to her family. Its words “complete” and “another” carry that idea into this moment. The same concern returns in “Oh! your father of course may spare you, if your mother can.” (Chapter XXXVII, paragraph 10), so the two passages read as a pattern, not a single moment. Together they show the story treating marriage and money as central.

30. [fill · recall · DOK 1 · AP: AP-LIT.FIG] Complete the quotation from Chapter XXXVII, paragraph 13: “You must send John with the young _____, Mrs. Collins.” Word bank: hastened, company, ladies, travelling
    Key: ladies

31. [short · synthesis · DOK 4 · AP: AP-LIT.LAN] Synthesis: trace how pride and prejudice develops from Chapter XXXVI to Chapter XXXVII. Use one quotation from each.
    Sample answer: Earlier, in Chapter XXXVI, paragraph 8, the text reads “How despicably have I acted” — Self-judgment. In Chapter XXXVII, “The two gentlemen left Rosings the next morning” (Chapter XXXVII, paragraph 1), which shows the quiet opening after the storm. Elizabeth now feels the justice of Darcy's objections to her family.

32. [short · analysis · DOK 3 · AP: AP-LIT.FIG] Analyze the word choice in “Her father, contented with laughing at them, would never exert himself to restrain the wild giddiness of his youngest daughters” (Chapter XXXVII, paragraph 17). Pick two words and explain what they suggest.

Sample answer: Elizabeth's new, critical view of her father. The evidence is “Her father, contented with laughing at them, would never exert himself to restrain the wild giddiness of his youngest daughters” (Chapter XXXVII, paragraph 17). This develops pride and prejudice: Elizabeth now feels the justice of Darcy's objections to her family. The words “contented” and “giddiness” carry that meaning: they are the charged choices in the line, and changing either would soften the effect.

33. [mc · inference · DOK 2 · AP: AP-LIT.LAN] What does this passage most clearly show? “I feel it exceedingly” (Chapter XXXVII, paragraph 3)

    A. Darcy's attraction, revealed to the reader.

    B. Elizabeth's challenge: playful and defiant, the voice Darcy finds irresistible.

    C. Lady Catherine on the departure: she treats everything as about her.

    D. Elizabeth's rejection of Charlotte's view.

    Key: C (Lady Catherine on the departure: she treats everything as about her.)

34. [mc · inference · DOK 2 · AP: AP-LIT.LAN] What does this passage most clearly show? “The two gentlemen left Rosings the next morning” (Chapter XXXVII, paragraph 1)

    A. The quiet opening after the storm.

    B. Darcy's personal remark, which startles Elizabeth.

    C. Elizabeth's rebuttal by analogy.

    D. The chapter opens by clearing the stage for new arrivals.

    Key: A (The quiet opening after the storm.)

35. [mc · analysis · DOK 3 · Program outcome: LeL-C2-LIT-1] Which literary element does this describe in “Chapter XXXVII”? Comic relief after the crisis; Elizabeth's private reflections run underneath.

    A. Simile

    B. Allusion

    C. Metaphor

    D. Tone / mood

    Key: D (Tone / mood)

36. [mc · inference · DOK 2 · Program outcome: LeL-C3-LIT-1] What does this passage most clearly show? “Her father, contented with laughing at them, would never exert himself to restrain the wild giddiness of his youngest daughters” (Chapter XXXVII, paragraph 17)

    A. Wickham on Darcy's unpopularity.

    B. Elizabeth's new, critical view of her father.

    C. Miss Bingley's flattery of Darcy's letter-writing: comic and transparent.

    D. Opening reversal: he has done what he pretended to refuse.

    Key: B (Elizabeth's new, critical view of her father.)

37. [short · synthesis · DOK 4 · Program outcome: LeL-C3-LIT-1] Close reading: how do the diction and syntax of “The two gentlemen left Rosings the next morning” (Chapter XXXVII, paragraph 1) shape its meaning? Consider a second, competing reading.

    Sample answer: The quiet opening after the storm. The evidence is “The two gentlemen left Rosings the next morning” (Chapter XXXVII, paragraph 1). This develops pride and prejudice: Elizabeth now feels the justice of Darcy's objections to her family. The words “gentlemen” and “morning” carry that meaning: they are the charged choices in the line, and changing either would soften the effect. She now sees that her father, "contented with laughing at them, would never exert himself to restrain the wild giddiness of his youngest daughters," which is Darcy's objection in her own words.

Rigor version	Items (in order)	Mix
Scaffolded support	1, 2, 3, 4, 5, 6, 7, 8, 9, 10, 11, 12, 13, 14, 15, 16	recall 11, inference 2, analysis 2, synthesis 1
HS Freshman	6, 11, 9, 17, 8, 5, 18, 19, 12, 20, 13, 21, 22, 23, 24, 16	recall 8, inference 4, analysis 3, synthesis 1
HS Sophomore	4, 25, 1, 5, 2, 11, 6, 26, 12, 13, 27, 14, 22, 15, 28, 29	recall 8, inference 3, analysis 3, synthesis 2
HS Junior	5, 8, 10, 30, 7, 18, 27, 13, 12, 21, 14, 23, 22, 15, 28, 31	recall 6, inference 4, analysis 4, synthesis 2
HS Senior	10, 30, 5, 25, 11, 18, 13, 21, 12, 22, 24, 14, 32, 28, 31, 29	recall 6, inference 3, analysis 4, synthesis 3
AP	30, 25, 6, 33, 12, 34, 13, 22, 15, 24, 23, 14, 29, 16, 31, 28	recall 3, inference 4, analysis 5, synthesis 4
College Freshman	8, 25, 7, 12, 20, 13, 33, 21, 32, 22, 24, 15, 31, 29, 16, 28	recall 3, inference 5, analysis 4, synthesis 4
College Sophomore	8, 2, 1, 21, 13, 12, 33, 35, 22, 15, 24, 32, 29, 31, 28, 16	recall 3, inference 4, analysis 5, synthesis 4
College Junior	8, 1, 9, 12, 33, 36, 13, 24, 14, 22, 15, 29, 28, 31, 16, 37	recall 3, inference 4, analysis 4, synthesis 5
College Senior	7, 8, 4, 27, 12, 13, 36, 14, 22, 15, 24, 37, 28, 31, 16, 29	recall 3, inference 4, analysis 4, synthesis 5
Graduate / PhD	17, 3, 2, 30, 12, 21, 13, 23, 24, 35, 15, 22, 16, 28, 31, 29	recall 4, inference 3, analysis 5, synthesis 4

Writing prompts (eleven rigor levels)

Scaffolded support (250 words; AP: see unit standards): Supported track (work from the passage your teacher selects). In “Chapter XXXVII,” how does Austen show leaving Kent? Write a paragraph that states your claim, quotes two details from the passage, and explains how each detail supports your idea. Use the characterization you noticed as one piece of evidence.

HS Freshman (350 words; AP: see unit standards): In Chapter XXXVII, how does Austen develop the idea of leaving Kent? State a clear claim, support it with two or three quotations, and explain how the characterization in the chapter helps build that idea.

HS Sophomore (450 words; AP: see unit standards): Analyze how Chapter XXXVII develops the idea of leaving Kent. Make a precise claim, support it with at least three pieces of textual evidence, and explain how the author's use of characterization and tone / mood shapes that idea. Address one possible counterclaim.

HS Junior (550 words; AP: see unit standards): Analyze how the structure of Chapter XXXVII (where it begins, turns and ends) and its characterization shape the reader's understanding of leaving Kent. Identify one place where the text leaves matters uncertain and explain how that uncertainty adds to its meaning.

HS Senior (600 words; AP: see unit standards): Two readers disagree about what Chapter XXXVII suggests about leaving Kent. Lay out two plausible interpretations, weigh the evidence for each (including the chapter's characterization and tone / mood), and argue for the stronger one in a sustained, well-organized essay.

AP (650 words; AP: AP-LIT.CHR, AP-LIT.LAN): Write a literary argument in which you analyze how Jane Austen uses characterization in Chapter XXXVII to complicate the reader's understanding of leaving Kent.

Develop a defensible thesis, select evidence purposefully, and explain how specific choices of diction and syntax create meaning.

College Freshman (1000 words; AP: see unit standards): Situate Chapter XXXVII within its historical and literary context and argue how the chapter's treatment of leaving Kent responds to that context. Engage with at least one secondary perspective (a critic, historian or the author's own statements), integrate quotations smoothly, and cite in MLA style.

College Sophomore (1250 words; AP: see unit standards): Read Chapter XXXVII alongside the conventions of its genre and period. Argue how the chapter's handling of leaving Kent follows or bends those conventions, using the characterization as evidence, and test your reading against one published critic. Document two secondary sources in MLA.

College Junior (1500 words; AP: see unit standards): Apply a named critical approach (for example formalist, historicist, feminist, psychoanalytic or ecocritical) to Chapter XXXVII and its treatment of leaving Kent. State your method, show what it reveals in the chapter's characterization and tone / mood, and identify where the text resists it.

College Senior (2000 words; AP: see unit standards): Develop a research argument that reads Chapter XXXVII as evidence for a larger claim about leaving Kent in Pride and Prejudice. Connect close reading of the chapter to the whole novel, engage at least four scholarly sources, and state precisely where your reading departs from theirs (Chicago style).

Graduate / PhD (2500 words; AP: see unit standards): Develop an original argument that reads Chapter XXXVII as a hinge in the novel's larger treatment of leaving Kent. Position your reading within a named critical conversation (for example formalist, historicist, psychoanalytic, feminist or postcolonial approaches), account for the textual history where relevant, and articulate the stakes of your intervention for scholarship on Pride and Prejudice.

SAT-style questions

1. Her father, contented with laughing at them, would never exert himself to restrain the wild giddiness of his youngest daughters; and her mother, with manners so far from right herself, was entirely insensible of the evil.

   As used in the text, what does the word “giddiness” most nearly mean?

   A. silly, careless behavior

   B. in an unjust manner

   C. insulted; offended openly

   D. easily irritated or annoyed

2. Anxiety on Jane’s behalf, was another prevailing concern, and Mr. Darcy’s explanation, by restoring Bingley to all her former good opinion, heightened the sense of what Jane had lost. His affection was proved to have been sincere, and his conduct cleared of all blame, unless any could attach to the implicitness of his confidence in his friend. How grievous then was the thought that, of a situation so desirable in every respect, so replete with advantage, so promising for happiness, Jane had been deprived, by the folly and indecorum of her own family!

Which choice best states a central concern of "Chapter XXXVII"?

A. Pompous flattery

B. Embarrassing relations

C. A persuasive tale

D. Leaving Kent

SAT key: 1. A (silly, careless behavior); 2. D (Leaving Kent)

Lesson 39: Chapter XXXVIII

Focus: farewells at Hunsford

Objective: Students will analyze how irony develops in "Chapter XXXVIII" by writing a claim-evidence-reasoning paragraph that cites at least 2 quotations from the section, and will score at least 80% on the section quiz.

Standards: AP: see the unit standards

Content note (alcohol or drugs (mentioned)): This section mentions drinking or a drug ("…gh. "We have dined nine times at Rosings, besides drinking tea there twice!—How much I shall have…"). Treat it as period custom or plot detail; name it plainly and don't glamorize it.
Student preview: This section mentions drinking or a drug.
Suggested language: "What does this detail add to the scene?"

Teacher only · spoilers

On Elizabeth's last morning Collins gives a farewell speech praising his own humble home and his privileged connection with Rosings. Elizabeth pities Charlotte but sees she is content. Elizabeth and Maria travel to London to meet Jane.

Background: Departing guests received formal speeches of thanks and good wishes.

Significance: Collins's speech is comic self-praise disguised as humility.

Lesson plan and lecture script (90 minutes)

0–8 min · Bell-ringer · You do (8 min)
Students write to the bell-ringer, then pair-share.
Is Charlotte content or simply resigned? Write for five minutes. Starters: I think... because... / This connects to marriage and money because.... Content note before we start: This section mentions drinking or a drug.
Prompt: Is Charlotte content or simply resigned?
Sentence starters: I think… because… · This connects to marriage and money because…
Strong response: A strong response takes a position and anticipates this: Charlotte's life is respectable and narrow.

8–18 min · Vocabulary with etymology notes · I do (10 min)
Three key words in context, with verified word histories.
Today's words: parcels — packages; poultry — chickens, ducks and similar birds raised for food; consternation — alarm and dismay. "consternation": Origin: French consternation; earlier Latin consternātiō.
Words: parcels: packages · poultry: chickens, ducks and similar birds raised for food · consternation: alarm and dismay

18–28 min · Background and context · I do (10 min)
Mini-lecture (read or adapt the script).
Departing guests received formal speeches of thanks and good wishes. Collins's speech is comic self-praise disguised as humility. Characterization: Collins makes a farewell speech about the "humble abode"; Elizabeth leaves Charlotte with mixed feelings. Irony: Collins boasts of his happiness; Elizabeth considers Charlotte's choice with compassion. Watch for rank and condescension: Rank is displayed and enforced, above all at Rosings by Lady Catherine; Elizabeth refuses to be cowed. In this chapter: "but I hope you will believe us grateful for the condescension, and that we have done everything in our power to prevent" (Chapter XXXVIII, paragraph 2).

28–40 min · I do: modeled close reading · I do (12 min)
Model the close reading of the anchor quotation using the written think-aloud below.
First, meaning. I read "On Saturday morning Elizabeth and Mr. Collins met for breakfast a few minutes before the others appeared" slowly and put it in my own words: On Saturday morning, Elizabeth and Mr. Collins meet at breakfast a few minutes before the others come down. Next, craft. I notice the precise timing, which sets up an awkward private moment for Collins's formal goodbyes. The strongest word is "minutes": the brief gap gives Collins just enough time for a speech. Then, effect. Why does Austen mention that Elizabeth and Collins met before the others? My answer: The moment lets Collins make his pompous farewell, boasting of his happy home; Elizabeth must listen politely to the man whose proposal she refused.

> On Saturday morning Elizabeth and Mr. Collins met for breakfast a few minutes before the others appeared (Chapter XXXVIII, paragraph 1)

Think-aloud: First, meaning. I read "On Saturday morning Elizabeth and Mr. Collins met for breakfast a few minutes before the others appeared" slowly and put it in my own words: On Saturday morning, Elizabeth and Mr. Collins meet at breakfast a few minutes before the others come down. Next, craft. I notice the precise timing, which sets up an awkward private moment for Collins's formal goodbyes. The strongest word is "minutes": the brief gap gives Collins just enough time for a speech. Then, effect. Why does Austen mention that Elizabeth and Collins met before the others? My answer: The moment lets Collins make his pompous farewell, boasting of his happy home; Elizabeth must listen politely to the man whose proposal she refused.

40–55 min · We do: guided annotation · We do (15 min)
Guided analysis of a second quotation; expected answers given.
Ask: What words in this line stand out, and what do they suggest? Expected: Alliteration ("parish and her poultry") gently mocks but also respects Charlotte's choice. Ask: How does this line connect to marriage and money? Expected: Charlotte's life is respectable and narrow. (Charlotte's compensations.)

> Her home and her housekeeping, her parish and her poultry, and all their dependent concerns, had not yet lost their charms (Chapter XXXVIII, paragraph 7)

Ask: What words in this line stand out, and what do they suggest?
Expected answer: Alliteration ("parish and her poultry") gently mocks but also respects Charlotte's choice.
Ask: How does this line connect to marriage and money?
Expected answer: Charlotte's life is respectable and narrow. (Charlotte's compensations.)

55–70 min · You do: independent annotation · You do (15 min)
Independent annotation and a claim-evidence-reasoning paragraph (exemplar given).
Annotate the chapter for characterization, irony (three marks with a margin note each), then write one claim-evidence-reasoning paragraph: what does this chapter suggest about farewells at Hunsford? Then start your writing prompt at your assigned level (HS Sophomore: Analyze how Chapter XXXVIII develops the idea of farewells at Hunsford. Make a precise claim, support it with at least three pieces of textual evidence, and explain how the author's use of irony and characterization shapes that idea. Address one possible counterclaim.) Exemplar: Elizabeth leaves Hunsford with pity for Charlotte but also a sense that Charlotte has found what she wanted. When the text says “Her home and her housekeeping, her parish and her poultry, and all their dependent concerns, had not yet lost their charms” (Chapter XXXVIII, paragraph 7), it shows this directly. She thinks "poor Charlotte! it was melancholy to leave her to such society," yet notes that "her home and her housekeeping, her parish and her poultry" had "not yet lost their charms."
Task: Annotate the chapter for characterization, irony (three marks with a margin note each), then write one claim-evidence-reasoning paragraph: what does this chapter suggest about farewells at Hunsford? Then start your writing prompt at your assigned level (HS Sophomore: Analyze how Chapter XXXVIII develops the idea of farewells at Hunsford. Make a precise claim, support it with at least three pieces of textual evidence, and explain how the author's use of irony and characterization shapes that idea. Address one possible counterclaim.)
Exemplar: Elizabeth leaves Hunsford with pity for Charlotte but also a sense that Charlotte has found what she wanted. When the text says “Her home and her housekeeping, her parish and her poultry, and all their dependent concerns, had not yet lost their charms” (Chapter XXXVIII, paragraph 7), it shows this directly. She thinks "poor Charlotte! it was melancholy to leave her to such society," yet notes that "her home and her housekeeping, her parish and her poultry" had "not yet lost their charms."

70–80 min · Discussion · We do (10 min)
Structured discussion from the 30 tiered questions, with facilitation notes.
Anchor question: Is Charlotte content or simply resigned? Ask: is Charlotte's life a failure?
Anchor question: Is Charlotte content or simply resigned?
Facilitation: Ask: is Charlotte's life a failure?

80–87 min · Exit ticket / chapter quiz · You do (7 min)
Chapter quiz in the app and an exit ticket (answer given).
Chapter quiz in the app, then: In one sentence, what does this chapter suggest about farewells at Hunsford? Support it with one short quotation. Model answer: Elizabeth leaves Hunsford with pity for Charlotte but also a sense that Charlotte has found what she wanted. ("Her home and her housekeeping, her parish and her poultry, and all their dependent concerns, had not yet lost their charms", Chapter XXXVIII, paragraph 7). Accept any defensible claim backed by a quotation from the chapter; the answer key for the quiz is in the Quiz section.
Exit ticket: In one sentence, what does this chapter suggest about farewells at Hunsford? Support it with one short quotation.
Answer: Model answer: Elizabeth leaves Hunsford with pity for Charlotte but also a sense that Charlotte has found what she wanted. ("Her home and her housekeeping, her parish and her poultry, and all their dependent concerns, had not yet lost their charms", Chapter XXXVIII, paragraph 7). Accept any defensible claim backed by a quotation from the chapter; the answer key for the quiz is in the Quiz section.

87–90 min · Closure · I do (3 min)
Summarize the lesson and preview the next reading.
Today we saw how characterization shapes farewells at Hunsford. Key takeaway: Charlotte's life is respectable and narrow.

Total: 90 minutes.

Teacher analysis (spoilers)

Literary elements

- Characterization: Collins makes a farewell speech about the "humble abode"; Elizabeth leaves Charlotte with mixed feelings.
- Irony: Collins boasts of his happiness; Elizabeth considers Charlotte's choice with compassion.

Themes and how they develop

- marriage and money: Charlotte's life is respectable and narrow.

Symbols and motifs

- rank and condescension: Rank is displayed and enforced, above all at Rosings by Lady Catherine; Elizabeth refuses to be cowed. In this chapter: "but I hope you will believe us grateful for the condescension, and that we have done everything in our power to prevent" (Chapter XXXVIII, paragraph 2).
- silence and reserve: What characters leave unsaid (Darcy's reserve, Jane's composure, Elizabeth's secrets) drives misunderstanding. In this chapter: "on this point it will be as well to be silent. Only let me assure you, my dear Miss Elizabeth, that I" (Chapter XXXVIII, paragraph 6).

Key quotations (checked against the reading text)

- "On Saturday morning Elizabeth and Mr. Collins met for breakfast a few minutes before the others appeared" (Chapter XXXVIII, paragraph 1) Opening.
- "Poor Charlotte!—it was melancholy to leave her to such society" (Chapter XXXVIII, paragraph 7) Elizabeth's pity.
- "Her home and her housekeeping, her parish and her poultry, and all their dependent concerns, had not yet lost their charms" (Chapter XXXVIII, paragraph 7) Charlotte's compensations.

Model claim-evidence-reasoning

Claim: Elizabeth leaves Hunsford with pity for Charlotte but also a sense that Charlotte has found what she wanted.
Evidence: "Her home and her housekeeping, her parish and her poultry, and all their dependent concerns, had not yet lost their charms" (Chapter XXXVIII, paragraph 7)
Reasoning: She thinks "poor Charlotte! it was melancholy to leave her to such society," yet notes that "her home and her housekeeping, her parish and her poultry" had "not yet lost their charms."

Vocabulary with etymology notes

Word	Definition (in this sentence)	In context	Word history
parcels (noun)	packages	At length the chaise arrived, the trunks were fastened on, the parcels placed within, and it was pronounced to be ready.
poultry (noun)	chickens, ducks and similar birds raised for food	Her home and her housekeeping, her parish and her poultry, and all their dependent concerns, had not yet lost their charms.
consternation (noun)	alarm and dismay	He then handed her in, Maria followed, and the door was on the point of being closed, when he suddenly reminded them, with some consternation, that they had hitherto forgotten to leave any message for the ladies of Rosings.	"consternation": Origin: French consternation; earlier Latin consternātiō. (Liber et Libri origin note, https://en.wiktionary.org/wiki/consternation#Etymology)

Discussion questions

1. Is Charlotte content or simply resigned?
2. Where does irony appear in this chapter, and what effect does it have? Point to one passage.
3. How does this chapter connect to the book's larger concern with marriage and money?

Classroom discussion questions (30, tiered)

Wait time after every question (3 s for DOK 1, 5 s for DOK 2, 8 to 10 s for DOK 3 and 4); think-pair-share on DOK 3 and 4; answer each response with a follow-up probe; close with student-generated questions. Focus sets by rigor level: Scaffolded support: 1, 2, 3, 4, 5, 6, 11, 12, 13, 14, 21, 22; HS Freshman: 1, 2, 3, 4, 5, 12, 13, 14, 15, 22, 23, 24; HS Sophomore: 1, 2, 3, 4, 13, 14, 15, 16, 17, 23, 24, 25; HS Junior: 1, 2, 3, 14, 15, 16, 17, 18, 24, 25, 26, 27; HS Senior: 1, 2, 3, 15, 16, 17, 18, 25, 26, 27, 28, 29; AP: 1, 2, 16, 17, 18, 19, 20, 26, 27, 28, 29, 30; College Freshman: 1, 2, 17, 18, 19, 20, 21, 22, 27, 28, 29, 30; College Sophomore: 1, 2, 11, 18, 19, 20, 21, 22, 23, 28, 29, 30; College Junior: 1, 11, 12, 19, 20, 21, 22, 23, 24, 25, 29, 30; College Senior: 1, 11, 12, 13, 20, 21, 22, 23, 24, 25, 26, 30; Graduate / PhD: 1, 11, 12, 13, 21, 22, 23, 24, 25, 26, 27, 28

Literal / recall

1. Who gives a farewell speech? [DOK 1 · coldCallWithSupport · wait 3 s · AP: unit standards] Look for: Mr. Collins
2. What does he praise? [DOK 1 · turnAndTalk · wait 3 s · AP: unit standards] Look for: His home and his connection with Rosings
3. How does Elizabeth view Charlotte? [DOK 1 · coldCallWithSupport · wait 3 s · AP: unit standards] Look for: She pities her but sees contentment
4. Where do Elizabeth and Maria go next? [DOK 1 · turnAndTalk · wait 3 s · AP: unit standards] Look for: London, to meet Jane
5. What is the tone of Collins's speech? [DOK 1 · coldCallWithSupport · wait 3 s · AP: unit standards] Look for: Comic self-praise
6. Retell the three most important events of “Chapter XXXVIII” in order, in one sentence each. [DOK 1 · turnAndTalk · wait 3 s · AP: unit standards] Look for: On Elizabeth's last morning Collins gives a farewell speech praising his own humble home and his privileged connection with Rosings. Elizabeth pities Charlotte but sees she is content. Elizabeth and Maria travel to London to meet Jane.
7. Which characters appear or are mentioned in “Chapter XXXVIII”? Name two and one thing each says or does. [DOK 1 · coldCallWithSupport · wait 3 s · AP: unit standards] Look for: Names and actions taken from the chapter; check against the teacher summary.
8. Where and when does “Chapter XXXVIII” take place? Point to the line that tells you. [DOK 1 · turnAndTalk · wait 3 s · AP: unit standards] Look for: A place/time detail quoted from the chapter.
9. Reread: “At length the chaise arrived, the trunks were fastened on, the parcels placed within, and it was pronounced to be ready.” What does “parcels” mean here, and what is literally happening in this line? [DOK 1 · turnAndTalk · wait 3 s · AP: unit standards] Look for: parcels: packages.
10. Reread: “Her home and her housekeeping, her parish and her poultry, and all their dependent concerns, had not yet lost their charms.” What does “poultry” mean here, and what is literally happening in this line? [DOK 1 · turnAndTalk · wait 3 s · AP: unit standards] Look for: poultry: chickens, ducks and similar birds raised for food.

Inferential / analytical

1. What does “Chapter XXXVIII” suggest about farewells at Hunsford? State the inference and the line that supports it. [DOK 2 · thinkPairShare · wait 5 s · AP-LIT.LAN] Look for: Collins's speech is comic self-praise disguised as humility.
2. Find one example of irony in this chapter. What does it reveal that a plain statement would not? [DOK 2 · followUp · wait 5 s · AP-LIT.NAR] Look for: Look for gaps between what characters expect or say and what is true.
3. How does the characterization in this chapter shape what we understand about farewells at Hunsford? [DOK 3 · thinkPairShare · wait 8 s · AP-LIT.CHR] Look for: Look for what characters say, do and think, and how others react to them.

   Answer guidance: A defensible line of argument: Elizabeth leaves Hunsford with pity for Charlotte but also a sense that Charlotte has found what she wanted. Useful evidence: “On Saturday morning Elizabeth and Mr. Collins met for breakfast a few minutes before the others appeared" (Chapter XXXVIII, paragraph 1): Opening. On characterization: Collins makes a farewell speech about the "humble abode"; Elizabeth leaves Charlotte with mixed feelings. Credit any position that is supported by quotation and reasoning; push one-sided answers to address the strongest counterpoint.

4. In the passage that begins "Elizabeth could safely say that it was a great happiness where that was the case, and with equal sincerity could add that she firmly believed and rejoiced in his domestic comforts.", why might Austen have chosen these particular words? Pick two and explain their connotations. [DOK 2 · followUp · wait 5 s · AP-LIT.FIG] Look for: Diction analysis of two words in the anchor passage.
5. What causes the main turn in "Chapter XXXVIII", and what effect is it likely to have on what follows? [DOK 2 · followUp · wait 5 s · AP-LIT.STR] Look for: On Elizabeth's last morning Collins gives a farewell speech praising his own humble home and his privileged connection with Rosings. Elizabeth pities Charlotte but sees she is content. Elizabeth and Maria travel to London to meet Jane.
6. How does "Chapter XXXVIII" build on "Chapter XXXVII"? Name one link of cause and effect. [DOK 3 · thinkPairShare · wait 8 s · AP-LIT.STR] Look for: A causal or structural link between this and the previous chapter.
   Answer guidance: A defensible line of argument: Elizabeth leaves Hunsford with pity for Charlotte but also a sense that Charlotte has found what she wanted. Useful evidence: "Poor Charlotte!—it was melancholy to leave her to such society" (Chapter XXXVIII, paragraph 7): Elizabeth's pity. Theme link: Charlotte's life is respectable and narrow. Credit any position that is supported by quotation and reasoning; push one-sided answers to address the strongest counterpoint.
7. What can we infer about a character's motives from what they say and do here, as opposed to what they claim? [DOK 3 · followUp · wait 8 s · AP-LIT.CHR] Look for: An inference about motive supported by a quoted line.
   Answer guidance: A defensible line of argument: Elizabeth leaves Hunsford with pity for Charlotte but also a sense that Charlotte has found what she wanted. Useful evidence: "Her home and her housekeeping, her parish and her poultry, and all their dependent concerns, had not yet lost their charms" (Chapter XXXVIII, paragraph 7): Charlotte's compensations. On characterization: Collins makes a farewell speech about the "humble abode"; Elizabeth leaves Charlotte with mixed feelings. Credit any position that is supported by quotation and reasoning; push one-sided answers to address the strongest counterpoint.
8. The bell-ringer asked: "Is Charlotte content or simply resigned?" Now that we have read closely, how would you revise your first answer, and which line changed your mind? [DOK 2 · thinkPairShare · wait 5 s · AP-LIT.LAN] Look for: A revised answer anchored in the text.
9. Where does tone / mood appear, and how does it connect this chapter to the larger concern with marriage and money? [DOK 3 · followUp · wait 8 s · AP-LIT.FIG] Look for: Look for word choices that reveal the narrator's attitude or the scene's feeling.
   Answer guidance: A defensible line of argument: Elizabeth leaves Hunsford with pity for Charlotte but also a sense that Charlotte has found what she wanted. Useful evidence: "On Saturday morning Elizabeth and Mr. Collins met for breakfast a few minutes before the others appeared" (Chapter XXXVIII, paragraph 1): Opening. Theme link: Charlotte's life is respectable and narrow. Credit any position that is supported by quotation and reasoning; push one-sided answers to address the strongest counterpoint.
10. Background: Departing guests received formal speeches of thanks and good wishes. How does knowing this change the way you read one moment in the chapter? [DOK 3 · thinkPairShare · wait 8 s · AP-LIT.SET] Look for: A specific moment reread in light of the context.
    Answer guidance: A defensible line of argument: Elizabeth leaves Hunsford with pity for Charlotte but also a sense that Charlotte has found what she wanted. Useful evidence: "Poor Charlotte!—it was melancholy to leave her to such society" (Chapter XXXVIII, paragraph 7): Elizabeth's pity. Theme link: Charlotte's life is respectable and narrow. Credit any position that is supported by quotation and reasoning; push one-sided answers to address the strongest counterpoint.

Evaluative / synthesis / creative

1. A critic might argue: "Collins's speech is comic self-praise disguised as humility." How far do you agree? Take a stand and defend it with two lines from the chapter. [DOK 3 · fourCorners · wait 8 s · AP-LIT.LAN] Look for: A defended position with evidence and one counterpoint.
   Answer guidance: A defensible line of argument: Elizabeth leaves Hunsford with pity for Charlotte but also a sense that Charlotte has found what she wanted. Useful evidence: "Her home and her housekeeping, her parish and her poultry, and all their dependent concerns, had not yet lost their charms" (Chapter XXXVIII, paragraph 7): Charlotte's compensations. Theme link: Charlotte's life is respectable and narrow. Credit any position that is supported by quotation and reasoning; push one-sided answers to address the strongest counterpoint.
2. Which character in this chapter acts most wisely, and which least? Judge them by a standard you name. [DOK 3 · thinkPairShare · wait 8 s · AP-LIT.CHR, AP-LIT.LAN] Look for: An evaluation using an explicit criterion and evidence.
   Answer guidance: A defensible line of argument: Elizabeth leaves Hunsford with pity for Charlotte but also a sense that Charlotte has found what she wanted. Useful evidence: "On Saturday morning Elizabeth and Mr. Collins met for breakfast a few minutes before the others appeared" (Chapter XXXVIII, paragraph 1): Opening. On characterization: Collins makes a farewell speech about the "humble abode"; Elizabeth leaves Charlotte with mixed feelings. Credit any position that is supported by quotation and reasoning; push one-sided answers to address the strongest counterpoint.
3. Rewrite one moment of "Chapter XXXVIII" from the point of view of a different character. What does the new angle reveal or hide about farewells at Hunsford? [DOK 4 · thinkPairShare · wait 8 s · AP-LIT.LAN, AP-LIT.NAR] Look for: A creative product with a rationale tied to the text.
   Answer guidance: A defensible line of argument: Elizabeth leaves Hunsford with pity for Charlotte but also a sense that Charlotte has found what she wanted. Useful evidence: "Poor Charlotte!—it was melancholy to leave her to such society" (Chapter XXXVIII, paragraph 7): Elizabeth's pity. Theme link: Charlotte's life is respectable and narrow. Credit any position that is supported by quotation and reasoning; push one-sided answers to address the strongest counterpoint.
4. Write three questions of your own about "Chapter XXXVIII": one recall, one "why/how", and one "should/what if". Trade with a partner and answer theirs. [DOK 3 · studentGenerated · wait 8 s · AP-LIT.LAN] Look for: Student-generated questions at three levels.
   Answer guidance: A defensible line of argument: Elizabeth leaves Hunsford with pity for Charlotte but also a sense that Charlotte has found what she wanted. Useful evidence: "Her home and her housekeeping, her parish and her poultry, and all their dependent concerns, had not yet lost their charms" (Chapter XXXVIII, paragraph 7): Charlotte's compensations. Theme link: Charlotte's life is respectable and narrow. Credit any position that is supported by quotation and reasoning; push one-sided answers to address the strongest counterpoint.
5. Connect this chapter to class and social mobility: is the link strong or weak so far? What would Austen need to show next to strengthen it? [DOK 4 · socraticCircle · wait 8 s · AP-LIT.LAN] Look for: A judgment of thematic development across the work.

Answer guidance: A defensible line of argument: Elizabeth leaves Hunsford with pity for Charlotte but also a sense that Charlotte has found what she wanted. Useful evidence: “On Saturday morning Elizabeth and Mr. Collins met for breakfast a few minutes before the others appeared” (Chapter XXXVIII, paragraph 1): Opening. Theme link: Charlotte's life is respectable and narrow. Credit any position that is supported by quotation and reasoning; push one-sided answers to address the strongest counterpoint.

6. Is the irony in this chapter effective, or does it feel heavy-handed? Evaluate it as a reader would in a review. [DOK 3 · fourCorners · wait 8 s · AP-LIT.LAN, AP-LIT.NAR] Look for: An evaluative judgment with criteria and evidence.
   Answer guidance: A defensible line of argument: Elizabeth leaves Hunsford with pity for Charlotte but also a sense that Charlotte has found what she wanted. Useful evidence: “Poor Charlotte!—it was melancholy to leave her to such society” (Chapter XXXVIII, paragraph 7): Elizabeth's pity. On irony: Collins boasts of his happiness; Elizabeth considers Charlotte's choice with compassion. Credit any position that is supported by quotation and reasoning; push one-sided answers to address the strongest counterpoint.
7. Compare how “Chapter XXXVIII” treats farewells at Hunsford with how another text, film or event you know treats a similar idea. What does Pride and Prejudice see that the other misses? [DOK 4 · socraticCircle · wait 8 s · AP-LIT.LAN] Look for: A cross-text synthesis.
   Answer guidance: A defensible line of argument: Elizabeth leaves Hunsford with pity for Charlotte but also a sense that Charlotte has found what she wanted. Useful evidence: “Her home and her housekeeping, her parish and her poultry, and all their dependent concerns, had not yet lost their charms” (Chapter XXXVIII, paragraph 7): Charlotte's compensations. Theme link: Charlotte's life is respectable and narrow. Credit any position that is supported by quotation and reasoning; push one-sided answers to address the strongest counterpoint.
8. Predict what “Chapter XXXIX” will bring, using two clues from this chapter. After reading, evaluate your prediction. [DOK 3 · thinkPairShare · wait 8 s · AP-LIT.LAN, AP-LIT.STR] Look for: A prediction or judgment justified with textual clues.
   Answer guidance: A defensible line of argument: Elizabeth leaves Hunsford with pity for Charlotte but also a sense that Charlotte has found what she wanted. Useful evidence: “On Saturday morning Elizabeth and Mr. Collins met for breakfast a few minutes before the others appeared” (Chapter XXXVIII, paragraph 1): Opening. Theme link: Charlotte's life is respectable and narrow. Credit any position that is supported by quotation and reasoning; push one-sided answers to address the strongest counterpoint.
9. Design a one-paragraph modern adaptation of this chapter (setting, characters, conflict). What must stay the same for it to still be about farewells at Hunsford? [DOK 4 · thinkPairShare · wait 8 s · AP-LIT.LAN] Look for: A creative transfer that keeps the core idea.
   Answer guidance: A defensible line of argument: Elizabeth leaves Hunsford with pity for Charlotte but also a sense that Charlotte has found what she wanted. Useful evidence: “Poor Charlotte!—it was melancholy to leave her to such society” (Chapter XXXVIII, paragraph 7): Elizabeth's pity. Theme link: Charlotte's life is respectable and narrow. Credit any position that is supported by quotation and reasoning; push one-sided answers to address the strongest counterpoint.
10. What question would you most like to ask Jane Austen about this chapter, and what answer do you think the text itself gives? [DOK 4 · studentGenerated · wait 8 s · AP-LIT.LAN] Look for: A student-generated question answered from evidence.
    Answer guidance: A defensible line of argument: Elizabeth leaves Hunsford with pity for Charlotte but also a sense that Charlotte has found what she wanted. Useful evidence: “Her home and her housekeeping, her parish and her poultry, and all their dependent concerns, had not yet lost their charms" (Chapter XXXVIII, paragraph 7): Charlotte's compensations. Theme link: Charlotte's life is respectable and narrow. Credit any position that is supported by quotation and reasoning; push one-sided answers to address the strongest counterpoint.

Annotation focus

- Irony: look for gaps between what characters expect or say and what is true (anchor passage in the We do segment)
- Also notice Characterization: what characters say, do and think, and how others react to them
- Also notice Tone / mood: word choices that reveal the narrator's attitude or the scene's feeling

Chapter quiz: item bank (all eleven rigor versions)

1. [mc · recall · DOK 1] Who gives a farewell speech?

   A. Darcy
   B. Lady Catherine
   C. Charlotte
   D. Mr. Collins

   Key: D (Mr. Collins)

2. [mc · recall · DOK 1] Where do Elizabeth and Maria go next?

   A. Bath
   B. London, to meet Jane
   C. Pemberley
   D. Brighton

   Key: B (London, to meet Jane)

3. [fill · recall · DOK 1] Fill in the blank with the vocabulary word that fits: "At length the chaise arrived, the trunks were fastened on, the _____ placed within, and it was pronounced to be ready." Word bank: consternation, parcels, poultry

   Key: parcels

4. [fill · recall · DOK 1] Fill in the blank with the vocabulary word that fits: "Her home and her housekeeping, her parish and her _____, and all their dependent concerns, had not yet lost their charms." Word bank: parcels, poultry, consternation

   Key: poultry

5. [mc · recall · DOK 1] What does he praise?

   A. His home and his connection with Rosings
   B. Elizabeth's wit
   C. Bingley
   D. Darcy's letter

   Key: A (His home and his connection with Rosings)

6. [mc · recall · DOK 1] Which word completes this sentence from Chapter XXXVIII, paragraph 3? “Mr. Collins was _____; and with a more smiling solemnity replied—”

   A. resemblance

   B. gratified

   C. flatter

   D. assurances

   Key: B (gratified)

7. [fill · recall · DOK 1] Complete the quotation from Chapter XXXVIII, paragraph 1: “On Saturday morning Elizabeth and Mr. Collins met for _____ a few minutes before the others appeared”

   Key: breakfast

8. [mc · recall · DOK 1] Which word completes this sentence from Chapter XXXVIII, paragraph 6? “There is in everything a most remarkable _____ of character and ideas between us.”

   A. delivered

   B. expressed

   C. extraordinary

   D. resemblance

   Key: D (resemblance)

9. [mc · recall · DOK 1] What is the tone of Collins's speech?

   A. Tragic

   B. Mysterious

   C. Angry

   D. Comic self-praise

   Key: D (Comic self-praise)

10. [fill · recall · DOK 1] Complete the quotation from Chapter XXXVIII, paragraph 2: “I know not, Miss Elizabeth,’ said he, ‘whether Mrs. Collins has yet _____ her sense of your kindness in coming to us, but I am very certain you will not leave the house without receiving her thanks for it.” Word bank: extraordinary, continually, flatter, expressed

    Key: expressed

11. [mc · recall · DOK 1] In the line “He then handed her in, Maria followed, and the door was on the point of being closed, when he suddenly reminded them, with some consternation, that they had hitherto forgotten to leave any message for the ladies of…”, what does “consternation” most nearly mean?

    A. alarm and dismay

    B. to draw into (a difficult situation)

    C. expressions of agreement

    D. a courteous expression (by word or deed) of esteem or regard

    Key: A (alarm and dismay)

12. [fill · recall · DOK 1] Complete the quotation from Chapter XXXVIII, paragraph 5: “Words were _____ for the elevation of his feelings; and he was obliged to walk about the room, while Elizabeth tried to unite civility and truth in a few short sentences.” Word bank: little, assurances, insufficient, resemblance

    Key: insufficient

13. [short · inference · DOK 2] What does this passage from Chapter XXXVIII, paragraph 2 reveal about the character or situation? “Our plain manner of living, our small rooms, and few domestics, and the little we see of the world, must make Hunsford extremely dull to a young lady like yourself” Answer in two or three sentences with one detail.

    Sample answer: The passage (Chapter XXXVIII, paragraph 2) shows the situation turning on first impressions and prejudice: Charlotte's life is respectable and narrow. The words “extremely” and “domestics” are the proof, because they show how the moment looks to the people in it. They suggest more than the narrator states outright.

14. [short · analysis · DOK 3] Analyze how the word choice in this passage from Chapter XXXVIII, paragraph 4 shapes its tone: “In truth I must acknowledge that, with all the disadvantages of this humble parsonage, I should not think anyone abiding in it an object of compassion, while they are sharers of our intimacy at Rosings.” Pick two words and explain their effect.

    Sample answer: The words “disadvantages” and “acknowledge” (Chapter XXXVIII, paragraph 4) make the tone heavy and deliberate rather than neutral. That weight points the reader to class and social mobility: Charlotte's life is respectable and narrow. The author chooses them so the moment feels significant instead of passing.

15. [short · analysis · DOK 3] Analyze how the word choice in this passage from Chapter XXXVIII, paragraph 6 shapes its tone: “Lady Catherine’s great attentions to Mrs. Collins you have been a daily witness of; and altogether I trust it does not appear that your friend has drawn an unfortunate—but on this point it will be as well to be silent.” Pick two words and explain their effect.

    Sample answer: The words “unfortunate” and “attentions” (Chapter XXXVIII, paragraph 6) make the tone heavy and deliberate rather than neutral. That weight points the reader to pride and self-knowledge: Charlotte's life is respectable and narrow. The author chooses them so the moment feels significant instead of passing.

16. [short · synthesis · DOK 4] Connect this passage from Chapter XXXVIII, paragraph 6 to the story's treatment of women's limited choices: “You may, in fact, carry a very favourable report of us into Hertfordshire, my dear cousin.” Use one other moment from the story as well.

    Sample answer: This passage (Chapter XXXVIII, paragraph 6) develops women's limited choices: Charlotte's life is respectable and narrow. Its words “favourable” and “cousin” carry that idea into this moment. The same concern returns in “She was not sorry, however, to have the recital of them interrupted by the entrance of the lady from whom they sprung.” (Chapter XXXVIII, paragraph 7), so the two passages read as a pattern, not a single moment. Together they show the story treating women's limited choices as central.

17. [mc · recall · DOK 1] Which word completes this sentence from Chapter XXXVIII, paragraph 17? “It was not without an effort _____ that she could wait even for Longbourn, before she told her sister of Mr. Darcy’s proposals.”

    A. assurances

    B. resemblance

    C. continually

    D. meanwhile

    Key: D (meanwhile)

18. [fill · recall · DOK 1] Complete the quotation from Chapter XXXVIII, paragraph 11: “Good _____!’ cried Maria, after a few minutes silence, ‘it seems but a day or two since we first came!—and yet how many things have happened!” Word bank: extraordinary, privately, resemblance, gracious

    Key: gracious

19. [mc · recall · DOK 1] How does Elizabeth view Charlotte?

    A. She dislikes her

    B. She pities her but sees contentment

    C. She ignores her

    D. She envies her

    Key: B (She pities her but sees contentment)

20. [short · inference · DOK 2] What can you infer from this line? “Poor Charlotte!—it was melancholy to leave her to such society” (Chapter XXXVIII, paragraph 7) Answer in two or three sentences with one detail.
    Sample answer: Elizabeth's pity. The evidence is “Poor Charlotte!—it was melancholy to leave her to such society” (Chapter XXXVIII, paragraph 7). This develops marriage and money: Charlotte's life is respectable and narrow.

21. [mc · analysis · DOK 3] Which literary element does this describe in “Chapter XXXVIII”? Collins boasts of his happiness; Elizabeth considers Charlotte's choice with compassion.

    A. Alliteration

    B. Setting

    C. Irony

    D. Tone / mood

    Key: C (Irony)

22. [short · synthesis · DOK 4] Connect this passage from Chapter XXXVIII, paragraph 13 to the story's treatment of marriage and money: “We have dined nine times at Rosings, besides drinking tea there twice!—How much I shall have to tell!” Use one other moment from the story as well.
    Sample answer: This passage (Chapter XXXVIII, paragraph 13) develops marriage and money: Charlotte's life is respectable and narrow. Its words “drinking” and “besides” carry that idea into this moment. The same concern returns in “Their journey was performed without much conversation, or any alarm; and within four hours of their leaving Hunsford,…” (Chapter XXXVIII, paragraph 15), so the two passages read as a pattern, not a single moment. Together they show the story treating marriage and money as central.

23. [fill · recall · DOK 1] Complete the quotation from Chapter XXXVIII, paragraph 7: “Her home and her _____, her parish and her poultry, and all their dependent concerns, had not yet lost their charms”
    Key: housekeeping

24. [mc · inference · DOK 2] Which choice best states a central concern of “Chapter XXXVIII”?

    A. Family in crisis

    B. Reflections on love

    C. Visit to Hunsford

    D. Farewells at Hunsford

    Key: D (Farewells at Hunsford)

25. [mc · analysis · DOK 3] In this chapter, which theme does the following most directly develop? Charlotte's life is respectable and narrow.

    A. Marriage and money

    B. Pride and self-knowledge

    C. First impressions and prejudice

    D. Class and social mobility

Key: A (Marriage and money)

26. [short · synthesis · DOK 4] Close reading: how do the diction and syntax of “Poor Charlotte!—it was melancholy to leave her to such society” (Chapter XXXVIII, paragraph 7) shape its meaning? Consider a second, competing reading.

    Sample answer: Elizabeth's pity. The evidence is “Poor Charlotte!—it was melancholy to leave her to such society” (Chapter XXXVIII, paragraph 7). This develops marriage and money: Charlotte's life is respectable and narrow. The words “melancholy” and “society” carry that meaning: they are the charged choices in the line, and changing either would soften the effect. She thinks "poor Charlotte! it was melancholy to leave her to such society," yet notes that "her home and her housekeeping, her parish and her poultry" had "not yet lost their charms.".

27. [short · synthesis · DOK 4] Synthesis: trace how marriage and money develops from Chapter XXXIII to Chapter XXXVIII. Use one quotation from each.

    Sample answer: Earlier, in Chapter XXXIII, paragraph 12, the text reads “Younger sons cannot marry where they like”, which shows the colonel on money. In Chapter XXXVIII, “On Saturday morning Elizabeth and Mr. Collins met for breakfast a few minutes before the others appeared” (Chapter XXXVIII, paragraph 1) — Opening. Charlotte's life is respectable and narrow.

28. [short · inference · DOK 2 · AP: AP-LIT.CHR] What can you infer from this line? “On Saturday morning Elizabeth and Mr. Collins met for breakfast a few minutes before the others appeared” (Chapter XXXVIII, paragraph 1) Answer in two or three sentences with one detail.

    Sample answer: Opening. The evidence is “On Saturday morning Elizabeth and Mr. Collins met for breakfast a few minutes before the others appeared” (Chapter XXXVIII, paragraph 1). This develops marriage and money: Charlotte's life is respectable and narrow.

29. [fill · recall · DOK 1 · AP: AP-LIT.STR] Complete the quotation from Chapter XXXVIII, paragraph 7: “Poor Charlotte!—it was _____ to leave her to such society”

    Key: melancholy

30. [mc · analysis · DOK 3 · AP: AP-LIT.CHR] Which literary element does this describe in “Chapter XXXVIII”? Collins makes a farewell speech about the ‘humble abode’; Elizabeth leaves Charlotte with mixed feelings.

    A. Personification

    B. Setting

    C. Characterization

    D. Metaphor

    Key: C (Characterization)

31. [short · analysis · DOK 3 · Dual Credit (Indiana College Core): ICC-WC-1.5] Claim: Elizabeth leaves Hunsford with pity for Charlotte but also a sense that Charlotte has found what she wanted. Explain how this evidence supports the claim: “Her home and her housekeeping, her parish and her poultry, and all their dependent concerns, had not yet lost their charms” (Chapter XXXVIII, paragraph 7).

    Sample answer: She thinks "poor Charlotte! it was melancholy to leave her to such society," yet notes that "her home and her housekeeping, her parish and her poultry" had "not yet lost their charms.". The evidence is “Her home and her housekeeping, her parish and her poultry, and all their dependent concerns, had not yet lost their charms” (Chapter XXXVIII, paragraph 7) — Charlotte's compensations. This develops marriage and money: Charlotte's life is respectable and narrow.

32. [short · synthesis · DOK 4 · Program outcome: LeL-C2-LIT-1] Close reading: how do the diction and syntax of “On Saturday morning Elizabeth and Mr. Collins met for breakfast a few minutes before the others appeared”

(Chapter XXXVIII, paragraph 1) shape its meaning? Consider a second, competing reading.

Sample answer: Opening. The evidence is “On Saturday morning Elizabeth and Mr. Collins met for breakfast a few minutes before the others appeared” (Chapter XXXVIII, paragraph 1). This develops marriage and money: Charlotte's life is respectable and narrow. The words “breakfast” and “appeared” carry that meaning: they are the charged choices in the line, and changing either would soften the effect. She thinks "poor Charlotte! it was melancholy to leave her to such society," yet notes that "her home and her housekeeping, her parish and her poultry" had "not yet lost their charms.".

33. [short · analysis · DOK 3 · Program outcome: LeL-GR-LIT-1] Analyze the word choice in “Her home and her housekeeping, her parish and her poultry, and all their dependent concerns, had not yet lost their charms” (Chapter XXXVIII, paragraph 7). Pick two words and explain what they suggest.

Sample answer: Charlotte's compensations. The evidence is “Her home and her housekeeping, her parish and her poultry, and all their dependent concerns, had not yet lost their charms” (Chapter XXXVIII, paragraph 7). This develops marriage and money: Charlotte's life is respectable and narrow. The words “housekeeping” and “dependent” carry that meaning: they are the charged choices in the line, and changing either would soften the effect.

Rigor version	Items (in order)	Mix
Scaffolded support	1, 2, 3, 4, 5, 6, 7, 8, 9, 10, 11, 12, 13, 14, 15, 16	recall 12, inference 1, analysis 2, synthesis 1
HS Freshman	1, 7, 8, 10, 17, 3, 18, 11, 19, 2, 13, 20, 21, 15, 14, 22	recall 10, inference 2, analysis 3, synthesis 1
HS Sophomore	12, 4, 18, 19, 3, 1, 23, 10, 11, 13, 24, 14, 25, 15, 26, 27	recall 9, inference 2, analysis 3, synthesis 2
HS Junior	9, 17, 11, 3, 23, 18, 2, 24, 20, 13, 28, 25, 15, 14, 16, 22	recall 7, inference 4, analysis 3, synthesis 2
HS Senior	23, 1, 12, 9, 2, 5, 6, 29, 13, 25, 14, 30, 15, 22, 26, 16	recall 8, inference 1, analysis 4, synthesis 3
AP	2, 18, 4, 12, 1, 23, 13, 24, 28, 14, 15, 25, 26, 22, 27, 16	recall 6, inference 3, analysis 3, synthesis 4
College Freshman	7, 5, 6, 9, 1, 10, 20, 13, 25, 14, 31, 21, 15, 22, 16, 27	recall 6, inference 2, analysis 5, synthesis 3
College Sophomore	29, 19, 11, 12, 9, 13, 24, 14, 25, 15, 31, 26, 27, 22, 32, 16	recall 5, inference 2, analysis 4, synthesis 5
College Junior	12, 2, 6, 10, 23, 8, 13, 25, 15, 30, 14, 32, 26, 27, 22, 16	recall 6, inference 1, analysis 4, synthesis 5
College Senior	6, 9, 12, 2, 17, 23, 13, 24, 20, 15, 14, 25, 16, 32, 27, 22	recall 6, inference 3, analysis 3, synthesis 4
Graduate / PhD	7, 17, 2, 29, 6, 8, 13, 20, 24, 33, 15, 25, 14, 22, 27, 16	recall 6, inference 3, analysis 4, synthesis 3

Writing prompts (eleven rigor levels)

Scaffolded support (250 words; AP: see unit standards): Supported track (work from the passage your teacher selects). In “Chapter XXXVIII,” how does Austen show farewells at Hunsford? Write a paragraph that states your claim, quotes two details from the passage, and explains how each detail supports your idea. Use the irony you noticed as one piece of evidence.

HS Freshman (350 words; AP: see unit standards): In Chapter XXXVIII, how does Austen develop the idea of farewells at Hunsford? State a clear claim, support it with two or three quotations, and explain how the irony in the chapter helps build that idea.

HS Sophomore (450 words; AP: see unit standards): Analyze how Chapter XXXVIII develops the idea of farewells at Hunsford. Make a precise claim, support it with at least three pieces of textual evidence, and explain how the author's use of irony and characterization shapes that idea. Address one possible counterclaim.

HS Junior (550 words; AP: see unit standards): Analyze how the structure of Chapter XXXVIII (where it begins, turns and ends) and its irony shape the reader's understanding of farewells at Hunsford. Identify one place where the text leaves matters uncertain and explain how that uncertainty adds to its meaning. Distinguish what is directly stated from what is really meant.

HS Senior (600 words; AP: see unit standards): Two readers disagree about what Chapter XXXVIII suggests about farewells at Hunsford. Lay out two plausible interpretations, weigh the evidence for each (including the chapter's irony and characterization), and argue for the stronger one in a sustained, well-organized essay. Distinguish what is directly stated from what is really meant.

AP (650 words; AP: AP-LIT.NAR, AP-LIT.LAN): Write a literary argument in which you analyze how Jane Austen uses irony in Chapter XXXVIII to complicate the reader's understanding of farewells at Hunsford. Develop a defensible thesis, select evidence purposefully, and explain how specific choices of diction and syntax create meaning.

College Freshman (1000 words; AP: see unit standards): Situate Chapter XXXVIII within its historical and literary context and argue how the chapter's treatment of farewells at Hunsford responds to that context. Engage with at least one secondary perspective (a critic, historian or the author's own statements), integrate quotations smoothly, and cite in MLA style.

College Sophomore (1250 words; AP: see unit standards): Read Chapter XXXVIII alongside the conventions of its genre and period. Argue how the chapter's handling of farewells at Hunsford follows or bends those conventions, using the irony as evidence, and test your reading against one published critic. Document two secondary sources in MLA.

College Junior (1500 words; AP: see unit standards): Apply a named critical approach (for example formalist, historicist, feminist, psychoanalytic or ecocritical) to Chapter XXXVIII and its treatment of farewells at Hunsford. State your method, show what it reveals in the chapter's irony and characterization, and identify where the text resists it.

College Senior (2000 words; AP: see unit standards): Develop a research argument that reads Chapter XXXVIII as evidence for a larger claim about farewells at Hunsford in Pride and Prejudice. Connect close reading of the chapter to the whole novel, engage at least four scholarly sources, and state precisely where your reading departs from theirs (Chicago style).

Graduate / PhD (2500 words; AP: see unit standards): Develop an original argument that reads Chapter XXXVIII as a hinge in the novel's larger treatment of farewells at Hunsford. Position your reading within a named critical conversation (for example formalist, historicist, psychoanalytic, feminist or postcolonial approaches), account for the textual history where relevant, and articulate the stakes of your intervention for scholarship on Pride and Prejudice.

SAT-style questions

1. Elizabeth could safely say that it was a great happiness where that was the case, and with equal sincerity could add that she firmly believed and rejoiced in his domestic comforts. She was not sorry, however, to have the recital of them interrupted by the entrance of the lady from whom they sprung. Poor Charlotte!—it was melancholy to leave her to such society!—But she had chosen it with her eyes open; and though evidently regretting that her visitors were to go, she did not seem to ask for compassion. Her home and her housekeeping, her parish and her poultry, and all their dependent concerns, had not yet lost their charms.

   Which choice best states a central concern of "Chapter XXXVIII"?

   A. Parental failure
   B. Keeping secrets
   C. Farewells at Hunsford
   D. The Brighton plan

SAT key: 1. C (Farewells at Hunsford)

Lesson 40: Chapter XXXIX

Focus: the Brighton plan

Objective: Students will analyze how foreshadowing develops in “Chapter XXXIX” by writing a claim-evidence-reasoning paragraph that cites at least 2 quotations from the section, and will score at least 80% on the section quiz.

Standards: AP: see the unit standards

Teacher only · spoilers

Lydia and Kitty meet their sisters at an inn, chattering about officers and announcing that Miss King has gone. Lydia buys an ugly bonnet and dreams of Brighton, where the regiment is going.

Background: Brighton was a fashionable seaside resort with military camps.

Significance: The decision not to warn others has consequences.

Lesson plan and lecture script (90 minutes)

0–8 min · Bell-ringer · You do (8 min)
Students write to the bell-ringer, then pair-share.
Were Elizabeth and Jane right to keep Wickham's secret? Write for five minutes. Starters: I think... because... / This connects to family and reputation because....
Prompt: Were Elizabeth and Jane right to keep Wickham's secret?
Sentence starters: I think… because… · This connects to family and reputation because…
Strong response: A strong response takes a position and anticipates this: Lydia's vulgarity is shown in her own voice.

8–18 min · Vocabulary with etymology notes · I do (10 min)
Five key words in context, with verified word histories.
Today's words: workbags — bags for holding sewing or needlework; depreciate — to belittle; to speak of as unimportant; bandbox — a light round box for hats; encamped — live in or as if in a tent; equivocal — open to two or more interpretations; or of uncertain nature or significance; or (often) intended to mislead. “bandbox”: Origin: an English formation from band + box.
Words: workbags: bags for holding sewing or needlework · depreciate: to belittle; to speak of as unimportant · bandbox: a light round box for hats · encamped: live in or as if in a tent · equivocal: open to two or more interpretations; or of uncertain nature or significance; or (often) intended to mislead

18–28 min · Background and context · I do (10 min)
Mini-lecture (read or adapt the script).
Brighton was a fashionable seaside resort with military camps. The decision not to warn others has consequences. Characterization: Lydia and Kitty meet Elizabeth and Jane at the inn; Lydia spends their money, gossips crudely, and announces the regiment's move to Brighton. Characterization: Lydia reports Wickham's Miss King has gone away: "she is safe." Watch for marriage and money: Incomes, entails and fortunes are stated precisely; marriage is always also an economic question. In this chapter: “safe!” added Elizabeth; “safe from a connection imprudent as to fortune” (Chapter XXXIX, paragraph 11).

28–40 min · I do: modeled close reading · I do (12 min)
Model the close reading of the anchor quotation using the written think-aloud below.
First, meaning. I read “It was the second week in May, in which the three young ladies set out together from Gracechurch-street” slowly and put it in my own words: Austen notes that it was the second week in May when the three young ladies set out together from Gracechurch Street. Next, craft. I notice the plain, factual opening, which marks a new stage of the story and Elizabeth's return home. The strongest word is “together”: it reminds us that Elizabeth, Jane and Maria are travelling as a group. Then, effect. Why does Austen give the date and starting place of the journey? My answer: The journey home brings Elizabeth back to her family after Darcy's letter; the calm start contrasts with Lydia's noisy news that awaits them at the inn.

> It was the second week in May, in which the three young ladies set out together from Gracechurch-street (Chapter XXXIX, paragraph 1)

Think-aloud: First, meaning. I read “It was the second week in May, in which the three young ladies set out together from Gracechurch-street” slowly and put it in my own words: Austen notes that it was the second week in May when the three young ladies set out together from Gracechurch Street. Next, craft. I notice the plain, factual opening, which marks a new stage of the story and Elizabeth's return home. The strongest word is “together”: it reminds us that Elizabeth, Jane and Maria are travelling as a group. Then, effect. Why does Austen give the date and starting place of the journey? My answer: The journey home brings Elizabeth back to her family after Darcy's letter; the calm start contrasts with Lydia's noisy news that awaits them at the inn.

40–55 min · We do: guided annotation · We do (15 min)
Guided analysis of a second quotation; expected answers given.
Ask: What words in this line stand out, and what do they suggest? Expected: Lydia's voice. Look at the craft: Lydia reports Wickham's Miss King has gone away: "she is safe." Ask: How does this line connect to family and reputation? Expected: Lydia's vulgarity is shown in her own voice. (Lydia's voice.)

> Is not this nice? is not this an agreeable surprise (Chapter XXXIX, paragraph 2)

Ask: What words in this line stand out, and what do they suggest?
Expected answer: Lydia's voice. Look at the craft: Lydia reports Wickham's Miss King has gone away: "she is safe."
Ask: How does this line connect to family and reputation?
Expected answer: Lydia's vulgarity is shown in her own voice. (Lydia's voice.)

55–70 min · You do: independent annotation · You do (15 min)
Independent annotation and a claim-evidence-reasoning paragraph (exemplar given).
Annotate the chapter for characterization, characterization (three marks with a margin note each), then write one claim-evidence-reasoning paragraph: what does this chapter suggest about the Brighton plan? Then start your writing prompt at your assigned level (HS Sophomore: Analyze how Chapter XXXIX develops the idea of the Brighton plan. Make a precise claim, support it with at least three pieces of textual evidence, and explain how the author's use of foreshadowing and characterization shapes that idea. Address one possible counterclaim.) Exemplar: Lydia's chatter shows the giddiness that Darcy and now Elizabeth fear. When the text says “I do not think it is very pretty; but I thought I might as well buy it as not” (Chapter XXXIX, paragraph 3), it shows this directly. She buys a bonnet she does "not think it is very pretty" just because she might "as well buy it as not," spending carelessly and talking without thought.
Task: Annotate the chapter for characterization, characterization (three marks with a margin note each), then write one claim-evidence-reasoning paragraph: what does this chapter suggest about the Brighton plan? Then start your writing prompt at your assigned level (HS Sophomore: Analyze how Chapter XXXIX develops the idea of the Brighton plan. Make a precise claim, support it with at least three pieces of textual evidence, and explain how the author's use of foreshadowing and characterization shapes that idea. Address one possible counterclaim.)
Exemplar: Lydia's chatter shows the giddiness that Darcy and now Elizabeth fear. When the text says “I do not think it is very pretty; but I thought I might as well buy it as not” (Chapter XXXIX, paragraph 3), it shows this directly. She buys a bonnet she does "not think it is very pretty" just because she might "as well buy it as not," spending carelessly and talking without thought.

70–80 min · Discussion · We do (10 min)
Structured discussion from the 30 tiered questions, with facilitation notes.
Anchor question: Were Elizabeth and Jane right to keep Wickham's secret? Ask: who is responsible for Lydia's behaviour?
Anchor question: Were Elizabeth and Jane right to keep Wickham's secret?
Facilitation: Ask: who is responsible for Lydia's behaviour?

80–87 min · Exit ticket / chapter quiz · You do (7 min)
Chapter quiz in the app and an exit ticket (answer given).
Chapter quiz in the app, then: In one sentence, what does this chapter suggest about the Brighton plan? Support it with one short quotation. Model answer: Lydia's chatter shows the giddiness that Darcy and now Elizabeth fear. (“I do not think it is very pretty; but I thought I might as well buy it as not”, Chapter XXXIX, paragraph 3). Accept any defensible claim backed by a quotation from the chapter; the answer key for the quiz is in the Quiz section.
Exit ticket: In one sentence, what does this chapter suggest about the Brighton plan? Support it with one short quotation.
Answer: Model answer: Lydia's chatter shows the giddiness that Darcy and now Elizabeth fear. (“I do not think it is very pretty; but I thought I might as well buy it as not”, Chapter XXXIX, paragraph 3). Accept any defensible claim backed by a quotation from the chapter; the answer key for the quiz is in the Quiz section.

> 87–90 min · Closure · I do (3 min)
> Summarize the lesson and preview the next reading.
> Today we saw how characterization shapes the Brighton plan. Key takeaway: Lydia's vulgarity is shown in her own voice.

Total: 90 minutes.

Teacher analysis (spoilers)

Literary elements

- Characterization: Lydia and Kitty meet Elizabeth and Jane at the inn; Lydia spends their money, gossips crudely, and announces the regiment's move to Brighton.
- Characterization: Lydia reports Wickham's Miss King has gone away: "she is safe."

Themes and how they develop

- family and reputation: Lydia's vulgarity is shown in her own voice.

Symbols and motifs

- marriage and money: Incomes, entails and fortunes are stated precisely; marriage is always also an economic question. In this chapter: “safe!” added Elizabeth; “safe from a connection imprudent as to fortune” (Chapter XXXIX, paragraph 11).
- dancing and social performance: Balls are where judgments are formed in public. In this chapter: “day there, and Mrs. Forster promised to have a little dance in the evening; (by the by, Mrs. Forster and me are” (Chapter XXXIX, paragraph 17).

Key quotations (checked against the reading text)

- “It was the second week in May, in which the three young ladies set out together from Gracechurch-street” (Chapter XXXIX, paragraph 1) Opening.
- “Is not this nice? is not this an agreeable surprise” (Chapter XXXIX, paragraph 2) Lydia's voice.
- “I do not think it is very pretty; but I thought I might as well buy it as not” (Chapter XXXIX, paragraph 3) Lydia's careless spending.

Model claim-evidence-reasoning

Claim: Lydia's chatter shows the giddiness that Darcy and now Elizabeth fear.
Evidence: “I do not think it is very pretty; but I thought I might as well buy it as not” (Chapter XXXIX, paragraph 3)
Reasoning: She buys a bonnet she does "not think it is very pretty" just because she might "as well buy it as not," spending carelessly and talking without thought.

Vocabulary with etymology notes

Word	Definition (in this sentence)	In context	Word history

workbags (noun)	bags for holding sewing or needlework	As soon as all had ate, and the elder ones paid, the carriage was ordered; and after some contrivance, the whole party, with all their boxes, workbags, and parcels, and the unwelcome addition of Kitty's and Lydia's purchases, were seated in it.
depreciate (verb)	to belittle; to speak of as unimportant	To this, Mary very gravely replied, "Far be it from me, my dear sister, to depreciate such pleasures.
bandbox (noun)	a light round box for hats	"I am glad I bought my bonnet, if it is only for the fun of having another bandbox!	"bandbox": Origin: an English formation from band + box. (Liber et Libri origin note, https://en.wiktionary.org/wiki/bandbox#Etymology)
encamped (verb)	live in or as if in a tent	"They are going to be encamped near Brighton; and I do so want papa to take us all there for the summer!
equivocal (adjective)	open to two or more interpretations; or of uncertain nature or significance; or (often) intended to mislead	Elizabeth saw directly that her father had not the smallest intention of yielding; but his answers were at the same time so vague and equivocal, that her mother, though often disheartened, had never yet despaired of succeeding at last.
despaired (verb)	abandon hope; give up hope; lose heart	Elizabeth saw directly that her father had not the smallest intention of yielding; but his answers were at the same time so vague and equivocal, that her mother, though often disheartened, had never yet despaired of succeeding at last.
congenial (adjective)	pleasant and well suited	They would doubtless be congenial with the generality of female minds.
purchases (noun)	the acquisition of something for payment	Then showing her purchases: "Look here, I have bought this bonnet.
sentinel (noun)	a soldier standing guard	These two girls had been above an hour in the place, happily employed in visiting an opposite milliner, watching the sentinel on guard, and dressing a salad and cucumber.
dreaded (verb)	be afraid or scared of; be frightened of

		She dreaded seeing Wickham again, and was resolved to avoid it as long as possible.

Discussion questions

1. Were Elizabeth and Jane right to keep Wickham's secret?
2. Where does foreshadowing appear in this chapter, and what effect does it have? Point to one passage.
3. How does this chapter connect to the book's larger concern with class and social mobility?

Classroom discussion questions (30, tiered)

Wait time after every question (3 s for DOK 1, 5 s for DOK 2, 8 to 10 s for DOK 3 and 4); think-pair-share on DOK 3 and 4; answer each response with a follow-up probe; close with student-generated questions. Focus sets by rigor level: Scaffolded support: 1, 2, 3, 4, 5, 6, 11, 12, 13, 14, 21, 22; HS Freshman: 1, 2, 3, 4, 5, 12, 13, 14, 15, 22, 23, 24; HS Sophomore: 1, 2, 3, 4, 13, 14, 15, 16, 17, 23, 24, 25; HS Junior: 1, 2, 3, 14, 15, 16, 17, 18, 24, 25, 26, 27; HS Senior: 1, 2, 3, 15, 16, 17, 18, 25, 26, 27, 28, 29; AP: 1, 2, 16, 17, 18, 19, 20, 26, 27, 28, 29, 30; College Freshman: 1, 2, 17, 18, 19, 20, 21, 22, 27, 28, 29, 30; College Sophomore: 1, 2, 11, 18, 19, 20, 21, 22, 23, 28, 29, 30; College Junior: 1, 11, 12, 19, 20, 21, 22, 23, 24, 25, 29, 30; College Senior: 1, 11, 12, 13, 20, 21, 22, 23, 24, 25, 26, 30; Graduate / PhD: 1, 11, 12, 13, 21, 22, 23, 24, 25, 26, 27, 28

Literal / recall

1. Who chatter about officers? [DOK 1 · coldCallWithSupport · wait 3 s · AP: unit standards] Look for: Lydia and Kitty
2. What happened to Miss King? [DOK 1 · turnAndTalk · wait 3 s · AP: unit standards] Look for: She went away
3. What does Lydia buy? [DOK 1 · coldCallWithSupport · wait 3 s · AP: unit standards] Look for: An ugly bonnet
4. Where do the sisters meet? [DOK 1 · turnAndTalk · wait 3 s · AP: unit standards] Look for: At an inn
5. Where does the regiment plan to go? [DOK 1 · coldCallWithSupport · wait 3 s · AP: unit standards] Look for: Brighton
6. Retell the three most important events of "Chapter XXXIX" in order, in one sentence each. [DOK 1 · turnAndTalk · wait 3 s · AP: unit standards] Look for: Lydia and Kitty meet their sisters at an inn, chattering about officers and announcing that Miss King has gone. Lydia buys an ugly bonnet and dreams of Brighton, where the regiment is going.
7. Which characters appear or are mentioned in "Chapter XXXIX"? Name two and one thing each says or does. [DOK 1 · coldCallWithSupport · wait 3 s · AP: unit standards] Look for: Names and actions taken from the chapter; check against the teacher summary.
8. Where and when does "Chapter XXXIX" take place? Point to the line that tells you. [DOK 1 · turnAndTalk · wait 3 s · AP: unit standards] Look for: A place/time detail quoted from the chapter.
9. Reread: "As soon as all had ate, and the elder ones paid, the carriage was ordered; and after some contrivance, the whole party, with all their boxes, workbags, and parcels, and the unwelcome addition of Kitty's and Lydia's…" What does "workbags" mean here, and what is literally happening in this line? [DOK 1 · turnAndTalk · wait 3 s · AP: unit standards] Look for: workbags: bags for holding sewing or needlework.
10. Reread: "To this, Mary very gravely replied, "Far be it from me, my dear sister, to depreciate such pleasures." What does "depreciate" mean here, and what is literally happening in this line? [DOK 1 · turnAndTalk · wait 3 s · AP: unit standards] Look for: depreciate: to belittle; to speak of as unimportant.

Inferential / analytical

1. What does “Chapter XXXIX” suggest about the Brighton plan? State the inference and the line that supports it. [DOK 2 · thinkPairShare · wait 5 s · AP-LIT.LAN] Look for: The decision not to warn others has consequences.
2. Find one example of foreshadowing in this chapter. What does it reveal that a plain statement would not? [DOK 2 · followUp · wait 5 s · AP-LIT.STR] Look for: Look for hints, warnings or images that point to later events.
3. How does the characterization in this chapter shape what we understand about the Brighton plan? [DOK 3 · thinkPairShare · wait 8 s · AP-LIT.CHR] Look for: Look for what characters say, do and think, and how others react to them.
   Answer guidance: A defensible line of argument: Lydia's chatter shows the giddiness that Darcy and now Elizabeth fear. Useful evidence: “It was the second week in May, in which the three young ladies set out together from Gracechurch-street” (Chapter XXXIX, paragraph 1): Opening. On characterization: Lydia reports Wickham's Miss King has gone away: "she is safe." Credit any position that is supported by quotation and reasoning; push one-sided answers to address the strongest counterpoint.
4. In the passage that begins “It was the second week in May, in which the three young ladies set out together from Gracechurch-street, for the town of ———— in Hertfordshire; and, as they drew near the appointed…”, why might Austen have chosen these particular words? Pick two and explain their connotations. [DOK 2 · followUp · wait 5 s · AP-LIT.FIG] Look for: Diction analysis of two words in the anchor passage.
5. What causes the main turn in “Chapter XXXIX”, and what effect is it likely to have on what follows? [DOK 2 · followUp · wait 5 s · AP-LIT.STR] Look for: Lydia and Kitty meet their sisters at an inn, chattering about officers and announcing that Miss King has gone. Lydia buys an ugly bonnet and dreams of Brighton, where the regiment is going.
6. How does “Chapter XXXIX” build on “Chapter XXXVIII”? Name one link of cause and effect. [DOK 3 · thinkPairShare · wait 8 s · AP-LIT.STR] Look for: A causal or structural link between this and the previous chapter.
   Answer guidance: A defensible line of argument: Lydia's chatter shows the giddiness that Darcy and now Elizabeth fear. Useful evidence: “Is not this nice? is not this an agreeable surprise” (Chapter XXXIX, paragraph 2): Lydia's voice. Theme link: Lydia's vulgarity is shown in her own voice. Credit any position that is supported by quotation and reasoning; push one-sided answers to address the strongest counterpoint.
7. What can we infer about a character's motives from what they say and do here, as opposed to what they claim? [DOK 3 · followUp · wait 8 s · AP-LIT.CHR] Look for: An inference about motive supported by a quoted line.
   Answer guidance: A defensible line of argument: Lydia's chatter shows the giddiness that Darcy and now Elizabeth fear. Useful evidence: “I do not think it is very pretty; but I thought I might as well buy it as not” (Chapter XXXIX, paragraph 3): Lydia's careless spending. On characterization: Lydia reports Wickham's Miss King has gone away: "she is safe." Credit any position that is supported by quotation and reasoning; push one-sided answers to address the strongest counterpoint.
8. The bell-ringer asked: “Were Elizabeth and Jane right to keep Wickham's secret?” Now that we have read closely, how would you revise your first answer, and which line changed your mind? [DOK 2 · thinkPairShare · wait 5 s · AP-LIT.LAN] Look for: A revised answer anchored in the text.
9. Where does plot appear, and how does it connect this chapter to the larger concern with class and social mobility? [DOK 3 · followUp · wait 8 s · AP-LIT.STR] Look for: Look for key events and the causes linking them.
   Answer guidance: A defensible line of argument: Lydia's chatter shows the giddiness that Darcy and now Elizabeth fear. Useful evidence: “It was the second week in May, in which the three young ladies set out together from Gracechurch-street” (Chapter XXXIX, paragraph 1): Opening. Theme link: Lydia's vulgarity is shown in her own voice. Credit any position that is supported by quotation and reasoning; push one-sided answers to address the strongest counterpoint.

10. Background: Brighton was a fashionable seaside resort with military camps. How does knowing this change the way you read one moment in the chapter? [DOK 3 · thinkPairShare · wait 8 s · AP-LIT.SET] Look for: A specific moment reread in light of the context.
    Answer guidance: A defensible line of argument: Lydia's chatter shows the giddiness that Darcy and now Elizabeth fear. Useful evidence: “Is not this nice? is not this an agreeable surprise” (Chapter XXXIX, paragraph 2): Lydia's voice. Theme link: Lydia's vulgarity is shown in her own voice. Credit any position that is supported by quotation and reasoning; push one-sided answers to address the strongest counterpoint.

Evaluative / synthesis / creative

1. A critic might argue: “The decision not to warn others has consequences.” How far do you agree? Take a stand and defend it with two lines from the chapter. [DOK 3 · fourCorners · wait 8 s · AP-LIT.LAN] Look for: A defended position with evidence and one counterpoint.
   Answer guidance: A defensible line of argument: Lydia's chatter shows the giddiness that Darcy and now Elizabeth fear. Useful evidence: “I do not think it is very pretty; but I thought I might as well buy it as not” (Chapter XXXIX, paragraph 3): Lydia's careless spending. Theme link: Lydia's vulgarity is shown in her own voice. Credit any position that is supported by quotation and reasoning; push one-sided answers to address the strongest counterpoint.
2. Which character in this chapter acts most wisely, and which least? Judge them by a standard you name. [DOK 3 · thinkPairShare · wait 8 s · AP-LIT.CHR, AP-LIT.LAN] Look for: An evaluation using an explicit criterion and evidence.
   Answer guidance: A defensible line of argument: Lydia's chatter shows the giddiness that Darcy and now Elizabeth fear. Useful evidence: “It was the second week in May, in which the three young ladies set out together from Gracechurch-street” (Chapter XXXIX, paragraph 1): Opening. On characterization: Lydia reports Wickham's Miss King has gone away: "she is safe." Credit any position that is supported by quotation and reasoning; push one-sided answers to address the strongest counterpoint.
3. Rewrite one moment of “Chapter XXXIX” from the point of view of a different character. What does the new angle reveal or hide about the Brighton plan? [DOK 4 · thinkPairShare · wait 8 s · AP-LIT.LAN, AP-LIT.NAR] Look for: A creative product with a rationale tied to the text.
   Answer guidance: A defensible line of argument: Lydia's chatter shows the giddiness that Darcy and now Elizabeth fear. Useful evidence: “Is not this nice? is not this an agreeable surprise” (Chapter XXXIX, paragraph 2): Lydia's voice. Theme link: Lydia's vulgarity is shown in her own voice. Credit any position that is supported by quotation and reasoning; push one-sided answers to address the strongest counterpoint.
4. Write three questions of your own about “Chapter XXXIX”: one recall, one “why/how”, and one “should/what if”. Trade with a partner and answer theirs. [DOK 3 · studentGenerated · wait 8 s · AP-LIT.LAN] Look for: Student-generated questions at three levels.
   Answer guidance: A defensible line of argument: Lydia's chatter shows the giddiness that Darcy and now Elizabeth fear. Useful evidence: “I do not think it is very pretty; but I thought I might as well buy it as not” (Chapter XXXIX, paragraph 3): Lydia's careless spending. Theme link: Lydia's vulgarity is shown in her own voice. Credit any position that is supported by quotation and reasoning; push one-sided answers to address the strongest counterpoint.

5. Connect this chapter to women's limited choices: is the link strong or weak so far? What would Austen need to show next to strengthen it? [DOK 4 · socraticCircle · wait 8 s · AP-LIT.LAN] Look for: A judgment of thematic development across the work.

   Answer guidance: A defensible line of argument: Lydia's chatter shows the giddiness that Darcy and now Elizabeth fear. Useful evidence: “It was the second week in May, in which the three young ladies set out together from Gracechurch-street” (Chapter XXXIX, paragraph 1): Opening. Theme link: Lydia's vulgarity is shown in her own voice. Credit any position that is supported by quotation and reasoning; push one-sided answers to address the strongest counterpoint.

6. Is the foreshadowing in this chapter effective, or does it feel heavy-handed? Evaluate it as a reader would in a review. [DOK 3 · fourCorners · wait 8 s · AP-LIT.LAN, AP-LIT.STR] Look for: An evaluative judgment with criteria and evidence.

   Answer guidance: A defensible line of argument: Lydia's chatter shows the giddiness that Darcy and now Elizabeth fear. Useful evidence: “Is not this nice? is not this an agreeable surprise” (Chapter XXXIX, paragraph 2): Lydia's voice. Theme link: Lydia's vulgarity is shown in her own voice. Credit any position that is supported by quotation and reasoning; push one-sided answers to address the strongest counterpoint.

7. Compare how “Chapter XXXIX” treats the Brighton plan with how another text, film or event you know treats a similar idea. What does Pride and Prejudice see that the other misses? [DOK 4 · socraticCircle · wait 8 s · AP-LIT.LAN] Look for: A cross-text synthesis.

   Answer guidance: A defensible line of argument: Lydia's chatter shows the giddiness that Darcy and now Elizabeth fear. Useful evidence: “I do not think it is very pretty; but I thought I might as well buy it as not” (Chapter XXXIX, paragraph 3): Lydia's careless spending. Theme link: Lydia's vulgarity is shown in her own voice. Credit any position that is supported by quotation and reasoning; push one-sided answers to address the strongest counterpoint.

8. Predict what “Chapter XL” will bring, using two clues from this chapter. After reading, evaluate your prediction. [DOK 3 · thinkPairShare · wait 8 s · AP-LIT.LAN, AP-LIT.STR] Look for: A prediction or judgment justified with textual clues.

   Answer guidance: A defensible line of argument: Lydia's chatter shows the giddiness that Darcy and now Elizabeth fear. Useful evidence: “It was the second week in May, in which the three young ladies set out together from Gracechurch-street” (Chapter XXXIX, paragraph 1): Opening. Theme link: Lydia's vulgarity is shown in her own voice. Credit any position that is supported by quotation and reasoning; push one-sided answers to address the strongest counterpoint.

9. Design a one-paragraph modern adaptation of this chapter (setting, characters, conflict). What must stay the same for it to still be about the Brighton plan? [DOK 4 · thinkPairShare · wait 8 s · AP-LIT.LAN] Look for: A creative transfer that keeps the core idea.

   Answer guidance: A defensible line of argument: Lydia's chatter shows the giddiness that Darcy and now Elizabeth fear. Useful evidence: “Is not this nice? is not this an agreeable surprise” (Chapter XXXIX, paragraph 2): Lydia's voice. Theme link: Lydia's vulgarity is shown in her own voice. Credit any position that is supported by quotation and reasoning; push one-sided answers to address the strongest counterpoint.

10. What question would you most like to ask Jane Austen about this chapter, and what answer do you think the text itself gives? [DOK 4 · studentGenerated · wait 8 s · AP-LIT.LAN] Look for: A student-generated question answered from evidence.
    Answer guidance: A defensible line of argument: Lydia's chatter shows the giddiness that Darcy and now Elizabeth fear. Useful evidence: “I do not think it is very pretty; but I thought I might as well buy it as not” (Chapter XXXIX, paragraph 3): Lydia's careless spending. Theme link: Lydia's vulgarity is shown in her own voice. Credit any position that is supported by quotation and reasoning; push one-sided answers to address the strongest counterpoint.

Annotation focus

- Foreshadowing: look for hints, warnings or images that point to later events (anchor passage in the We do segment)
- Also notice Characterization: what characters say, do and think, and how others react to them
- Also notice Plot: key events and the causes linking them

Chapter quiz: item bank (all eleven rigor versions)

1. [fill · recall · DOK 1] Complete the quotation from Chapter XXXIX, paragraph 3: “I do not think it is very pretty; but I _____ I might as well buy it as not”
   Key: thought
2. [mc · recall · DOK 1] Which word completes this sentence from Chapter XXXIX, paragraph 7? “Brighton, and a whole campful of _____, to us, who have been overset already by one poor regiment of militia, and the monthly balls of Meryton.”
   A. looked
   B. miserable
   C. pieces
   D. soldiers

   Key: D (soldiers)
3. [mc · recall · DOK 1] In the line “I am glad I bought my bonnet, if it is only for the fun of having another bandbox!”, what does “bandbox” most nearly mean?
   A. a light round box for hats
   B. passing reference or indirect mention
   C. look down on with disdain
   D. an event that happens

   Key: A (a light round box for hats)
4. [mc · recall · DOK 1] In the line “They are going to be encamped near Brighton; and I do so want papa to take us all there for the summer!”, what does “encamped” most nearly mean?
   A. live in or as if in a tent
   B. defeating; spoiling (a plan)
   C. stirred up
   D. not pleased

   Key: A (live in or as if in a tent)

5. [mc · recall · DOK 1] What does Lydia buy?

   A. An ugly bonnet

   B. A book

   C. A dress for Jane

   D. A horse

   Key: A (An ugly bonnet)

6. [fill · recall · DOK 1] Fill in the blank with the vocabulary word that fits: "Elizabeth saw directly that her father had not the smallest intention of yielding; but his answers were at the same time so vague and equivocal, that her mother, though often disheartened, had never yet _____ of succeeding at last." Word bank: bandbox, depreciate, despaired, workbags

   Key: despaired

7. [fill · recall · DOK 1] Fill in the blank with the vocabulary word that fits: "Then showing her _____: 'Look here, I have bought this bonnet." Word bank: bandbox, purchases, depreciate, workbags

   Key: purchases

8. [mc · recall · DOK 1] In the line "To this, Mary very gravely replied, 'Far be it from me, my dear sister, to depreciate such pleasures.", what does "depreciate" most nearly mean?

   A. a period of fourteen consecutive days

   B. to belittle; to speak of as unimportant

   C. bad handling or management

   D. passing reference or indirect mention

   Key: B (to belittle; to speak of as unimportant)

9. [mc · recall · DOK 1] Where does the regiment plan to go?

   A. Scotland

   B. Kent

   C. Brighton

   D. London

   Key: C (Brighton)

10. [fill · recall · DOK 1] Complete the quotation from Chapter XXXIX, paragraph 2: "Is not this nice? is not this an _____ surprise"

    Key: agreeable

11. [short · inference · DOK 2] What can you infer from this line? "It was the second week in May, in which the three young ladies set out together from Gracechurch-street" (Chapter XXXIX, paragraph 1) Answer in two or three sentences with one detail.

    Sample answer: Opening. The evidence is "It was the second week in May, in which the three young ladies set out together from Gracechurch-street" (Chapter XXXIX, paragraph 1). This develops family and reputation: Lydia's vulgarity is shown in her own voice.

12. [short · inference · DOK 2] What does this passage from Chapter XXXIX, paragraph 17 reveal about the character or situation? "Lord! how I should like to be married before any of you; and then I would chaperon you about to all the balls." Answer in two or three sentences with one detail.

    Sample answer: The passage (Chapter XXXIX, paragraph 17) shows the situation turning on first impressions and prejudice: Lydia's vulgarity is shown in her own voice. The words “chaperon” and “married” are the proof, because they show how the moment looks to the people in it. They suggest more than the narrator states outright.

13. [short · inference · DOK 2] What does this passage from Chapter XXXIX, paragraph 4 reveal about the character or situation? “Besides, it will not much signify what one wears this summer, after the ——shire have left Meryton, and they are going in a fortnight.” Answer in two or three sentences with one detail.
    Sample answer: The passage (Chapter XXXIX, paragraph 4) shows the situation turning on first impressions and prejudice: Lydia's vulgarity is shown in her own voice. The words “fortnight” and “signify” are the proof, because they show how the moment looks to the people in it. They suggest more than the narrator states outright.

14. [short · analysis · DOK 3] Analyze how the word choice in this passage from Chapter XXXIX, paragraph 22 shapes its tone: “I thought we never should have got into the coach.” Pick two words and explain their effect.
    Sample answer: The words “thought” and “should” (Chapter XXXIX, paragraph 22) make the tone heavy and deliberate rather than neutral. That weight points the reader to pride and self-knowledge: Lydia's vulgarity is shown in her own voice. The author chooses them so the moment feels significant instead of passing.

15. [short · analysis · DOK 3] Analyze how the word choice in this passage from Chapter XXXIX, paragraph 18 shapes its tone: “With such kind of histories of their parties and good jokes, did Lydia, assisted by Kitty’s hints and additions, endeavour to amuse her companions all the way to Longbourn.” Pick two words and explain their effect.
    Sample answer: The words “companions” and “endeavour” (Chapter XXXIX, paragraph 18) make the tone heavy and deliberate rather than neutral. That weight points the reader to class and social mobility: Lydia's vulgarity is shown in her own voice. The author chooses them so the moment feels significant instead of passing.

16. [short · synthesis · DOK 4] Connect this passage from Chapter XXXIX, paragraph 17 to the story's treatment of marriage and money: “Jane will be quite an old maid soon, I declare.” Use one other moment from the story as well.
    Sample answer: This passage (Chapter XXXIX, paragraph 17) develops marriage and money: Lydia's vulgarity is shown in her own voice. Its words “declare” carry that idea into this moment. The same concern returns in “Kitty and me were to spend the day there, and Mrs. Forster promised to have a little dance in the evening” (Chapter XXXIX, paragraph 17), so the two passages read as a pattern, not a single moment. Together they show the story treating marriage and money as central.

17. [mc · recall · DOK 1] In the line “As soon as all had ate, and the elder ones paid, the carriage was ordered; and after some contrivance, the whole party, with all their boxes, workbags, and parcels, and the unwelcome addition of Kitty’s and Lydia’s…”, what does “workbags” most nearly mean?
    A. free from deception or illusion
    B. bags for holding sewing or needlework
    C. an open recess in a wall at the base of a chimney where a fire can be built
    D. drawn out with difficulty

    Key: B (bags for holding sewing or needlework)

18. [fill · recall · DOK 1] Complete the quotation from Chapter XXXIX, paragraph 3: “I shall pull it to _____ as soon as I get home, and see if I can make it up any better.” Word bank: miserable, delicious, pieces, husband
    Key: pieces

19. [mc · recall · DOK 1] Where do the sisters meet?
    A. At church
    B. At Rosings

C. At an inn

D. At Pemberley

Key: C (At an inn)

20. [mc · recall · DOK 1] What happened to Miss King?

A. She went away

B. She died

C. She married Wickham

D. She came to Longbourn

Key: A (She went away)

21. [short · analysis · DOK 3] Analyze how the word choice in this passage from Chapter XXXIX, paragraph 10 shapes its tone: “She is gone down to her uncle at Liverpool; gone to stay.” Pick two words and explain their effect.

Sample answer: The words its wording (Chapter XXXIX, paragraph 10) make the tone heavy and deliberate rather than neutral. That weight points the reader to pride and self-knowledge: Lydia's vulgarity is shown in her own voice. The author chooses them so the moment feels significant instead of passing.

22. [mc · analysis · DOK 3] Which literary element does this describe in “Chapter XXXIX”? Lydia and Kitty meet Elizabeth and Jane at the inn; Lydia spends their money, gossips crudely, and announces the regiment's move to Brighton.

A. Hyperbole

B. Symbolism

C. Imagery

D. Characterization

Key: D (Characterization)

23. [short · synthesis · DOK 4] Evaluate this claim about the chapter: “Lydia's chatter shows the giddiness that Darcy and now Elizabeth fear.” Is it fully persuasive? Argue with evidence, including a passage that complicates it.

Sample answer: The claim is persuasive in part. “I do not think it is very pretty; but I thought I might as well buy it as not” (Chapter XXXIX, paragraph 3) supports it: She buys a bonnet she does "not think it is very pretty" just because she might "as well buy it as not," spending carelessly and talking without thought. But “Is not this nice? is not this an agreeable surprise” (Chapter XXXIX, paragraph 2) complicates it: the line (Lydia's voice) shows the same issue from another side, and its “not” marks a limit or reversal the claim passes over. The claim is therefore a strong reading, not a complete one, and a careful answer says where it stops applying.

24. [fill · recall · DOK 1] Complete the quotation from Chapter XXXIX, paragraph 17: “She says Lizzy had _____ have taken Mr. Collins; but I do not think there would have been any fun in it.” Word bank: marrying, thought, better, comfortable

Key: better

25. [fill · recall · DOK 1] Fill in the blank with the vocabulary word that fits: “Elizabeth saw directly that her father had not the smallest intention of yielding; but his answers were at the same time so vague and _____, that her mother, though often disheartened, had never yet despaired of succeeding at last.” Word bank: workbags, bandbox, depreciate, equivocal

Key: equivocal

26. [short · inference · DOK 2] What can you infer from this line? “Is not this nice? is not this an agreeable surprise” (Chapter XXXIX, paragraph 2) Answer in two or three sentences with one detail.
    Sample answer: Lydia's voice. The evidence is “Is not this nice? is not this an agreeable surprise” (Chapter XXXIX, paragraph 2). This develops family and reputation: Lydia's vulgarity is shown in her own voice.
27. [short · analysis · DOK 3] Analyze how the word choice in this passage from Chapter XXXIX, paragraph 8 shapes its tone: “It is excellent news, capital news, and about a certain person that we all like.” Pick two words and explain their effect.
    Sample answer: The words “excellent” and “capital” (Chapter XXXIX, paragraph 8) make the tone heavy and deliberate rather than neutral. That weight points the reader to class and social mobility: Lydia's vulgarity is shown in her own voice. The author chooses them so the moment feels significant instead of passing.
28. [short · synthesis · DOK 4] Connect this passage from Chapter XXXIX, paragraph 14 to the story's treatment of women's limited choices: “I will answer for it he never cared three straws about her.” Use one other moment from the story as well.
    Sample answer: This passage (Chapter XXXIX, paragraph 14) develops women's limited choices: Lydia's vulgarity is shown in her own voice. Its words “answer” and “straws” carry that idea into this moment. The same concern returns in “Elizabeth was shocked to think that, however incapable of such coarseness of expression herself, the coarseness of the…” (Chapter XXXIX, paragraph 15), so the two passages read as a pattern, not a single moment. Together they show the story treating women's limited choices as central.
29. [short · synthesis · DOK 4] Synthesis: trace how family and reputation develops from Chapter XVIII to Chapter XXXIX. Use one quotation from each.
    Sample answer: Earlier, in Chapter XVIII, paragraph 71, the text reads “had her family made an agreement to expose themselves as much as they could during the evening” — Elizabeth's mortification. In Chapter XXXIX, “It was the second week in May, in which the three young ladies set out together from Gracechurch-street” (Chapter XXXIX, paragraph 1) — Opening. Lydia's vulgarity is shown in her own voice.
30. [mc · recall · DOK 1 · AP: AP-LIT.CHR] Who chatter about officers?
    A. Charlotte
    B. Mary and Jane
    C. Mrs. Gardiner
    D. Lydia and Kitty

    Key: D (Lydia and Kitty)
31. [fill · recall · DOK 1 · AP: AP-LIT.FIG] Complete the quotation from Chapter XXXIX, paragraph 10: “There is no danger of Wickham’s _____ Mary King.” Word bank: delicious, husband, soldiers, marrying
    Key: marrying
32. [fill · recall · DOK 1 · AP: AP-LIT.STR] Complete the quotation from Chapter XXXIX, paragraph 1: “It was the second week in May, in which the three young ladies set out _____ from Gracechurch-street”
    Key: together
33. [mc · inference · DOK 2 · AP: AP-LIT.LAN] Which choice best states a central concern of “Chapter XXXIX”?
    A. Leaving Kent
    B. Embarrassing relations
    C. Scandal
    D. The Brighton plan

    Key: D (The Brighton plan)

34. [short · synthesis · DOK 4 · AP: AP-LIT.LAN] Connect this passage from Chapter XXXIX, paragraph 24 to the story's treatment of women's limited choices: “She seldom listened to anybody for more than half a minute, and never attended to Mary at all.” Use one other moment from the story as well.
    Sample answer: This passage (Chapter XXXIX, paragraph 24) develops women's limited choices: Lydia's vulgarity is shown in her own voice. Its words “attended” and “listened” carry that idea into this moment. The same concern returns in “It should not be said, that the Miss Bennets could not be at home half a day before they were in pursuit of the…” (Chapter XXXIX, paragraph 25), so the two passages read as a pattern, not a single moment. Together they show the story treating women's limited choices as central.

35. [short · analysis · DOK 3 · AP: AP-LIT.FIG] Analyze the word choice in “I do not think it is very pretty; but I thought I might as well buy it as not” (Chapter XXXIX, paragraph 3). Pick two words and explain what they suggest.
    Sample answer: Lydia's careless spending. The evidence is “I do not think it is very pretty; but I thought I might as well buy it as not” (Chapter XXXIX, paragraph 3). This develops family and reputation: Lydia's vulgarity is shown in her own voice. The words “thought” and “pretty” carry that meaning: they are the charged choices in the line, and changing either would soften the effect.

36. [short · synthesis · DOK 4 · AP: AP-LIT.LAN] Connect this passage from Chapter XXXIX, paragraph 26 to the story's treatment of marriage and money: “She had not been many hours at home, before she found that the Brighton scheme, of which Lydia had given them a hint at the inn, was under frequent discussion between her parents.” Use one other moment from the story as well.
    Sample answer: This passage (Chapter XXXIX, paragraph 26) develops marriage and money: Lydia's vulgarity is shown in her own voice. Its words “discussion” and “frequent” carry that idea into this moment. The same concern returns in “Besides, it will not much signify what one wears this summer, after the ——shire have left Meryton, and they are going…” (Chapter XXXIX, paragraph 4), so the two passages read as a pattern, not a single moment. Together they show the story treating marriage and money as central.

37. [mc · recall · DOK 1 · AP: AP-LIT.FIG] Which word completes this sentence from Chapter XXXIX, paragraph 17? “Well, now let us be quite _____ and snug, and talk and laugh all the way home.”
    A. pieces
    B. delicious
    C. ashamed
    D. comfortable

    Key: D (comfortable)

38. [fill · recall · DOK 1 · AP: AP-LIT.FIG] Fill in the blank with the vocabulary word that fits: “They would doubtless be _____ with the generality of female minds.” Word bank: congenial, bandbox, workbags, depreciate
    Key: congenial

39. [mc · analysis · DOK 3 · AP: AP-LIT.CHR] Which literary element does this describe in “Chapter XXXIX”? Lydia reports Wickham's Miss King has gone away: ‘she is safe.’
    A. Imagery
    B. Irony
    C. Allusion
    D. Characterization

    Key: D (Characterization)

40. [short · synthesis · DOK 4 · AP: AP-LIT.FIG] Close reading: how do the diction and syntax of “It was the second week in May, in which the three young ladies set out together from Gracechurch-street” (Chapter XXXIX, paragraph 1) shape its meaning? Consider a second, competing reading.
    Sample answer: Opening. The evidence is “It was the second week in May, in which the three young ladies set out together from Gracechurch-street” (Chapter XXXIX, paragraph 1). This develops family and reputation: Lydia's vulgarity is shown in her own voice. The words “together” and “second” carry that meaning: they are the charged choices in the line, and changing either would soften the effect. She buys a bonnet she does "not think it is very pretty" just because she might "as well buy it as not," spending carelessly and talking without thought.
41. [short · synthesis · DOK 4 · Program outcome: LeL-C4-LIT-1] Close reading: how do the diction and syntax of “Is not this nice? is not this an agreeable surprise” (Chapter XXXIX, paragraph 2) shape its meaning? Consider a second, competing reading.
    Sample answer: Lydia's voice. The evidence is “Is not this nice? is not this an agreeable surprise” (Chapter XXXIX, paragraph 2). This develops family and reputation: Lydia's vulgarity is shown in her own voice. The words “agreeable” and “surprise” carry that meaning: they are the charged choices in the line, and changing either would soften the effect. She buys a bonnet she does "not think it is very pretty" just because she might "as well buy it as not," spending carelessly and talking without thought.
42. [short · analysis · DOK 3 · Program outcome: LeL-GR-LIT-1] Claim: Lydia's chatter shows the giddiness that Darcy and now Elizabeth fear. Explain how this evidence supports the claim: “I do not think it is very pretty; but I thought I might as well buy it as not” (Chapter XXXIX, paragraph 3).
    Sample answer: She buys a bonnet she does "not think it is very pretty" just because she might "as well buy it as not," spending carelessly and talking without thought. The evidence is “I do not think it is very pretty; but I thought I might as well buy it as not” (Chapter XXXIX, paragraph 3) — Lydia's careless spending. This develops family and reputation: Lydia's vulgarity is shown in her own voice.

Rigor version	Items (in order)	Mix
Scaffolded support	1, 2, 3, 4, 5, 6, 7, 8, 9, 10, 11, 12, 13, 14, 15, 16	recall 10, inference 3, analysis 2, synthesis 1
HS Freshman	8, 10, 17, 18, 19, 2, 6, 4, 7, 20, 12, 13, 15, 21, 22, 23	recall 10, inference 2, analysis 3, synthesis 1
HS Sophomore	17, 24, 18, 4, 25, 3, 8, 7, 13, 26, 12, 27, 21, 15, 28, 29	recall 8, inference 3, analysis 3, synthesis 2
HS Junior	20, 30, 31, 5, 1, 25, 32, 12, 33, 13, 21, 14, 15, 27, 34, 23	recall 7, inference 3, analysis 4, synthesis 2
HS Senior	18, 8, 24, 19, 30, 7, 13, 12, 11, 15, 22, 35, 14, 16, 34, 36	recall 6, inference 3, analysis 4, synthesis 3
AP	37, 17, 30, 6, 38, 13, 14, 15, 39, 21, 35, 23, 40, 29, 36, 28	recall 5, inference 1, analysis 5, synthesis 5
College Freshman	2, 8, 19, 6, 38, 11, 12, 27, 39, 35, 21, 15, 34, 23, 36, 29	recall 5, inference 2, analysis 5, synthesis 4
College Sophomore	31, 25, 30, 20, 5, 39, 14, 27, 15, 21, 29, 28, 36, 16, 34, 23	recall 5, inference 0, analysis 5, synthesis 6
College Junior	17, 2, 6, 38, 30, 35, 15, 21, 14, 22, 34, 29, 36, 16, 23, 28	recall 5, inference 0, analysis 5, synthesis 6
College Senior	9, 6, 38, 30, 20, 33, 27, 21, 34, 41, 23, 36, 40, 28, 29, 16	recall 5, inference 1, analysis 2, synthesis 8
		recall 5, inference 0, analysis 4, synthesis 7

Graduate / PhD	30, 6, 38, 20, 5, 22, 15, 42, 14, 28, 29, 34, 16, 41, 23, 36

Writing prompts (eleven rigor levels)

Scaffolded support (250 words; AP: see unit standards): Supported track (work from the passage your teacher selects). In “Chapter XXXIX,” how does Austen show the Brighton plan? Write a paragraph that states your claim, quotes two details from the passage, and explains how each detail supports your idea. Use the foreshadowing you noticed as one piece of evidence.

HS Freshman (350 words; AP: see unit standards): In Chapter XXXIX, how does Austen develop the idea of the Brighton plan? State a clear claim, support it with two or three quotations, and explain how the foreshadowing in the chapter helps build that idea.

HS Sophomore (450 words; AP: see unit standards): Analyze how Chapter XXXIX develops the idea of the Brighton plan. Make a precise claim, support it with at least three pieces of textual evidence, and explain how the author's use of foreshadowing and characterization shapes that idea. Address one possible counterclaim.

HS Junior (550 words; AP: see unit standards): Analyze how the structure of Chapter XXXIX (where it begins, turns and ends) and its foreshadowing shape the reader's understanding of the Brighton plan. Identify one place where the text leaves matters uncertain and explain how that uncertainty adds to its meaning.

HS Senior (600 words; AP: see unit standards): Two readers disagree about what Chapter XXXIX suggests about the Brighton plan. Lay out two plausible interpretations, weigh the evidence for each (including the chapter's foreshadowing and characterization), and argue for the stronger one in a sustained, well-organized essay.

AP (650 words; AP: AP-LIT.STR, AP-LIT.LAN): Write a literary argument in which you analyze how Jane Austen uses foreshadowing in Chapter XXXIX to complicate the reader's understanding of the Brighton plan. Develop a defensible thesis, select evidence purposefully, and explain how specific choices of diction and syntax create meaning.

College Freshman (1000 words; AP: see unit standards): Situate Chapter XXXIX within its historical and literary context and argue how the chapter's treatment of the Brighton plan responds to that context. Engage with at least one secondary perspective (a critic, historian or the author's own statements), integrate quotations smoothly, and cite in MLA style.

College Sophomore (1250 words; AP: see unit standards): Read Chapter XXXIX alongside the conventions of its genre and period. Argue how the chapter's handling of the Brighton plan follows or bends those conventions, using the foreshadowing as evidence, and test your reading against one published critic. Document two secondary sources in MLA.

College Junior (1500 words; AP: see unit standards): Apply a named critical approach (for example formalist, historicist, feminist, psychoanalytic or ecocritical) to Chapter XXXIX and its treatment of the Brighton plan. State your method, show what it reveals in the chapter's foreshadowing and characterization, and identify where the text resists it.

College Senior (2000 words; AP: see unit standards): Develop a research argument that reads Chapter XXXIX as evidence for a larger claim about the Brighton plan in Pride and Prejudice. Connect close reading of the chapter to the whole novel, engage at least four scholarly sources, and state precisely where your reading departs from theirs (Chicago style).

Graduate / PhD (2500 words; AP: see unit standards): Develop an original argument that reads Chapter XXXIX as a hinge in the novel's larger treatment of the Brighton plan. Position your reading within a named critical conversation (for example formalist, historicist, psychoanalytic, feminist or postcolonial approaches), account for the textual history where relevant, and articulate the stakes of your intervention for scholarship on Pride and Prejudice.

SAT-style questions

1. "I am glad I bought my bonnet, if it is only for the fun of having another bandbox!

   As used in the text, what does the word "bandbox" most nearly mean?

   A. a light round box for hats

   B. a soldier standing guard

   C. be afraid or scared of; be frightened of

   D. the acquisition of something for payment

2. It was the second week in May, in which the three young ladies set out together from Gracechurch-street, for the town of ——— in Hertfordshire; and, as they drew near the appointed inn where Mr. Bennet's carriage was to meet them, they quickly perceived, in token of the coachman's punctuality, both Kitty and Lydia looking out of a dining-room upstairs. These two girls had been above an hour in the place, happily employed in visiting an opposite milliner, watching the sentinel on guard, and dressing a salad and cucumber.

   Which choice best states a central concern of "Chapter XXXIX"?

   A. The first proposal

   B. Jealousy at Pemberley

   C. The Brighton plan

   D. Pemberley

SAT key: 1. A (a light round box for hats); 2. C (The Brighton plan)

Lesson 41: Chapter XL

Focus: keeping secrets

Objective: Students will analyze how characterization develops in "Chapter XL" by writing a claim-evidence-reasoning paragraph that cites at least 2 quotations from the section, and will score at least 80% on the section quiz.

Standards: AP: see the unit standards

Teacher only · spoilers

Elizabeth tells Jane of Darcy's proposal and of Wickham's true character. Jane is distressed for both men. The sisters agree not to expose Wickham publicly, since he is leaving soon. Elizabeth keeps back Darcy's part in separating Jane and Bingley.

Background: Damaging a man's reputation without proof could bring social consequences.

Significance: The decision to stay silent sets up the elopement crisis.

Lesson plan and lecture script (90 minutes)

0–8 min · Bell-ringer · You do (8 min)
Students write to the bell-ringer, then pair-share.
Was it right to keep Wickham's character secret? Write for five minutes. Starters: I think... because... / This connects to first impressions because....
Prompt: Was it right to keep Wickham's character secret?
Sentence starters: I think… because… · This connects to first impressions because…
Strong response: A strong response takes a position and anticipates this: the sisters debate what to do with what they know.

8–18 min · Vocabulary with etymology notes · I do (10 min)
Five key words in context, with verified word histories.
Today's words: incumbrance — a burden; something that holds one back; mismanagement — bad handling or management; reestablish — to restore; to set up again; allayed — lessen the intensity of or calm; undeceive — free from deception or illusion.
Words: incumbrance: a burden; something that holds one back · mismanagement: bad handling or management · reestablish: to restore; to set up again · allayed: lessen the intensity of or calm · undeceive: free from deception or illusion

18–28 min · Background and context · I do (10 min)
Mini-lecture (read or adapt the script).
Damaging a man's reputation without proof could bring social consequences. The decision to stay silent sets up the elopement crisis. Characterization: Elizabeth tells Jane of the proposal and the letter but not about Bingley; they decide not to expose Wickham. Dialogue: Jane tries to keep both men good. Watch for letters: Letters carry news, reveal character and change minds; Darcy's letter is the turning point of the novel. In this chapter: "She then spoke of the letter, repeating the whole of its contents as far as they concerned" (Chapter XL, paragraph 9).

28–40 min · I do: modeled close reading · I do (12 min)
Model the close reading of the anchor quotation using the written think-aloud below.
First, meaning. I read "There certainly was some great mismanagement in the education of those two young men" slowly and put it in my own words: Elizabeth tells Jane that there must have been some great mismanagement in the education of Darcy and Wickham. Next, craft. I notice her wry, balanced judgment, now that she knows the truth from Darcy's letter. The strongest word is "mismanagement": it means bad handling, suggesting their upbringing went wrong somehow. Then, effect. What does Elizabeth mean about the two young men's education? My answer: By the two young men's education, Elizabeth means Darcy and Wickham were badly managed: one got all the goodness and the other all the appearance of it, and she admits her misjudgment of both.

> There certainly was some great mismanagement in the education of those two young men (Chapter XL, paragraph 15)

Think-aloud: First, meaning. I read "There certainly was some great mismanagement in the education of those two young men" slowly and put it in my own words: Elizabeth tells Jane that there must have been some great mismanagement in the education of Darcy and Wickham. Next, craft. I notice her wry, balanced judgment, now that she knows the truth from Darcy's letter. The strongest word is "mismanagement": it means bad handling, suggesting their upbringing went wrong somehow. Then, effect. What does Elizabeth mean about the two young men's education? My answer: By the two young men's education, Elizabeth means Darcy and Wickham were badly managed: one got all the goodness and the other all the appearance of it, and she admits her misjudgment of both.

40–55 min · We do: guided annotation · We do (15 min)
Guided analysis of a second quotation; expected answers given.
Ask: What words in this line stand out, and what do they suggest? Expected: Appearance vs. goodness: the novel's key distinction, now spoken by Elizabeth. Ask: How does this line connect to first impressions? Expected: The sisters debate what to do with what they know. (Key line.)

> One has got all the goodness, and the other all the appearance of it (Chapter XL, paragraph 15)

Ask: What words in this line stand out, and what do they suggest?
Expected answer: Appearance vs. goodness: the novel's key distinction, now spoken by Elizabeth.
Ask: How does this line connect to first impressions?
Expected answer: The sisters debate what to do with what they know. (Key line.)

55–70 min · You do: independent annotation · You do (15 min)
Independent annotation and a claim-evidence-reasoning paragraph (exemplar given).
Annotate the chapter for characterization, dialogue (three marks with a margin note each), then write one claim-evidence-reasoning paragraph: what does this chapter suggest about keeping secrets? Then start your writing prompt at your assigned level (HS Sophomore: Analyze how Chapter XL develops the idea of keeping secrets. Make a precise claim, support it with at least three pieces of textual evidence, and explain how the author's use of characterization and foreshadowing shapes that idea. Address one possible counterclaim.) Exemplar: Elizabeth now distinguishes between appearance and goodness. When the text says "One has got all the goodness, and the other all the appearance of it" (Chapter XL, paragraph 15), it shows this directly. She tells Jane that "one has got all the goodness, and the other all the appearance of it," reversing her earlier judgment of Darcy and Wickham.
Task: Annotate the chapter for characterization, dialogue (three marks with a margin note each), then write one claim-evidence-reasoning paragraph: what does this chapter suggest about keeping secrets? Then start your writing prompt at your assigned level (HS Sophomore: Analyze how Chapter XL develops the idea of keeping secrets. Make a precise claim, support it with at least three pieces of textual evidence, and explain how the author's use of characterization and foreshadowing shapes that idea. Address one possible counterclaim.)
Exemplar: Elizabeth now distinguishes between appearance and goodness. When the text says "One has got all the goodness, and the other all the appearance of it" (Chapter XL, paragraph 15), it shows this directly. She tells Jane that "one has got all the goodness, and the other all the appearance of it," reversing her earlier judgment of Darcy and Wickham.

70–80 min · Discussion · We do (10 min)
Structured discussion from the 30 tiered questions, with facilitation notes.
Anchor question: Was it right to keep Wickham's character secret? Ask: should they expose Wickham? What do they risk either way?
Anchor question: Was it right to keep Wickham's character secret?
Facilitation: Ask: should they expose Wickham? What do they risk either way?

80–87 min · Exit ticket / chapter quiz · You do (7 min)
Chapter quiz in the app and an exit ticket (answer given).
Chapter quiz in the app, then: In one sentence, what does this chapter suggest about keeping secrets? Support it with one short quotation. Model answer: Elizabeth now distinguishes between appearance and goodness. ("One has got all the goodness, and the other all the appearance of it", Chapter XL, paragraph 15). Accept any defensible claim backed by a quotation from the chapter; the answer key for the quiz is in the Quiz section.
Exit ticket: In one sentence, what does this chapter suggest about keeping secrets? Support it with one short quotation.
Answer: Model answer: Elizabeth now distinguishes between appearance and goodness. ("One has got all the goodness, and the other all the appearance of it", Chapter XL, paragraph 15). Accept any defensible claim backed by a quotation from the chapter; the answer key for the quiz is in the Quiz section.

> 87–90 min · Closure · I do (3 min)
> Summarize the lesson and preview the next reading.
> Today we saw how characterization shapes keeping secrets. Key takeaway: the sisters debate what to do with what they know.

Total: 90 minutes.

Teacher analysis (spoilers)

Literary elements

- Characterization: Elizabeth tells Jane of the proposal and the letter but not about Bingley; they decide not to expose Wickham.
- Dialogue: Jane tries to keep both men good.

Themes and how they develop

- first impressions: the sisters debate what to do with what they know.

Symbols and motifs

- letters: Letters carry news, reveal character and change minds; Darcy's letter is the turning point of the novel. In this chapter: “She then spoke of the letter, repeating the whole of its contents as far as they concerned” (Chapter XL, paragraph 9).
- marriage and money: Incomes, entails and fortunes are stated precisely; marriage is always also an economic question. In this chapter: “Yes, yes. They will take care not to outrun their income. They will never be distressed for money. Well, much good may” (Chapter XL, paragraph 33).

Key quotations (checked against the reading text)

- “There certainly was some great mismanagement in the education of those two young men” (Chapter XL, paragraph 15) Elizabeth's joke about Darcy and Wickham.
- “One has got all the goodness, and the other all the appearance of it” (Chapter XL, paragraph 15) Key line.
- “Elizabeth’s impatience to acquaint Jane with what had happened could no longer be overcome” (Chapter XL, paragraph 1) Opening.

Model claim-evidence-reasoning

Claim: Elizabeth now distinguishes between appearance and goodness.
Evidence: “One has got all the goodness, and the other all the appearance of it” (Chapter XL, paragraph 15)
Reasoning: She tells Jane that "one has got all the goodness, and the other all the appearance of it," reversing her earlier judgment of Darcy and Wickham.

Vocabulary with etymology notes

Word	Definition (in this sentence)	In context	Word history

incumbrance (noun)	a burden; something that holds one back	Here was knowledge in which no one could partake; and she was sensible that nothing less than a perfect understanding between the parties could justify her in throwing off this last incumbrance of mystery.
mismanagement (noun)	bad handling or management	"There certainly was some great mismanagement in the education of those two young men.
reestablish (verb)	to restore; to set up again	He is now perhaps sorry for what he has done, and anxious to reestablish a character.
allayed (verb)	lessen the intensity of or calm	The tumult of Elizabeth's mind was allayed by this conversation.
undeceive (verb)	free from deception or illusion	On the contrary every particular relative to his sister, was meant to be kept as much as possible to myself; and if I endeavour to undeceive people as to the rest of his conduct, who will believe me?
undeserved (adjective)	not deserved or earned	Darcy, for now they do appear wholly undeserved."
extorted (verb)	drawn out with difficulty	It was some time, however, before a smile could be extorted from Jane.
lawfully (adverb)	legally	Well, if they can be easy with an estate that is not lawfully their own, so much the better.	"lawfully": Origin: an English formation from lawful + -ly. (Liber et Libri origin note, https://en.wiktionary.org/wiki/lawfully#Etymology)
stumbling (verb)	coming upon by chance	One may be continually abusive without saying anything just; but one cannot be always laughing at a man without now and then stumbling on something witty."
cherished (verb)	be fond of; be attached to	She still cherished a very tender affection for Bingley.

Discussion questions

1. Was it right to keep Wickham's character secret?
2. Where does characterization appear in this chapter, and what effect does it have? Point to one passage.
3. How does this chapter connect to the book's larger concern with women's limited choices?

Classroom discussion questions (30, tiered)

Wait time after every question (3 s for DOK 1, 5 s for DOK 2, 8 to 10 s for DOK 3 and 4); think-pair-share on DOK 3 and 4; answer each response with a follow-up probe; close with student-generated questions. Focus sets by rigor level: Scaffolded support: 1, 2, 3, 4, 5, 6, 11, 12, 13, 14, 21, 22; HS Freshman: 1, 2, 3, 4, 5, 12, 13, 14, 15, 22, 23, 24; HS Sophomore: 1, 2, 3, 4, 13, 14, 15, 16, 17, 23, 24, 25; HS Junior: 1, 2, 3, 14, 15, 16, 17, 18, 24, 25, 26, 27; HS Senior: 1, 2, 3, 15, 16, 17, 18, 25, 26, 27, 28, 29; AP: 1, 2, 16, 17, 18, 19, 20, 26, 27, 28, 29, 30; College Freshman: 1, 2, 17, 18, 19, 20, 21, 22, 27, 28, 29, 30; College Sophomore: 1, 2, 11, 18, 19, 20, 21, 22, 23, 28, 29, 30; College Junior: 1, 11, 12, 19, 20, 21, 22, 23, 24, 25, 29, 30; College Senior: 1, 11, 12, 13, 20, 21, 22, 23, 24, 25, 26, 30; Graduate / PhD: 1, 11, 12, 13, 21, 22, 23, 24, 25, 26, 27, 28

Literal / recall

1. What does Elizabeth tell Jane? [DOK 1 · coldCallWithSupport · wait 3 s · AP: unit standards] Look for: About Darcy's proposal and Wickham
2. How does Jane respond to the truth about Darcy and Wickham? [DOK 1 · turnAndTalk · wait 3 s · AP: unit standards] Look for: Distressed for both men
3. What do the sisters decide? [DOK 1 · coldCallWithSupport · wait 3 s · AP: unit standards] Look for: Not to expose Wickham
4. What does Elizabeth hold back from Jane? [DOK 1 · turnAndTalk · wait 3 s · AP: unit standards] Look for: Darcy's role in separating her from Bingley
5. What theme does the silence raise? [DOK 1 · coldCallWithSupport · wait 3 s · AP: unit standards] Look for: Responsibility to warn others
6. Retell the three most important events of “Chapter XL” in order, in one sentence each. [DOK 1 · turnAndTalk · wait 3 s · AP: unit standards] Look for: Elizabeth tells Jane of Darcy's proposal and of Wickham's true character. Jane is distressed for both men. The sisters agree not to expose Wickham publicly, since he is leaving soon. Elizabeth keeps back Darcy's part in separating Jane and Bingley.
7. Which characters appear or are mentioned in “Chapter XL”? Name two and one thing each says or does. [DOK 1 · coldCallWithSupport · wait 3 s · AP: unit standards] Look for: Names and actions taken from the chapter; check against the teacher summary.
8. Where and when does “Chapter XL” take place? Point to the line that tells you. [DOK 1 · turnAndTalk · wait 3 s · AP: unit standards] Look for: A place/time detail quoted from the chapter.
9. Reread: “Here was knowledge in which no one could partake; and she was sensible that nothing less than a perfect understanding between the parties could justify her in throwing off this last incumbrance of mystery.” What does “incumbrance” mean here, and what is literally happening in this line? [DOK 1 · turnAndTalk · wait 3 s · AP: unit standards] Look for: incumbrance: a burden; something that holds one back.
10. Reread: ““There certainly was some great mismanagement in the education of those two young men.” What does “mismanagement” mean here, and what is literally happening in this line? [DOK 1 · turnAndTalk · wait 3 s · AP: unit standards] Look for: mismanagement: bad handling or management.

Inferential / analytical

1. What does “Chapter XL” suggest about keeping secrets? State the inference and the line that supports it. [DOK 2 · thinkPairShare · wait 5 s · AP-LIT.LAN] Look for: The decision to stay silent sets up the elopement crisis.

2. Find one example of characterization in this chapter. What does it reveal that a plain statement would not? [DOK 2 · followUp · wait 5 s · AP-LIT.CHR] Look for: Look for what characters say, do and think, and how others react to them.
3. How does the foreshadowing in this chapter shape what we understand about keeping secrets? [DOK 3 · thinkPairShare · wait 8 s · AP-LIT.STR] Look for: Look for hints, warnings or images that point to later events.
   Answer guidance: A defensible line of argument: Elizabeth now distinguishes between appearance and goodness. Useful evidence: “There certainly was some great mismanagement in the education of those two young men” (Chapter XL, paragraph 15): Elizabeth's joke about Darcy and Wickham. Theme link: the sisters debate what to do with what they know. Credit any position that is supported by quotation and reasoning; push one-sided answers to address the strongest counterpoint.
4. In the passage that begins ““And yet I meant to be uncommonly clever in taking so decided a dislike to him, without any reason.”, why might Austen have chosen these particular words? Pick two and explain their connotations. [DOK 2 · followUp · wait 5 s · AP-LIT.FIG] Look for: Diction analysis of two words in the anchor passage.
5. What causes the main turn in “Chapter XL”, and what effect is it likely to have on what follows? [DOK 2 · followUp · wait 5 s · AP-LIT.STR] Look for: Elizabeth tells Jane of Darcy's proposal and of Wickham's true character. Jane is distressed for both men. The sisters agree not to expose Wickham publicly, since he is leaving soon. Elizabeth keeps back Darcy's part in separating Jane and Bingley.
6. How does “Chapter XL” build on “Chapter XXXIX”? Name one link of cause and effect. [DOK 3 · thinkPairShare · wait 8 s · AP-LIT.STR] Look for: A causal or structural link between this and the previous chapter.
   Answer guidance: A defensible line of argument: Elizabeth now distinguishes between appearance and goodness. Useful evidence: “One has got all the goodness, and the other all the appearance of it” (Chapter XL, paragraph 15): Key line. Theme link: the sisters debate what to do with what they know. Credit any position that is supported by quotation and reasoning; push one-sided answers to address the strongest counterpoint.
7. What can we infer about a character's motives from what they say and do here, as opposed to what they claim? [DOK 3 · followUp · wait 8 s · AP-LIT.CHR] Look for: An inference about motive supported by a quoted line.
   Answer guidance: A defensible line of argument: Elizabeth now distinguishes between appearance and goodness. Useful evidence: “Elizabeth’s impatience to acquaint Jane with what had happened could no longer be overcome” (Chapter XL, paragraph 1): Opening. On characterization: Elizabeth tells Jane of the proposal and the letter but not about Bingley; they decide not to expose Wickham. Credit any position that is supported by quotation and reasoning; push one-sided answers to address the strongest counterpoint.
8. The bell-ringer asked: “Was it right to keep Wickham's character secret?” Now that we have read closely, how would you revise your first answer, and which line changed your mind? [DOK 2 · thinkPairShare · wait 5 s · AP-LIT.LAN] Look for: A revised answer anchored in the text.
9. Where does theme appear, and how does it connect this chapter to the larger concern with women's limited choices? [DOK 3 · followUp · wait 8 s · AP-LIT.LAN] Look for: Look for statements or moments that connect to the book's big ideas.
   Answer guidance: A defensible line of argument: Elizabeth now distinguishes between appearance and goodness. Useful evidence: “There certainly was some great mismanagement in the education of those two young men” (Chapter XL, paragraph 15): Elizabeth's joke about Darcy and Wickham. Theme link: the sisters debate what to do with what they know. Credit any position that is supported by quotation and reasoning; push one-sided answers to address the strongest counterpoint.

10. Background: Damaging a man's reputation without proof could bring social consequences. How does knowing this change the way you read one moment in the chapter? [DOK 3 · thinkPairShare · wait 8 s · AP-LIT.SET] Look for: A specific moment reread in light of the context.
    Answer guidance: A defensible line of argument: Elizabeth now distinguishes between appearance and goodness. Useful evidence: “One has got all the goodness, and the other all the appearance of it” (Chapter XL, paragraph 15): Key line. Theme link: the sisters debate what to do with what they know. Credit any position that is supported by quotation and reasoning; push one-sided answers to address the strongest counterpoint.

Evaluative / synthesis / creative

1. A critic might argue: “The decision to stay silent sets up the elopement crisis.” How far do you agree? Take a stand and defend it with two lines from the chapter. [DOK 3 · fourCorners · wait 8 s · AP-LIT.LAN] Look for: A defended position with evidence and one counterpoint.
   Answer guidance: A defensible line of argument: Elizabeth now distinguishes between appearance and goodness. Useful evidence: “Elizabeth’s impatience to acquaint Jane with what had happened could no longer be overcome” (Chapter XL, paragraph 1): Opening. Theme link: the sisters debate what to do with what they know. Credit any position that is supported by quotation and reasoning; push one-sided answers to address the strongest counterpoint.
2. Which character in this chapter acts most wisely, and which least? Judge them by a standard you name. [DOK 3 · thinkPairShare · wait 8 s · AP-LIT.CHR, AP-LIT.LAN] Look for: An evaluation using an explicit criterion and evidence.
   Answer guidance: A defensible line of argument: Elizabeth now distinguishes between appearance and goodness. Useful evidence: “There certainly was some great mismanagement in the education of those two young men” (Chapter XL, paragraph 15): Elizabeth's joke about Darcy and Wickham. On characterization: Elizabeth tells Jane of the proposal and the letter but not about Bingley; they decide not to expose Wickham. Credit any position that is supported by quotation and reasoning; push one-sided answers to address the strongest counterpoint.
3. Rewrite one moment of “Chapter XL” from the point of view of a different character. What does the new angle reveal or hide about keeping secrets? [DOK 4 · thinkPairShare · wait 8 s · AP-LIT.LAN, AP-LIT.NAR] Look for: A creative product with a rationale tied to the text.
   Answer guidance: A defensible line of argument: Elizabeth now distinguishes between appearance and goodness. Useful evidence: “One has got all the goodness, and the other all the appearance of it” (Chapter XL, paragraph 15): Key line. Theme link: the sisters debate what to do with what they know. Credit any position that is supported by quotation and reasoning; push one-sided answers to address the strongest counterpoint.
4. Write three questions of your own about “Chapter XL”: one recall, one “why/how”, and one “should/what if”. Trade with a partner and answer theirs. [DOK 3 · studentGenerated · wait 8 s · AP-LIT.LAN] Look for: Student-generated questions at three levels.
   Answer guidance: A defensible line of argument: Elizabeth now distinguishes between appearance and goodness. Useful evidence: “Elizabeth’s impatience to acquaint Jane with what had happened could no longer be overcome” (Chapter XL, paragraph 1): Opening. Theme link: the sisters debate what to do with what they know. Credit any position that is supported by quotation and reasoning; push one-sided answers to address the strongest counterpoint.

5. Connect this chapter to first impressions and prejudice: is the link strong or weak so far? What would Austen need to show next to strengthen it? [DOK 4 · socraticCircle · wait 8 s · AP-LIT.LAN] Look for: A judgment of thematic development across the work.

   Answer guidance: A defensible line of argument: Elizabeth now distinguishes between appearance and goodness. Useful evidence: “There certainly was some great mismanagement in the education of those two young men” (Chapter XL, paragraph 15): Elizabeth's joke about Darcy and Wickham. Theme link: the sisters debate what to do with what they know. Credit any position that is supported by quotation and reasoning; push one-sided answers to address the strongest counterpoint.
6. Is the characterization in this chapter effective, or does it feel heavy-handed? Evaluate it as a reader would in a review. [DOK 3 · fourCorners · wait 8 s · AP-LIT.CHR, AP-LIT.LAN] Look for: An evaluative judgment with criteria and evidence.

   Answer guidance: A defensible line of argument: Elizabeth now distinguishes between appearance and goodness. Useful evidence: “One has got all the goodness, and the other all the appearance of it” (Chapter XL, paragraph 15): Key line. On characterization: Elizabeth tells Jane of the proposal and the letter but not about Bingley; they decide not to expose Wickham. Credit any position that is supported by quotation and reasoning; push one-sided answers to address the strongest counterpoint.
7. Compare how “Chapter XL” treats keeping secrets with how another text, film or event you know treats a similar idea. What does Pride and Prejudice see that the other misses? [DOK 4 · socraticCircle · wait 8 s · AP-LIT.LAN] Look for: A cross-text synthesis.

   Answer guidance: A defensible line of argument: Elizabeth now distinguishes between appearance and goodness. Useful evidence: “Elizabeth’s impatience to acquaint Jane with what had happened could no longer be overcome” (Chapter XL, paragraph 1): Opening. Theme link: the sisters debate what to do with what they know. Credit any position that is supported by quotation and reasoning; push one-sided answers to address the strongest counterpoint.
8. Predict what “Chapter XLI” will bring, using two clues from this chapter. After reading, evaluate your prediction. [DOK 3 · thinkPairShare · wait 8 s · AP-LIT.LAN, AP-LIT.STR] Look for: A prediction or judgment justified with textual clues.

   Answer guidance: A defensible line of argument: Elizabeth now distinguishes between appearance and goodness. Useful evidence: “There certainly was some great mismanagement in the education of those two young men” (Chapter XL, paragraph 15): Elizabeth's joke about Darcy and Wickham. Theme link: the sisters debate what to do with what they know. Credit any position that is supported by quotation and reasoning; push one-sided answers to address the strongest counterpoint.
9. Design a one-paragraph modern adaptation of this chapter (setting, characters, conflict). What must stay the same for it to still be about keeping secrets? [DOK 4 · thinkPairShare · wait 8 s · AP-LIT.LAN] Look for: A creative transfer that keeps the core idea.

   Answer guidance: A defensible line of argument: Elizabeth now distinguishes between appearance and goodness. Useful evidence: “One has got all the goodness, and the other all the appearance of it” (Chapter XL, paragraph 15): Key line. Theme link: the sisters debate what to do with what they know. Credit any position that is supported by quotation and reasoning; push one-sided answers to address the strongest counterpoint.
10. What question would you most like to ask Jane Austen about this chapter, and what answer do you think the text itself gives? [DOK 4 · studentGenerated · wait 8 s · AP-LIT.LAN] Look for: A student-generated question answered from evidence.

Answer guidance: A defensible line of argument: Elizabeth now distinguishes between appearance and goodness. Useful evidence: “Elizabeth’s impatience to acquaint Jane with what had happened could no longer be overcome” (Chapter XL, paragraph 1): Opening. Theme link: the sisters debate what to do with what they know. Credit any position that is supported by quotation and reasoning; push one-sided answers to address the strongest counterpoint.

Annotation focus

- Characterization: look for what characters say, do and think, and how others react to them (anchor passage in the We do segment)
- Also notice Foreshadowing: hints, warnings or images that point to later events
- Also notice Theme: statements or moments that connect to the book's big ideas

Chapter quiz: item bank (all eleven rigor versions)

1. [fill · recall · DOK 1] Complete the quotation from Chapter XL, paragraph 2: “Miss Bennet’s _____ was soon lessened by the strong sisterly partiality which made any admiration of Elizabeth appear perfectly natural; and all surprise was shortly lost in other feelings.” Word bank: astonishment, disappointment, uncommonly, repeating

   Key: astonishment
2. [fill · recall · DOK 1] Fill in the blank with the vocabulary word that fits: “Darcy, for now they do appear wholly _____.” Word bank: reestablish, incumbrance, mismanagement, undeserved

   Key: undeserved
3. [mc · recall · DOK 1] What does Elizabeth hold back from Jane?

   A. Georgiana's name

   B. Darcy's role in separating her from Bingley

   C. The proposal

   D. Wickham's debts

   Key: B (Darcy's role in separating her from Bingley)
4. [mc · recall · DOK 1] Which word completes this sentence from Chapter XL, paragraph 13? “I know you will do him such ample justice, that I am growing every moment more _____ and indifferent.”

   A. letter

   B. unconcerned

   C. consider

   D. saying

   Key: B (unconcerned)
5. [fill · recall · DOK 1] Complete the quotation from Chapter XL, paragraph 18: “Lizzy, when you first read that _____, I am sure you could not treat the matter as you do now.” Word bank: anything, letter, saying, refusing

   Key: letter
6. [fill · recall · DOK 1] Complete the quotation from Chapter XL, paragraph 15: “One has got all the goodness, and the other all the _____ of it”

   Key: appearance

7. [mc · recall · DOK 1] How does Jane respond to the truth about Darcy and Wickham?

    A. Pleased

    B. Angry at Darcy

    C. Indifferent

    D. Distressed for both men

    Key: D (Distressed for both men)

8. [mc · recall · DOK 1] What theme does the silence raise?

    A. Wealth

    B. Love of music

    C. Travel

    D. Responsibility to warn others

    Key: D (Responsibility to warn others)

9. [fill · recall · DOK 1] Fill in the blank with the vocabulary word that fits: "Well, if they can be easy with an estate that is not _____ their own, so much the better." Word bank: lawfully, reestablish, mismanagement, incumbrance

    Key: lawfully

10. [mc · inference · DOK 2] Which of these passages comes earliest in Chapter XL?

    A. "She was sorry that Mr. Darcy should have delivered his sentiments in a manner so little suited to recommend them; but still more was she…"

    B. "His being so sure of succeeding, was wrong,' said she; 'and certainly ought not to have appeared; but consider how much it must increase…"

    C. "Miss Bennet's astonishment was soon lessened by the strong sisterly partiality which made any admiration of Elizabeth appear perfectly…"

    D. "Indeed,' replied Elizabeth, 'I am heartily sorry for him; but he has other feelings which will probably soon drive away his regard for me."

    Key: C ("Miss Bennet's astonishment was soon lessened by the strong sisterly partiality which made any admiration of Elizabeth appear perfectly…")

11. [short · inference · DOK 2] What does this passage from Chapter XL, paragraph 28 reveal about the character or situation? "I do not believe that he will ever live at Netherfield any more." Answer in two or three sentences with one detail.

    Sample answer: The passage (Chapter XL, paragraph 28) shows the situation turning on first impressions and prejudice: the sisters debate what to do with what they know. The words "believe" are the proof, because they show how the moment looks to the people in it. They suggest more than the narrator states outright.

12. [mc · inference · DOK 2] Which choice best states a central concern of "Chapter XL"?

    A. Jealousy at Pemberley

    B. Keeping secrets

    C. Parental failure

    D. A journey and a mercenary suitor

    Key: B (Keeping secrets)

13. [short · inference · DOK 2] What does this passage from Chapter XL, paragraph 13 reveal about the character or situation? “Your profusion makes me saving; and if you lament over him much longer, my heart will be as light as a feather.” Answer in two or three sentences with one detail.
    Sample answer: The passage (Chapter XL, paragraph 13) shows the situation turning on first impressions and prejudice: the sisters debate what to do with what they know. The words “profusion” and “feather” are the proof, because they show how the moment looks to the people in it. They suggest more than the narrator states outright.
14. [short · analysis · DOK 3] Analyze how the word choice in this passage from Chapter XL, paragraph 19 shapes its tone: “I was very uncomfortable, I may say unhappy.” Pick two words and explain their effect.
    Sample answer: The words “uncomfortable” and “unhappy” (Chapter XL, paragraph 19) make the tone heavy and deliberate rather than neutral. That weight points the reader to class and social mobility: the sisters debate what to do with what they know. The author chooses them so the moment feels significant instead of passing.
15. [short · analysis · DOK 3] Analyze the word choice in “Elizabeth’s impatience to acquaint Jane with what had happened could no longer be overcome” (Chapter XL, paragraph 1). Pick two words and explain what they suggest.
    Sample answer: Opening. The evidence is “Elizabeth’s impatience to acquaint Jane with what had happened could no longer be overcome” (Chapter XL, paragraph 1). This develops first impressions: the sisters debate what to do with what they know. The words “impatience” and “acquaint” carry that meaning: they are the charged choices in the line, and changing either would soften the effect.
16. [short · synthesis · DOK 4] Connect this passage from Chapter XL, paragraph 25 to the story's treatment of women's limited choices: “But there was still something lurking behind, of which prudence forbad the disclosure.” Use one other moment from the story as well.
    Sample answer: This passage (Chapter XL, paragraph 25) develops women's limited choices: the sisters debate what to do with what they know. Its words “disclosure” and “something” carry that idea into this moment. The same concern returns in “And then,’ said she, ‘if that very improbable event should ever take place, I shall merely be able to tell what Bingley…” (Chapter XL, paragraph 25), so the two passages read as a pattern, not a single moment. Together they show the story treating women's limited choices as central.
17. [fill · recall · DOK 1] Complete the quotation from Chapter XL, paragraph 15: “There certainly was some great _____ in the education of those two young men”
    Key: mismanagement
18. [mc · recall · DOK 1] What does Elizabeth tell Jane?
    A. About Collins's debts
    B. About Darcy's proposal and Wickham
    C. Nothing
    D. About Pemberley

    Key: B (About Darcy's proposal and Wickham)
19. [fill · recall · DOK 1] Complete the quotation from Chapter XL, paragraph 1: “Elizabeth’s _____ to acquaint Jane with what had happened could no longer be overcome”
    Key: impatience
20. [fill · recall · DOK 1] Complete the quotation from Chapter XL, paragraph 10: “You never will be able to make both of them good for _____.” Word bank: letter, uncommonly, disappointment, anything
    Key: anything

21. [mc · recall · DOK 1] Which word completes this sentence from Chapter XL, paragraph 7? “No—I do not know that you were wrong in _____ what you did.”

    A. consider

    B. astonishment

    C. quantity

    D. saying

    Key: D (saying)

22. [short · analysis · DOK 3] Analyze how the word choice in this passage from Chapter XL, paragraph 23 shapes its tone: “The general prejudice against Mr. Darcy is so violent, that it would be the death of half the good people in Meryton to attempt to place him in an amiable light.” Pick two words and explain their effect.
    Sample answer: The words “prejudice” and “violent” (Chapter XL, paragraph 23) make the tone heavy and deliberate rather than neutral. That weight points the reader to pride and self-knowledge: the sisters debate what to do with what they know. The author chooses them so the moment feels significant instead of passing.

23. [short · synthesis · DOK 4] Connect this passage from Chapter XL, paragraph 9 to the story's treatment of women's limited choices: “What a stroke was this for poor Jane! who would willingly have gone through the world without believing that so much wickedness existed in the whole race of mankind, as was here collected in one individual.” Use one other moment from the story as well.
    Sample answer: This passage (Chapter XL, paragraph 9) develops women's limited choices: the sisters debate what to do with what they know. Its words “individual” and “wickedness” carry that idea into this moment. The same concern returns in “Most earnestly did she labour to prove the probability of error, and seek to clear one, without involving the other.” (Chapter XL, paragraph 9), so the two passages read as a pattern, not a single moment. Together they show the story treating women's limited choices as central.

24. [mc · recall · DOK 1] In the line “The tumult of Elizabeth’s mind was allayed by this conversation.”, what does “allayed” most nearly mean?

    A. look down on with disdain

    B. a feeling of alarm or dread

    C. recall knowledge from memory; have a recollection

    D. lessen the intensity of or calm

    Key: D (lessen the intensity of or calm)

25. [mc · recall · DOK 1] In the line “He is now perhaps sorry for what he has done, and anxious to reestablish a character.”, what does “reestablish” most nearly mean?

    A. leads into a wrong idea

    B. to restore; to set up again

    C. bitterness and anger

    D. be false to; be dishonest with

    Key: B (to restore; to set up again)

26. [short · analysis · DOK 3] Analyze how the word choice in this passage from Chapter XL, paragraph 4 shapes its tone: “Indeed,’ replied Elizabeth, ‘I am heartily sorry for him; but he has other feelings which will probably soon drive away his regard for me.” Pick two words and explain their effect.
    Sample answer: The words “probably” and “feelings” (Chapter XL, paragraph 4) make the tone heavy and deliberate rather than neutral. That weight points the reader to pride and self-knowledge: the sisters debate what to do with what they know. The author chooses them so the moment feels significant instead of passing.

27. [short · synthesis · DOK 4] Connect this passage from Chapter XL, paragraph 10 to the story's treatment of marriage and money: “For my part, I am inclined to believe it all Mr. Darcy’s, but you shall do as you choose.” Use one other moment from the story as well.
    Sample answer: This passage (Chapter XL, paragraph 10) develops marriage and money: the sisters debate what to do with what they know. Its words “inclined” and “believe” carry that idea into this moment. The same concern returns in “Such a disappointment! and with the knowledge of your ill opinion too! and having to relate such a thing of his sister!” (Chapter XL, paragraph 12), so the two passages read as a pattern, not a single moment. Together they show the story treating marriage and money as central.

28. [mc · recall · DOK 1 · AP: AP-LIT.STR] What do the sisters decide?

    A. To write to Bingley

    B. To warn Lydia directly

    C. To tell their father

    D. Not to expose Wickham

    Key: D (Not to expose Wickham)

29. [short · inference · DOK 2 · AP: AP-LIT.CHR] What can you infer from this line? “There certainly was some great mismanagement in the education of those two young men” (Chapter XL, paragraph 15) Answer in two or three sentences with one detail.
    Sample answer: Elizabeth's joke about Darcy and Wickham. The evidence is “There certainly was some great mismanagement in the education of those two young men” (Chapter XL, paragraph 15). This develops first impressions: the sisters debate what to do with what they know.

30. [short · analysis · DOK 3 · AP: AP-LIT.LAN] Claim: Elizabeth now distinguishes between appearance and goodness. Explain how this evidence supports the claim: “One has got all the goodness, and the other all the appearance of it” (Chapter XL, paragraph 15).
    Sample answer: She tells Jane that "one has got all the goodness, and the other all the appearance of it," reversing her earlier judgment of Darcy and Wickham. The evidence is “One has got all the goodness, and the other all the appearance of it” (Chapter XL, paragraph 15) — Key line. This develops first impressions: the sisters debate what to do with what they know.

31. [short · analysis · DOK 3 · AP: AP-LIT.FIG] Analyze how the word choice in this passage from Chapter XL, paragraph 31 shapes its tone: “Well, well, I only hope it will last.” Pick two words and explain their effect.
    Sample answer: The words its wording (Chapter XL, paragraph 31) make the tone heavy and deliberate rather than neutral. That weight points the reader to class and social mobility: the sisters debate what to do with what they know. The author chooses them so the moment feels significant instead of passing.

32. [short · synthesis · DOK 4 · AP: AP-LIT.LAN] Connect this passage from Chapter XL, paragraph 27 to the story's treatment of marriage and money: “Well, Lizzy,’ said Mrs. Bennet one day, ‘what is your opinion now of this sad business of Jane’s?” Use one other moment from the story as well.
    Sample answer: This passage (Chapter XL, paragraph 27) develops marriage and money: the sisters debate what to do with what they know. Its words “business” and “opinion” carry that idea into this moment. The same concern returns in “I told my sister Philips so the other day.” (Chapter XL, paragraph 27), so the two passages read as a pattern, not a single moment. Together they show the story treating marriage and money as central.

33. [fill · recall · DOK 1 · AP: AP-LIT.FIG] Fill in the blank with the vocabulary word that fits: “It was some time, however, before a smile could be _____ from Jane.” Word bank: reestablish, mismanagement, extorted, incumbrance

Key: extorted

34. [mc · analysis · DOK 3 · AP: AP-LIT.CHR] Which literary element does this describe in “Chapter XL”? Elizabeth tells Jane of the proposal and the letter but not about Bingley; they decide not to expose Wickham.

    A. Metaphor

    B. Setting

    C. Theme

    D. Characterization

    Key: D (Characterization)

35. [short · synthesis · DOK 4 · AP: AP-LIT.LAN] Synthesis: trace how first impressions develops from Chapter XXXV to Chapter XL. Use one quotation from each.

    Sample answer: Earlier, in Chapter XXXV, paragraph 4, the text reads “Be not alarmed, Madam, on receiving this letter” — The letter's opening. In Chapter XL, “There certainly was some great mismanagement in the education of those two young men” (Chapter XL, paragraph 15) — Elizabeth's joke about Darcy and Wickham. The sisters debate what to do with what they know.

36. [fill · recall · DOK 1 · AP: AP-LIT.FIG] Fill in the blank with the vocabulary word that fits: “On the contrary every particular relative to his sister, was meant to be kept as much as possible to myself; and if I endeavour to _____ people as to the rest of his conduct, who will believe me?” Word bank: undeceive, mismanagement, incumbrance, reestablish

    Key: undeceive

37. [short · synthesis · DOK 4 · AP: AP-LIT.LAN] Evaluate this claim about the chapter: “Elizabeth now distinguishes between appearance and goodness.” Is it fully persuasive? Argue with evidence, including a passage that complicates it.

    Sample answer: The claim is persuasive in part. “One has got all the goodness, and the other all the appearance of it” (Chapter XL, paragraph 15) supports it: She tells Jane that "one has got all the goodness, and the other all the appearance of it," reversing her earlier judgment of Darcy and Wickham. But “Elizabeth’s impatience to acquaint Jane with what had happened could no longer be overcome” (Chapter XL, paragraph 1) complicates it: the line (Opening) shows the same issue from another side, and its “no” marks a limit or reversal the claim passes over. So the claim stands only in a qualified form: true of the chapter's main pattern, but not of every moment in it.

38. [mc · analysis · DOK 3 · Dual Credit (Indiana College Core): ICC-WC-1.5] Which literary element does this describe in “Chapter XL”? Jane tries to keep both men good.

    A. Alliteration

    B. Setting

    C. Dialogue

    D. Conflict

    Key: C (Dialogue)

39. [short · synthesis · DOK 4 · Program outcome: LeL-C2-LIT-1] Close reading: how do the diction and syntax of “One has got all the goodness, and the other all the appearance of it” (Chapter XL, paragraph 15) shape its meaning? Consider a second, competing reading.

    Sample answer: Key line. The evidence is “One has got all the goodness, and the other all the appearance of it” (Chapter XL, paragraph 15). This develops first impressions: the sisters debate what to do with what they know. The words “appearance” and “goodness” carry that meaning: they are the charged choices in the line, and changing either would soften the effect. She tells Jane that "one has got all the goodness, and the other all the appearance of it," reversing her earlier judgment of Darcy and Wickham.

40. [mc · inference · DOK 2 · Program outcome: LeL-C4-LIT-1] What does this passage most clearly show? “There certainly was some great mismanagement in the education of those two young men” (Chapter XL, paragraph 15)
    A. Elizabeth's joke about Darcy and Wickham.
    B. The narrator's blunt judgment of Mrs. Bennet, in three balanced phrases.
    C. Mrs. Bennet swears off Bingley moments before her husband reveals he has already visited him.
    D. Charlotte's cynical realism, foreshadowing her choice.

    Key: A (Elizabeth's joke about Darcy and Wickham.)

Rigor version	Items (in order)	Mix
Scaffolded support	1, 2, 3, 4, 5, 6, 7, 8, 9, 10, 11, 12, 13, 14, 15, 16	recall 9, inference 4, analysis 2, synthesis 1
HS Freshman	17, 18, 3, 19, 20, 4, 1, 21, 13, 11, 10, 12, 22, 14, 15, 23	recall 8, inference 4, analysis 3, synthesis 1
HS Sophomore	21, 7, 1, 24, 6, 18, 25, 12, 13, 11, 10, 22, 14, 26, 16, 27	recall 7, inference 4, analysis 3, synthesis 2
HS Junior	2, 21, 8, 20, 28, 11, 29, 10, 12, 13, 22, 30, 31, 14, 27, 32	recall 5, inference 5, analysis 4, synthesis 2
HS Senior	18, 1, 19, 33, 20, 10, 11, 13, 12, 26, 31, 14, 34, 35, 16, 27	recall 5, inference 4, analysis 4, synthesis 3
AP	2, 36, 4, 10, 11, 13, 12, 14, 31, 34, 26, 22, 23, 16, 27, 37	recall 3, inference 4, analysis 5, synthesis 4
College Freshman	36, 2, 4, 11, 29, 13, 12, 31, 30, 15, 38, 34, 35, 23, 37, 27	recall 3, inference 4, analysis 5, synthesis 4
College Sophomore	1, 36, 13, 10, 12, 11, 38, 14, 34, 31, 22, 16, 37, 27, 39, 32	recall 2, inference 4, analysis 5, synthesis 5
College Junior	9, 33, 18, 10, 12, 38, 15, 26, 31, 14, 37, 32, 35, 27, 16, 23	recall 3, inference 2, analysis 5, synthesis 6
College Senior	33, 36, 40, 12, 15, 34, 26, 30, 38, 14, 35, 27, 32, 37, 16, 23	recall 2, inference 2, analysis 6, synthesis 6
Graduate / PhD	36, 2, 10, 12, 34, 22, 14, 26, 31, 38, 32, 37, 23, 16, 35, 27	recall 2, inference 2, analysis 6, synthesis 6

Writing prompts (eleven rigor levels)

Scaffolded support (250 words; AP: see unit standards): Supported track (work from the passage your teacher selects). In “Chapter XL,” how does Austen show keeping secrets? Write a paragraph that states your claim, quotes two details from the passage, and explains how each detail supports your idea. Use the characterization you noticed as one piece of evidence.

HS Freshman (350 words; AP: see unit standards): In Chapter XL, how does Austen develop the idea of keeping secrets? State a clear claim, support it with two or three quotations, and explain how the characterization in the chapter helps build that idea.

HS Sophomore (450 words; AP: see unit standards): Analyze how Chapter XL develops the idea of keeping secrets. Make a precise claim, support it with at least three pieces of textual evidence, and explain how the author's use of characterization and foreshadowing shapes that idea. Address one possible counterclaim.

HS Junior (550 words; AP: see unit standards): Analyze how the structure of Chapter XL (where it begins, turns and ends) and its characterization shape the reader's understanding of keeping secrets. Identify one place where the text leaves matters uncertain and explain how that uncertainty adds to its meaning.

HS Senior (600 words; AP: see unit standards): Two readers disagree about what Chapter XL suggests about keeping secrets. Lay out two plausible interpretations, weigh the evidence for each (including the chapter's characterization and foreshadowing), and argue for the stronger one in a sustained, well-organized essay.

AP (650 words; AP: AP-LIT.CHR, AP-LIT.LAN): Write a literary argument in which you analyze how Jane Austen uses characterization in Chapter XL to complicate the reader's understanding of keeping secrets. Develop a defensible thesis, select evidence purposefully, and explain how specific choices of diction and syntax create meaning.

College Freshman (1000 words; AP: see unit standards): Situate Chapter XL within its historical and literary context and argue how the chapter's treatment of keeping secrets responds to that context. Engage with at least one secondary perspective (a critic, historian or the author's own statements), integrate quotations smoothly, and cite in MLA style.

College Sophomore (1250 words; AP: see unit standards): Read Chapter XL alongside the conventions of its genre and period. Argue how the chapter's handling of keeping secrets follows or bends those conventions, using the characterization as evidence, and test your reading against one published critic. Document two secondary sources in MLA.

College Junior (1500 words; AP: see unit standards): Apply a named critical approach (for example formalist, historicist, feminist, psychoanalytic or ecocritical) to Chapter XL and its treatment of keeping secrets. State your method, show what it reveals in the chapter's characterization and foreshadowing, and identify where the text resists it.

College Senior (2000 words; AP: see unit standards): Develop a research argument that reads Chapter XL as evidence for a larger claim about keeping secrets in Pride and Prejudice. Connect close reading of the chapter to the whole novel, engage at least four scholarly sources, and state precisely where your reading departs from theirs (Chicago style).

Graduate / PhD (2500 words; AP: see unit standards): Develop an original argument that reads Chapter XL as a hinge in the novel's larger treatment of keeping secrets. Position your reading within a named critical conversation (for example formalist, historicist, psychoanalytic, feminist or postcolonial approaches), account for the textual history where relevant, and articulate the stakes of your intervention for scholarship on Pride and Prejudice.

SAT-style questions

1. He is now perhaps sorry for what he has done, and anxious to reestablish a character.

   As used in the text, what does the word "reestablish" most nearly mean?

   A. coming upon by chance
   B. to restore; to set up again
   C. legally
   D. be fond of; be attached to

2. "And yet I meant to be uncommonly clever in taking so decided a dislike to him, without any reason. It is such a spur to one's genius, such an opening for wit to have a dislike of that kind. One may be continually abusive without saying anything just; but one cannot be always laughing at a man without now and then stumbling on something witty."

   Which choice best states a central concern of "Chapter XL"?

   A. Keeping secrets
   B. A journey and a mercenary suitor
   C. The second proposal
   D. Too late

SAT key: 1. B (to restore; to set up again); 2. A (Keeping secrets)

Lesson 42: Chapter XLI

Focus: parental failure

Objective: Students will analyze how characterization develops in "Chapter XLI" by writing a claim-evidence-reasoning paragraph that cites at least 2 quotations from the section, and will score at least 80% on the section quiz.

Standards: AP: see the unit standards

Content note (alcohol or drugs (mentioned)): This section mentions drinking or a drug ("…elder Miss Bennets alone were still able to eat, drink, and sleep, and pursue the usual course…"). Treat it as period custom or plot detail; name it plainly and don't glamorize it.
Student preview: This section mentions drinking or a drug.
Suggested language: "What does this detail add to the scene?"

Teacher only · spoilers

Lydia is invited to Brighton by Mrs. Forster. Elizabeth warns her father of the danger; Mr. Bennet lets Lydia go to keep peace. Elizabeth sees Wickham again and hints she knows the truth.

Background: Chaperones were expected to protect young women's reputations.

Significance: Mr. Bennet's indifference is a serious moral failing that leads to crisis.

Lesson plan and lecture script (90 minutes)

0–8 min · Bell-ringer · You do (8 min)
Students write to the bell-ringer, then pair-share.
Is Mr. Bennet responsible for what happens next? Write for five minutes. Starters: I think... because... / This connects to family and reputation because.... Content note before we start: This section mentions drinking or a drug.
Prompt: Is Mr. Bennet responsible for what happens next?
Sentence starters: I think… because… · This connects to family and reputation because…
Strong response: A strong response takes a position and anticipates this: the father's failure to act sets up the crisis.

8–18 min · Vocabulary with etymology notes · I do (10 min)
Five key words in context, with verified word histories.
Today's words: exuberant — joyously unrestrained; vexations — annoyances; worries; squeamish — too easily shocked or disgusted; sameness — the quality of being alike; resounding — ring or echo with sound.
Words: exuberant: joyously unrestrained · vexations: annoyances; worries · squeamish: too easily shocked or disgusted · sameness: the quality of being alike · resounding: ring or echo with sound

18–28 min · Background and context · I do (10 min)
Mini-lecture (read or adapt the script).
Chaperones were expected to protect young women's reputations. Mr. Bennet's indifference is a serious moral failing that leads to crisis. Characterization: Lydia is invited to Brighton; Elizabeth warns her father; he refuses to act. Dialogue: Mr. Bennet's reply shows his indolence. Watch for rank and condescension: Rank is displayed and enforced, above all at Rosings by Lady Catherine; Elizabeth refuses to be cowed. In this chapter: "Fitzwilliam's and Mr. Darcy's having both spent three weeks at Rosings, and asked him if he were acquainted with the former" (Chapter XLI, paragraph 26).

28–40 min · I do: modeled close reading · I do (12 min)
Model the close reading of the anchor quotation using the written think-aloud below.
First, meaning. I read "Lydia will never be easy till she has exposed herself in some public place or other" slowly and put it in my own words: Mr. Bennet says Lydia will never be easy until she embarrasses herself in public, and Brighton will cost the family little. Next, craft. I notice his cool, cynical reasoning, which treats disgrace as inevitable. The strongest word is "exposed": it predicts the disgrace he does nothing to prevent. Then, effect. Why does Mr. Bennet let Lydia go to Brighton? My answer: Mr. Bennet lets Lydia go to Brighton because he is lazy and wants peace at home, despite Elizabeth's warning; this failure leads directly to the elopement.

> Lydia will never be easy till she has exposed herself in some public place or other (Chapter XLI, paragraph 15)

Think-aloud: First, meaning. I read "Lydia will never be easy till she has exposed herself in some public place or other" slowly and put it in my own words: Mr. Bennet says Lydia will never be easy until she embarrasses herself in public, and Brighton will cost the family little. Next, craft. I notice his cool, cynical reasoning, which treats disgrace as inevitable. The strongest word is "exposed": it predicts the disgrace he does nothing to prevent. Then, effect. Why does Mr. Bennet let Lydia go to Brighton? My answer: Mr. Bennet lets Lydia go to Brighton because he is lazy and wants peace at home, despite Elizabeth's warning; this failure leads directly to the elopement.

40–55 min · We do: guided annotation · We do (15 min)
Guided analysis of a second quotation; expected answers given.
Ask: What words in this line stand out, and what do they suggest? Expected: He chooses peace over responsibility; it leads to the crisis. Ask: How does this line connect to family and reputation? Expected: The father's failure to act sets up the crisis. (His reason.)

> We shall have no peace at Longbourn if Lydia does not go to Brighton (Chapter XLI, paragraph 20)

Ask: What words in this line stand out, and what do they suggest?
Expected answer: He chooses peace over responsibility; it leads to the crisis.
Ask: How does this line connect to family and reputation?
Expected answer: The father's failure to act sets up the crisis. (His reason.)

55–70 min · You do: independent annotation · You do (15 min)
Independent annotation and a claim-evidence-reasoning paragraph (exemplar given).
Annotate the chapter for characterization, dialogue (three marks with a margin note each), then write one claim-evidence-reasoning paragraph: what does this chapter suggest about parental failure? Then start your writing prompt at your assigned level (HS Sophomore: Analyze how Chapter XLI develops the idea of parental failure. Make a precise claim, support it with at least three pieces of textual evidence, and explain how the author's use of characterization and theme shapes that idea. Address one possible counterclaim.) Exemplar: Mr. Bennet's refusal to restrain Lydia shows the cost of his detachment. When the text says "Lydia will never be easy till she has exposed herself in some public place or other" (Chapter XLI, paragraph 15), it shows this directly. He admits "Lydia will never be easy till she has exposed herself," yet lets her go because "we shall have no peace at Longbourn" otherwise.
Task: Annotate the chapter for characterization, dialogue (three marks with a margin note each), then write one claim-evidence-reasoning paragraph: what does this chapter suggest about parental failure? Then start your writing prompt at your assigned level (HS Sophomore: Analyze how Chapter XLI develops the idea of parental failure. Make a precise claim, support it with at least three pieces of textual evidence, and explain how the author's use of characterization and theme shapes that idea. Address one possible counterclaim.)
Exemplar: Mr. Bennet's refusal to restrain Lydia shows the cost of his detachment. When the text says "Lydia will never be easy till she has exposed herself in some public place or other" (Chapter XLI, paragraph 15), it shows this directly. He admits "Lydia will never be easy till she has exposed herself," yet lets her go because "we shall have no peace at Longbourn" otherwise.

70–80 min · Discussion · We do (10 min)
Structured discussion from the 30 tiered questions, with facilitation notes.
Anchor question: Is Mr. Bennet responsible for what happens next? Ask: what should Mr. Bennet have done?
Anchor question: Is Mr. Bennet responsible for what happens next?
Facilitation: Ask: what should Mr. Bennet have done?

80–87 min · Exit ticket / chapter quiz · You do (7 min)
Chapter quiz in the app and an exit ticket (answer given).
Chapter quiz in the app, then: In one sentence, what does this chapter suggest about parental failure? Support it with one short quotation. Model answer: Mr. Bennet's refusal to restrain Lydia shows the cost of his detachment. ("Lydia will never be easy till she has exposed herself in some public place or other", Chapter XLI, paragraph 15). Accept any defensible claim backed by a quotation from the chapter; the answer key for the quiz is in the Quiz section.
Exit ticket: In one sentence, what does this chapter suggest about parental failure? Support it with one short quotation.
Answer: Model answer: Mr. Bennet's refusal to restrain Lydia shows the cost of his detachment. ("Lydia will never be easy till she has exposed herself in some public place or other", Chapter XLI, paragraph 15). Accept any defensible claim backed by a quotation from the chapter; the answer key for the quiz is in the Quiz section.

> 87–90 min · Closure · I do (3 min)
> Summarize the lesson and preview the next reading.
> Today we saw how characterization shapes parental failure. Key takeaway: the father's failure to act sets up the crisis.

Total: 90 minutes.

Teacher analysis (spoilers)

Literary elements

- Characterization: Lydia is invited to Brighton; Elizabeth warns her father; he refuses to act.
- Dialogue: Mr. Bennet's reply shows his indolence.

Themes and how they develop

- family and reputation: the father's failure to act sets up the crisis.

Symbols and motifs

- rank and condescension: Rank is displayed and enforced, above all at Rosings by Lady Catherine; Elizabeth refuses to be cowed. In this chapter: “Fitzwilliam’s and Mr. Darcy’s having both spent three weeks at Rosings, and asked him if he were acquainted with the former” (Chapter XLI, paragraph 26).
- silence and reserve: What characters leave unsaid (Darcy's reserve, Jane's composure, Elizabeth's secrets) drives misunderstanding. In this chapter: “complexion and agitated look; for a few minutes he was silent; till, shaking off his embarrassment, he turned to her again, and” (Chapter XLI, paragraph 37).

Key quotations (checked against the reading text)

- “Lydia will never be easy till she has exposed herself in some public place or other” (Chapter XLI, paragraph 15) Mr. Bennet's acceptance.
- “Our importance, our respectability in the world, must be affected by the wild volatility” (Chapter XLI, paragraph 18) Elizabeth's warning.
- “We shall have no peace at Longbourn if Lydia does not go to Brighton” (Chapter XLI, paragraph 20) His reason.

Model claim-evidence-reasoning

Claim: Mr. Bennet's refusal to restrain Lydia shows the cost of his detachment.
Evidence: “Lydia will never be easy till she has exposed herself in some public place or other” (Chapter XLI, paragraph 15)
Reasoning: He admits "Lydia will never be easy till she has exposed herself," yet lets her go because "we shall have no peace at Longbourn" otherwise.

Vocabulary with etymology notes

Word		In context	Word history

	Definition (in this sentence)
exuberant (adjective)	joyously unrestrained	If you, my dear father, will not take the trouble of checking her exuberant spirits, and of teaching her that her present pursuits are not to be the business of her life, she will soon be beyond the reach of amendment.
vexations (noun)	annoyances; worries	It was not in her nature, however, to increase her vexations, by dwelling on them.
squeamish (adjective)	too easily shocked or disgusted	Such squeamish youths as cannot bear to be connected with a little absurdity, are not worth a regret.
sameness (noun)	the quality of being alike	She had even learnt to detect, in the very gentleness which had first delighted her, an affectation and a sameness to disgust and weary.
resounding (verb)	ring or echo with sound	Such were the kind of lamentations resounding perpetually through Longbourn-house.
alluding (verb)	make a more or less disguised reference to	I only fear that the sort of cautiousness, to which you, I imagine, have been alluding, is merely adopted on his visits to his aunt, of whose good opinion and judgment he stands much in awe.	"alluding": Origin of "allude": Middle French alluder; earlier Latin alludere. (Liber et Libri origin note, https://en.wiktionary.org/wiki/allude#Etymology)
invaluable (adjective)	having incalculable monetary, intellectual, or spiritual worth	This invaluable friend was a very young woman, and very lately married.
renewing (verb)	reestablish on a new, usually improved, basis or make new or like new	In his present behaviour to herself, moreover, she had a fresh source of displeasure, for the inclination he soon testified of renewing those attentions which had marked the early part of their acquaintance, could only serve, after what had since passed, to provoke her.	"renewing": Origin of "renew": possibly an English formation from re- + new. (Liber et Libri origin note, https://en.wiktionary.org/wiki/renew#Etymology)

Discussion questions

1. Is Mr. Bennet responsible for what happens next?
2. Where does characterization appear in this chapter, and what effect does it have? Point to one passage.
3. How does this chapter connect to the book's larger concern with first impressions and prejudice?

Classroom discussion questions (30, tiered)

Wait time after every question (3 s for DOK 1, 5 s for DOK 2, 8 to 10 s for DOK 3 and 4); think-pair-share on DOK 3 and 4; answer each response with a follow-up probe; close with student-generated questions. Focus sets by rigor level: Scaffolded support: 1, 2, 3, 4, 5, 6, 11, 12, 13, 14, 21, 22; HS Freshman: 1, 2, 3, 4, 5, 12, 13, 14, 15, 22, 23, 24; HS Sophomore: 1, 2, 3, 4, 13, 14, 15, 16, 17, 23, 24, 25; HS Junior: 1, 2, 3, 14, 15, 16, 17, 18, 24, 25, 26, 27; HS Senior: 1, 2, 3, 15, 16, 17, 18, 25, 26, 27, 28, 29; AP: 1, 2, 16, 17, 18, 19, 20, 26, 27, 28, 29, 30; College Freshman: 1, 2, 17, 18, 19, 20, 21, 22, 27, 28, 29, 30; College Sophomore: 1, 2, 11, 18, 19, 20, 21, 22, 23, 28, 29, 30; College Junior: 1, 11, 12, 19, 20, 21, 22, 23, 24, 25, 29, 30; College Senior: 1, 11, 12, 13, 20, 21, 22, 23, 24, 25, 26, 30; Graduate / PhD: 1, 11, 12, 13, 21, 22, 23, 24, 25, 26, 27, 28

Literal / recall

1. Who invites Lydia to Brighton? [DOK 1 · coldCallWithSupport · wait 3 s · AP: unit standards] Look for: Mrs. Forster
2. What does Elizabeth warn her father? [DOK 1 · turnAndTalk · wait 3 s · AP: unit standards] Look for: Lydia is in danger of disgrace
3. Why does Mr. Bennet allow it? [DOK 1 · coldCallWithSupport · wait 3 s · AP: unit standards] Look for: To keep peace at home
4. How does Elizabeth behave toward Wickham? [DOK 1 · turnAndTalk · wait 3 s · AP: unit standards] Look for: She hints she knows the truth
5. What theme does this chapter show? [DOK 1 · coldCallWithSupport · wait 3 s · AP: unit standards] Look for: Parental neglect
6. Retell the three most important events of "Chapter XLI" in order, in one sentence each. [DOK 1 · turnAndTalk · wait 3 s · AP: unit standards] Look for: Lydia is invited to Brighton by Mrs. Forster. Elizabeth warns her father of the danger; Mr. Bennet lets Lydia go to keep peace. Elizabeth sees Wickham again and hints she knows the truth.
7. Which characters appear or are mentioned in "Chapter XLI"? Name two and one thing each says or does. [DOK 1 · coldCallWithSupport · wait 3 s · AP: unit standards] Look for: Names and actions taken from the chapter; check against the teacher summary.
8. Where and when does "Chapter XLI" take place? Point to the line that tells you. [DOK 1 · turnAndTalk · wait 3 s · AP: unit standards] Look for: A place/time detail quoted from the chapter.
9. Reread: "If you, my dear father, will not take the trouble of checking her exuberant spirits, and of teaching her that her present pursuits are not to be the business of her life, she will soon be beyond the reach of amendment." What does "exuberant" mean here, and what is literally happening in this line? [DOK 1 · turnAndTalk · wait 3 s · AP: unit standards] Look for: exuberant: joyously unrestrained.
10. Reread: "It was not in her nature, however, to increase her vexations, by dwelling on them." What does "vexations" mean here, and what is literally happening in this line? [DOK 1 · turnAndTalk · wait 3 s · AP: unit standards] Look for: vexations: annoyances; worries.

Inferential / analytical

1. What does "Chapter XLI" suggest about parental failure? State the inference and the line that supports it. [DOK 2 · thinkPairShare · wait 5 s · AP-LIT.LAN] Look for: Mr. Bennet's indifference is a serious moral failing that leads to crisis.
2. Find one example of characterization in this chapter. What does it reveal that a plain statement would not? [DOK 2 · followUp · wait 5 s · AP-LIT.CHR] Look for: Look for what characters say, do and think, and how others react to them.

3. How does the theme in this chapter shape what we understand about parental failure? [DOK 3 · thinkPairShare · wait 8 s · AP-LIT.LAN] Look for: Look for statements or moments that connect to the book's big ideas.
   Answer guidance: A defensible line of argument: Mr. Bennet's refusal to restrain Lydia shows the cost of his detachment. Useful evidence: “Lydia will never be easy till she has exposed herself in some public place or other” (Chapter XLI, paragraph 15): Mr. Bennet's acceptance. Theme link: the father's failure to act sets up the crisis. Credit any position that is supported by quotation and reasoning; push one-sided answers to address the strongest counterpoint.
4. In the passage that begins “Such were the kind of lamentations resounding perpetually through Longbourn-house.”, why might Austen have chosen these particular words? Pick two and explain their connotations. [DOK 2 · followUp · wait 5 s · AP-LIT.FIG] Look for: Diction analysis of two words in the anchor passage.
5. What causes the main turn in “Chapter XLI”, and what effect is it likely to have on what follows? [DOK 2 · followUp · wait 5 s · AP-LIT.STR] Look for: Lydia is invited to Brighton by Mrs. Forster. Elizabeth warns her father of the danger; Mr. Bennet lets Lydia go to keep peace. Elizabeth sees Wickham again and hints she knows the truth.
6. How does “Chapter XLI” build on “Chapter XL”? Name one link of cause and effect. [DOK 3 · thinkPairShare · wait 8 s · AP-LIT.STR] Look for: A causal or structural link between this and the previous chapter.
   Answer guidance: A defensible line of argument: Mr. Bennet's refusal to restrain Lydia shows the cost of his detachment. Useful evidence: “Our importance, our respectability in the world, must be affected by the wild volatility” (Chapter XLI, paragraph 18): Elizabeth's warning. Theme link: the father's failure to act sets up the crisis. Credit any position that is supported by quotation and reasoning; push one-sided answers to address the strongest counterpoint.
7. What can we infer about a character's motives from what they say and do here, as opposed to what they claim? [DOK 3 · followUp · wait 8 s · AP-LIT.CHR] Look for: An inference about motive supported by a quoted line.
   Answer guidance: A defensible line of argument: Mr. Bennet's refusal to restrain Lydia shows the cost of his detachment. Useful evidence: “We shall have no peace at Longbourn if Lydia does not go to Brighton” (Chapter XLI, paragraph 20): His reason. On characterization: Lydia is invited to Brighton; Elizabeth warns her father; he refuses to act. Credit any position that is supported by quotation and reasoning; push one-sided answers to address the strongest counterpoint.
8. The bell-ringer asked: “Is Mr. Bennet responsible for what happens next?” Now that we have read closely, how would you revise your first answer, and which line changed your mind? [DOK 2 · thinkPairShare · wait 5 s · AP-LIT.LAN] Look for: A revised answer anchored in the text.
9. Where does foreshadowing appear, and how does it connect this chapter to the larger concern with first impressions and prejudice? [DOK 3 · followUp · wait 8 s · AP-LIT.STR] Look for: Look for hints, warnings or images that point to later events.
   Answer guidance: A defensible line of argument: Mr. Bennet's refusal to restrain Lydia shows the cost of his detachment. Useful evidence: “Lydia will never be easy till she has exposed herself in some public place or other” (Chapter XLI, paragraph 15): Mr. Bennet's acceptance. Theme link: the father's failure to act sets up the crisis. Credit any position that is supported by quotation and reasoning; push one-sided answers to address the strongest counterpoint.
10. Background: Chaperones were expected to protect young women's reputations. How does knowing this change the way you read one moment in the chapter? [DOK 3 · thinkPairShare · wait 8 s · AP-LIT.SET] Look for: A specific moment reread in light of the context.
    Answer guidance: A defensible line of argument: Mr. Bennet's refusal to restrain Lydia shows the cost of his detachment. Useful evidence: “Our importance, our respectability in the world, must be affected by the wild volatility" (Chapter XLI, paragraph 18): Elizabeth's warning. Theme link: the father's failure to act sets up the crisis. Credit any position that is supported by quotation and reasoning; push one-sided answers to address the strongest counterpoint.

Evaluative / synthesis / creative

1. A critic might argue: "Mr. Bennet's indifference is a serious moral failing that leads to crisis." How far do you agree? Take a stand and defend it with two lines from the chapter. [DOK 3 · fourCorners · wait 8 s · AP-LIT.LAN] Look for: A defended position with evidence and one counterpoint.
   Answer guidance: A defensible line of argument: Mr. Bennet's refusal to restrain Lydia shows the cost of his detachment. Useful evidence: "We shall have no peace at Longbourn if Lydia does not go to Brighton" (Chapter XLI, paragraph 20): His reason. Theme link: the father's failure to act sets up the crisis. Credit any position that is supported by quotation and reasoning; push one-sided answers to address the strongest counterpoint.
2. Which character in this chapter acts most wisely, and which least? Judge them by a standard you name. [DOK 3 · thinkPairShare · wait 8 s · AP-LIT.CHR, AP-LIT.LAN] Look for: An evaluation using an explicit criterion and evidence.
   Answer guidance: A defensible line of argument: Mr. Bennet's refusal to restrain Lydia shows the cost of his detachment. Useful evidence: "Lydia will never be easy till she has exposed herself in some public place or other" (Chapter XLI, paragraph 15): Mr. Bennet's acceptance. On characterization: Lydia is invited to Brighton; Elizabeth warns her father; he refuses to act. Credit any position that is supported by quotation and reasoning; push one-sided answers to address the strongest counterpoint.
3. Rewrite one moment of "Chapter XLI" from the point of view of a different character. What does the new angle reveal or hide about parental failure? [DOK 4 · thinkPairShare · wait 8 s · AP-LIT.LAN, AP-LIT.NAR] Look for: A creative product with a rationale tied to the text.
   Answer guidance: A defensible line of argument: Mr. Bennet's refusal to restrain Lydia shows the cost of his detachment. Useful evidence: "Our importance, our respectability in the world, must be affected by the wild volatility" (Chapter XLI, paragraph 18): Elizabeth's warning. Theme link: the father's failure to act sets up the crisis. Credit any position that is supported by quotation and reasoning; push one-sided answers to address the strongest counterpoint.
4. Write three questions of your own about "Chapter XLI": one recall, one "why/how", and one "should/what if". Trade with a partner and answer theirs. [DOK 3 · studentGenerated · wait 8 s · AP-LIT.LAN] Look for: Student-generated questions at three levels.
   Answer guidance: A defensible line of argument: Mr. Bennet's refusal to restrain Lydia shows the cost of his detachment. Useful evidence: "We shall have no peace at Longbourn if Lydia does not go to Brighton" (Chapter XLI, paragraph 20): His reason. Theme link: the father's failure to act sets up the crisis. Credit any position that is supported by quotation and reasoning; push one-sided answers to address the strongest counterpoint.
5. Connect this chapter to pride and self-knowledge: is the link strong or weak so far? What would Austen need to show next to strengthen it? [DOK 4 · socraticCircle · wait 8 s · AP-LIT.LAN] Look for: A judgment of thematic development across the work.
   Answer guidance: A defensible line of argument: Mr. Bennet's refusal to restrain Lydia shows the cost of his detachment. Useful evidence: "Lydia will never be easy till she has exposed herself in some public place or other" (Chapter XLI, paragraph 15): Mr. Bennet's acceptance. Theme link: the father's failure to act sets up the crisis. Credit any position that is supported by quotation and reasoning; push one-sided answers to address the strongest counterpoint.

6. Is the characterization in this chapter effective, or does it feel heavy-handed? Evaluate it as a reader would in a review. [DOK 3 · fourCorners · wait 8 s · AP-LIT.CHR, AP-LIT.LAN] Look for: An evaluative judgment with criteria and evidence.

   Answer guidance: A defensible line of argument: Mr. Bennet's refusal to restrain Lydia shows the cost of his detachment. Useful evidence: “Our importance, our respectability in the world, must be affected by the wild volatility” (Chapter XLI, paragraph 18): Elizabeth's warning. On characterization: Lydia is invited to Brighton; Elizabeth warns her father; he refuses to act. Credit any position that is supported by quotation and reasoning; push one-sided answers to address the strongest counterpoint.

7. Compare how “Chapter XLI” treats parental failure with how another text, film or event you know treats a similar idea. What does Pride and Prejudice see that the other misses? [DOK 4 · socraticCircle · wait 8 s · AP-LIT.LAN] Look for: A cross-text synthesis.

   Answer guidance: A defensible line of argument: Mr. Bennet's refusal to restrain Lydia shows the cost of his detachment. Useful evidence: “We shall have no peace at Longbourn if Lydia does not go to Brighton” (Chapter XLI, paragraph 20): His reason. Theme link: the father's failure to act sets up the crisis. Credit any position that is supported by quotation and reasoning; push one-sided answers to address the strongest counterpoint.

8. Predict what “Chapter XLII” will bring, using two clues from this chapter. After reading, evaluate your prediction. [DOK 3 · thinkPairShare · wait 8 s · AP-LIT.LAN, AP-LIT.STR] Look for: A prediction or judgment justified with textual clues.

   Answer guidance: A defensible line of argument: Mr. Bennet's refusal to restrain Lydia shows the cost of his detachment. Useful evidence: “Lydia will never be easy till she has exposed herself in some public place or other” (Chapter XLI, paragraph 15): Mr. Bennet's acceptance. Theme link: the father's failure to act sets up the crisis. Credit any position that is supported by quotation and reasoning; push one-sided answers to address the strongest counterpoint.

9. Design a one-paragraph modern adaptation of this chapter (setting, characters, conflict). What must stay the same for it to still be about parental failure? [DOK 4 · thinkPairShare · wait 8 s · AP-LIT.LAN] Look for: A creative transfer that keeps the core idea.

   Answer guidance: A defensible line of argument: Mr. Bennet's refusal to restrain Lydia shows the cost of his detachment. Useful evidence: “Our importance, our respectability in the world, must be affected by the wild volatility” (Chapter XLI, paragraph 18): Elizabeth's warning. Theme link: the father's failure to act sets up the crisis. Credit any position that is supported by quotation and reasoning; push one-sided answers to address the strongest counterpoint.

10. What question would you most like to ask Jane Austen about this chapter, and what answer do you think the text itself gives? [DOK 4 · studentGenerated · wait 8 s · AP-LIT.LAN] Look for: A student-generated question answered from evidence.

    Answer guidance: A defensible line of argument: Mr. Bennet's refusal to restrain Lydia shows the cost of his detachment. Useful evidence: “We shall have no peace at Longbourn if Lydia does not go to Brighton” (Chapter XLI, paragraph 20): His reason. Theme link: the father's failure to act sets up the crisis. Credit any position that is supported by quotation and reasoning; push one-sided answers to address the strongest counterpoint.

Annotation focus

- Characterization: look for what characters say, do and think, and how others react to them (anchor passage in the We do segment)
- Also notice Theme: statements or moments that connect to the book's big ideas
- Also notice Foreshadowing: hints, warnings or images that point to later events

Chapter quiz: item bank (all eleven rigor versions)

1. [fill · recall · DOK 1] Fill in the blank with the vocabulary word that fits: "In his present behaviour to herself, moreover, she had a fresh source of displeasure, for the inclination he soon testified of _____ those attentions which had marked the early part of their acquaintance, could only serve, after what had since passed, to…" Word bank: squeamish, exuberant, renewing, vexations
   Key: renewing
2. [fill · recall · DOK 1] Fill in the blank with the vocabulary word that fits: "I only fear that the sort of cautiousness, to which you, I imagine, have been _____, is merely adopted on his visits to his aunt, of whose good opinion and judgment he stands much in awe." Word bank: vexations, alluding, squeamish, exuberant
   Key: alluding
3. [mc · recall · DOK 1] What theme does this chapter show?
   A. Military glory
   B. Parental neglect
   C. Religion
   D. Love of travel

   Key: B (Parental neglect)
4. [fill · recall · DOK 1] Complete the quotation from Chapter XLI, paragraph 35: "While she spoke, Wickham looked as if _____ knowing whether to rejoice over her words, or to distrust their meaning." Word bank: essentials, together, affectionately, scarcely
   Key: scarcely
5. [fill · recall · DOK 1] Fill in the blank with the vocabulary word that fits: "This _____ friend was a very young woman, and very lately married." Word bank: invaluable, vexations, squeamish, exuberant
   Key: invaluable
6. [fill · recall · DOK 1] Fill in the blank with the vocabulary word that fits: "Such were the kind of lamentations _____ perpetually through Longbourn-house." Word bank: squeamish, vexations, resounding, exuberant
   Key: resounding
7. [mc · recall · DOK 1] In the line "It was not in her nature, however, to increase her vexations, by dwelling on them.", what does "vexations" most nearly mean?
   A. making impossible
   B. hurt the pride of; humiliated
   C. annoyances; worries
   D. showing; giving evidence of

   Key: C (annoyances; worries)

8. [mc · recall · DOK 1] Which word completes this sentence from Chapter XLI, paragraph 13? “I cannot see why Mrs. Forster should not ask me as well as Lydia,’ said she, ‘though I am not her _____ friend.”

   A. particular

   B. neighbourhood

   C. intermission

   D. insensibility

   Key: A (particular)

9. [mc · recall · DOK 1] In the line “She had even learnt to detect, in the very gentleness which had first delighted her, an affectation and a sameness to disgust and weary.”, what does “sameness” most nearly mean?

   A. outvoted; overridden

   B. the event of dying or departure from life

   C. administer or bestow, as in small portions

   D. the quality of being alike

   Key: D (the quality of being alike)

10. [short · inference · DOK 2] What can you infer from this line? “Our importance, our respectability in the world, must be affected by the wild volatility” (Chapter XLI, paragraph 18) Answer in two or three sentences with one detail.

    Sample answer: Elizabeth's warning. The evidence is “Our importance, our respectability in the world, must be affected by the wild volatility” (Chapter XLI, paragraph 18). This develops family and reputation: the father's failure to act sets up the crisis.

11. [mc · inference · DOK 2] Which choice best states a central concern of “Chapter XLI”?

    A. A revelation from the colonel

    B. Parental failure

    C. Doubts and preparations

    D. The accomplished woman

    Key: B (Parental failure)

12. [short · inference · DOK 2] What does this passage from Chapter XLI, paragraph 1 reveal about the character or situation? “The elder Miss Bennets alone were still able to eat, drink, and sleep, and pursue the usual course of their employments.” Answer in two or three sentences with one detail.

    Sample answer: The passage (Chapter XLI, paragraph 1) shows the situation turning on first impressions and prejudice: the father's failure to act sets up the crisis. The words “employments” and “pursue” are the proof, because they show how the moment looks to the people in it. They suggest more than the narrator states outright.

13. [short · inference · DOK 2] What does this passage from Chapter XLI, paragraph 33 reveal about the character or situation? “And pray may I ask?’ but checking himself, he added in a gayer tone, ‘Is it in address that he improves?” Answer in two or three sentences with one detail.

    Sample answer: The passage (Chapter XLI, paragraph 33) shows the situation turning on first impressions and prejudice: the father's failure to act sets up the crisis. The words “improves” and “checking” are the proof, because they show how the moment looks to the people in it. They suggest more than the narrator states outright.

14. [short · analysis · DOK 3] Analyze how the word choice in this passage from Chapter XLI, paragraph 37 shapes its tone: “Wickham’s alarm now appeared in a heightened complexion and agitated look; for a few minutes he was silent; till, shaking off his embarrassment, he turned to her again, and said in the gentlest of accents

—” Pick two words and explain their effect.

Sample answer: The words “embarrassment” and “complexion” (Chapter XLI, paragraph 37) make the tone heavy and deliberate rather than neutral. That weight points the reader to class and social mobility: the father's failure to act sets up the crisis. The author chooses them so the moment feels significant instead of passing.

15. [mc · analysis · DOK 3] Which literary element does this describe in “Chapter XLI”? Mr. Bennet's reply shows his indolence.

    A. Plot

    B. Setting

    C. Conflict

    D. Dialogue

    Key: D (Dialogue)

16. [short · synthesis · DOK 4] Connect this passage from Chapter XLI, paragraph 22 to the story's treatment of women's limited choices: “She saw all the glories of the camp; its tents stretched forth in beauteous uniformity of lines, crowded with the young and the gay, and dazzling with scarlet; and to complete the view, she saw herself seated beneath a tent, tenderly…” Use one other moment from the story as well.

    Sample answer: This passage (Chapter XLI, paragraph 22) develops women's limited choices: the father's failure to act sets up the crisis. Its words “uniformity” and “stretched” carry that idea into this moment. The same concern returns in “She saw with the creative eye of fancy, the streets of that gay bathing place covered with officers.” (Chapter XLI, paragraph 22), so the two passages read as a pattern, not a single moment. Together they show the story treating women's limited choices as central.

17. [fill · recall · DOK 1] Complete the quotation from Chapter XLI, paragraph 1: “It was the last of the regiment’s stay in Meryton, and all the young ladies in the _____ were drooping apace.” Word bank: scarcely, neighbourhood, acquaintance, indifference

    Key: neighbourhood

18. [mc · recall · DOK 1] Why does Mr. Bennet allow it?

    A. He trusts Lydia

    B. He wants her married

    C. To keep peace at home

    D. He is ill

    Key: C (To keep peace at home)

19. [mc · recall · DOK 1] In the line “Such squeamish youths as cannot bear to be connected with a little absurdity, are not worth a regret.”, what does “squeamish” most nearly mean?

    A. turned to stone

    B. in a polite manner

    C. attached

    D. too easily shocked or disgusted

    Key: D (too easily shocked or disgusted)

20. [mc · recall · DOK 1] In the line “If you, my dear father, will not take the trouble of checking her exuberant spirits, and of teaching her that her present pursuits are not to be the business of her life, she will soon be beyond the reach of amendment.”, what does “exuberant” most nearly mean?

    A. a feeling of alarm or dread

B. drawn out with difficulty

C. joyously unrestrained

D. in a polite manner

Key: C (joyously unrestrained)

21. [mc · recall · DOK 1] What does Elizabeth warn her father?

A. Lydia is ill

B. Wickham is rich

C. Lydia is in danger of disgrace

D. The house is entailed

Key: C (Lydia is in danger of disgrace)

22. [short · inference · DOK 2] What can you infer from this line? “Lydia will never be easy till she has exposed herself in some public place or other” (Chapter XLI, paragraph 15) Answer in two or three sentences with one detail.

Sample answer: Mr. Bennet's acceptance. The evidence is “Lydia will never be easy till she has exposed herself in some public place or other” (Chapter XLI, paragraph 15). This develops family and reputation: the father's failure to act sets up the crisis.

23. [short · analysis · DOK 3] Analyze how the word choice in this passage from Chapter XLI, paragraph 14 shapes its tone: “She represented to him all the improprieties of Lydia’s general behaviour, the little advantage she could derive from the friendship of such a woman as Mrs. Forster, and the probability of her being yet more imprudent with such a companion…” Pick two words and explain their effect.

Sample answer: The words “improprieties” and “probability” (Chapter XLI, paragraph 14) make the tone heavy and deliberate rather than neutral. That weight points the reader to pride and self-knowledge: the father's failure to act sets up the crisis. The author chooses them so the moment feels significant instead of passing.

24. [short · analysis · DOK 3] Analyze how the word choice in this passage from Chapter XLI, paragraph 40 shapes its tone: “Mrs. Bennet was diffuse in her good wishes for the felicity of her daughter, and impressive in her injunctions that she would not miss the opportunity of enjoying herself as much as possible; advice, which there was every reason to believe…” Pick two words and explain their effect.

Sample answer: The words “opportunity” and “injunctions” (Chapter XLI, paragraph 40) make the tone heavy and deliberate rather than neutral. That weight points the reader to pride and self-knowledge: the father's failure to act sets up the crisis. The author chooses them so the moment feels significant instead of passing.

25. [short · synthesis · DOK 4] Connect this passage from Chapter XLI, paragraph 23 to the story's treatment of marriage and money: “Lydia’s going to Brighton was all that consoled her for the melancholy conviction of her husband’s never intending to go there himself.” Use one other moment from the story as well.

Sample answer: This passage (Chapter XLI, paragraph 23) develops marriage and money: the father's failure to act sets up the crisis. Its words “conviction” and “melancholy” carry that idea into this moment. The same concern returns in “On the very last day of the regiment’s remaining in Meryton, he dined with others of the officers at Longbourn; and so…” (Chapter XLI, paragraph 26), so the two passages read as a pattern, not a single moment. Together they show the story treating marriage and money as central.

26. [mc · recall · DOK 1] Which word completes this sentence from Chapter XLI, paragraph 24? “But they were entirely ignorant of what had passed; and their raptures continued with little _____ to the very day of Lydia’s leaving home.”

A. cheerfulness

B. intermission

C. inclination

D. neighbourhood

Key: B (intermission)

27. [mc · recall · DOK 1] Who invites Lydia to Brighton?

A. Lady Catherine

B. Mrs. Forster

C. Charlotte

D. Mrs. Gardiner

Key: B (Mrs. Forster)

28. [mc · analysis · DOK 3] Which literary element does this describe in "Chapter XLI"? Lydia is invited to Brighton; Elizabeth warns her father; he refuses to act.

A. Hyperbole

B. Allusion

C. Theme

D. Characterization

Key: D (Characterization)

29. [short · synthesis · DOK 4] Synthesis: trace how family and reputation develops from Chapter XXXIX to Chapter XLI. Use one quotation from each.

Sample answer: Earlier, in Chapter XXXIX, paragraph 1, the text reads "It was the second week in May, in which the three young ladies set out together from Gracechurch-street" — Opening. In Chapter XLI, "Lydia will never be easy till she has exposed herself in some public place or other" (Chapter XLI, paragraph 15) — Mr. Bennet's acceptance. The father's failure to act sets up the crisis.

30. [fill · recall · DOK 1 · AP: AP-LIT.FIG] Complete the quotation from Chapter XLI, paragraph 22: "In Lydia's _____, a visit to Brighton comprised every possibility of earthly happiness." Word bank: inclination, imagination, together, understood

Key: imagination

31. [mc · recall · DOK 1 · AP: AP-LIT.FIG] Which word completes this sentence from Chapter XLI, paragraph 39? "The rest of the evening passed with the appearance, on his side, of usual _____, but with no farther attempt to distinguish Elizabeth; and they parted at last with mutual civility, and possibly a mutual desire of never meeting again."

A. insensibility

B. neighbourhood

C. scarcely

D. cheerfulness

Key: D (cheerfulness)

32. [short · analysis · DOK 3 · AP: AP-LIT.FIG] Analyze how the word choice in this passage from Chapter XLI, paragraph 12 shapes its tone: "Wholly inattentive to her sister's feelings, Lydia flew about the house in restless ecstasy, calling for everyone's congratulations, and laughing and talking with more violence than ever; whilst the luckless Kitty continued in the parlour…" Pick two words and explain their effect.

Sample answer: The words "congratulations" and "unreasonable" (Chapter XLI, paragraph 12) make the tone heavy and deliberate rather than neutral. That weight points the reader to class and social mobility: the father's failure to act sets up the crisis. The author chooses them so the moment feels significant instead of passing.

33. [short · analysis · DOK 3 · AP: AP-LIT.FIG] Analyze the word choice in “We shall have no peace at Longbourn if Lydia does not go to Brighton” (Chapter XLI, paragraph 20). Pick two words and explain what they suggest.
    Sample answer: His reason. The evidence is “We shall have no peace at Longbourn if Lydia does not go to Brighton” (Chapter XLI, paragraph 20). This develops family and reputation: the father's failure to act sets up the crisis. The words “shall” and “peace” carry that meaning: they are the charged choices in the line, and changing either would soften the effect.
34. [short · synthesis · DOK 4 · AP: AP-LIT.FIG] Close reading: how do the diction and syntax of “Lydia will never be easy till she has exposed herself in some public place or other” (Chapter XLI, paragraph 15) shape its meaning? Consider a second, competing reading.
    Sample answer: Mr. Bennet's acceptance. The evidence is “Lydia will never be easy till she has exposed herself in some public place or other” (Chapter XLI, paragraph 15). This develops family and reputation: the father's failure to act sets up the crisis. The words “exposed” and “herself” carry that meaning: they are the charged choices in the line, and changing either would soften the effect. He admits "Lydia will never be easy till she has exposed herself," yet lets her go because "we shall have no peace at Longbourn" otherwise.
35. [fill · recall · DOK 1 · Program outcome: LeL-C2-LIT-1] Complete the quotation from Chapter XLI, paragraph 18: “Our importance, our _____ in the world, must be affected by the wild volatility”
    Key: respectability
36. [short · synthesis · DOK 4 · Program outcome: LeL-C2-LIT-1] Close reading: how do the diction and syntax of “Our importance, our respectability in the world, must be affected by the wild volatility” (Chapter XLI, paragraph 18) shape its meaning? Consider a second, competing reading.
    Sample answer: Elizabeth's warning. The evidence is “Our importance, our respectability in the world, must be affected by the wild volatility” (Chapter XLI, paragraph 18). This develops family and reputation: the father's failure to act sets up the crisis. The words “respectability” and “importance” carry that meaning: they are the charged choices in the line, and changing either would soften the effect. He admits "Lydia will never be easy till she has exposed herself," yet lets her go because "we shall have no peace at Longbourn" otherwise.
37. [short · analysis · DOK 3 · Program outcome: LeL-C3-LIT-1] Claim: Mr. Bennet's refusal to restrain Lydia shows the cost of his detachment. Explain how this evidence supports the claim: “Lydia will never be easy till she has exposed herself in some public place or other” (Chapter XLI, paragraph 15).
    Sample answer: He admits "Lydia will never be easy till she has exposed herself," yet lets her go because "we shall have no peace at Longbourn" otherwise. The evidence is “Lydia will never be easy till she has exposed herself in some public place or other” (Chapter XLI, paragraph 15) — Mr. Bennet's acceptance. This develops family and reputation: the father's failure to act sets up the crisis.

Rigor version	Items (in order)	Mix
Scaffolded support	1, 2, 3, 4, 5, 6, 7, 8, 9, 10, 11, 12, 13, 14, 15, 16	recall 9, inference 4, analysis 2, synthesis 1
HS Freshman	17, 18, 19, 20, 1, 21, 5, 7, 12, 13, 22, 11, 23, 24, 15, 25	recall 8, inference 4, analysis 3, synthesis 1
HS Sophomore	5, 26, 6, 19, 9, 18, 3, 27, 12, 11, 13, 23, 28, 14, 16, 29	recall 8, inference 3, analysis 3, synthesis 2
HS Junior	7, 2, 3, 30, 27, 31, 18, 13, 12, 11, 32, 28, 33, 15, 16, 25

		recall 7, inference 3, analysis 4, synthesis 2
HS Senior	1, 6, 31, 27, 7, 13, 12, 10, 11, 28, 33, 23, 24, 29, 16, 25	recall 5, inference 4, analysis 4, synthesis 3
AP	27, 30, 17, 21, 11, 10, 13, 23, 24, 32, 28, 14, 34, 25, 16, 29	recall 4, inference 3, analysis 5, synthesis 4
College Freshman	7, 26, 17, 6, 13, 11, 12, 14, 32, 28, 33, 23, 24, 16, 25, 29	recall 4, inference 3, analysis 6, synthesis 3
College Sophomore	35, 18, 6, 27, 11, 12, 24, 33, 32, 23, 28, 14, 25, 16, 36, 29	recall 4, inference 2, analysis 6, synthesis 4
College Junior	6, 20, 2, 11, 13, 33, 28, 23, 32, 37, 15, 24, 25, 29, 16, 36	recall 3, inference 2, analysis 7, synthesis 4
College Senior	3, 6, 2, 11, 15, 14, 28, 23, 33, 32, 37, 24, 36, 29, 25, 16	recall 3, inference 1, analysis 8, synthesis 4
Graduate / PhD	1, 27, 5, 13, 11, 33, 15, 14, 23, 32, 24, 28, 29, 16, 25, 36	recall 3, inference 2, analysis 7, synthesis 4

Writing prompts (eleven rigor levels)

Scaffolded support (250 words; AP: see unit standards): Supported track (work from the passage your teacher selects). In “Chapter XLI,” how does Austen show parental failure? Write a paragraph that states your claim, quotes two details from the passage, and explains how each detail supports your idea. Use the characterization you noticed as one piece of evidence.

HS Freshman (350 words; AP: see unit standards): In Chapter XLI, how does Austen develop the idea of parental failure? State a clear claim, support it with two or three quotations, and explain how the characterization in the chapter helps build that idea.

HS Sophomore (450 words; AP: see unit standards): Analyze how Chapter XLI develops the idea of parental failure. Make a precise claim, support it with at least three pieces of textual evidence, and explain how the author's use of characterization and theme shapes that idea. Address one possible counterclaim.

HS Junior (550 words; AP: see unit standards): Analyze how the structure of Chapter XLI (where it begins, turns and ends) and its characterization shape the reader's understanding of parental failure. Identify one place where the text leaves matters uncertain and explain how that uncertainty adds to its meaning.

HS Senior (600 words; AP: see unit standards): Two readers disagree about what Chapter XLI suggests about parental failure. Lay out two plausible interpretations, weigh the evidence for each (including the chapter's characterization and theme), and argue for the stronger one in a sustained, well-organized essay.

AP (650 words; AP: AP-LIT.CHR, AP-LIT.LAN): Write a literary argument in which you analyze how Jane Austen uses characterization in Chapter XLI to complicate the reader's understanding of parental failure. Develop a defensible thesis, select evidence purposefully, and explain how specific choices of diction and syntax create meaning.

College Freshman (1000 words; AP: see unit standards): Situate Chapter XLI within its historical and literary context and argue how the chapter's treatment of parental failure responds to that context. Engage with at least one secondary perspective (a critic, historian or the author's own statements), integrate quotations smoothly, and cite in MLA style.

College Sophomore (1250 words; AP: see unit standards): Read Chapter XLI alongside the conventions of its genre and period. Argue how the chapter's handling of parental failure follows or bends those conventions, using the characterization as evidence, and test your reading against one published critic. Document two secondary sources in MLA.

College Junior (1500 words; AP: see unit standards): Apply a named critical approach (for example formalist, historicist, feminist, psychoanalytic or ecocritical) to Chapter XLI and its treatment of parental failure. State your method, show what it reveals in the chapter's characterization and theme, and identify where the text resists it.

College Senior (2000 words; AP: see unit standards): Develop a research argument that reads Chapter XLI as evidence for a larger claim about parental failure in Pride and Prejudice. Connect close reading of the chapter to the whole novel, engage at least four scholarly sources, and state precisely where your reading departs from theirs (Chicago style).

Graduate / PhD (2500 words; AP: see unit standards): Develop an original argument that reads Chapter XLI as a hinge in the novel's larger treatment of parental failure. Position your reading within a named critical conversation (for example formalist, historicist, psychoanalytic, feminist or postcolonial approaches), account for the textual history where relevant, and articulate the stakes of your intervention for scholarship on Pride and Prejudice.

SAT-style questions

1. Such squeamish youths as cannot bear to be connected with a little absurdity, are not worth a regret.

   As used in the text, what does the word “squeamish” most nearly mean?

   A. reestablish on a new, usually improved, basis or make new or like new

   B. make a more or less disguised reference to

   C. too easily shocked or disgusted

   D. having incalculable monetary, intellectual, or spiritual worth

2. Such were the kind of lamentations resounding perpetually through Longbourn-house. Elizabeth tried to be diverted by them; but all sense of pleasure was lost in shame. She felt anew the justice of Mr. Darcy's objections; and never had she before been so much disposed to pardon his interference in the views of his friend.

   Which choice best states a central concern of “Chapter XLI”?

   A. Parental failure

   B. Wit as courtship

   C. The great confrontation

   D. Leaving Kent

SAT key: 1. C (too easily shocked or disgusted); 2. A (Parental failure)

Lesson 43: Chapter XLII

Focus: an unhappy marriage observed

Objective: Students will analyze how characterization develops in "Chapter XLII" by writing a claim-evidence-reasoning paragraph that cites at least 2 quotations from the section, and will score at least 80% on the section quiz.

Standards: AP: see the unit standards

Critical voice: "In _Pride and Prejudice_ the author presents us with a family of young women, bred up under a foolish and vulgar mother, and a father whose good abilities lay hid under such a load of indolence and insensibility, that he had become contented to make the foibles and follies of his wife and daughters the subject of dry and humorous sarcasm, rather than of admonition, or restraint." (Walter Scott (attrib.; the review is unsigned), novelist, Review of Emma (with remarks on Pride and Prejudice), The Quarterly Review (dated October 1815; pub. 1816), reprinted in Famous Reviews, ed. R. Brimley Johnson (1914), section on Pride and Prejudice; public domain). Essay lens: Scott blames Mr. Bennet's sarcasm. Do readers who enjoy his wit share his fault? Use Chapter XLII. Objective: Analyze Mr. Bennet's failure as a parent and the unhappy marriage Elizabeth observes. Standards: AP: see the unit standards

Teacher only · spoilers

Elizabeth reflects on her parents' poorly matched marriage. She tours with the Gardiners to Derbyshire, near Pemberley, Darcy's estate.

Background: Country house tourism was common; housekeepers guided visitors when owners were away.

Significance: The parents' marriage illustrates the cost of choosing on looks alone.

Lesson plan and lecture script (90 minutes)

> 0–8 min · Bell-ringer · You do (8 min)
> Students write to the bell-ringer, then pair-share.
> What has Elizabeth learned from her parents' marriage? Write for five minutes. Starters: I think... because... / This connects to marriage and money because....
> Prompt: What has Elizabeth learned from her parents' marriage?
> Sentence starters: I think… because… · This connects to marriage and money because…
> Strong response: A strong response takes a position and anticipates this: an unhappy marriage shown as a warning.

8–18 min · Vocabulary with etymology notes · I do (10 min)
Five key words in context, with verified word histories.
Today's words: curtailed — cut short; enhance — to increase; to make better; acquiesce — to accept quietly; captivated — attract; cause to be enamored; conjugal — of or relating to marriage or to the relationship between a wife and husband. "acquiesce": Origin: Middle French acquiescer; earlier Latin acquiescō. "conjugal": Origin: Middle French conjugal; earlier Latin coniugālis ("con- + iugum ('yoke')").
Words: curtailed: cut short · enhance: to increase; to make better · acquiesce: to accept quietly · captivated: attract; cause to be enamored · conjugal: of or relating to marriage or to the relationship between a wife and husband

18–28 min · Background and context · I do (10 min)
Mini-lecture (read or adapt the script).
Country house tourism was common; housekeepers guided visitors when owners were away. The parents' marriage illustrates the cost of choosing on looks alone. Characterization: The narrator analyzes the Bennet marriage directly: Mr. Bennet married for "youth and beauty" and found a weak mind; he consoles himself with books and mockery. Point of view: Elizabeth's view merges with the narrator's; she sees her father's failings clearly for the first time. Watch for letters: Letters carry news, reveal character and change minds; Darcy's letter is the turning point of the novel. In this chapter: "When Lydia went away, she promised to write very often and very minutely to her mother and Kitty; but" (Chapter XLII, paragraph 5).

28–40 min · I do: modeled close reading · I do (12 min)
Model the close reading of the anchor quotation using the written think-aloud below.
First, meaning. I read "Had Elizabeth's opinion been all drawn from her own family, she could not have formed a very pleasing picture of conjugal felicity or..." slowly and put it in my own words: Elizabeth reflects that, judging only from her own family, she could not picture a happy or comfortable marriage. Next, craft. I notice the formal phrase "conjugal felicity or domestic comfort," whose grand, ironic sound makes the absence of happiness at Longbourn sharper. The strongest word is "felicity": a lofty word for happiness, used here for something her parents never had. Then, effect. What does Elizabeth learn from looking honestly at her parents' marriage? My answer: Her father married for youth and beauty and lost respect for his wife; Elizabeth now sees that a marriage without esteem fails, which is why respect will matter in her own choice.

> Had Elizabeth's opinion been all drawn from her own family, she could not have formed a very pleasing picture of conjugal felicity or domestic comfort (Chapter XLII, paragraph 1)

Think-aloud: First, meaning. I read "Had Elizabeth's opinion been all drawn from her own family, she could not have formed a very pleasing picture of conjugal felicity or…" slowly and put it in my own words: Elizabeth reflects that, judging only from her own family, she could not picture a happy or comfortable marriage. Next, craft. I notice the formal phrase "conjugal felicity or domestic comfort," whose grand, ironic sound makes the absence of happiness at Longbourn sharper. The strongest word is "felicity": a lofty word for happiness, used here for something her parents never had. Then, effect. What does Elizabeth learn from looking honestly at her parents' marriage? My answer: Her father married for youth and beauty and lost respect for his wife; Elizabeth now sees that a marriage without esteem fails, which is why respect will matter in her own choice.

40–55 min · We do: guided annotation · We do (15 min)
Guided analysis of a second quotation; expected answers given.
Ask: What words in this line stand out, and what do they suggest? Expected: A marriage based on appearance has hurt the children; ties first impressions to marriage. Ask: How does this line connect to marriage and money? Expected: An unhappy marriage shown as a warning. (Elizabeth's realization.)

> she had never felt so strongly as now the disadvantages which must attend the children of so unsuitable a marriage (Chapter XLII, paragraph 2)

Ask: What words in this line stand out, and what do they suggest?
Expected answer: A marriage based on appearance has hurt the children; ties first impressions to marriage.
Ask: How does this line connect to marriage and money?
Expected answer: An unhappy marriage shown as a warning. (Elizabeth's realization.)

55–70 min · You do: independent annotation · You do (15 min)
Independent annotation and a claim-evidence-reasoning paragraph (exemplar given).
Annotate the chapter for characterization, point of view (three marks with a margin note each), then write one claim-evidence-reasoning paragraph: what does this chapter suggest about an unhappy marriage observed? Then start your writing prompt at your assigned level (HS Sophomore: Analyze how Chapter XLII develops the idea of an unhappy marriage observed. Make a precise claim, support it with at least three pieces of textual evidence, and explain how the author's use of characterization and theme shapes that idea. Address one possible counterclaim.) Exemplar: The chapter presents the Bennet marriage as a cautionary example of marrying for appearance. When the text says “she had never felt so strongly as now the disadvantages which must attend the children of so unsuitable a marriage” (Chapter XLII, paragraph 2), it shows this directly. Mr. Bennet was "captivated by youth and beauty," and now Elizabeth feels "the disadvantages which must attend the children of so unsuitable a marriage."
Task: Annotate the chapter for characterization, point of view (three marks with a margin note each), then write one claim-evidence-reasoning paragraph: what does this chapter suggest about an unhappy marriage observed? Then start your writing prompt at your assigned level (HS Sophomore: Analyze how Chapter XLII develops the idea of an unhappy marriage observed. Make a precise claim, support it with at least three pieces of textual evidence, and explain how the author's use of characterization and theme shapes that idea. Address one possible counterclaim.)
Exemplar: The chapter presents the Bennet marriage as a cautionary example of marrying for appearance. When the text says “she had never felt so strongly as now the disadvantages which must attend the children of so unsuitable a marriage” (Chapter XLII, paragraph 2), it shows this directly. Mr. Bennet was "captivated by youth and beauty," and now Elizabeth feels "the disadvantages which must attend the children of so unsuitable a marriage."

70–80 min · Discussion · We do (10 min)
Structured discussion from the 30 tiered questions, with facilitation notes.
Anchor question: What has Elizabeth learned from her parents' marriage? Compare the Bennet marriage with Charlotte's: which is worse?
Anchor question: What has Elizabeth learned from her parents' marriage?
Facilitation: Compare the Bennet marriage with Charlotte's: which is worse?

80–87 min · Exit ticket / chapter quiz · You do (7 min)
Chapter quiz in the app and an exit ticket (answer given).
Chapter quiz in the app, then: In one sentence, what does this chapter suggest about an unhappy marriage observed? Support it with one short quotation. Model answer: The chapter presents the Bennet marriage as a cautionary example of marrying for appearance. ("she had never felt so strongly as now the disadvantages which must attend the children of so unsuitable a marriage", Chapter XLII, paragraph 2). Accept any defensible claim backed by a quotation from the chapter; the answer key for the quiz is in the Quiz section.
Exit ticket: In one sentence, what does this chapter suggest about an unhappy marriage observed? Support it with one short quotation.
Answer: Model answer: The chapter presents the Bennet marriage as a cautionary example of marrying for appearance. ("she had never felt so strongly as now the disadvantages which must attend the children of so unsuitable a marriage", Chapter XLII, paragraph 2). Accept any defensible claim backed by a quotation from the chapter; the answer key for the quiz is in the Quiz section.

87–90 min · Closure · I do (3 min)
Summarize the lesson and preview the next reading.
Today we saw how characterization shapes an unhappy marriage observed. Key takeaway: an unhappy marriage shown as a warning.

Total: 90 minutes.

Teacher analysis (spoilers)

Literary elements

- Characterization: The narrator analyzes the Bennet marriage directly: Mr. Bennet married for "youth and beauty" and found a weak mind; he consoles himself with books and mockery.
- Point of view: Elizabeth's view merges with the narrator's; she sees her father's failings clearly for the first time.

Themes and how they develop

- marriage and money: an unhappy marriage shown as a warning.

Symbols and motifs

- letters: Letters carry news, reveal character and change minds; Darcy's letter is the turning point of the novel. In this chapter: "When Lydia went away, she promised to write very often and very minutely to her mother and Kitty; but" (Chapter XLII, paragraph 5).
- marriage and money: Incomes, entails and fortunes are stated precisely; marriage is always also an economic question. In this chapter: "of good humour which youth and beauty generally give, had married a woman whose weak understanding and illiberal mind, had very early" (Chapter XLII, paragraph 1).

Key quotations (checked against the reading text)

- "Had Elizabeth's opinion been all drawn from her own family, she could not have formed a very pleasing picture of conjugal felicity or domestic comfort" (Chapter XLII, paragraph 1) The narrator's verdict on the Bennet marriage.
- "captivated by youth and beauty, and that appearance of good humour which youth and beauty generally give" (Chapter XLII, paragraph 1) Why Mr. Bennet married.
- "she had never felt so strongly as now the disadvantages which must attend the children of so unsuitable a marriage" (Chapter XLII, paragraph 2) Elizabeth's realization.

Model claim-evidence-reasoning

Claim: The chapter presents the Bennet marriage as a cautionary example of marrying for appearance.
Evidence: "she had never felt so strongly as now the disadvantages which must attend the children of so unsuitable a marriage" (Chapter XLII, paragraph 2)
Reasoning: Mr. Bennet was "captivated by youth and beauty," and now Elizabeth feels "the disadvantages which must attend the children of so unsuitable a marriage."

Vocabulary with etymology notes

Word	Definition (in this sentence)	In context	Word history
curtailed (verb)	cut short	Gardiner, which at once delayed its commencement and curtailed its extent.
enhance (verb)	to increase; to make better	One enjoyment was certain—that of suitableness as companions; a suitableness which comprehended health and temper to bear inconveniences—cheerfulness to enhance every pleasure—and affection and intelligence, which might supply it among themselves if there were disappointments abroad.
acquiesce (verb)	to accept quietly	Elizabeth said no more—but her mind could not acquiesce.	"acquiesce": Origin: Middle French acquiescer; earlier Latin acquiescō. (Liber et Libri origin note, https://en.wiktionary.org/wiki/acquiesce#Etymology) captivated (verb)	attract; cause to be enamored	Her father, captivated by youth and beauty, and that appearance of good humour which youth and beauty generally give, had married a woman whose weak understanding and illiberal mind, had very early in their marriage put an end to all real affection for her.

conjugal (adjective)	of or relating to marriage or to the relationship between a wife and husband	Had Elizabeth's opinion been all drawn from her own family, she could not have formed a very pleasing picture of conjugal felicity or domestic comfort.	"conjugal": Origin: Middle French conjugal; earlier Latin coniugālis ("con- + iugum ('yoke')"). (Liber et Libri origin note, https://en.wiktionary.org/wiki/conjugal#Etymology)
reappear (verb)	appear again	After the first fortnight or three weeks of her absence, health, good humour and cheerfulness began to reappear at Longbourn.
carpets (noun)	floor covering consisting of a piece of thick heavy fabric (usually with nap or pile)	She must own that she was tired of great houses; after going over so many, she really had no pleasure in fine carpets or satin curtains.
viewing (verb)	looking at; regarding	Darcy, while viewing the place, instantly occurred.
petrified (adjective)	turned to stone	"But surely," said she, "I may enter his county with impunity, and rob it of a few petrified spars without his perceiving me."
ceaseless (adjective)	uninterrupted in time and indefinitely long continuing	But here, by carrying with me one ceaseless source of regret in my sister's absence, I may reasonably hope to have all my expectations of pleasure realized.

Discussion questions

1. What has Elizabeth learned from her parents' marriage?
2. Where does characterization appear in this chapter, and what effect does it have? Point to one passage.
3. How does this chapter connect to the book's larger concern with pride and self-knowledge?

Classroom discussion questions (30, tiered)

Wait time after every question (3 s for DOK 1, 5 s for DOK 2, 8 to 10 s for DOK 3 and 4); think-pair-share on DOK 3 and 4; answer each response with a follow-up probe; close with student-generated questions. Focus sets by rigor level: Scaffolded support: 1, 2, 3, 4, 5, 6, 11, 12, 13, 14, 21, 22; HS Freshman: 1, 2, 3, 4, 5, 12, 13, 14, 15, 22, 23, 24; HS Sophomore: 1, 2, 3, 4, 13, 14, 15, 16, 17, 23, 24, 25; HS Junior: 1, 2, 3, 14, 15, 16, 17, 18, 24, 25, 26, 27; HS Senior: 1, 2, 3, 15, 16, 17, 18, 25, 26, 27, 28, 29; AP: 1, 2, 16, 17, 18, 19, 20, 26, 27, 28, 29, 30; College Freshman: 1, 2, 17, 18, 19, 20, 21, 22, 27, 28, 29, 30; College Sophomore: 1, 2, 11, 18, 19, 20, 21, 22, 23, 28, 29, 30; College Junior: 1, 11, 12, 19, 20, 21, 22, 23, 24, 25, 29, 30; College Senior: 1, 11, 12, 13, 20, 21, 22, 23, 24, 25, 26, 30; Graduate / PhD: 1, 11, 12, 13, 21, 22, 23, 24, 25, 26, 27, 28

Literal / recall

1. What does Elizabeth reflect on? [DOK 1 · coldCallWithSupport · wait 3 s · AP: unit standards] Look for: Her parents' poorly matched marriage
2. Where does Elizabeth travel? [DOK 1 · turnAndTalk · wait 3 s · AP: unit standards] Look for: Derbyshire

3. Whose estate is nearby? [DOK 1 · coldCallWithSupport · wait 3 s · AP: unit standards] Look for: Darcy's Pemberley
4. With whom does she travel? [DOK 1 · turnAndTalk · wait 3 s · AP: unit standards] Look for: The Gardiners
5. Why did Mr. Bennet marry his wife? [DOK 1 · coldCallWithSupport · wait 3 s · AP: unit standards] Look for: He was captivated by youth and beauty
6. Retell the three most important events of "Chapter XLII" in order, in one sentence each. [DOK 1 · turnAndTalk · wait 3 s · AP: unit standards] Look for: Elizabeth reflects on her parents' poorly matched marriage. She tours with the Gardiners to Derbyshire, near Pemberley, Darcy's estate.
7. Which characters appear or are mentioned in "Chapter XLII"? Name two and one thing each says or does. [DOK 1 · coldCallWithSupport · wait 3 s · AP: unit standards] Look for: Names and actions taken from the chapter; check against the teacher summary.
8. Where and when does "Chapter XLII" take place? Point to the line that tells you. [DOK 1 · turnAndTalk · wait 3 s · AP: unit standards] Look for: A place/time detail quoted from the chapter.
9. Reread: "Gardiner, which at once delayed its commencement and curtailed its extent." What does "curtailed" mean here, and what is literally happening in this line? [DOK 1 · turnAndTalk · wait 3 s · AP: unit standards] Look for: curtailed: cut short.
10. Reread: "One enjoyment was certain—that of suitableness as companions; a suitableness which comprehended health and temper to bear inconveniences—cheerfulness to enhance every pleasure—and affection and intelligence, which might…" What does "enhance" mean here, and what is literally happening in this line? [DOK 1 · turnAndTalk · wait 3 s · AP: unit standards] Look for: enhance: to increase; to make better.

Inferential / analytical

1. What does "Chapter XLII" suggest about an unhappy marriage observed? State the inference and the line that supports it. [DOK 2 · thinkPairShare · wait 5 s · AP-LIT.LAN] Look for: The parents' marriage illustrates the cost of choosing on looks alone.
2. Find one example of characterization in this chapter. What does it reveal that a plain statement would not? [DOK 2 · followUp · wait 5 s · AP-LIT.CHR] Look for: Look for what characters say, do and think, and how others react to them.
3. How does the theme in this chapter shape what we understand about an unhappy marriage observed? [DOK 3 · thinkPairShare · wait 8 s · AP-LIT.LAN] Look for: Look for statements or moments that connect to the book's big ideas.

   Answer guidance: A defensible line of argument: The chapter presents the Bennet marriage as a cautionary example of marrying for appearance. Useful evidence: "Had Elizabeth's opinion been all drawn from her own family, she could not have formed a very pleasing picture of conjugal felicity or domestic comfort" (Chapter XLII, paragraph 1): The narrator's verdict on the Bennet marriage. Theme link: an unhappy marriage shown as a warning. Credit any position that is supported by quotation and reasoning; push one-sided answers to address the strongest counterpoint.
4. In the passage that begins "Elizabeth, however, had never been blind to the impropriety of her father's behaviour as a husband.", why might Austen have chosen these particular words? Pick two and explain their connotations. [DOK 2 · followUp · wait 5 s · AP-LIT.FIG] Look for: Diction analysis of two words in the anchor passage.

5. What causes the main turn in “Chapter XLII”, and what effect is it likely to have on what follows? [DOK 2 · followUp · wait 5 s · AP-LIT.STR] Look for: Elizabeth reflects on her parents' poorly matched marriage. She tours with the Gardiners to Derbyshire, near Pemberley, Darcy's estate.
6. How does “Chapter XLII” build on “Chapter XLI”? Name one link of cause and effect. [DOK 3 · thinkPairShare · wait 8 s · AP-LIT.STR] Look for: A causal or structural link between this and the previous chapter.
   Answer guidance: A defensible line of argument: The chapter presents the Bennet marriage as a cautionary example of marrying for appearance. Useful evidence: “captivated by youth and beauty, and that appearance of good humour which youth and beauty generally give” (Chapter XLII, paragraph 1): Why Mr. Bennet married. Theme link: an unhappy marriage shown as a warning. Credit any position that is supported by quotation and reasoning; push one-sided answers to address the strongest counterpoint.
7. What can we infer about a character's motives from what they say and do here, as opposed to what they claim? [DOK 3 · followUp · wait 8 s · AP-LIT.CHR] Look for: An inference about motive supported by a quoted line.
   Answer guidance: A defensible line of argument: The chapter presents the Bennet marriage as a cautionary example of marrying for appearance. Useful evidence: “she had never felt so strongly as now the disadvantages which must attend the children of so unsuitable a marriage” (Chapter XLII, paragraph 2): Elizabeth's realization. On characterization: The narrator analyzes the Bennet marriage directly: Mr. Bennet married for "youth and beauty" and found a weak mind; he consoles himself with books and mockery. Credit any position that is supported by quotation and reasoning; push one-sided answers to address the strongest counterpoint.
8. The bell-ringer asked: “What has Elizabeth learned from her parents' marriage?” Now that we have read closely, how would you revise your first answer, and which line changed your mind? [DOK 2 · thinkPairShare · wait 5 s · AP-LIT.LAN] Look for: A revised answer anchored in the text.
9. Where does setting appear, and how does it connect this chapter to the larger concern with pride and self-knowledge? [DOK 3 · followUp · wait 8 s · AP-LIT.SET] Look for: Look for where and when events happen and how place shapes action or feeling.
   Answer guidance: A defensible line of argument: The chapter presents the Bennet marriage as a cautionary example of marrying for appearance. Useful evidence: “Had Elizabeth’s opinion been all drawn from her own family, she could not have formed a very pleasing picture of conjugal felicity or domestic comfort” (Chapter XLII, paragraph 1): The narrator's verdict on the Bennet marriage. Theme link: an unhappy marriage shown as a warning. Credit any position that is supported by quotation and reasoning; push one-sided answers to address the strongest counterpoint.
10. Background: Country house tourism was common; housekeepers guided visitors when owners were away. How does knowing this change the way you read one moment in the chapter? [DOK 3 · thinkPairShare · wait 8 s · AP-LIT.SET] Look for: A specific moment reread in light of the context.
    Answer guidance: A defensible line of argument: The chapter presents the Bennet marriage as a cautionary example of marrying for appearance. Useful evidence: “captivated by youth and beauty, and that appearance of good humour which youth and beauty generally give” (Chapter XLII, paragraph 1): Why Mr. Bennet married. Theme link: an unhappy marriage shown as a warning. Credit any position that is supported by quotation and reasoning; push one-sided answers to address the strongest counterpoint.

Evaluative / synthesis / creative

1. A critic might argue: “The parents' marriage illustrates the cost of choosing on looks alone.” How far do you agree? Take a stand and defend it with two lines from the chapter. [DOK 3 · fourCorners · wait 8 s · AP-

LIT.LAN] Look for: A defended position with evidence and one counterpoint.

Answer guidance: A defensible line of argument: The chapter presents the Bennet marriage as a cautionary example of marrying for appearance. Useful evidence: “she had never felt so strongly as now the disadvantages which must attend the children of so unsuitable a marriage” (Chapter XLII, paragraph 2): Elizabeth's realization. Theme link: an unhappy marriage shown as a warning. Credit any position that is supported by quotation and reasoning; push one-sided answers to address the strongest counterpoint.

2. Which character in this chapter acts most wisely, and which least? Judge them by a standard you name. [DOK 3 · thinkPairShare · wait 8 s · AP-LIT.CHR, AP-LIT.LAN] Look for: An evaluation using an explicit criterion and evidence.

   Answer guidance: A defensible line of argument: The chapter presents the Bennet marriage as a cautionary example of marrying for appearance. Useful evidence: “Had Elizabeth’s opinion been all drawn from her own family, she could not have formed a very pleasing picture of conjugal felicity or domestic comfort” (Chapter XLII, paragraph 1): The narrator's verdict on the Bennet marriage. On characterization: The narrator analyzes the Bennet marriage directly: Mr. Bennet married for "youth and beauty" and found a weak mind; he consoles himself with books and mockery. Credit any position that is supported by quotation and reasoning; push one-sided answers to address the strongest counterpoint.

3. Rewrite one moment of “Chapter XLII” from the point of view of a different character. What does the new angle reveal or hide about an unhappy marriage observed? [DOK 4 · thinkPairShare · wait 8 s · AP-LIT.LAN, AP-LIT.NAR] Look for: A creative product with a rationale tied to the text.

   Answer guidance: A defensible line of argument: The chapter presents the Bennet marriage as a cautionary example of marrying for appearance. Useful evidence: “captivated by youth and beauty, and that appearance of good humour which youth and beauty generally give” (Chapter XLII, paragraph 1): Why Mr. Bennet married. On point of view: Elizabeth's view merges with the narrator's; she sees her father's failings clearly for the first time. Credit any position that is supported by quotation and reasoning; push one-sided answers to address the strongest counterpoint.

4. Write three questions of your own about “Chapter XLII”: one recall, one “why/how”, and one “should/what if”. Trade with a partner and answer theirs. [DOK 3 · studentGenerated · wait 8 s · AP-LIT.LAN] Look for: Student-generated questions at three levels.

   Answer guidance: A defensible line of argument: The chapter presents the Bennet marriage as a cautionary example of marrying for appearance. Useful evidence: “she had never felt so strongly as now the disadvantages which must attend the children of so unsuitable a marriage” (Chapter XLII, paragraph 2): Elizabeth's realization. Theme link: an unhappy marriage shown as a warning. Credit any position that is supported by quotation and reasoning; push one-sided answers to address the strongest counterpoint.

5. Connect this chapter to marriage and money: is the link strong or weak so far? What would Austen need to show next to strengthen it? [DOK 4 · socraticCircle · wait 8 s · AP-LIT.LAN] Look for: A judgment of thematic development across the work.

   Answer guidance: A defensible line of argument: The chapter presents the Bennet marriage as a cautionary example of marrying for appearance. Useful evidence: “Had Elizabeth’s opinion been all drawn from her own family, she could not have formed a very pleasing picture of conjugal felicity or domestic comfort” (Chapter XLII, paragraph 1): The narrator's verdict on the Bennet marriage. Theme link: an unhappy marriage shown as a warning. Credit any position that is supported by quotation and reasoning; push one-sided answers to address the strongest counterpoint.

6. Is the characterization in this chapter effective, or does it feel heavy-handed? Evaluate it as a reader would in a review. [DOK 3 · fourCorners · wait 8 s · AP-LIT.CHR, AP-LIT.LAN] Look for: An evaluative judgment with criteria and evidence.

   Answer guidance: A defensible line of argument: The chapter presents the Bennet marriage as a cautionary example of marrying for appearance. Useful evidence: “captivated by youth and beauty, and that appearance of good humour which youth and beauty generally give” (Chapter XLII, paragraph 1): Why Mr. Bennet married. On characterization: The narrator analyzes the Bennet marriage directly: Mr. Bennet married for "youth and beauty" and found a weak mind; he consoles himself with books and mockery. Credit any position that is supported by quotation and reasoning; push one-sided answers to address the strongest counterpoint.
7. Compare how “Chapter XLII” treats an unhappy marriage observed with how another text, film or event you know treats a similar idea. What does Pride and Prejudice see that the other misses? [DOK 4 · socraticCircle · wait 8 s · AP-LIT.LAN] Look for: A cross-text synthesis.

   Answer guidance: A defensible line of argument: The chapter presents the Bennet marriage as a cautionary example of marrying for appearance. Useful evidence: “she had never felt so strongly as now the disadvantages which must attend the children of so unsuitable a marriage” (Chapter XLII, paragraph 2): Elizabeth's realization. Theme link: an unhappy marriage shown as a warning. Credit any position that is supported by quotation and reasoning; push one-sided answers to address the strongest counterpoint.
8. Predict what “Chapter XLIII” will bring, using two clues from this chapter. After reading, evaluate your prediction. [DOK 3 · thinkPairShare · wait 8 s · AP-LIT.LAN, AP-LIT.STR] Look for: A prediction or judgment justified with textual clues.

   Answer guidance: A defensible line of argument: The chapter presents the Bennet marriage as a cautionary example of marrying for appearance. Useful evidence: “Had Elizabeth’s opinion been all drawn from her own family, she could not have formed a very pleasing picture of conjugal felicity or domestic comfort” (Chapter XLII, paragraph 1): The narrator's verdict on the Bennet marriage. Theme link: an unhappy marriage shown as a warning. Credit any position that is supported by quotation and reasoning; push one-sided answers to address the strongest counterpoint.
9. Design a one-paragraph modern adaptation of this chapter (setting, characters, conflict). What must stay the same for it to still be about an unhappy marriage observed? [DOK 4 · thinkPairShare · wait 8 s · AP-LIT.LAN] Look for: A creative transfer that keeps the core idea.

   Answer guidance: A defensible line of argument: The chapter presents the Bennet marriage as a cautionary example of marrying for appearance. Useful evidence: “captivated by youth and beauty, and that appearance of good humour which youth and beauty generally give” (Chapter XLII, paragraph 1): Why Mr. Bennet married. Theme link: an unhappy marriage shown as a warning. Credit any position that is supported by quotation and reasoning; push one-sided answers to address the strongest counterpoint.
10. What question would you most like to ask Jane Austen about this chapter, and what answer do you think the text itself gives? [DOK 4 · studentGenerated · wait 8 s · AP-LIT.LAN] Look for: A student-generated question answered from evidence.

    Answer guidance: A defensible line of argument: The chapter presents the Bennet marriage as a cautionary example of marrying for appearance. Useful evidence: “she had never felt so strongly as now the disadvantages which must attend the children of so unsuitable a marriage” (Chapter XLII, paragraph 2): Elizabeth's realization. Theme link: an unhappy marriage shown as a warning. Credit any position that is supported by quotation and reasoning; push one-sided answers to address the strongest counterpoint.

Annotation focus

- Characterization: look for what characters say, do and think, and how others react to them (anchor passage in the We do segment)
- Also notice Theme: statements or moments that connect to the book's big ideas
- Also notice Setting: where and when events happen and how place shapes action or feeling

Chapter quiz: item bank (all eleven rigor versions)

1. [fill · recall · DOK 1] Complete the quotation from Chapter XLII, paragraph 4: “A scheme of which every part promises delight, can never be successful; and general _____ is only warded off by the defence of some little peculiar vexation.” Word bank: querulous, disappointed, disappointment, present
   Key: disappointment
2. [mc · recall · DOK 1] In the line “Gardiner, which at once delayed its commencement and curtailed its extent.”, what does “curtailed” most nearly mean?
   A. regularity; steadiness
   B. having risen above one's position and behaving arrogantly
   C. cut short
   D. get or find back; recover the use of
   Key: C (cut short)
3. [mc · recall · DOK 1] In the line “Her father, captivated by youth and beauty, and that appearance of good humour which youth and beauty generally give, had married a woman whose weak understanding and illiberal mind, had very early in their marriage put…”, what does “captivated” most nearly mean?
   A. a piano
   B. a tendency to change one's mind suddenly
   C. attract; cause to be enamored
   D. passages copied out of a book
   Key: C (attract; cause to be enamored)
4. [mc · recall · DOK 1] Why did Mr. Bennet marry his wife?
   A. For rank
   B. By arrangement
   C. For money
   D. He was captivated by youth and beauty
   Key: D (He was captivated by youth and beauty)
5. [fill · recall · DOK 1] Complete the quotation from Chapter XLII, paragraph 2: “she had never felt so strongly as now the _____ which must attend the children of so unsuitable a marriage”
   Key: disadvantages
6. [mc · recall · DOK 1] Which word completes this sentence from Chapter XLII, paragraph 12? “It was not in their _____ road, nor more than a mile or two out of it.”
   A. amusement
   B. direct
   C. entertainment

D. consequently

Key: B (direct)

7. [mc · recall · DOK 1] Whose estate is nearby?

   A. Lady Catherine's Rosings

   B. Darcy's Pemberley

   C. Collins's Hunsford

   D. Bingley's Netherfield

   Key: B (Darcy's Pemberley)

8. [fill · recall · DOK 1] Complete the quotation from Chapter XLII, paragraph 1: "_____ by youth and beauty, and that appearance of good humour which youth and beauty generally give"
   Key: captivated

9. [fill · recall · DOK 1] Fill in the blank with the vocabulary word that fits: "After the first fortnight or three weeks of her absence, health, good humour and cheerfulness began to _____ at Longbourn." Word bank: reappear, curtailed, enhance, acquiesce
   Key: reappear

10. [fill · recall · DOK 1] Complete the quotation from Chapter XLII, paragraph 10: "Four weeks were to pass away before her uncle and aunt's _____." Word bank: arrival, disappointed, confidence, present
    Key: arrival

11. [fill · recall · DOK 1] Complete the quotation from Chapter XLII, paragraph 1: "Respect, esteem, and _____, had vanished forever; and all his views of domestic happiness were overthrown." Word bank: confidence, arrival, peculiarly, querulous
    Key: confidence

12. [short · inference · DOK 2] What does this passage from Chapter XLII, paragraph 1 reveal about the character or situation? "But Mr. Bennet was not of a disposition to seek comfort for the disappointment which his own imprudence had brought on, in any of those pleasures which too often console the unfortunate for their folly or their vice." Answer in two or three sentences with one detail.
    Sample answer: The passage (Chapter XLII, paragraph 1) shows the situation turning on first impressions and prejudice: an unhappy marriage shown as a warning. The words "disappointment" and "unfortunate" are the proof, because they show how the moment looks to the people in it. They suggest more than the narrator states outright.

13. [short · inference · DOK 2] What does this passage from Chapter XLII, paragraph 12 reveal about the character or situation? "To the little town of Lambton, the scene of Mrs. Gardiner's former residence, and where she had lately learned that some acquaintance still remained, they bent their steps, after having seen all the principal wonders of the country" Answer in two or three sentences with one detail.
    Sample answer: The passage (Chapter XLII, paragraph 12) shows the situation turning on first impressions and prejudice: an unhappy marriage shown as a warning. The words "acquaintance" and "principal" are the proof, because they show how the moment looks to the people in it. They suggest more than the narrator states outright.

14. [short · analysis · DOK 3] Analyze how the word choice in this passage from Chapter XLII, paragraph 5 shapes its tone: "When Lydia went away, she promised to write very often and very minutely to her mother and Kitty; but her letters were always long expected, and always very short." Pick two words and explain their effect.
    Sample answer: The words "promised" and "minutely" (Chapter XLII, paragraph 5) make the tone heavy and deliberate rather than neutral. That weight points the reader to pride and self-knowledge: an unhappy marriage shown as a warning. The author chooses them so the moment feels significant instead of passing.

15. [short · analysis · DOK 3] Analyze how the word choice in this passage from Chapter XLII, paragraph 15 shapes its tone: “They have some of the finest woods in the country.” Pick two words and explain their effect.
    Sample answer: The words “country” and “finest” (Chapter XLII, paragraph 15) make the tone heavy and deliberate rather than neutral. That weight points the reader to class and social mobility: an unhappy marriage shown as a warning. The author chooses them so the moment feels significant instead of passing.

16. [short · synthesis · DOK 4] Synthesis: trace how marriage and money develops from Chapter XXXVIII to Chapter XLII. Use one quotation from each.
    Sample answer: Earlier, in Chapter XXXVIII, paragraph 1, the text reads “On Saturday morning Elizabeth and Mr. Collins met for breakfast a few minutes before the others appeared” — Opening. In Chapter XLII, “Had Elizabeth’s opinion been all drawn from her own family, she could not have formed a very pleasing picture of conjugal felicity or…” (Chapter XLII, paragraph 1), which shows the narrator's verdict on the Bennet marriage. An unhappy marriage shown as a warning.

17. [fill · recall · DOK 1] Fill in the blank with the vocabulary word that fits: “Darcy, while _____ the place, instantly occurred.” Word bank: acquiesce, enhance, curtailed, viewing
    Key: viewing

18. [mc · recall · DOK 1] Which word completes this sentence from Chapter XLII, paragraph 7? “In that county, there was enough to be seen, to occupy the chief of their three weeks; and to Mrs. Gardiner it had a _____ strong attraction.”
    A. arrival
    B. entertainment
    C. disappointment
    D. peculiarly

    Key: D (peculiarly)

19. [mc · recall · DOK 1] Which word completes this sentence from Chapter XLII, paragraph 3? “When Elizabeth had rejoiced over Wickham’s departure, she found little other cause for _____ in the loss of the regiment.”
    A. confidence
    B. consequently
    C. satisfaction
    D. connected

    Key: C (satisfaction)

20. [mc · recall · DOK 1] In the line “Elizabeth said no more—but her mind could not acquiesce.”, what does “acquiesce” most nearly mean?
    A. pleasing; being right for
    B. bands or chains worn around the wrist
    C. ate breakfast
    D. to accept quietly

    Key: D (to accept quietly)

21. [mc · recall · DOK 1] In the line “One enjoyment was certain—that of suitableness as companions; a suitableness which comprehended health and temper to bear inconveniences—cheerfulness to enhance every pleasure—and affection and intelligence, which might…”, what does “enhance” most nearly mean?

    A. to express pleasure at someone's good fortune

    B. treated lightly; toyed with

    C. to increase; to make better

    D. moved to act; driven

    Key: C (to increase; to make better)

22. [mc · analysis · DOK 3] Which literary element does this describe in “Chapter XLII”? The narrator analyzes the Bennet marriage directly: Mr. Bennet married for ‘youth and beauty’ and found a weak mind; he consoles himself with books and mockery.

    A. Metaphor

    B. Theme

    C. Allusion

    D. Characterization

    Key: D (Characterization)

23. [mc · analysis · DOK 3] In this chapter, which theme does the following most directly develop? An unhappy marriage shown as a warning.

    A. Marriage and money

    B. Class and social mobility

    C. Pride and self-knowledge

    D. First impressions and prejudice

    Key: A (Marriage and money)

24. [mc · recall · DOK 1] What does Elizabeth reflect on?

    A. Her parents' poorly matched marriage

    B. Fashion

    C. Collins's sermons

    D. Jane's wedding

    Key: A (Her parents' poorly matched marriage)

25. [mc · recall · DOK 1] Where does Elizabeth travel?

    A. Derbyshire

    B. Bath

    C. Ireland

    D. Scotland

    Key: A (Derbyshire)

26. [fill · recall · DOK 1] Fill in the blank with the vocabulary word that fits: “She must own that she was tired of great houses; after going over so many, she really had no pleasure in fine _____ or satin curtains.” Word bank: curtailed, carpets, enhance, acquiesce

    Key: carpets

27. [mc · recall · DOK 1] With whom does she travel?

    A. Lydia

    B. Jane

    C. Charlotte

    D. The Gardiners

    Key: D (The Gardiners)

28. [short · analysis · DOK 3] Analyze how the word choice in this passage from Chapter XLII, paragraph 3 shapes its tone: “Her tour to the Lakes was now the object of her happiest thoughts” Pick two words and explain their effect.

    Sample answer: The words “happiest” and “thoughts” (Chapter XLII, paragraph 3) make the tone heavy and deliberate rather than neutral. That weight points the reader to class and social mobility: an unhappy marriage shown as a warning. The author chooses them so the moment feels significant instead of passing.

29. [short · synthesis · DOK 4] Evaluate this claim about the chapter: “The chapter presents the Bennet marriage as a cautionary example of marrying for appearance.” Is it fully persuasive? Argue with evidence, including a passage that complicates it.

    Sample answer: The claim is persuasive in part. “she had never felt so strongly as now the disadvantages which must attend the children of so unsuitable a marriage” (Chapter XLII, paragraph 2) supports it: Mr. Bennet was "captivated by youth and beauty," and now Elizabeth feels "the disadvantages which must attend the children of so unsuitable a marriage.". But “Had Elizabeth’s opinion been all drawn from her own family, she could not have formed a very pleasing picture of conjugal felicity or domestic comfort” (Chapter XLII, paragraph 1) complicates it: The narrator's verdict on the Bennet marriage, and its “not” marks a limit or reversal the claim passes over. So the claim stands only in a qualified form: true of the chapter's main pattern, but not of every moment in it.

30. [short · synthesis · DOK 4 · AP: AP-LIT.LAN] Connect this passage from Chapter XLII, paragraph 10 to the story's treatment of marriage and money: “But they did pass away, and Mr. and Mrs. Gardiner, with their four children, did at length appear at Longbourn.” Use one other moment from the story as well.

    Sample answer: This passage (Chapter XLII, paragraph 10) develops marriage and money: an unhappy marriage shown as a warning. Its words “children” and “length” carry that idea into this moment. The same concern returns in “In talking over their route the evening before, Mrs. Gardiner expressed an inclination to see the place again.” (Chapter XLII, paragraph 12), so the two passages read as a pattern, not a single moment. Together they show the story treating marriage and money as central.

31. [fill · recall · DOK 1 · AP: AP-LIT.STR] Complete the quotation from Chapter XLII, paragraph 1: “Had Elizabeth’s opinion been all drawn from her own family, she could not have formed a very _____ picture of conjugal felicity or domestic comfort”

    Key: pleasing

32. [short · synthesis · DOK 4 · AP: AP-LIT.LAN] Connect this passage from Chapter XLII, paragraph 7 to the story's treatment of women's limited choices: “The town where she had formerly passed some years of her life, and where they were now to spend a few days, was probably as great an object of her curiosity, as all the celebrated beauties of Matlock, Chatsworth, Dovedale, or the Peak.” Use one other moment from the story as well.

    Sample answer: This passage (Chapter XLII, paragraph 7) develops women's limited choices: an unhappy marriage shown as a warning. Its words “celebrated” and “curiosity” carry that idea into this moment. The same concern returns in “But it was her business to be satisfied—and certainly her temper to be happy; and all was soon right again.” (Chapter XLII, paragraph 8), so the two passages read as a pattern, not a single moment. Together they show the story treating women's limited choices as central.

33. [mc · inference · DOK 2 · AP: AP-LIT.LAN] Which choice best states a central concern of “Chapter XLII”?

    A. An unhappy marriage observed

    B. Marriage as a social goal

    C. Parental failure

    D. Doubts and preparations

    Key: A (An unhappy marriage observed)

34. [mc · inference · DOK 2 · AP: AP-LIT.LAN] What does this passage most clearly show? “Had Elizabeth’s opinion been all drawn from her own family, she could not have formed a very pleasing picture of conjugal felicity or domestic comfort” (Chapter XLII, paragraph 1)

    A. Lydia's note: thoughtless and triumphant; note the grammar ("with who") and the tone.

    B. The room first admires him for his income.

    C. She assumes pride will keep Darcy from proposing again.

    D. The narrator's verdict on the Bennet marriage.

    Key: D (The narrator's verdict on the Bennet marriage.)

35. [short · analysis · DOK 3 · AP: AP-LIT.LAN] Claim: The chapter presents the Bennet marriage as a cautionary example of marrying for appearance. Explain how this evidence supports the claim: “she had never felt so strongly as now the disadvantages which must attend the children of so unsuitable a marriage” (Chapter XLII, paragraph 2).

    Sample answer: Mr. Bennet was "captivated by youth and beauty," and now Elizabeth feels "the disadvantages which must attend the children of so unsuitable a marriage.". The evidence is “she had never felt so strongly as now the disadvantages which must attend the children of so unsuitable a marriage” (Chapter XLII, paragraph 2) — Elizabeth's realization. This develops marriage and money: an unhappy marriage shown as a warning.

36. [short · synthesis · DOK 4 · Dual Credit (Indiana College Core): ICC-WC-1.5] Close reading: how do the diction and syntax of “Had Elizabeth’s opinion been all drawn from her own family, she could not have formed a very pleasing picture of conjugal felicity or domestic comfort” (Chapter XLII, paragraph 1) shape its meaning? Consider a second, competing reading.

    Sample answer: The narrator's verdict on the Bennet marriage. The evidence is “Had Elizabeth’s opinion been all drawn from her own family, she could not have formed a very pleasing picture of conjugal felicity or…” (Chapter XLII, paragraph 1). This develops marriage and money: an unhappy marriage shown as a warning. The words “pleasing” and “felicity” carry that meaning: they are the charged choices in the line, and changing either would soften the effect. Mr. Bennet was "captivated by youth and beauty," and now Elizabeth feels "the disadvantages which must attend the children of so unsuitable a marriage.".

37. [short · analysis · DOK 3 · Program outcome: LeL-C2-LIT-1] Analyze the word choice in “she had never felt so strongly as now the disadvantages which must attend the children of so unsuitable a marriage” (Chapter XLII, paragraph 2). Pick two words and explain what they suggest.

    Sample answer: Elizabeth's realization. The evidence is “she had never felt so strongly as now the disadvantages which must attend the children of so unsuitable a marriage” (Chapter XLII, paragraph 2). This develops marriage and money: an unhappy marriage shown as a warning. The words “disadvantages” and “unsuitable” carry that meaning: they are the charged choices in the line, and changing either would soften the effect.

38. [mc · analysis · DOK 3 · Program outcome: LeL-C3-LIT-1] Which literary element does this describe in “Chapter XLII”? Elizabeth's view merges with the narrator's; she sees her father's failings clearly for the first time.

    A. Metaphor

    B. Structure

    C. Point of view

    D. Tone / mood

    Key: C (Point of view)

39. [short · synthesis · DOK 4 · Program outcome: LeL-C3-LIT-1] Close reading: how do the diction and syntax of “captivated by youth and beauty, and that appearance of good humour which youth and beauty generally give” (Chapter XLII, paragraph 1) shape its meaning? Consider a second, competing reading.
    Sample answer: Why Mr. Bennet married. The evidence is “captivated by youth and beauty, and that appearance of good humour which youth and beauty generally give” (Chapter XLII, paragraph 1). This develops marriage and money: an unhappy marriage shown as a warning. The words “appearance” and “captivated” carry that meaning: they are the charged choices in the line, and changing either would soften the effect. Mr. Bennet was "captivated by youth and beauty," and now Elizabeth feels "the disadvantages which must attend the children of so unsuitable a marriage.".

40. [fill · recall · DOK 1 · Program outcome: LeL-GR-LIT-1] Fill in the blank with the vocabulary word that fits: “Had Elizabeth’s opinion been all drawn from her own family, she could not have formed a very pleasing picture of _____ felicity or domestic comfort.” Word bank: enhance, acquiesce, conjugal, curtailed
    Key: conjugal

41. [mc · inference · DOK 2 · Program outcome: LeL-GR-LIT-1] What does this passage most clearly show? “captivated by youth and beauty, and that appearance of good humour which youth and beauty generally give” (Chapter XLII, paragraph 1)

    A. Charlotte's tolerance of Darcy's pride.

    B. Darcy reverses his "tolerable" of Chapter III.

    C. Class is not character: a man in trade is a gentleman in manners.

    D. Why Mr. Bennet married.

    Key: D (Why Mr. Bennet married.)

Rigor version	Items (in order)	Mix
Scaffolded support	1, 2, 3, 4, 5, 6, 7, 8, 9, 10, 11, 12, 13, 14, 15, 16	recall 11, inference 2, analysis 2, synthesis 1
HS Freshman	17, 18, 19, 20, 2, 5, 8, 1, 21, 9, 13, 12, 22, 15, 23, 16	recall 10, inference 2, analysis 3, synthesis 1
HS Sophomore	24, 25, 26, 11, 7, 17, 5, 27, 10, 12, 13, 22, 14, 28, 29, 16	recall 9, inference 2, analysis 3, synthesis 2
HS Junior	10, 9, 18, 20, 3, 25, 2, 19, 13, 12, 28, 15, 14, 23, 29, 30	recall 8, inference 2, analysis 4, synthesis 2
HS Senior	4, 31, 17, 6, 5, 2, 11, 13, 12, 23, 14, 28, 22, 30, 16, 32	recall 7, inference 2, analysis 4, synthesis 3
AP	11, 26, 3, 12, 33, 13, 34, 15, 14, 35, 23, 28, 16, 29, 30, 32	recall 3, inference 4, analysis 5, synthesis 4
College Freshman	2, 26, 11, 24, 13, 12, 15, 23, 14, 22, 28, 36, 16, 30, 29, 32	recall 4, inference 2, analysis 5, synthesis 5

College Sophomore	19, 8, 9, 21, 33, 13, 14, 15, 23, 28, 37, 36, 16, 30, 29, 32	recall 4, inference 2, analysis 5, synthesis 5
College Junior	24, 2, 9, 26, 13, 14, 38, 15, 35, 23, 28, 32, 29, 39, 30, 16	recall 4, inference 1, analysis 6, synthesis 5
College Senior	9, 26, 6, 24, 33, 13, 28, 35, 14, 15, 23, 32, 16, 30, 36, 29	recall 4, inference 2, analysis 5, synthesis 5
Graduate / PhD	9, 25, 40, 13, 12, 33, 41, 15, 23, 14, 35, 28, 16, 30, 29, 32	recall 3, inference 4, analysis 5, synthesis 4

Writing prompts (eleven rigor levels)

Scaffolded support (250 words; AP: see unit standards): Supported track (work from the passage your teacher selects). In “Chapter XLII,” how does Austen show an unhappy marriage observed? Write a paragraph that states your claim, quotes two details from the passage, and explains how each detail supports your idea. Use the characterization you noticed as one piece of evidence.

HS Freshman (350 words; AP: see unit standards): In Chapter XLII, how does Austen develop the idea of an unhappy marriage observed? State a clear claim, support it with two or three quotations, and explain how the characterization in the chapter helps build that idea.

HS Sophomore (450 words; AP: see unit standards): Analyze how Chapter XLII develops the idea of an unhappy marriage observed. Make a precise claim, support it with at least three pieces of textual evidence, and explain how the author's use of characterization and theme shapes that idea. Address one possible counterclaim.

HS Junior (550 words; AP: see unit standards): Analyze how the structure of Chapter XLII (where it begins, turns and ends) and its characterization shape the reader's understanding of an unhappy marriage observed. Identify one place where the text leaves matters uncertain and explain how that uncertainty adds to its meaning.

HS Senior (600 words; AP: see unit standards): Two readers disagree about what Chapter XLII suggests about an unhappy marriage observed. Lay out two plausible interpretations, weigh the evidence for each (including the chapter's characterization and theme), and argue for the stronger one in a sustained, well-organized essay.

AP (650 words; AP: AP-LIT.CHR, AP-LIT.LAN): Write a literary argument in which you analyze how Jane Austen uses characterization in Chapter XLII to complicate the reader's understanding of an unhappy marriage observed. Develop a defensible thesis, select evidence purposefully, and explain how specific choices of diction and syntax create meaning.

College Freshman (1000 words; AP: see unit standards): Situate Chapter XLII within its historical and literary context and argue how the chapter's treatment of an unhappy marriage observed responds to that context. Engage with at least one secondary perspective (a critic, historian or the author's own statements), integrate quotations smoothly, and cite in MLA style.

College Sophomore (1250 words; AP: see unit standards): Read Chapter XLII alongside the conventions of its genre and period. Argue how the chapter's handling of an unhappy marriage observed follows or bends those conventions, using the characterization as evidence, and test your reading against one published critic. Document two secondary sources in MLA.

College Junior (1500 words; AP: see unit standards): Apply a named critical approach (for example formalist, historicist, feminist, psychoanalytic or ecocritical) to Chapter XLII and its treatment of an unhappy marriage observed. State your method, show what it reveals in the chapter's characterization and theme, and identify where the text resists it.

College Senior (2000 words; AP: see unit standards): Develop a research argument that reads Chapter XLII as evidence for a larger claim about an unhappy marriage observed in Pride and Prejudice. Connect close reading of the chapter to the whole novel, engage at least four scholarly sources, and state precisely where your reading departs from theirs (Chicago style).

Graduate / PhD (2500 words; AP: see unit standards): Develop an original argument that reads Chapter XLII as a hinge in the novel's larger treatment of an unhappy marriage observed. Position your reading within a named critical conversation (for example formalist, historicist, psychoanalytic, feminist or postcolonial approaches), account for the textual history where relevant, and articulate the stakes of your intervention for scholarship on Pride and Prejudice.

SAT-style questions

1. Elizabeth said no more—but her mind could not acquiesce.

   As used in the text, what does the word “acquiesce” most nearly mean?

   A. to accept quietly

   B. turned to stone

   C. looking at; regarding

   D. uninterrupted in time and indefinitely long continuing

2. Elizabeth, however, had never been blind to the impropriety of her father’s behaviour as a husband. She had always seen it with pain; but respecting his abilities, and grateful for his affectionate treatment of herself, she endeavoured to forget what she could not overlook, and to banish from her thoughts that continual breach of conjugal obligation and decorum which, in exposing his wife to the contempt of her own children, was so highly reprehensible. But she had never felt so strongly as now the disadvantages which must attend the children of so unsuitable a marriage, nor ever been so fully aware of the evils arising from so ill-judged a direction of talents; talents which rightly used, might at least have preserved the respectability of his daughters, even if incapable of enlarging the mind of his wife.

   Which choice best states a central concern of “Chapter XLII”?

   A. Letters of judgment

   B. Family dynamics and anticipation

   C. An unhappy marriage observed

   D. Neighbors and gossip

SAT key: 1. A (to accept quietly); 2. C (An unhappy marriage observed)

Lesson 44: Chapter XLIII

Focus: Pemberley

Objective: Students will analyze how setting develops in “Chapter XLIII” by writing a claim-evidence-reasoning paragraph that cites at least 2 quotations from the section, and will score at least 80% on the section quiz.

Standards: AP: see the unit standards

Critical voice: “The lady, on the contrary, hurt at the contempt of her connections, which the lover does not even attempt to suppress, and prejudiced against him on other accounts, refuses the hand which he ungraciously offers, and does not perceive that she has done a foolish thing until she accidentally visits a very handsome seat and grounds belonging to her admirer.” (Walter Scott (attrib.; the review is unsigned), novelist, Review of Emma (with remarks on Pride and Prejudice), The Quarterly Review (dated October 1815; pub. 1816), reprinted in Famous Reviews, ed. R. Brimley Johnson (1914), section on Pride and Prejudice; public domain). Debate: Scott reads Elizabeth's change as prompted by the estate. Pair with "to be mistress of Pemberley might be something!" Is Scott right, or does the housekeeper's testimony change her more than the grounds? Objective: Analyze Pemberley as a turning point and the irony of Elizabeth's change of heart. Standards: AP: see the unit standards

Teacher only · spoilers

Elizabeth tours Pemberley, admires its natural taste, and hears the housekeeper praise Darcy as kind and generous. Darcy unexpectedly appears and is courteous; Elizabeth is mortified but impressed.

Background: Landscape style ('natural' rather than formal) was thought to reveal the owner's character.

Significance: Pemberley symbolizes Darcy's true self; Elizabeth's thought 'to be mistress of Pemberley might be something!'

Lesson plan and lecture script (90 minutes)

> 0–8 min · Bell-ringer · You do (8 min)
> Students write to the bell-ringer, then pair-share.
> How does Pemberley represent Darcy? Write for five minutes. Starters: I think... because... / This connects to first impressions because....
> Prompt: How does Pemberley represent Darcy?
> Sentence starters: I think… because… · This connects to first impressions because…
> Strong response: A strong response takes a position and anticipates this: new evidence of Darcy's character.

8–18 min · Vocabulary with etymology notes · I do (10 min)
Five key words in context, with verified word histories.
Today's words: embargo — a ban; something that stops activity; miniatures — very small portrait paintings; uselessly — without purpose; affable — diffusing warmth and friendliness; windings — the act of winding or twisting. "embargo": Origin: Spanish embargar ("to arrest"). "affable": Origin: French affable; earlier Latin affābilis.
Words: embargo: a ban; something that stops activity · miniatures: very small portrait paintings · uselessly: without purpose · affable: diffusing warmth and friendliness · windings: the act of winding or twisting

18–28 min · Background and context · I do (10 min)
Mini-lecture (read or adapt the script).
Landscape style ('natural' rather than formal) was thought to reveal the owner's character. Pemberley symbolizes Darcy's true self; Elizabeth's thought 'to be mistress of Pemberley might be something!' Setting: Pemberley: house and grounds reflect their owner's taste; "neither formal, nor falsely adorned." Characterization: The housekeeper Mrs. Reynolds praises Darcy as a good master and brother; Darcy appears suddenly and is civil to the Gardiners. Watch for rank and condescension: Rank is displayed and enforced, above all at Rosings by Lady Catherine; Elizabeth refuses to be cowed. In this chapter: "of splendor, and more real elegance, than the furniture of Rosings" (Chapter XLIII, paragraph 5).

28–40 min · I do: modeled close reading · I do (12 min)
Model the close reading of the anchor quotation using the written think-aloud below.
First, meaning. I read "She had never seen a place for which nature had done more, or where natural beauty had been so little counteracted by an awkward taste" slowly and put it in my own words: Elizabeth admires Pemberley as a place where nature has done a great deal and natural beauty has not been spoiled by awkward taste. Next, craft. I notice the praise is for restraint, not grandeur: what has not been done to the land matters most. The strongest word is "natural": it links the estate's beauty to honesty and lack of show. Then, effect. What does Pemberley's landscape suggest about its owner? My answer: Pemberley's natural, unpretentious landscape suggests its owner has real taste and character; it is the moment Elizabeth first thinks that being mistress of Pemberley might have been something.

> She had never seen a place for which nature had done more, or where natural beauty had been so little counteracted by an awkward taste (Chapter XLIII, paragraph 3)

Think-aloud: First, meaning. I read "She had never seen a place for which nature had done more, or where natural beauty had been so little counteracted by an awkward taste" slowly and put it in my own words: Elizabeth admires Pemberley as a place where nature has done a great deal and natural beauty has not been spoiled by awkward taste. Next, craft. I notice the praise is for restraint, not grandeur: what has not been done to the land matters most. The strongest word is "natural": it links the estate's beauty to honesty and lack of show. Then, effect. What does Pemberley's landscape suggest about its owner? My answer: Pemberley's natural, unpretentious landscape suggests its owner has real taste and character; it is the moment Elizabeth first thinks that being mistress of Pemberley might have been something.

40–55 min · We do: guided annotation · We do (15 min)
Guided analysis of a second quotation; expected answers given.
Ask: What words in this line stand out, and what do they suggest? Expected: Elizabeth's ironic, honest realization. Look at the craft: The housekeeper Mrs. Reynolds praises Darcy as a good master and brother; Darcy appears suddenly and is civil to the Gardiners. Ask: How does this line connect to first impressions? Expected: New evidence of Darcy's character. (Elizabeth's ironic, honest realization.)

> and at that moment she felt that to be mistress of Pemberley might be something (Chapter XLIII, paragraph 3)

Ask: What words in this line stand out, and what do they suggest?
Expected answer: Elizabeth's ironic, honest realization. Look at the craft: The housekeeper Mrs. Reynolds praises Darcy as a good master and brother; Darcy appears suddenly and is civil to the Gardiners.
Ask: How does this line connect to first impressions?
Expected answer: New evidence of Darcy's character. (Elizabeth's ironic, honest realization.)

55–70 min · You do: independent annotation · You do (15 min)
Independent annotation and a claim-evidence-reasoning paragraph (exemplar given).
Annotate the chapter for setting, characterization (three marks with a margin note each), then write one claim-evidence-reasoning paragraph: what does this chapter suggest about Pemberley? Then start your writing prompt at your assigned level (HS Sophomore: Analyze how Chapter XLIII develops the idea of Pemberley. Make a precise claim, support it with at least three pieces of textual evidence, and explain how the author's use of setting and symbolism shapes that idea. Address one possible counterclaim.) Exemplar: Pemberley offers evidence of Darcy's character through his home and his servants. When the text says “She had never seen a place for which nature had done more, or where natural beauty had been so little counteracted by an awkward taste” (Chapter XLIII, paragraph 3), it shows this directly. Elizabeth sees a place where "natural beauty had been so little counteracted by an awkward taste," and the housekeeper calls him "the best landlord, and the best master, that ever lived."
Task: Annotate the chapter for setting, characterization (three marks with a margin note each), then write one claim-evidence-reasoning paragraph: what does this chapter suggest about Pemberley? Then start your writing prompt at your assigned level (HS Sophomore: Analyze how Chapter XLIII develops the idea of Pemberley. Make a precise claim, support it with at least three pieces of textual evidence, and explain how the author's use of setting and symbolism shapes that idea. Address one possible counterclaim.)
Exemplar: Pemberley offers evidence of Darcy's character through his home and his servants. When the text says “She had never seen a place for which nature had done more, or where natural beauty had been so little counteracted by an awkward taste” (Chapter XLIII, paragraph 3), it shows this directly. Elizabeth sees a place where "natural beauty had been so little counteracted by an awkward taste," and the housekeeper calls him "the best landlord, and the best master, that ever lived."

70–80 min · Discussion · We do (10 min)
Structured discussion from the 30 tiered questions, with facilitation notes.
Anchor question: How does Pemberley represent Darcy? Ask: is Elizabeth's "to be mistress of Pemberley might be something" mercenary? Austen leaves it ironic.
Anchor question: How does Pemberley represent Darcy?
Facilitation: Ask: is Elizabeth's "to be mistress of Pemberley might be something" mercenary? Austen leaves it ironic.

80–87 min · Exit ticket / chapter quiz · You do (7 min)
Chapter quiz in the app and an exit ticket (answer given).
Chapter quiz in the app, then: In one sentence, what does this chapter suggest about Pemberley? Support it with one short quotation. Model answer: Pemberley offers evidence of Darcy's character through his home and his servants. ("She had never seen a place for which nature had done more, or where natural beauty had been so little counteracted by an awkward taste", Chapter XLIII, paragraph 3). Accept any defensible claim backed by a quotation from the chapter; the answer key for the quiz is in the Quiz section.
Exit ticket: In one sentence, what does this chapter suggest about Pemberley? Support it with one short quotation.
Answer: Model answer: Pemberley offers evidence of Darcy's character through his home and his servants. ("She had never seen a place for which nature had done more, or where natural beauty had been so little counteracted by an awkward taste", Chapter XLIII, paragraph 3). Accept any defensible claim backed by a quotation from the chapter; the answer key for the quiz is in the Quiz section.

87–90 min · Closure · I do (3 min)
Summarize the lesson and preview the next reading.
Today we saw how setting shapes Pemberley. Key takeaway: new evidence of Darcy's character.

Total: 90 minutes.

Teacher analysis (spoilers)

Literary elements

- Setting: Pemberley: house and grounds reflect their owner's taste; "neither formal, nor falsely adorned."
- Characterization: The housekeeper Mrs. Reynolds praises Darcy as a good master and brother; Darcy appears suddenly and is civil to the Gardiners.

Themes and how they develop

- first impressions: new evidence of Darcy's character.

Symbols and motifs

- rank and condescension: Rank is displayed and enforced, above all at Rosings by Lady Catherine; Elizabeth refuses to be cowed. In this chapter: "of splendor, and more real elegance, than the furniture of Rosings" (Chapter XLIII, paragraph 5).
- silence and reserve: What characters leave unsaid (Darcy's reserve, Jane's composure, Elizabeth's secrets) drives misunderstanding. In this chapter: "and, wholly engrossed by her own feelings, followed them in silence. She was overpowered by shame and vexation. Her coming there was" (Chapter XLIII, paragraph 54).

Key quotations (checked against the reading text)

- "She had never seen a place for which nature had done more, or where natural beauty had been so little counteracted by an awkward taste" (Chapter XLIII, paragraph 3) Pemberley's taste mirrors character.

- “and at that moment she felt that to be mistress of Pemberley might be something” (Chapter XLIII, paragraph 3) Elizabeth's ironic, honest realization.
- “He is the best landlord, and the best master … that ever lived” (Chapter XLIII, paragraph 38) Mrs. Reynolds's testimony.

Model claim-evidence-reasoning

Claim: Pemberley offers evidence of Darcy's character through his home and his servants.
Evidence: “She had never seen a place for which nature had done more, or where natural beauty had been so little counteracted by an awkward taste” (Chapter XLIII, paragraph 3)
Reasoning: Elizabeth sees a place where "natural beauty had been so little counteracted by an awkward taste," and the housekeeper calls him "the best landlord, and the best master, that ever lived."

Vocabulary with etymology notes

Word	Definition (in this sentence)	In context	Word history
embargo (noun)	a ban; something that stops activity	She wanted to talk, but there seemed an embargo on every subject.	“embargo”: Origin: Spanish embargar (“to arrest”). (Liber et Libri origin note, https://en.wiktionary.org/wiki/embargo#Etymology)
miniatures (noun)	very small portrait paintings	Wickham suspended, amongst several other miniatures, over the mantelpiece.
uselessly (adverb)	without purpose	The rooms were lofty and handsome, and their furniture suitable to the fortune of their proprietor; but Elizabeth saw, with admiration of his taste, that it was neither gaudy nor uselessly fine; with less of splendor, and more real elegance, than the furniture of Rosings.
affable (adjective)	diffusing warmth and friendliness	“Yes, Ma’am, that he was indeed; and his son will be just like him—just as affable to the poor.”	“affable”: Origin: French affable; earlier Latin affābilis. (Liber et Libri origin note, https://en.wiktionary.org/wiki/affable#Etymology)
windings (noun)	the act of winding or twisting	Elizabeth longed to explore its windings; but when they had crossed the bridge, and perceived their distance from the house, Mrs.
consigned (verb)	handed over	When all of the house that was open to general inspection had been seen, they returned downstairs, and taking leave of the housekeeper, were consigned over to the gardener, who met them at the hall door.

revolted (verb)	rebelled; turned in disgust	This was a stroke of civility for which she was quite unprepared; and she could hardly suppress a smile, at his being now seeking the acquaintance of some of those very people, against whom his pride had revolted, in his offer to herself.	"revolted": Origin of "revolt": possibly French révolter; earlier Latin revolvō ("roll back"). (Liber et Libri origin note, https://en.wiktionary.org/wiki/revolt#Etymology)
overspread (verb)	spread across or over	Their eyes instantly met, and the cheeks of each were overspread with the deepest blush.	"overspread": Origin: an English formation from over- + spread. (Liber et Libri origin note, https://en.wiktionary.org/wiki/overspread#Etymology)
flutter (noun)	a state of nervous excitement	Elizabeth, as they drove along, watched for the first appearance of Pemberley Woods with some perturbation; and when at length they turned in at the lodge, her spirits were in a high flutter.
apprehensions (noun)	fearful expectation or anticipation	They descended the hill, crossed the bridge, and drove to the door; and, while examining the nearer aspect of the house, all her apprehensions of meeting its owner returned.	"apprehensions": Origin of "apprehension": Latin apprehensio. (Liber et Libri origin note, https://en.wiktionary.org/wiki/apprehension#Etymology)

Discussion questions

1. How does Pemberley represent Darcy?
2. Where does setting appear in this chapter, and what effect does it have? Point to one passage.
3. How does this chapter connect to the book's larger concern with marriage and money?

Classroom discussion questions (30, tiered)

Wait time after every question (3 s for DOK 1, 5 s for DOK 2, 8 to 10 s for DOK 3 and 4); think-pair-share on DOK 3 and 4; answer each response with a follow-up probe; close with student-generated questions. Focus sets by rigor level: Scaffolded support: 1, 2, 3, 4, 5, 6, 11, 12, 13, 14, 21, 22; HS Freshman: 1, 2, 3, 4, 5, 12, 13, 14, 15, 22, 23, 24; HS Sophomore: 1, 2, 3, 4, 13, 14, 15, 16, 17, 23, 24, 25; HS Junior: 1, 2, 3, 14, 15, 16, 17, 18, 24, 25, 26, 27; HS Senior: 1, 2, 3, 15, 16, 17, 18, 25, 26, 27, 28, 29; AP: 1, 2, 16, 17, 18, 19, 20, 26, 27, 28, 29, 30; College Freshman: 1, 2, 17, 18, 19, 20, 21, 22, 27, 28, 29, 30; College Sophomore: 1, 2, 11, 18, 19, 20, 21, 22, 23, 28, 29, 30; College Junior: 1, 11, 12, 19, 20, 21, 22, 23, 24, 25, 29, 30; College Senior: 1, 11, 12, 13, 20, 21, 22, 23, 24, 25, 26, 30; Graduate / PhD: 1, 11, 12, 13, 21, 22, 23, 24, 25, 26, 27, 28

Literal / recall

1. Who praises Darcy at Pemberley? [DOK 1 · coldCallWithSupport · wait 3 s · AP: unit standards] Look for: The housekeeper, Mrs. Reynolds
2. How is Pemberley's landscape described? [DOK 1 · turnAndTalk · wait 3 s · AP: unit standards] Look for: Natural and tasteful

3. What surprises Elizabeth? [DOK 1 · coldCallWithSupport · wait 3 s · AP: unit standards] Look for: Darcy appears unexpectedly
4. How does Darcy behave when he meets Elizabeth unexpectedly at Pemberley? [DOK 1 · turnAndTalk · wait 3 s · AP: unit standards] Look for: Courteous and kind
5. What does Pemberley symbolize? [DOK 1 · coldCallWithSupport · wait 3 s · AP: unit standards] Look for: Darcy's true character
6. Retell the three most important events of "Chapter XLIII" in order, in one sentence each. [DOK 1 · turnAndTalk · wait 3 s · AP: unit standards] Look for: Elizabeth tours Pemberley, admires its natural taste, and hears the housekeeper praise Darcy as kind and generous. Darcy unexpectedly appears and is courteous; Elizabeth is mortified but impressed.
7. Which characters appear or are mentioned in "Chapter XLIII"? Name two and one thing each says or does. [DOK 1 · coldCallWithSupport · wait 3 s · AP: unit standards] Look for: Names and actions taken from the chapter; check against the teacher summary.
8. Where and when does "Chapter XLIII" take place? Point to the line that tells you. [DOK 1 · turnAndTalk · wait 3 s · AP: unit standards] Look for: A place/time detail quoted from the chapter.
9. Reread: "She wanted to talk, but there seemed an embargo on every subject." What does "embargo" mean here, and what is literally happening in this line? [DOK 1 · turnAndTalk · wait 3 s · AP: unit standards] Look for: embargo: a ban; something that stops activity.
10. Reread: "Wickham suspended, amongst several other miniatures, over the mantelpiece." What does "miniatures" mean here, and what is literally happening in this line? [DOK 1 · turnAndTalk · wait 3 s · AP: unit standards] Look for: miniatures: very small portrait paintings.

Inferential / analytical

1. What does "Chapter XLIII" suggest about Pemberley? State the inference and the line that supports it. [DOK 2 · thinkPairShare · wait 5 s · AP-LIT.LAN] Look for: Pemberley symbolizes Darcy's true self; Elizabeth's thought 'to be mistress of Pemberley might be something!'
2. Find one example of setting in this chapter. What does it reveal that a plain statement would not? [DOK 2 · followUp · wait 5 s · AP-LIT.SET] Look for: Look for where and when events happen and how place shapes action or feeling.
3. How does the symbolism in this chapter shape what we understand about Pemberley? [DOK 3 · thinkPairShare · wait 8 s · AP-LIT.FIG] Look for: Look for objects, places or actions that stand for larger ideas.
   Answer guidance: A defensible line of argument: Pemberley offers evidence of Darcy's character through his home and his servants. Useful evidence: "She had never seen a place for which nature had done more, or where natural beauty had been so little counteracted by an awkward taste" (Chapter XLIII, paragraph 3): Pemberley's taste mirrors character. Theme link: new evidence of Darcy's character. Credit any position that is supported by quotation and reasoning; push one-sided answers to address the strongest counterpoint.
4. In the passage that begins "They descended the hill, crossed the bridge, and drove to the door; and, while examining the nearer aspect of the house, all her apprehensions of meeting its owner returned.", why might Austen have chosen these particular words? Pick two and explain their connotations. [DOK 2 · followUp · wait 5 s · AP-LIT.FIG] Look for: Diction analysis of two words in the anchor passage.

5. What causes the main turn in “Chapter XLIII”, and what effect is it likely to have on what follows? [DOK 2 · followUp · wait 5 s · AP-LIT.STR] Look for: Elizabeth tours Pemberley, admires its natural taste, and hears the housekeeper praise Darcy as kind and generous. Darcy unexpectedly appears and is courteous; Elizabeth is mortified but impressed.
6. How does “Chapter XLIII” build on “Chapter XLII”? Name one link of cause and effect. [DOK 3 · thinkPairShare · wait 8 s · AP-LIT.STR] Look for: A causal or structural link between this and the previous chapter.
   Answer guidance: A defensible line of argument: Pemberley offers evidence of Darcy's character through his home and his servants. Useful evidence: “and at that moment she felt that to be mistress of Pemberley might be something” (Chapter XLIII, paragraph 3): Elizabeth's ironic, honest realization. Theme link: new evidence of Darcy's character. Credit any position that is supported by quotation and reasoning; push one-sided answers to address the strongest counterpoint.
7. What can we infer about a character's motives from what they say and do here, as opposed to what they claim? [DOK 3 · followUp · wait 8 s · AP-LIT.CHR] Look for: An inference about motive supported by a quoted line.
   Answer guidance: A defensible line of argument: Pemberley offers evidence of Darcy's character through his home and his servants. Useful evidence: “He is the best landlord, and the best master … that ever lived” (Chapter XLIII, paragraph 38): Mrs. Reynolds's testimony. On characterization: The housekeeper Mrs. Reynolds praises Darcy as a good master and brother; Darcy appears suddenly and is civil to the Gardiners. Credit any position that is supported by quotation and reasoning; push one-sided answers to address the strongest counterpoint.
8. The bell-ringer asked: “How does Pemberley represent Darcy?” Now that we have read closely, how would you revise your first answer, and which line changed your mind? [DOK 2 · thinkPairShare · wait 5 s · AP-LIT.LAN] Look for: A revised answer anchored in the text.
9. Where does characterization appear, and how does it connect this chapter to the larger concern with marriage and money? [DOK 3 · followUp · wait 8 s · AP-LIT.CHR] Look for: Look for what characters say, do and think, and how others react to them.
   Answer guidance: A defensible line of argument: Pemberley offers evidence of Darcy's character through his home and his servants. Useful evidence: “She had never seen a place for which nature had done more, or where natural beauty had been so little counteracted by an awkward taste” (Chapter XLIII, paragraph 3): Pemberley's taste mirrors character. On characterization: The housekeeper Mrs. Reynolds praises Darcy as a good master and brother; Darcy appears suddenly and is civil to the Gardiners. Credit any position that is supported by quotation and reasoning; push one-sided answers to address the strongest counterpoint.
10. Background: Landscape style ('natural' rather than formal) was thought to reveal the owner's character. How does knowing this change the way you read one moment in the chapter? [DOK 3 · thinkPairShare · wait 8 s · AP-LIT.SET] Look for: A specific moment reread in light of the context.
    Answer guidance: A defensible line of argument: Pemberley offers evidence of Darcy's character through his home and his servants. Useful evidence: “and at that moment she felt that to be mistress of Pemberley might be something” (Chapter XLIII, paragraph 3): Elizabeth's ironic, honest realization. On setting: Pemberley: house and grounds reflect their owner's taste; "neither formal, nor falsely adorned." Credit any position that is supported by quotation and reasoning; push one-sided answers to address the strongest counterpoint.

Evaluative / synthesis / creative

1. A critic might argue: “Pemberley symbolizes Darcy's true self; Elizabeth's thought 'to be mistress of Pemberley might be something!'” How far do you agree? Take a stand and defend it with two lines from the chapter. [DOK 3 · fourCorners · wait 8 s · AP-LIT.LAN] Look for: A defended position with evidence and one counterpoint.

Answer guidance: A defensible line of argument: Pemberley offers evidence of Darcy's character through his home and his servants. Useful evidence: “He is the best landlord, and the best master … that ever lived” (Chapter XLIII, paragraph 38): Mrs. Reynolds's testimony. Theme link: new evidence of Darcy's character. Credit any position that is supported by quotation and reasoning; push one-sided answers to address the strongest counterpoint.

2. Which character in this chapter acts most wisely, and which least? Judge them by a standard you name. [DOK 3 · thinkPairShare · wait 8 s · AP-LIT.CHR, AP-LIT.LAN] Look for: An evaluation using an explicit criterion and evidence.

   Answer guidance: A defensible line of argument: Pemberley offers evidence of Darcy's character through his home and his servants. Useful evidence: “She had never seen a place for which nature had done more, or where natural beauty had been so little counteracted by an awkward taste” (Chapter XLIII, paragraph 3): Pemberley's taste mirrors character. On characterization: The housekeeper Mrs. Reynolds praises Darcy as a good master and brother; Darcy appears suddenly and is civil to the Gardiners. Credit any position that is supported by quotation and reasoning; push one-sided answers to address the strongest counterpoint.

3. Rewrite one moment of “Chapter XLIII” from the point of view of a different character. What does the new angle reveal or hide about Pemberley? [DOK 4 · thinkPairShare · wait 8 s · AP-LIT.LAN, AP-LIT.NAR] Look for: A creative product with a rationale tied to the text.

   Answer guidance: A defensible line of argument: Pemberley offers evidence of Darcy's character through his home and his servants. Useful evidence: “and at that moment she felt that to be mistress of Pemberley might be something” (Chapter XLIII, paragraph 3): Elizabeth's ironic, honest realization. Theme link: new evidence of Darcy's character. Credit any position that is supported by quotation and reasoning; push one-sided answers to address the strongest counterpoint.

4. Write three questions of your own about “Chapter XLIII”: one recall, one “why/how”, and one “should/what if”. Trade with a partner and answer theirs. [DOK 3 · studentGenerated · wait 8 s · AP-LIT.LAN] Look for: Student-generated questions at three levels.

   Answer guidance: A defensible line of argument: Pemberley offers evidence of Darcy's character through his home and his servants. Useful evidence: “He is the best landlord, and the best master … that ever lived” (Chapter XLIII, paragraph 38): Mrs. Reynolds's testimony. Theme link: new evidence of Darcy's character. Credit any position that is supported by quotation and reasoning; push one-sided answers to address the strongest counterpoint.

5. Connect this chapter to class and social mobility: is the link strong or weak so far? What would Austen need to show next to strengthen it? [DOK 4 · socraticCircle · wait 8 s · AP-LIT.LAN] Look for: A judgment of thematic development across the work.

   Answer guidance: A defensible line of argument: Pemberley offers evidence of Darcy's character through his home and his servants. Useful evidence: “She had never seen a place for which nature had done more, or where natural beauty had been so little counteracted by an awkward taste” (Chapter XLIII, paragraph 3): Pemberley's taste mirrors character. Theme link: new evidence of Darcy's character. Credit any position that is supported by quotation and reasoning; push one-sided answers to address the strongest counterpoint.

6. Is the setting in this chapter effective, or does it feel heavy-handed? Evaluate it as a reader would in a review. [DOK 3 · fourCorners · wait 8 s · AP-LIT.LAN, AP-LIT.SET] Look for: An evaluative judgment with criteria and evidence.

Answer guidance: A defensible line of argument: Pemberley offers evidence of Darcy's character through his home and his servants. Useful evidence: “and at that moment she felt that to be mistress of Pemberley might be something” (Chapter XLIII, paragraph 3): Elizabeth's ironic, honest realization. On setting: Pemberley: house and grounds reflect their owner's taste; "neither formal, nor falsely adorned." Credit any position that is supported by quotation and reasoning; push one-sided answers to address the strongest counterpoint.

7. Compare how “Chapter XLIII” treats Pemberley with how another text, film or event you know treats a similar idea. What does Pride and Prejudice see that the other misses? [DOK 4 · socraticCircle · wait 8 s · AP-LIT.LAN] Look for: A cross-text synthesis.

   Answer guidance: A defensible line of argument: Pemberley offers evidence of Darcy's character through his home and his servants. Useful evidence: “He is the best landlord, and the best master … that ever lived” (Chapter XLIII, paragraph 38): Mrs. Reynolds's testimony. Theme link: new evidence of Darcy's character. Credit any position that is supported by quotation and reasoning; push one-sided answers to address the strongest counterpoint.

8. Predict what “Chapter XLIV” will bring, using two clues from this chapter. After reading, evaluate your prediction. [DOK 3 · thinkPairShare · wait 8 s · AP-LIT.LAN, AP-LIT.STR] Look for: A prediction or judgment justified with textual clues.

   Answer guidance: A defensible line of argument: Pemberley offers evidence of Darcy's character through his home and his servants. Useful evidence: “She had never seen a place for which nature had done more, or where natural beauty had been so little counteracted by an awkward taste” (Chapter XLIII, paragraph 3): Pemberley's taste mirrors character. Theme link: new evidence of Darcy's character. Credit any position that is supported by quotation and reasoning; push one-sided answers to address the strongest counterpoint.

9. Design a one-paragraph modern adaptation of this chapter (setting, characters, conflict). What must stay the same for it to still be about Pemberley? [DOK 4 · thinkPairShare · wait 8 s · AP-LIT.LAN] Look for: A creative transfer that keeps the core idea.

   Answer guidance: A defensible line of argument: Pemberley offers evidence of Darcy's character through his home and his servants. Useful evidence: “and at that moment she felt that to be mistress of Pemberley might be something” (Chapter XLIII, paragraph 3): Elizabeth's ironic, honest realization. Theme link: new evidence of Darcy's character. Credit any position that is supported by quotation and reasoning; push one-sided answers to address the strongest counterpoint.

10. What question would you most like to ask Jane Austen about this chapter, and what answer do you think the text itself gives? [DOK 4 · studentGenerated · wait 8 s · AP-LIT.LAN] Look for: A student-generated question answered from evidence.

    Answer guidance: A defensible line of argument: Pemberley offers evidence of Darcy's character through his home and his servants. Useful evidence: “He is the best landlord, and the best master … that ever lived” (Chapter XLIII, paragraph 38): Mrs. Reynolds's testimony. Theme link: new evidence of Darcy's character. Credit any position that is supported by quotation and reasoning; push one-sided answers to address the strongest counterpoint.

Annotation focus

- Setting: look for where and when events happen and how place shapes action or feeling (anchor passage in the We do segment)
- Also notice Symbolism: objects, places or actions that stand for larger ideas
- Also notice Characterization: what characters say, do and think, and how others react to them

Chapter quiz: item bank (all eleven rigor versions)

1. [fill · recall · DOK 1] Complete the quotation from Chapter XLIII, paragraph 3: "She had never seen a place for which nature had done more, or where natural beauty had been so little _____ by an awkward taste"
   Key: counteracted
2. [mc · recall · DOK 1] How does Darcy behave when he meets Elizabeth unexpectedly at Pemberley?
   A. Cold
   B. Silent
   C. Rude
   D. Courteous and kind

   Key: D (Courteous and kind)
3. [mc · recall · DOK 1] Which word completes this sentence from Chapter XLIII, paragraph 31? "That he was not a good-_____ man, had been her firmest opinion."
   A. tempered
   B. anticipated
   C. observed
   D. commendation

   Key: A (tempered)
4. [mc · recall · DOK 1] In the line "She wanted to talk, but there seemed an embargo on every subject.", what does "embargo" most nearly mean?
   A. a soldier standing guard
   B. coming upon by chance
   C. a ban; something that stops activity
   D. the child of your aunt or uncle

   Key: C (a ban; something that stops activity)
5. [mc · recall · DOK 1] In the line "Wickham suspended, amongst several other miniatures, over the mantelpiece.", what does "miniatures" most nearly mean?
   A. attached
   B. harming; wronging (here, financially)
   C. very small portrait paintings
   D. comforted

   Key: C (very small portrait paintings)

6. [fill · recall · DOK 1] Fill in the blank with the vocabulary word that fits: “Their eyes instantly met, and the cheeks of each were _____ with the deepest blush.” Word bank: uselessly, miniatures, embargo, overspread
   Key: overspread
7. [fill · recall · DOK 1] Complete the quotation from Chapter XLIII, paragraph 3: “and at that moment she felt that to be mistress of Pemberley might be _____”
   Key: something
8. [mc · recall · DOK 1] Who praises Darcy at Pemberley?
   A. Lady Catherine
   B. Wickham
   C. Bingley
   D. The housekeeper, Mrs. Reynolds

   Key: D (The housekeeper, Mrs. Reynolds)
9. [mc · recall · DOK 1] In the line “Yes, Ma’am, that he was indeed; and his son will be just like him—just as affable to the poor.”, what does “affable” most nearly mean?
   A. a person who prepared and sold medicines and gave medical advice
   B. diffusing warmth and friendliness
   C. first one and then the other
   D. a woman of good family and manners

   Key: B (diffusing warmth and friendliness)
10. [fill · recall · DOK 1] Fill in the blank with the vocabulary word that fits: “Elizabeth longed to explore its _____; but when they had crossed the bridge, and perceived their distance from the house, Mrs.” Word bank: uselessly, embargo, windings, miniatures
    Key: windings
11. [short · inference · DOK 2] What does this passage from Chapter XLIII, paragraph 31 reveal about the character or situation? “Her keenest attention was awakened; she longed to hear more, and was grateful to her uncle for saying—” Answer in two or three sentences with one detail.
    Sample answer: The passage (Chapter XLIII, paragraph 31) shows the situation turning on first impressions and prejudice: new evidence of Darcy's character. The words “attention” and “awakened” are the proof, because they show how the moment looks to the people in it. They suggest more than the narrator states outright.
12. [mc · inference · DOK 2] Which of these passages comes earliest in Chapter XLIII?
    A. “She longed to enquire of the housekeeper, whether her master were really absent, but had not courage for it.”
    B. “They entered it in one of its lowest points, and drove for some time through a beautiful wood, stretching over a wide extent.”
    C. “But no,’—recollecting herself—‘that could never be: my uncle and aunt would have been lost to me: I should not have been allowed to invite…”
    D. “Instead of viewing them as a stranger, I might have rejoiced in them as my own, and welcomed to them as visitors my uncle and aunt.”

    Key: B (“They entered it in one of its lowest points, and drove for some time through a beautiful wood, stretching over a wide extent.”)

13. [short · inference · DOK 2] What does this passage from Chapter XLIII, paragraph 54 reveal about the character or situation? “Never in her life had she seen his manners so little dignified, never had he spoken with such gentleness as on this unexpected meeting.” Answer in two or three sentences with one detail.
    Sample answer: The passage (Chapter XLIII, paragraph 54) shows the situation turning on first impressions and prejudice: new evidence of Darcy's character. The words “unexpected” and “gentleness” are the proof, because they show how the moment looks to the people in it. They suggest more than the narrator states outright.
14. [short · analysis · DOK 3] Analyze how the word choice in this passage from Chapter XLIII, paragraph 8 shapes its tone: “She longed to enquire of the housekeeper, whether her master were really absent, but had not courage for it.” Pick two words and explain their effect.
    Sample answer: The words “housekeeper” and “courage” (Chapter XLIII, paragraph 8) make the tone heavy and deliberate rather than neutral. That weight points the reader to pride and self-knowledge: new evidence of Darcy's character. The author chooses them so the moment feels significant instead of passing.
15. [short · analysis · DOK 3] Analyze how the word choice in this passage from Chapter XLIII, paragraph 40 shapes its tone: “This fine account of him,’ whispered her aunt, as they walked, ‘is not quite consistent with his behaviour to our poor friend.” Pick two words and explain their effect.
    Sample answer: The words “consistent” and “behaviour” (Chapter XLIII, paragraph 40) make the tone heavy and deliberate rather than neutral. That weight points the reader to class and social mobility: new evidence of Darcy's character. The author chooses them so the moment feels significant instead of passing.
16. [short · synthesis · DOK 4] Synthesis: trace how first impressions develops from Chapter XL to Chapter XLIII. Use one quotation from each.
    Sample answer: Earlier, in Chapter XL, paragraph 15, the text reads “There certainly was some great mismanagement in the education of those two young men” — Elizabeth's joke about Darcy and Wickham. In Chapter XLIII, “She had never seen a place for which nature had done more, or where natural beauty had been so little counteracted by an awkward taste” (Chapter XLIII, paragraph 3) — Pemberley's taste mirrors character. New evidence of Darcy's character.
17. [fill · recall · DOK 1] Fill in the blank with the vocabulary word that fits: “This was a stroke of civility for which she was quite unprepared; and she could hardly suppress a smile, at his being now seeking the acquaintance of some of those very people, against whom his pride had _____, in his offer to herself.” Word bank: uselessly, miniatures, revolted, embargo
    Key: revolted
18. [fill · recall · DOK 1] Complete the quotation from Chapter XLIII, paragraph 2: “They entered it in one of its lowest points, and drove for some time through a beautiful wood, _____ over a wide extent.” Word bank: astonishment, handsome, stretching, tempered
    Key: stretching
19. [fill · recall · DOK 1] Complete the quotation from Chapter XLIII, paragraph 22: “In the next room is a new _____ just come down for her—a present from my master; she comes here tomorrow with him.” Word bank: looked, attention, handsome, instrument
    Key: instrument
20. [mc · recall · DOK 1] What does Pemberley symbolize?
    A. The church
    B. Wealth only
    C. Darcy's true character
    D. Wickham's fortune

Key: C (Darcy's true character)

21. [short · inference · DOK 2] What can you infer from this line? “She had never seen a place for which nature had done more, or where natural beauty had been so little counteracted by an awkward taste” (Chapter XLIII, paragraph 3) Answer in two or three sentences with one detail.
    Sample answer: Pemberley's taste mirrors character. The evidence is “She had never seen a place for which nature had done more, or where natural beauty had been so little counteracted by an awkward taste” (Chapter XLIII, paragraph 3).
22. [short · analysis · DOK 3] Analyze how the word choice in this passage from Chapter XLIII, paragraph 55 shapes its tone: “Whether he had felt more of pain or of pleasure in seeing her, she could not tell, but he certainly had not seen her with composure.” Pick two words and explain their effect.
    Sample answer: The words “composure” and “certainly” (Chapter XLIII, paragraph 55) make the tone heavy and deliberate rather than neutral. That weight points the reader to class and social mobility: new evidence of Darcy's character. The author chooses them so the moment feels significant instead of passing.
23. [mc · analysis · DOK 3] Which literary element does this describe in “Chapter XLIII”? Pemberley: house and grounds reflect their owner's taste; ‘neither formal, nor falsely adorned.’
    A. Foreshadowing
    B. Setting
    C. Diction / vocabulary
    D. Irony

    Key: B (Setting)
24. [short · analysis · DOK 3] Analyze how the word choice in this passage from Chapter XLIII, paragraph 47 shapes its tone: “At last it arrested her—and she beheld a striking resemblance of Mr. Darcy, with such a smile over the face, as she remembered to have sometimes seen, when he looked at her.” Pick two words and explain their effect.
    Sample answer: The words “resemblance” and “remembered” (Chapter XLIII, paragraph 47) make the tone heavy and deliberate rather than neutral. That weight points the reader to pride and self-knowledge: new evidence of Darcy's character. The author chooses them so the moment feels significant instead of passing.
25. [short · synthesis · DOK 4] Connect this passage from Chapter XLIII, paragraph 13 to the story's treatment of women's limited choices: “Mrs. Reynolds’s respect for Elizabeth seemed to increase on this intimation of her knowing her master.” Use one other moment from the story as well.
    Sample answer: This passage (Chapter XLIII, paragraph 13) develops women's limited choices: new evidence of Darcy's character. Its words “intimation” and “increase” carry that idea into this moment. The same concern returns in “This room was my late master’s favourite room, and these miniatures are just as they used to be then.” (Chapter XLIII, paragraph 18), so the two passages read as a pattern, not a single moment. Together they show the story treating women's limited choices as central.
26. [fill · recall · DOK 1] Fill in the blank with the vocabulary word that fits: “When all of the house that was open to general inspection had been seen, they returned downstairs, and taking leave of the housekeeper, were _____ over to the gardener, who met them at the hall door.” Word bank: embargo, consigned, miniatures, uselessly
    Key: consigned

27. [mc · recall · DOK 1] In the line “The rooms were lofty and handsome, and their furniture suitable to the fortune of their proprietor; but Elizabeth saw, with admiration of his taste, that it was neither gaudy nor uselessly fine; with less of splendor,…”, what does “uselessly” most nearly mean?

    A. giving; providing

    B. coming in where one is not wanted

    C. passing reference or indirect mention

    D. without purpose

    Key: D (without purpose)

28. [short · synthesis · DOK 4] Connect this passage from Chapter XLIII, paragraph 48 to the story's treatment of women's limited choices: “As a brother, a landlord, a master, she considered how many people’s happiness were in his guardianship!—How much of pleasure or pain it was in his power to bestow!—How much of good or evil must be done by him!” Use one other moment from the story as well.

    Sample answer: This passage (Chapter XLIII, paragraph 48) develops women's limited choices: new evidence of Darcy's character. Its words “guardianship” and “considered” carry that idea into this moment. The same concern returns in “Had his first appearance, or his resemblance to the picture they had just been examining, been insufficient to assure…” (Chapter XLIII, paragraph 52), so the two passages read as a pattern, not a single moment. Together they show the story treating women's limited choices as central.

29. [short · synthesis · DOK 4] Connect this passage from Chapter XLIII, paragraph 54 to the story's treatment of marriage and money: “Her coming there was the most unfortunate, the most ill-judged thing in the world!” Use one other moment from the story as well.

    Sample answer: This passage (Chapter XLIII, paragraph 54) develops marriage and money: new evidence of Darcy's character. Its words “unfortunate” and “coming” carry that idea into this moment. The same concern returns in “It might seem as if she had purposely thrown herself in his way again!” (Chapter XLIII, paragraph 54), so the two passages read as a pattern, not a single moment. Together they show the story treating marriage and money as central.

30. [fill · recall · DOK 1 · AP: AP-LIT.STR] Complete the quotation from Chapter XLIII, paragraph 38: “He is the best _____, and the best master … that ever lived”

    Key: landlord

31. [mc · analysis · DOK 3 · AP: AP-LIT.CHR] Which literary element does this describe in “Chapter XLIII”? The housekeeper Mrs. Reynolds praises Darcy as a good master and brother; Darcy appears suddenly and is civil to the Gardiners.

    A. Alliteration

    B. Irony

    C. Characterization

    D. Simile

    Key: C (Characterization)

32. [short · synthesis · DOK 4 · AP: AP-LIT.FIG] Close reading: how do the diction and syntax of “She had never seen a place for which nature had done more, or where natural beauty had been so little counteracted by an awkward taste” (Chapter XLIII, paragraph 3) shape its meaning? Consider a second, competing reading.

    Sample answer: Pemberley's taste mirrors character. The evidence is “She had never seen a place for which nature had done more, or where natural beauty had been so little counteracted by an awkward taste” (Chapter XLIII, paragraph 3). This develops first impressions: new evidence of Darcy's character. The words “counteracted” and “natural” carry that meaning: they are the charged choices in the line, and changing either would soften the effect. Elizabeth sees a place where "natural beauty had been so little counteracted by an awkward taste," and the housekeeper calls him "the best landlord, and the best master, that ever lived.".

33. [mc · recall · DOK 1 · AP: AP-LIT.STR] What surprises Elizabeth?

    A. Wickham is there

    B. The house is ruined

    C. Darcy appears unexpectedly

    D. Jane is there

    Key: C (Darcy appears unexpectedly)

34. [short · analysis · DOK 3 · AP: AP-LIT.FIG] Analyze the word choice in “He is the best landlord, and the best master … that ever lived” (Chapter XLIII, paragraph 38). Pick two words and explain what they suggest.
    Sample answer: Mrs. Reynolds's testimony. The evidence is “He is the best landlord, and the best master … that ever lived” (Chapter XLIII, paragraph 38). This develops first impressions: new evidence of Darcy's character. The words “landlord” and “master” carry that meaning: they are the charged choices in the line, and changing either would soften the effect.

35. [mc · recall · DOK 1 · AP: AP-LIT.STR] How is Pemberley's landscape described?

    A. Formal and stiff

    B. Gaudy

    C. Neglected

    D. Natural and tasteful

    Key: D (Natural and tasteful)

36. [short · synthesis · DOK 4 · Dual Credit (Indiana College Core): ICC-WC-1.5] Connect this passage from Chapter XLIII, paragraph 23 to the story's treatment of marriage and money: “Mr. Gardiner, whose manners were easy and pleasant, encouraged her communicativeness by his questions and remarks; Mrs. Reynolds, either from pride or attachment, had evidently great pleasure in talking of her master and his sister.” Use one other moment from the story as well.
    Sample answer: This passage (Chapter XLIII, paragraph 23) develops marriage and money: new evidence of Darcy's character. Its words “communicativeness” and “attachment” carry that idea into this moment. The same concern returns in “Not so much as I could wish, Sir; but I dare say he may spend half his time here; and Miss Darcy is always down for the…” (Chapter XLIII, paragraph 25), so the two passages read as a pattern, not a single moment. Together they show the story treating marriage and money as central.

37. [mc · inference · DOK 2 · Program outcome: LeL-C2-LIT-1] What does this passage most clearly show? “and at that moment she felt that to be mistress of Pemberley might be something” (Chapter XLIII, paragraph 3)

    A. Elizabeth's ironic, honest realization.

    B. Darcy's reply; it is the more accurate judgment.

    C. Jane admits her error.

    D. The colonel on money.

    Key: A (Elizabeth's ironic, honest realization.)

38. [short · synthesis · DOK 4 · Program outcome: LeL-C3-LIT-1] Close reading: how do the diction and syntax of “and at that moment she felt that to be mistress of Pemberley might be something” (Chapter XLIII, paragraph 3) shape its meaning? Consider a second, competing reading.
    Sample answer: Elizabeth's ironic, honest realization. The evidence is “and at that moment she felt that to be mistress of Pemberley might be something” (Chapter XLIII, paragraph 3). This develops first impressions: new evidence of Darcy's character. The words “something” and “mistress” carry that meaning: they are the charged choices in the line, and changing either would soften the effect. Elizabeth sees a place where "natural beauty had been so little counteracted by an awkward taste," and the housekeeper calls him "the best landlord, and the best master, that ever lived.".

Rigor version	Items (in order)	Mix
Scaffolded support	1, 2, 3, 4, 5, 6, 7, 8, 9, 10, 11, 12, 13, 14, 15, 16	recall 10, inference 3, analysis 2, synthesis 1
HS Freshman	17, 18, 6, 2, 19, 10, 3, 20, 12, 13, 21, 11, 22, 23, 24, 25	recall 8, inference 4, analysis 3, synthesis 1
HS Sophomore	1, 26, 17, 27, 5, 6, 20, 3, 11, 12, 13, 14, 23, 22, 28, 29	recall 8, inference 3, analysis 3, synthesis 2
HS Junior	5, 30, 6, 4, 7, 2, 3, 12, 13, 11, 14, 31, 22, 15, 32, 16	recall 7, inference 3, analysis 4, synthesis 2
HS Senior	20, 3, 17, 6, 18, 33, 13, 12, 11, 34, 23, 15, 22, 29, 25, 28	recall 6, inference 3, analysis 4, synthesis 3
AP	7, 18, 2, 8, 35, 12, 13, 24, 15, 22, 34, 14, 25, 28, 16, 29	recall 5, inference 2, analysis 5, synthesis 4
College Freshman	8, 7, 30, 35, 12, 13, 22, 31, 14, 24, 34, 36, 25, 32, 16, 29	recall 4, inference 2, analysis 5, synthesis 5
College Sophomore	18, 2, 10, 12, 13, 37, 15, 24, 23, 34, 14, 28, 29, 25, 36, 16	recall 3, inference 3, analysis 5, synthesis 5
College Junior	26, 18, 8, 35, 12, 14, 24, 34, 23, 15, 28, 36, 38, 29, 25, 16	recall 4, inference 1, analysis 5, synthesis 6
College Senior	17, 10, 8, 35, 12, 11, 15, 34, 14, 22, 23, 25, 29, 28, 36, 16	recall 4, inference 2, analysis 5, synthesis 5
Graduate / PhD	30, 10, 8, 35, 12, 31, 22, 15, 14, 29, 38, 28, 32, 16, 25, 36	recall 4, inference 1, analysis 4, synthesis 7

Writing prompts (eleven rigor levels)

Scaffolded support (250 words; AP: see unit standards): Supported track (work from the passage your teacher selects). In “Chapter XLIII,” how does Austen show Pemberley? Write a paragraph that states your claim, quotes two details from the passage, and explains how each detail supports your idea. Use the setting you noticed as one piece of evidence.

HS Freshman (350 words; AP: see unit standards): In Chapter XLIII, how does Austen develop the idea of Pemberley? State a clear claim, support it with two or three quotations, and explain how the setting in the chapter helps build that idea.

HS Sophomore (450 words; AP: see unit standards): Analyze how Chapter XLIII develops the idea of Pemberley. Make a precise claim, support it with at least three pieces of textual evidence, and explain how the author's use of setting and symbolism shapes that idea. Address one possible counterclaim.

HS Junior (550 words; AP: see unit standards): Analyze how the structure of Chapter XLIII (where it begins, turns and ends) and its setting shape the reader's understanding of Pemberley. Identify one place where the text leaves matters uncertain and explain how that uncertainty adds to its meaning.

HS Senior (600 words; AP: see unit standards): Two readers disagree about what Chapter XLIII suggests about Pemberley. Lay out two plausible interpretations, weigh the evidence for each (including the chapter's setting and symbolism), and argue for the stronger one in a sustained, well-organized essay.

AP (650 words; AP: AP-LIT.SET, AP-LIT.LAN): Write a literary argument in which you analyze how Jane Austen uses setting in Chapter XLIII to complicate the reader's understanding of Pemberley. Develop a defensible thesis, select evidence purposefully, and explain how specific choices of diction and syntax create meaning.

College Freshman (1000 words; AP: see unit standards): Situate Chapter XLIII within its historical and literary context and argue how the chapter's treatment of Pemberley responds to that context. Engage with at least one secondary perspective (a critic, historian or the author's own statements), integrate quotations smoothly, and cite in MLA style.

College Sophomore (1250 words; AP: see unit standards): Read Chapter XLIII alongside the conventions of its genre and period. Argue how the chapter's handling of Pemberley follows or bends those conventions, using the setting as evidence, and test your reading against one published critic. Document two secondary sources in MLA.

College Junior (1500 words; AP: see unit standards): Apply a named critical approach (for example formalist, historicist, feminist, psychoanalytic or ecocritical) to Chapter XLIII and its treatment of Pemberley. State your method, show what it reveals in the chapter's setting and symbolism, and identify where the text resists it.

College Senior (2000 words; AP: see unit standards): Develop a research argument that reads Chapter XLIII as evidence for a larger claim about Pemberley in Pride and Prejudice. Connect close reading of the chapter to the whole novel, engage at least four scholarly sources, and state precisely where your reading departs from theirs (Chicago style).

Graduate / PhD (2500 words; AP: see unit standards): Develop an original argument that reads Chapter XLIII as a hinge in the novel's larger treatment of Pemberley. Position your reading within a named critical conversation (for example formalist, historicist, psychoanalytic, feminist or postcolonial approaches), account for the textual history where relevant, and articulate the stakes of your intervention for scholarship on Pride and Prejudice.

SAT-style questions

1. The rooms were lofty and handsome, and their furniture suitable to the fortune of their proprietor; but Elizabeth saw, with admiration of his taste, that it was neither gaudy nor uselessly fine; with less of splendor, and more real elegance, than the furniture of Rosings.

   As used in the text, what does the word “uselessly” most nearly mean?

   A. without purpose

   B. fearful expectation or anticipation

   C. a state of nervous excitement

   D. spread across or over

2. They descended the hill, crossed the bridge, and drove to the door; and, while examining the nearer aspect of the house, all her apprehensions of meeting its owner returned. She dreaded lest the chambermaid had been mistaken. On applying to see the place, they were admitted into the hall; and Elizabeth, as they waited for the housekeeper, had leisure to wonder at her being where she was.

Which choice best states a central concern of "Chapter XLIII"?

A. Character flaws examined

B. Pemberley

C. Embarrassing relations

D. Renewed hope

SAT key: 1. A (without purpose); 2. B (Pemberley)

Lesson 45: Chapter XLIV

Focus: a changed Darcy

Objective: Students will analyze how characterization develops in “Chapter XLIV” by writing a claim-evidence-reasoning paragraph that cites at least 2 quotations from the section, and will score at least 80% on the section quiz.

Standards: AP: see the unit standards

Teacher only · spoilers

Darcy brings Georgiana and Bingley to meet Elizabeth. Georgiana is shy, not proud. Bingley seems to remember Jane. The Gardiners notice Darcy's affection.

Background: Introducing a sister was a sign of serious intentions.

Significance: Darcy's courtesy to the Gardiners proves he has changed.

Lesson plan and lecture script (90 minutes)

0–8 min · Bell-ringer · You do (8 min)
Students write to the bell-ringer, then pair-share.
What evidence shows Darcy has changed? Write for five minutes. Starters: I think... because... / This connects to pride and prejudice because....
Prompt: What evidence shows Darcy has changed?
Sentence starters: I think… because… · This connects to pride and prejudice because…
Strong response: A strong response takes a position and anticipates this: Darcy has answered her charge of ungentlemanlike behaviour by changing his manners, and she recognizes it.

8–18 min · Vocabulary with etymology notes · I do (10 min)
Five key words in context, with verified word histories.
Today's words: acrimony — bitterness and anger; monosyllable — a word of one syllable; imparted — gave; passed on; accompanying — be present or associated with an event or entity; retreated — pull back or move away or backward. “imparted”: Origin of “impart”: Middle French impartir; earlier Late Latin impartiō.
Words: acrimony: bitterness and anger · monosyllable: a word of one syllable · imparted: gave; passed on · accompanying: be present or associated with an event or entity · retreated: pull back or move away or backward

18–28 min · Background and context · I do (10 min)
Mini-lecture (read or adapt the script).
Introducing a sister was a sign of serious intentions. Darcy's courtesy to the Gardiners proves he has changed. Characterization: Darcy brings Georgiana and Bingley to meet Elizabeth at the inn in Lambton; at Pemberley the next day he is warm to the Gardiners, whom he once would have scorned as people in trade. Point of view: Free indirect discourse carries us through Elizabeth's night of self-examination: respect, esteem and above all gratitude. Watch for gratitude: Austen names gratitude as the ground of Elizabeth's new feeling: affection based on knowledge, not first impressions.

28–40 min · I do: modeled close reading · I do (12 min)
Model the close reading of the anchor quotation using the written think-aloud below.
First, meaning. I read "It was gratitude. Gratitude, not merely for having once loved her, but for loving her still well enough, to forgive all the petulance..." slowly and put it in my own words: Lying awake, Elizabeth decides she feels gratitude to Darcy for still loving her well enough to forgive her harsh rejection. Next, craft. I notice "It was gratitude. Gratitude, not merely..." repeating the word as she corrects and deepens it. The strongest word is "Gratitude": the word names a feeling built on respect, not on a first impression. Then, effect. What new feeling does Elizabeth find for Darcy? My answer: The new feeling Elizabeth finds for Darcy is gratitude, warmth and respect in place of dislike; Austen shows love growing from understanding his generosity rather than from attraction alone.

> It was gratitude. Gratitude, not merely for having once loved her, but for loving her still well enough, to forgive all the petulance and acrimony of her manner in rejecting him (Chapter XLIV, paragraph 16)

Think-aloud: First, meaning. I read "It was gratitude. Gratitude, not merely for having once loved her, but for loving her still well enough, to forgive all the petulance…" slowly and put it in my own words: Lying awake, Elizabeth decides she feels gratitude to Darcy for still loving her well enough to forgive her harsh rejection. Next, craft. I notice "It was gratitude. Gratitude, not merely..." repeating the word as she corrects and deepens it. The strongest word is "Gratitude": the word names a feeling built on respect, not on a first impression. Then, effect. What new feeling does Elizabeth find for Darcy? My answer: The new feeling Elizabeth finds for Darcy is gratitude, warmth and respect in place of dislike; Austen shows love growing from understanding his generosity rather than from attraction alone.

40–55 min · We do: guided annotation · We do (15 min)
Guided analysis of a second quotation; expected answers given.
Ask: What words in this line stand out, and what do they suggest? Expected: The list "self-consequence, or unbending reserve" names the pride she criticized and says it is gone. It links to pride and prejudice: Darcy has changed, and she can see it because her prejudice has gone too. Ask: How does this line connect to pride and prejudice? Expected: Darcy has answered her charge of ungentlemanlike behaviour by changing his manners, and she recognizes it. (Direct evidence that Darcy's manners have changed; note the list of what has vanished.)

> Never, even in the company of his dear friends at Netherfield, or his dignified relations at Rosings, had she seen him so desirous to please, so free from self-consequence, or unbending reserve (Chapter XLIV, paragraph 10)

Ask: What words in this line stand out, and what do they suggest?
Expected answer: The list "self-consequence, or unbending reserve" names the pride she criticized and says it is gone. It links to pride and prejudice: Darcy has changed, and she can see it because her prejudice has gone too.
Ask: How does this line connect to pride and prejudice?
Expected answer: Darcy has answered her charge of ungentlemanlike behaviour by changing his manners, and she recognizes it. (Direct evidence that Darcy's manners have changed; note the list of what has vanished.)

55–70 min · You do: independent annotation · You do (15 min)
Independent annotation and a claim-evidence-reasoning paragraph (exemplar given).
Annotate the chapter for characterization, point of view (three marks with a margin note each), then write one claim-evidence-reasoning paragraph: what does this chapter suggest about a changed Darcy? Then start your writing prompt at your assigned level (HS Sophomore: Analyze how Chapter XLIV develops the idea of a changed Darcy. Make a precise claim, support it with at least three pieces of textual evidence, and explain how the author's use of characterization and theme shapes that idea. Address one possible counterclaim.) Exemplar: Elizabeth's feelings change because of evidence of Darcy's character, not because of his wealth or charm. When the text says “Never, even in the company of his dear friends at Netherfield, or his dignified relations at Rosings, had she seen him so desirous to please, so free from self-consequence, or unbending reserve” (Chapter XLIV, paragraph 10), it shows this directly. She has never seen him "so desirous to please, so free from self-consequence," and her response is "gratitude … for loving her still well enough, to forgive all the petulance and acrimony" of her refusal; her feeling rests on what he has done.
Task: Annotate the chapter for characterization, point of view (three marks with a margin note each), then write one claim-evidence-reasoning paragraph: what does this chapter suggest about a changed Darcy? Then start your writing prompt at your assigned level (HS Sophomore: Analyze how Chapter XLIV develops the idea of a changed Darcy. Make a precise claim, support it with at least three pieces of textual evidence, and explain how the author's use of characterization and theme shapes that idea. Address one possible counterclaim.)
Exemplar: Elizabeth's feelings change because of evidence of Darcy's character, not because of his wealth or charm. When the text says “Never, even in the company of his dear friends at Netherfield, or his dignified relations at Rosings, had she seen him so desirous to please, so free from self-consequence, or unbending reserve” (Chapter XLIV, paragraph 10), it shows this directly. She has never seen him "so desirous to please, so free from self-consequence," and her response is "gratitude … for loving her still well enough, to forgive all the petulance and acrimony" of her refusal; her feeling rests on what he has done.

70–80 min · Discussion · We do (10 min)
Structured discussion from the 30 tiered questions, with facilitation notes.
Anchor question: What evidence shows Darcy has changed? Ask: is gratitude a good foundation for love? Use the narrator's comment at the start of Chapter XLVI to complicate the answer.
Anchor question: What evidence shows Darcy has changed?
Facilitation: Ask: is gratitude a good foundation for love? Use the narrator's comment at the start of Chapter XLVI to complicate the answer.

80–87 min · Exit ticket / chapter quiz · You do (7 min)
Chapter quiz in the app and an exit ticket (answer given).
Chapter quiz in the app, then: In one sentence, what does this chapter suggest about a changed Darcy? Support it with one short quotation. Model answer: Elizabeth's feelings change because of evidence of Darcy's character, not because of his wealth or charm. ("Never, even in the company of his dear friends at Netherfield, or his dignified relations at Rosings, had she seen him so desirous to please, so free from self-", Chapter XLIV, paragraph 10). Accept any defensible claim backed by a quotation from the chapter; the answer key for the quiz is in the Quiz section.
Exit ticket: In one sentence, what does this chapter suggest about a changed Darcy? Support it with one short quotation.
Answer: Model answer: Elizabeth's feelings change because of evidence of Darcy's character, not because of his wealth or charm. ("Never, even in the company of his dear friends at Netherfield, or his dignified relations at Rosings, had she seen him so desirous to please, so free from self-", Chapter XLIV, paragraph 10). Accept any defensible claim backed by a quotation from the chapter; the answer key for the quiz is in the Quiz section.

87–90 min · Closure · I do (3 min)
Summarize the lesson and preview the next reading.
Today we saw how characterization shapes a changed Darcy. Key takeaway: Darcy has answered her charge of ungentlemanlike behaviour by changing his manners, and she recognizes it.

Total: 90 minutes.

Teacher analysis (spoilers)

Literary elements

- Characterization: Darcy brings Georgiana and Bingley to meet Elizabeth at the inn in Lambton; at Pemberley the next day he is warm to the Gardiners, whom he once would have scorned as people in trade.
- Point of view: Free indirect discourse carries us through Elizabeth's night of self-examination: respect, esteem and above all gratitude.

Themes and how they develop

- pride and prejudice: Darcy has answered her charge of ungentlemanlike behaviour by changing his manners, and she recognizes it.

Symbols and motifs

- gratitude: Austen names gratitude as the ground of Elizabeth's new feeling: affection based on knowledge, not first impressions.

Key quotations (checked against the reading text)

- "Never, even in the company of his dear friends at Netherfield, or his dignified relations at Rosings, had she seen him so desirous to please, so free from self-consequence, or unbending reserve" (Chapter XLIV, paragraph 10) Direct evidence that Darcy's manners have changed; note the list of what has vanished.
- "It was gratitude. Gratitude, not merely for having once loved her, but for loving her still well enough, to forgive all the petulance and acrimony of her manner in rejecting him" (Chapter XLIV, paragraph 16) Austen defines Elizabeth's change of heart precisely; the repetition of "gratitude" slows the moment.
- "Such a change in a man of so much pride, excited not only astonishment but gratitude" (Chapter XLIV, paragraph 16) Darcy's change is read as proof of love.

Model claim-evidence-reasoning

Claim: Elizabeth's feelings change because of evidence of Darcy's character, not because of his wealth or charm.
Evidence: "Never, even in the company of his dear friends at Netherfield, or his dignified relations at Rosings, had she seen him so desirous to please, so free from self-consequence, or unbending reserve" (Chapter XLIV, paragraph 10)
Reasoning: She has never seen him "so desirous to please, so free from self-consequence," and her response is "gratitude ... for loving her still well enough, to forgive all the petulance and acrimony" of her refusal; her feeling rests on what he has done.

Vocabulary with etymology notes

Word	Definition (in this sentence)	In context	Word history
acrimony (noun)	bitterness and anger	Gratitude, not merely for having once loved her, but for loving her still well enough, to forgive all the petulance and acrimony of her manner in rejecting him, and all the unjust accusations accompanying her rejection.
monosyllable (noun)	a word of one syllable	She found it difficult to obtain even a word from her beyond a monosyllable.
imparted (verb)	gave; passed on	Elizabeth immediately recognising the livery, guessed what it meant, and imparted no small degree of surprise to her relations, by	"imparted": Origin of "impart": Middle French impartir; earlier Late Latin impartiō. (Liber et Libri origin note, https://en.wiktionary.org/wiki/impart#Etymology) acquainting them with the honour which she expected.

accompanying (verb)	be present or associated with an event or entity	Gratitude, not merely for having once loved her, but for loving her still well enough, to forgive all the petulance and acrimony of her manner in rejecting him, and all the unjust accusations accompanying her rejection.
retreated (verb)	pull back or move away or backward	She retreated from the window, fearful of being seen; and as she walked up and down the room, endeavouring to compose herself, saw such looks of enquiring surprise in her uncle and aunt, as made everything worse.
formidable (adjective)	frightening; alarming	Miss Darcy and her brother appeared, and this formidable introduction took place.	“formidable”: From Latin formidabilis "causing fear," from formido "fear, terror." (Not from forma "shape.") (Online Etymology Dictionary (hand-checked note), https://www.etymonline.com/word/formidable) suspicions (noun)	an impression that something might be the case	The suspicions which had just arisen of Mr.	“suspicions”: Origin of “suspicion”: Anglo-French suspecioun; earlier Late Latin suspectio (“suspicion”). (Liber et Libri origin note, https://en.wiktionary.org/wiki/suspicion#Etymology)

Discussion questions

1. What evidence shows Darcy has changed?
2. Where does characterization appear in this chapter, and what effect does it have? Point to one passage.
3. How does this chapter connect to the book's larger concern with class and social mobility?

Classroom discussion questions (30, tiered)

Wait time after every question (3 s for DOK 1, 5 s for DOK 2, 8 to 10 s for DOK 3 and 4); think-pair-share on DOK 3 and 4; answer each response with a follow-up probe; close with student-generated questions. Focus sets by rigor level: Scaffolded support: 1, 2, 3, 4, 5, 6, 11, 12, 13, 14, 21, 22; HS Freshman: 1, 2, 3, 4, 5, 12, 13, 14, 15, 22, 23, 24; HS Sophomore: 1, 2, 3, 4, 13, 14, 15, 16, 17, 23, 24, 25; HS Junior: 1, 2, 3, 14, 15, 16, 17, 18, 24, 25, 26, 27; HS Senior: 1, 2, 3, 15, 16, 17, 18, 25, 26, 27, 28, 29; AP: 1, 2, 16, 17, 18, 19, 20, 26, 27, 28, 29, 30; College Freshman: 1, 2, 17, 18, 19, 20, 21, 22, 27, 28, 29, 30; College Sophomore: 1, 2, 11, 18, 19, 20, 21, 22, 23, 28, 29, 30; College Junior: 1, 11, 12, 19, 20, 21, 22, 23, 24, 25, 29, 30; College Senior: 1, 11, 12, 13, 20, 21, 22, 23, 24, 25, 26, 30; Graduate / PhD: 1, 11, 12, 13, 21, 22, 23, 24, 25, 26, 27, 28

Literal / recall

1. Whom does Darcy introduce to Elizabeth? [DOK 1 · coldCallWithSupport · wait 3 s · AP: unit standards] Look for: Georgiana
2. How is Georgiana described? [DOK 1 · turnAndTalk · wait 3 s · AP: unit standards] Look for: Shy
3. Who seems to remember Jane fondly? [DOK 1 · coldCallWithSupport · wait 3 s · AP: unit standards] Look for: Bingley
4. What do the Gardiners notice? [DOK 1 · turnAndTalk · wait 3 s · AP: unit standards] Look for: Darcy's affection for Elizabeth
5. How does Darcy treat the Gardiners? [DOK 1 · coldCallWithSupport · wait 3 s · AP: unit standards] Look for: Courteously
6. Retell the three most important events of "Chapter XLIV" in order, in one sentence each. [DOK 1 · turnAndTalk · wait 3 s · AP: unit standards] Look for: Darcy brings Georgiana and Bingley to meet Elizabeth. Georgiana is shy, not proud. Bingley seems to remember Jane. The Gardiners notice Darcy's affection.
7. Which characters appear or are mentioned in "Chapter XLIV"? Name two and one thing each says or does. [DOK 1 · coldCallWithSupport · wait 3 s · AP: unit standards] Look for: Names and actions taken from the chapter; check against the teacher summary.
8. Where and when does "Chapter XLIV" take place? Point to the line that tells you. [DOK 1 · turnAndTalk · wait 3 s · AP: unit standards] Look for: A place/time detail quoted from the chapter.
9. Reread: "Gratitude, not merely for having once loved her, but for loving her still well enough, to forgive all the petulance and acrimony of her manner in rejecting him, and all the unjust accusations accompanying her rejection." What does "acrimony" mean here, and what is literally happening in this line? [DOK 1 · turnAndTalk · wait 3 s · AP: unit standards] Look for: acrimony: bitterness and anger.
10. Reread: "She found it difficult to obtain even a word from her beyond a monosyllable." What does "monosyllable" mean here, and what is literally happening in this line? [DOK 1 · turnAndTalk · wait 3 s · AP: unit standards] Look for: monosyllable: a word of one syllable.

Inferential / analytical

1. What does "Chapter XLIV" suggest about a changed Darcy? State the inference and the line that supports it. [DOK 2 · thinkPairShare · wait 5 s · AP-LIT.LAN] Look for: Darcy's courtesy to the Gardiners proves he has changed.
2. Find one example of characterization in this chapter. What does it reveal that a plain statement would not? [DOK 2 · followUp · wait 5 s · AP-LIT.CHR] Look for: Look for what characters say, do and think, and how others react to them.
3. How does the theme in this chapter shape what we understand about a changed Darcy? [DOK 3 · thinkPairShare · wait 8 s · AP-LIT.LAN] Look for: Look for statements or moments that connect to the book's big ideas.
   Answer guidance: A defensible line of argument: Elizabeth's feelings change because of evidence of Darcy's character, not because of his wealth or charm. Useful evidence: "Never, even in the company of his dear friends at Netherfield, or his dignified relations at Rosings, had she seen him so desirous to please, so free from self-consequence, or unbending reserve" (Chapter XLIV, paragraph 10): Direct evidence that Darcy's manners have changed; note the list of what has vanished. Theme link: Darcy has answered her charge of ungentlemanlike behaviour by changing his manners, and she recognizes it. Credit any position that is supported by quotation and reasoning; push one-sided answers to address the strongest counterpoint.

4. In the passage that begins “Miss Darcy and her brother appeared, and this formidable introduction took place.”, why might Austen have chosen these particular words? Pick two and explain their connotations. [DOK 2 · followUp · wait 5 s · AP-LIT.FIG] Look for: Diction analysis of two words in the anchor passage.
5. What causes the main turn in “Chapter XLIV”, and what effect is it likely to have on what follows? [DOK 2 · followUp · wait 5 s · AP-LIT.STR] Look for: Darcy brings Georgiana and Bingley to meet Elizabeth. Georgiana is shy, not proud. Bingley seems to remember Jane. The Gardiners notice Darcy's affection.
6. How does “Chapter XLIV” build on “Chapter XLIII”? Name one link of cause and effect. [DOK 3 · thinkPairShare · wait 8 s · AP-LIT.STR] Look for: A causal or structural link between this and the previous chapter.
   Answer guidance: A defensible line of argument: Elizabeth's feelings change because of evidence of Darcy's character, not because of his wealth or charm. Useful evidence: “It was gratitude. Gratitude, not merely for having once loved her, but for loving her still well enough, to forgive all the petulance and acrimony of her manner in rejecting him” (Chapter XLIV, paragraph 16): Austen defines Elizabeth's change of heart precisely; the repetition of "gratitude" slows the moment. Theme link: Darcy has answered her charge of ungentlemanlike behaviour by changing his manners, and she recognizes it. Credit any position that is supported by quotation and reasoning; push one-sided answers to address the strongest counterpoint.
7. What can we infer about a character's motives from what they say and do here, as opposed to what they claim? [DOK 3 · followUp · wait 8 s · AP-LIT.CHR] Look for: An inference about motive supported by a quoted line.
   Answer guidance: A defensible line of argument: Elizabeth's feelings change because of evidence of Darcy's character, not because of his wealth or charm. Useful evidence: “Such a change in a man of so much pride, excited not only astonishment but gratitude” (Chapter XLIV, paragraph 16): Darcy's change is read as proof of love. On characterization: Darcy brings Georgiana and Bingley to meet Elizabeth at the inn in Lambton; at Pemberley the next day he is warm to the Gardiners, whom he once would have scorned as people in trade. Credit any position that is supported by quotation and reasoning; push one-sided answers to address the strongest counterpoint.
8. The bell-ringer asked: “What evidence shows Darcy has changed?” Now that we have read closely, how would you revise your first answer, and which line changed your mind? [DOK 2 · thinkPairShare · wait 5 s · AP-LIT.LAN] Look for: A revised answer anchored in the text.
9. Where does irony appear, and how does it connect this chapter to the larger concern with class and social mobility? [DOK 3 · followUp · wait 8 s · AP-LIT.NAR] Look for: Look for gaps between what characters expect or say and what is true.
   Answer guidance: A defensible line of argument: Elizabeth's feelings change because of evidence of Darcy's character, not because of his wealth or charm. Useful evidence: “Never, even in the company of his dear friends at Netherfield, or his dignified relations at Rosings, had she seen him so desirous to please, so free from self-consequence, or unbending reserve” (Chapter XLIV, paragraph 10): Direct evidence that Darcy's manners have changed; note the list of what has vanished. Theme link: Darcy has answered her charge of ungentlemanlike behaviour by changing his manners, and she recognizes it. Credit any position that is supported by quotation and reasoning; push one-sided answers to address the strongest counterpoint.
10. Background: Introducing a sister was a sign of serious intentions. How does knowing this change the way you read one moment in the chapter? [DOK 3 · thinkPairShare · wait 8 s · AP-LIT.SET] Look for: A specific moment reread in light of the context.
    Answer guidance: A defensible line of argument: Elizabeth's feelings change because of evidence of Darcy's character, not because of his wealth or charm. Useful evidence: “It was gratitude. Gratitude, not merely for having once loved her, but for loving her still well enough, to forgive all the petulance and acrimony of her manner in rejecting him” (Chapter XLIV, paragraph 16): Austen defines Elizabeth's change of heart precisely; the repetition of "gratitude" slows the moment. Theme link: Darcy has answered her charge of ungentlemanlike behaviour by changing his manners, and she recognizes it. Credit any position that is supported by quotation and reasoning; push one-sided answers to address the strongest counterpoint.

Evaluative / synthesis / creative

1. A critic might argue: “Darcy's courtesy to the Gardiners proves he has changed.” How far do you agree? Take a stand and defend it with two lines from the chapter. [DOK 3 · fourCorners · wait 8 s · AP-LIT.LAN] Look for: A defended position with evidence and one counterpoint.
   Answer guidance: A defensible line of argument: Elizabeth's feelings change because of evidence of Darcy's character, not because of his wealth or charm. Useful evidence: “Such a change in a man of so much pride, excited not only astonishment but gratitude” (Chapter XLIV, paragraph 16): Darcy's change is read as proof of love. Theme link: Darcy has answered her charge of ungentlemanlike behaviour by changing his manners, and she recognizes it. Credit any position that is supported by quotation and reasoning; push one-sided answers to address the strongest counterpoint.
2. Which character in this chapter acts most wisely, and which least? Judge them by a standard you name. [DOK 3 · thinkPairShare · wait 8 s · AP-LIT.CHR, AP-LIT.LAN] Look for: An evaluation using an explicit criterion and evidence.
   Answer guidance: A defensible line of argument: Elizabeth's feelings change because of evidence of Darcy's character, not because of his wealth or charm. Useful evidence: “Never, even in the company of his dear friends at Netherfield, or his dignified relations at Rosings, had she seen him so desirous to please, so free from self-consequence, or unbending reserve” (Chapter XLIV, paragraph 10): Direct evidence that Darcy's manners have changed; note the list of what has vanished. On characterization: Darcy brings Georgiana and Bingley to meet Elizabeth at the inn in Lambton; at Pemberley the next day he is warm to the Gardiners, whom he once would have scorned as people in trade. Credit any position that is supported by quotation and reasoning; push one-sided answers to address the strongest counterpoint.
3. Rewrite one moment of “Chapter XLIV” from the point of view of a different character. What does the new angle reveal or hide about a changed Darcy? [DOK 4 · thinkPairShare · wait 8 s · AP-LIT.LAN, AP-LIT.NAR] Look for: A creative product with a rationale tied to the text.
   Answer guidance: A defensible line of argument: Elizabeth's feelings change because of evidence of Darcy's character, not because of his wealth or charm. Useful evidence: “It was gratitude. Gratitude, not merely for having once loved her, but for loving her still well enough, to forgive all the petulance and acrimony of her manner in rejecting him” (Chapter XLIV, paragraph 16): Austen defines Elizabeth's change of heart precisely; the repetition of "gratitude" slows the moment. On point of view: Free indirect discourse carries us through Elizabeth's night of self-examination: respect, esteem and above all gratitude. Credit any position that is supported by quotation and reasoning; push one-sided answers to address the strongest counterpoint.
4. Write three questions of your own about “Chapter XLIV”: one recall, one “why/how”, and one “should/what if”. Trade with a partner and answer theirs. [DOK 3 · studentGenerated · wait 8 s · AP-LIT.LAN] Look for: Student-generated questions at three levels.

Answer guidance: A defensible line of argument: Elizabeth's feelings change because of evidence of Darcy's character, not because of his wealth or charm. Useful evidence: “Such a change in a man of so much pride, excited not only astonishment but gratitude” (Chapter XLIV, paragraph 16): Darcy's change is read as proof of love. Theme link: Darcy has answered her charge of ungentlemanlike behaviour by changing his manners, and she recognizes it. Credit any position that is supported by quotation and reasoning; push one-sided answers to address the strongest counterpoint.

5. Connect this chapter to women's limited choices: is the link strong or weak so far? What would Austen need to show next to strengthen it? [DOK 4 · socraticCircle · wait 8 s · AP-LIT.LAN] Look for: A judgment of thematic development across the work.

   Answer guidance: A defensible line of argument: Elizabeth's feelings change because of evidence of Darcy's character, not because of his wealth or charm. Useful evidence: “Never, even in the company of his dear friends at Netherfield, or his dignified relations at Rosings, had she seen him so desirous to please, so free from self-consequence, or unbending reserve” (Chapter XLIV, paragraph 10): Direct evidence that Darcy's manners have changed; note the list of what has vanished. Theme link: Darcy has answered her charge of ungentlemanlike behaviour by changing his manners, and she recognizes it. Credit any position that is supported by quotation and reasoning; push one-sided answers to address the strongest counterpoint.

6. Is the characterization in this chapter effective, or does it feel heavy-handed? Evaluate it as a reader would in a review. [DOK 3 · fourCorners · wait 8 s · AP-LIT.CHR, AP-LIT.LAN] Look for: An evaluative judgment with criteria and evidence.

   Answer guidance: A defensible line of argument: Elizabeth's feelings change because of evidence of Darcy's character, not because of his wealth or charm. Useful evidence: “It was gratitude. Gratitude, not merely for having once loved her, but for loving her still well enough, to forgive all the petulance and acrimony of her manner in rejecting him” (Chapter XLIV, paragraph 16): Austen defines Elizabeth's change of heart precisely; the repetition of "gratitude" slows the moment. On characterization: Darcy brings Georgiana and Bingley to meet Elizabeth at the inn in Lambton; at Pemberley the next day he is warm to the Gardiners, whom he once would have scorned as people in trade. Credit any position that is supported by quotation and reasoning; push one-sided answers to address the strongest counterpoint.

7. Compare how “Chapter XLIV” treats a changed Darcy with how another text, film or event you know treats a similar idea. What does Pride and Prejudice see that the other misses? [DOK 4 · socraticCircle · wait 8 s · AP-LIT.LAN] Look for: A cross-text synthesis.

   Answer guidance: A defensible line of argument: Elizabeth's feelings change because of evidence of Darcy's character, not because of his wealth or charm. Useful evidence: “Such a change in a man of so much pride, excited not only astonishment but gratitude” (Chapter XLIV, paragraph 16): Darcy's change is read as proof of love. Theme link: Darcy has answered her charge of ungentlemanlike behaviour by changing his manners, and she recognizes it. Credit any position that is supported by quotation and reasoning; push one-sided answers to address the strongest counterpoint.

8. Predict what “Chapter XLV” will bring, using two clues from this chapter. After reading, evaluate your prediction. [DOK 3 · thinkPairShare · wait 8 s · AP-LIT.LAN, AP-LIT.STR] Look for: A prediction or judgment justified with textual clues.

   Answer guidance: A defensible line of argument: Elizabeth's feelings change because of evidence of Darcy's character, not because of his wealth or charm. Useful evidence: “Never, even in the company of his dear friends at Netherfield, or his dignified relations at Rosings, had she seen him so desirous to please, so free from self-consequence, or unbending reserve" (Chapter XLIV, paragraph 10): Direct evidence that Darcy's manners have changed; note the list of what has vanished. Theme link: Darcy has answered her charge of ungentlemanlike behaviour by changing his manners, and she recognizes it. Credit any position that is supported by quotation and reasoning; push one-sided answers to address the strongest counterpoint.

9. Design a one-paragraph modern adaptation of this chapter (setting, characters, conflict). What must stay the same for it to still be about a changed Darcy? [DOK 4 · thinkPairShare · wait 8 s · AP-LIT.LAN] Look for: A creative transfer that keeps the core idea.

   Answer guidance: A defensible line of argument: Elizabeth's feelings change because of evidence of Darcy's character, not because of his wealth or charm. Useful evidence: "It was gratitude. Gratitude, not merely for having once loved her, but for loving her still well enough, to forgive all the petulance and acrimony of her manner in rejecting him" (Chapter XLIV, paragraph 16): Austen defines Elizabeth's change of heart precisely; the repetition of "gratitude" slows the moment. Theme link: Darcy has answered her charge of ungentlemanlike behaviour by changing his manners, and she recognizes it. Credit any position that is supported by quotation and reasoning; push one-sided answers to address the strongest counterpoint.

10. What question would you most like to ask Jane Austen about this chapter, and what answer do you think the text itself gives? [DOK 4 · studentGenerated · wait 8 s · AP-LIT.LAN] Look for: A student-generated question answered from evidence.

    Answer guidance: A defensible line of argument: Elizabeth's feelings change because of evidence of Darcy's character, not because of his wealth or charm. Useful evidence: "Such a change in a man of so much pride, excited not only astonishment but gratitude" (Chapter XLIV, paragraph 16): Darcy's change is read as proof of love. Theme link: Darcy has answered her charge of ungentlemanlike behaviour by changing his manners, and she recognizes it. Credit any position that is supported by quotation and reasoning; push one-sided answers to address the strongest counterpoint.

Annotation focus

- Characterization: look for what characters say, do and think, and how others react to them (anchor passage in the We do segment)
- Also notice Theme: statements or moments that connect to the book's big ideas
- Also notice Irony: gaps between what characters expect or say and what is true

Chapter quiz: item bank (all eleven rigor versions)

1. [fill · recall · DOK 1] Complete the quotation from Chapter XLIV, paragraph 1: "Elizabeth had settled it that Mr. Darcy would bring his sister to visit her, the very day after her reaching Pemberley; and was _____ resolved not to be out of sight of the inn the whole of that morning." Word bank: enquired, consequently, together, invitation

   Key: consequently

2. [fill · recall · DOK 1] Fill in the blank with the vocabulary word that fits: "She _____ from the window, fearful of being seen; and as she walked up and down the room, endeavouring to compose herself, saw such looks of enquiring surprise in her uncle and aunt, as made everything worse." Word bank: retreated, imparted, acrimony, monosyllable

   Key: retreated

3. [mc · recall · DOK 1] Who seems to remember Jane fondly?
   A. Bingley
   B. Darcy
   C. Wickham
   D. Collins

   Key: A (Bingley)

4. [mc · recall · DOK 1] In the line “She found it difficult to obtain even a word from her beyond a monosyllable.”, what does “monosyllable” most nearly mean?
   A. to a great extent or degree
   B. bands or chains worn around the wrist
   C. a word of one syllable
   D. to restore; to set up again

   Key: C (a word of one syllable)

5. [mc · recall · DOK 1] How is Georgiana described?
   A. Proud
   B. Rude
   C. Shy
   D. Loud

   Key: C (Shy)

6. [mc · recall · DOK 1] In the line “Elizabeth immediately recognising the livery, guessed what it meant, and imparted no small degree of surprise to her relations, by acquainting them with the honour which she expected.”, what does “imparted” most nearly mean?
   A. made to feel ashamed or less proud
   B. very small portrait paintings
   C. gave; passed on
   D. upsetting; disturbing

   Key: C (gave; passed on)

7. [fill · recall · DOK 1] Fill in the blank with the vocabulary word that fits: “The _____ which had just arisen of Mr.” Word bank: suspicions, imparted, acrimony, monosyllable

   Key: suspicions

8. [mc · recall · DOK 1] What do the Gardiners notice?
   A. Elizabeth's dislike
   B. Darcy's affection for Elizabeth
   C. Bingley's engagement
   D. Wickham's arrival

   Key: B (Darcy's affection for Elizabeth)

9. [mc · recall · DOK 1] Whom does Darcy introduce to Elizabeth?
   A. Fitzwilliam
   B. Caroline

C. Anne de Bourgh

D. Georgiana

Key: D (Georgiana)

10. [mc · recall · DOK 1] Which word completes this sentence from Chapter XLIV, paragraph 8? “Sometimes she could fancy that he talked less than on former occasions, and once or twice pleased herself with the notion that as he looked at her, he was trying to trace a _____.”

    A. invitation

    B. attention

    C. unassuming

    D. resemblance

    Key: D (resemblance)

11. [mc · inference · DOK 2] Which of these passages comes earliest in Chapter XLIV?

    A. “Her uncle and aunt were all amazement; and the embarrassment of her manner as she spoke, joined to the circumstance itself, and many of the…”

    B. “Elizabeth had settled it that Mr. Darcy would bring his sister to visit her, the very day after her reaching Pemberley; and was…”

    C. “Nothing had ever suggested it before, but they now felt that there was no other way of accounting for such attentions from such a quarter,…”

    D. “But her conclusion was false; for on the very morning after their own arrival at Lambton, these visitors came.”

    Key: B (“Elizabeth had settled it that Mr. Darcy would bring his sister to visit her, the very day after her reaching Pemberley; and was…”)

12. [short · inference · DOK 2] What can you infer from this line? “It was gratitude. Gratitude, not merely for having once loved her, but for loving her still well enough, to forgive all the petulance and acrimony of her manner in rejecting him” (Chapter XLIV, paragraph 16) Answer in two or three sentences with one detail.

    Sample answer: Austen defines Elizabeth's change of heart precisely; the repetition of "gratitude" slows the moment. The evidence is “It was gratitude. Gratitude, not merely for having once loved her, but for loving her still well enough, to forgive all the petulance and…” (Chapter XLIV, paragraph 16).

13. [short · inference · DOK 2] What does this passage from Chapter XLIV, paragraph 8 reveal about the character or situation? “In seeing Bingley, her thoughts naturally flew to her sister; and oh! how ardently did she long to know, whether any of his were directed in a like manner.” Answer in two or three sentences with one detail.

    Sample answer: The passage (Chapter XLIV, paragraph 8) shows the situation turning on first impressions and prejudice: Darcy has answered her charge of ungentlemanlike behaviour by changing his manners, and she recognizes it. The words “naturally” and “directed” are the proof, because they show how the moment looks to the people in it. They suggest more than the narrator states outright.

14. [short · analysis · DOK 3] Analyze how the word choice in this passage from Chapter XLIV, paragraph 1 shapes its tone: “Nothing had ever suggested it before, but they now felt that there was no other way of accounting for such attentions from such a quarter, than by supposing a partiality for their niece.” Pick two words and explain their effect.

    Sample answer: The words “accounting” and “attentions” (Chapter XLIV, paragraph 1) make the tone heavy and deliberate rather than neutral. That weight points the reader to pride and self-knowledge: Darcy has answered her charge of ungentlemanlike behaviour by changing his manners, and she recognizes it. The author chooses them so the moment feels significant instead of passing.

15. [mc · analysis · DOK 3] Which literary element does this describe in “Chapter XLIV”? Free indirect discourse carries us through Elizabeth's night of self-examination: respect, esteem and above all gratitude.

    A. Point of view

    B. Hyperbole

    C. Allusion

    D. Tone / mood

    Key: A (Point of view)

16. [short · synthesis · DOK 4] Connect this passage from Chapter XLIV, paragraph 14 to the story's treatment of women's limited choices: “Neither had anything occurred in the intelligence of their Lambton friends, that could materially lessen its weight.” Use one other moment from the story as well.

    Sample answer: This passage (Chapter XLIV, paragraph 14) develops women's limited choices: Darcy has answered her charge of ungentlemanlike behaviour by changing his manners, and she recognizes it. Its words “intelligence” and “materially” carry that idea into this moment. The same concern returns in “Of Mr. Darcy it was now a matter of anxiety to think well; and, as far as their acquaintance reached, there was no…” (Chapter XLIV, paragraph 14), so the two passages read as a pattern, not a single moment. Together they show the story treating women's limited choices as central.

17. [fill · recall · DOK 1] Complete the quotation from Chapter XLIV, paragraph 16: “Such a change in a man of so much pride, excited not only _____ but gratitude”

    Key: astonishment

18. [fill · recall · DOK 1] Fill in the blank with the vocabulary word that fits: “Miss Darcy and her brother appeared, and this _____ introduction took place.” Word bank: acrimony, imparted, formidable, monosyllable

    Key: formidable

19. [mc · inference · DOK 2] Which choice best states a central concern of “Chapter XLIV”?

    A. Family uproar

    B. Family in crisis

    C. A changed Darcy

    D. The first proposal

    Key: C (A changed Darcy)

20. [short · analysis · DOK 3] Analyze how the word choice in this passage from Chapter XLIV, paragraph 12 shapes its tone: “Eager to be alone, and fearful of enquiries or hints from her uncle and aunt, she stayed with them only long enough to hear their favourable opinion of Bingley, and then hurried away to dress.” Pick two words and explain their effect.

    Sample answer: The words “favourable” and “enquiries” (Chapter XLIV, paragraph 12) make the tone heavy and deliberate rather than neutral. That weight points the reader to pride and self-knowledge: Darcy has answered her charge of ungentlemanlike behaviour by changing his manners, and she recognizes it. The author chooses them so the moment feels significant instead of passing.

21. [short · analysis · DOK 3] Analyze how the word choice in this passage from Chapter XLIV, paragraph 10 shapes its tone: “It was not often that she could turn her eyes on Mr. Darcy himself” Pick two words and explain their effect.

    Sample answer: The words “himself” (Chapter XLIV, paragraph 10) make the tone heavy and deliberate rather than neutral.

That weight points the reader to class and social mobility: Darcy has answered her charge of ungentlemanlike behaviour by changing his manners, and she recognizes it. The author chooses them so the moment feels significant instead of passing.

22. [fill · recall · DOK 1] Complete the quotation from Chapter XLIV, paragraph 5: "He _____ in a friendly, though general way, after her family, and looked and spoke with the same good-humoured ease that he had ever done." Word bank: perturbation, consequently, determined, enquired
    Key: enquired
23. [fill · recall · DOK 1] Complete the quotation from Chapter XLIV, paragraph 16: "It was _____. Gratitude, not merely for having once loved her, but for loving her still well enough, to forgive all the petulance and acrimony of her manner in rejecting him"
    Key: gratitude
24. [fill · recall · DOK 1] Complete the quotation from Chapter XLIV, paragraph 9: "There was not much in the question, nor in the _____ remark, but there was a look and a manner which gave them meaning." Word bank: together, attention, particular, preceding Key: preceding
25. [short · inference · DOK 2] What can you infer from this line? "Never, even in the company of his dear friends at Netherfield, or his dignified relations at Rosings, had she seen him so desirous to please, so free from self-consequence, or unbending reserve" (Chapter XLIV, paragraph 10) Answer in two or three sentences with one detail.
    Sample answer: Direct evidence that Darcy's manners have changed; note the list of what has vanished. The evidence is "Never, even in the company of his dear friends at Netherfield, or his dignified relations at Rosings, had she seen him so desirous to…" (Chapter XLIV, paragraph 10).
26. [short · synthesis · DOK 4] Connect this passage from Chapter XLIV, paragraph 6 to the story's treatment of marriage and money: "To Mr. and Mrs. Gardiner he was scarcely a less interesting personage than to herself." Use one other moment from the story as well.
    Sample answer: This passage (Chapter XLIV, paragraph 6) develops marriage and money: Darcy has answered her charge of ungentlemanlike behaviour by changing his manners, and she recognizes it. Its words "interesting" and "personage" carry that idea into this moment. The same concern returns in "She wanted to ascertain the feelings of each of her visitors, she wanted to compose her own, and to make herself…" (Chapter XLIV, paragraph 7), so the two passages read as a pattern, not a single moment. Together they show the story treating marriage and money as central.
27. [fill · recall · DOK 1 · AP: AP-LIT.STR] Complete the quotation from Chapter XLIV, paragraph 10: "Never, even in the company of his dear friends at Netherfield, or his dignified relations at Rosings, had she seen him so desirous to please, so free from self-_____, or unbending reserve"
    Key: consequence
28. [short · analysis · DOK 3 · AP: AP-LIT.FIG] Analyze the word choice in "Such a change in a man of so much pride, excited not only astonishment but gratitude" (Chapter XLIV, paragraph 16). Pick two words and explain what they suggest.
    Sample answer: Darcy's change is read as proof of love. The evidence is "Such a change in a man of so much pride, excited not only astonishment but gratitude" (Chapter XLIV, paragraph 16). This develops pride and prejudice: Darcy has answered her charge of ungentlemanlike behaviour by changing his manners, and she recognizes it. The words "astonishment" and "gratitude" carry that meaning: they are the charged choices in the line, and changing either would soften the effect.
29. [short · synthesis · DOK 4 · AP: AP-LIT.LAN] Connect this passage from Chapter XLIV, paragraph 16 to the story's treatment of marriage and money: "She respected, she esteemed, she was grateful to him, she felt a real interest in his welfare" Use one other moment from the story as well.

Sample answer: This passage (Chapter XLIV, paragraph 16) develops marriage and money: Darcy has answered her charge of ungentlemanlike behaviour by changing his manners, and she recognizes it. Its words “respected” and “esteemed” carry that idea into this moment. The same concern returns in “The respect created by the conviction of his valuable qualities, though at first unwillingly admitted, had for some…” (Chapter XLIV, paragraph 16), so the two passages read as a pattern, not a single moment. Together they show the story treating marriage and money as central.

30. [mc · recall · DOK 1 · AP: AP-LIT.STR] How does Darcy treat the Gardiners?

    A. Coldly

    B. Rudely

    C. Courteously

    D. He ignores them

    Key: C (Courteously)

31. [short · synthesis · DOK 4 · AP: AP-LIT.LAN] Connect this passage from Chapter XLIV, paragraph 4 to the story's treatment of women's limited choices: “Miss Darcy was tall, and on a larger scale than Elizabeth; and, though little more than sixteen, her figure was formed, and her appearance womanly and graceful.” Use one other moment from the story as well.

    Sample answer: This passage (Chapter XLIV, paragraph 4) develops women's limited choices: Darcy has answered her charge of ungentlemanlike behaviour by changing his manners, and she recognizes it. Its words “appearance” and “graceful” carry that idea into this moment. The same concern returns in “All Elizabeth’s anger against him had been long done away; but, had she still felt any, it could hardly have stood its…” (Chapter XLIV, paragraph 5), so the two passages read as a pattern, not a single moment. Together they show the story treating women's limited choices as central.

32. [short · synthesis · DOK 4 · AP: AP-LIT.LAN] Evaluate this claim about the chapter: “Elizabeth's feelings change because of evidence of Darcy's character, not because of his wealth or charm.” Is it fully persuasive? Argue with evidence, including a passage that complicates it.

    Sample answer: The claim is persuasive in part. “Never, even in the company of his dear friends at Netherfield, or his dignified relations at Rosings, had she seen him so desirous to please, so free from…” (Chapter XLIV, paragraph 10) supports it: She has never seen him "so desirous to please, so free from self-consequence," and her response is "gratitude ... for loving her still well enough, to forgive all the petulance and acrimony" of her refusal; her feeling rests on what he has done. But “It was gratitude. Gratitude, not merely for having once loved her, but for loving her still well enough, to forgive all the petulance and acrimony of her…” (Chapter XLIV, paragraph 16) complicates it: Austen defines Elizabeth's change of heart precisely; the repetition of "gratitude" slows the moment, and its “not” marks a limit or reversal the claim passes over. A fair verdict is that the claim is mostly right but overstated; it needs a limiting clause to cover that passage.

33. [mc · inference · DOK 2 · AP: AP-LIT.LAN] What does this passage most clearly show? “Such a change in a man of so much pride, excited not only astonishment but gratitude” (Chapter XLIV, paragraph 16)

    A. Why Mr. Bennet married.

    B. The narrator's verdict on the Bennet marriage.

    C. Wickham judged on appearance.

    D. Darcy's change is read as proof of love.

    Key: D (Darcy's change is read as proof of love.)

34. [short · synthesis · DOK 4 · AP: AP-LIT.LAN] Synthesis: trace how pride and prejudice develops from Chapter XXXVII to Chapter XLIV. Use one quotation from each.

    Sample answer: Earlier, in Chapter XXXVII, paragraph 1, the text reads “The two gentlemen left Rosings the next morning”, which shows the quiet opening after the storm. In Chapter XLIV, “Never, even in the company of his dear friends at Netherfield, or his dignified relations at Rosings, had she seen him so desirous to…" (Chapter XLIV, paragraph 10) — Direct evidence that Darcy's manners have changed; note the list of what has vanished. Darcy has answered her charge of ungentlemanlike behaviour by changing his manners, and she recognizes it.

35. [short · synthesis · DOK 4 · AP: AP-LIT.FIG] Close reading: how do the diction and syntax of "It was gratitude. Gratitude, not merely for having once loved her, but for loving her still well enough, to forgive all the petulance and acrimony of her manner in rejecting him" (Chapter XLIV, paragraph 16) shape its meaning? Consider a second, competing reading.

    Sample answer: Austen defines Elizabeth's change of heart precisely; the repetition of "gratitude" slows the moment. The evidence is "It was gratitude. Gratitude, not merely for having once loved her, but for loving her still well enough, to forgive all the petulance and…" (Chapter XLIV, paragraph 16). This develops pride and prejudice: Darcy has answered her charge of ungentlemanlike behaviour by changing his manners, and she recognizes it. The words "gratitude" and "rejecting" carry that meaning: they are the charged choices in the line, and changing either would soften the effect. She has never seen him "so desirous to please, so free from self-consequence," and her response is "gratitude ... for loving her still well enough, to forgive all the petulance and acrimony" of her refusal; her feeling rests on what he has done.

36. [mc · inference · DOK 2 · Dual Credit (Indiana College Core): ICC-WC-1.5] What does this passage most clearly show? "It was gratitude. Gratitude, not merely for having once loved her, but for loving her still well enough, to forgive all the petulance and acrimony of her manner in rejecting him" (Chapter XLIV, paragraph 16)

    A. Contrast of Bingley and Darcy.

    B. Austen defines Elizabeth's change of heart precisely; the repetition of "gratitude" slows the moment.

    C. The narrator steps in to defend a love based on esteem rather than "first sight."

    D. Mrs. Bennet is annoyed that her daughters have come back early, before Jane could gain more time with Bingley.

    Key: B (Austen defines Elizabeth's change of heart precisely; the repetition of "gratitude" slows the moment.)

37. [mc · analysis · DOK 3 · Dual Credit (Indiana College Core): ICC-WC-1.5] Which literary element does this describe in "Chapter XLIV"? Darcy brings Georgiana and Bingley to meet Elizabeth at the inn in Lambton; at Pemberley the next day he is warm to the Gardiners, whom he once would have scorned as people in trade.

    A. Imagery

    B. Hyperbole

    C. Characterization

    D. Tone / mood

    Key: C (Characterization)

38. [short · analysis · DOK 3 · Program outcome: LeL-C2-LIT-1] Claim: Elizabeth's feelings change because of evidence of Darcy's character, not because of his wealth or charm. Explain how this evidence supports the claim: "Never, even in the company of his dear friends at Netherfield, or his dignified relations at Rosings, had she seen him so desirous to please, so free from self-consequence, or unbending reserve" (Chapter XLIV, paragraph 10).

    Sample answer: She has never seen him "so desirous to please, so free from self-consequence," and her response is "gratitude ... for loving her still well enough, to forgive all the petulance and acrimony" of her refusal; her feeling rests on what he has done. The evidence is "Never, even in the company of his dear friends at Netherfield, or his dignified relations at Rosings, had she seen him so desirous to…" (Chapter XLIV, paragraph 10) — Direct evidence that Darcy's manners have changed; note the list of what has vanished. This develops pride and prejudice: Darcy has answered her charge of ungentlemanlike behaviour by changing his manners, and she recognizes it.

39. [mc · recall · DOK 1 · Program outcome: LeL-C3-LIT-1] In the line “Gratitude, not merely for having once loved her, but for loving her still well enough, to forgive all the petulance and acrimony of her manner in rejecting him, and all the unjust accusations accompanying her rejection.”, what does “acrimony” most nearly mean?

    A. be present or associated with an event or entity

    B. bitterness and anger

    C. gave; passed on

    D. a word of one syllable

    Key: B (bitterness and anger)

40. [short · synthesis · DOK 4 · Program outcome: LeL-C3-LIT-1] Close reading: how do the diction and syntax of “Never, even in the company of his dear friends at Netherfield, or his dignified relations at Rosings, had she seen him so desirous to please, so free from self-consequence, or unbending reserve” (Chapter XLIV, paragraph 10) shape its meaning? Consider a second, competing reading.

    Sample answer: Direct evidence that Darcy's manners have changed; note the list of what has vanished. The evidence is “Never, even in the company of his dear friends at Netherfield, or his dignified relations at Rosings, had she seen him so desirous to…” (Chapter XLIV, paragraph 10). This develops pride and prejudice: Darcy has answered her charge of ungentlemanlike behaviour by changing his manners, and she recognizes it. The words “consequence” and “relations” carry that meaning: they are the charged choices in the line, and changing either would soften the effect. She has never seen him "so desirous to please, so free from self-consequence," and her response is "gratitude ... for loving her still well enough, to forgive all the petulance and acrimony" of her refusal; her feeling rests on what he has done.

Rigor version	Items (in order)	Mix
Scaffolded support	1, 2, 3, 4, 5, 6, 7, 8, 9, 10, 11, 12, 13, 14, 15, 16	recall 10, inference 3, analysis 2, synthesis 1
HS Freshman	5, 7, 17, 4, 18, 9, 2, 3, 12, 11, 13, 19, 14, 20, 21, 16	recall 8, inference 4, analysis 3, synthesis 1
HS Sophomore	22, 23, 3, 24, 1, 17, 4, 25, 19, 13, 11, 20, 14, 21, 16, 26	recall 7, inference 4, analysis 3, synthesis 2
HS Junior	2, 3, 9, 22, 5, 27, 18, 12, 11, 13, 15, 28, 21, 20, 16, 29	recall 7, inference 3, analysis 4, synthesis 2
HS Senior	2, 7, 9, 1, 3, 23, 30, 11, 13, 19, 20, 14, 21, 31, 26, 32	recall 7, inference 3, analysis 3, synthesis 3
AP	9, 23, 2, 11, 33, 13, 19, 14, 20, 21, 34, 32, 26, 16, 35, 31	recall 3, inference 4, analysis 3, synthesis 6
College Freshman	5, 18, 1, 36, 13, 11, 21, 20, 14, 37, 32, 31, 26, 34, 29, 16	recall 3, inference 3, analysis 4, synthesis 6
College Sophomore	2, 9, 18, 33, 11, 21, 20, 38, 37, 14, 35, 29, 32, 34, 16, 26	recall 3, inference 2, analysis 5, synthesis 6
College Junior	2, 39, 18, 11, 33, 21, 20, 37, 14, 32, 34, 26, 31, 40, 29, 16	recall 3, inference 2, analysis 4, synthesis 7
College Senior	22, 2, 39, 11, 33, 15, 20, 21, 14, 16, 32, 35, 34, 26, 31, 29	recall 3, inference 2, analysis 4, synthesis 7
Graduate / PhD	3, 2, 18, 11, 36, 15, 21, 14, 20, 40, 34, 26, 16, 31, 32, 29	recall 3, inference 2, analysis 4, synthesis 7

Writing prompts (eleven rigor levels)

Scaffolded support (250 words; AP: see unit standards): Supported track (work from the passage your teacher selects). In "Chapter XLIV," how does Austen show a changed Darcy? Write a paragraph that states your claim, quotes two details from the passage, and explains how each detail supports your idea. Use the characterization you noticed as one piece of evidence.

HS Freshman (350 words; AP: see unit standards): In Chapter XLIV, how does Austen develop the idea of a changed Darcy? State a clear claim, support it with two or three quotations, and explain how the characterization in the chapter helps build that idea.

HS Sophomore (450 words; AP: see unit standards): Analyze how Chapter XLIV develops the idea of a changed Darcy. Make a precise claim, support it with at least three pieces of textual evidence, and explain how the author's use of characterization and theme shapes that idea. Address one possible counterclaim.

HS Junior (550 words; AP: see unit standards): Analyze how the structure of Chapter XLIV (where it begins, turns and ends) and its characterization shape the reader's understanding of a changed Darcy. Identify one place where the text leaves matters uncertain and explain how that uncertainty adds to its meaning.

HS Senior (600 words; AP: see unit standards): Two readers disagree about what Chapter XLIV suggests about a changed Darcy. Lay out two plausible interpretations, weigh the evidence for each (including the chapter's characterization and theme), and argue for the stronger one in a sustained, well-organized essay.

AP (650 words; AP: AP-LIT.CHR, AP-LIT.LAN): Write a literary argument in which you analyze how Jane Austen uses characterization in Chapter XLIV to complicate the reader's understanding of a changed Darcy. Develop a defensible thesis, select evidence purposefully, and explain how specific choices of diction and syntax create meaning.

College Freshman (1000 words; AP: see unit standards): Situate Chapter XLIV within its historical and literary context and argue how the chapter's treatment of a changed Darcy responds to that context. Engage with at least one secondary perspective (a critic, historian or the author's own statements), integrate quotations smoothly, and cite in MLA style.

College Sophomore (1250 words; AP: see unit standards): Read Chapter XLIV alongside the conventions of its genre and period. Argue how the chapter's handling of a changed Darcy follows or bends those conventions, using the characterization as evidence, and test your reading against one published critic. Document two secondary sources in MLA.

College Junior (1500 words; AP: see unit standards): Apply a named critical approach (for example formalist, historicist, feminist, psychoanalytic or ecocritical) to Chapter XLIV and its treatment of a changed Darcy. State your method, show what it reveals in the chapter's characterization and theme, and identify where the text resists it.

College Senior (2000 words; AP: see unit standards): Develop a research argument that reads Chapter XLIV as evidence for a larger claim about a changed Darcy in Pride and Prejudice. Connect close reading of the chapter to the whole novel, engage at least four scholarly sources, and state precisely where your reading departs from theirs (Chicago style).

Graduate / PhD (2500 words; AP: see unit standards): Develop an original argument that reads Chapter XLIV as a hinge in the novel's larger treatment of a changed Darcy. Position your reading within a named critical conversation (for example formalist, historicist, psychoanalytic, feminist or postcolonial approaches), account for the textual history where relevant, and articulate the stakes of your intervention for scholarship on Pride and Prejudice.

SAT-style questions

1. Elizabeth immediately recognising the livery, guessed what it meant, and imparted no small degree of surprise to her relations, by acquainting them with the honour which she expected.

   As used in the text, what does the word “imparted” most nearly mean?

   A. gave; passed on

   B. an impression that something might be the case

   C. frightening; alarming

   D. pull back or move away or backward

2. Miss Darcy and her brother appeared, and this formidable introduction took place. With astonishment did Elizabeth see, that her new acquaintance was at least as much embarrassed as herself. Since her being at Lambton, she had heard that Miss Darcy was exceedingly proud; but the observation of a very few minutes convinced her, that she was only exceedingly shy. She found it difficult to obtain even a word from her beyond a monosyllable.

   Which choice best states a central concern of “Chapter XLIV”?

   A. The entail and the officers

   B. Too late

   C. A charming stranger

   D. A changed Darcy

SAT key: 1. A (gave; passed on); 2. D (A changed Darcy)

Lesson 46: Chapter XLV

Focus: jealousy at Pemberley

Objective: Students will analyze how characterization develops in “Chapter XLV” by writing a claim-evidence-reasoning paragraph that cites at least 2 quotations from the section, and will score at least 80% on the section quiz.

Standards: AP: see the unit standards

Teacher only · spoilers

Elizabeth and Mrs. Gardiner visit Pemberley. Caroline Bingley tries to provoke Elizabeth by mentioning the militia (Wickham), embarrassing Georgiana. Darcy defends Elizabeth, calling her one of the handsomest women he knows.

Background: Polite visits were also contests of status and wit.

Significance: Caroline's spite backfires, revealing Darcy's devotion.

Lesson plan and lecture script (90 minutes)

0–8 min · Bell-ringer · You do (8 min)
Students write to the bell-ringer, then pair-share.
Why does Caroline's attack backfire? Write for five minutes. Starters: I think... because... / This connects to first impressions because....
Prompt: Why does Caroline's attack backfire?
Sentence starters: I think… because… · This connects to first impressions because…
Strong response: A strong response takes a position and anticipates this: Darcy reveals how far his own first impression has changed.

8–18 min · Vocabulary with etymology notes · I do (10 min)
Five key words in context, with verified word histories.
Today's words: predominate — to be stronger than the others; peaches — soft, round, sweet fruits with fuzzy skin; nettled — irritated; annoyed; pyramids — pyramid-shaped piles; chestnuts — chestnut trees.
Words: predominate: to be stronger than the others · peaches: soft, round, sweet fruits with fuzzy skin · nettled: irritated; annoyed · pyramids: pyramid-shaped piles · chestnuts: chestnut trees

18–28 min · Background and context · I do (10 min)
Mini-lecture (read or adapt the script).
Polite visits were also contests of status and wit. Caroline's spite backfires, revealing Darcy's devotion. Characterization: At Pemberley Miss Bingley tries to embarrass Elizabeth by mentioning the militia, hurting Georgiana instead; after the visit she criticizes Elizabeth's looks to Darcy and receives a crushing reply. Irony: Each of Miss Bingley's attacks increases Darcy's regard for Elizabeth. Watch for silence and reserve: What characters leave unsaid (Darcy's reserve, Jane's composure, Elizabeth's secrets) drives misunderstanding. In this chapter: "felt themselves inferior, the belief of her being proud and reserved. Mrs. Gardiner and her niece, however, did her justice, and pitied" (Chapter XLV, paragraph 3).

28–40 min · I do: modeled close reading · I do (12 min)
Model the close reading of the anchor quotation using the written think-aloud below.
First, meaning. I read "How very ill Eliza Bennet looks this morning, Mr. Darcy" slowly and put it in my own words: Miss Bingley tells Darcy that Elizabeth looks ill, brown and coarse this morning. Next, craft. I notice the jealous exaggeration aimed at Darcy, not at Elizabeth. The strongest word is "ill": the word is meant to make Darcy see Elizabeth as unattractive. Then, effect. Why does Miss Bingley attack Elizabeth's looks in front of Darcy? My answer: Her spite backfires: Darcy answers that Elizabeth is one of the handsomest women he knows, which shows that his feelings have only grown.

> How very ill Eliza Bennet looks this morning, Mr. Darcy (Chapter XLV, paragraph 13)

Think-aloud: First, meaning. I read "How very ill Eliza Bennet looks this morning, Mr. Darcy" slowly and put it in my own words: Miss Bingley tells Darcy that Elizabeth looks ill, brown and coarse this morning. Next, craft. I notice the jealous exaggeration aimed at Darcy, not at Elizabeth. The strongest word is "ill": the word is meant to make Darcy see Elizabeth as unattractive. Then, effect. Why does Miss Bingley attack Elizabeth's looks in front of Darcy? My answer: Her spite backfires: Darcy answers that Elizabeth is one of the handsomest women he knows, which shows that his feelings have only grown.

40–55 min · We do: guided annotation · We do (15 min)
Guided analysis of a second quotation; expected answers given.
Ask: What words in this line stand out, and what do they suggest? Expected: The line answers "tolerable" from the first ball; first impressions can be overturned. Miss Bingley's jealousy backfires: dramatic irony. Ask: How does this line connect to first impressions? Expected: Darcy reveals how far his own first impression has changed. (Elizabeth reads Miss Bingley correctly.)

> Convinced as Elizabeth now was that Miss Bingley's dislike of her had originated in jealousy (Chapter XLV, paragraph 1)

Ask: What words in this line stand out, and what do they suggest?
Expected answer: The line answers "tolerable" from the first ball; first impressions can be overturned. Miss Bingley's jealousy backfires: dramatic irony.
Ask: How does this line connect to first impressions?
Expected answer: Darcy reveals how far his own first impression has changed. (Elizabeth reads Miss Bingley correctly.)

55–70 min · You do: independent annotation · You do (15 min)

Independent annotation and a claim-evidence-reasoning paragraph (exemplar given).

Annotate the chapter for characterization, irony (three marks with a margin note each), then write one claim-evidence-reasoning paragraph: what does this chapter suggest about jealousy at Pemberley? Then start your writing prompt at your assigned level (HS Sophomore: Analyze how Chapter XLV develops the idea of jealousy at Pemberley. Make a precise claim, support it with at least three pieces of textual evidence, and explain how the author's use of characterization and irony shapes that idea. Address one possible counterclaim.) Exemplar: Darcy's reply to Miss Bingley shows how completely he has revised his first impression of Elizabeth. When the text says “it is many months since I have considered her as one of the handsomest women of my acquaintance” (Chapter XLV, paragraph 18), it shows this directly. In Chapter III she was "tolerable"; now he says "it is many months since I have considered her as one of the handsomest women of my acquaintance," a direct reversal prompted by Miss Bingley's own spite.

Task: Annotate the chapter for characterization, irony (three marks with a margin note each), then write one claim-evidence-reasoning paragraph: what does this chapter suggest about jealousy at Pemberley? Then start your writing prompt at your assigned level (HS Sophomore: Analyze how Chapter XLV develops the idea of jealousy at Pemberley. Make a precise claim, support it with at least three pieces of textual evidence, and explain how the author's use of characterization and irony shapes that idea. Address one possible counterclaim.)

Exemplar: Darcy's reply to Miss Bingley shows how completely he has revised his first impression of Elizabeth. When the text says “it is many months since I have considered her as one of the handsomest women of my acquaintance” (Chapter XLV, paragraph 18), it shows this directly. In Chapter III she was "tolerable"; now he says "it is many months since I have considered her as one of the handsomest women of my acquaintance," a direct reversal prompted by Miss Bingley's own spite.

70–80 min · Discussion · We do (10 min)

Structured discussion from the 30 tiered questions, with facilitation notes.

Anchor question: Why does Caroline's attack backfire? Put "tolerable" and this line side by side. Ask: what changed, Elizabeth or Darcy's way of seeing?

Anchor question: Why does Caroline's attack backfire?

Facilitation: Put "tolerable" and this line side by side. Ask: what changed, Elizabeth or Darcy's way of seeing?

80–87 min · Exit ticket / chapter quiz · You do (7 min)
Chapter quiz in the app and an exit ticket (answer given).
Chapter quiz in the app, then: In one sentence, what does this chapter suggest about jealousy at Pemberley? Support it with one short quotation. Model answer: Darcy's reply to Miss Bingley shows how completely he has revised his first impression of Elizabeth. ("it is many months since I have considered her as one of the handsomest women of my acquaintance", Chapter XLV, paragraph 18). Accept any defensible claim backed by a quotation from the chapter; the answer key for the quiz is in the Quiz section.
Exit ticket: In one sentence, what does this chapter suggest about jealousy at Pemberley? Support it with one short quotation.
Answer: Model answer: Darcy's reply to Miss Bingley shows how completely he has revised his first impression of Elizabeth. ("it is many months since I have considered her as one of the handsomest women of my acquaintance", Chapter XLV, paragraph 18). Accept any defensible claim backed by a quotation from the chapter; the answer key for the quiz is in the Quiz section.

87–90 min · Closure · I do (3 min)
Summarize the lesson and preview the next reading.
Today we saw how characterization shapes jealousy at Pemberley. Key takeaway: Darcy reveals how far his own first impression has changed.

Total: 90 minutes.

Teacher analysis (spoilers)

Literary elements

- Characterization: At Pemberley Miss Bingley tries to embarrass Elizabeth by mentioning the militia, hurting Georgiana instead; after the visit she criticizes Elizabeth's looks to Darcy and receives a crushing reply.
- Irony: Each of Miss Bingley's attacks increases Darcy's regard for Elizabeth.

Themes and how they develop

- first impressions: Darcy reveals how far his own first impression has changed.

Symbols and motifs

- silence and reserve: What characters leave unsaid (Darcy's reserve, Jane's composure, Elizabeth's secrets) drives misunderstanding. In this chapter: "felt themselves inferior, the belief of her being proud and reserved. Mrs. Gardiner and her niece, however, did her justice, and pitied" (Chapter XLV, paragraph 3).
- pride: Pride is discussed openly and shown in action; who is proud, and whether pride is a fault, keeps shifting. In this chapter: "those who felt themselves inferior, the belief of her being proud and reserved. Mrs. Gardiner and her niece, however, did her justice" (Chapter XLV, paragraph 3).

Key quotations (checked against the reading text)

- “How very ill Eliza Bennet looks this morning, Mr. Darcy” (Chapter XLV, paragraph 13) Miss Bingley's attempt to lower Elizabeth in his eyes.
- “it is many months since I have considered her as one of the handsomest women of my acquaintance” (Chapter XLV, paragraph 18) Darcy reverses his "tolerable" of Chapter III.
- “Convinced as Elizabeth now was that Miss Bingley’s dislike of her had originated in jealousy” (Chapter XLV, paragraph 1) Elizabeth reads Miss Bingley correctly.

Model claim-evidence-reasoning

Claim: Darcy's reply to Miss Bingley shows how completely he has revised his first impression of Elizabeth.
Evidence: “it is many months since I have considered her as one of the handsomest women of my acquaintance” (Chapter XLV, paragraph 18)
Reasoning: In Chapter III she was "tolerable"; now he says "it is many months since I have considered her as one of the handsomest women of my acquaintance," a direct reversal prompted by Miss Bingley's own spite.

Vocabulary with etymology notes

Word	Definition (in this sentence)	In context	Word history
predominate (verb)	to be stronger than the others	Darcy, by the feelings which prevailed on his entering the room; and then, though but a moment before she had believed her wishes to predominate, she began to regret that he came.
peaches (noun)	soft, round, sweet fruits with fuzzy skin	There was now employment for the whole party; for though they could not all talk, they could all eat; and the beautiful pyramids of grapes, nectarines, and peaches, soon collected them round the table.
nettled (adjective)	irritated; annoyed	Persuaded as Miss Bingley was that Darcy admired Elizabeth, this was not the best method of recommending herself; but angry people are not always wise; and in seeing him at last look somewhat nettled, she had all the success she expected.
pyramids (noun)	pyramid-shaped piles	There was now employment for the whole party; for though they could not all talk, they could all eat; and the beautiful pyramids of grapes, nectarines, and peaches, soon collected them round the table.
chestnuts (noun)	chestnut trees	Its windows opening to the ground, admitted a most refreshing view of the high woody hills behind the house, and of the beautiful oaks and Spanish chestnuts which were scattered over the intermediate lawn.

sneering (verb)	express through a scornful smile	Miss Bingley saw all this likewise; and, in the imprudence of anger, took the first opportunity of saying, with sneering civility —
brevity (noun)	the use of brief expressions	She answered with equal indifference and brevity, and the other said no more.
deciding (verb)	reach, make, or come to a decision about something	While thus engaged, Elizabeth had a fair opportunity of deciding whether she most feared or wished for the appearance of Mr.	"deciding": Origin of "decide": Old French decider; earlier Latin dēcīdere. (Liber et Libri origin note, https://en.wiktionary.org/wiki/decide#Etymology)

Discussion questions

1. Why does Caroline's attack backfire?
2. Where does characterization appear in this chapter, and what effect does it have? Point to one passage.
3. How does this chapter connect to the book's larger concern with women's limited choices?

Classroom discussion questions (30, tiered)

Wait time after every question (3 s for DOK 1, 5 s for DOK 2, 8 to 10 s for DOK 3 and 4); think-pair-share on DOK 3 and 4; answer each response with a follow-up probe; close with student-generated questions. Focus sets by rigor level: Scaffolded support: 1, 2, 3, 4, 5, 6, 11, 12, 13, 14, 21, 22; HS Freshman: 1, 2, 3, 4, 5, 12, 13, 14, 15, 22, 23, 24; HS Sophomore: 1, 2, 3, 4, 13, 14, 15, 16, 17, 23, 24, 25; HS Junior: 1, 2, 3, 14, 15, 16, 17, 18, 24, 25, 26, 27; HS Senior: 1, 2, 3, 15, 16, 17, 18, 25, 26, 27, 28, 29; AP: 1, 2, 16, 17, 18, 19, 20, 26, 27, 28, 29, 30; College Freshman: 1, 2, 17, 18, 19, 20, 21, 22, 27, 28, 29, 30; College Sophomore: 1, 2, 11, 18, 19, 20, 21, 22, 23, 28, 29, 30; College Junior: 1, 11, 12, 19, 20, 21, 22, 23, 24, 25, 29, 30; College Senior: 1, 11, 12, 13, 20, 21, 22, 23, 24, 25, 26, 30; Graduate / PhD: 1, 11, 12, 13, 21, 22, 23, 24, 25, 26, 27, 28

Literal / recall

1. Who visits Pemberley with Elizabeth? [DOK 1 · coldCallWithSupport · wait 3 s · AP: unit standards] Look for: Mrs. Gardiner
2. What does Caroline mention to provoke Elizabeth? [DOK 1 · turnAndTalk · wait 3 s · AP: unit standards] Look for: The militia
3. Who is embarrassed by the remark? [DOK 1 · coldCallWithSupport · wait 3 s · AP: unit standards] Look for: Georgiana
4. What does Darcy say about Elizabeth? [DOK 1 · turnAndTalk · wait 3 s · AP: unit standards] Look for: One of the handsomest women he knows
5. What does Caroline's behavior reveal? [DOK 1 · coldCallWithSupport · wait 3 s · AP: unit standards] Look for: Jealousy
6. Retell the three most important events of "Chapter XLV" in order, in one sentence each. [DOK 1 · turnAndTalk · wait 3 s · AP: unit standards] Look for: Elizabeth and Mrs. Gardiner visit Pemberley. Caroline Bingley tries to provoke Elizabeth by mentioning the militia (Wickham), embarrassing Georgiana. Darcy defends Elizabeth, calling her one of the handsomest women he knows.

7. Which characters appear or are mentioned in “Chapter XLV”? Name two and one thing each says or does. [DOK 1 · coldCallWithSupport · wait 3 s · AP: unit standards] Look for: Names and actions taken from the chapter; check against the teacher summary.
8. Where and when does “Chapter XLV” take place? Point to the line that tells you. [DOK 1 · turnAndTalk · wait 3 s · AP: unit standards] Look for: A place/time detail quoted from the chapter.
9. Reread: “Darcy, by the feelings which prevailed on his entering the room; and then, though but a moment before she had believed her wishes to predominate, she began to regret that he came.” What does “predominate” mean here, and what is literally happening in this line? [DOK 1 · turnAndTalk · wait 3 s · AP: unit standards] Look for: predominate: to be stronger than the others.
10. Reread: “There was now employment for the whole party; for though they could not all talk, they could all eat; and the beautiful pyramids of grapes, nectarines, and peaches, soon collected them round the table.” What does “peaches” mean here, and what is literally happening in this line? [DOK 1 · turnAndTalk · wait 3 s · AP: unit standards] Look for: peaches: soft, round, sweet fruits with fuzzy skin.

Inferential / analytical

1. What does “Chapter XLV” suggest about jealousy at Pemberley? State the inference and the line that supports it. [DOK 2 · thinkPairShare · wait 5 s · AP-LIT.LAN] Look for: Caroline's spite backfires, revealing Darcy's devotion.
2. Find one example of characterization in this chapter. What does it reveal that a plain statement would not? [DOK 2 · followUp · wait 5 s · AP-LIT.CHR] Look for: Look for what characters say, do and think, and how others react to them.
3. How does the irony in this chapter shape what we understand about jealousy at Pemberley? [DOK 3 · thinkPairShare · wait 8 s · AP-LIT.NAR] Look for: Look for gaps between what characters expect or say and what is true.
   Answer guidance: A defensible line of argument: Darcy's reply to Miss Bingley shows how completely he has revised his first impression of Elizabeth. Useful evidence: “How very ill Eliza Bennet looks this morning, Mr. Darcy” (Chapter XLV, paragraph 13): Miss Bingley's attempt to lower Elizabeth in his eyes. On irony: Each of Miss Bingley's attacks increases Darcy's regard for Elizabeth. Credit any position that is supported by quotation and reasoning; push one-sided answers to address the strongest counterpoint.
4. In the passage that begins “On reaching the house, they were shown through the hall into the saloon, whose northern aspect rendered it delightful for summer.”, why might Austen have chosen these particular words? Pick two and explain their connotations. [DOK 2 · followUp · wait 5 s · AP-LIT.FIG] Look for: Diction analysis of two words in the anchor passage.
5. What causes the main turn in “Chapter XLV”, and what effect is it likely to have on what follows? [DOK 2 · followUp · wait 5 s · AP-LIT.STR] Look for: Elizabeth and Mrs. Gardiner visit Pemberley. Caroline Bingley tries to provoke Elizabeth by mentioning the militia (Wickham), embarrassing Georgiana. Darcy defends Elizabeth, calling her one of the handsomest women he knows.
6. How does “Chapter XLV” build on “Chapter XLIV”? Name one link of cause and effect. [DOK 3 · thinkPairShare · wait 8 s · AP-LIT.STR] Look for: A causal or structural link between this and the previous chapter.
   Answer guidance: A defensible line of argument: Darcy's reply to Miss Bingley shows how completely he has revised his first impression of Elizabeth. Useful evidence: “it is many months since I have considered her as one of the handsomest women of my acquaintance” (Chapter XLV, paragraph 18): Darcy reverses his "tolerable" of Chapter III. Theme link: Darcy reveals how far his own first impression has changed. Credit any position that is supported by quotation and reasoning; push one-sided answers to address the strongest counterpoint.

7. What can we infer about a character's motives from what they say and do here, as opposed to what they claim? [DOK 3 · followUp · wait 8 s · AP-LIT.CHR] Look for: An inference about motive supported by a quoted line.
   Answer guidance: A defensible line of argument: Darcy's reply to Miss Bingley shows how completely he has revised his first impression of Elizabeth. Useful evidence: “Convinced as Elizabeth now was that Miss Bingley’s dislike of her had originated in jealousy” (Chapter XLV, paragraph 1): Elizabeth reads Miss Bingley correctly. On characterization: At Pemberley Miss Bingley tries to embarrass Elizabeth by mentioning the militia, hurting Georgiana instead; after the visit she criticizes Elizabeth's looks to Darcy and receives a crushing reply. Credit any position that is supported by quotation and reasoning; push one-sided answers to address the strongest counterpoint.
8. The bell-ringer asked: “Why does Caroline's attack backfire?” Now that we have read closely, how would you revise your first answer, and which line changed your mind? [DOK 2 · thinkPairShare · wait 5 s · AP-LIT.LAN] Look for: A revised answer anchored in the text.
9. Where does plot appear, and how does it connect this chapter to the larger concern with women's limited choices? [DOK 3 · followUp · wait 8 s · AP-LIT.STR] Look for: Look for key events and the causes linking them.
   Answer guidance: A defensible line of argument: Darcy's reply to Miss Bingley shows how completely he has revised his first impression of Elizabeth. Useful evidence: “How very ill Eliza Bennet looks this morning, Mr. Darcy” (Chapter XLV, paragraph 13): Miss Bingley's attempt to lower Elizabeth in his eyes. Theme link: Darcy reveals how far his own first impression has changed. Credit any position that is supported by quotation and reasoning; push one-sided answers to address the strongest counterpoint.
10. Background: Polite visits were also contests of status and wit. How does knowing this change the way you read one moment in the chapter? [DOK 3 · thinkPairShare · wait 8 s · AP-LIT.SET] Look for: A specific moment reread in light of the context.
    Answer guidance: A defensible line of argument: Darcy's reply to Miss Bingley shows how completely he has revised his first impression of Elizabeth. Useful evidence: “it is many months since I have considered her as one of the handsomest women of my acquaintance” (Chapter XLV, paragraph 18): Darcy reverses his "tolerable" of Chapter III. Theme link: Darcy reveals how far his own first impression has changed. Credit any position that is supported by quotation and reasoning; push one-sided answers to address the strongest counterpoint.

Evaluative / synthesis / creative

1. A critic might argue: “Caroline's spite backfires, revealing Darcy's devotion.” How far do you agree? Take a stand and defend it with two lines from the chapter. [DOK 3 · fourCorners · wait 8 s · AP-LIT.LAN] Look for: A defended position with evidence and one counterpoint.
   Answer guidance: A defensible line of argument: Darcy's reply to Miss Bingley shows how completely he has revised his first impression of Elizabeth. Useful evidence: “Convinced as Elizabeth now was that Miss Bingley’s dislike of her had originated in jealousy” (Chapter XLV, paragraph 1): Elizabeth reads Miss Bingley correctly. Theme link: Darcy reveals how far his own first impression has changed. Credit any position that is supported by quotation and reasoning; push one-sided answers to address the strongest counterpoint.
2. Which character in this chapter acts most wisely, and which least? Judge them by a standard you name. [DOK 3 · thinkPairShare · wait 8 s · AP-LIT.CHR, AP-LIT.LAN] Look for: An evaluation using an explicit criterion and evidence.

Answer guidance: A defensible line of argument: Darcy's reply to Miss Bingley shows how completely he has revised his first impression of Elizabeth. Useful evidence: “How very ill Eliza Bennet looks this morning, Mr. Darcy” (Chapter XLV, paragraph 13): Miss Bingley's attempt to lower Elizabeth in his eyes. On characterization: At Pemberley Miss Bingley tries to embarrass Elizabeth by mentioning the militia, hurting Georgiana instead; after the visit she criticizes Elizabeth's looks to Darcy and receives a crushing reply. Credit any position that is supported by quotation and reasoning; push one-sided answers to address the strongest counterpoint.

3. Rewrite one moment of “Chapter XLV” from the point of view of a different character. What does the new angle reveal or hide about jealousy at Pemberley? [DOK 4 · thinkPairShare · wait 8 s · AP-LIT.LAN, AP-LIT.NAR] Look for: A creative product with a rationale tied to the text.

   Answer guidance: A defensible line of argument: Darcy's reply to Miss Bingley shows how completely he has revised his first impression of Elizabeth. Useful evidence: “it is many months since I have considered her as one of the handsomest women of my acquaintance” (Chapter XLV, paragraph 18): Darcy reverses his "tolerable" of Chapter III. Theme link: Darcy reveals how far his own first impression has changed. Credit any position that is supported by quotation and reasoning; push one-sided answers to address the strongest counterpoint.

4. Write three questions of your own about “Chapter XLV”: one recall, one “why/how”, and one “should/what if”. Trade with a partner and answer theirs. [DOK 3 · studentGenerated · wait 8 s · AP-LIT.LAN] Look for: Student-generated questions at three levels.

   Answer guidance: A defensible line of argument: Darcy's reply to Miss Bingley shows how completely he has revised his first impression of Elizabeth. Useful evidence: “Convinced as Elizabeth now was that Miss Bingley’s dislike of her had originated in jealousy” (Chapter XLV, paragraph 1): Elizabeth reads Miss Bingley correctly. Theme link: Darcy reveals how far his own first impression has changed. Credit any position that is supported by quotation and reasoning; push one-sided answers to address the strongest counterpoint.

5. Connect this chapter to first impressions and prejudice: is the link strong or weak so far? What would Austen need to show next to strengthen it? [DOK 4 · socraticCircle · wait 8 s · AP-LIT.LAN] Look for: A judgment of thematic development across the work.

   Answer guidance: A defensible line of argument: Darcy's reply to Miss Bingley shows how completely he has revised his first impression of Elizabeth. Useful evidence: “How very ill Eliza Bennet looks this morning, Mr. Darcy” (Chapter XLV, paragraph 13): Miss Bingley's attempt to lower Elizabeth in his eyes. Theme link: Darcy reveals how far his own first impression has changed. Credit any position that is supported by quotation and reasoning; push one-sided answers to address the strongest counterpoint.

6. Is the characterization in this chapter effective, or does it feel heavy-handed? Evaluate it as a reader would in a review. [DOK 3 · fourCorners · wait 8 s · AP-LIT.CHR, AP-LIT.LAN] Look for: An evaluative judgment with criteria and evidence.

   Answer guidance: A defensible line of argument: Darcy's reply to Miss Bingley shows how completely he has revised his first impression of Elizabeth. Useful evidence: “it is many months since I have considered her as one of the handsomest women of my acquaintance” (Chapter XLV, paragraph 18): Darcy reverses his "tolerable" of Chapter III. On characterization: At Pemberley Miss Bingley tries to embarrass Elizabeth by mentioning the militia, hurting Georgiana instead; after the visit she criticizes Elizabeth's looks to Darcy and receives a crushing reply. Credit any position that is supported by quotation and reasoning; push one-sided answers to address the strongest counterpoint.

7. Compare how “Chapter XLV” treats jealousy at Pemberley with how another text, film or event you know treats a similar idea. What does Pride and Prejudice see that the other misses? [DOK 4 · socraticCircle · wait 8 s · AP-LIT.LAN] Look for: A cross-text synthesis.

   Answer guidance: A defensible line of argument: Darcy's reply to Miss Bingley shows how completely he has revised his first impression of Elizabeth. Useful evidence: “Convinced as Elizabeth now was that Miss Bingley’s dislike of her had originated in jealousy” (Chapter XLV, paragraph 1): Elizabeth reads Miss Bingley correctly. Theme link: Darcy reveals how far his own first impression has changed. Credit any position that is supported by quotation and reasoning; push one-sided answers to address the strongest counterpoint.

8. Predict what “Chapter XLVI” will bring, using two clues from this chapter. After reading, evaluate your prediction. [DOK 3 · thinkPairShare · wait 8 s · AP-LIT.LAN, AP-LIT.STR] Look for: A prediction or judgment justified with textual clues.

   Answer guidance: A defensible line of argument: Darcy's reply to Miss Bingley shows how completely he has revised his first impression of Elizabeth. Useful evidence: “How very ill Eliza Bennet looks this morning, Mr. Darcy” (Chapter XLV, paragraph 13): Miss Bingley's attempt to lower Elizabeth in his eyes. Theme link: Darcy reveals how far his own first impression has changed. Credit any position that is supported by quotation and reasoning; push one-sided answers to address the strongest counterpoint.

9. Design a one-paragraph modern adaptation of this chapter (setting, characters, conflict). What must stay the same for it to still be about jealousy at Pemberley? [DOK 4 · thinkPairShare · wait 8 s · AP-LIT.LAN] Look for: A creative transfer that keeps the core idea.

   Answer guidance: A defensible line of argument: Darcy's reply to Miss Bingley shows how completely he has revised his first impression of Elizabeth. Useful evidence: “it is many months since I have considered her as one of the handsomest women of my acquaintance” (Chapter XLV, paragraph 18): Darcy reverses his "tolerable" of Chapter III. Theme link: Darcy reveals how far his own first impression has changed. Credit any position that is supported by quotation and reasoning; push one-sided answers to address the strongest counterpoint.

10. What question would you most like to ask Jane Austen about this chapter, and what answer do you think the text itself gives? [DOK 4 · studentGenerated · wait 8 s · AP-LIT.LAN] Look for: A student-generated question answered from evidence.

    Answer guidance: A defensible line of argument: Darcy's reply to Miss Bingley shows how completely he has revised his first impression of Elizabeth. Useful evidence: “Convinced as Elizabeth now was that Miss Bingley’s dislike of her had originated in jealousy” (Chapter XLV, paragraph 1): Elizabeth reads Miss Bingley correctly. Theme link: Darcy reveals how far his own first impression has changed. Credit any position that is supported by quotation and reasoning; push one-sided answers to address the strongest counterpoint.

Annotation focus

- Characterization: look for what characters say, do and think, and how others react to them (anchor passage in the We do segment)
- Also notice Irony: gaps between what characters expect or say and what is true
- Also notice Plot: key events and the causes linking them

Chapter quiz: item bank (all eleven rigor versions)

1. [mc · recall · DOK 1] Which word completes this sentence from Chapter XLV, paragraph 4? “Miss Darcy looked as if she wished for courage enough to join in it; and _____ did venture a short sentence, when there was least danger of its being heard.”

   A. succeeded

   B. delightful

   C. sometimes

   D. family

   Key: C (sometimes)

2. [mc · recall · DOK 1] Which word completes this sentence from Chapter XLV, paragraph 9? “They must be a great loss to your _____.”

   A. particularly

   B. succeeded

   C. family

   D. criticisms

   Key: C (family)

3. [fill · recall · DOK 1] Complete the quotation from Chapter XLV, paragraph 1: “Convinced as Elizabeth now was that Miss Bingley’s dislike of her had _____ in jealousy”

   Key: originated

4. [mc · recall · DOK 1] What does Caroline's behavior reveal?

   A. Fear

   B. Shyness

   C. Jealousy

   D. Kindness

   Key: C (Jealousy)

5. [mc · recall · DOK 1] In the line “Persuaded as Miss Bingley was that Darcy admired Elizabeth, this was not the best method of recommending herself; but angry people are not always wise; and in seeing him at last look somewhat nettled, she had all the…”, what does “nettled” most nearly mean?

   A. irritated; annoyed

   B. to give up

   C. manners shown by one's upbringing

   D. an impression that something might be the case

   Key: A (irritated; annoyed)

6. [fill · recall · DOK 1] Complete the quotation from Chapter XLV, paragraph 18: “it is many months since I have considered her as one of the handsomest women of my _____”

   Key: acquaintance

7. [mc · recall · DOK 1] Who is embarrassed by the remark?

   A. Darcy

   B. Mrs. Gardiner

   C. Bingley

D. Georgiana

Key: D (Georgiana)

8. [fill · recall · DOK 1] Complete the quotation from Chapter XLV, paragraph 6: "The next _____ which their visit afforded was produced by the entrance of servants with cold meat, cake, and a variety of all the finest fruits in season" Word bank: undoubtedly, determine, particularly, variation

   Key: variation

9. [fill · recall · DOK 1] Fill in the blank with the vocabulary word that fits: "She answered with equal indifference and _____, and the other said no more." Word bank: peaches, predominate, brevity, nettled

   Key: brevity

10. [mc · recall · DOK 1] What does Caroline mention to provoke Elizabeth?

    A. Collins

    B. Rosings

    C. Her muddy walk

    D. The militia

    Key: D (The militia)

11. [short · inference · DOK 2] What does this passage from Chapter XLV, paragraph 3 reveal about the character or situation? "In this room they were received by Miss Darcy, who was sitting there with Mrs. Hurst and Miss Bingley, and the lady with whom she lived in London." Answer in two or three sentences with one detail.

    Sample answer: The passage (Chapter XLV, paragraph 3) shows the situation turning on first impressions and prejudice: Darcy reveals how far his own first impression has changed. The words "received" and "sitting" are the proof, because they show how the moment looks to the people in it. They suggest more than the narrator states outright.

12. [mc · inference · DOK 2] Which choice best states a central concern of "Chapter XLV"?

    A. Jealousy at Pemberley

    B. Shameless return

    C. A disastrous ball

    D. The letter

    Key: A (Jealousy at Pemberley)

13. [short · inference · DOK 2] What does this passage from Chapter XLV, paragraph 15 reveal about the character or situation? "For my own part,' she rejoined, 'I must confess that I never could see any beauty in her." Answer in two or three sentences with one detail.

    Sample answer: The passage (Chapter XLV, paragraph 15) shows the situation turning on first impressions and prejudice: Darcy reveals how far his own first impression has changed. The words "rejoined" and "confess" are the proof, because they show how the moment looks to the people in it. They suggest more than the narrator states outright.

14. [short · analysis · DOK 3] Analyze how the word choice in this passage from Chapter XLV, paragraph 8 shapes its tone: "He had been some time with Mr. Gardiner, who, with two or three other gentlemen from the house, was engaged by the river, and had left him only on learning that the ladies of the family intended a visit to Georgiana that morning." Pick two words and explain their effect.

    Sample answer: The words "gentlemen" and "learning" (Chapter XLV, paragraph 8) make the tone heavy and deliberate rather than neutral. That weight points the reader to pride and self-knowledge: Darcy reveals how far his own first impression has changed. The author chooses them so the moment feels significant instead of passing.

15. [mc · analysis · DOK 3] Which literary element does this describe in "Chapter XLV"? At Pemberley Miss Bingley tries to embarrass Elizabeth by mentioning the militia, hurting Georgiana instead; after the visit she criticizes Elizabeth's looks to Darcy and receives a crushing reply.

    A. Characterization

    B. Hyperbole

    C. Theme

    D. Simile

    Key: A (Characterization)

16. [short · synthesis · DOK 4] Connect this passage from Chapter XLV, paragraph 11 to the story's treatment of marriage and money: "Her brother, whose eye she feared to meet, scarcely recollected her interest in the affair, and the very circumstance which had been designed to turn his thoughts from Elizabeth, seemed to have fixed them on her more, and more cheerfully." Use one other moment from the story as well.
    Sample answer: This passage (Chapter XLV, paragraph 11) develops marriage and money: Darcy reveals how far his own first impression has changed. Its words "circumstance" and "recollected" carry that idea into this moment. The same concern returns in "Her brother's recommendation was enough to ensure her favour: his judgment could not err, and he had spoken in such…" (Chapter XLV, paragraph 12), so the two passages read as a pattern, not a single moment. Together they show the story treating marriage and money as central.

17. [fill · recall · DOK 1] Fill in the blank with the vocabulary word that fits: "While thus engaged, Elizabeth had a fair opportunity of _____ whether she most feared or wished for the appearance of Mr." Word bank: nettled, predominate, peaches, deciding Key: deciding

18. [mc · recall · DOK 1] In the line "Darcy, by the feelings which prevailed on his entering the room; and then, though but a moment before she had believed her wishes to predominate, she began to regret that he came.", what does "predominate" most nearly mean?

    A. a mark or flaw that spoils the appearance of something (especially on a person's body)

    B. to a great extent or degree

    C. to be stronger than the others

    D. regaining self-control

    Key: C (to be stronger than the others)

19. [fill · recall · DOK 1] Complete the quotation from Chapter XLV, paragraph 11: "Elizabeth's collected behaviour, however, soon quieted his emotion; and as Miss Bingley, vexed and _____, dared not approach nearer to Wickham, Georgiana also recovered in time, though not enough to be able to speak any more."
    Word bank: criticisms, delightful, disappointed, unembarrassed
    Key: disappointed

20. [mc · recall · DOK 1] Which word completes this sentence from Chapter XLV, paragraph 14? "However little Mr. Darcy might have liked such an address, he contented himself with coolly replying, that he perceived no other alteration than her being rather tanned—no miraculous _____ of travelling in the summer."

    A. family

    B. variation

    C. unembarrassed

    D. consequence

Key: D (consequence)

21. [mc · recall · DOK 1] In the line “There was now employment for the whole party; for though they could not all talk, they could all eat; and the beautiful pyramids of grapes, nectarines, and peaches, soon collected them round the table.”, what does “pyramids” most nearly mean?

    A. looking at; regarding

    B. pyramid-shaped piles

    C. plays or sings for others

    D. ring or echo with sound

    Key: B (pyramid-shaped piles)

22. [short · analysis · DOK 3] Analyze how the word choice in this passage from Chapter XLV, paragraph 17 shapes its tone: “I remember, when we first knew her in Hertfordshire, how amazed we all were to find that she was a reputed beauty” Pick two words and explain their effect.

    Sample answer: The words “remember” and “reputed” (Chapter XLV, paragraph 17) make the tone heavy and deliberate rather than neutral. That weight points the reader to class and social mobility: Darcy reveals how far his own first impression has changed. The author chooses them so the moment feels significant instead of passing.

23. [short · synthesis · DOK 4] Synthesis: trace how first impressions develops from Chapter XLIII to Chapter XLV. Use one quotation from each.

    Sample answer: Earlier, in Chapter XLIII, paragraph 3, the text reads “She had never seen a place for which nature had done more, or where natural beauty had been so little counteracted by an awkward taste” — Pemberley's taste mirrors character. In Chapter XLV, “How very ill Eliza Bennet looks this morning, Mr. Darcy” (Chapter XLV, paragraph 13) — Miss Bingley's attempt to lower Elizabeth in his eyes. Darcy reveals how far his own first impression has changed.

24. [mc · recall · DOK 1] What does Darcy say about Elizabeth?

    A. She is poor

    B. One of the handsomest women he knows

    C. She is tolerable

    D. She is foolish

    Key: B (One of the handsomest women he knows)

25. [fill · recall · DOK 1] Fill in the blank with the vocabulary word that fits: “Its windows opening to the ground, admitted a most refreshing view of the high woody hills behind the house, and of the beautiful oaks and Spanish _____ which were scattered over the intermediate lawn.” Word bank: nettled, chestnuts, predominate, peaches

    Key: chestnuts

26. [short · inference · DOK 2] What can you infer from this line? “it is many months since I have considered her as one of the handsomest women of my acquaintance” (Chapter XLV, paragraph 18) Answer in two or three sentences with one detail.

    Sample answer: Darcy reverses his "tolerable" of Chapter III. The evidence is “it is many months since I have considered her as one of the handsomest women of my acquaintance” (Chapter XLV, paragraph 18).

27. [mc · analysis · DOK 3] Which literary element does this describe in “Chapter XLV”? Each of Miss Bingley's attacks increases Darcy's regard for Elizabeth.

    A. Imagery

    B. Irony

C. Conflict

D. Personification

Key: B (Irony)

28. [fill · recall · DOK 1 · AP: AP-LIT.STR] Complete the quotation from Chapter XLV, paragraph 13: “How very ill Eliza Bennet looks this _____, Mr. Darcy”

Key: morning

29. [short · analysis · DOK 3 · AP: AP-LIT.LAN] Claim: Darcy's reply to Miss Bingley shows how completely he has revised his first impression of Elizabeth. Explain how this evidence supports the claim: “it is many months since I have considered her as one of the handsomest women of my acquaintance” (Chapter XLV, paragraph 18).

Sample answer: In Chapter III she was "tolerable"; now he says "it is many months since I have considered her as one of the handsomest women of my acquaintance," a direct reversal prompted by Miss Bingley's own spite. The evidence is “it is many months since I have considered her as one of the handsomest women of my acquaintance” (Chapter XLV, paragraph 18) — Darcy reverses his "tolerable" of Chapter III. This develops first impressions: Darcy reveals how far his own first impression has changed.

30. [short · synthesis · DOK 4 · AP: AP-LIT.LAN] Connect this passage from Chapter XLV, paragraph 10 to the story's treatment of women's limited choices: “He had certainly formed such a plan, and without meaning that it should affect his endeavour to separate him from Miss Bennet, it is probable that it might add something to his lively concern for the welfare of his friend.” Use one other moment from the story as well.

Sample answer: This passage (Chapter XLV, paragraph 10) develops women's limited choices: Darcy reveals how far his own first impression has changed. Its words “something” and “endeavour” carry that idea into this moment. The same concern returns in “Not a syllable had ever reached her of Miss Darcy’s meditated elopement.” (Chapter XLV, paragraph 10), so the two passages read as a pattern, not a single moment. Together they show the story treating women's limited choices as central.

31. [mc · recall · DOK 1 · AP: AP-LIT.STR] Who visits Pemberley with Elizabeth?

A. Jane

B. Lydia

C. Mrs. Gardiner

D. Charlotte

Key: C (Mrs. Gardiner)

32. [short · analysis · DOK 3 · AP: AP-LIT.FIG] Analyze the word choice in “Convinced as Elizabeth now was that Miss Bingley’s dislike of her had originated in jealousy” (Chapter XLV, paragraph 1). Pick two words and explain what they suggest.

Sample answer: Elizabeth reads Miss Bingley correctly. The evidence is “Convinced as Elizabeth now was that Miss Bingley’s dislike of her had originated in jealousy” (Chapter XLV, paragraph 1). This develops first impressions: Darcy reveals how far his own first impression has changed. The words “originated” and “jealousy” carry that meaning: they are the charged choices in the line, and changing either would soften the effect.

33. [short · analysis · DOK 3 · AP: AP-LIT.FIG] Analyze how the word choice in this passage from Chapter XLV, paragraph 5 shapes its tone: “After sitting in this manner a quarter of an hour, without hearing Miss Bingley’s voice, Elizabeth was roused by receiving from her a cold enquiry after the health of her family.” Pick two words and explain their effect.

Sample answer: The words “receiving” and “hearing” (Chapter XLV, paragraph 5) make the tone heavy and deliberate rather than neutral. That weight points the reader to class and social mobility: Darcy reveals how far his own first impression has changed. The author chooses them so the moment feels significant instead of passing.

34. [short · synthesis · DOK 4 · AP: AP-LIT.FIG] Close reading: how do the diction and syntax of “How very ill Eliza Bennet looks this morning, Mr. Darcy” (Chapter XLV, paragraph 13) shape its meaning? Consider a second, competing reading.
    Sample answer: Miss Bingley's attempt to lower Elizabeth in his eyes. The evidence is “How very ill Eliza Bennet looks this morning, Mr. Darcy” (Chapter XLV, paragraph 13). This develops first impressions: Darcy reveals how far his own first impression has changed. The words “morning” and “looks” carry that meaning: they are the charged choices in the line, and changing either would soften the effect. In Chapter III she was "tolerable"; now he says "it is many months since I have considered her as one of the handsomest women of my acquaintance," a direct reversal prompted by Miss Bingley's own spite.
35. [fill · recall · DOK 1 · Dual Credit (Indiana College Core): ICC-WC-1.5] Complete the quotation from Chapter XLV, paragraph 2: “On reaching the house, they were shown through the hall into the saloon, whose northern aspect rendered it _____ for summer.” Word bank: conversation, delightful, criticisms, unembarrassed
    Key: delightful
36. [fill · recall · DOK 1 · Program outcome: LeL-C2-LIT-1] Fill in the blank with the vocabulary word that fits: “Miss Bingley saw all this likewise; and, in the imprudence of anger, took the first opportunity of saying, with _____ civility—” Word bank: nettled, sneering, predominate, peaches
    Key: sneering
37. [short · synthesis · DOK 4 · Program outcome: LeL-C2-LIT-1] Close reading: how do the diction and syntax of “it is many months since I have considered her as one of the handsomest women of my acquaintance” (Chapter XLV, paragraph 18) shape its meaning? Consider a second, competing reading.
    Sample answer: Darcy reverses his "tolerable" of Chapter III. The evidence is “it is many months since I have considered her as one of the handsomest women of my acquaintance” (Chapter XLV, paragraph 18). This develops first impressions: Darcy reveals how far his own first impression has changed. The words “acquaintance” and “considered” carry that meaning: they are the charged choices in the line, and changing either would soften the effect. In Chapter III she was "tolerable"; now he says "it is many months since I have considered her as one of the handsomest women of my acquaintance," a direct reversal prompted by Miss Bingley's own spite.
38. [short · inference · DOK 2 · Program outcome: LeL-C4-LIT-1] What can you infer from this line? “How very ill Eliza Bennet looks this morning, Mr. Darcy” (Chapter XLV, paragraph 13) Answer in two or three sentences with one detail.
    Sample answer: Miss Bingley's attempt to lower Elizabeth in his eyes. The evidence is “How very ill Eliza Bennet looks this morning, Mr. Darcy” (Chapter XLV, paragraph 13). This develops first impressions: Darcy reveals how far his own first impression has changed.

Rigor version	Items (in order)	Mix
Scaffolded support	1, 2, 3, 4, 5, 6, 7, 8, 9, 10, 11, 12, 13, 14, 15, 16	recall 10, inference 3, analysis 2, synthesis 1
HS Freshman	3, 17, 18, 2, 19, 20, 21, 10, 8, 11, 12, 13, 15, 14, 22, 23	recall 9, inference 3, analysis 3, synthesis 1
HS Sophomore	9, 5, 17, 8, 24, 25, 20, 13, 12, 26, 11, 15, 22, 27, 16, 23	recall 7, inference 4, analysis 3, synthesis 2
HS Junior	28, 20, 21, 1, 2, 5, 17, 11, 12, 13, 14, 27, 15, 22, 16, 23

		recall 7, inference 3, analysis 4, synthesis 2
HS Senior	1, 19, 4, 18, 24, 28, 12, 13, 11, 14, 27, 15, 29, 30, 16, 23	recall 6, inference 3, analysis 4, synthesis 3
AP	20, 9, 8, 31, 26, 11, 22, 14, 15, 32, 27, 33, 34, 30, 16, 23	recall 4, inference 2, analysis 6, synthesis 4
College Freshman	25, 35, 5, 10, 11, 13, 33, 15, 32, 14, 22, 27, 34, 30, 16, 23	recall 4, inference 2, analysis 6, synthesis 4
College Sophomore	25, 2, 4, 10, 36, 11, 13, 22, 14, 15, 33, 27, 16, 23, 30, 37	recall 5, inference 2, analysis 5, synthesis 4
College Junior	2, 36, 35, 1, 26, 13, 11, 27, 22, 33, 14, 15, 23, 16, 30, 34	recall 4, inference 3, analysis 5, synthesis 4
College Senior	8, 24, 1, 6, 38, 13, 11, 32, 15, 27, 22, 33, 14, 16, 23, 30	recall 4, inference 3, analysis 6, synthesis 3
Graduate / PhD	36, 21, 20, 28, 26, 11, 13, 15, 22, 33, 14, 32, 27, 16, 23, 30	recall 4, inference 3, analysis 6, synthesis 3

Writing prompts (eleven rigor levels)

Scaffolded support (250 words; AP: see unit standards): Supported track (work from the passage your teacher selects). In “Chapter XLV,” how does Austen show jealousy at Pemberley? Write a paragraph that states your claim, quotes two details from the passage, and explains how each detail supports your idea. Use the characterization you noticed as one piece of evidence.

HS Freshman (350 words; AP: see unit standards): In Chapter XLV, how does Austen develop the idea of jealousy at Pemberley? State a clear claim, support it with two or three quotations, and explain how the characterization in the chapter helps build that idea.

HS Sophomore (450 words; AP: see unit standards): Analyze how Chapter XLV develops the idea of jealousy at Pemberley. Make a precise claim, support it with at least three pieces of textual evidence, and explain how the author's use of characterization and irony shapes that idea. Address one possible counterclaim.

HS Junior (550 words; AP: see unit standards): Analyze how the structure of Chapter XLV (where it begins, turns and ends) and its characterization shape the reader's understanding of jealousy at Pemberley. Identify one place where the text leaves matters uncertain and explain how that uncertainty adds to its meaning.

HS Senior (600 words; AP: see unit standards): Two readers disagree about what Chapter XLV suggests about jealousy at Pemberley. Lay out two plausible interpretations, weigh the evidence for each (including the chapter's characterization and irony), and argue for the stronger one in a sustained, well-organized essay.

AP (650 words; AP: AP-LIT.CHR, AP-LIT.LAN): Write a literary argument in which you analyze how Jane Austen uses characterization in Chapter XLV to complicate the reader's understanding of jealousy at Pemberley. Develop a defensible thesis, select evidence purposefully, and explain how specific choices of diction and syntax create meaning.

College Freshman (1000 words; AP: see unit standards): Situate Chapter XLV within its historical and literary context and argue how the chapter's treatment of jealousy at Pemberley responds to that context. Engage with at least one secondary perspective (a critic, historian or the author's own statements), integrate quotations smoothly, and cite in MLA style.

College Sophomore (1250 words; AP: see unit standards): Read Chapter XLV alongside the conventions of its genre and period. Argue how the chapter's handling of jealousy at Pemberley follows or bends those conventions, using the characterization as evidence, and test your reading against one published critic. Document two secondary sources in MLA.

College Junior (1500 words; AP: see unit standards): Apply a named critical approach (for example formalist, historicist, feminist, psychoanalytic or ecocritical) to Chapter XLV and its treatment of jealousy at Pemberley. State your method, show what it reveals in the chapter's characterization and irony, and identify where the text resists it.

College Senior (2000 words; AP: see unit standards): Develop a research argument that reads Chapter XLV as evidence for a larger claim about jealousy at Pemberley in Pride and Prejudice. Connect close reading of the chapter to the whole novel, engage at least four scholarly sources, and state precisely where your reading departs from theirs (Chicago style).

Graduate / PhD (2500 words; AP: see unit standards): Develop an original argument that reads Chapter XLV as a hinge in the novel's larger treatment of jealousy at Pemberley. Position your reading within a named critical conversation (for example formalist, historicist, psychoanalytic, feminist or postcolonial approaches), account for the textual history where relevant, and articulate the stakes of your intervention for scholarship on Pride and Prejudice.

SAT-style questions

1. Persuaded as Miss Bingley was that Darcy admired Elizabeth, this was not the best method of recommending herself; but angry people are not always wise; and in seeing him at last look somewhat nettled, she had all the success she expected.

   As used in the text, what does the word “nettled” most nearly mean?

   A. irritated; annoyed

   B. the use of brief expressions

   C. reach, make, or come to a decision about something

   D. express through a scornful smile

2. On reaching the house, they were shown through the hall into the saloon, whose northern aspect rendered it delightful for summer. Its windows opening to the ground, admitted a most refreshing view of the high woody hills behind the house, and of the beautiful oaks and Spanish chestnuts which were scattered over the intermediate lawn.

   Which choice best states a central concern of “Chapter XLV”?

   A. Too late

   B. Music, wit and manners

   C. Consequences of refusal

D. Jealousy at Pemberley

SAT key: 1. A (irritated; annoyed); 2. D (Jealousy at Pemberley)

Lesson 47: Chapter XLVI

Focus: scandal

Objective: Students will analyze how plot develops in "Chapter XLVI" by writing a claim-evidence-reasoning paragraph that cites at least 2 quotations from the section, and will score at least 80% on the section quiz.

Standards: AP: see the unit standards

Content note (exploitation of a minor, alcohol or drugs (mentioned)): Lydia, 16, runs off with Wickham, an adult. Frame it as exploitation of a minor and discuss the period's double standard that blames her. This section mentions drinking or a drug ("…ould take, to give you present relief?—A glass of wine;—shall I get you one?—You are very ill…."). Treat it as period custom or plot detail; name it plainly and don't glamorize it.
Student preview: A 16-year-old runs away with an adult man. We will discuss who holds power here.
Suggested language: "Who is blamed for the elopement, and is that fair?"

Teacher only · spoilers

Letters from Jane report that Lydia has run off with Wickham, possibly not married. Darcy finds Elizabeth distraught; she confides in him. Elizabeth and the Gardiners hurry home.

Background: An unmarried elopement could ruin the reputation of an entire family.

Significance: The crisis tests Darcy's love and reveals Elizabeth's change of heart.

Lesson plan and lecture script (90 minutes)

0–8 min · Bell-ringer · You do (8 min)
Students write to the bell-ringer, then pair-share.
Why does Elizabeth tell Darcy, and what does she fear? Write for five minutes. Starters: I think... because... / This connects to family and reputation because.... Content note before we start: A 16-year-old runs away with an adult man. We will discuss who holds power here.
Prompt: Why does Elizabeth tell Darcy, and what does she fear?
Sentence starters: I think… because… · This connects to family and reputation because…
Strong response: A strong response takes a position and anticipates this: one sister's fall threatens all five; Elizabeth knows at once what it means for her own hopes.

8–18 min · Vocabulary with etymology notes · I do (10 min)
Five key words in context, with verified word histories.
Today's words: fluctuating — rising and falling; changing again and again; actuated — moved to act; driven; superseded — replaced; pushed aside; darting — moving suddenly and quickly; impetuous — characterized by undue haste and lack of thought or deliberation. “fluctuating”: From Latin fluctuare "to move in waves," from fluctus "a wave," from fluere "to flow." “impetuous”: Origin: Old French impetueux; earlier Late Latin impetuōsus (“violent”).
Words: fluctuating: rising and falling; changing again and again · actuated: moved to act; driven · superseded: replaced; pushed aside · darting: moving suddenly and quickly · impetuous: characterized by undue haste and lack of thought or deliberation

18–28 min · Background and context · I do (10 min)
Mini-lecture (read or adapt the script).
An unmarried elopement could ruin the reputation of an entire family. The crisis tests Darcy's love and reveals Elizabeth's change of heart. Structure: Two letters from Jane break the Pemberley idyll: Lydia has run off with Wickham, and he may not mean to marry her. The plot turns from courtship to crisis in a page. Characterization: Elizabeth tells Darcy everything in her distress, and he leaves abruptly; she assumes, wrongly, that the scandal has ended his regard. Watch for silence and reserve: What characters leave unsaid (Darcy's reserve, Jane's composure, Elizabeth's secrets) drives misunderstanding. In this chapter: “something indistinctly of his concern, and observe her in compassionate silence. At length, she spoke again. “I have just had a letter” (Chapter XLVI, paragraph 11).

28–40 min · I do: modeled close reading · I do (12 min)
Model the close reading of the anchor quotation using the written think-aloud below.
First, meaning. I read “If gratitude and esteem are good foundations of affection, Elizabeth’s change of sentiment will be neither improbable nor faulty” slowly and put it in my own words: The narrator says that if gratitude and esteem are good foundations for love, Elizabeth's change of feeling is neither unlikely nor wrong. Next, craft. I notice the narrator argues like a lawyer, with "if... but if otherwise," addressing readers who prefer love at first sight. The strongest word is “esteem”: it means respect, which Austen ranks above sudden passion. Then, effect. Why does the narrator step in to defend Elizabeth's change of heart? My answer: The narrator steps in to defend Elizabeth's change of heart because a love built on gratitude and respect is better than love at first sight; this is the novel's answer to first impressions.

> If gratitude and esteem are good foundations of affection, Elizabeth’s change of sentiment will be neither improbable nor faulty (Chapter XLVI, paragraph 24)

Think-aloud: First, meaning. I read “If gratitude and esteem are good foundations of affection, Elizabeth’s change of sentiment will be neither improbable nor faulty” slowly and put it in my own words: The narrator says that if gratitude and esteem are good foundations for love, Elizabeth's change of feeling is neither unlikely nor wrong. Next, craft. I notice the narrator argues like a lawyer, with "if... but if otherwise," addressing readers who prefer love at first sight. The strongest word is “esteem”: it means respect, which Austen ranks above sudden passion. Then, effect. Why does the narrator step in to defend Elizabeth's change of heart? My answer: The narrator steps in to defend Elizabeth's change of heart because a love built on gratitude and respect is better than love at first sight; this is the novel's answer to first impressions.

40–55 min · We do: guided annotation · We do (15 min)
Guided analysis of a second quotation; expected answers given.
Ask: What words in this line stand out, and what do they suggest? Expected: Gretna Green in Scotland was where couples married quickly without parental consent; if Wickham "never intended to go there," he never meant marriage, so Lydia is ruined. This links to family and reputation. Ask: How does this line connect to family and reputation? Expected: One sister's fall threatens all five; Elizabeth knows at once what it means for her own hopes. (Jane's letter: the fear that Wickham will not marry Lydia, which would ruin her.)

> Though Lydia's short letter to Mrs. F. gave them to understand that they were going to Gretna Green, something was dropped by Denny expressing his belief that W. never intended to go there (Chapter XLVI, paragraph 5)

Ask: What words in this line stand out, and what do they suggest?
Expected answer: Gretna Green in Scotland was where couples married quickly without parental consent; if Wickham "never intended to go there," he never meant marriage, so Lydia is ruined. This links to family and reputation.
Ask: How does this line connect to family and reputation?
Expected answer: One sister's fall threatens all five; Elizabeth knows at once what it means for her own hopes. (Jane's letter: the fear that Wickham will not marry Lydia, which would ruin her.)

55–70 min · You do: independent annotation · You do (15 min)
Independent annotation and a claim-evidence-reasoning paragraph (exemplar given).
Annotate the chapter for structure, characterization (three marks with a margin note each), then write one claim-evidence-reasoning paragraph: what does this chapter suggest about scandal? Then start your writing prompt at your assigned level (HS Sophomore: Analyze how Chapter XLVI develops the idea of scandal. Make a precise claim, support it with at least three pieces of textual evidence, and explain how the author's use of plot and conflict shapes that idea. Address one possible counterclaim.) Exemplar: Lydia's elopement shows how a single act can destroy a whole family's reputation. When the text says "Though Lydia's short letter to Mrs. F. gave them to understand that they were going to Gretna Green, something was dropped by Denny expressing his belief that W. never intended to go there" (Chapter XLVI, paragraph 5), it shows this directly. Jane's letter fears that Wickham "never intended" to go to Gretna Green, where they could marry, and Elizabeth at once assumes Darcy will withdraw, because Lydia's disgrace attaches to every sister.
Task: Annotate the chapter for structure, characterization (three marks with a margin note each), then write one claim-evidence-reasoning paragraph: what does this chapter suggest about scandal? Then start your writing prompt at your assigned level (HS Sophomore: Analyze how Chapter XLVI develops the idea of scandal. Make a precise claim, support it with at least three pieces of textual evidence, and explain how the author's use of plot and conflict shapes that idea. Address one possible counterclaim.)
Exemplar: Lydia's elopement shows how a single act can destroy a whole family's reputation. When the text says "Though Lydia's short letter to Mrs. F. gave them to understand that they were going to Gretna Green, something was dropped by Denny expressing his belief that W. never intended to go there" (Chapter XLVI, paragraph 5), it shows this directly. Jane's letter fears that Wickham "never intended" to go to Gretna Green, where they could marry, and Elizabeth at once assumes Darcy will withdraw, because Lydia's disgrace attaches to every sister.

70–80 min · Discussion · We do (10 min)
Structured discussion from the 30 tiered questions, with facilitation notes.
Anchor question: Why does Elizabeth tell Darcy, and what does she fear? Explain "ruin" for a woman in 1813 before discussing. Ask: why does Elizabeth think Lydia's choice ends her own hopes?
Anchor question: Why does Elizabeth tell Darcy, and what does she fear?
Facilitation: Explain "ruin" for a woman in 1813 before discussing. Ask: why does Elizabeth think Lydia's choice ends her own hopes?

80–87 min · Exit ticket / chapter quiz · You do (7 min)
Chapter quiz in the app and an exit ticket (answer given).
Chapter quiz in the app, then: In one sentence, what does this chapter suggest about scandal? Support it with one short quotation. Model answer: Lydia's elopement shows how a single act can destroy a whole family's reputation. ("Though Lydia's short letter to Mrs. F. gave them to understand that they were going to Gretna Green, something was dropped by Denny expressing his belief that W", Chapter XLVI, paragraph 5). Accept any defensible claim backed by a quotation from the chapter; the answer key for the quiz is in the Quiz section.
Exit ticket: In one sentence, what does this chapter suggest about scandal? Support it with one short quotation.
Answer: Model answer: Lydia's elopement shows how a single act can destroy a whole family's reputation. ("Though Lydia's short letter to Mrs. F. gave them to understand that they were going to Gretna Green, something was dropped by Denny expressing his belief that W", Chapter XLVI, paragraph 5). Accept any defensible claim backed by a quotation from the chapter; the answer key for the quiz is in the Quiz section.

87–90 min · Closure · I do (3 min)
Summarize the lesson and preview the next reading.
Today we saw how structure shapes scandal. Key takeaway: one sister's fall threatens all five; Elizabeth knows at once what it means for her own hopes.

Total: 90 minutes.

Teacher analysis (spoilers)

Literary elements

- Structure: Two letters from Jane break the Pemberley idyll: Lydia has run off with Wickham, and he may not mean to marry her. The plot turns from courtship to crisis in a page.
- Characterization: Elizabeth tells Darcy everything in her distress, and he leaves abruptly; she assumes, wrongly, that the scandal has ended his regard.

Themes and how they develop

- family and reputation: one sister's fall threatens all five; Elizabeth knows at once what it means for her own hopes.

Symbols and motifs

- silence and reserve: What characters leave unsaid (Darcy's reserve, Jane's composure, Elizabeth's secrets) drives misunderstanding. In this chapter: “something indistinctly of his concern, and observe her in compassionate silence. At length, she spoke again. “I have just had a letter” (Chapter XLVI, paragraph 11).
- letters: Letters carry news, reveal character and change minds; Darcy's letter is the turning point of the novel. In this chapter: “had been a good deal disappointed in not finding a letter from Jane, on their first arrival at Lambton; and this disappointment” (Chapter XLVI, paragraph 1).

Key quotations (checked against the reading text)

- “If gratitude and esteem are good foundations of affection, Elizabeth’s change of sentiment will be neither improbable nor faulty” (Chapter XLVI, paragraph 24) The narrator steps in to defend a love based on esteem rather than "first sight."
- “Though Lydia’s short letter to Mrs. F. gave them to understand that they were going to Gretna Green, something was dropped by Denny expressing his belief that W. never intended to go there” (Chapter XLVI, paragraph 5) Jane's letter: the fear that Wickham will not marry Lydia, which would ruin her.
- “thanked him with tears of gratitude” (Chapter XLVI, paragraph 26) Elizabeth's response to her uncle's promise of help: the family closes ranks.

Model claim-evidence-reasoning

Claim: Lydia's elopement shows how a single act can destroy a whole family's reputation.
Evidence: “Though Lydia’s short letter to Mrs. F. gave them to understand that they were going to Gretna Green, something was dropped by Denny expressing his belief that W. never intended to go there” (Chapter XLVI, paragraph 5)
Reasoning: Jane's letter fears that Wickham "never intended" to go to Gretna Green, where they could marry, and Elizabeth at once assumes Darcy will withdraw, because Lydia's disgrace attaches to every sister.

Vocabulary with etymology notes

Word	Definition (in this sentence)	In context	Word history
fluctuating (verb)	rising and falling; changing again and again	Her affections had been continually fluctuating, but never without an object.	“fluctuating”: From Latin fluctuare "to move in waves," from fluctus "a wave," from fluere "to flow." (Online Etymology Dictionary (hand-checked note), https://www.etymonline.com/word/fluctuate) actuated (verb)	moved to act; driven	Elizabeth, though expecting no less, thanked him with tears of gratitude; and all three being actuated by one spirit, everything relating to their journey was speedily settled.

superseded (verb)	replaced; pushed aside	Her pale face and impetuous manner made him start, and before he could recover himself enough to speak, she, in whose mind every idea was superseded by Lydia's situation, hastily exclaimed, "I beg your pardon, but I must leave you.
darting (verb)	moving suddenly and quickly	"Oh! where, where is my uncle?" cried Elizabeth, darting from her seat as she finished the letter, in eagerness to follow him, without losing a moment of the time so precious; but as she reached the door, it was opened by a servant, and Mr.
impetuous (adjective)	characterized by undue haste and lack of thought or deliberation	Her pale face and impetuous manner made him start, and before he could recover himself enough to speak, she, in whose mind every idea was superseded by Lydia's situation, hastily exclaimed, "I beg your pardon, but I must leave you.	"impetuous": Origin: Old French impetueux; earlier Late Latin impetuōsus ("violent"). (Liber et Libri origin note, https://en.wiktionary.org/wiki/impetuous#Etymology)
commissioned (verb)	gave someone a task to carry out	Calling back the servant, therefore, she commissioned him, though in so breathless an accent as made her almost unintelligible, to fetch his master and mistress home, instantly.	"commissioned": Origin of "commission": Old French commission; earlier Latin commissiō ("sending together"). (Liber et Libri origin note, https://en.wiktionary.org/wiki/commission#Etymology)

Discussion questions

1. Why does Elizabeth tell Darcy, and what does she fear?
2. Where does plot appear in this chapter, and what effect does it have? Point to one passage.
3. How does this chapter connect to the book's larger concern with first impressions and prejudice?

Classroom discussion questions (30, tiered)

Wait time after every question (3 s for DOK 1, 5 s for DOK 2, 8 to 10 s for DOK 3 and 4); think-pair-share on DOK 3 and 4; answer each response with a follow-up probe; close with student-generated questions. Focus sets by rigor level: Scaffolded support: 1, 2, 3, 4, 5, 6, 11, 12, 13, 14, 21, 22; HS Freshman: 1, 2, 3, 4, 5, 12, 13, 14, 15, 22, 23, 24; HS Sophomore: 1, 2, 3, 4, 13, 14, 15, 16, 17, 23, 24, 25; HS Junior: 1, 2, 3, 14, 15, 16, 17, 18, 24, 25, 26, 27; HS Senior: 1, 2, 3, 15, 16, 17, 18, 25, 26, 27, 28, 29; AP: 1, 2, 16, 17, 18, 19, 20, 26, 27, 28, 29, 30; College Freshman: 1, 2, 17, 18, 19, 20, 21, 22, 27, 28, 29, 30; College Sophomore: 1, 2, 11, 18, 19, 20, 21, 22, 23, 28, 29, 30; College Junior: 1, 11, 12, 19, 20, 21, 22, 23, 24, 25, 29, 30; College Senior: 1, 11, 12, 13, 20, 21, 22, 23, 24, 25, 26, 30; Graduate / PhD: 1, 11, 12, 13, 21, 22, 23, 24, 25, 26, 27, 28

Literal / recall

1. What news does Jane send? [DOK 1 · coldCallWithSupport · wait 3 s · AP: unit standards] Look for: Lydia has run off with Wickham
2. Where were Lydia and Wickham thought to go? [DOK 1 · turnAndTalk · wait 3 s · AP: unit standards] Look for: Gretna Green or London
3. Whom does Elizabeth confide in? [DOK 1 · coldCallWithSupport · wait 3 s · AP: unit standards] Look for: Darcy
4. What does she fear? [DOK 1 · turnAndTalk · wait 3 s · AP: unit standards] Look for: Her family's disgrace and Darcy's loss
5. What do Elizabeth and the Gardiners do after Jane's letters about Lydia? [DOK 1 · coldCallWithSupport · wait 3 s · AP: unit standards] Look for: Hurry home
6. Retell the three most important events of "Chapter XLVI" in order, in one sentence each. [DOK 1 · turnAndTalk · wait 3 s · AP: unit standards] Look for: Letters from Jane report that Lydia has run off with Wickham, possibly not married. Darcy finds Elizabeth distraught; she confides in him. Elizabeth and the Gardiners hurry home.
7. Which characters appear or are mentioned in "Chapter XLVI"? Name two and one thing each says or does. [DOK 1 · coldCallWithSupport · wait 3 s · AP: unit standards] Look for: Names and actions taken from the chapter; check against the teacher summary.
8. Where and when does "Chapter XLVI" take place? Point to the line that tells you. [DOK 1 · turnAndTalk · wait 3 s · AP: unit standards] Look for: A place/time detail quoted from the chapter.
9. Reread: "Her affections had been continually fluctuating, but never without an object." What does "fluctuating" mean here, and what is literally happening in this line? [DOK 1 · turnAndTalk · wait 3 s · AP: unit standards] Look for: fluctuating: rising and falling; changing again and again.
10. Reread: "Elizabeth, though expecting no less, thanked him with tears of gratitude; and all three being actuated by one spirit, everything relating to their journey was speedily settled." What does "actuated" mean here, and what is literally happening in this line? [DOK 1 · turnAndTalk · wait 3 s · AP: unit standards] Look for: actuated: moved to act; driven.

Inferential / analytical

1. What does "Chapter XLVI" suggest about scandal? State the inference and the line that supports it. [DOK 2 · thinkPairShare · wait 5 s · AP-LIT.LAN] Look for: The crisis tests Darcy's love and reveals Elizabeth's change of heart.
2. Find one example of plot in this chapter. What does it reveal that a plain statement would not? [DOK 2 · followUp · wait 5 s · AP-LIT.STR] Look for: Look for key events and the causes linking them.
3. How does the conflict in this chapter shape what we understand about scandal? [DOK 3 · thinkPairShare · wait 8 s · AP-LIT.STR] Look for: Look for the forces, people or desires pulling against each other.
   Answer guidance: A defensible line of argument: Lydia's elopement shows how a single act can destroy a whole family's reputation. Useful evidence: "If gratitude and esteem are good foundations of affection, Elizabeth's change of sentiment will be neither improbable nor faulty" (Chapter XLVI, paragraph 24): The narrator steps in to defend a love based on esteem rather than "first sight." Theme link: one sister's fall threatens all five; Elizabeth knows at once what it means for her own hopes. Credit any position that is supported by quotation and reasoning; push one-sided answers to address the strongest counterpoint.

4. In the passage that begins ““Oh!”, why might Austen have chosen these particular words? Pick two and explain their connotations. [DOK 2 · followUp · wait 5 s · AP-LIT.FIG] Look for: Diction analysis of two words in the anchor passage.
5. What causes the main turn in “Chapter XLVI”, and what effect is it likely to have on what follows? [DOK 2 · followUp · wait 5 s · AP-LIT.STR] Look for: Letters from Jane report that Lydia has run off with Wickham, possibly not married. Darcy finds Elizabeth distraught; she confides in him. Elizabeth and the Gardiners hurry home.
6. How does “Chapter XLVI” build on “Chapter XLV”? Name one link of cause and effect. [DOK 3 · thinkPairShare · wait 8 s · AP-LIT.STR] Look for: A causal or structural link between this and the previous chapter.
   Answer guidance: A defensible line of argument: Lydia's elopement shows how a single act can destroy a whole family's reputation. Useful evidence: “Though Lydia’s short letter to Mrs. F. gave them to understand that they were going to Gretna Green, something was dropped by Denny expressing his belief that W. never intended to go there” (Chapter XLVI, paragraph 5): Jane's letter: the fear that Wickham will not marry Lydia, which would ruin her. On structure: Two letters from Jane break the Pemberley idyll: Lydia has run off with Wickham, and he may not mean to marry her. The plot turns from courtship to crisis in a page. Credit any position that is supported by quotation and reasoning; push one-sided answers to address the strongest counterpoint.
7. What can we infer about a character's motives from what they say and do here, as opposed to what they claim? [DOK 3 · followUp · wait 8 s · AP-LIT.CHR] Look for: An inference about motive supported by a quoted line.
   Answer guidance: A defensible line of argument: Lydia's elopement shows how a single act can destroy a whole family's reputation. Useful evidence: “thanked him with tears of gratitude” (Chapter XLVI, paragraph 26): Elizabeth's response to her uncle's promise of help: the family closes ranks. On characterization: Elizabeth tells Darcy everything in her distress, and he leaves abruptly; she assumes, wrongly, that the scandal has ended his regard. Credit any position that is supported by quotation and reasoning; push one-sided answers to address the strongest counterpoint.
8. The bell-ringer asked: “Why does Elizabeth tell Darcy, and what does she fear?” Now that we have read closely, how would you revise your first answer, and which line changed your mind? [DOK 2 · thinkPairShare · wait 5 s · AP-LIT.LAN] Look for: A revised answer anchored in the text.
9. Where does tone / mood appear, and how does it connect this chapter to the larger concern with first impressions and prejudice? [DOK 3 · followUp · wait 8 s · AP-LIT.FIG] Look for: Look for word choices that reveal the narrator's attitude or the scene's feeling.
   Answer guidance: A defensible line of argument: Lydia's elopement shows how a single act can destroy a whole family's reputation. Useful evidence: “If gratitude and esteem are good foundations of affection, Elizabeth’s change of sentiment will be neither improbable nor faulty” (Chapter XLVI, paragraph 24): The narrator steps in to defend a love based on esteem rather than "first sight." Theme link: one sister's fall threatens all five; Elizabeth knows at once what it means for her own hopes. Credit any position that is supported by quotation and reasoning; push one-sided answers to address the strongest counterpoint.
10. Background: An unmarried elopement could ruin the reputation of an entire family. How does knowing this change the way you read one moment in the chapter? [DOK 3 · thinkPairShare · wait 8 s · AP-LIT.SET] Look for: A specific moment reread in light of the context.
    Answer guidance: A defensible line of argument: Lydia's elopement shows how a single act can destroy a whole family's reputation. Useful evidence: “Though Lydia’s short letter to Mrs. F. gave them to understand that they were going to Gretna Green, something was dropped by Denny expressing his belief that W. never intended to go there” (Chapter XLVI, paragraph 5): Jane's letter: the fear that Wickham will not marry Lydia, which would ruin her. Theme link: one sister's fall threatens all five; Elizabeth knows at once what it means for her own hopes. Credit any position that is supported by quotation and reasoning; push one-sided answers to address the strongest counterpoint.

Evaluative / synthesis / creative

1. A critic might argue: “The crisis tests Darcy's love and reveals Elizabeth's change of heart.” How far do you agree? Take a stand and defend it with two lines from the chapter. [DOK 3 · fourCorners · wait 8 s · AP-LIT.LAN] Look for: A defended position with evidence and one counterpoint.
   Answer guidance: A defensible line of argument: Lydia's elopement shows how a single act can destroy a whole family's reputation. Useful evidence: “thanked him with tears of gratitude” (Chapter XLVI, paragraph 26): Elizabeth's response to her uncle's promise of help: the family closes ranks. Theme link: one sister's fall threatens all five; Elizabeth knows at once what it means for her own hopes. Credit any position that is supported by quotation and reasoning; push one-sided answers to address the strongest counterpoint.
2. Which character in this chapter acts most wisely, and which least? Judge them by a standard you name. [DOK 3 · thinkPairShare · wait 8 s · AP-LIT.CHR, AP-LIT.LAN] Look for: An evaluation using an explicit criterion and evidence.
   Answer guidance: A defensible line of argument: Lydia's elopement shows how a single act can destroy a whole family's reputation. Useful evidence: “If gratitude and esteem are good foundations of affection, Elizabeth’s change of sentiment will be neither improbable nor faulty” (Chapter XLVI, paragraph 24): The narrator steps in to defend a love based on esteem rather than "first sight." On characterization: Elizabeth tells Darcy everything in her distress, and he leaves abruptly; she assumes, wrongly, that the scandal has ended his regard. Credit any position that is supported by quotation and reasoning; push one-sided answers to address the strongest counterpoint.
3. Rewrite one moment of “Chapter XLVI” from the point of view of a different character. What does the new angle reveal or hide about scandal? [DOK 4 · thinkPairShare · wait 8 s · AP-LIT.LAN, AP-LIT.NAR] Look for: A creative product with a rationale tied to the text.
   Answer guidance: A defensible line of argument: Lydia's elopement shows how a single act can destroy a whole family's reputation. Useful evidence: “Though Lydia’s short letter to Mrs. F. gave them to understand that they were going to Gretna Green, something was dropped by Denny expressing his belief that W. never intended to go there” (Chapter XLVI, paragraph 5): Jane's letter: the fear that Wickham will not marry Lydia, which would ruin her. Theme link: one sister's fall threatens all five; Elizabeth knows at once what it means for her own hopes. Credit any position that is supported by quotation and reasoning; push one-sided answers to address the strongest counterpoint.
4. Write three questions of your own about “Chapter XLVI”: one recall, one “why/how”, and one “should/what if”. Trade with a partner and answer theirs. [DOK 3 · studentGenerated · wait 8 s · AP-LIT.LAN] Look for: Student-generated questions at three levels.
   Answer guidance: A defensible line of argument: Lydia's elopement shows how a single act can destroy a whole family's reputation. Useful evidence: “thanked him with tears of gratitude” (Chapter XLVI, paragraph 26): Elizabeth's response to her uncle's promise of help: the family closes ranks. Theme link: one sister's fall threatens all five; Elizabeth knows at once what it means for her own hopes. Credit any position that is supported by quotation and reasoning; push one-sided answers to address the strongest counterpoint.

5. Connect this chapter to pride and self-knowledge: is the link strong or weak so far? What would Austen need to show next to strengthen it? [DOK 4 · socraticCircle · wait 8 s · AP-LIT.LAN] Look for: A judgment of thematic development across the work.
   Answer guidance: A defensible line of argument: Lydia's elopement shows how a single act can destroy a whole family's reputation. Useful evidence: “If gratitude and esteem are good foundations of affection, Elizabeth’s change of sentiment will be neither improbable nor faulty” (Chapter XLVI, paragraph 24): The narrator steps in to defend a love based on esteem rather than "first sight." Theme link: one sister's fall threatens all five; Elizabeth knows at once what it means for her own hopes. Credit any position that is supported by quotation and reasoning; push one-sided answers to address the strongest counterpoint.
6. Is the plot in this chapter effective, or does it feel heavy-handed? Evaluate it as a reader would in a review. [DOK 3 · fourCorners · wait 8 s · AP-LIT.LAN, AP-LIT.STR] Look for: An evaluative judgment with criteria and evidence.
   Answer guidance: A defensible line of argument: Lydia's elopement shows how a single act can destroy a whole family's reputation. Useful evidence: “Though Lydia’s short letter to Mrs. F. gave them to understand that they were going to Gretna Green, something was dropped by Denny expressing his belief that W. never intended to go there” (Chapter XLVI, paragraph 5): Jane's letter: the fear that Wickham will not marry Lydia, which would ruin her. Theme link: one sister's fall threatens all five; Elizabeth knows at once what it means for her own hopes. Credit any position that is supported by quotation and reasoning; push one-sided answers to address the strongest counterpoint.
7. Compare how “Chapter XLVI” treats scandal with how another text, film or event you know treats a similar idea. What does Pride and Prejudice see that the other misses? [DOK 4 · socraticCircle · wait 8 s · AP-LIT.LAN] Look for: A cross-text synthesis.
   Answer guidance: A defensible line of argument: Lydia's elopement shows how a single act can destroy a whole family's reputation. Useful evidence: “thanked him with tears of gratitude” (Chapter XLVI, paragraph 26): Elizabeth's response to her uncle's promise of help: the family closes ranks. Theme link: one sister's fall threatens all five; Elizabeth knows at once what it means for her own hopes. Credit any position that is supported by quotation and reasoning; push one-sided answers to address the strongest counterpoint.
8. Predict what “Chapter XLVII” will bring, using two clues from this chapter. After reading, evaluate your prediction. [DOK 3 · thinkPairShare · wait 8 s · AP-LIT.LAN, AP-LIT.STR] Look for: A prediction or judgment justified with textual clues.
   Answer guidance: A defensible line of argument: Lydia's elopement shows how a single act can destroy a whole family's reputation. Useful evidence: “If gratitude and esteem are good foundations of affection, Elizabeth’s change of sentiment will be neither improbable nor faulty” (Chapter XLVI, paragraph 24): The narrator steps in to defend a love based on esteem rather than "first sight." Theme link: one sister's fall threatens all five; Elizabeth knows at once what it means for her own hopes. Credit any position that is supported by quotation and reasoning; push one-sided answers to address the strongest counterpoint.
9. Design a one-paragraph modern adaptation of this chapter (setting, characters, conflict). What must stay the same for it to still be about scandal? [DOK 4 · thinkPairShare · wait 8 s · AP-LIT.LAN] Look for: A creative transfer that keeps the core idea.
   Answer guidance: A defensible line of argument: Lydia's elopement shows how a single act can destroy a whole family's reputation. Useful evidence: “Though Lydia’s short letter to Mrs. F. gave them to understand that they were going to Gretna Green, something was dropped by Denny expressing his belief that W. never intended to go there” (Chapter XLVI, paragraph 5): Jane's letter: the fear that Wickham will not marry Lydia, which would ruin her. Theme link: one sister's fall threatens all five; Elizabeth knows at once what it means for her own hopes. Credit any position that is supported by quotation and reasoning; push one-sided answers to address the strongest counterpoint.

10. What question would you most like to ask Jane Austen about this chapter, and what answer do you think the text itself gives? [DOK 4 · studentGenerated · wait 8 s · AP-LIT.LAN] Look for: A student-generated question answered from evidence.

    Answer guidance: A defensible line of argument: Lydia's elopement shows how a single act can destroy a whole family's reputation. Useful evidence: “thanked him with tears of gratitude” (Chapter XLVI, paragraph 26): Elizabeth's response to her uncle's promise of help: the family closes ranks. Theme link: one sister's fall threatens all five; Elizabeth knows at once what it means for her own hopes. Credit any position that is supported by quotation and reasoning; push one-sided answers to address the strongest counterpoint.

Annotation focus

- Plot: look for key events and the causes linking them (anchor passage in the We do segment)
- Also notice Conflict: the forces, people or desires pulling against each other
- Also notice Tone / mood: word choices that reveal the narrator's attitude or the scene's feeling

Chapter quiz: item bank (all eleven rigor versions)

1. [mc · recall · DOK 1] Which word completes this sentence from Chapter XLVI, paragraph 5? “My father and mother _____ the worst, but I cannot think so ill of him.”

   A. ourselves

   B. believe

   C. dismissed

   D. intelligible

   Key: B (believe)

2. [mc · recall · DOK 1] Whom does Elizabeth confide in?

   A. Georgiana

   B. Darcy

   C. Fitzwilliam

   D. Caroline

   Key: B (Darcy)

3. [mc · recall · DOK 1] What do Elizabeth and the Gardiners do after Jane's letters about Lydia?

   A. Do nothing

   B. Hurry home

   C. Stay at Pemberley

   D. Go to Brighton

   Key: B (Hurry home)

4. [mc · recall · DOK 1] What news does Jane send?

   A. Father died

B. Bingley proposed

C. Lydia has run off with Wickham

D. Collins is ill

Key: C (Lydia has run off with Wickham)

5. [fill · recall · DOK 1] Complete the quotation from Chapter XLVI, paragraph 5: “Though Lydia’s short letter to Mrs. F. gave them to _____ that they were going to Gretna Green, something was dropped by Denny expressing his belief that W. never intended to go there”
   Key: understand
6. [fill · recall · DOK 1] Complete the quotation from Chapter XLVI, paragraph 26: “thanked him with tears of _____”
   Key: gratitude
7. [fill · recall · DOK 1] Complete the quotation from Chapter XLVI, paragraph 3: “How thankful am I, that we never let them know what has been said against him; we must forget it _____.” Word bank: indiscreet, passed, unexpected, ourselves
   Key: ourselves
8. [mc · recall · DOK 1] Which word completes this sentence from Chapter XLVI, paragraph 3? “What I have to say _____ to poor Lydia.”

   A. written

   B. informing

   C. believe

   D. relates

   Key: D (relates)
9. [fill · recall · DOK 1] Fill in the blank with the vocabulary word that fits: “Calling back the servant, therefore, she _____ him, though in so breathless an accent as made her almost unintelligible, to fetch his master and mistress home, instantly.” Word bank: actuated, commissioned, fluctuating, superseded
   Key: commissioned
10. [mc · recall · DOK 1] Where were Lydia and Wickham thought to go?

    A. Bath

    B. Gretna Green or London

    C. Paris

    D. Pemberley

    Key: B (Gretna Green or London)
11. [fill · recall · DOK 1] Complete the quotation from Chapter XLVI, paragraph 24: “If gratitude and esteem are good _____ of affection, Elizabeth’s change of sentiment will be neither improbable nor faulty”
    Key: foundations
12. [short · inference · DOK 2] What does this passage from Chapter XLVI, paragraph 5 reveal about the character or situation? “Many circumstances might make it more eligible for them to be married privately in town than to pursue their first plan” Answer in two or three sentences with one detail.
    Sample answer: The passage (Chapter XLVI, paragraph 5) shows the situation turning on first impressions and prejudice: one sister's fall threatens all five; Elizabeth knows at once what it means for her own hopes. The words “circumstances” and "privately" are the proof, because they show how the moment looks to the people in it. They suggest more than the narrator states outright.

13. [short · inference · DOK 2] What does this passage from Chapter XLVI, paragraph 1 reveal about the character or situation? "Elizabeth was not surprised at it, as Jane had written the direction remarkably ill." Answer in two or three sentences with one detail.
    Sample answer: The passage (Chapter XLVI, paragraph 1) shows the situation turning on first impressions and prejudice: one sister's fall threatens all five; Elizabeth knows at once what it means for her own hopes. The words "remarkably" and "direction" are the proof, because they show how the moment looks to the people in it. They suggest more than the narrator states outright.

14. [short · analysis · DOK 3] Analyze how the word choice in this passage from Chapter XLVI, paragraph 6 shapes its tone: "I must find Mr. Gardiner this moment, on business that cannot be delayed; I have not an instant to lose." Pick two words and explain their effect.
    Sample answer: The words "business" and "delayed" (Chapter XLVI, paragraph 6) make the tone heavy and deliberate rather than neutral. That weight points the reader to pride and self-knowledge: one sister's fall threatens all five; Elizabeth knows at once what it means for her own hopes. The author chooses them so the moment feels significant instead of passing.

15. [mc · analysis · DOK 3] Which literary element does this describe in "Chapter XLVI"? Two letters from Jane break the Pemberley idyll: Lydia has run off with Wickham, and he may not mean to marry her. The plot turns from courtship to crisis in a page.

    A. Point of view
    B. Allusion
    C. Structure
    D. Imagery

    Key: C (Structure)

16. [short · synthesis · DOK 4] Synthesis: trace how family and reputation develops from Chapter XLI to Chapter XLVI. Use one quotation from each.
    Sample answer: Earlier, in Chapter XLI, paragraph 15, the text reads "Lydia will never be easy till she has exposed herself in some public place or other" — Mr. Bennet's acceptance. In Chapter XLVI, "If gratitude and esteem are good foundations of affection, Elizabeth's change of sentiment will be neither improbable nor faulty" (Chapter XLVI, paragraph 24), which shows the narrator steps in to defend a love based on esteem rather than "first sight.". One sister's fall threatens all five; Elizabeth knows at once what it means for her own hopes.

17. [mc · recall · DOK 1] What does she fear?

    A. Losing money
    B. War
    C. Illness
    D. Her family's disgrace and Darcy's loss

    Key: D (Her family's disgrace and Darcy's loss)

18. [fill · recall · DOK 1] Complete the quotation from Chapter XLVI, paragraph 5: "He did trace them easily to Clapham, but no farther; for on entering that place they removed into a hackney-coach and _____ the chaise that brought them from Epsom." Word bank: dismissed, believe, relates, informing Key: dismissed

19. [mc · recall · DOK 1] In the line “Elizabeth, though expecting no less, thanked him with tears of gratitude; and all three being actuated by one spirit, everything relating to their journey was speedily settled.”, what does “actuated” most nearly mean?

    A. sons of one's brother or sister

    B. in a charming manner

    C. annoying; trying

    D. moved to act; driven

    Key: D (moved to act; driven)

20. [fill · recall · DOK 1] Fill in the blank with the vocabulary word that fits: “Her pale face and _____ manner made him start, and before he could recover himself enough to speak, she, in whose mind every idea was superseded by Lydia’s situation, hastily exclaimed, ‘I beg your pardon, but I must leave you.” Word bank: fluctuating, superseded, impetuous, actuated

    Key: impetuous

21. [short · analysis · DOK 3] Analyze how the word choice in this passage from Chapter XLVI, paragraph 3 shapes its tone: “An express came at twelve last night, just as we were all gone to bed, from Colonel Forster, to inform us that she was gone off to Scotland with one of his officers; to own the truth, with Wickham!—Imagine our surprise.” Pick two words and explain their effect.

    Sample answer: The words “officers” and “surprise” (Chapter XLVI, paragraph 3) make the tone heavy and deliberate rather than neutral. That weight points the reader to class and social mobility: one sister's fall threatens all five; Elizabeth knows at once what it means for her own hopes. The author chooses them so the moment feels significant instead of passing.

22. [short · analysis · DOK 3] Analyze how the word choice in this passage from Chapter XLVI, paragraph 3 shapes its tone: “They were off Saturday night about twelve, as is conjectured, but were not missed till yesterday morning at eight.” Pick two words and explain their effect.

    Sample answer: The words “conjectured” and “yesterday” (Chapter XLVI, paragraph 3) make the tone heavy and deliberate rather than neutral. That weight points the reader to pride and self-knowledge: one sister's fall threatens all five; Elizabeth knows at once what it means for her own hopes. The author chooses them so the moment feels significant instead of passing.

23. [short · synthesis · DOK 4] Connect this passage from Chapter XLVI, paragraph 11 to the story's treatment of women's limited choices: “She burst into tears as she alluded to it, and for a few minutes could not speak another word.” Use one other moment from the story as well.

    Sample answer: This passage (Chapter XLVI, paragraph 11) develops women's limited choices: one sister's fall threatens all five; Elizabeth knows at once what it means for her own hopes. Its words “another” and “minutes” carry that idea into this moment. The same concern returns in “I have just had a letter from Jane, with such dreadful news.” (Chapter XLVI, paragraph 11), so the two passages read as a pattern, not a single moment. Together they show the story treating women's limited choices as central.

24. [mc · recall · DOK 1] In the line “‘Oh! where, where is my uncle?’ cried Elizabeth, darting from her seat as she finished the letter, in eagerness to follow him, without losing a moment of the time so precious; but as she reached the door, it was opened…”, what does “darting” most nearly mean?

    A. moving suddenly and quickly

    B. risked; ventured

    C. a light round box for hats

    D. winning favor in a sly, flattering way

Key: A (moving suddenly and quickly)

25. [mc · recall · DOK 1] Which word completes this sentence from Chapter XLVI, paragraph 3? “I am afraid you will not be able to make it out, but I hardly know what I have _____.”

    A. ourselves

    B. believe

    C. written

    D. passed

    Key: C (written)

26. [short · analysis · DOK 3] Analyze how the word choice in this passage from Chapter XLVI, paragraph 5 shapes its tone: “I am not so selfish, however, as to press for it, if inconvenient.” Pick two words and explain their effect.

    Sample answer: The words “inconvenient” and “however” (Chapter XLVI, paragraph 5) make the tone heavy and deliberate rather than neutral. That weight points the reader to class and social mobility: one sister's fall threatens all five; Elizabeth knows at once what it means for her own hopes. The author chooses them so the moment feels significant instead of passing.

27. [short · synthesis · DOK 4] Connect this passage from Chapter XLVI, paragraph 5 to the story's treatment of marriage and money: “All that is known after this is, that they were seen to continue the London road.” Use one other moment from the story as well.

    Sample answer: This passage (Chapter XLVI, paragraph 5) develops marriage and money: one sister's fall threatens all five; Elizabeth knows at once what it means for her own hopes. Its words “continue” carry that idea into this moment. The same concern returns in “With the kindest concern he came on to Longbourn, and broke his apprehensions to us in a manner most creditable to his…” (Chapter XLVI, paragraph 5), so the two passages read as a pattern, not a single moment. Together they show the story treating marriage and money as central.

28. [short · synthesis · DOK 4] Connect this passage from Chapter XLVI, paragraph 12 to the story's treatment of marriage and money: “When I consider,’ she added, in a yet more agitated voice, ‘that I might have prevented it!—I who knew what he was.” Use one other moment from the story as well.

    Sample answer: This passage (Chapter XLVI, paragraph 12) develops marriage and money: one sister's fall threatens all five; Elizabeth knows at once what it means for her own hopes. Its words “prevented” and “agitated” carry that idea into this moment. The same concern returns in “Had his character been known, this could not have happened.” (Chapter XLVI, paragraph 12), so the two passages read as a pattern, not a single moment. Together they show the story treating marriage and money as central.

29. [mc · recall · DOK 1 · AP: AP-LIT.FIG] In the line “Her pale face and impetuous manner made him start, and before he could recover himself enough to speak, she, in whose mind every idea was superseded by Lydia’s situation, hastily exclaimed, ‘I beg your pardon, but I…”, what does “superseded” most nearly mean?

    A. deer meat

    B. in an irritable, complaining way

    C. replaced; pushed aside

    D. a large entrance or reception room or area

    Key: C (replaced; pushed aside)

30. [short · inference · DOK 2 · AP: AP-LIT.CHR] What can you infer from this line? “If gratitude and esteem are good foundations of affection, Elizabeth’s change of sentiment will be neither improbable nor faulty” (Chapter XLVI, paragraph 24) Answer in two or three sentences with one detail.

Sample answer: The narrator steps in to defend a love based on esteem rather than "first sight.". The evidence is “If gratitude and esteem are good foundations of affection, Elizabeth’s change of sentiment will be neither improbable nor faulty” (Chapter XLVI, paragraph 24).

31. [mc · analysis · DOK 3 · AP: AP-LIT.CHR] Which literary element does this describe in “Chapter XLVI”? Elizabeth tells Darcy everything in her distress, and he leaves abruptly; she assumes, wrongly, that the scandal has ended his regard.

    A. Characterization

    B. Hyperbole

    C. Setting

    D. Diction / vocabulary

    Key: A (Characterization)

32. [short · synthesis · DOK 4 · AP: AP-LIT.LAN] Connect this passage from Chapter XLVI, paragraph 4 to the story's treatment of women's limited choices: “Without allowing herself time for consideration, and scarcely knowing what she felt, Elizabeth on finishing this letter instantly seized the other, and opening it with the utmost impatience, read as follows: it had been written a day later…” Use one other moment from the story as well.

    Sample answer: This passage (Chapter XLVI, paragraph 4) develops women's limited choices: one sister's fall threatens all five; Elizabeth knows at once what it means for her own hopes. Its words “consideration” and “impatience” carry that idea into this moment. The same concern returns in “Dearest Lizzy, I hardly know what I would write, but I have bad news for you, and it cannot be delayed.” (Chapter XLVI, paragraph 5), so the two passages read as a pattern, not a single moment. Together they show the story treating women's limited choices as central.

33. [mc · recall · DOK 1 · AP: AP-LIT.FIG] In the line “Her affections had been continually fluctuating, but never without an object.”, what does “fluctuating” most nearly mean?

    A. pyramid-shaped piles

    B. pause or hold back in uncertainty or unwillingness

    C. rising and falling; changing again and again

    D. winning favor in a sly, flattering way

    Key: C (rising and falling; changing again and again)

34. [mc · inference · DOK 2 · AP: AP-LIT.LAN] What does this passage most clearly show? “Though Lydia’s short letter to Mrs. F. gave them to understand that they were going to Gretna Green, something was dropped by Denny expressing his belief that W. never intended to go there” (Chapter XLVI, paragraph 5)

    A. Charlotte's tolerance of Darcy's pride.

    B. Jane's letter: the fear that Wickham will not marry Lydia, which would ruin her.

    C. Miss Bingley's attempt to lower Elizabeth in his eyes.

    D. Elizabeth's realization comes too late.

    Key: B (Jane's letter: the fear that Wickham will not marry Lydia, which would ruin her.)

35. [mc · inference · DOK 2 · AP: AP-LIT.LAN] What does this passage most clearly show? “thanked him with tears of gratitude” (Chapter XLVI, paragraph 26)

    A. Elizabeth's response to her uncle's promise of help: the family closes ranks.

    B. Mrs. Gardiner's hint about love.

    C. Mr. Bennet's ironic "promises well": he expects entertainment.

D. Mr. Bennet's admission, the most serious line he speaks.

Key: A (Elizabeth's response to her uncle's promise of help: the family closes ranks.)

36. [short · synthesis · DOK 4 · AP: AP-LIT.LAN] Evaluate this claim about the chapter: “Lydia's elopement shows how a single act can destroy a whole family's reputation.” Is it fully persuasive? Argue with evidence, including a passage that complicates it.

Sample answer: The claim is persuasive in part. “Though Lydia’s short letter to Mrs. F. gave them to understand that they were going to Gretna Green, something was dropped by Denny expressing his belief that…” (Chapter XLVI, paragraph 5) supports it: Jane's letter fears that Wickham "never intended" to go to Gretna Green, where they could marry, and Elizabeth at once assumes Darcy will withdraw, because Lydia's disgrace attaches to every sister. But “If gratitude and esteem are good foundations of affection, Elizabeth’s change of sentiment will be neither improbable nor faulty” (Chapter XLVI, paragraph 24) complicates it: The narrator steps in to defend a love based on esteem rather than "first sight.", and its “nor” marks a limit or reversal the claim passes over. So the claim stands only in a qualified form: true of the chapter's main pattern, but not of every moment in it.

37. [fill · recall · DOK 1 · Dual Credit (Indiana College Core): ICC-WC-1.5] Complete the quotation from Chapter XLVI, paragraph 1: “Elizabeth had been a good deal _____ in not finding a letter from Jane, on their first arrival at Lambton” Word bank: indiscreet, disappointed, themselves, marriage

Key: disappointed

38. [mc · inference · DOK 2 · Dual Credit (Indiana College Core): ICC-WC-1.5] What does this passage most clearly show? “If gratitude and esteem are good foundations of affection, Elizabeth’s change of sentiment will be neither improbable nor faulty” (Chapter XLVI, paragraph 24)

A. The narrator's verdict on the Bennet marriage.

B. Wickham judged on appearance.

C. Mr. Bennet's admission, the most serious line he speaks.

D. The narrator steps in to defend a love based on esteem rather than "first sight."

Key: D (The narrator steps in to defend a love based on esteem rather than "first sight.")

39. [short · analysis · DOK 3 · Dual Credit (Indiana College Core): ICC-WC-1.5] Analyze the word choice in “thanked him with tears of gratitude” (Chapter XLVI, paragraph 26). Pick two words and explain what they suggest.

Sample answer: Elizabeth's response to her uncle's promise of help: the family closes ranks. The evidence is “thanked him with tears of gratitude” (Chapter XLVI, paragraph 26). This develops family and reputation: one sister's fall threatens all five; Elizabeth knows at once what it means for her own hopes. The words “gratitude” and “thanked” carry that meaning: they are the charged choices in the line, and changing either would soften the effect.

Rigor version	Items (in order)	Mix
Scaffolded support	1, 2, 3, 4, 5, 6, 7, 8, 9, 10, 11, 12, 13, 14, 15, 16	recall 11, inference 2, analysis 2, synthesis 1
HS Freshman	5, 17, 18, 7, 2, 10, 8, 19, 20, 3, 13, 12, 21, 22, 15, 23	recall 10, inference 2, analysis 3, synthesis 1
HS Sophomore	24, 1, 25, 11, 6, 20, 2, 5, 8, 13, 12, 26, 14, 15, 27, 28	recall 9, inference 2, analysis 3, synthesis 2
HS Junior	20, 18, 29, 10, 24, 8, 2, 12, 30, 13, 31, 14, 21, 26, 16, 32	recall 7, inference 3, analysis 4, synthesis 2
HS Senior	20, 19, 9, 8, 18, 7, 33, 12, 13, 26, 22, 14, 15, 28, 23, 32	recall 7, inference 2, analysis 4, synthesis 3
AP		recall 3, inference 4, analysis 5, synthesis 4

	18, 20, 4, 34, 12, 35, 13, 14, 31, 22, 26, 21, 16, 28, 27, 36
College Freshman	18, 2, 37, 4, 38, 12, 39, 22, 21, 14, 15, 27, 32, 23, 16, 28	recall 4, inference 2, analysis 5, synthesis 5
College Sophomore	1, 37, 20, 35, 38, 13, 22, 21, 26, 14, 31, 28, 27, 23, 32, 16	recall 3, inference 3, analysis 5, synthesis 5
College Junior	1, 17, 20, 9, 38, 21, 31, 14, 26, 22, 16, 27, 32, 28, 36, 23	recall 4, inference 1, analysis 5, synthesis 6
College Senior	17, 20, 9, 4, 34, 21, 15, 26, 39, 22, 23, 27, 28, 16, 32, 36	recall 4, inference 1, analysis 5, synthesis 6
Graduate / PhD	3, 20, 9, 4, 38, 13, 21, 22, 15, 39, 16, 23, 27, 36, 28, 32	recall 4, inference 2, analysis 4, synthesis 6

Writing prompts (eleven rigor levels)

Scaffolded support (250 words; AP: see unit standards): Supported track (work from the passage your teacher selects). In “Chapter XLVI,” how does Austen show scandal? Write a paragraph that states your claim, quotes two details from the passage, and explains how each detail supports your idea. Use the plot you noticed as one piece of evidence.

HS Freshman (350 words; AP: see unit standards): In Chapter XLVI, how does Austen develop the idea of scandal? State a clear claim, support it with two or three quotations, and explain how the plot in the chapter helps build that idea.

HS Sophomore (450 words; AP: see unit standards): Analyze how Chapter XLVI develops the idea of scandal. Make a precise claim, support it with at least three pieces of textual evidence, and explain how the author's use of plot and conflict shapes that idea. Address one possible counterclaim.

HS Junior (550 words; AP: see unit standards): Analyze how the structure of Chapter XLVI (where it begins, turns and ends) and its plot shape the reader's understanding of scandal. Identify one place where the text leaves matters uncertain and explain how that uncertainty adds to its meaning.

HS Senior (600 words; AP: see unit standards): Two readers disagree about what Chapter XLVI suggests about scandal. Lay out two plausible interpretations, weigh the evidence for each (including the chapter's plot and conflict), and argue for the stronger one in a sustained, well-organized essay.

AP (650 words; AP: AP-LIT.STR, AP-LIT.LAN): Write a literary argument in which you analyze how Jane Austen uses plot in Chapter XLVI to complicate the reader's understanding of scandal. Develop a defensible thesis, select evidence purposefully, and explain how specific choices of diction and syntax create meaning.

College Freshman (1000 words; AP: see unit standards): Situate Chapter XLVI within its historical and literary context and argue how the chapter's treatment of scandal responds to that context. Engage with at least one secondary perspective (a critic, historian or the author's own statements), integrate quotations smoothly, and cite in MLA style.

College Sophomore (1250 words; AP: see unit standards): Read Chapter XLVI alongside the conventions of its genre and period. Argue how the chapter's handling of scandal follows or bends those conventions, using the plot as evidence, and test your reading against one published critic. Document two secondary sources in MLA.

College Junior (1500 words; AP: see unit standards): Apply a named critical approach (for example formalist, historicist, feminist, psychoanalytic or ecocritical) to Chapter XLVI and its treatment of scandal. State your method, show what it reveals in the chapter's plot and conflict, and identify where the text resists it.

College Senior (2000 words; AP: see unit standards): Develop a research argument that reads Chapter XLVI as evidence for a larger claim about scandal in Pride and Prejudice. Connect close reading of the chapter to the whole novel, engage at least four scholarly sources, and state precisely where your reading departs from theirs (Chicago style).

Graduate / PhD (2500 words; AP: see unit standards): Develop an original argument that reads Chapter XLVI as a hinge in the novel's larger treatment of scandal. Position your reading within a named critical conversation (for example formalist, historicist, psychoanalytic, feminist or postcolonial approaches), account for the textual history where relevant, and articulate the stakes of your intervention for scholarship on Pride and Prejudice.

SAT-style questions

1. Her pale face and impetuous manner made him start, and before he could recover himself enough to speak, she, in whose mind every idea was superseded by Lydia's situation, hastily exclaimed, "I beg your pardon, but I must leave you.

   As used in the text, what does the word "superseded" most nearly mean?

   A. gave someone a task to carry out

   B. replaced; pushed aside

   C. moving suddenly and quickly

   D. characterized by undue haste and lack of thought or deliberation

2. "Oh! where, where is my uncle?" cried Elizabeth, darting from her seat as she finished the letter, in eagerness to follow him, without losing a moment of the time so precious; but as she reached the door, it was opened by a servant, and Mr. Darcy appeared. Her pale face and impetuous manner made him start, and before he could recover himself enough to speak, she, in whose mind every idea was superseded by Lydia's situation, hastily exclaimed, "I beg your pardon, but I must leave you. I must find Mr. Gardiner this moment, on business that cannot be delayed; I have not an instant to lose."

   Which choice best states a central concern of "Chapter XLVI"?

   A. The great confrontation

   B. Leaving Kent

   C. A misguided warning

   D. Scandal

SAT key: 1. B (replaced; pushed aside); 2. D (Scandal)

Lesson 48: Chapter XLVII

Focus: family in crisis

Objective: Students will analyze how characterization develops in "Chapter XLVII" by writing a claim-evidence-reasoning paragraph that cites at least 2 quotations from the section, and will score at least 80% on the section quiz.

Standards: AP: see the unit standards

Content note (exploitation of a minor, alcohol or drugs (mentioned)): The family's reaction focuses on reputation; keep attention on Lydia's vulnerability and Wickham's responsibility. This section mentions drinking or a drug ("…Give my love to Colonel Forster, I hope you will drink to our good journey. "Your affectionate…"). Treat it as period custom or plot detail; name it plainly and don't glamorize it.
Student preview: The family reacts to Lydia's elopement.
Suggested language: "What does the family worry about most? What should they worry about?"

Teacher only · spoilers

The Gardiners and Elizabeth return to Longbourn. Mrs. Bennet is hysterical; Mr. Bennet is already in London searching. Lydia's careless letter to Mrs. Forster shows she thinks it a joke.

Background: Lydia's reputation affected her sisters' marriage prospects too.

Significance: Lydia's thoughtlessness exposes the results of indulgence and neglect.

Lesson plan and lecture script (90 minutes)

0–8 min · Bell-ringer · You do (8 min)
Students write to the bell-ringer, then pair-share.
What does Lydia's letter reveal about her? Write for five minutes. Starters: I think... because... / This connects to family and reputation because.... Content note before we start: The family reacts to Lydia's elopement.
Prompt: What does Lydia's letter reveal about her?
Sentence starters: I think… because… · This connects to family and reputation because…
Strong response: A strong response takes a position and anticipates this: the Bennet household's lack of discipline is exposed for all to see.

8–18 min · Vocabulary with etymology notes · I do (10 min)
Five key words in context, with verified word histories.
Today's words: overruled — outvoted; overridden; condole — to express sympathy; postilions — riders who guide the horses pulling a carriage; flirtation — playful behavior intended to arouse sexual interest; insinuating — winning favor in a sly, flattering way.
Words: overruled: outvoted; overridden · condole: to express sympathy · postilions: riders who guide the horses pulling a carriage · flirtation: playful behavior intended to arouse sexual interest · insinuating: winning favor in a sly, flattering way

18–28 min · Background and context · I do (10 min)
Mini-lecture (read or adapt the script).
Lydia's reputation affected her sisters' marriage prospects too. Lydia's thoughtlessness exposes the results of indulgence and neglect. Characterization: On the road home Mr. Gardiner hopes Wickham means to marry Lydia; Elizabeth, who knows his history with Georgiana, cannot share the hope. At Longbourn Mrs. Bennet blames everyone but herself. Epistolary: Lydia's own note to Mrs. Forster, careless and giggling, is the clearest picture of her character in the novel. Watch for silence and reserve: What characters leave unsaid (Darcy's reserve, Jane's composure, Elizabeth's secrets) drives misunderstanding. In this chapter: "Miss Darcy, I was thoroughly prepared to see a proud, reserved, disagreeable girl. Yet he knew to the contrary himself. He must" (Chapter XLVII, paragraph 14).

28–40 min · I do: modeled close reading · I do (12 min)
Model the close reading of the anchor quotation using the written think-aloud below.
First, meaning. I read "I have been thinking it over again, Elizabeth" slowly and put it in my own words: Mr. Gardiner tells Elizabeth he now thinks, like Jane, that Wickham may intend marriage. Next, craft. I notice his careful, reasoned tone, the voice of a man trying to calm his niece. The strongest word is "thinking": it shows careful reflection after a night of worry. Then, effect. What does Mr. Gardiner suggest about Wickham? My answer: Mr. Gardiner suggests that Wickham may still intend to marry Lydia, since he would not risk ruin with friends watching; he tries to give hope, though Elizabeth fears the worst.

> I have been thinking it over again, Elizabeth (Chapter XLVII, paragraph 1)

Think-aloud: First, meaning. I read "I have been thinking it over again, Elizabeth" slowly and put it in my own words: Mr. Gardiner tells Elizabeth he now thinks, like Jane, that Wickham may intend marriage. Next, craft. I notice his careful, reasoned tone, the voice of a man trying to calm his niece. The strongest word is "thinking": it shows careful reflection after a night of worry. Then, effect. What does Mr. Gardiner suggest about Wickham? My answer: Mr. Gardiner suggests that Wickham may still intend to marry Lydia, since he would not risk ruin with friends watching; he tries to give hope, though Elizabeth fears the worst.

40–55 min · We do: guided annotation · We do (15 min)
Guided analysis of a second quotation; expected answers given.
Ask: What words in this line stand out, and what do they suggest? Expected: Lydia's note: thoughtless and triumphant; note the grammar ("with who") and the tone. Look at the craft: Lydia's own note to Mrs. Forster, careless and giggling, is the clearest picture of her character in the novel. Ask: How does this line connect to family and reputation? Expected: The Bennet household's lack of discipline is exposed for all to see. (Lydia's note: thoughtless and triumphant; note the grammar ("with who") and the tone.)

> I am going to Gretna Green, and if you cannot guess with who, I shall think you a simpleton (Chapter XLVII, paragraph 61)

Ask: What words in this line stand out, and what do they suggest?
Expected answer: Lydia's note: thoughtless and triumphant; note the grammar ("with who") and the tone. Look at the craft: Lydia's own note to Mrs. Forster, careless and giggling, is the clearest picture of her character in the novel.
Ask: How does this line connect to family and reputation?
Expected answer: The Bennet household's lack of discipline is exposed for all to see. (Lydia's note: thoughtless and triumphant; note the grammar ("with who") and the tone.)

55–70 min · You do: independent annotation · You do (15 min)
Independent annotation and a claim-evidence-reasoning paragraph (exemplar given).
Annotate the chapter for characterization, epistolary (three marks with a margin note each), then write one claim-evidence-reasoning paragraph: what does this chapter suggest about family in crisis? Then start your writing prompt at your assigned level (HS Sophomore: Analyze how Chapter XLVII develops the idea of family in crisis. Make a precise claim, support it with at least three pieces of textual evidence, and explain how the author's use of characterization and theme shapes that idea. Address one possible counterclaim.) Exemplar: Lydia's own letter shows that she does not understand what she has done. When the text says “cannot help laughing myself at your surprise tomorrow morning, as soon as I am missed” (Chapter XLVII, paragraph 61), it shows this directly. She writes that she "cannot help laughing" at Mrs. Forster's "surprise tomorrow morning" and calls anyone who cannot guess the man "a simpleton," treating an act that could ruin her family as a prank.
Task: Annotate the chapter for characterization, epistolary (three marks with a margin note each), then write one claim-evidence-reasoning paragraph: what does this chapter suggest about family in crisis? Then start your writing prompt at your assigned level (HS Sophomore: Analyze how Chapter XLVII develops the idea of family in crisis. Make a precise claim, support it with at least three pieces of textual evidence, and explain how the author's use of characterization and theme shapes that idea. Address one possible counterclaim.)
Exemplar: Lydia's own letter shows that she does not understand what she has done. When the text says “cannot help laughing myself at your surprise tomorrow morning, as soon as I am missed” (Chapter XLVII, paragraph 61), it shows this directly. She writes that she "cannot help laughing" at Mrs. Forster's "surprise tomorrow morning" and calls anyone who cannot guess the man "a simpleton," treating an act that could ruin her family as a prank.

70–80 min · Discussion · We do (10 min)
Structured discussion from the 30 tiered questions, with facilitation notes.
Anchor question: What does Lydia's letter reveal about her? Ask: who taught Lydia to think this way? Look back at Chapters XL and XLI.
Anchor question: What does Lydia's letter reveal about her?
Facilitation: Ask: who taught Lydia to think this way? Look back at Chapters XL and XLI.

80–87 min · Exit ticket / chapter quiz · You do (7 min)
Chapter quiz in the app and an exit ticket (answer given).
Chapter quiz in the app, then: In one sentence, what does this chapter suggest about family in crisis? Support it with one short quotation. Model answer: Lydia's own letter shows that she does not understand what she has done. ("cannot help laughing myself at your surprise tomorrow morning, as soon as I am missed", Chapter XLVII, paragraph 61). Accept any defensible claim backed by a quotation from the chapter; the answer key for the quiz is in the Quiz section.
Exit ticket: In one sentence, what does this chapter suggest about family in crisis? Support it with one short quotation.
Answer: Model answer: Lydia's own letter shows that she does not understand what she has done. ("cannot help laughing myself at your surprise tomorrow morning, as soon as I am missed", Chapter XLVII, paragraph 61). Accept any defensible claim backed by a quotation from the chapter; the answer key for the quiz is in the Quiz section.

87–90 min · Closure · I do (3 min)
Summarize the lesson and preview the next reading.
Today we saw how characterization shapes family in crisis. Key takeaway: the Bennet household's lack of discipline is exposed for all to see.

Total: 90 minutes.

Teacher analysis (spoilers)

Literary elements

- Characterization: On the road home Mr. Gardiner hopes Wickham means to marry Lydia; Elizabeth, who knows his history with Georgiana, cannot share the hope. At Longbourn Mrs. Bennet blames everyone but herself.
- Epistolary: Lydia's own note to Mrs. Forster, careless and giggling, is the clearest picture of her character in the novel.

Themes and how they develop

- family and reputation: the Bennet household's lack of discipline is exposed for all to see.

Symbols and motifs

- silence and reserve: What characters leave unsaid (Darcy's reserve, Jane's composure, Elizabeth's secrets) drives misunderstanding. In this chapter: "Miss Darcy, I was thoroughly prepared to see a proud, reserved, disagreeable girl. Yet he knew to the contrary himself. He must" (Chapter XLVII, paragraph 14).

- letters: Letters carry news, reveal character and change minds; Darcy's letter is the turning point of the novel. In this chapter: "Yes, he went on Tuesday as I wrote you word" (Chapter XLVII, paragraph 26).

Key quotations (checked against the reading text)

- "I have been thinking it over again, Elizabeth" (Chapter XLVII, paragraph 1) Mr. Gardiner's reasoning that Wickham would not risk his career; Elizabeth knows better.
- "I am going to Gretna Green, and if you cannot guess with who, I shall think you a simpleton" (Chapter XLVII, paragraph 61) Lydia's note: thoughtless and triumphant; note the grammar ("with who") and the tone.
- "cannot help laughing myself at your surprise tomorrow morning, as soon as I am missed" (Chapter XLVII, paragraph 61) Lydia treats the elopement as a joke at her friend's expense.

Model claim-evidence-reasoning

Claim: Lydia's own letter shows that she does not understand what she has done.
Evidence: "cannot help laughing myself at your surprise tomorrow morning, as soon as I am missed" (Chapter XLVII, paragraph 61)
Reasoning: She writes that she "cannot help laughing" at Mrs. Forster's "surprise tomorrow morning" and calls anyone who cannot guess the man "a simpleton," treating an act that could ruin her family as a prank.

Vocabulary with etymology notes

Word	Definition (in this sentence)	In context	Word history
overruled (verb)	outvoted; overridden	I always thought they were very unfit to have the charge of her; but I was overruled, as I always am.
condole (verb)	to express sympathy	She was of great use and comfort to us all, and lady Lucas has been very kind; she walked here on Wednesday morning to condole with us, and offered her services, or any of her daughters, if they could be of use to us."
postilions (noun)	riders who guide the horses pulling a carriage	"He meant, I believe," replied Jane, "to go to Epsom, the place where they last changed horses, see the postilions, and try if anything could be made out from them.
flirtation (noun)	playful behavior intended to arouse sexual interest	Since the ——shire were first quartered in Meryton, nothing but love, flirtation, and officers, have been in her head.
insinuating (adjective)	winning favor in a sly, flattering way	That he is as false and deceitful, as he is insinuating."
alternate (adjective)	first one and then the other	Jane ran to her uncle and aunt, and welcomed and thanked them both, with alternate smiles and tears.

attractions (noun)	qualities that make someone attractive	And what claims has Lydia, what attractions has she beyond youth, health, and good humour, that could make him for her sake, forego every chance of benefiting himself by marrying well?
availed (verb)	use to one's advantage	In the afternoon, the two elder Miss Bennets were able to be for half an hour by themselves; and Elizabeth instantly availed herself of the opportunity of making many enquiries, which Jane was equally eager to satisfy.
adequate (adjective)	having the requisite qualities or resources to meet a task	His temptation is not adequate to the risk."
shocking (adjective)	very upsetting	"It does seem, and it is most shocking indeed," replied Elizabeth, with tears in her eyes, "that a sister's sense of decency and virtue in such a point should admit of doubt.

Discussion questions

1. What does Lydia's letter reveal about her?
2. Where does characterization appear in this chapter, and what effect does it have? Point to one passage.
3. How does this chapter connect to the book's larger concern with pride and self-knowledge?

Classroom discussion questions (30, tiered)

Wait time after every question (3 s for DOK 1, 5 s for DOK 2, 8 to 10 s for DOK 3 and 4); think-pair-share on DOK 3 and 4; answer each response with a follow-up probe; close with student-generated questions. Focus sets by rigor level: Scaffolded support: 1, 2, 3, 4, 5, 6, 11, 12, 13, 14, 21, 22; HS Freshman: 1, 2, 3, 4, 5, 12, 13, 14, 15, 22, 23, 24; HS Sophomore: 1, 2, 3, 4, 13, 14, 15, 16, 17, 23, 24, 25; HS Junior: 1, 2, 3, 14, 15, 16, 17, 18, 24, 25, 26, 27; HS Senior: 1, 2, 3, 15, 16, 17, 18, 25, 26, 27, 28, 29; AP: 1, 2, 16, 17, 18, 19, 20, 26, 27, 28, 29, 30; College Freshman: 1, 2, 17, 18, 19, 20, 21, 22, 27, 28, 29, 30; College Sophomore: 1, 2, 11, 18, 19, 20, 21, 22, 23, 28, 29, 30; College Junior: 1, 11, 12, 19, 20, 21, 22, 23, 24, 25, 29, 30; College Senior: 1, 11, 12, 13, 20, 21, 22, 23, 24, 25, 26, 30; Graduate / PhD: 1, 11, 12, 13, 21, 22, 23, 24, 25, 26, 27, 28

Literal / recall

1. Who is already in London searching for Lydia? [DOK 1 · coldCallWithSupport · wait 3 s · AP: unit standards] Look for: Mr. Bennet
2. How does Mrs. Bennet react to Lydia's elopement? [DOK 1 · turnAndTalk · wait 3 s · AP: unit standards] Look for: Hysterically
3. What is Lydia's attitude in her letter? [DOK 1 · coldCallWithSupport · wait 3 s · AP: unit standards] Look for: She thinks it a joke
4. Who wrote to Mrs. Forster? [DOK 1 · turnAndTalk · wait 3 s · AP: unit standards] Look for: Lydia
5. What theme does the crisis show? [DOK 1 · coldCallWithSupport · wait 3 s · AP: unit standards] Look for: Effects of neglect and indulgence
6. Retell the three most important events of "Chapter XLVII" in order, in one sentence each. [DOK 1 · turnAndTalk · wait 3 s · AP: unit standards] Look for: The Gardiners and Elizabeth return to Longbourn. Mrs. Bennet is hysterical; Mr. Bennet is already in London searching. Lydia's careless letter to Mrs. Forster shows she thinks it a joke.

7. Which characters appear or are mentioned in “Chapter XLVII”? Name two and one thing each says or does. [DOK 1 · coldCallWithSupport · wait 3 s · AP: unit standards] Look for: Names and actions taken from the chapter; check against the teacher summary.
8. Where and when does “Chapter XLVII” take place? Point to the line that tells you. [DOK 1 · turnAndTalk · wait 3 s · AP: unit standards] Look for: A place/time detail quoted from the chapter.
9. Reread: “I always thought they were very unfit to have the charge of her; but I was overruled, as I always am.” What does “overruled” mean here, and what is literally happening in this line? [DOK 1 · turnAndTalk · wait 3 s · AP: unit standards] Look for: overruled: outvoted; overridden.
10. Reread: “She was of great use and comfort to us all, and lady Lucas has been very kind; she walked here on Wednesday morning to condole with us, and offered her services, or any of her daughters, if they could be of use to us.”” What does “condole” mean here, and what is literally happening in this line? [DOK 1 · turnAndTalk · wait 3 s · AP: unit standards] Look for: condole: to express sympathy.

Inferential / analytical

1. What does “Chapter XLVII” suggest about family in crisis? State the inference and the line that supports it. [DOK 2 · thinkPairShare · wait 5 s · AP-LIT.LAN] Look for: Lydia's thoughtlessness exposes the results of indulgence and neglect.
2. Find one example of characterization in this chapter. What does it reveal that a plain statement would not? [DOK 2 · followUp · wait 5 s · AP-LIT.CHR] Look for: Look for what characters say, do and think, and how others react to them.
3. How does the theme in this chapter shape what we understand about family in crisis? [DOK 3 · thinkPairShare · wait 8 s · AP-LIT.LAN] Look for: Look for statements or moments that connect to the book's big ideas.
   Answer guidance: A defensible line of argument: Lydia's own letter shows that she does not understand what she has done. Useful evidence: “I have been thinking it over again, Elizabeth” (Chapter XLVII, paragraph 1): Mr. Gardiner's reasoning that Wickham would not risk his career; Elizabeth knows better. Theme link: the Bennet household's lack of discipline is exposed for all to see. Credit any position that is supported by quotation and reasoning; push one-sided answers to address the strongest counterpoint.
4. In the passage that begins ““I have been thinking it over again, Elizabeth,””, why might Austen have chosen these particular words? Pick two and explain their connotations. [DOK 2 · followUp · wait 5 s · AP-LIT.FIG] Look for: Diction analysis of two words in the anchor passage.
5. What causes the main turn in “Chapter XLVII”, and what effect is it likely to have on what follows? [DOK 2 · followUp · wait 5 s · AP-LIT.STR] Look for: The Gardiners and Elizabeth return to Longbourn. Mrs. Bennet is hysterical; Mr. Bennet is already in London searching. Lydia's careless letter to Mrs. Forster shows she thinks it a joke.
6. How does “Chapter XLVII” build on “Chapter XLVI”? Name one link of cause and effect. [DOK 3 · thinkPairShare · wait 8 s · AP-LIT.STR] Look for: A causal or structural link between this and the previous chapter.
   Answer guidance: A defensible line of argument: Lydia's own letter shows that she does not understand what she has done. Useful evidence: “I am going to Gretna Green, and if you cannot guess with who, I shall think you a simpleton” (Chapter XLVII, paragraph 61): Lydia's note: thoughtless and triumphant; note the grammar ("with who") and the tone. Theme link: the Bennet household's lack of discipline is exposed for all to see. Credit any position that is supported by quotation and reasoning; push one-sided answers to address the strongest counterpoint.
7. What can we infer about a character's motives from what they say and do here, as opposed to what they claim? [DOK 3 · followUp · wait 8 s · AP-LIT.CHR] Look for: An inference about motive supported by a quoted line.

Answer guidance: A defensible line of argument: Lydia's own letter shows that she does not understand what she has done. Useful evidence: “cannot help laughing myself at your surprise tomorrow morning, as soon as I am missed” (Chapter XLVII, paragraph 61): Lydia treats the elopement as a joke at her friend's expense. On characterization: On the road home Mr. Gardiner hopes Wickham means to marry Lydia; Elizabeth, who knows his history with Georgiana, cannot share the hope. At Longbourn Mrs. Bennet blames everyone but herself. Credit any position that is supported by quotation and reasoning; push one-sided answers to address the strongest counterpoint.

8. The bell-ringer asked: “What does Lydia's letter reveal about her?” Now that we have read closely, how would you revise your first answer, and which line changed your mind? [DOK 2 · thinkPairShare · wait 5 s · AP-LIT.LAN] Look for: A revised answer anchored in the text.
9. Where does tone / mood appear, and how does it connect this chapter to the larger concern with pride and self-knowledge? [DOK 3 · followUp · wait 8 s · AP-LIT.FIG] Look for: Look for word choices that reveal the narrator's attitude or the scene's feeling.

   Answer guidance: A defensible line of argument: Lydia's own letter shows that she does not understand what she has done. Useful evidence: “I have been thinking it over again, Elizabeth” (Chapter XLVII, paragraph 1): Mr. Gardiner's reasoning that Wickham would not risk his career; Elizabeth knows better. Theme link: the Bennet household's lack of discipline is exposed for all to see. Credit any position that is supported by quotation and reasoning; push one-sided answers to address the strongest counterpoint.
10. Background: Lydia's reputation affected her sisters' marriage prospects too. How does knowing this change the way you read one moment in the chapter? [DOK 3 · thinkPairShare · wait 8 s · AP-LIT.SET] Look for: A specific moment reread in light of the context.

    Answer guidance: A defensible line of argument: Lydia's own letter shows that she does not understand what she has done. Useful evidence: “I am going to Gretna Green, and if you cannot guess with who, I shall think you a simpleton” (Chapter XLVII, paragraph 61): Lydia's note: thoughtless and triumphant; note the grammar ("with who") and the tone. Theme link: the Bennet household's lack of discipline is exposed for all to see. Credit any position that is supported by quotation and reasoning; push one-sided answers to address the strongest counterpoint.

Evaluative / synthesis / creative

1. A critic might argue: “Lydia's thoughtlessness exposes the results of indulgence and neglect.” How far do you agree? Take a stand and defend it with two lines from the chapter. [DOK 3 · fourCorners · wait 8 s · AP-LIT.LAN] Look for: A defended position with evidence and one counterpoint.

   Answer guidance: A defensible line of argument: Lydia's own letter shows that she does not understand what she has done. Useful evidence: “cannot help laughing myself at your surprise tomorrow morning, as soon as I am missed” (Chapter XLVII, paragraph 61): Lydia treats the elopement as a joke at her friend's expense. Theme link: the Bennet household's lack of discipline is exposed for all to see. Credit any position that is supported by quotation and reasoning; push one-sided answers to address the strongest counterpoint.
2. Which character in this chapter acts most wisely, and which least? Judge them by a standard you name. [DOK 3 · thinkPairShare · wait 8 s · AP-LIT.CHR, AP-LIT.LAN] Look for: An evaluation using an explicit criterion and evidence.

   Answer guidance: A defensible line of argument: Lydia's own letter shows that she does not understand what she has done. Useful evidence: “I have been thinking it over again, Elizabeth” (Chapter XLVII, paragraph 1): Mr. Gardiner's reasoning that Wickham would not risk his career; Elizabeth knows better. On characterization: On the road home Mr. Gardiner hopes Wickham means to marry Lydia; Elizabeth, who knows his history with Georgiana, cannot share the hope. At Longbourn Mrs. Bennet blames everyone but herself. Credit any position that is supported by quotation and reasoning; push one-sided answers to address the strongest counterpoint.

3. Rewrite one moment of “Chapter XLVII” from the point of view of a different character. What does the new angle reveal or hide about family in crisis? [DOK 4 · thinkPairShare · wait 8 s · AP-LIT.LAN, AP-LIT.NAR] Look for: A creative product with a rationale tied to the text.

   Answer guidance: A defensible line of argument: Lydia's own letter shows that she does not understand what she has done. Useful evidence: “I am going to Gretna Green, and if you cannot guess with who, I shall think you a simpleton” (Chapter XLVII, paragraph 61): Lydia's note: thoughtless and triumphant; note the grammar ("with who") and the tone. Theme link: the Bennet household's lack of discipline is exposed for all to see. Credit any position that is supported by quotation and reasoning; push one-sided answers to address the strongest counterpoint.

4. Write three questions of your own about “Chapter XLVII”: one recall, one “why/how”, and one “should/what if”. Trade with a partner and answer theirs. [DOK 3 · studentGenerated · wait 8 s · AP-LIT.LAN] Look for: Student-generated questions at three levels.

   Answer guidance: A defensible line of argument: Lydia's own letter shows that she does not understand what she has done. Useful evidence: “cannot help laughing myself at your surprise tomorrow morning, as soon as I am missed” (Chapter XLVII, paragraph 61): Lydia treats the elopement as a joke at her friend's expense. Theme link: the Bennet household's lack of discipline is exposed for all to see. Credit any position that is supported by quotation and reasoning; push one-sided answers to address the strongest counterpoint.

5. Connect this chapter to marriage and money: is the link strong or weak so far? What would Austen need to show next to strengthen it? [DOK 4 · socraticCircle · wait 8 s · AP-LIT.LAN] Look for: A judgment of thematic development across the work.

   Answer guidance: A defensible line of argument: Lydia's own letter shows that she does not understand what she has done. Useful evidence: “I have been thinking it over again, Elizabeth” (Chapter XLVII, paragraph 1): Mr. Gardiner's reasoning that Wickham would not risk his career; Elizabeth knows better. Theme link: the Bennet household's lack of discipline is exposed for all to see. Credit any position that is supported by quotation and reasoning; push one-sided answers to address the strongest counterpoint.

6. Is the characterization in this chapter effective, or does it feel heavy-handed? Evaluate it as a reader would in a review. [DOK 3 · fourCorners · wait 8 s · AP-LIT.CHR, AP-LIT.LAN] Look for: An evaluative judgment with criteria and evidence.

   Answer guidance: A defensible line of argument: Lydia's own letter shows that she does not understand what she has done. Useful evidence: “I am going to Gretna Green, and if you cannot guess with who, I shall think you a simpleton” (Chapter XLVII, paragraph 61): Lydia's note: thoughtless and triumphant; note the grammar ("with who") and the tone. On characterization: On the road home Mr. Gardiner hopes Wickham means to marry Lydia; Elizabeth, who knows his history with Georgiana, cannot share the hope. At Longbourn Mrs. Bennet blames everyone but herself. Credit any position that is supported by quotation and reasoning; push one-sided answers to address the strongest counterpoint.

7. Compare how “Chapter XLVII” treats family in crisis with how another text, film or event you know treats a similar idea. What does Pride and Prejudice see that the other misses? [DOK 4 · socraticCircle · wait 8 s · AP-

LIT.LAN] Look for: A cross-text synthesis.

Answer guidance: A defensible line of argument: Lydia's own letter shows that she does not understand what she has done. Useful evidence: “cannot help laughing myself at your surprise tomorrow morning, as soon as I am missed” (Chapter XLVII, paragraph 61): Lydia treats the elopement as a joke at her friend's expense. Theme link: the Bennet household's lack of discipline is exposed for all to see. Credit any position that is supported by quotation and reasoning; push one-sided answers to address the strongest counterpoint.

8. Predict what “Chapter XLVIII” will bring, using two clues from this chapter. After reading, evaluate your prediction. [DOK 3 · thinkPairShare · wait 8 s · AP-LIT.LAN, AP-LIT.STR] Look for: A prediction or judgment justified with textual clues.

   Answer guidance: A defensible line of argument: Lydia's own letter shows that she does not understand what she has done. Useful evidence: “I have been thinking it over again, Elizabeth” (Chapter XLVII, paragraph 1): Mr. Gardiner's reasoning that Wickham would not risk his career; Elizabeth knows better. Theme link: the Bennet household's lack of discipline is exposed for all to see. Credit any position that is supported by quotation and reasoning; push one-sided answers to address the strongest counterpoint.

9. Design a one-paragraph modern adaptation of this chapter (setting, characters, conflict). What must stay the same for it to still be about family in crisis? [DOK 4 · thinkPairShare · wait 8 s · AP-LIT.LAN] Look for: A creative transfer that keeps the core idea.

   Answer guidance: A defensible line of argument: Lydia's own letter shows that she does not understand what she has done. Useful evidence: “I am going to Gretna Green, and if you cannot guess with who, I shall think you a simpleton” (Chapter XLVII, paragraph 61): Lydia's note: thoughtless and triumphant; note the grammar ("with who") and the tone. Theme link: the Bennet household's lack of discipline is exposed for all to see. Credit any position that is supported by quotation and reasoning; push one-sided answers to address the strongest counterpoint.

10. What question would you most like to ask Jane Austen about this chapter, and what answer do you think the text itself gives? [DOK 4 · studentGenerated · wait 8 s · AP-LIT.LAN] Look for: A student-generated question answered from evidence.

    Answer guidance: A defensible line of argument: Lydia's own letter shows that she does not understand what she has done. Useful evidence: “cannot help laughing myself at your surprise tomorrow morning, as soon as I am missed” (Chapter XLVII, paragraph 61): Lydia treats the elopement as a joke at her friend's expense. Theme link: the Bennet household's lack of discipline is exposed for all to see. Credit any position that is supported by quotation and reasoning; push one-sided answers to address the strongest counterpoint.

Annotation focus

- Characterization: look for what characters say, do and think, and how others react to them (anchor passage in the We do segment)
- Also notice Theme: statements or moments that connect to the book's big ideas
- Also notice Tone / mood: word choices that reveal the narrator's attitude or the scene's feeling

Chapter quiz: item bank (all eleven rigor versions)

1. [mc · recall · DOK 1] How does Mrs. Bennet react to Lydia's elopement?

   A. Calmly

B. Joyfully

C. Hysterically

D. Silently

Key: C (Hysterically)

2. [mc · recall · DOK 1] Who is already in London searching for Lydia?

A. Darcy openly

B. Collins

C. Bingley

D. Mr. Bennet

Key: D (Mr. Bennet)

3. [mc · recall · DOK 1] Which word completes this sentence from Chapter XLVII, paragraph 6? “And, _____, no traces of them were to be found on the Barnet road.”

A. everything

B. perceptible

C. immediately

D. besides

Key: D (besides)

4. [mc · recall · DOK 1] Which word completes this sentence from Chapter XLVII, paragraph 24? “But now that my dear uncle is come, I hope _____ will be well.”

A. everything

B. consequence

C. besides

D. yourself

Key: A (everything)

5. [mc · recall · DOK 1] In the line “Since the ——shire were first quartered in Meryton, nothing but love, flirtation, and officers, have been in her head.”, what does “flirtation” most nearly mean?

A. playful behavior intended to arouse sexual interest

B. a building where theatrical performances or motion-picture shows can be presented

C. acting or arriving or performed exactly at the time appointed

D. picked out; chose

Key: A (playful behavior intended to arouse sexual interest)

6. [fill · recall · DOK 1] Fill in the blank with the vocabulary word that fits: “In the afternoon, the two elder Miss Bennets were able to be for half an hour by themselves; and Elizabeth instantly _____ herself of the opportunity of making many enquiries, which Jane was equally eager to satisfy.” Word bank: overruled, postilions, condole, availed

Key: availed

7. [fill · recall · DOK 1] Complete the quotation from Chapter XLVII, paragraph 19: “It may be easily believed, that however little of novelty could be added to their fears, hopes, and _____, on this interesting subject, by its repeated discussion, no other could detain them from it long, during the whole of the journey.” Word bank: everything, circumstances, perceptible, conjectures

Key: conjectures

8. [mc · recall · DOK 1] Which word completes this sentence from Chapter XLVII, paragraph 16? “And even when it was settled that Lydia should go with Mrs. Forster, the _____ of opening her eyes to his character never occurred to me.”

   A. relation

   B. necessity

   C. besides

   D. opinion

   Key: B (necessity)

9. [fill · recall · DOK 1] Complete the quotation from Chapter XLVII, paragraph 1: “I have been _____ it over again, Elizabeth”

   Key: thinking

10. [short · inference · DOK 2] What can you infer from this line? “I have been thinking it over again, Elizabeth” (Chapter XLVII, paragraph 1) Answer in two or three sentences with one detail.

    Sample answer: Mr. Gardiner's reasoning that Wickham would not risk his career; Elizabeth knows better. The evidence is “I have been thinking it over again, Elizabeth” (Chapter XLVII, paragraph 1). This develops family and reputation: the Bennet household's lack of discipline is exposed for all to see.

11. [short · inference · DOK 2] What does this passage from Chapter XLVII, paragraph 3 reveal about the character or situation? “It is really too great a violation of decency, honour, and interest, for him to be guilty of it.” Answer in two or three sentences with one detail.

    Sample answer: The passage (Chapter XLVII, paragraph 3) shows the situation turning on first impressions and prejudice: the Bennet household's lack of discipline is exposed for all to see. The words “violation” and “interest” are the proof, because they show how the moment looks to the people in it. They suggest more than the narrator states outright.

12. [mc · inference · DOK 2] Which choice best states a central concern of “Chapter XLVII”?

    A. A changed Darcy

    B. A persuasive tale

    C. An absurd cousin's letter

    D. Family in crisis

    Key: D (Family in crisis)

13. [short · inference · DOK 2] What does this passage from Chapter XLVII, paragraph 28 reveal about the character or situation? “He wrote me a few lines on Wednesday, to say that he had arrived in safety, and to give me his directions, which I particularly begged him to do.” Answer in two or three sentences with one detail.

    Sample answer: The passage (Chapter XLVII, paragraph 28) shows the situation turning on first impressions and prejudice: the Bennet household's lack of discipline is exposed for all to see. The words “particularly” and “directions” are the proof, because they show how the moment looks to the people in it. They suggest more than the narrator states outright.

14. [short · analysis · DOK 3] Analyze how the word choice in this passage from Chapter XLVII, paragraph 37 shapes its tone: “In a few days more, we may gain some news of them, and till we know that they are not married, and have no design of marrying, do not let us give the matter over as lost.” Pick two words and explain their effect.

    Sample answer: The words “marrying” and “married” (Chapter XLVII, paragraph 37) make the tone heavy and deliberate rather than neutral. That weight points the reader to class and social mobility: the Bennet household's lack of discipline is exposed for all to see. The author chooses them so the moment feels significant instead of passing.

15. [short · analysis · DOK 3] Analyze how the word choice in this passage from Chapter XLVII, paragraph 41 shapes its tone: “In the dining-room they were soon joined by Mary and Kitty, who had been too busily engaged in their separate apartments, to make their appearance before.” Pick two words and explain their effect.
    Sample answer: The words “appearance” and “apartments” (Chapter XLVII, paragraph 41) make the tone heavy and deliberate rather than neutral. That weight points the reader to pride and self-knowledge: the Bennet household's lack of discipline is exposed for all to see. The author chooses them so the moment feels significant instead of passing.

16. [short · synthesis · DOK 4] Connect this passage from Chapter XLVII, paragraph 46 to the story's treatment of women's limited choices: “Colonel Forster did own that he had often suspected some partiality, especially on Lydia’s side, but nothing to give him any alarm.” Use one other moment from the story as well.
    Sample answer: This passage (Chapter XLVII, paragraph 46) develops women's limited choices: the Bennet household's lack of discipline is exposed for all to see. Its words “partiality” and “especially” carry that idea into this moment. The same concern returns in “Yes; but when questioned by him Denny denied knowing anything of their plan, and would not give his real opinion about…” (Chapter XLVII, paragraph 48), so the two passages read as a pattern, not a single moment. Together they show the story treating women's limited choices as central.

17. [mc · recall · DOK 1] In the line “He meant, I believe,’ replied Jane, ‘to go to Epsom, the place where they last changed horses, see the postilions, and try if anything could be made out from them.”, what does “postilions” most nearly mean?
    A. riders who guide the horses pulling a carriage
    B. amused
    C. be fond of; be attached to
    D. handed over

    Key: A (riders who guide the horses pulling a carriage)

18. [fill · recall · DOK 1] Fill in the blank with the vocabulary word that fits: “Jane ran to her uncle and aunt, and welcomed and thanked them both, with _____ smiles and tears.” Word bank: condole, postilions, overruled, alternate
    Key: alternate

19. [fill · recall · DOK 1] Complete the quotation from Chapter XLVII, paragraph 61: “cannot help _____ myself at your surprise tomorrow morning, as soon as I am missed”
    Key: laughing

20. [fill · recall · DOK 1] Complete the quotation from Chapter XLVII, paragraph 3: “Upon my word,’ said Mrs. Gardiner, ‘I begin to be of your uncle’s _____.” Word bank: unpretending, absolute, opinion, expeditiously
    Key: opinion

21. [fill · recall · DOK 1] Fill in the blank with the vocabulary word that fits: “That he is as false and deceitful, as he is _____.” Word bank: insinuating, postilions, overruled, condole
    Key: insinuating

22. [mc · analysis · DOK 3] Which literary element does this describe in “Chapter XLVII”? On the road home Mr. Gardiner hopes Wickham means to marry Lydia; Elizabeth, who knows his history with Georgiana, cannot share the hope. At Longbourn Mrs. Bennet blames everyone but herself.
    A. Alliteration

B. Personification

C. Characterization

D. Symbolism

Key: C (Characterization)

23. [mc · recall · DOK 1] What is Lydia's attitude in her letter?

A. She is terrified

B. She apologizes

C. She is ashamed

D. She thinks it a joke

Key: D (She thinks it a joke)

24. [fill · recall · DOK 1] Fill in the blank with the vocabulary word that fits: “And what claims has Lydia, what _____ has she beyond youth, health, and good humour, that could make him for her sake, forego every chance of benefiting himself by marrying well?” Word bank: overruled, condole, postilions, attractions

Key: attractions

25. [short · analysis · DOK 3] Analyze how the word choice in this passage from Chapter XLVII, paragraph 14 shapes its tone: “From what he said of Miss Darcy, I was thoroughly prepared to see a proud, reserved, disagreeable girl.” Pick two words and explain their effect.

Sample answer: The words “disagreeable” and “thoroughly” (Chapter XLVII, paragraph 14) make the tone heavy and deliberate rather than neutral. That weight points the reader to pride and self-knowledge: the Bennet household's lack of discipline is exposed for all to see. The author chooses them so the moment feels significant instead of passing.

26. [short · analysis · DOK 3] Analyze how the word choice in this passage from Chapter XLVII, paragraph 7 shapes its tone: “They may be there, though for the purpose of concealment, for no more exceptionable purpose.” Pick two words and explain their effect.

Sample answer: The words “exceptionable” and “concealment” (Chapter XLVII, paragraph 7) make the tone heavy and deliberate rather than neutral. That weight points the reader to class and social mobility: the Bennet household's lack of discipline is exposed for all to see. The author chooses them so the moment feels significant instead of passing.

27. [short · synthesis · DOK 4] Synthesis: trace how family and reputation develops from Chapter XLVI to Chapter XLVII. Use one quotation from each.

Sample answer: Earlier, in Chapter XLVI, paragraph 24, the text reads “If gratitude and esteem are good foundations of affection, Elizabeth’s change of sentiment will be neither improbable nor faulty”, which shows the narrator steps in to defend a love based on esteem rather than "first sight.". In Chapter XLVII, “I have been thinking it over again, Elizabeth” (Chapter XLVII, paragraph 1) — Mr. Gardiner's reasoning that Wickham would not risk his career; Elizabeth knows better. The Bennet household's lack of discipline is exposed for all to see.

28. [short · synthesis · DOK 4] Connect this passage from Chapter XLVII, paragraph 16 to the story's treatment of women's limited choices: “That she could be in any danger from the deception never entered my head.” Use one other moment from the story as well.

Sample answer: This passage (Chapter XLVII, paragraph 16) develops women's limited choices: the Bennet household's lack of discipline is exposed for all to see. Its words “deception” and “entered” carry that idea into this moment. The same concern returns in “When they all removed to Brighton, therefore, you had no reason, I suppose, to believe them fond of each other.” (Chapter XLVII, paragraph 17), so the two passages read as a pattern, not a single moment. Together they show the story treating women's limited choices as central.

29. [mc · recall · DOK 1 · AP: AP-LIT.FIG] In the line “She was of great use and comfort to us all, and lady Lucas has been very kind; she walked here on Wednesday morning to condole with us, and offered her services, or any of her daughters, if they could be of use to us.”, what does “condole” most nearly mean?

    A. to express sympathy

    B. picked out; chose

    C. regard highly; think much of

    D. made to feel ashamed or less proud

    Key: A (to express sympathy)

30. [mc · recall · DOK 1 · AP: AP-LIT.STR] Who wrote to Mrs. Forster?

    A. Wickham

    B. Lydia

    C. Kitty

    D. Jane

    Key: B (Lydia)

31. [fill · recall · DOK 1 · AP: AP-LIT.FIG] Complete the quotation from Chapter XLVII, paragraph 14: “And there are other _____ which I am not at liberty—which it is not worth while to relate; but his lies about the whole Pemberley family are endless.” Word bank: circumstances, relation, believe, expeditiously

    Key: circumstances

32. [short · analysis · DOK 3 · AP: AP-LIT.LAN] Claim: Lydia's own letter shows that she does not understand what she has done. Explain how this evidence supports the claim: “cannot help laughing myself at your surprise tomorrow morning, as soon as I am missed” (Chapter XLVII, paragraph 61).

    Sample answer: She writes that she "cannot help laughing" at Mrs. Forster's "surprise tomorrow morning" and calls anyone who cannot guess the man "a simpleton," treating an act that could ruin her family as a prank. The evidence is “cannot help laughing myself at your surprise tomorrow morning, as soon as I am missed” (Chapter XLVII, paragraph 61) — Lydia treats the elopement as a joke at her friend's expense. This develops family and reputation: the Bennet household's lack of discipline is exposed for all to see.

33. [short · synthesis · DOK 4 · AP: AP-LIT.LAN] Connect this passage from Chapter XLVII, paragraph 19 to the story's treatment of marriage and money: “Fixed there by the keenest of all anguish, self reproach, she could find no interval of ease or forgetfulness.” Use one other moment from the story as well.

    Sample answer: This passage (Chapter XLVII, paragraph 19) develops marriage and money: the Bennet household's lack of discipline is exposed for all to see. Its words “forgetfulness” and “interval” carry that idea into this moment. The same concern returns in “It was a comfort to Elizabeth to consider that Jane could not have been wearied by long expectations.” (Chapter XLVII, paragraph 20), so the two passages read as a pattern, not a single moment. Together they show the story treating marriage and money as central.

34. [short · analysis · DOK 3 · AP: AP-LIT.FIG] Analyze the word choice in “cannot help laughing myself at your surprise tomorrow morning, as soon as I am missed” (Chapter XLVII, paragraph 61). Pick two words and explain what they suggest.

    Sample answer: Lydia treats the elopement as a joke at her friend's expense. The evidence is “cannot help laughing myself at your surprise tomorrow morning, as soon as I am missed” (Chapter XLVII, paragraph 61). This develops family and reputation: the Bennet household's lack of discipline is exposed for all to see. The words “surprise” and “tomorrow” carry that meaning: they are the charged choices in the line, and changing either would soften the effect.

35. [short · synthesis · DOK 4 · AP: AP-LIT.FIG] Close reading: how do the diction and syntax of “I am going to Gretna Green, and if you cannot guess with who, I shall think you a simpleton” (Chapter XLVII, paragraph 61) shape its meaning? Consider a second, competing reading.

    Sample answer: Lydia's note: thoughtless and triumphant; note the grammar ("with who") and the tone. The evidence is “I am going to Gretna Green, and if you cannot guess with who, I shall think you a simpleton” (Chapter XLVII, paragraph 61). This develops family and reputation: the Bennet household's lack of discipline is exposed for all to see. The words “simpleton” and “cannot” carry that meaning: they are the charged choices in the line, and changing either would soften the effect. She writes that she "cannot help laughing" at Mrs. Forster's "surprise tomorrow morning" and calls anyone who cannot guess the man "a simpleton," treating an act that could ruin her family as a prank.

36. [mc · inference · DOK 2 · AP: AP-LIT.LAN] What does this passage most clearly show? “I have been thinking it over again, Elizabeth” (Chapter XLVII, paragraph 1)

    A. The narrator's verdict on the Bennet marriage.

    B. The narrator's blunt judgment of Mrs. Bennet, in three balanced phrases.

    C. Mr. Gardiner's reasoning that Wickham would not risk his career; Elizabeth knows better.

    D. Her vanity in the title.

    Key: C (Mr. Gardiner's reasoning that Wickham would not risk his career; Elizabeth knows better.)

37. [short · inference · DOK 2 · AP: AP-LIT.CHR] What can you infer from this line? “I am going to Gretna Green, and if you cannot guess with who, I shall think you a simpleton” (Chapter XLVII, paragraph 61) Answer in two or three sentences with one detail.

    Sample answer: Lydia's note: thoughtless and triumphant; note the grammar ("with who") and the tone. The evidence is “I am going to Gretna Green, and if you cannot guess with who, I shall think you a simpleton” (Chapter XLVII, paragraph 61).

38. [short · synthesis · DOK 4 · AP: AP-LIT.LAN] Connect this passage from Chapter XLVII, paragraph 50 to the story's treatment of marriage and money: “I felt a little uneasy—a little fearful of my sister’s happiness with him in marriage, because I knew that his conduct had not been always quite right.” Use one other moment from the story as well.

    Sample answer: This passage (Chapter XLVII, paragraph 50) develops marriage and money: the Bennet household's lack of discipline is exposed for all to see. Its words “happiness” and “marriage” carry that idea into this moment. The same concern returns in “Kitty then owned, with a very natural triumph on knowing more than the rest of us, that in Lydia’s last letter, she had…” (Chapter XLVII, paragraph 50), so the two passages read as a pattern, not a single moment. Together they show the story treating marriage and money as central.

39. [mc · recall · DOK 1 · Dual Credit (Indiana College Core): ICC-WC-1.5] In the line “I always thought they were very unfit to have the charge of her; but I was overruled, as I always am.”, what does “overruled” most nearly mean?

    A. playful behavior intended to arouse sexual interest

    B. outvoted; overridden

    C. riders who guide the horses pulling a carriage

    D. to express sympathy

    Key: B (outvoted; overridden)

40. [mc · analysis · DOK 3 · Dual Credit (Indiana College Core): ICC-WC-1.5] Which literary element does this describe in “Chapter XLVII”? Lydia's own note to Mrs. Forster, careless and giggling, is the clearest picture of her character in the novel.

    A. Conflict

B. Epistolary

C. Foreshadowing

D. Structure

Key: B (Epistolary)

41. [mc · inference · DOK 2 · Program outcome: LeL-C2-LIT-1] What does this passage most clearly show? “cannot help laughing myself at your surprise tomorrow morning, as soon as I am missed” (Chapter XLVII, paragraph 61)

    A. Darcy reverses his "tolerable" of Chapter III.

    B. Elizabeth's challenge: playful and defiant, the voice Darcy finds irresistible.

    C. Opening reversal: he has done what he pretended to refuse.

    D. Lydia treats the elopement as a joke at her friend's expense.

    Key: D (Lydia treats the elopement as a joke at her friend's expense.)

42. [short · synthesis · DOK 4 · Program outcome: LeL-C2-LIT-1] Close reading: how do the diction and syntax of “I have been thinking it over again, Elizabeth” (Chapter XLVII, paragraph 1) shape its meaning? Consider a second, competing reading.

    Sample answer: Mr. Gardiner's reasoning that Wickham would not risk his career; Elizabeth knows better. The evidence is “I have been thinking it over again, Elizabeth” (Chapter XLVII, paragraph 1). This develops family and reputation: the Bennet household's lack of discipline is exposed for all to see. The words “thinking” and “again” carry that meaning: they are the charged choices in the line, and changing either would soften the effect. She writes that she "cannot help laughing" at Mrs. Forster's "surprise tomorrow morning" and calls anyone who cannot guess the man "a simpleton," treating an act that could ruin her family as a prank.

43. [short · synthesis · DOK 4 · Program outcome: LeL-C3-LIT-1] Evaluate this claim about the chapter: “Lydia's own letter shows that she does not understand what she has done.” Is it fully persuasive? Argue with evidence, including a passage that complicates it.

    Sample answer: The claim is persuasive in part. “cannot help laughing myself at your surprise tomorrow morning, as soon as I am missed” (Chapter XLVII, paragraph 61) supports it: She writes that she "cannot help laughing" at Mrs. Forster's "surprise tomorrow morning" and calls anyone who cannot guess the man "a simpleton," treating an act that could ruin her family as a prank. But “I am going to Gretna Green, and if you cannot guess with who, I shall think you a simpleton” (Chapter XLVII, paragraph 61) complicates it: Lydia's note: thoughtless and triumphant; note the grammar ("with who") and the tone, and its “cannot” marks a limit or reversal the claim passes over. The claim is therefore a strong reading, not a complete one, and a careful answer says where it stops applying.

Rigor version	Items (in order)	Mix
Scaffolded support	1, 2, 3, 4, 5, 6, 7, 8, 9, 10, 11, 12, 13, 14, 15, 16	recall 9, inference 4, analysis 2, synthesis 1
HS Freshman	4, 6, 3, 17, 18, 19, 20, 9, 21, 7, 13, 11, 22, 15, 14, 16	recall 10, inference 2, analysis 3, synthesis 1
HS Sophomore	23, 17, 24, 19, 4, 8, 9, 3, 13, 11, 10, 25, 22, 26, 27, 28	recall 8, inference 3, analysis 3, synthesis 2
HS Junior	17, 20, 29, 30, 4, 2, 3, 31, 13, 11, 22, 32, 26, 14, 33, 27	recall 8, inference 2, analysis 4, synthesis 2
HS Senior	6, 2, 5, 17, 20, 11, 12, 10, 13, 26, 25, 14, 34, 27, 28, 35	recall 5, inference 4, analysis 4, synthesis 3

AP	24, 29, 23, 21, 2, 36, 37, 14, 25, 34, 26, 15, 38, 28, 33, 27	recall 5, inference 2, analysis 5, synthesis 4
College Freshman	21, 30, 39, 18, 13, 11, 36, 26, 14, 15, 25, 40, 38, 28, 16, 27	recall 4, inference 3, analysis 5, synthesis 4
College Sophomore	29, 30, 21, 18, 37, 41, 14, 40, 26, 25, 15, 42, 16, 38, 33, 27	recall 4, inference 2, analysis 5, synthesis 5
College Junior	2, 4, 21, 18, 1, 12, 26, 32, 15, 14, 42, 33, 27, 43, 38, 28	recall 5, inference 1, analysis 4, synthesis 6
College Senior	8, 21, 18, 2, 1, 12, 37, 26, 15, 14, 38, 33, 28, 27, 43, 16	recall 5, inference 2, analysis 3, synthesis 6
Graduate / PhD	9, 21, 2, 1, 23, 12, 32, 25, 26, 38, 28, 27, 16, 43, 33, 35	recall 5, inference 1, analysis 3, synthesis 7

Writing prompts (eleven rigor levels)

Scaffolded support (250 words; AP: see unit standards): Supported track (work from the passage your teacher selects). In “Chapter XLVII,” how does Austen show family in crisis? Write a paragraph that states your claim, quotes two details from the passage, and explains how each detail supports your idea. Use the characterization you noticed as one piece of evidence.

HS Freshman (350 words; AP: see unit standards): In Chapter XLVII, how does Austen develop the idea of family in crisis? State a clear claim, support it with two or three quotations, and explain how the characterization in the chapter helps build that idea.

HS Sophomore (450 words; AP: see unit standards): Analyze how Chapter XLVII develops the idea of family in crisis. Make a precise claim, support it with at least three pieces of textual evidence, and explain how the author's use of characterization and theme shapes that idea. Address one possible counterclaim.

HS Junior (550 words; AP: see unit standards): Analyze how the structure of Chapter XLVII (where it begins, turns and ends) and its characterization shape the reader's understanding of family in crisis. Identify one place where the text leaves matters uncertain and explain how that uncertainty adds to its meaning.

HS Senior (600 words; AP: see unit standards): Two readers disagree about what Chapter XLVII suggests about family in crisis. Lay out two plausible interpretations, weigh the evidence for each (including the chapter's characterization and theme), and argue for the stronger one in a sustained, well-organized essay.

AP (650 words; AP: AP-LIT.CHR, AP-LIT.LAN): Write a literary argument in which you analyze how Jane Austen uses characterization in Chapter XLVII to complicate the reader's understanding of family in crisis. Develop a defensible thesis, select evidence purposefully, and explain how specific choices of diction and syntax create meaning.

College Freshman (1000 words; AP: see unit standards): Situate Chapter XLVII within its historical and literary context and argue how the chapter's treatment of family in crisis responds to that context. Engage with at least one secondary perspective (a critic, historian or the author's own statements), integrate quotations smoothly, and cite in MLA style.

College Sophomore (1250 words; AP: see unit standards): Read Chapter XLVII alongside the conventions of its genre and period. Argue how the chapter's handling of family in crisis follows or bends those conventions, using the characterization as evidence, and test your reading against one published critic. Document two secondary sources in MLA.

College Junior (1500 words; AP: see unit standards): Apply a named critical approach (for example formalist, historicist, feminist, psychoanalytic or ecocritical) to Chapter XLVII and its treatment of family in crisis. State your method, show what it reveals in the chapter's characterization and theme, and identify where the text resists it.

College Senior (2000 words; AP: see unit standards): Develop a research argument that reads Chapter XLVII as evidence for a larger claim about family in crisis in Pride and Prejudice. Connect close reading of the chapter to the whole novel, engage at least four scholarly sources, and state precisely where your reading departs from theirs (Chicago style).

Graduate / PhD (2500 words; AP: see unit standards): Develop an original argument that reads Chapter XLVII as a hinge in the novel's larger treatment of family in crisis. Position your reading within a named critical conversation (for example formalist, historicist, psychoanalytic, feminist or postcolonial approaches), account for the textual history where relevant, and articulate the stakes of your intervention for scholarship on Pride and Prejudice.

SAT-style questions

1. "He meant, I believe," replied Jane, "to go to Epsom, the place where they last changed horses, see the postilions, and try if anything could be made out from them.

   As used in the text, what does the word "postilions" most nearly mean?

   A. having the requisite qualities or resources to meet a task

   B. very upsetting

   C. riders who guide the horses pulling a carriage

   D. use to one's advantage

2. "I have been thinking it over again, Elizabeth," said her uncle, as they drove from the town; "and really, upon serious consideration, I am much more inclined than I was to judge as your eldest sister does of the matter. It appears to me so very unlikely that any young man should form such a design against a girl who is by no means unprotected or friendless, and who was actually staying in his colonel's family, that I am strongly inclined to hope the best. Could he expect that her friends would not step forward? Could he expect to be noticed again by the regiment, after such an affront to Colonel Forster? His temptation is not adequate to the risk."

   Which choice best states a central concern of "Chapter XLVII"?

   A. Reflections on love

   B. Letters of judgment

   C. Scandal

   D. Family in crisis

SAT key: 1. C (riders who guide the horses pulling a carriage); 2. D (Family in crisis)

Lesson 49: Chapter XLVIII

Focus: letters of judgment

Objective: Students will analyze how irony develops in “Chapter XLVIII” by writing a claim-evidence-reasoning paragraph that cites at least 2 quotations from the section, and will score at least 80% on the section quiz.

Standards: AP: see the unit standards

Content note (exploitation of a minor, cruel moralizing, seduction (reported)): Collins writes that Lydia's death would have been a blessing. Treat it as satire of cruel moralizing; acknowledge that it is harsh to read. Wickham's 'intrigues, all honoured with the title of seduction' in Meryton tradesmen's families: name the exploitation of young women plainly.
Student preview: A character writes something cruel about Lydia. Austen is mocking him. This chapter mentions a man seducing young women.
Suggested language: “What is Austen exposing in Collins's letter?”

Teacher only · spoilers

Mr. Collins writes to “condole with you” saying Lydia's death would have been better. Mr. Bennet returns, admitting his fault but joking bitterly; Wickham's debts are exposed.

Background: Moralizing letters were a social genre; Collins's is hypocritical.

Significance: Collins's cruel 'comfort' satirizes self-righteous religion.

Lesson plan and lecture script (90 minutes)

0–8 min · Bell-ringer · You do (8 min)
Students write to the bell-ringer, then pair-share.
Why is Collins's letter so offensive? Write for five minutes. Starters: I think... because... / This connects to family and reputation because.... Content note before we start: A character writes something cruel about Lydia. Austen is mocking him. This chapter mentions a man seducing young women.
Prompt: Why is Collins's letter so offensive?
Sentence starters: I think… because… · This connects to family and reputation because…
Strong response: A strong response takes a position and anticipates this: Collins says Lydia's death "would have been a blessing" by comparison: the society's harshest view, made grotesque.

8–18 min · Vocabulary with etymology notes · I do (10 min)
Five key words in context, with verified word histories.
Today's words: dilatory — slow; tending to delay; enormity — great wickedness; finances — assets in the form of money; apprehending — fearing; anxiously expecting; distrusted — regard as untrustworthy; regard with suspicion; have no faith or confidence in. "dilatory": Origin: Old French dilatoire; earlier Latin dīlātōrius. "enormity": Origin: Middle English ēnorme ("monstrous or unnatural act"); earlier Old French énormité ("enormity"). "distrusted": Origin of "distrust": an English formation from dis- + trust.
Words: dilatory: slow; tending to delay · enormity: great wickedness · finances: assets in the form of money · apprehending: fearing; anxiously expecting · distrusted: regard as untrustworthy; regard with suspicion; have no faith or confidence in

18–28 min · Background and context · I do (10 min)
Mini-lecture (read or adapt the script).
Moralizing letters were a social genre; Collins's is hypocritical. Collins's cruel 'comfort' satirizes self-righteous religion. Epistolary: Letters arrive from Mr. Gardiner and from Mr. Collins, whose "consolation" is a cruelty. Characterization: Mr. Bennet returns, admits blame in a rare serious moment, then recovers his irony at Kitty's expense. Watch for silence and reserve: What characters leave unsaid (Darcy's reserve, Jane's composure, Elizabeth's secrets) drives misunderstanding. In this chapter: "Then, after a short silence, he continued, "Lizzy, I bear you no ill-will for being justified" (Chapter XLVIII, paragraph 28).

28–40 min · I do: modeled close reading · I do (12 min)
Model the close reading of the anchor quotation using the written think-aloud below.
First, meaning. I read "The death of your daughter would have been a blessing in comparison of this" slowly and put it in my own words: Mr. Collins writes to Mr. Bennet that Lydia's death would have been a blessing compared with her disgrace. Next, craft. I notice the cruelty dressed up in the language of sympathy and religion. The strongest word is "blessing": a holy word used for a daughter's death shocks the reader. Then, effect. What does Mr. Collins's letter reveal about his values? My answer: Mr. Collins's letter reveals that he values reputation and his own connections over compassion; Austen exposes his false piety and the harsh morality of their society.

> The death of your daughter would have been a blessing in comparison of this (Chapter XLVIII, paragraph 12)

Think-aloud: First, meaning. I read "The death of your daughter would have been a blessing in comparison of this" slowly and put it in my own words: Mr. Collins writes to Mr. Bennet that Lydia's death would have been a blessing compared with her disgrace. Next, craft. I notice the cruelty dressed up in the language of sympathy and religion. The strongest word is "blessing": a holy word used for a daughter's death shocks the reader. Then, effect. What does Mr. Collins's letter reveal about his values? My answer: Mr. Collins's letter reveals that he values reputation and his own connections over compassion; Austen exposes his false piety and the harsh morality of their society.

40–55 min · We do: guided annotation · We do (15 min)
Guided analysis of a second quotation; expected answers given.
Ask: What words in this line stand out, and what do they suggest? Expected: "Once in my life" admits a lifelong habit of avoiding responsibility; "pass away soon enough" shows self-knowledge without change. Theme: family and reputation. Ask: How does this line connect to family and reputation? Expected: Collins says Lydia's death "would have been a blessing" by comparison: the society's harshest view, made grotesque. (He predicts his remorse will fade, and it does.)

> It will pass away soon enough (Chapter XLVIII, paragraph 23)

Ask: What words in this line stand out, and what do they suggest?
Expected answer: "Once in my life" admits a lifelong habit of avoiding responsibility; "pass away soon enough" shows self-knowledge without change. Theme: family and reputation.
Ask: How does this line connect to family and reputation?
Expected answer: Collins says Lydia's death "would have been a blessing" by comparison: the society's harshest view, made grotesque. (He predicts his remorse will fade, and it does.)

55–70 min · You do: independent annotation · You do (15 min)
Independent annotation and a claim-evidence-reasoning paragraph (exemplar given).
Annotate the chapter for epistolary, characterization (three marks with a margin note each), then write one claim-evidence-reasoning paragraph: what does this chapter suggest about letters of judgment? Then start your writing prompt at your assigned level (HS Sophomore: Analyze how Chapter XLVIII develops the idea of letters of judgment. Make a precise claim, support it with at least three pieces of textual evidence, and explain how the author's use of irony and characterization shapes that idea. Address one possible counterclaim.) Exemplar: The crisis forces Mr. Bennet to admit his failure, though he expects the feeling not to last. When the text says “let me once in my life feel how much I have been to blame” (Chapter XLVIII, paragraph 23), it shows this directly. He says "let me once in my life feel how much I have been to blame" and adds "it will pass away soon enough," honest about both his guilt and his character.
Task: Annotate the chapter for epistolary, characterization (three marks with a margin note each), then write one claim-evidence-reasoning paragraph: what does this chapter suggest about letters of judgment? Then start your writing prompt at your assigned level (HS Sophomore: Analyze how Chapter XLVIII develops the idea of letters of judgment. Make a precise claim, support it with at least three pieces of textual evidence, and explain how the author's use of irony and characterization shapes that idea. Address one possible counterclaim.)
Exemplar: The crisis forces Mr. Bennet to admit his failure, though he expects the feeling not to last. When the text says “let me once in my life feel how much I have been to blame” (Chapter XLVIII, paragraph 23), it shows this directly. He says "let me once in my life feel how much I have been to blame" and adds "it will pass away soon enough," honest about both his guilt and his character.

70–80 min · Discussion · We do (10 min)
Structured discussion from the 30 tiered questions, with facilitation notes.
Anchor question: Why is Collins's letter so offensive? Compare Collins's letter with Mr. Bennet's admission: which shows more real concern for Lydia?
Anchor question: Why is Collins's letter so offensive?
Facilitation: Compare Collins's letter with Mr. Bennet's admission: which shows more real concern for Lydia?

80–87 min · Exit ticket / chapter quiz · You do (7 min)
Chapter quiz in the app and an exit ticket (answer given).
Chapter quiz in the app, then: In one sentence, what does this chapter suggest about letters of judgment? Support it with one short quotation. Model answer: The crisis forces Mr. Bennet to admit his failure, though he expects the feeling not to last. ("let me once in my life feel how much I have been to blame", Chapter XLVIII, paragraph 23). Accept any defensible claim backed by a quotation from the chapter; the answer key for the quiz is in the Quiz section.
Exit ticket: In one sentence, what does this chapter suggest about letters of judgment? Support it with one short quotation.
Answer: Model answer: The crisis forces Mr. Bennet to admit his failure, though he expects the feeling not to last. ("let me once in my life feel how much I have been to blame", Chapter XLVIII, paragraph 23). Accept any defensible claim backed by a quotation from the chapter; the answer key for the quiz is in the Quiz section.

87–90 min · Closure · I do (3 min)
Summarize the lesson and preview the next reading.
Today we saw how epistolary shapes letters of judgment. Key takeaway: Collins says Lydia's death "would have been a blessing" by comparison: the society's harshest view, made grotesque.

Total: 90 minutes.

Teacher analysis (spoilers)

Literary elements

- Epistolary: Letters arrive from Mr. Gardiner and from Mr. Collins, whose "consolation" is a cruelty.
- Characterization: Mr. Bennet returns, admits blame in a rare serious moment, then recovers his irony at Kitty's expense.

Themes and how they develop

- family and reputation: Collins says Lydia's death "would have been a blessing" by comparison: the society's harshest view, made grotesque.

Symbols and motifs

- silence and reserve: What characters leave unsaid (Darcy's reserve, Jane's composure, Elizabeth's secrets) drives misunderstanding. In this chapter: “Then, after a short silence, he continued, “Lizzy, I bear you no ill-will for being justified” (Chapter XLVIII, paragraph 28).
- letters: Letters carry news, reveal character and change minds; Darcy's letter is the turning point of the novel. In this chapter: “The whole party were in hopes of a letter from Mr. Bennet the next morning, but the post came in” (Chapter XLVIII, paragraph 1).

Key quotations (checked against the reading text)

- “The death of your daughter would have been a blessing in comparison of this” (Chapter XLVIII, paragraph 12) Collins's letter: hypocrisy dressed as piety.
- “let me once in my life feel how much I have been to blame” (Chapter XLVIII, paragraph 23) Mr. Bennet's admission, the most serious line he speaks.
- “It will pass away soon enough” (Chapter XLVIII, paragraph 23) He predicts his remorse will fade, and it does.

Model claim-evidence-reasoning

Claim: The crisis forces Mr. Bennet to admit his failure, though he expects the feeling not to last.
Evidence: “let me once in my life feel how much I have been to blame” (Chapter XLVIII, paragraph 23)
Reasoning: He says "let me once in my life feel how much I have been to blame" and adds "it will pass away soon enough," honest about both his guilt and his character.

Vocabulary with etymology notes

Word	Definition (in this sentence)	In context	Word history
dilatory (adjective)	slow; tending to delay	His family knew him to be on all common occasions, a most negligent and dilatory correspondent, but at such a time, they had hoped for exertion.	“dilatory”: Origin: Old French dilatoire; earlier Latin dīlātōrius. (Liber et Libri origin note, https://en.wiktionary.org/wiki/dilatory#Etymology)
enormity (noun)	great wickedness	Bennet, I am inclined to think that her own disposition must be naturally bad, or she could not be guilty of such an enormity, at so early an age.	“enormity”: Origin: Middle English ēnorme (“monstrous or unnatural act”); earlier Old French énormité (“enormity”). (Liber et Libri origin note, https://en.wiktionary.org/wiki/enormity#Etymology)
finances (noun)	assets in the form of money	And in the wretched state of his own finances, there was a very powerful motive for secrecy, in addition to his fear of discovery by Lydia's relations, for it had just transpired that he had left gaming debts behind him, to a very considerable amount.

apprehending (verb)	fearing; anxiously expecting	They agree with me in apprehending that this false step in one daughter, will be injurious to the fortunes of all the others, for who, as Lady Catherine herself condescendingly says, will connect themselves with such a family.
distrusted (verb)	regard as untrustworthy; regard with suspicion; have no faith or confidence in	Everybody declared that he was the wickedest young man in the world; and everybody began to find out, that they had always distrusted the appearance of his goodness.	"distrusted": Origin of "distrust": an English formation from dis- + trust. (Liber et Libri origin note, https://en.wiktionary.org/wiki/distrust#Etymology)
disinclined (verb)	make unwilling	Bennet seemed wholly disinclined at present to leave London, and promised to write again very soon.
negligent (adjective)	characterized by neglect and undue lack of concern	His family knew him to be on all common occasions, a most negligent and dilatory correspondent, but at such a time, they had hoped for exertion.	"negligent": Origin: Old French negligent; earlier Latin negligēns. (Liber et Libri origin note, https://en.wiktionary.org/wiki/negligent#Etymology)
intrigues (noun)	a crafty and involved plot to achieve your (usually sinister) ends	He was declared to be in debt to every tradesman in the place, and his intrigues, all honoured with the title of seduction, had been extended into every tradesman's family.

Discussion questions

1. Why is Collins's letter so offensive?
2. Where does irony appear in this chapter, and what effect does it have? Point to one passage.
3. How does this chapter connect to the book's larger concern with marriage and money?

Classroom discussion questions (30, tiered)

Wait time after every question (3 s for DOK 1, 5 s for DOK 2, 8 to 10 s for DOK 3 and 4); think-pair-share on DOK 3 and 4; answer each response with a follow-up probe; close with student-generated questions. Focus sets by rigor level: Scaffolded support: 1, 2, 3, 4, 5, 6, 11, 12, 13, 14, 21, 22; HS Freshman: 1, 2, 3, 4, 5, 12, 13, 14, 15, 22, 23, 24; HS Sophomore: 1, 2, 3, 4, 13, 14, 15, 16, 17, 23, 24, 25; HS Junior: 1, 2, 3, 14, 15, 16, 17, 18, 24, 25, 26, 27; HS Senior: 1, 2, 3, 15, 16, 17, 18, 25, 26, 27, 28, 29; AP: 1, 2, 16, 17, 18, 19, 20, 26, 27, 28, 29, 30; College Freshman: 1, 2, 17, 18, 19, 20, 21, 22, 27, 28, 29, 30; College Sophomore: 1, 2, 11, 18, 19, 20, 21, 22, 23, 28, 29, 30; College Junior: 1, 11, 12, 19, 20, 21, 22, 23, 24, 25, 29, 30; College Senior: 1, 11, 12, 13, 20, 21, 22, 23, 24, 25, 26, 30; Graduate / PhD: 1, 11, 12, 13, 21, 22, 23, 24, 25, 26, 27, 28

Literal / recall

1. What does Collins say about Lydia? [DOK 1 · coldCallWithSupport · wait 3 s · AP: unit standards] Look for: Her death would be better
2. What does Mr. Bennet admit? [DOK 1 · turnAndTalk · wait 3 s · AP: unit standards] Look for: It was his fault
3. What is revealed about Wickham? [DOK 1 · coldCallWithSupport · wait 3 s · AP: unit standards] Look for: He has large debts
4. How does Mr. Bennet treat Kitty? [DOK 1 · turnAndTalk · wait 3 s · AP: unit standards] Look for: He jokes harshly about confining her
5. What does Collins's letter satirize? [DOK 1 · coldCallWithSupport · wait 3 s · AP: unit standards] Look for: Hypocritical moralizing
6. Retell the three most important events of "Chapter XLVIII" in order, in one sentence each. [DOK 1 · turnAndTalk · wait 3 s · AP: unit standards] Look for: Mr. Collins writes to "condole with you" saying Lydia's death would have been better. Mr. Bennet returns, admitting his fault but joking bitterly; Wickham's debts are exposed.
7. Which characters appear or are mentioned in "Chapter XLVIII"? Name two and one thing each says or does. [DOK 1 · coldCallWithSupport · wait 3 s · AP: unit standards] Look for: Names and actions taken from the chapter; check against the teacher summary.
8. Where and when does "Chapter XLVIII" take place? Point to the line that tells you. [DOK 1 · turnAndTalk · wait 3 s · AP: unit standards] Look for: A place/time detail quoted from the chapter.
9. Reread: "His family knew him to be on all common occasions, a most negligent and dilatory correspondent, but at such a time, they had hoped for exertion." What does "dilatory" mean here, and what is literally happening in this line? [DOK 1 · turnAndTalk · wait 3 s · AP: unit standards] Look for: dilatory: slow; tending to delay.
10. Reread: "Bennet, I am inclined to think that her own disposition must be naturally bad, or she could not be guilty of such an enormity, at so early an age." What does "enormity" mean here, and what is literally happening in this line? [DOK 1 · turnAndTalk · wait 3 s · AP: unit standards] Look for: enormity: great wickedness.

Inferential / analytical

1. What does "Chapter XLVIII" suggest about letters of judgment? State the inference and the line that supports it. [DOK 2 · thinkPairShare · wait 5 s · AP-LIT.LAN] Look for: Collins's cruel 'comfort' satirizes self-righteous religion.
2. Find one example of irony in this chapter. What does it reveal that a plain statement would not? [DOK 2 · followUp · wait 5 s · AP-LIT.NAR] Look for: Look for gaps between what characters expect or say and what is true.
3. How does the characterization in this chapter shape what we understand about letters of judgment? [DOK 3 · thinkPairShare · wait 8 s · AP-LIT.CHR] Look for: Look for what characters say, do and think, and how others react to them.

   Answer guidance: A defensible line of argument: The crisis forces Mr. Bennet to admit his failure, though he expects the feeling not to last. Useful evidence: "The death of your daughter would have been a blessing in comparison of this" (Chapter XLVIII, paragraph 12): Collins's letter: hypocrisy dressed as piety. On characterization: Mr. Bennet returns, admits blame in a rare serious moment, then recovers his irony at Kitty's expense. Credit any position that is supported by quotation and reasoning; push one-sided answers to address the strongest counterpoint.

4. In the passage that begins “The whole party were in hopes of a letter from Mr.”, why might Austen have chosen these particular words? Pick two and explain their connotations. [DOK 2 · followUp · wait 5 s · AP-LIT.FIG] Look for: Diction analysis of two words in the anchor passage.
5. What causes the main turn in “Chapter XLVIII”, and what effect is it likely to have on what follows? [DOK 2 · followUp · wait 5 s · AP-LIT.STR] Look for: Mr. Collins writes to “condole with you” saying Lydia's death would have been better. Mr. Bennet returns, admitting his fault but joking bitterly; Wickham's debts are exposed.
6. How does “Chapter XLVIII” build on “Chapter XLVII”? Name one link of cause and effect. [DOK 3 · thinkPairShare · wait 8 s · AP-LIT.STR] Look for: A causal or structural link between this and the previous chapter.
   Answer guidance: A defensible line of argument: The crisis forces Mr. Bennet to admit his failure, though he expects the feeling not to last. Useful evidence: “let me once in my life feel how much I have been to blame” (Chapter XLVIII, paragraph 23): Mr. Bennet's admission, the most serious line he speaks. Theme link: Collins says Lydia's death "would have been a blessing" by comparison: the society's harshest view, made grotesque. Credit any position that is supported by quotation and reasoning; push one-sided answers to address the strongest counterpoint.
7. What can we infer about a character's motives from what they say and do here, as opposed to what they claim? [DOK 3 · followUp · wait 8 s · AP-LIT.CHR] Look for: An inference about motive supported by a quoted line.
   Answer guidance: A defensible line of argument: The crisis forces Mr. Bennet to admit his failure, though he expects the feeling not to last. Useful evidence: “It will pass away soon enough” (Chapter XLVIII, paragraph 23): He predicts his remorse will fade, and it does. On characterization: Mr. Bennet returns, admits blame in a rare serious moment, then recovers his irony at Kitty's expense. Credit any position that is supported by quotation and reasoning; push one-sided answers to address the strongest counterpoint.
8. The bell-ringer asked: “Why is Collins's letter so offensive?” Now that we have read closely, how would you revise your first answer, and which line changed your mind? [DOK 2 · thinkPairShare · wait 5 s · AP-LIT.LAN] Look for: A revised answer anchored in the text.
9. Where does tone / mood appear, and how does it connect this chapter to the larger concern with marriage and money? [DOK 3 · followUp · wait 8 s · AP-LIT.FIG] Look for: Look for word choices that reveal the narrator's attitude or the scene's feeling.
   Answer guidance: A defensible line of argument: The crisis forces Mr. Bennet to admit his failure, though he expects the feeling not to last. Useful evidence: “The death of your daughter would have been a blessing in comparison of this” (Chapter XLVIII, paragraph 12): Collins's letter: hypocrisy dressed as piety. Theme link: Collins says Lydia's death "would have been a blessing" by comparison: the society's harshest view, made grotesque. Credit any position that is supported by quotation and reasoning; push one-sided answers to address the strongest counterpoint.
10. Background: Moralizing letters were a social genre; Collins's is hypocritical. How does knowing this change the way you read one moment in the chapter? [DOK 3 · thinkPairShare · wait 8 s · AP-LIT.SET] Look for: A specific moment reread in light of the context.
    Answer guidance: A defensible line of argument: The crisis forces Mr. Bennet to admit his failure, though he expects the feeling not to last. Useful evidence: “let me once in my life feel how much I have been to blame” (Chapter XLVIII, paragraph 23): Mr. Bennet's admission, the most serious line he speaks. Theme link: Collins says Lydia's death "would have been a blessing" by comparison: the society's harshest view, made grotesque. Credit any position that is supported by quotation and reasoning; push one-sided answers to address the strongest counterpoint.

Evaluative / synthesis / creative

1. A critic might argue: “Collins's cruel 'comfort' satirizes self-righteous religion.” How far do you agree? Take a stand and defend it with two lines from the chapter. [DOK 3 · fourCorners · wait 8 s · AP-LIT.LAN] Look for: A defended position with evidence and one counterpoint.
   Answer guidance: A defensible line of argument: The crisis forces Mr. Bennet to admit his failure, though he expects the feeling not to last. Useful evidence: “It will pass away soon enough” (Chapter XLVIII, paragraph 23): He predicts his remorse will fade, and it does. Theme link: Collins says Lydia's death "would have been a blessing" by comparison: the society's harshest view, made grotesque. Credit any position that is supported by quotation and reasoning; push one-sided answers to address the strongest counterpoint.
2. Which character in this chapter acts most wisely, and which least? Judge them by a standard you name. [DOK 3 · thinkPairShare · wait 8 s · AP-LIT.CHR, AP-LIT.LAN] Look for: An evaluation using an explicit criterion and evidence.
   Answer guidance: A defensible line of argument: The crisis forces Mr. Bennet to admit his failure, though he expects the feeling not to last. Useful evidence: “The death of your daughter would have been a blessing in comparison of this” (Chapter XLVIII, paragraph 12): Collins's letter: hypocrisy dressed as piety. On characterization: Mr. Bennet returns, admits blame in a rare serious moment, then recovers his irony at Kitty's expense. Credit any position that is supported by quotation and reasoning; push one-sided answers to address the strongest counterpoint.
3. Rewrite one moment of “Chapter XLVIII” from the point of view of a different character. What does the new angle reveal or hide about letters of judgment? [DOK 4 · thinkPairShare · wait 8 s · AP-LIT.LAN, AP-LIT.NAR] Look for: A creative product with a rationale tied to the text.
   Answer guidance: A defensible line of argument: The crisis forces Mr. Bennet to admit his failure, though he expects the feeling not to last. Useful evidence: “let me once in my life feel how much I have been to blame” (Chapter XLVIII, paragraph 23): Mr. Bennet's admission, the most serious line he speaks. Theme link: Collins says Lydia's death "would have been a blessing" by comparison: the society's harshest view, made grotesque. Credit any position that is supported by quotation and reasoning; push one-sided answers to address the strongest counterpoint.
4. Write three questions of your own about “Chapter XLVIII”: one recall, one “why/how”, and one “should/what if”. Trade with a partner and answer theirs. [DOK 3 · studentGenerated · wait 8 s · AP-LIT.LAN] Look for: Student-generated questions at three levels.
   Answer guidance: A defensible line of argument: The crisis forces Mr. Bennet to admit his failure, though he expects the feeling not to last. Useful evidence: “It will pass away soon enough” (Chapter XLVIII, paragraph 23): He predicts his remorse will fade, and it does. Theme link: Collins says Lydia's death "would have been a blessing" by comparison: the society's harshest view, made grotesque. Credit any position that is supported by quotation and reasoning; push one-sided answers to address the strongest counterpoint.
5. Connect this chapter to class and social mobility: is the link strong or weak so far? What would Austen need to show next to strengthen it? [DOK 4 · socraticCircle · wait 8 s · AP-LIT.LAN] Look for: A judgment of thematic development across the work.
   Answer guidance: A defensible line of argument: The crisis forces Mr. Bennet to admit his failure, though he expects the feeling not to last. Useful evidence: “The death of your daughter would have been a blessing in comparison of this” (Chapter XLVIII, paragraph 12): Collins's letter: hypocrisy dressed as piety. Theme link: Collins says Lydia's death "would have been a blessing" by comparison: the society's harshest view, made grotesque. Credit any position that is supported by quotation and reasoning; push one-sided answers to address the strongest counterpoint.

6. Is the irony in this chapter effective, or does it feel heavy-handed? Evaluate it as a reader would in a review. [DOK 3 · fourCorners · wait 8 s · AP-LIT.LAN, AP-LIT.NAR] Look for: An evaluative judgment with criteria and evidence.
   Answer guidance: A defensible line of argument: The crisis forces Mr. Bennet to admit his failure, though he expects the feeling not to last. Useful evidence: “let me once in my life feel how much I have been to blame” (Chapter XLVIII, paragraph 23): Mr. Bennet's admission, the most serious line he speaks. Theme link: Collins says Lydia's death "would have been a blessing" by comparison: the society's harshest view, made grotesque. Credit any position that is supported by quotation and reasoning; push one-sided answers to address the strongest counterpoint.
7. Compare how “Chapter XLVIII” treats letters of judgment with how another text, film or event you know treats a similar idea. What does Pride and Prejudice see that the other misses? [DOK 4 · socraticCircle · wait 8 s · AP-LIT.LAN] Look for: A cross-text synthesis.
   Answer guidance: A defensible line of argument: The crisis forces Mr. Bennet to admit his failure, though he expects the feeling not to last. Useful evidence: “It will pass away soon enough” (Chapter XLVIII, paragraph 23): He predicts his remorse will fade, and it does. Theme link: Collins says Lydia's death "would have been a blessing" by comparison: the society's harshest view, made grotesque. Credit any position that is supported by quotation and reasoning; push one-sided answers to address the strongest counterpoint.
8. Predict what “Chapter XLIX” will bring, using two clues from this chapter. After reading, evaluate your prediction. [DOK 3 · thinkPairShare · wait 8 s · AP-LIT.LAN, AP-LIT.STR] Look for: A prediction or judgment justified with textual clues.
   Answer guidance: A defensible line of argument: The crisis forces Mr. Bennet to admit his failure, though he expects the feeling not to last. Useful evidence: “The death of your daughter would have been a blessing in comparison of this” (Chapter XLVIII, paragraph 12): Collins's letter: hypocrisy dressed as piety. Theme link: Collins says Lydia's death "would have been a blessing" by comparison: the society's harshest view, made grotesque. Credit any position that is supported by quotation and reasoning; push one-sided answers to address the strongest counterpoint.
9. Design a one-paragraph modern adaptation of this chapter (setting, characters, conflict). What must stay the same for it to still be about letters of judgment? [DOK 4 · thinkPairShare · wait 8 s · AP-LIT.LAN] Look for: A creative transfer that keeps the core idea.
   Answer guidance: A defensible line of argument: The crisis forces Mr. Bennet to admit his failure, though he expects the feeling not to last. Useful evidence: “let me once in my life feel how much I have been to blame” (Chapter XLVIII, paragraph 23): Mr. Bennet's admission, the most serious line he speaks. Theme link: Collins says Lydia's death "would have been a blessing" by comparison: the society's harshest view, made grotesque. Credit any position that is supported by quotation and reasoning; push one-sided answers to address the strongest counterpoint.
10. What question would you most like to ask Jane Austen about this chapter, and what answer do you think the text itself gives? [DOK 4 · studentGenerated · wait 8 s · AP-LIT.LAN] Look for: A student-generated question answered from evidence.
    Answer guidance: A defensible line of argument: The crisis forces Mr. Bennet to admit his failure, though he expects the feeling not to last. Useful evidence: “It will pass away soon enough” (Chapter XLVIII, paragraph 23): He predicts his remorse will fade, and it does. Theme link: Collins says Lydia's death "would have been a blessing" by comparison: the society's harshest view, made grotesque. Credit any position that is supported by quotation and reasoning; push one-sided answers to address the strongest counterpoint.

Annotation focus

- Irony: look for gaps between what characters expect or say and what is true (anchor passage in the We do segment)
- Also notice Characterization: what characters say, do and think, and how others react to them
- Also notice Tone / mood: word choices that reveal the narrator's attitude or the scene's feeling

Chapter quiz: item bank (all eleven rigor versions)

1. [mc · recall · DOK 1] Which word completes this sentence from Chapter XLVIII, paragraph 14? “His former _____ had been numerous; but since he had been in the militia, it did not appear that he was on terms of particular friendship with any of them.”

   A. communicated

   B. acquaintance

   C. relationship

   D. received

   Key: B (acquaintance)

2. [mc · recall · DOK 1] What does Collins say about Lydia?

   A. She should be forgiven

   B. Her death would be better

   C. She is brave

   D. He will marry her

   Key: B (Her death would be better)

3. [mc · recall · DOK 1] Which word completes this sentence from Chapter XLVIII, paragraph 9? “Every day at Longbourn was now a day of anxiety; but the most anxious part of each was when the post was _____.”

   A. present

   B. bringing

   C. expected

   D. relationship

   Key: C (expected)

4. [mc · recall · DOK 1] In the line “And in the wretched state of his own finances, there was a very powerful motive for secrecy, in addition to his fear of discovery by Lydia’s relations, for it had just transpired that he had left gaming debts behind…”, what does “finances” most nearly mean?

   A. an open recess in a wall at the base of a chimney where a fire can be built

   B. utter aloud; often with surprise, horror, or joy

   C. assets in the form of money

   D. characterized by undue haste and lack of thought or deliberation

   Key: C (assets in the form of money)

5. [fill · recall · DOK 1] Complete the quotation from Chapter XLVIII, paragraph 1: “The whole party were in hopes of a letter from Mr. Bennet the next morning, but the post came in without _____ a single line from him.” Word bank: bringing, acquaintance, expected, received

   Key: bringing

6. [mc · recall · DOK 1] In the line “Bennet, I am inclined to think that her own disposition must be naturally bad, or she could not be guilty of such an enormity, at so early an age.”, what does “enormity” most nearly mean?

   A. hinder or prevent (the efforts, plans, or desires) of

   B. great wickedness

   C. someone who offers opposition

   D. an unrestrained expression of emotion

   Key: B (great wickedness)

7. [fill · recall · DOK 1] Complete the quotation from Chapter XLVIII, paragraph 23: “It will pass away soon _____”

   Key: enough

8. [fill · recall · DOK 1] Fill in the blank with the vocabulary word that fits: “He was declared to be in debt to every tradesman in the place, and his _____, all honoured with the title of seduction, had been extended into every tradesman’s family.” Word bank: finances, enormity, dilatory, intrigues

   Key: intrigues

9. [mc · recall · DOK 1] Which word completes this sentence from Chapter XLVIII, paragraph 4? “Elizabeth, though she did not credit above half of what was said, believed enough to make her former _____ of her sister’s ruin still more certain”

   A. received

   B. postscript

   C. assurance

   D. communicated

   Key: C (assurance)

10. [fill · recall · DOK 1] Fill in the blank with the vocabulary word that fits: “His family knew him to be on all common occasions, a most _____ and dilatory correspondent, but at such a time, they had hoped for exertion.” Word bank: dilatory, enormity, finances, negligent

    Key: negligent

11. [fill · recall · DOK 1] Fill in the blank with the vocabulary word that fits: “Everybody declared that he was the wickedest young man in the world; and everybody began to find out, that they had always _____ the appearance of his goodness.” Word bank: finances, dilatory, enormity, distrusted

    Key: distrusted

12. [short · inference · DOK 2] What does this passage from Chapter XLVIII, paragraph 14 reveal about the character or situation? “There was no one, therefore, who could be pointed out, as likely to give any news of him.” Answer in two or three sentences with one detail.

    Sample answer: The passage (Chapter XLVIII, paragraph 14) shows the situation turning on first impressions and prejudice: Collins says Lydia's death "would have been a blessing" by comparison: the society's harshest view, made grotesque. The words “therefore” and “pointed” are the proof, because they show how the moment looks to the people in it. They suggest more than the narrator states outright.

13. [short · inference · DOK 2] What does this passage from Chapter XLVIII, paragraph 1 reveal about the character or situation? “They were forced to conclude that he had no pleasing intelligence to send, but even of that they would have been glad to be certain.” Answer in two or three sentences with one detail.
    Sample answer: The passage (Chapter XLVIII, paragraph 1) shows the situation turning on first impressions and prejudice: Collins says Lydia's death "would have been a blessing" by comparison: the society's harshest view, made grotesque. The words “intelligence” and “pleasing” are the proof, because they show how the moment looks to the people in it. They suggest more than the narrator states outright.

14. [short · analysis · DOK 3] Claim: The crisis forces Mr. Bennet to admit his failure, though he expects the feeling not to last. Explain how this evidence supports the claim: “let me once in my life feel how much I have been to blame” (Chapter XLVIII, paragraph 23).
    Sample answer: He says "let me once in my life feel how much I have been to blame" and adds "it will pass away soon enough," honest about both his guilt and his character. The evidence is “let me once in my life feel how much I have been to blame” (Chapter XLVIII, paragraph 23) — Mr. Bennet's admission, the most serious line he speaks. This develops family and reputation: Collins says Lydia's death "would have been a blessing" by comparison: the society's harshest view, made grotesque.

15. [short · analysis · DOK 3] Analyze how the word choice in this passage from Chapter XLVIII, paragraph 18 shapes its tone: “His name had never been voluntarily mentioned before them by her niece; and the kind of half-expectation which Mrs. Gardiner had formed, of their being followed by a letter from him, had ended in nothing.” Pick two words and explain their effect.
    Sample answer: The words “voluntarily” and “expectation” (Chapter XLVIII, paragraph 18) make the tone heavy and deliberate rather than neutral. That weight points the reader to pride and self-knowledge: Collins says Lydia's death "would have been a blessing" by comparison: the society's harshest view, made grotesque. The author chooses them so the moment feels significant instead of passing.

16. [short · synthesis · DOK 4] Connect this passage from Chapter XLVIII, paragraph 27 to the story's treatment of marriage and money: “She is happy, then,’ said her father, drily; ‘and her residence there will probably be of some duration.” Use one other moment from the story as well.
    Sample answer: This passage (Chapter XLVIII, paragraph 27) develops marriage and money: Collins says Lydia's death "would have been a blessing" by comparison: the society's harshest view, made grotesque. Its words “residence” and “duration” carry that idea into this moment. The same concern returns in “They were interrupted by Miss Bennet, who came to fetch her mother’s tea.” (Chapter XLVIII, paragraph 29), so the two passages read as a pattern, not a single moment. Together they show the story treating marriage and money as central.

17. [mc · recall · DOK 1] What is revealed about Wickham?

    A. He has large debts
    B. He is rich
    C. He is married
    D. He is a hero

    Key: A (He has large debts)

18. [mc · recall · DOK 1] What does Collins's letter satirize?

    A. Science
    B. Law
    C. Hypocritical moralizing
    D. True kindness

Key: C (Hypocritical moralizing)

19. [mc · recall · DOK 1] How does Mr. Bennet treat Kitty?

    A. He praises her

    B. He ignores her

    C. He sends her away

    D. He jokes harshly about confining her

    Key: D (He jokes harshly about confining her)

20. [mc · inference · DOK 2] Which choice best states a central concern of “Chapter XLVIII”?

    A. Family dynamics and anticipation

    B. Sisters and judgment

    C. Disappointment and philosophy

    D. Letters of judgment

    Key: D (Letters of judgment)

21. [short · inference · DOK 2] What can you infer from this line? “let me once in my life feel how much I have been to blame” (Chapter XLVIII, paragraph 23) Answer in two or three sentences with one detail.

    Sample answer: Mr. Bennet's admission, the most serious line he speaks. The evidence is “let me once in my life feel how much I have been to blame” (Chapter XLVIII, paragraph 23).

22. [short · analysis · DOK 3] Analyze how the word choice in this passage from Chapter XLVIII, paragraph 5 shapes its tone: “Mr. Gardiner left Longbourn on Sunday; on Tuesday, his wife received a letter from him; it told them, that on his arrival, he had immediately found out his brother, and persuaded him to come to Gracechurch street.” Pick two words and explain their effect.

    Sample answer: The words “immediately” and “persuaded” (Chapter XLVIII, paragraph 5) make the tone heavy and deliberate rather than neutral. That weight points the reader to class and social mobility: Collins says Lydia's death "would have been a blessing" by comparison: the society's harshest view, made grotesque. The author chooses them so the moment feels significant instead of passing.

23. [short · analysis · DOK 3] Analyze how the word choice in this passage from Chapter XLVIII, paragraph 6 shapes its tone: “Colonel Forster will, I dare say, do everything in his power to satisfy us on this head.” Pick two words and explain their effect.

    Sample answer: The words “everything” and “satisfy” (Chapter XLVIII, paragraph 6) make the tone heavy and deliberate rather than neutral. That weight points the reader to pride and self-knowledge: Collins says Lydia's death "would have been a blessing" by comparison: the society's harshest view, made grotesque. The author chooses them so the moment feels significant instead of passing.

24. [short · synthesis · DOK 4] Connect this passage from Chapter XLVIII, paragraph 9 to the story's treatment of women's limited choices: “The arrival of letters was the first grand object of every morning’s impatience.” Use one other moment from the story as well.

    Sample answer: This passage (Chapter XLVIII, paragraph 9) develops women's limited choices: Collins says Lydia's death "would have been a blessing" by comparison: the society's harshest view, made grotesque. Its words “impatience” and “letters” carry that idea into this moment. The same concern returns in “But before they heard again from Mr. Gardiner, a letter arrived for their father, from a different quarter, from Mr…” (Chapter XLVIII, paragraph 10), so the two passages read as a pattern, not a single moment. Together they show the story treating women's limited choices as central.

25. [mc · recall · DOK 1] What does Mr. Bennet admit?

    A. He is ill

B. It was his fault

C. He will leave home

D. Lydia is innocent

Key: B (It was his fault)

26. [mc · recall · DOK 1] In the line “They agree with me in apprehending that this false step in one daughter, will be injurious to the fortunes of all the others, for who, as Lady Catherine herself condescendingly says, will connect themselves with such a…”, what does “apprehending” most nearly mean?

A. injured by a sudden twist

B. mixed up in a confused way

C. fearing; anxiously expecting

D. replaced; pushed aside

Key: C (fearing; anxiously expecting)

27. [fill · recall · DOK 1] Complete the quotation from Chapter XLVIII, paragraph 6: “At _____ we have nothing to guide us.” Word bank: communicated, relations, satisfactory, present

Key: present

28. [short · analysis · DOK 3] Analyze how the word choice in this passage from Chapter XLVIII, paragraph 15 shapes its tone: “When Mrs. Bennet was told of this, she did not express so much satisfaction as her children expected, considering what her anxiety for his life had been before.” Pick two words and explain their effect.

Sample answer: The words “satisfaction” and “considering” (Chapter XLVIII, paragraph 15) make the tone heavy and deliberate rather than neutral. That weight points the reader to class and social mobility: Collins says Lydia's death "would have been a blessing" by comparison: the society's harshest view, made grotesque. The author chooses them so the moment feels significant instead of passing.

29. [short · synthesis · DOK 4] Connect this passage from Chapter XLVIII, paragraph 12 to the story's treatment of marriage and money: “Howsoever that may be, you are grievously to be pitied, in which opinion I am not only joined by Mrs. Collins, but likewise by Lady Catherine and her daughter, to whom I have related the affair.” Use one other moment from the story as well.

Sample answer: This passage (Chapter XLVIII, paragraph 12) develops marriage and money: Collins says Lydia's death "would have been a blessing" by comparison: the society's harshest view, made grotesque. Its words “grievously” and “daughter” carry that idea into this moment. The same concern returns in “Let me advise you then, my dear Sir, to console yourself as much as possible, to throw off your unworthy child from…” (Chapter XLVIII, paragraph 12), so the two passages read as a pattern, not a single moment. Together they show the story treating marriage and money as central.

30. [short · synthesis · DOK 4] Connect this passage from Chapter XLVIII, paragraph 21 to the story's treatment of women's limited choices: “It has been my own doing, and I ought to feel it.” Use one other moment from the story as well.

Sample answer: This passage (Chapter XLVIII, paragraph 21) develops women's limited choices: Collins says Lydia's death "would have been a blessing" by comparison: the society's harshest view, made grotesque. Its words its wording carry that idea into this moment. The same concern returns in “Human nature is so prone to fall into it!” (Chapter XLVIII, paragraph 23), so the two passages read as a pattern, not a single moment. Together they show the story treating women's limited choices as central.

31. [fill · recall · DOK 1 · AP: AP-LIT.FIG] Complete the quotation from Chapter XLVIII, paragraph 12: “No arguments shall be wanting on my part, that can alleviate so severe a misfortune; or that may comfort you, under a _____ that must be of all others most afflicting to a parent's mind." Word bank: attendance, bringing, present, circumstance

Key: circumstance

32. [fill · recall · DOK 1 · AP: AP-LIT.STR] Complete the quotation from Chapter XLVIII, paragraph 12: "The death of your daughter would have been a blessing in _____ of this"

    Key: comparison

33. [mc · analysis · DOK 3 · AP: AP-LIT.STR] Which literary element does this describe in "Chapter XLVIII"? Letters arrive from Mr. Gardiner and from Mr. Collins, whose 'consolation' is a cruelty.

    A. Tone / mood

    B. Diction / vocabulary

    C. Symbolism

    D. Epistolary

    Key: D (Epistolary)

34. [short · synthesis · DOK 4 · AP: AP-LIT.FIG] Close reading: how do the diction and syntax of "let me once in my life feel how much I have been to blame" (Chapter XLVIII, paragraph 23) shape its meaning? Consider a second, competing reading.

    Sample answer: Mr. Bennet's admission, the most serious line he speaks. The evidence is "let me once in my life feel how much I have been to blame" (Chapter XLVIII, paragraph 23). This develops family and reputation: Collins says Lydia's death "would have been a blessing" by comparison: the society's harshest view, made grotesque. The words "blame" and "much" carry that meaning: they are the charged choices in the line, and changing either would soften the effect. He says "let me once in my life feel how much I have been to blame" and adds "it will pass away soon enough," honest about both his guilt and his character.

35. [mc · analysis · DOK 3 · AP: AP-LIT.CHR] Which literary element does this describe in "Chapter XLVIII"? Mr. Bennet returns, admits blame in a rare serious moment, then recovers his irony at Kitty's expense.

    A. Simile

    B. Characterization

    C. Personification

    D. Setting

    Key: B (Characterization)

36. [fill · recall · DOK 1 · AP: AP-LIT.FIG] Fill in the blank with the vocabulary word that fits: "Bennet seemed wholly _____ at present to leave London, and promised to write again very soon." Word bank: disinclined, dilatory, finances, enormity

    Key: disinclined

37. [mc · inference · DOK 2 · AP: AP-LIT.LAN] What does this passage most clearly show? "It will pass away soon enough" (Chapter XLVIII, paragraph 23)

    A. Lydia's note: thoughtless and triumphant; note the grammar ("with who") and the tone.

    B. He predicts his remorse will fade, and it does.

    C. Mr. Bennet stops Mary's singing in public.

    D. The visual image that divides the Bingley sisters and Darcy.

    Key: B (He predicts his remorse will fade, and it does.)

38. [short · synthesis · DOK 4 · AP: AP-LIT.LAN] Synthesis: trace how family and reputation develops from Chapter XLVII to Chapter XLVIII. Use one quotation from each.

    Sample answer: Earlier, in Chapter XLVII, paragraph 1, the text reads “I have been thinking it over again, Elizabeth” — Mr. Gardiner's reasoning that Wickham would not risk his career; Elizabeth knows better. In Chapter XLVIII, “The death of your daughter would have been a blessing in comparison of this” (Chapter XLVIII, paragraph 12) — Collins's letter: hypocrisy dressed as piety. Collins says Lydia's death "would have been a blessing" by comparison: the society's harshest view, made grotesque.

39. [short · synthesis · DOK 4 · AP: AP-LIT.FIG] Close reading: how do the diction and syntax of “The death of your daughter would have been a blessing in comparison of this” (Chapter XLVIII, paragraph 12) shape its meaning? Consider a second, competing reading.

    Sample answer: Collins's letter: hypocrisy dressed as piety. The evidence is “The death of your daughter would have been a blessing in comparison of this” (Chapter XLVIII, paragraph 12). This develops family and reputation: Collins says Lydia's death "would have been a blessing" by comparison: the society's harshest view, made grotesque. The words “comparison” and “blessing” carry that meaning: they are the charged choices in the line, and changing either would soften the effect. He says "let me once in my life feel how much I have been to blame" and adds "it will pass away soon enough," honest about both his guilt and his character.

40. [short · analysis · DOK 3 · Dual Credit (Indiana College Core): ICC-WC-1.5] Analyze the word choice in “It will pass away soon enough” (Chapter XLVIII, paragraph 23). Pick two words and explain what they suggest.

    Sample answer: He predicts his remorse will fade, and it does. The evidence is “It will pass away soon enough” (Chapter XLVIII, paragraph 23). This develops family and reputation: Collins says Lydia's death "would have been a blessing" by comparison: the society's harshest view, made grotesque. The words “enough” and “pass” carry that meaning: they are the charged choices in the line, and changing either would soften the effect.

41. [mc · recall · DOK 1 · Program outcome: LeL-C3-LIT-1] In the line “His family knew him to be on all common occasions, a most negligent and dilatory correspondent, but at such a time, they had hoped for exertion.”, what does “dilatory” most nearly mean?

    A. assets in the form of money

    B. slow; tending to delay

    C. fearing; anxiously expecting

    D. great wickedness

    Key: B (slow; tending to delay)

Rigor version	Items (in order)	Mix
Scaffolded support	1, 2, 3, 4, 5, 6, 7, 8, 9, 10, 11, 12, 13, 14, 15, 16	recall 11, inference 2, analysis 2, synthesis 1
HS Freshman	11, 17, 3, 18, 2, 19, 7, 5, 20, 13, 21, 12, 22, 15, 23, 24	recall 8, inference 4, analysis 3, synthesis 1
HS Sophomore	17, 25, 26, 8, 11, 1, 3, 27, 12, 20, 13, 14, 28, 15, 29, 30	recall 8, inference 3, analysis 3, synthesis 2
HS Junior	2, 4, 31, 32, 10, 26, 8, 25, 12, 13, 28, 33, 23, 15, 29, 34	recall 8, inference 2, analysis 4, synthesis 2
HS Senior	18, 17, 2, 25, 5, 3, 27, 13, 12, 35, 22, 23, 15, 16, 34, 30	recall 7, inference 2, analysis 4, synthesis 3
AP	11, 1, 19, 36, 37, 21, 20, 22, 15, 28, 23, 24, 29, 38, 39, 16	recall 4, inference 3, analysis 4, synthesis 5
College Freshman	6, 27, 8, 2, 25, 13, 33, 15, 23, 40, 28, 16, 30, 38, 24, 29	recall 5, inference 1, analysis 5, synthesis 5

College Sophomore	8, 19, 11, 2, 25, 20, 22, 28, 15, 23, 14, 16, 38, 30, 24, 29	recall 5, inference 1, analysis 5, synthesis 5
College Junior	41, 6, 11, 36, 1, 20, 15, 14, 23, 22, 28, 30, 38, 29, 24, 16	recall 5, inference 1, analysis 5, synthesis 5
College Senior	7, 11, 2, 4, 6, 23, 22, 15, 28, 14, 33, 30, 16, 29, 38, 24	recall 5, inference 0, analysis 6, synthesis 5
Graduate / PhD	9, 36, 2, 25, 11, 12, 22, 35, 14, 15, 23, 30, 38, 29, 16, 24	recall 5, inference 1, analysis 5, synthesis 5

Writing prompts (eleven rigor levels)

Scaffolded support (250 words; AP: see unit standards): Supported track (work from the passage your teacher selects). In "Chapter XLVIII," how does Austen show letters of judgment? Write a paragraph that states your claim, quotes two details from the passage, and explains how each detail supports your idea. Use the irony you noticed as one piece of evidence.

HS Freshman (350 words; AP: see unit standards): In Chapter XLVIII, how does Austen develop the idea of letters of judgment? State a clear claim, support it with two or three quotations, and explain how the irony in the chapter helps build that idea.

HS Sophomore (450 words; AP: see unit standards): Analyze how Chapter XLVIII develops the idea of letters of judgment. Make a precise claim, support it with at least three pieces of textual evidence, and explain how the author's use of irony and characterization shapes that idea. Address one possible counterclaim.

HS Junior (550 words; AP: see unit standards): Analyze how the structure of Chapter XLVIII (where it begins, turns and ends) and its irony shape the reader's understanding of letters of judgment. Identify one place where the text leaves matters uncertain and explain how that uncertainty adds to its meaning. Distinguish what is directly stated from what is really meant.

HS Senior (600 words; AP: see unit standards): Two readers disagree about what Chapter XLVIII suggests about letters of judgment. Lay out two plausible interpretations, weigh the evidence for each (including the chapter's irony and characterization), and argue for the stronger one in a sustained, well-organized essay. Distinguish what is directly stated from what is really meant.

AP (650 words; AP: AP-LIT.NAR, AP-LIT.LAN): Write a literary argument in which you analyze how Jane Austen uses irony in Chapter XLVIII to complicate the reader's understanding of letters of judgment. Develop a defensible thesis, select evidence purposefully, and explain how specific choices of diction and syntax create meaning.

College Freshman (1000 words; AP: see unit standards): Situate Chapter XLVIII within its historical and literary context and argue how the chapter's treatment of letters of judgment responds to that context. Engage with at least one secondary perspective (a critic, historian or the author's own statements), integrate quotations smoothly, and cite in MLA style.

College Sophomore (1250 words; AP: see unit standards): Read Chapter XLVIII alongside the conventions of its genre and period. Argue how the chapter's handling of letters of judgment follows or bends those conventions, using the irony as evidence, and test your reading against one published critic. Document two secondary sources in MLA.

College Junior (1500 words; AP: see unit standards): Apply a named critical approach (for example formalist, historicist, feminist, psychoanalytic or ecocritical) to Chapter XLVIII and its treatment of letters of judgment. State your method, show what it reveals in the chapter's irony and characterization, and identify where the text resists it.

College Senior (2000 words; AP: see unit standards): Develop a research argument that reads Chapter XLVIII as evidence for a larger claim about letters of judgment in Pride and Prejudice. Connect close reading of the chapter to the whole novel, engage at least four scholarly sources, and state precisely where your reading departs from theirs (Chicago style).

Graduate / PhD (2500 words; AP: see unit standards): Develop an original argument that reads Chapter XLVIII as a hinge in the novel's larger treatment of letters of judgment. Position your reading within a named critical conversation (for example formalist, historicist, psychoanalytic, feminist or postcolonial approaches), account for the textual history where relevant, and articulate the stakes of your intervention for scholarship on Pride and Prejudice.

SAT-style questions

1. And in the wretched state of his own finances, there was a very powerful motive for secrecy, in addition to his fear of discovery by Lydia's relations, for it had just transpired that he had left gaming debts behind him, to a very considerable amount.

   As used in the text, what does the word "finances" most nearly mean?

   A. make unwilling

   B. a crafty and involved plot to achieve your (usually sinister) ends

   C. assets in the form of money

   D. characterized by neglect and undue lack of concern

2. The whole party were in hopes of a letter from Mr. Bennet the next morning, but the post came in without bringing a single line from him. His family knew him to be on all common occasions, a most negligent and dilatory correspondent, but at such a time, they had hoped for exertion. They were forced to conclude that he had no pleasing intelligence to send, but even of that they would have been glad to be certain. Mr. Gardiner had waited only for the letters before he set off.

   Which choice best states a central concern of "Chapter XLVIII"?

   A. The great confrontation

   B. A ridiculous proposal

   C. Letters of judgment

   D. Farewells at Hunsford

SAT key: 1. C (assets in the form of money); 2. C (Letters of judgment)

Lesson 50: Chapter XLIX

Focus: a costly solution

Objective: Students will analyze how plot develops in "Chapter XLIX" by writing a claim-evidence-reasoning paragraph that cites at least 2 quotations from the section, and will score at least 80% on the section quiz.

Standards: AP: see the unit standards

Content note (exploitation of a minor): Money is used to make Wickham marry Lydia; discuss marriage as damage control and who benefits.
Student preview: Money is paid to make a man marry a 16-year-old.
Suggested language: "Who benefits from this marriage? Who pays?"

Teacher only · spoilers

Mr. Gardiner writes that Lydia and Wickham have been found and will marry on modest terms. Mr. Bennet suspects Gardiner paid a great deal. Mrs. Bennet is overjoyed.

Background: Settlements guaranteed income in marriage; paying a man to marry was a way to restore honor.

Significance: Mrs. Bennet's joy ironically ignores the shame and cost.

Lesson plan and lecture script (90 minutes)

0–8 min · Bell-ringer · You do (8 min)
Students write to the bell-ringer, then pair-share.
Why is Mrs. Bennet's reaction ironic? Write for five minutes. Starters: I think... because... / This connects to marriage and money because.... Content note before we start: Money is paid to make a man marry a 16-year-old.
Prompt: Why is Mrs. Bennet's reaction ironic?
Sentence starters: I think… because… · This connects to marriage and money because…
Strong response: A strong response takes a position and anticipates this: Lydia's marriage is a financial transaction that rescues the family's name.

8–18 min · Vocabulary with etymology notes · I do (10 min)
Five key words in context, with verified word histories.
Today's words: paddock — a small fenced field for horses; cambric — a fine, thin cotton or linen cloth; affording — giving; providing; humbled — made to feel ashamed or less proud; consulted — get or ask advice from. "consulted": Origin of "consult": Middle French consulter; earlier Latin cōnsultum.
Words: paddock: a small fenced field for horses · cambric: a fine, thin cotton or linen cloth · affording: giving; providing · humbled: made to feel ashamed or less proud · consulted: get or ask advice from

18–28 min · Background and context · I do (10 min)
Mini-lecture (read or adapt the script).
Settlements guaranteed income in marriage; paying a man to marry was a way to restore honor. Mrs. Bennet's joy ironically ignores the shame and cost. Epistolary: Mr. Gardiner writes that Wickham will marry Lydia on modest terms; Mr. Bennet suspects someone has paid far more. Characterization: Mrs. Bennet swings from despair to triumph in a moment, planning wedding clothes. Watch for silence and reserve: What characters leave unsaid (Darcy's reserve, Jane's composure, Elizabeth's secrets) drives misunderstanding. In this chapter: "in what part of London they were. The particulars, I reserve till we meet. It is enough to know they are discovered" (Chapter XLIX, paragraph 15).

28–40 min · I do: modeled close reading · I do (12 min)
Model the close reading of the anchor quotation using the written think-aloud below.
First, meaning. I read "Mrs. Wickham! How well it sounds" slowly and put it in my own words: Mrs. Bennet rejoices at the sound of "Mrs. Wickham." Next, craft. I notice her exclamation over a name rather than over her daughter's safety. The strongest word is "sounds": she is pleased by how the title sounds, not by the man. Then, effect. What does Mrs. Bennet's delight show? My answer: Mrs. Bennet's delight shows that she cares only that a daughter is married, not how; Austen shows her shallowness and how quickly she forgets the family's disgrace.

> Mrs. Wickham! How well it sounds (Chapter XLIX, paragraph 52)

Think-aloud: First, meaning. I read "Mrs. Wickham! How well it sounds" slowly and put it in my own words: Mrs. Bennet rejoices at the sound of "Mrs. Wickham." Next, craft. I notice her exclamation over a name rather than over her daughter's safety. The strongest word is "sounds": she is pleased by how the title sounds, not by the man. Then, effect. What does Mrs. Bennet's delight show? My answer: Mrs. Bennet's delight shows that she cares only that a daughter is married, not how; Austen shows her shallowness and how quickly she forgets the family's disgrace.

40–55 min · We do: guided annotation · We do (15 min)
Guided analysis of a second quotation; expected answers given.
Ask: What words in this line stand out, and what do they suggest? Expected: Jane's charitable hope. Look at the craft: Mrs. Bennet swings from despair to triumph in a moment, planning wedding clothes. Ask: How does this line connect to marriage and money? Expected: Lydia's marriage is a financial transaction that rescues the family's name. (Jane's charitable hope.)

> His consenting to marry her is a proof, I will believe, that he is come to a right way of thinking (Chapter XLIX, paragraph 42)

Ask: What words in this line stand out, and what do they suggest?
Expected answer: Jane's charitable hope. Look at the craft: Mrs. Bennet swings from despair to triumph in a moment, planning wedding clothes.
Ask: How does this line connect to marriage and money?
Expected answer: Lydia's marriage is a financial transaction that rescues the family's name. (Jane's charitable hope.)

55–70 min · You do: independent annotation · You do (15 min)
Independent annotation and a claim-evidence-reasoning paragraph (exemplar given).
Annotate the chapter for epistolary, characterization (three marks with a margin note each), then write one claim-evidence-reasoning paragraph: what does this chapter suggest about a costly solution? Then start your writing prompt at your assigned level (HS Sophomore: Analyze how Chapter XLIX develops the idea of a costly solution. Make a precise claim, support it with at least three pieces of textual evidence, and explain how the author's use of plot and irony shapes that idea. Address one possible counterclaim.) Exemplar: The marriage rescues the family's reputation but not Lydia's happiness. When the text says “neither rational happiness nor worldly prosperity, could be justly expected for her sister” (Chapter XLIX, paragraph 56), it shows this directly. Mrs. Bennet rejoices "Mrs. Wickham! How well it sounds," while Elizabeth sees that "neither rational happiness nor worldly prosperity" can be expected for Lydia.
Task: Annotate the chapter for epistolary, characterization (three marks with a margin note each), then write one claim-evidence-reasoning paragraph: what does this chapter suggest about a costly solution? Then start your writing prompt at your assigned level (HS Sophomore: Analyze how Chapter XLIX develops the idea of a costly solution. Make a precise claim, support it with at least three pieces of textual evidence, and explain how the author's use of plot and irony shapes that idea. Address one possible counterclaim.)
Exemplar: The marriage rescues the family's reputation but not Lydia's happiness. When the text says “neither rational happiness nor worldly prosperity, could be justly expected for her sister” (Chapter XLIX, paragraph 56), it shows this directly. Mrs. Bennet rejoices "Mrs. Wickham! How well it sounds," while Elizabeth sees that "neither rational happiness nor worldly prosperity" can be expected for Lydia.

70–80 min · Discussion · We do (10 min)
Structured discussion from the 30 tiered questions, with facilitation notes.
Anchor question: Why is Mrs. Bennet's reaction ironic? Ask: in this society, is a bad marriage better than no marriage for Lydia? For her sisters?
Anchor question: Why is Mrs. Bennet's reaction ironic?
Facilitation: Ask: in this society, is a bad marriage better than no marriage for Lydia? For her sisters?

80–87 min · Exit ticket / chapter quiz · You do (7 min)
Chapter quiz in the app and an exit ticket (answer given).
Chapter quiz in the app, then: In one sentence, what does this chapter suggest about a costly solution? Support it with one short quotation. Model answer: The marriage rescues the family's reputation but not Lydia's happiness. (“neither rational happiness nor worldly prosperity, could be justly expected for her sister”, Chapter XLIX, paragraph 56). Accept any defensible claim backed by a quotation from the chapter; the answer key for the quiz is in the Quiz section.
Exit ticket: In one sentence, what does this chapter suggest about a costly solution? Support it with one short quotation.
Answer: Model answer: The marriage rescues the family's reputation but not Lydia's happiness. (“neither rational happiness nor worldly prosperity, could be justly expected for her sister”, Chapter XLIX, paragraph 56). Accept any defensible claim backed by a quotation from the chapter; the answer key for the quiz is in the Quiz section.

> 87–90 min · Closure · I do (3 min)
> Summarize the lesson and preview the next reading.
> Today we saw how epistolary shapes a costly solution. Key takeaway: Lydia's marriage is a financial transaction that rescues the family's name.

Total: 90 minutes.

Teacher analysis (spoilers)

Literary elements

- Epistolary: Mr. Gardiner writes that Wickham will marry Lydia on modest terms; Mr. Bennet suspects someone has paid far more.
- Characterization: Mrs. Bennet swings from despair to triumph in a moment, planning wedding clothes.

Themes and how they develop

- marriage and money: Lydia's marriage is a financial transaction that rescues the family's name.

Symbols and motifs

- silence and reserve: What characters leave unsaid (Darcy's reserve, Jane's composure, Elizabeth's secrets) drives misunderstanding. In this chapter: “in what part of London they were. The particulars, I reserve till we meet. It is enough to know they are discovered” (Chapter XLIX, paragraph 15).
- letters: Letters carry news, reveal character and change minds; Darcy's letter is the turning point of the novel. In this chapter: “been here this half hour, and master has had a letter” (Chapter XLIX, paragraph 3).

Key quotations (checked against the reading text)

- “Mrs. Wickham! How well it sounds” (Chapter XLIX, paragraph 52) Mrs. Bennet's delight: the name matters, not the man.
- “His consenting to marry her is a proof, I will believe, that he is come to a right way of thinking” (Chapter XLIX, paragraph 42) Jane's charitable hope.
- “neither rational happiness nor worldly prosperity, could be justly expected for her sister” (Chapter XLIX, paragraph 56) Elizabeth's realistic view.

Model claim-evidence-reasoning

Claim: The marriage rescues the family's reputation but not Lydia's happiness.
Evidence: “neither rational happiness nor worldly prosperity, could be justly expected for her sister” (Chapter XLIX, paragraph 56)
Reasoning: Mrs. Bennet rejoices "Mrs. Wickham! How well it sounds," while Elizabeth sees that "neither rational happiness nor worldly prosperity" can be expected for Lydia.

Vocabulary with etymology notes

Word	Definition (in this sentence)	In context	Word history
paddock (noun)	a small fenced field for horses	Upon this information, they instantly passed through the hall once more, and ran across the lawn after their father, who was deliberately pursuing his way towards a small wood on one side of the paddock.
cambric (noun)	a fine, thin cotton or linen cloth	She was then proceeding to all the particulars of calico, muslin, and cambric, and would shortly have dictated some very plentiful orders, had not Jane, though with some difficulty, persuaded her to wait, till her father was at leisure to be consulted.
affording (verb)	giving; providing	Their taking her home, and affording her their personal protection and countenance, is such a sacrifice to her advantage as years of gratitude cannot enough acknowledge.
humbled (verb)	made to feel ashamed or less proud	She was disturbed by no fear for her felicity, nor humbled by any remembrance of her misconduct.
consulted (verb)	get or ask advice from	She was then proceeding to all the particulars of calico, muslin, and cambric, and would shortly have dictated some very plentiful orders, had not Jane, though with some difficulty, persuaded her to wait, till her father was at leisure to be consulted.	"consulted": Origin of "consult": Middle French consulter; earlier Latin cōnsultum. (Liber et Libri origin note, https://en.wiktionary.org/wiki/consult#Etymology)

Discussion questions

1. Why is Mrs. Bennet's reaction ironic?
2. Where does plot appear in this chapter, and what effect does it have? Point to one passage.
3. How does this chapter connect to the book's larger concern with class and social mobility?

Classroom discussion questions (30, tiered)

Wait time after every question (3 s for DOK 1, 5 s for DOK 2, 8 to 10 s for DOK 3 and 4); think-pair-share on DOK 3 and 4; answer each response with a follow-up probe; close with student-generated questions. Focus sets by rigor level: Scaffolded support: 1, 2, 3, 4, 5, 6, 11, 12, 13, 14, 21, 22; HS Freshman: 1, 2, 3, 4, 5, 12, 13, 14, 15, 22, 23, 24; HS Sophomore: 1, 2, 3, 4, 13, 14, 15, 16, 17, 23, 24, 25; HS Junior: 1, 2, 3, 14, 15, 16, 17, 18, 24, 25, 26, 27; HS Senior: 1, 2, 3, 15, 16, 17, 18, 25, 26, 27, 28, 29; AP: 1, 2, 16, 17, 18, 19, 20, 26, 27, 28, 29, 30; College Freshman: 1, 2, 17, 18, 19, 20, 21, 22, 27, 28, 29, 30; College Sophomore: 1, 2, 11, 18, 19, 20, 21, 22, 23, 28, 29, 30; College Junior: 1, 11, 12, 19, 20, 21, 22, 23, 24, 25, 29, 30; College Senior: 1, 11, 12, 13, 20, 21, 22, 23, 24, 25, 26, 30; Graduate / PhD: 1, 11, 12, 13, 21, 22, 23, 24, 25, 26, 27, 28

Literal / recall

1. Who writes with news? [DOK 1 · coldCallWithSupport · wait 3 s · AP: unit standards] Look for: Mr. Gardiner
2. What is agreed? [DOK 1 · turnAndTalk · wait 3 s · AP: unit standards] Look for: Lydia and Wickham will marry
3. What does Mr. Bennet suspect? [DOK 1 · coldCallWithSupport · wait 3 s · AP: unit standards] Look for: Mr. Gardiner paid much money
4. How does Mrs. Bennet react to the news that Lydia will marry? [DOK 1 · turnAndTalk · wait 3 s · AP: unit standards] Look for: Overjoyed
5. Why was money needed? [DOK 1 · coldCallWithSupport · wait 3 s · AP: unit standards] Look for: To persuade Wickham to marry
6. Retell the three most important events of "Chapter XLIX" in order, in one sentence each. [DOK 1 · turnAndTalk · wait 3 s · AP: unit standards] Look for: Mr. Gardiner writes that Lydia and Wickham have been found and will marry on modest terms. Mr. Bennet suspects Gardiner paid a great deal. Mrs. Bennet is overjoyed.
7. Which characters appear or are mentioned in "Chapter XLIX"? Name two and one thing each says or does. [DOK 1 · coldCallWithSupport · wait 3 s · AP: unit standards] Look for: Names and actions taken from the chapter; check against the teacher summary.
8. Where and when does "Chapter XLIX" take place? Point to the line that tells you. [DOK 1 · turnAndTalk · wait 3 s · AP: unit standards] Look for: A place/time detail quoted from the chapter.
9. Reread: "Upon this information, they instantly passed through the hall once more, and ran across the lawn after their father, who was deliberately pursuing his way towards a small wood on one side of the paddock." What does "paddock" mean here, and what is literally happening in this line? [DOK 1 · turnAndTalk · wait 3 s · AP: unit standards] Look for: paddock: a small fenced field for horses.
10. Reread: "She was then proceeding to all the particulars of calico, muslin, and cambric, and would shortly have dictated some very plentiful orders, had not Jane, though with some difficulty, persuaded her to wait, till her…" What does "cambric" mean here, and what is literally happening in this line? [DOK 1 · turnAndTalk · wait 3 s · AP: unit standards] Look for: cambric: a fine, thin cotton or linen cloth.

Inferential / analytical

1. What does "Chapter XLIX" suggest about a costly solution? State the inference and the line that supports it. [DOK 2 · thinkPairShare · wait 5 s · AP-LIT.LAN] Look for: Mrs. Bennet's joy ironically ignores the shame and cost.
2. Find one example of plot in this chapter. What does it reveal that a plain statement would not? [DOK 2 · followUp · wait 5 s · AP-LIT.STR] Look for: Look for key events and the causes linking them.
3. How does the irony in this chapter shape what we understand about a costly solution? [DOK 3 · thinkPairShare · wait 8 s · AP-LIT.NAR] Look for: Look for gaps between what characters expect or say and what is true.
   Answer guidance: A defensible line of argument: The marriage rescues the family's reputation but not Lydia's happiness. Useful evidence: "Mrs. Wickham! How well it sounds" (Chapter XLIX, paragraph 52): Mrs. Bennet's delight: the name matters, not the man. Theme link: Lydia's marriage is a financial transaction that rescues the family's name. Credit any position that is supported by quotation and reasoning; push one-sided answers to address the strongest counterpoint.
4. In the passage that begins ""If we are ever able to learn what Wickham's debts have been,"", why might Austen have chosen these particular words? Pick two and explain their connotations. [DOK 2 · followUp · wait 5 s · AP-LIT.FIG] Look for: Diction analysis of two words in the anchor passage.

5. What causes the main turn in “Chapter XLIX”, and what effect is it likely to have on what follows? [DOK 2 · followUp · wait 5 s · AP-LIT.STR] Look for: Mr. Gardiner writes that Lydia and Wickham have been found and will marry on modest terms. Mr. Bennet suspects Gardiner paid a great deal. Mrs. Bennet is overjoyed.
6. How does “Chapter XLIX” build on “Chapter XLVIII”? Name one link of cause and effect. [DOK 3 · thinkPairShare · wait 8 s · AP-LIT.STR] Look for: A causal or structural link between this and the previous chapter.
   Answer guidance: A defensible line of argument: The marriage rescues the family's reputation but not Lydia's happiness. Useful evidence: “His consenting to marry her is a proof, I will believe, that he is come to a right way of thinking” (Chapter XLIX, paragraph 42): Jane's charitable hope. Theme link: Lydia's marriage is a financial transaction that rescues the family's name. Credit any position that is supported by quotation and reasoning; push one-sided answers to address the strongest counterpoint.
7. What can we infer about a character's motives from what they say and do here, as opposed to what they claim? [DOK 3 · followUp · wait 8 s · AP-LIT.CHR] Look for: An inference about motive supported by a quoted line.
   Answer guidance: A defensible line of argument: The marriage rescues the family's reputation but not Lydia's happiness. Useful evidence: “neither rational happiness nor worldly prosperity, could be justly expected for her sister” (Chapter XLIX, paragraph 56): Elizabeth's realistic view. On characterization: Mrs. Bennet swings from despair to triumph in a moment, planning wedding clothes. Credit any position that is supported by quotation and reasoning; push one-sided answers to address the strongest counterpoint.
8. The bell-ringer asked: “Why is Mrs. Bennet's reaction ironic?” Now that we have read closely, how would you revise your first answer, and which line changed your mind? [DOK 2 · thinkPairShare · wait 5 s · AP-LIT.LAN] Look for: A revised answer anchored in the text.
9. Where does characterization appear, and how does it connect this chapter to the larger concern with class and social mobility? [DOK 3 · followUp · wait 8 s · AP-LIT.CHR] Look for: Look for what characters say, do and think, and how others react to them.
   Answer guidance: A defensible line of argument: The marriage rescues the family's reputation but not Lydia's happiness. Useful evidence: “Mrs. Wickham! How well it sounds” (Chapter XLIX, paragraph 52): Mrs. Bennet's delight: the name matters, not the man. On characterization: Mrs. Bennet swings from despair to triumph in a moment, planning wedding clothes. Credit any position that is supported by quotation and reasoning; push one-sided answers to address the strongest counterpoint.
10. Background: Settlements guaranteed income in marriage; paying a man to marry was a way to restore honor. How does knowing this change the way you read one moment in the chapter? [DOK 3 · thinkPairShare · wait 8 s · AP-LIT.SET] Look for: A specific moment reread in light of the context.
    Answer guidance: A defensible line of argument: The marriage rescues the family's reputation but not Lydia's happiness. Useful evidence: “His consenting to marry her is a proof, I will believe, that he is come to a right way of thinking” (Chapter XLIX, paragraph 42): Jane's charitable hope. Theme link: Lydia's marriage is a financial transaction that rescues the family's name. Credit any position that is supported by quotation and reasoning; push one-sided answers to address the strongest counterpoint.

Evaluative / synthesis / creative

1. A critic might argue: “Mrs. Bennet's joy ironically ignores the shame and cost.” How far do you agree? Take a stand and defend it with two lines from the chapter. [DOK 3 · fourCorners · wait 8 s · AP-LIT.LAN] Look for: A defended position with evidence and one counterpoint.
   Answer guidance: A defensible line of argument: The marriage rescues the family's reputation but not Lydia's happiness. Useful evidence: “neither rational happiness nor worldly prosperity, could be justly expected for her sister" (Chapter XLIX, paragraph 56): Elizabeth's realistic view. Theme link: Lydia's marriage is a financial transaction that rescues the family's name. Credit any position that is supported by quotation and reasoning; push one-sided answers to address the strongest counterpoint.

2. Which character in this chapter acts most wisely, and which least? Judge them by a standard you name. [DOK 3 · thinkPairShare · wait 8 s · AP-LIT.CHR, AP-LIT.LAN] Look for: An evaluation using an explicit criterion and evidence.

   Answer guidance: A defensible line of argument: The marriage rescues the family's reputation but not Lydia's happiness. Useful evidence: "Mrs. Wickham! How well it sounds" (Chapter XLIX, paragraph 52): Mrs. Bennet's delight: the name matters, not the man. On characterization: Mrs. Bennet swings from despair to triumph in a moment, planning wedding clothes. Credit any position that is supported by quotation and reasoning; push one-sided answers to address the strongest counterpoint.

3. Rewrite one moment of "Chapter XLIX" from the point of view of a different character. What does the new angle reveal or hide about a costly solution? [DOK 4 · thinkPairShare · wait 8 s · AP-LIT.LAN, AP-LIT.NAR] Look for: A creative product with a rationale tied to the text.

   Answer guidance: A defensible line of argument: The marriage rescues the family's reputation but not Lydia's happiness. Useful evidence: "His consenting to marry her is a proof, I will believe, that he is come to a right way of thinking" (Chapter XLIX, paragraph 42): Jane's charitable hope. Theme link: Lydia's marriage is a financial transaction that rescues the family's name. Credit any position that is supported by quotation and reasoning; push one-sided answers to address the strongest counterpoint.

4. Write three questions of your own about "Chapter XLIX": one recall, one "why/how", and one "should/what if". Trade with a partner and answer theirs. [DOK 3 · studentGenerated · wait 8 s · AP-LIT.LAN] Look for: Student-generated questions at three levels.

   Answer guidance: A defensible line of argument: The marriage rescues the family's reputation but not Lydia's happiness. Useful evidence: "neither rational happiness nor worldly prosperity, could be justly expected for her sister" (Chapter XLIX, paragraph 56): Elizabeth's realistic view. Theme link: Lydia's marriage is a financial transaction that rescues the family's name. Credit any position that is supported by quotation and reasoning; push one-sided answers to address the strongest counterpoint.

5. Connect this chapter to women's limited choices: is the link strong or weak so far? What would Austen need to show next to strengthen it? [DOK 4 · socraticCircle · wait 8 s · AP-LIT.LAN] Look for: A judgment of thematic development across the work.

   Answer guidance: A defensible line of argument: The marriage rescues the family's reputation but not Lydia's happiness. Useful evidence: "Mrs. Wickham! How well it sounds" (Chapter XLIX, paragraph 52): Mrs. Bennet's delight: the name matters, not the man. Theme link: Lydia's marriage is a financial transaction that rescues the family's name. Credit any position that is supported by quotation and reasoning; push one-sided answers to address the strongest counterpoint.

6. Is the plot in this chapter effective, or does it feel heavy-handed? Evaluate it as a reader would in a review. [DOK 3 · fourCorners · wait 8 s · AP-LIT.LAN, AP-LIT.STR] Look for: An evaluative judgment with criteria and evidence.

   Answer guidance: A defensible line of argument: The marriage rescues the family's reputation but not Lydia's happiness. Useful evidence: "His consenting to marry her is a proof, I will believe, that he is come to a right way of thinking" (Chapter XLIX, paragraph 42): Jane's charitable hope. Theme link: Lydia's marriage is a financial transaction that rescues the family's name. Credit any position that is supported by quotation and reasoning; push one-sided answers to address the strongest counterpoint.

7. Compare how “Chapter XLIX” treats a costly solution with how another text, film or event you know treats a similar idea. What does Pride and Prejudice see that the other misses? [DOK 4 · socraticCircle · wait 8 s · AP-LIT.LAN] Look for: A cross-text synthesis.

   Answer guidance: A defensible line of argument: The marriage rescues the family's reputation but not Lydia's happiness. Useful evidence: “neither rational happiness nor worldly prosperity, could be justly expected for her sister” (Chapter XLIX, paragraph 56): Elizabeth's realistic view. Theme link: Lydia's marriage is a financial transaction that rescues the family's name. Credit any position that is supported by quotation and reasoning; push one-sided answers to address the strongest counterpoint.
8. Predict what “Chapter L” will bring, using two clues from this chapter. After reading, evaluate your prediction. [DOK 3 · thinkPairShare · wait 8 s · AP-LIT.LAN, AP-LIT.STR] Look for: A prediction or judgment justified with textual clues.

   Answer guidance: A defensible line of argument: The marriage rescues the family's reputation but not Lydia's happiness. Useful evidence: “Mrs. Wickham! How well it sounds” (Chapter XLIX, paragraph 52): Mrs. Bennet's delight: the name matters, not the man. Theme link: Lydia's marriage is a financial transaction that rescues the family's name. Credit any position that is supported by quotation and reasoning; push one-sided answers to address the strongest counterpoint.
9. Design a one-paragraph modern adaptation of this chapter (setting, characters, conflict). What must stay the same for it to still be about a costly solution? [DOK 4 · thinkPairShare · wait 8 s · AP-LIT.LAN] Look for: A creative transfer that keeps the core idea.

   Answer guidance: A defensible line of argument: The marriage rescues the family's reputation but not Lydia's happiness. Useful evidence: “His consenting to marry her is a proof, I will believe, that he is come to a right way of thinking” (Chapter XLIX, paragraph 42): Jane's charitable hope. Theme link: Lydia's marriage is a financial transaction that rescues the family's name. Credit any position that is supported by quotation and reasoning; push one-sided answers to address the strongest counterpoint.
10. What question would you most like to ask Jane Austen about this chapter, and what answer do you think the text itself gives? [DOK 4 · studentGenerated · wait 8 s · AP-LIT.LAN] Look for: A student-generated question answered from evidence.

    Answer guidance: A defensible line of argument: The marriage rescues the family's reputation but not Lydia's happiness. Useful evidence: “neither rational happiness nor worldly prosperity, could be justly expected for her sister” (Chapter XLIX, paragraph 56): Elizabeth's realistic view. Theme link: Lydia's marriage is a financial transaction that rescues the family's name. Credit any position that is supported by quotation and reasoning; push one-sided answers to address the strongest counterpoint.

Annotation focus

- Plot: look for key events and the causes linking them (anchor passage in the We do segment)
- Also notice Irony: gaps between what characters expect or say and what is true
- Also notice Characterization: what characters say, do and think, and how others react to them

Chapter quiz: item bank (all eleven rigor versions)

1. [mc · recall · DOK 1] In the line “Their taking her home, and affording her their personal protection and countenance, is such a sacrifice to her advantage as years of gratitude cannot enough acknowledge.”, what does “affording” most nearly mean?

   A. giving; providing

B. keep from happening or arising; make impossible

C. frankness; honesty

D. an easygoing, relaxed manner

Key: A (giving; providing)

2. [fill · recall · DOK 1] Complete the quotation from Chapter XLIX, paragraph 42: “His _____ to marry her is a proof, I will believe, that he is come to a right way of thinking”

   Key: consenting

3. [mc · recall · DOK 1] How does Mrs. Bennet react to the news that Lydia will marry?

   A. Angry

   B. Overjoyed

   C. Ashamed

   D. Silent

   Key: B (Overjoyed)

4. [mc · recall · DOK 1] Who writes with news?

   A. Mr. Gardiner

   B. Darcy

   C. Wickham

   D. Collins

   Key: A (Mr. Gardiner)

5. [mc · recall · DOK 1] Why was money needed?

   A. To persuade Wickham to marry

   B. To buy a house

   C. To pay Lydia's school

   D. To pay the doctor

   Key: A (To persuade Wickham to marry)

6. [mc · recall · DOK 1] What does Mr. Bennet suspect?

   A. Darcy is dead

   B. Mr. Gardiner paid much money

   C. Wickham is rich

   D. Lydia lied

   Key: B (Mr. Gardiner paid much money)

7. [fill · recall · DOK 1] Complete the quotation from Chapter XLIX, paragraph 56: “neither rational happiness nor worldly _____, could be justly expected for her sister”

   Key: prosperity

8. [fill · recall · DOK 1] Fill in the blank with the vocabulary word that fits: “She was then proceeding to all the particulars of calico, muslin, and cambric, and would shortly have dictated some very plentiful orders, had not Jane, though with some difficulty, persuaded her to wait, till her father was at leisure to be _____.”

   Word bank: cambric, affording, consulted, paddock

   Key: consulted

9. [mc · recall · DOK 1] What is agreed?

   A. Lydia joins a convent

   B. Lydia returns unmarried

   C. Lydia and Wickham will marry

   D. Wickham goes to prison

   Key: C (Lydia and Wickham will marry)

10. [mc · recall · DOK 1] In the line “She was disturbed by no fear for her felicity, nor humbled by any remembrance of her misconduct.”, what does “humbled” most nearly mean?

    A. supervised; directed

    B. made to feel ashamed or less proud

    C. manners shown by one's upbringing

    D. realize beforehand

    Key: B (made to feel ashamed or less proud)

11. [mc · recall · DOK 1] In the line “Upon this information, they instantly passed through the hall once more, and ran across the lawn after their father, who was deliberately pursuing his way towards a small wood on one side of the paddock.”, what does “paddock” most nearly mean?

    A. a small fenced field for horses

    B. acting or arriving or performed exactly at the time appointed

    C. feel admiration for

    D. something very like another; a copy

    Key: A (a small fenced field for horses)

12. [mc · inference · DOK 2] Which choice best states a central concern of “Chapter XLIX”?

    A. A journey and a mercenary suitor

    B. Family dynamics and anticipation

    C. Pompous flattery

    D. A costly solution

    Key: D (A costly solution)

13. [mc · analysis · DOK 3] In this chapter, which theme does the following most directly develop? Lydia's marriage is a financial transaction that rescues the family's name.

    A. First impressions and prejudice

    B. Pride and self-knowledge

    C. Marriage and money

    D. Class and social mobility

    Key: C (Marriage and money)

14. [short · synthesis · DOK 4] Synthesis: trace how marriage and money develops from Chapter XLII to Chapter XLIX. Use one quotation from each.

    Sample answer: Earlier, in Chapter XLII, paragraph 1, the text reads “Had Elizabeth’s opinion been all drawn from her own family, she could not have formed a very pleasing picture of conjugal felicity or…”, which shows the narrator's verdict on the Bennet marriage. In Chapter XLIX, “Mrs. Wickham! How well it sounds” (Chapter XLIX, paragraph 52) — Mrs. Bennet's delight: the name matters, not the man. Lydia's marriage is a financial transaction that rescues the family's name.

15. [short · synthesis · DOK 4] Close reading: how do the diction and syntax of “His consenting to marry her is a proof, I will believe, that he is come to a right way of thinking” (Chapter XLIX, paragraph 42) shape its meaning? Consider a second, competing reading.
    Sample answer: Jane's charitable hope. The evidence is “His consenting to marry her is a proof, I will believe, that he is come to a right way of thinking” (Chapter XLIX, paragraph 42). This develops marriage and money: Lydia's marriage is a financial transaction that rescues the family's name. The words “consenting” and “thinking” carry that meaning: they are the charged choices in the line, and changing either would soften the effect. Mrs. Bennet rejoices "Mrs. Wickham! How well it sounds," while Elizabeth sees that "neither rational happiness nor worldly prosperity" can be expected for Lydia.
16. [short · synthesis · DOK 4] Close reading: how do the diction and syntax of “Mrs. Wickham! How well it sounds” (Chapter XLIX, paragraph 52) shape its meaning? Consider a second, competing reading.
    Sample answer: Mrs. Bennet's delight: the name matters, not the man. The evidence is “Mrs. Wickham! How well it sounds” (Chapter XLIX, paragraph 52). This develops marriage and money: Lydia's marriage is a financial transaction that rescues the family's name. The words “sounds” and “well” carry that meaning: they are the charged choices in the line, and changing either would soften the effect. Mrs. Bennet rejoices "Mrs. Wickham! How well it sounds," while Elizabeth sees that "neither rational happiness nor worldly prosperity" can be expected for Lydia.
17. [fill · recall · DOK 1] Complete the quotation from Chapter XLIX, paragraph 52: “Mrs. Wickham! How well it _____”
    Key: sounds
18. [mc · recall · DOK 1] Which word completes this sentence from Chapter XLIX, paragraph 13? “Read it aloud,’ said their _____, ‘for I hardly know myself what it is about.”
    A. father
    B. towards
    C. speech
    D. married
    Key: A (father)
19. [mc · recall · DOK 1] Which word completes this sentence from Chapter XLIX, paragraph 19? “Send back your answer as soon as you can, and be careful to write _____.”
    A. explicitly
    B. fortunate
    C. astonishment
    D. looking
    Key: A (explicitly)
20. [fill · recall · DOK 1] Complete the quotation from Chapter XLIX, paragraph 3: “Dear madam,’ cried Mrs. Hill, in great _____, ‘don’t you know there is an express come for master from Mr. Gardiner?” Word bank: astonishment, fortunate, speech, father
    Key: astonishment
21. [short · inference · DOK 2] What does this passage from Chapter XLIX, paragraph 55 reveal about the character or situation? “And as I come back, I can call on Lady Lucas and Mrs. Long.” Answer in two or three sentences with one detail.
    Sample answer: The passage (Chapter XLIX, paragraph 55) shows the situation turning on first impressions and prejudice: Lydia's marriage is a financial transaction that rescues the family's name. The words its wording are the proof, because they show how the moment looks to the people in it. They suggest more than the narrator states outright.

22. [mc · inference · DOK 2] Which of these passages comes earliest in Chapter XLIX?

    A. “Away ran the girls, too eager to get in to have time for speech.”

    B. “He has been here this half hour, and master has had a letter.”

    C. “Dear madam,’ cried Mrs. Hill, in great astonishment, ‘don’t you know there is an express come for master from Mr. Gardiner?”

    D. “They ran through the vestibule into the breakfast room; from thence to the library;—their father was in neither; and they were on the point…”

    Key: C (“Dear madam,’ cried Mrs. Hill, in great astonishment, ‘don’t you know there is an express come for master from Mr. Gardiner?”)

23. [short · inference · DOK 2] What does this passage from Chapter XLIX, paragraph 19 reveal about the character or situation? “There will not be the smallest occasion for your coming to town again; therefore, stay quietly at Longbourn, and depend on my diligence and care.” Answer in two or three sentences with one detail.

    Sample answer: The passage (Chapter XLIX, paragraph 19) shows the situation turning on first impressions and prejudice: Lydia's marriage is a financial transaction that rescues the family's name. The words “diligence” and “therefore” are the proof, because they show how the moment looks to the people in it. They suggest more than the narrator states outright.

24. [short · analysis · DOK 3] Analyze how the word choice in this passage from Chapter XLIX, paragraph 35 shapes its tone: “I mean, that no man in his senses would marry Lydia on so slight a temptation as one hundred a year during my life, and fifty after I am gone.” Pick two words and explain their effect.

    Sample answer: The words “temptation” and “hundred” (Chapter XLIX, paragraph 35) make the tone heavy and deliberate rather than neutral. That weight points the reader to pride and self-knowledge: Lydia's marriage is a financial transaction that rescues the family's name. The author chooses them so the moment feels significant instead of passing.

25. [short · analysis · DOK 3] Analyze how the word choice in this passage from Chapter XLIX, paragraph 25 shapes its tone: “Most earnestly did she then entreat him to lose no more time before he wrote.” Pick two words and explain their effect.

    Sample answer: The words “earnestly” and “entreat” (Chapter XLIX, paragraph 25) make the tone heavy and deliberate rather than neutral. That weight points the reader to class and social mobility: Lydia's marriage is a financial transaction that rescues the family's name. The author chooses them so the moment feels significant instead of passing.

26. [short · analysis · DOK 3] Analyze how the word choice in this passage from Chapter XLIX, paragraph 3 shapes its tone: “He has been here this half hour, and master has had a letter.” Pick two words and explain their effect.

    Sample answer: The words “letter” and “master” (Chapter XLIX, paragraph 3) make the tone heavy and deliberate rather than neutral. That weight points the reader to pride and self-knowledge: Lydia's marriage is a financial transaction that rescues the family's name. The author chooses them so the moment feels significant instead of passing.

27. [short · synthesis · DOK 4] Connect this passage from Chapter XLIX, paragraph 11 to the story's treatment of women's limited choices: “What is there of good to be expected?’ said he, taking the letter from his pocket; ‘but perhaps you would like to read it.” Use one other moment from the story as well.

    Sample answer: This passage (Chapter XLIX, paragraph 11) develops women's limited choices: Lydia's marriage is a financial transaction that rescues the family's name. Its words “expected” and “perhaps” carry that idea into this moment. The same concern returns in “At last I am able to send you some tidings of my niece, and such as, upon the whole, I hope will give you satisfaction.” (Chapter XLIX, paragraph 16), so the two passages read as a pattern, not a single moment. Together they show the story treating women's limited choices as central.

28. [short · inference · DOK 2 · AP: AP-LIT.CHR] What can you infer from this line? “His consenting to marry her is a proof, I will believe, that he is come to a right way of thinking” (Chapter XLIX, paragraph 42) Answer in two or three sentences with one detail.

    Sample answer: Jane's charitable hope. The evidence is “His consenting to marry her is a proof, I will believe, that he is come to a right way of thinking” (Chapter XLIX, paragraph 42).

29. [short · analysis · DOK 3 · AP: AP-LIT.LAN] Claim: The marriage rescues the family's reputation but not Lydia's happiness. Explain how this evidence supports the claim: “neither rational happiness nor worldly prosperity, could be justly expected for her sister” (Chapter XLIX, paragraph 56).

    Sample answer: Mrs. Bennet rejoices "Mrs. Wickham! How well it sounds," while Elizabeth sees that "neither rational happiness nor worldly prosperity" can be expected for Lydia. The evidence is “neither rational happiness nor worldly prosperity, could be justly expected for her sister” (Chapter XLIX, paragraph 56) — Elizabeth's realistic view. This develops marriage and money: Lydia's marriage is a financial transaction that rescues the family's name.

30. [short · synthesis · DOK 4 · AP: AP-LIT.LAN] Connect this passage from Chapter XLIX, paragraph 19 to the story's treatment of marriage and money: “All that is required of you is, to assure to your daughter, by settlement, her equal share of the five thousand pounds, secured among your children after the decease of yourself and my sister; and, moreover, to enter into an engagement of…” Use one other moment from the story as well.

    Sample answer: This passage (Chapter XLIX, paragraph 19) develops marriage and money: Lydia's marriage is a financial transaction that rescues the family's name. Its words “engagement” and “settlement” carry that idea into this moment. The same concern returns in “I shall send this by express, that no time may be lost in bringing me your answer.” (Chapter XLIX, paragraph 19), so the two passages read as a pattern, not a single moment. Together they show the story treating marriage and money as central.

31. [short · synthesis · DOK 4 · AP: AP-LIT.LAN] Connect this passage from Chapter XLIX, paragraph 41 to the story's treatment of women's limited choices: “Though our kind uncle has done something towards clearing him, I cannot believe that ten thousand pounds, or anything like it, has been advanced.” Use one other moment from the story as well.

    Sample answer: This passage (Chapter XLIX, paragraph 41) develops women's limited choices: Lydia's marriage is a financial transaction that rescues the family's name. Its words “something” and “anything” carry that idea into this moment. The same concern returns in “It now occurred to the girls that their mother was in all likelihood perfectly ignorant of what had happened.” (Chapter XLIX, paragraph 45), so the two passages read as a pattern, not a single moment. Together they show the story treating women's limited choices as central.

32. [mc · inference · DOK 2 · AP: AP-LIT.LAN] What does this passage most clearly show? “Mrs. Wickham! How well it sounds” (Chapter XLIX, paragraph 52)

    A. Elizabeth deflates the household's awe of rank with a joke.

    B. Elizabeth insists Jane's loss was caused by "the interference of friends," not chance: an accurate suspicion of Darcy.

    C. The chapter opens by clearing the stage for new arrivals.

    D. Mrs. Bennet's delight: the name matters, not the man.

    Key: D (Mrs. Bennet's delight: the name matters, not the man.)

33. [short · synthesis · DOK 4 · AP: AP-LIT.LAN] Connect this passage from Chapter XLIX, paragraph 50 to the story's treatment of marriage and money: “My dear, dear Lydia!’ she cried: ‘This is delightful indeed!—She will be married!—I shall see her again!—She will be married at sixteen!—My good, kind brother!—I knew how it would be—I knew he would manage everything.” Use one other moment from the story as well.

Sample answer: This passage (Chapter XLIX, paragraph 50) develops marriage and money: Lydia's marriage is a financial transaction that rescues the family's name. Its words “everything” and “delightful” carry that idea into this moment. The same concern returns in “Her eldest daughter endeavoured to give some relief to the violence of these transports, by leading her thoughts to the…” (Chapter XLIX, paragraph 51), so the two passages read as a pattern, not a single moment. Together they show the story treating marriage and money as central.

34. [short · analysis · DOK 3 · Dual Credit (Indiana College Core): ICC-WC-1.5] Analyze the word choice in “neither rational happiness nor worldly prosperity, could be justly expected for her sister” (Chapter XLIX, paragraph 56). Pick two words and explain what they suggest.

    Sample answer: Elizabeth's realistic view. The evidence is “neither rational happiness nor worldly prosperity, could be justly expected for her sister” (Chapter XLIX, paragraph 56). This develops marriage and money: Lydia's marriage is a financial transaction that rescues the family's name. The words “prosperity” and “happiness” carry that meaning: they are the charged choices in the line, and changing either would soften the effect.

35. [mc · analysis · DOK 3 · Dual Credit (Indiana College Core): ICC-WC-1.5] Which literary element does this describe in “Chapter XLIX”? Mr. Gardiner writes that Wickham will marry Lydia on modest terms; Mr. Bennet suspects someone has paid far more.

    A. Epistolary

    B. Diction / vocabulary

    C. Simile

    D. Setting

    Key: A (Epistolary)

36. [mc · analysis · DOK 3 · Program outcome: LeL-C3-LIT-1] Which literary element does this describe in “Chapter XLIX”? Mrs. Bennet swings from despair to triumph in a moment, planning wedding clothes.

    A. Imagery

    B. Tone / mood

    C. Characterization

    D. Hyperbole

    Key: C (Characterization)

Rigor version	Items (in order)	Mix
Scaffolded support	1, 2, 3, 4, 5, 6, 7, 8, 9, 10, 11, 12, 13, 14, 15, 16	recall 11, inference 1, analysis 1, synthesis 3
HS Freshman	4, 5, 17, 18, 2, 19, 7, 20, 21, 22, 23, 12, 24, 13, 25, 15	recall 8, inference 4, analysis 3, synthesis 1
HS Sophomore	4, 18, 7, 3, 11, 1, 17, 22, 12, 23, 21, 13, 26, 24, 27, 14	recall 7, inference 4, analysis 3, synthesis 2
HS Junior	18, 20, 2, 4, 8, 21, 22, 12, 23, 28, 26, 25, 29, 13, 27, 30	recall 5, inference 5, analysis 4, synthesis 2
HS Senior	8, 1, 7, 4, 19, 23, 22, 12, 21, 25, 26, 13, 24, 15, 31, 14	recall 5, inference 4, analysis 4, synthesis 3
AP	8, 2, 19, 32, 21, 12, 22, 29, 26, 13, 25, 24, 14, 30, 33, 31	recall 3, inference 4, analysis 5, synthesis 4
College Freshman	8, 2, 5, 22, 23, 21, 34, 25, 35, 13, 26, 14, 31, 27, 30, 33	recall 3, inference 3, analysis 5, synthesis 5
College Sophomore	17, 6, 2, 28, 21, 22, 35, 13, 26, 24, 25, 33, 30, 14, 27, 31	recall 3, inference 3, analysis 5, synthesis 5
College Junior	8, 18, 2, 21, 22, 13, 25, 29, 24, 36, 15, 27, 30, 14, 33, 31	recall 3, inference 2, analysis 5, synthesis 6
College Senior	3, 8, 2, 22, 29, 25, 24, 36, 13, 15, 16, 31, 14, 27, 33, 30	recall 3, inference 1, analysis 5, synthesis 7

Graduate / PhD	5, 8, 17, 22, 21, 28, 13, 26, 29, 35, 25, 31, 27, 14, 30, 33	recall 3, inference 3, analysis 5, synthesis 5

Writing prompts (eleven rigor levels)

Scaffolded support (250 words; AP: see unit standards): Supported track (work from the passage your teacher selects). In “Chapter XLIX,” how does Austen show a costly solution? Write a paragraph that states your claim, quotes two details from the passage, and explains how each detail supports your idea. Use the plot you noticed as one piece of evidence.

HS Freshman (350 words; AP: see unit standards): In Chapter XLIX, how does Austen develop the idea of a costly solution? State a clear claim, support it with two or three quotations, and explain how the plot in the chapter helps build that idea.

HS Sophomore (450 words; AP: see unit standards): Analyze how Chapter XLIX develops the idea of a costly solution. Make a precise claim, support it with at least three pieces of textual evidence, and explain how the author's use of plot and irony shapes that idea. Address one possible counterclaim.

HS Junior (550 words; AP: see unit standards): Analyze how the structure of Chapter XLIX (where it begins, turns and ends) and its plot shape the reader's understanding of a costly solution. Identify one place where the text leaves matters uncertain and explain how that uncertainty adds to its meaning.

HS Senior (600 words; AP: see unit standards): Two readers disagree about what Chapter XLIX suggests about a costly solution. Lay out two plausible interpretations, weigh the evidence for each (including the chapter's plot and irony), and argue for the stronger one in a sustained, well-organized essay.

AP (650 words; AP: AP-LIT.STR, AP-LIT.LAN): Write a literary argument in which you analyze how Jane Austen uses plot in Chapter XLIX to complicate the reader's understanding of a costly solution. Develop a defensible thesis, select evidence purposefully, and explain how specific choices of diction and syntax create meaning.

College Freshman (1000 words; AP: see unit standards): Situate Chapter XLIX within its historical and literary context and argue how the chapter's treatment of a costly solution responds to that context. Engage with at least one secondary perspective (a critic, historian or the author's own statements), integrate quotations smoothly, and cite in MLA style.

College Sophomore (1250 words; AP: see unit standards): Read Chapter XLIX alongside the conventions of its genre and period. Argue how the chapter's handling of a costly solution follows or bends those conventions, using the plot as evidence, and test your reading against one published critic. Document two secondary sources in MLA.

College Junior (1500 words; AP: see unit standards): Apply a named critical approach (for example formalist, historicist, feminist, psychoanalytic or ecocritical) to Chapter XLIX and its treatment of a costly solution. State your method, show what it reveals in the chapter's plot and irony, and identify where the text resists it.

College Senior (2000 words; AP: see unit standards): Develop a research argument that reads Chapter XLIX as evidence for a larger claim about a costly solution in Pride and Prejudice. Connect close reading of the chapter to the whole novel, engage at least four scholarly sources, and state precisely where your reading departs from theirs (Chicago style).

Graduate / PhD (2500 words; AP: see unit standards): Develop an original argument that reads Chapter XLIX as a hinge in the novel's larger treatment of a costly solution. Position your reading within a named critical conversation (for example formalist, historicist, psychoanalytic, feminist or postcolonial approaches), account for the textual history where relevant, and articulate the stakes of your intervention for scholarship on Pride and Prejudice.

SAT-style questions

1. Upon this information, they instantly passed through the hall once more, and ran across the lawn after their father, who was deliberately pursuing his way towards a small wood on one side of the paddock.

   As used in the text, what does the word “paddock” most nearly mean?

   A. a small fenced field for horses

   B. made to feel ashamed or less proud

   C. get or ask advice from

   D. giving; providing

2. “If we are ever able to learn what Wickham’s debts have been,” said Elizabeth, “and how much is settled on his side on our sister, we shall exactly know what Mr. Gardiner has done for them, because Wickham has not sixpence of his own. The kindness of my uncle and aunt can never be requited. Their taking her home, and affording her their personal protection and countenance, is such a sacrifice to her advantage as years of gratitude cannot enough acknowledge. By this time she is actually with them! If such goodness does not make her miserable now, she will never deserve to be happy! What a meeting for her, when she first sees my aunt!”

   Which choice best states a central concern of “Chapter XLIX”?

   A. A costly solution

   B. Trusted relatives

   C. Family in crisis

   D. The hidden benefactor

SAT key: 1. A (a small fenced field for horses); 2. A (A costly solution)

Lesson 51: Chapter L

Focus: too late

Objective: Students will analyze how characterization develops in “Chapter L” by writing a claim-evidence-reasoning paragraph that cites at least 2 quotations from the section, and will score at least 80% on the section quiz.

Standards: AP: see the unit standards

Content note (exploitation of a minor): The arrangement is completed; keep the framing on power and consent.
Student preview: The marriage arrangement continues.
Suggested language: “What choices did Lydia really have?”

Teacher only · spoilers

Elizabeth realizes Darcy is the man who would have suited her best, just as she believes the family disgrace has ended her chances. Wickham is to join the regulars in the north.

Background: Austen often places realization at the point where hope seems lost.

Significance: Elizabeth's longing reflects her full change of heart.

Lesson plan and lecture script (90 minutes)

0–8 min · Bell-ringer · You do (8 min)
Students write to the bell-ringer, then pair-share.
Why does Elizabeth recognize her love only now? Write for five minutes. Starters: I think... because... / This connects to marriage and money because.... Content note before we start: The marriage arrangement continues.
Prompt: Why does Elizabeth recognize her love only now?
Sentence starters: I think… because… · This connects to marriage and money because…
Strong response: A strong response takes a position and anticipates this: the cost of Mr. Bennet's carelessness becomes concrete.

8–18 min · Vocabulary with etymology notes · I do (10 min)
Five key words in context, with verified word histories.
Today's words: precluding — making impossible; regulars — the regular (professional) army; subjoin — add to the end; muslins — plain-woven cotton fabric; dutifully — out of a sense of duty; in a dutiful manner.
Words: precluding: making impossible · regulars: the regular (professional) army · subjoin: add to the end · muslins: plain-woven cotton fabric · dutifully: out of a sense of duty; in a dutiful manner

18–28 min · Background and context · I do (10 min)
Mini-lecture (read or adapt the script).
Austen often places realization at the point where hope seems lost. Elizabeth's longing reflects her full change of heart. Characterization: Mr. Bennet regrets not having saved money for his family; Elizabeth realizes she could have been happy with Darcy just when it seems impossible. Irony: The narrator describes the ideal marriage Elizabeth imagines, in the past conditional: what "could" have been. Watch for letters: Letters carry news, reveal character and change minds; Darcy's letter is the turning point of the novel. In this chapter: "over, he naturally returned to all his former indolence. His letter was soon dispatched; for though dilatory in undertaking business, he was" (Chapter L, paragraph 5).

28–40 min · I do: modeled close reading · I do (12 min)
Model the close reading of the anchor quotation using the written think-aloud below.
First, meaning. I read "instead of spending his whole income, he had laid by an annual sum, for the better provision of his children" slowly and put it in my own words: Mr. Bennet now wishes he had saved part of his income each year for his children. Next, craft. I notice the calm narration of a regret that comes too late. The strongest word is "provision": it means planning for the future, which he never did. Then, effect. What does Mr. Bennet regret? My answer: Mr. Bennet regrets that he never saved part of his income for his children; his carelessness left his daughters unprotected, and now another man has paid to save the family, which humbles him.

> instead of spending his whole income, he had laid by an annual sum, for the better provision of his children (Chapter L, paragraph 1)

Think-aloud: First, meaning. I read "instead of spending his whole income, he had laid by an annual sum, for the better provision of his children" slowly and put it in my own words: Mr. Bennet now wishes he had saved part of his income each year for his children. Next, craft. I notice the calm narration of a regret that comes too late. The strongest word is "provision": it means planning for the future, which he never did. Then, effect. What does Mr. Bennet regret? My answer: Mr. Bennet regrets that he never saved part of his income for his children; his carelessness left his daughters unprotected, and now another man has paid to save the family, which humbles him.

40–55 min · We do: guided annotation · We do (15 min)
Guided analysis of a second quotation; expected answers given.
Ask: What words in this line stand out, and what do they suggest? Expected: Irony of timing: the realization arrives too late. This links to pride and prejudice: only when the barrier is her family's disgrace, not her opinion, does she see what she wants. Ask: How does this line connect to marriage and money? Expected: The cost of Mr. Bennet's carelessness becomes concrete. (Elizabeth's realization comes too late.)

> She was convinced that she could have been happy with him; when it was no longer likely they should meet (Chapter L, paragraph 13)

Ask: What words in this line stand out, and what do they suggest?
Expected answer: Irony of timing: the realization arrives too late. This links to pride and prejudice: only when the barrier is her family's disgrace, not her opinion, does she see what she wants.
Ask: How does this line connect to marriage and money?
Expected answer: The cost of Mr. Bennet's carelessness becomes concrete. (Elizabeth's realization comes too late.)

55–70 min · You do: independent annotation · You do (15 min)
Independent annotation and a claim-evidence-reasoning paragraph (exemplar given).
Annotate the chapter for characterization, irony (three marks with a margin note each), then write one claim-evidence-reasoning paragraph: what does this chapter suggest about too late? Then start your writing prompt at your assigned level (HS Sophomore: Analyze how Chapter L develops the idea of too late. Make a precise claim, support it with at least three pieces of textual evidence, and explain how the author's use of characterization and theme shapes that idea. Address one possible counterclaim.) Exemplar: Elizabeth recognizes her love for Darcy just when circumstances seem to forbid it. When the text says “She was convinced that she could have been happy with him; when it was no longer likely they should meet” (Chapter L, paragraph 13), it shows this directly. She "was convinced that she could have been happy with him; when it was no longer likely they should meet"; the semicolon holds realization and loss together.
Task: Annotate the chapter for characterization, irony (three marks with a margin note each), then write one claim-evidence-reasoning paragraph: what does this chapter suggest about too late? Then start your writing prompt at your assigned level (HS Sophomore: Analyze how Chapter L develops the idea of too late. Make a precise claim, support it with at least three pieces of textual evidence, and explain how the author's use of characterization and theme shapes that idea. Address one possible counterclaim.)
Exemplar: Elizabeth recognizes her love for Darcy just when circumstances seem to forbid it. When the text says “She was convinced that she could have been happy with him; when it was no longer likely they should meet” (Chapter L, paragraph 13), it shows this directly. She "was convinced that she could have been happy with him; when it was no longer likely they should meet"; the semicolon holds realization and loss together.

70–80 min · Discussion · We do (10 min)
Structured discussion from the 30 tiered questions, with facilitation notes.
Anchor question: Why does Elizabeth recognize her love only now? Ask: what does "connubial felicity" mean for Austen? List the qualities the narrator gives the imagined marriage.
Anchor question: Why does Elizabeth recognize her love only now?
Facilitation: Ask: what does "connubial felicity" mean for Austen? List the qualities the narrator gives the imagined marriage.

80–87 min · Exit ticket / chapter quiz · You do (7 min)
Chapter quiz in the app and an exit ticket (answer given).
Chapter quiz in the app, then: In one sentence, what does this chapter suggest about too late? Support it with one short quotation. Model answer: Elizabeth recognizes her love for Darcy just when circumstances seem to forbid it. ("She was convinced that she could have been happy with him; when it was no longer likely they should meet", Chapter L, paragraph 13). Accept any defensible claim backed by a quotation from the chapter; the answer key for the quiz is in the Quiz section.
Exit ticket: In one sentence, what does this chapter suggest about too late? Support it with one short quotation.
Answer: Model answer: Elizabeth recognizes her love for Darcy just when circumstances seem to forbid it. ("She was convinced that she could have been happy with him; when it was no longer likely they should meet", Chapter L, paragraph 13). Accept any defensible claim backed by a quotation from the chapter; the answer key for the quiz is in the Quiz section.

87–90 min · Closure · I do (3 min)
Summarize the lesson and preview the next reading.
Today we saw how characterization shapes too late. Key takeaway: the cost of Mr. Bennet's carelessness becomes concrete.

Total: 90 minutes.

Teacher analysis (spoilers)

Literary elements

- Characterization: Mr. Bennet regrets not having saved money for his family; Elizabeth realizes she could have been happy with Darcy just when it seems impossible.
- Irony: The narrator describes the ideal marriage Elizabeth imagines, in the past conditional: what "could" have been.

Themes and how they develop

- marriage and money: the cost of Mr. Bennet's carelessness becomes concrete.

Symbols and motifs

- letters: Letters carry news, reveal character and change minds; Darcy's letter is the turning point of the novel. In this chapter: “over, he naturally returned to all his former indolence. His letter was soon dispatched; for though dilatory in undertaking business, he was” (Chapter L, paragraph 5).
- pride: Pride is discussed openly and shown in action; who is proud, and whether pride is a fault, keeps shifting. In this chapter: “the North, just when she had expected most pleasure and pride in her company, for she had by no means given up” (Chapter L, paragraph 21).

Key quotations (checked against the reading text)

- “instead of spending his whole income, he had laid by an annual sum, for the better provision of his children” (Chapter L, paragraph 1) Mr. Bennet's regret.
- “She was convinced that she could have been happy with him; when it was no longer likely they should meet” (Chapter L, paragraph 13) Elizabeth's realization comes too late.
- “But no such happy marriage could now teach the admiring multitude what connubial felicity really was” (Chapter L, paragraph 16) The narrator's gently ironic picture of the lost ideal.

Model claim-evidence-reasoning

Claim: Elizabeth recognizes her love for Darcy just when circumstances seem to forbid it.
Evidence: “She was convinced that she could have been happy with him; when it was no longer likely they should meet” (Chapter L, paragraph 13)
Reasoning: She "was convinced that she could have been happy with him; when it was no longer likely they should meet"; the semicolon holds realization and loss together.

Vocabulary with etymology notes

Word	Definition (in this sentence)	In context	Word history
precluding (verb)	making impossible	An union of a different tendency, and precluding the possibility of the other, was soon to be formed in their family.
regulars (noun)	the regular (professional) army	Wickham's intention to go into the regulars; and, among his former friends, there are still some who are able and willing to assist him in the army.
subjoin (verb)	add to the end	And will you give yourself the trouble of carrying similar assurances to his creditors in Meryton, of whom I shall subjoin a list, according to his information.
muslins (noun)	plain-woven cotton fabric	The marriage of a daughter, which had been the first object of her wishes since Jane was sixteen, was now on the point of accomplishment, and her thoughts and her words ran wholly on those attendants of elegant nuptials, fine muslins, new carriages, and servants.

dutifully (adverb)	out of a sense of duty; in a dutiful manner	She is well, and begs to be dutifully remembered to you and her mother.
spurned (verb)	reject with contempt	What a triumph for him, as she often thought, could he know that the proposals which she had proudly spurned only four months ago, would now have been gladly and gratefully received!	"spurned": Origin of "spurn": Old English spurnan ("to strike against"). (Liber et Libri origin note, https://en.wiktionary.org/wiki/spurn#Etymology)
impassable (adjective)	incapable of being passed	Not, however, from any fear of disadvantage from it, individually to herself; for at any rate, there seemed a gulf impassable between them.
secluded (verb)	kept away from other people	To be sure it would have been more for the advantage of conversation, had Miss Lydia Bennet come upon the town; or, as the happiest alternative, been secluded from the world, in some distant farm house.	"secluded": Origin of "seclude": Latin secludo. (Liber et Libri origin note, https://en.wiktionary.org/wiki/seclude#Etymology)
scorned (verb)	look down on with disdain	Darcy would connect himself with a family, where to every other objection would now be added, an alliance and relationship of the nearest kind with the man whom he so justly scorned.
exceeded (verb)	be greater in scope or size than some standard	That his anger could be carried to such a point of inconceivable resentment, as to refuse his daughter a privilege, without which her marriage would scarcely seem valid, exceeded all that she could believe possible.

Discussion questions

1. Why does Elizabeth recognize her love only now?
2. Where does characterization appear in this chapter, and what effect does it have? Point to one passage.
3. How does this chapter connect to the book's larger concern with women's limited choices?

Classroom discussion questions (30, tiered)

Wait time after every question (3 s for DOK 1, 5 s for DOK 2, 8 to 10 s for DOK 3 and 4); think-pair-share on DOK 3 and 4; answer each response with a follow-up probe; close with student-generated questions. Focus sets by rigor level: Scaffolded support: 1, 2, 3, 4, 5, 6, 11, 12, 13, 14, 21, 22; HS Freshman: 1, 2, 3, 4, 5, 12, 13, 14, 15, 22, 23, 24; HS Sophomore: 1, 2, 3, 4, 13, 14, 15, 16, 17, 23, 24, 25; HS Junior: 1, 2, 3, 14, 15, 16, 17, 18, 24, 25, 26, 27; HS Senior: 1, 2, 3, 15, 16, 17, 18, 25, 26, 27, 28, 29; AP: 1, 2, 16, 17, 18, 19, 20, 26, 27, 28, 29, 30; College Freshman: 1, 2, 17, 18, 19, 20, 21, 22, 27, 28, 29, 30; College Sophomore: 1, 2, 11, 18, 19, 20, 21, 22, 23, 28, 29, 30; College Junior: 1, 11, 12, 19, 20, 21, 22, 23, 24, 25, 29, 30; College Senior: 1, 11, 12, 13, 20, 21, 22, 23, 24, 25, 26, 30; Graduate / PhD: 1, 11, 12, 13, 21, 22, 23, 24, 25, 26, 27, 28

Literal / recall

1. What does Elizabeth realize? [DOK 1 · coldCallWithSupport · wait 3 s · AP: unit standards] Look for: Darcy suits her best
2. Why does she think it is too late? [DOK 1 · turnAndTalk · wait 3 s · AP: unit standards] Look for: The family disgrace
3. Where will Wickham be stationed? [DOK 1 · coldCallWithSupport · wait 3 s · AP: unit standards] Look for: In the north
4. How does Mrs. Bennet plan for Lydia? [DOK 1 · turnAndTalk · wait 3 s · AP: unit standards] Look for: Wants a grand house for her
5. What does Mr. Bennet refuse? [DOK 1 · coldCallWithSupport · wait 3 s · AP: unit standards] Look for: To receive the couple at first
6. Retell the three most important events of "Chapter L" in order, in one sentence each. [DOK 1 · turnAndTalk · wait 3 s · AP: unit standards] Look for: Elizabeth realizes Darcy is the man who would have suited her best, just as she believes the family disgrace has ended her chances. Wickham is to join the regulars in the north.
7. Which characters appear or are mentioned in "Chapter L"? Name two and one thing each says or does. [DOK 1 · coldCallWithSupport · wait 3 s · AP: unit standards] Look for: Names and actions taken from the chapter; check against the teacher summary.
8. Where and when does "Chapter L" take place? Point to the line that tells you. [DOK 1 · turnAndTalk · wait 3 s · AP: unit standards] Look for: A place/time detail quoted from the chapter.
9. Reread: "An union of a different tendency, and precluding the possibility of the other, was soon to be formed in their family." What does "precluding" mean here, and what is literally happening in this line? [DOK 1 · turnAndTalk · wait 3 s · AP: unit standards] Look for: precluding: making impossible.
10. Reread: "Wickham's intention to go into the regulars; and, among his former friends, there are still some who are able and willing to assist him in the army." What does "regulars" mean here, and what is literally happening in this line? [DOK 1 · turnAndTalk · wait 3 s · AP: unit standards] Look for: regulars: the regular (professional) army.

Inferential / analytical

1. What does "Chapter L" suggest about too late? State the inference and the line that supports it. [DOK 2 · thinkPairShare · wait 5 s · AP-LIT.LAN] Look for: Elizabeth's longing reflects her full change of heart.
2. Find one example of characterization in this chapter. What does it reveal that a plain statement would not? [DOK 2 · followUp · wait 5 s · AP-LIT.CHR] Look for: Look for what characters say, do and think, and how others react to them.
3. How does the theme in this chapter shape what we understand about too late? [DOK 3 · thinkPairShare · wait 8 s · AP-LIT.LAN] Look for: Look for statements or moments that connect to the book's big ideas.
   Answer guidance: A defensible line of argument: Elizabeth recognizes her love for Darcy just when circumstances seem to forbid it. Useful evidence: "instead of spending his whole income, he had laid by an annual sum, for the better provision of his children" (Chapter L, paragraph 1): Mr. Bennet's regret. Theme link: the cost of Mr. Bennet's carelessness becomes concrete. Credit any position that is supported by quotation and reasoning; push one-sided answers to address the strongest counterpoint.
4. In the passage that begins "The good news quickly spread through the house; and with proportionate speed through the neighbourhood.", why might Austen have chosen these particular words? Pick two and explain their connotations. [DOK 2 · followUp · wait 5 s · AP-LIT.FIG] Look for: Diction analysis of two words in the anchor passage.

5. What causes the main turn in “Chapter L”, and what effect is it likely to have on what follows? [DOK 2 · followUp · wait 5 s · AP-LIT.STR] Look for: Elizabeth realizes Darcy is the man who would have suited her best, just as she believes the family disgrace has ended her chances. Wickham is to join the regulars in the north.
6. How does “Chapter L” build on “Chapter XLIX”? Name one link of cause and effect. [DOK 3 · thinkPairShare · wait 8 s · AP-LIT.STR] Look for: A causal or structural link between this and the previous chapter.
   Answer guidance: A defensible line of argument: Elizabeth recognizes her love for Darcy just when circumstances seem to forbid it. Useful evidence: “She was convinced that she could have been happy with him; when it was no longer likely they should meet” (Chapter L, paragraph 13): Elizabeth's realization comes too late. Theme link: the cost of Mr. Bennet's carelessness becomes concrete. Credit any position that is supported by quotation and reasoning; push one-sided answers to address the strongest counterpoint.
7. What can we infer about a character's motives from what they say and do here, as opposed to what they claim? [DOK 3 · followUp · wait 8 s · AP-LIT.CHR] Look for: An inference about motive supported by a quoted line.
   Answer guidance: A defensible line of argument: Elizabeth recognizes her love for Darcy just when circumstances seem to forbid it. Useful evidence: “But no such happy marriage could now teach the admiring multitude what connubial felicity really was” (Chapter L, paragraph 16): The narrator's gently ironic picture of the lost ideal. On characterization: Mr. Bennet regrets not having saved money for his family; Elizabeth realizes she could have been happy with Darcy just when it seems impossible. Credit any position that is supported by quotation and reasoning; push one-sided answers to address the strongest counterpoint.
8. The bell-ringer asked: “Why does Elizabeth recognize her love only now?” Now that we have read closely, how would you revise your first answer, and which line changed your mind? [DOK 2 · thinkPairShare · wait 5 s · AP-LIT.LAN] Look for: A revised answer anchored in the text.
9. Where does irony appear, and how does it connect this chapter to the larger concern with women's limited choices? [DOK 3 · followUp · wait 8 s · AP-LIT.NAR] Look for: Look for gaps between what characters expect or say and what is true.
   Answer guidance: A defensible line of argument: Elizabeth recognizes her love for Darcy just when circumstances seem to forbid it. Useful evidence: “instead of spending his whole income, he had laid by an annual sum, for the better provision of his children” (Chapter L, paragraph 1): Mr. Bennet's regret. On irony: The narrator describes the ideal marriage Elizabeth imagines, in the past conditional: what "could" have been. Credit any position that is supported by quotation and reasoning; push one-sided answers to address the strongest counterpoint.
10. Background: Austen often places realization at the point where hope seems lost. How does knowing this change the way you read one moment in the chapter? [DOK 3 · thinkPairShare · wait 8 s · AP-LIT.SET] Look for: A specific moment reread in light of the context.
    Answer guidance: A defensible line of argument: Elizabeth recognizes her love for Darcy just when circumstances seem to forbid it. Useful evidence: “She was convinced that she could have been happy with him; when it was no longer likely they should meet” (Chapter L, paragraph 13): Elizabeth's realization comes too late. Theme link: the cost of Mr. Bennet's carelessness becomes concrete. Credit any position that is supported by quotation and reasoning; push one-sided answers to address the strongest counterpoint.

Evaluative / synthesis / creative

1. A critic might argue: “Elizabeth's longing reflects her full change of heart.” How far do you agree? Take a stand and defend it with two lines from the chapter. [DOK 3 · fourCorners · wait 8 s · AP-LIT.LAN] Look for: A defended position with evidence and one counterpoint.
   Answer guidance: A defensible line of argument: Elizabeth recognizes her love for Darcy just when circumstances seem to forbid it. Useful evidence: “But no such happy marriage could now teach the admiring multitude what connubial felicity really was” (Chapter L, paragraph 16): The narrator's gently ironic picture of the lost ideal. Theme link: the cost of Mr. Bennet's carelessness becomes concrete. Credit any position that is supported by quotation and reasoning; push one-sided answers to address the strongest counterpoint.
2. Which character in this chapter acts most wisely, and which least? Judge them by a standard you name. [DOK 3 · thinkPairShare · wait 8 s · AP-LIT.CHR, AP-LIT.LAN] Look for: An evaluation using an explicit criterion and evidence.
   Answer guidance: A defensible line of argument: Elizabeth recognizes her love for Darcy just when circumstances seem to forbid it. Useful evidence: “instead of spending his whole income, he had laid by an annual sum, for the better provision of his children” (Chapter L, paragraph 1): Mr. Bennet's regret. On characterization: Mr. Bennet regrets not having saved money for his family; Elizabeth realizes she could have been happy with Darcy just when it seems impossible. Credit any position that is supported by quotation and reasoning; push one-sided answers to address the strongest counterpoint.
3. Rewrite one moment of “Chapter L” from the point of view of a different character. What does the new angle reveal or hide about too late? [DOK 4 · thinkPairShare · wait 8 s · AP-LIT.LAN, AP-LIT.NAR] Look for: A creative product with a rationale tied to the text.
   Answer guidance: A defensible line of argument: Elizabeth recognizes her love for Darcy just when circumstances seem to forbid it. Useful evidence: “She was convinced that she could have been happy with him; when it was no longer likely they should meet” (Chapter L, paragraph 13): Elizabeth's realization comes too late. Theme link: the cost of Mr. Bennet's carelessness becomes concrete. Credit any position that is supported by quotation and reasoning; push one-sided answers to address the strongest counterpoint.
4. Write three questions of your own about “Chapter L”: one recall, one “why/how”, and one “should/what if”. Trade with a partner and answer theirs. [DOK 3 · studentGenerated · wait 8 s · AP-LIT.LAN] Look for: Student-generated questions at three levels.
   Answer guidance: A defensible line of argument: Elizabeth recognizes her love for Darcy just when circumstances seem to forbid it. Useful evidence: “But no such happy marriage could now teach the admiring multitude what connubial felicity really was” (Chapter L, paragraph 16): The narrator's gently ironic picture of the lost ideal. Theme link: the cost of Mr. Bennet's carelessness becomes concrete. Credit any position that is supported by quotation and reasoning; push one-sided answers to address the strongest counterpoint.
5. Connect this chapter to first impressions and prejudice: is the link strong or weak so far? What would Austen need to show next to strengthen it? [DOK 4 · socraticCircle · wait 8 s · AP-LIT.LAN] Look for: A judgment of thematic development across the work.
   Answer guidance: A defensible line of argument: Elizabeth recognizes her love for Darcy just when circumstances seem to forbid it. Useful evidence: “instead of spending his whole income, he had laid by an annual sum, for the better provision of his children” (Chapter L, paragraph 1): Mr. Bennet's regret. Theme link: the cost of Mr. Bennet's carelessness becomes concrete. Credit any position that is supported by quotation and reasoning; push one-sided answers to address the strongest counterpoint.

6. Is the characterization in this chapter effective, or does it feel heavy-handed? Evaluate it as a reader would in a review. [DOK 3 · fourCorners · wait 8 s · AP-LIT.CHR, AP-LIT.LAN] Look for: An evaluative judgment with criteria and evidence.

   Answer guidance: A defensible line of argument: Elizabeth recognizes her love for Darcy just when circumstances seem to forbid it. Useful evidence: “She was convinced that she could have been happy with him; when it was no longer likely they should meet” (Chapter L, paragraph 13): Elizabeth's realization comes too late. On characterization: Mr. Bennet regrets not having saved money for his family; Elizabeth realizes she could have been happy with Darcy just when it seems impossible. Credit any position that is supported by quotation and reasoning; push one-sided answers to address the strongest counterpoint.

7. Compare how “Chapter L” treats too late with how another text, film or event you know treats a similar idea. What does Pride and Prejudice see that the other misses? [DOK 4 · socraticCircle · wait 8 s · AP-LIT.LAN] Look for: A cross-text synthesis.

   Answer guidance: A defensible line of argument: Elizabeth recognizes her love for Darcy just when circumstances seem to forbid it. Useful evidence: “But no such happy marriage could now teach the admiring multitude what connubial felicity really was” (Chapter L, paragraph 16): The narrator's gently ironic picture of the lost ideal. Theme link: the cost of Mr. Bennet's carelessness becomes concrete. Credit any position that is supported by quotation and reasoning; push one-sided answers to address the strongest counterpoint.

8. Predict what “Chapter LI” will bring, using two clues from this chapter. After reading, evaluate your prediction. [DOK 3 · thinkPairShare · wait 8 s · AP-LIT.LAN, AP-LIT.STR] Look for: A prediction or judgment justified with textual clues.

   Answer guidance: A defensible line of argument: Elizabeth recognizes her love for Darcy just when circumstances seem to forbid it. Useful evidence: “instead of spending his whole income, he had laid by an annual sum, for the better provision of his children” (Chapter L, paragraph 1): Mr. Bennet's regret. Theme link: the cost of Mr. Bennet's carelessness becomes concrete. Credit any position that is supported by quotation and reasoning; push one-sided answers to address the strongest counterpoint.

9. Design a one-paragraph modern adaptation of this chapter (setting, characters, conflict). What must stay the same for it to still be about too late? [DOK 4 · thinkPairShare · wait 8 s · AP-LIT.LAN] Look for: A creative transfer that keeps the core idea.

   Answer guidance: A defensible line of argument: Elizabeth recognizes her love for Darcy just when circumstances seem to forbid it. Useful evidence: “She was convinced that she could have been happy with him; when it was no longer likely they should meet” (Chapter L, paragraph 13): Elizabeth's realization comes too late. Theme link: the cost of Mr. Bennet's carelessness becomes concrete. Credit any position that is supported by quotation and reasoning; push one-sided answers to address the strongest counterpoint.

10. What question would you most like to ask Jane Austen about this chapter, and what answer do you think the text itself gives? [DOK 4 · studentGenerated · wait 8 s · AP-LIT.LAN] Look for: A student-generated question answered from evidence.

    Answer guidance: A defensible line of argument: Elizabeth recognizes her love for Darcy just when circumstances seem to forbid it. Useful evidence: “But no such happy marriage could now teach the admiring multitude what connubial felicity really was” (Chapter L, paragraph 16): The narrator's gently ironic picture of the lost ideal. Theme link: the cost of Mr. Bennet's carelessness becomes concrete. Credit any position that is supported by quotation and reasoning; push one-sided answers to address the strongest counterpoint.

Annotation focus

- Characterization: look for what characters say, do and think, and how others react to them (anchor passage in the We do segment)
- Also notice Theme: statements or moments that connect to the book's big ideas
- Also notice Irony: gaps between what characters expect or say and what is true

Chapter quiz: item bank (all eleven rigor versions)

1. [mc · recall · DOK 1] In the line "An union of a different tendency, and precluding the possibility of the other, was soon to be formed in their family.", what does "precluding" most nearly mean?

   A. rising and falling; changing again and again

   B. showing; giving evidence of

   C. making impossible

   D. abandon hope; give up hope; lose heart

   Key: C (making impossible)

2. [fill · recall · DOK 1] Fill in the blank with the vocabulary word that fits: "Not, however, from any fear of disadvantage from it, individually to herself; for at any rate, there seemed a gulf _____ between them."
   Word bank: regulars, impassable, subjoin, precluding
   Key: impassable

3. [mc · recall · DOK 1] Where will Wickham be stationed?

   A. In Brighton

   B. In India

   C. In the north

   D. In London

   Key: C (In the north)

4. [mc · recall · DOK 1] In the line "The marriage of a daughter, which had been the first object of her wishes since Jane was sixteen, was now on the point of accomplishment, and her thoughts and her words ran wholly on those attendants of elegant…", what does "muslins" most nearly mean?

   A. hurt the pride of; humiliated

   B. a speech or piece of writing full of praise

   C. plain-woven cotton fabric

   D. diffusing warmth and friendliness

   Key: C (plain-woven cotton fabric)

5. [fill · recall · DOK 1] Fill in the blank with the vocabulary word that fits: "To be sure it would have been more for the advantage of conversation, had Miss Lydia Bennet come upon the town; or, as the happiest alternative, been _____ from the world, in some distant farm house." Word bank: regulars, secluded, subjoin, precluding
   Key: secluded

6. [fill · recall · DOK 1] Complete the quotation from Chapter L, paragraph 13: “She was _____ that she could have been happy with him; when it was no longer likely they should meet”
   Key: convinced
7. [mc · recall · DOK 1] What does Elizabeth realize?
   A. She loves Wickham
   B. Darcy suits her best
   C. She will marry Collins
   D. She hates Darcy
   Key: B (Darcy suits her best)
8. [fill · recall · DOK 1] Fill in the blank with the vocabulary word that fits: “She is well, and begs to be _____ remembered to you and her mother.” Word bank: subjoin, dutifully, precluding, regulars
   Key: dutifully
9. [mc · recall · DOK 1] Why does she think it is too late?
   A. She is poor
   B. The family disgrace
   C. She is ill
   D. Darcy is married
   Key: B (The family disgrace)
10. [fill · recall · DOK 1] Complete the quotation from Chapter L, paragraph 1: “instead of spending his whole income, he had laid by an annual sum, for the better _____ of his children”
    Key: provision
11. [fill · recall · DOK 1] Fill in the blank with the vocabulary word that fits: “What a triumph for him, as she often thought, could he know that the proposals which she had proudly _____ only four months ago, would now have been gladly and gratefully received!” Word bank: regulars, precluding, spurned, subjoin
    Key: spurned
12. [short · inference · DOK 2] What can you infer from this line? “She was convinced that she could have been happy with him; when it was no longer likely they should meet” (Chapter L, paragraph 13) Answer in two or three sentences with one detail.
    Sample answer: Elizabeth's realization comes too late. The evidence is “She was convinced that she could have been happy with him; when it was no longer likely they should meet” (Chapter L, paragraph 13).
13. [mc · inference · DOK 2] Which choice best states a central concern of “Chapter L”?
    A. Too late
    B. Family dynamics and anticipation
    C. Trusted relatives
    D. Farewells at Hunsford
    Key: A (Too late)
14. [mc · analysis · DOK 3] In this chapter, which theme does the following most directly develop? The cost of Mr. Bennet's carelessness becomes concrete.
    A. Pride and self-knowledge
    B. Class and social mobility
    C. Marriage and money

D. First impressions and prejudice

Key: C (Marriage and money)

15. [mc · analysis · DOK 3] Which literary element does this describe in “Chapter L”? Mr. Bennet regrets not having saved money for his family; Elizabeth realizes she could have been happy with Darcy just when it seems impossible.

    A. Metaphor

    B. Setting

    C. Hyperbole

    D. Characterization

    Key: D (Characterization)

16. [short · synthesis · DOK 4] Synthesis: trace how marriage and money develops from Chapter XLIX to Chapter L. Use one quotation from each.

    Sample answer: Earlier, in Chapter XLIX, paragraph 52, the text reads “Mrs. Wickham! How well it sounds” — Mrs. Bennet's delight: the name matters, not the man. In Chapter L, “instead of spending his whole income, he had laid by an annual sum, for the better provision of his children” (Chapter L, paragraph 1) — Mr. Bennet's regret. The cost of Mr. Bennet's carelessness becomes concrete.

17. [mc · recall · DOK 1] Which word completes this sentence from Chapter L, paragraph 11? “Elizabeth was now most heartily sorry that she had, from the distress of the moment, been led to make Mr. Darcy _____ with their fears for her sister”

    A. acquainted

    B. philosophy

    C. perfectly

    D. drawing

    Key: A (acquainted)

18. [mc · recall · DOK 1] What does Mr. Bennet refuse?

    A. To speak to Jane

    B. To pay anything

    C. To receive the couple at first

    D. To read letters

    Key: C (To receive the couple at first)

19. [short · inference · DOK 2] What does this passage from Chapter L, paragraph 12 reveal about the character or situation? “She had no fear of its spreading farther, through his means.” Answer in two or three sentences with one detail.

    Sample answer: The passage (Chapter L, paragraph 12) shows the situation turning on first impressions and prejudice: the cost of Mr. Bennet's carelessness becomes concrete. The words “spreading” and “through” are the proof, because they show how the moment looks to the people in it. They suggest more than the narrator states outright.

20. [short · inference · DOK 2] What does this passage from Chapter L, paragraph 1 reveal about the character or situation? “The satisfaction of prevailing on one of the most worthless young men in Great Britain to be her husband might then have rested in its proper place.” Answer in two or three sentences with one detail.

    Sample answer: The passage (Chapter L, paragraph 1) shows the situation turning on first impressions and prejudice: the cost of Mr. Bennet's carelessness becomes concrete. The words “satisfaction” and “prevailing” are the proof, because they show how the moment looks to the people in it. They suggest more than the narrator states outright.

21. [short · analysis · DOK 3] Analyze how the word choice in this passage from Chapter L, paragraph 17 shapes its tone: “How Wickham and Lydia were to be supported in tolerable independence, she could not imagine.” Pick two words and explain their effect.
    Sample answer: The words “independence” and “tolerable” (Chapter L, paragraph 17) make the tone heavy and deliberate rather than neutral. That weight points the reader to pride and self-knowledge: the cost of Mr. Bennet's carelessness becomes concrete. The author chooses them so the moment feels significant instead of passing.

22. [short · analysis · DOK 3] Analyze how the word choice in this passage from Chapter L, paragraph 4 shapes its tone: “Five thousand pounds was settled by marriage articles on Mrs. Bennet and the children.” Pick two words and explain their effect.
    Sample answer: The words “articles” and “thousand” (Chapter L, paragraph 4) make the tone heavy and deliberate rather than neutral. That weight points the reader to class and social mobility: the cost of Mr. Bennet's carelessness becomes concrete. The author chooses them so the moment feels significant instead of passing.

23. [short · analysis · DOK 3] Analyze the word choice in “But no such happy marriage could now teach the admiring multitude what connubial felicity really was” (Chapter L, paragraph 16). Pick two words and explain what they suggest.
    Sample answer: The narrator's gently ironic picture of the lost ideal. The evidence is “But no such happy marriage could now teach the admiring multitude what connubial felicity really was” (Chapter L, paragraph 16). This develops marriage and money: the cost of Mr. Bennet's carelessness becomes concrete. The words “multitude” and “connubial” carry that meaning: they are the charged choices in the line, and changing either would soften the effect.

24. [short · synthesis · DOK 4] Connect this passage from Chapter L, paragraph 19 to the story's treatment of marriage and money: “Haggerston has our directions, and all will be completed in a week.” Use one other moment from the story as well.
    Sample answer: This passage (Chapter L, paragraph 19) develops marriage and money: the cost of Mr. Bennet's carelessness becomes concrete. Its words “directions” and “completed” carry that idea into this moment. The same concern returns in “Mr. Bennet and his daughters saw all the advantages of Wickham’s removal from the ——shire, as clearly as Mr. Gardiner…” (Chapter L, paragraph 21), so the two passages read as a pattern, not a single moment. Together they show the story treating marriage and money as central.

25. [mc · recall · DOK 1] How does Mrs. Bennet plan for Lydia?
    A. Wants nothing
    B. Wants a grand house for her
    C. Wants her sent away
    D. Wants her to work

    Key: B (Wants a grand house for her)

26. [fill · recall · DOK 1] Complete the quotation from Chapter L, paragraph 16: “But no such happy marriage could now teach the admiring _____ what connubial felicity really was”
    Key: multitude

27. [mc · recall · DOK 1] In the line “And will you give yourself the trouble of carrying similar assurances to his creditors in Meryton, of whom I shall subjoin a list, according to his information.”, what does “subjoin” most nearly mean?
    A. hugging

B. a man who has recently been married

C. add to the end

D. lavish; very generous (in giving thanks or praise)

Key: C (add to the end)

28. [short · analysis · DOK 3] Analyze how the word choice in this passage from Chapter L, paragraph 13 shapes its tone: “She wanted to hear of him, when there seemed the least chance of gaining intelligence.” Pick two words and explain their effect.

    Sample answer: The words “intelligence” and “gaining” (Chapter L, paragraph 13) make the tone heavy and deliberate rather than neutral. That weight points the reader to class and social mobility: the cost of Mr. Bennet's carelessness becomes concrete. The author chooses them so the moment feels significant instead of passing.

29. [short · synthesis · DOK 4] Close reading: how do the diction and syntax of “instead of spending his whole income, he had laid by an annual sum, for the better provision of his children” (Chapter L, paragraph 1) shape its meaning? Consider a second, competing reading.

    Sample answer: Mr. Bennet's regret. The evidence is “instead of spending his whole income, he had laid by an annual sum, for the better provision of his children” (Chapter L, paragraph 1). This develops marriage and money: the cost of Mr. Bennet's carelessness becomes concrete. The words “provision” and “spending” carry that meaning: they are the charged choices in the line, and changing either would soften the effect. She "was convinced that she could have been happy with him; when it was no longer likely they should meet"; the semicolon holds realization and loss together.

30. [mc · recall · DOK 1 · AP: AP-LIT.FIG] Which word completes this sentence from Chapter L, paragraph 3? “Mrs. Bennet had no turn for economy, and her husband’s love of _____ had alone prevented their exceeding their income.”

    A. perfectly

    B. independence

    C. sentiment

    D. encourage

    Key: B (independence)

31. [mc · recall · DOK 1 · AP: AP-LIT.FIG] Which word completes this sentence from Chapter L, paragraph 6? “It was borne in the latter with decent _____.”

    A. philosophy

    B. independence

    C. protested

    D. successively

    Key: A (philosophy)

32. [short · analysis · DOK 3 · AP: AP-LIT.FIG] Analyze how the word choice in this passage from Chapter L, paragraph 5 shapes its tone: “That it would be done with such trifling exertion on his side, too, was another very welcome surprise; for his chief wish at present was to have as little trouble in the business as possible.” Pick two words and explain their effect.

    Sample answer: The words “exertion” and “surprise” (Chapter L, paragraph 5) make the tone heavy and deliberate rather than neutral. That weight points the reader to pride and self-knowledge: the cost of Mr. Bennet's carelessness becomes concrete. The author chooses them so the moment feels significant instead of passing.

33. [short · synthesis · DOK 4 · AP: AP-LIT.LAN] Connect this passage from Chapter L, paragraph 9 to the story's treatment of marriage and money: “Into one house in this neighbourhood, they shall never have admittance.” Use one other moment from the story as well.
    Sample answer: This passage (Chapter L, paragraph 9) develops marriage and money: the cost of Mr. Bennet's carelessness becomes concrete. Its words “neighbourhood” and “admittance” carry that idea into this moment. The same concern returns in “A long dispute followed this declaration; but Mr. Bennet was firm: it soon led to another; and Mrs. Bennet found, with…” (Chapter L, paragraph 10), so the two passages read as a pattern, not a single moment. Together they show the story treating marriage and money as central.
34. [fill · recall · DOK 1 · AP: AP-LIT.FIG] Complete the quotation from Chapter L, paragraph 1: “Had he done his duty in that respect, Lydia need not have been indebted to her uncle, for whatever of honour or credit could now be _____ for her.” Word bank: sentiment, protested, purchased, drawing
    Key: purchased
35. [mc · recall · DOK 1 · AP: AP-LIT.FIG] In the line “Wickham’s intention to go into the regulars; and, among his former friends, there are still some who are able and willing to assist him in the army.”, what does “regulars” most nearly mean?
    A. spills over
    B. the regular (professional) army
    C. uninterrupted in time and indefinitely long continuing
    D. pacify; calm

    Key: B (the regular (professional) army)
36. [short · analysis · DOK 3 · AP: AP-LIT.LAN] Claim: Elizabeth recognizes her love for Darcy just when circumstances seem to forbid it. Explain how this evidence supports the claim: “She was convinced that she could have been happy with him; when it was no longer likely they should meet” (Chapter L, paragraph 13).
    Sample answer: She "was convinced that she could have been happy with him; when it was no longer likely they should meet"; the semicolon holds realization and loss together. The evidence is “She was convinced that she could have been happy with him; when it was no longer likely they should meet” (Chapter L, paragraph 13) — Elizabeth's realization comes too late. This develops marriage and money: the cost of Mr. Bennet's carelessness becomes concrete.
37. [short · synthesis · DOK 4 · AP: AP-LIT.LAN] Connect this passage from Chapter L, paragraph 19 to the story's treatment of women's limited choices: “And I think you will agree with me, in considering a removal from that corps as highly advisable, both on his account and my niece’s.” Use one other moment from the story as well.
    Sample answer: This passage (Chapter L, paragraph 19) develops women's limited choices: the cost of Mr. Bennet's carelessness becomes concrete. Its words “considering” and “advisable” carry that idea into this moment. The same concern returns in “It is an advantage to have it so far from this part of the kingdom.” (Chapter L, paragraph 19), so the two passages read as a pattern, not a single moment. Together they show the story treating women's limited choices as central.
38. [short · synthesis · DOK 4 · AP: AP-LIT.LAN] Connect this passage from Chapter L, paragraph 7 to the story's treatment of women's limited choices: “It was a fortnight since Mrs. Bennet had been downstairs, but on this happy day, she again took her seat at the head of her table, and in spirits oppressively high.” Use one other moment from the story as well.
    Sample answer: This passage (Chapter L, paragraph 7) develops women's limited choices: the cost of Mr. Bennet's carelessness becomes concrete. Its words “oppressively” and “downstairs” carry that idea into this moment. The same concern returns in “She was busily searching through the neighbourhood for a proper situation for her daughter, and, without knowing or…" (Chapter L, paragraph 7), so the two passages read as a pattern, not a single moment. Together they show the story treating women's limited choices as central.

39. [mc · inference · DOK 2 · AP: AP-LIT.LAN] What does this passage most clearly show? "She was convinced that she could have been happy with him; when it was no longer likely they should meet" (Chapter L, paragraph 13)

    A. Elizabeth's realization comes too late.

    B. Comic speed: marriage as a choice among interchangeable daughters.

    C. Ironic "pitiable": she suffers only for herself.

    D. Mrs. Bennet swears off Bingley moments before her husband reveals he has already visited him.

    Key: A (Elizabeth's realization comes too late.)

40. [mc · analysis · DOK 3 · AP: AP-LIT.NAR] Which literary element does this describe in "Chapter L"? The narrator describes the ideal marriage Elizabeth imagines, in the past conditional: what 'could' have been.

    A. Irony

    B. Symbolism

    C. Setting

    D. Alliteration

    Key: A (Irony)

41. [fill · recall · DOK 1 · Dual Credit (Indiana College Core): ICC-WC-1.5] Complete the quotation from Chapter L, paragraph 9: "Her husband allowed her to talk on without _____, while the servants remained." Word bank: interruption, philosophy, protested, transports

    Key: interruption

42. [mc · inference · DOK 2 · Dual Credit (Indiana College Core): ICC-WC-1.5] What does this passage most clearly show? "But no such happy marriage could now teach the admiring multitude what connubial felicity really was" (Chapter L, paragraph 16)

    A. Jane admits her error.

    B. Elizabeth admits her wounded pride; self-revealing.

    C. Lydia treats the elopement as a joke at her friend's expense.

    D. The narrator's gently ironic picture of the lost ideal.

    Key: D (The narrator's gently ironic picture of the lost ideal.)

43. [short · inference · DOK 2 · Dual Credit (Indiana College Core): ICC-WC-1.5] What can you infer from this line? "instead of spending his whole income, he had laid by an annual sum, for the better provision of his children" (Chapter L, paragraph 1) Answer in two or three sentences with one detail.

    Sample answer: Mr. Bennet's regret. The evidence is "instead of spending his whole income, he had laid by an annual sum, for the better provision of his children" (Chapter L, paragraph 1).

44. [short · synthesis · DOK 4 · Dual Credit (Indiana College Core): ICC-WC-1.5] Evaluate this claim about the chapter: "Elizabeth recognizes her love for Darcy just when circumstances seem to forbid it." Is it fully persuasive? Argue with evidence, including a passage that complicates it.

    Sample answer: The claim is persuasive in part. "She was convinced that she could have been happy with him; when it was no longer likely they should meet" (Chapter L, paragraph 13) supports it: She "was convinced that she could have been happy with him; when it was no longer likely they should meet"; the semicolon holds realization and loss together. But "But no such happy marriage could now teach the admiring multitude what connubial felicity really was" (Chapter L, paragraph 16) complicates it: The narrator's gently ironic picture of the lost ideal, and its "But" marks a limit or reversal the claim passes over. The claim is therefore a strong reading, not a complete one, and a careful answer says where it stops applying.

Rigor version	Items (in order)	Mix
Scaffolded support	1, 2, 3, 4, 5, 6, 7, 8, 9, 10, 11, 12, 13, 14, 15, 16	recall 11, inference 2, analysis 2, synthesis 1
HS Freshman	17, 2, 1, 3, 18, 7, 5, 11, 13, 19, 12, 20, 21, 22, 23, 24	recall 8, inference 4, analysis 3, synthesis 1
HS Sophomore	3, 17, 25, 2, 26, 4, 9, 27, 19, 20, 13, 14, 15, 28, 29, 24	recall 8, inference 3, analysis 3, synthesis 2
HS Junior	30, 31, 3, 8, 25, 11, 13, 20, 12, 19, 21, 14, 32, 28, 24, 33	recall 6, inference 4, analysis 4, synthesis 2
HS Senior	2, 34, 26, 25, 30, 35, 13, 19, 20, 14, 32, 22, 36, 37, 33, 38	recall 6, inference 3, analysis 4, synthesis 3
AP	34, 11, 4, 20, 39, 13, 19, 22, 40, 23, 15, 28, 29, 37, 38, 33	recall 3, inference 4, analysis 5, synthesis 4
College Freshman	8, 7, 41, 42, 20, 43, 19, 22, 14, 32, 15, 28, 33, 16, 44, 24	recall 3, inference 4, analysis 5, synthesis 4
College Sophomore	8, 1, 11, 39, 13, 19, 32, 28, 23, 40, 21, 16, 37, 33, 44, 24	recall 3, inference 3, analysis 5, synthesis 5
College Junior	8, 41, 13, 39, 19, 22, 40, 32, 15, 28, 44, 16, 37, 33, 24, 38	recall 2, inference 3, analysis 5, synthesis 6
College Senior	7, 8, 11, 13, 32, 23, 36, 40, 14, 22, 38, 16, 33, 24, 44, 37	recall 3, inference 1, analysis 6, synthesis 6
Graduate / PhD	8, 11, 13, 22, 28, 15, 40, 14, 21, 32, 33, 44, 37, 38, 24, 16	recall 2, inference 1, analysis 7, synthesis 6

Writing prompts (eleven rigor levels)

Scaffolded support (250 words; AP: see unit standards): Supported track (work from the passage your teacher selects). In "Chapter L," how does Austen show too late? Write a paragraph that states your claim, quotes two details from the passage, and explains how each detail supports your idea. Use the characterization you noticed as one piece of evidence.

HS Freshman (350 words; AP: see unit standards): In Chapter L, how does Austen develop the idea of too late? State a clear claim, support it with two or three quotations, and explain how the characterization in the chapter helps build that idea.

HS Sophomore (450 words; AP: see unit standards): Analyze how Chapter L develops the idea of too late. Make a precise claim, support it with at least three pieces of textual evidence, and explain how the author's use of characterization and theme shapes that idea. Address one possible counterclaim.

HS Junior (550 words; AP: see unit standards): Analyze how the structure of Chapter L (where it begins, turns and ends) and its characterization shape the reader's understanding of too late. Identify one place where the text leaves matters uncertain and explain how that uncertainty adds to its meaning.

HS Senior (600 words; AP: see unit standards): Two readers disagree about what Chapter L suggests about too late. Lay out two plausible interpretations, weigh the evidence for each (including the chapter's characterization and theme), and argue for the stronger one in a sustained, well-organized essay.

AP (650 words; AP: AP-LIT.CHR, AP-LIT.LAN): Write a literary argument in which you analyze how Jane Austen uses characterization in Chapter L to complicate the reader's understanding of too late. Develop a defensible thesis, select evidence purposefully, and explain how specific choices of diction and syntax create meaning.

College Freshman (1000 words; AP: see unit standards): Situate Chapter L within its historical and literary context and argue how the chapter's treatment of too late responds to that context. Engage with at least one secondary perspective (a critic, historian or the author's own statements), integrate quotations smoothly, and cite in MLA style.

College Sophomore (1250 words; AP: see unit standards): Read Chapter L alongside the conventions of its genre and period. Argue how the chapter's handling of too late follows or bends those conventions, using the characterization as evidence, and test your reading against one published critic. Document two secondary sources in MLA.

College Junior (1500 words; AP: see unit standards): Apply a named critical approach (for example formalist, historicist, feminist, psychoanalytic or ecocritical) to Chapter L and its treatment of too late. State your method, show what it reveals in the chapter's characterization and theme, and identify where the text resists it.

College Senior (2000 words; AP: see unit standards): Develop a research argument that reads Chapter L as evidence for a larger claim about too late in Pride and Prejudice. Connect close reading of the chapter to the whole novel, engage at least four scholarly sources, and state precisely where your reading departs from theirs (Chicago style).

Graduate / PhD (2500 words; AP: see unit standards): Develop an original argument that reads Chapter L as a hinge in the novel's larger treatment of too late. Position your reading within a named critical conversation (for example formalist, historicist, psychoanalytic, feminist or postcolonial approaches), account for the textual history where relevant, and articulate the stakes of your intervention for scholarship on Pride and Prejudice.

SAT-style questions

1. And will you give yourself the trouble of carrying similar assurances to his creditors in Meryton, of whom I shall subjoin a list, according to his information.

   As used in the text, what does the word “subjoin” most nearly mean?

   A. be greater in scope or size than some standard

   B. kept away from other people

   C. look down on with disdain

   D. add to the end

2. The good news quickly spread through the house; and with proportionate speed through the neighbourhood. It was borne in the latter with decent philosophy. To be sure it would have been more for the advantage of conversation, had Miss Lydia Bennet come upon the town; or, as the happiest alternative, been secluded from the world, in some distant farm house. But there was much to be talked of, in marrying her; and the good-natured wishes for her well-doing, which had proceeded before, from all the spiteful old ladies in Meryton, lost but little of their spirit in this change of circumstances, because with such a husband, her misery was considered certain.

Which choice best states a central concern of "Chapter L"?

A. Scandal

B. First impressions at the ball

C. An imperious hostess

D. Too late

SAT key: 1. D (add to the end); 2. D (Too late)

Lesson 52: Chapter LI

Focus: shameless return

Objective: Students will analyze how characterization develops in "Chapter LI" by writing a claim-evidence-reasoning paragraph that cites at least 2 quotations from the section, and will score at least 80% on the section quiz.

Standards: AP: see the unit standards

Content note (exploitation of a minor): Lydia, now married at 16, boasts about it; avoid mocking her and discuss how she was failed by adults.
Student preview: Lydia returns married and proud of it.
Suggested language: "Why might Lydia not see her situation clearly?"

Teacher only · spoilers

Lydia and Wickham visit Longbourn, unashamed. Lydia boasts of being married and lets slip that Darcy attended her wedding.

Background: A married woman outranked her unmarried sisters socially, which Lydia flaunts.

Significance: The slip reveals Darcy's secret role.

Lesson plan and lecture script (90 minutes)

0–8 min · Bell-ringer · You do (8 min)
Students write to the bell-ringer, then pair-share.
What does Lydia's boasting show about her values? Write for five minutes. Starters: I think... because... / This connects to family and reputation because.... Content note before we start: Lydia returns married and proud of it.
Prompt: What does Lydia's boasting show about her values?
Sentence starters: I think… because… · This connects to family and reputation because…
Strong response: A strong response takes a position and anticipates this: Lydia's shamelessness is complete.

8–18 min · Vocabulary with etymology notes · I do (10 min)
Five key words in context, with verified word histories.
Today's words: stratagems — tricks or schemes; austerity — sternness; severity; breakfasted — ate breakfast; fearless — oblivious of dangers or perils or calmly resolute in facing them; impudent — marked by casual disrespect.
"stratagems": Origin of "stratagem": Old French strategeme; earlier Latin strategema. "impudent": Origin: Latin impudēns ("shameless").
Words: stratagems: tricks or schemes · austerity: sternness; severity · breakfasted: ate breakfast · fearless: oblivious of dangers or perils or calmly resolute in facing them · impudent: marked by casual disrespect

18–28 min · Background and context · I do (10 min)
Mini-lecture (read or adapt the script).
A married woman outranked her unmarried sisters socially, which Lydia flaunts. The slip reveals Darcy's secret role. Characterization: Lydia returns married and unashamed, boasting of her ring and of precedence over her sisters. Characterization: She lets slip that Darcy was at her wedding, a secret she was told to keep. Watch for silence and reserve: What characters leave unsaid (Darcy's reserve, Jane's composure, Elizabeth's secrets) drives misunderstanding. In this chapter: "carriage drove up to the door; her husband looked impenetrably grave; her daughters, alarmed, anxious, uneasy" (Chapter LI, paragraph 2).

28–40 min · I do: modeled close reading · I do (12 min)
Model the close reading of the anchor quotation using the written think-aloud below.
First, meaning. I read "Lydia was Lydia still; untamed, unabashed, wild, noisy, and fearless" slowly and put it in my own words: The narrator says that Lydia was Lydia still: untamed, unabashed, wild, noisy and fearless. Next, craft. I notice the list of five adjectives, like a pile of faults with no hint of shame. The strongest word is "unabashed": it means unembarrassed, which sums up her behavior. Then, effect. How has Lydia changed after her marriage? My answer: Lydia has learned nothing; her pride in being married first shows that marriage has not reformed her.

> Lydia was Lydia still; untamed, unabashed, wild, noisy, and fearless (Chapter LI, paragraph 4)

Think-aloud: First, meaning. I read "Lydia was Lydia still; untamed, unabashed, wild, noisy, and fearless" slowly and put it in my own words: The narrator says that Lydia was Lydia still: untamed, unabashed, wild, noisy and fearless. Next, craft. I notice the list of five adjectives, like a pile of faults with no hint of shame. The strongest word is "unabashed": it means unembarrassed, which sums up her behavior. Then, effect. How has Lydia changed after her marriage? My answer: Lydia has learned nothing; her pride in being married first shows that marriage has not reformed her.

40–55 min · We do: guided annotation · We do (15 min)
Guided analysis of a second quotation; expected answers given.
Ask: What words in this line stand out, and what do they suggest? Expected: Her vanity in the title. Look at the craft: She lets slip that Darcy was at her wedding, a secret she was told to keep. Ask: How does this line connect to family and reputation? Expected: Lydia's shamelessness is complete. (Her vanity in the title.)

> to hear herself called "Mrs. Wickham," by each of them (Chapter LI, paragraph 10)

Ask: What words in this line stand out, and what do they suggest?
Expected answer: Her vanity in the title. Look at the craft: She lets slip that Darcy was at her wedding, a secret she was told to keep.
Ask: How does this line connect to family and reputation?
Expected answer: Lydia's shamelessness is complete. (Her vanity in the title.)

55–70 min · You do: independent annotation · You do (15 min)
Independent annotation and a claim-evidence-reasoning paragraph (exemplar given).
Annotate the chapter for characterization, characterization (three marks with a margin note each), then write one claim-evidence-reasoning paragraph: what does this chapter suggest about shameless return? Then start your writing prompt at your assigned level (HS Sophomore: Analyze how Chapter LI develops the idea of shameless return. Make a precise claim, support it with at least three pieces of textual evidence, and explain how the author's use of characterization and irony shapes that idea. Address one possible counterclaim.) Exemplar: Lydia's return shows that the crisis has taught her nothing. When the text says "Lydia was Lydia still; untamed, unabashed, wild, noisy, and fearless" (Chapter LI, paragraph 4), it shows this directly. "Lydia was Lydia still; untamed, unabashed, wild, noisy, and fearless," and she longs to hear herself called "Mrs. Wickham," prizing the title over the man.
Task: Annotate the chapter for characterization, characterization (three marks with a margin note each), then write one claim-evidence-reasoning paragraph: what does this chapter suggest about shameless return? Then start your writing prompt at your assigned level (HS Sophomore: Analyze how Chapter LI develops the idea of shameless return. Make a precise claim, support it with at least three pieces of textual evidence, and explain how the author's use of characterization and irony shapes that idea. Address one possible counterclaim.)
Exemplar: Lydia's return shows that the crisis has taught her nothing. When the text says "Lydia was Lydia still; untamed, unabashed, wild, noisy, and fearless" (Chapter LI, paragraph 4), it shows this directly. "Lydia was Lydia still; untamed, unabashed, wild, noisy, and fearless," and she longs to hear herself called "Mrs. Wickham," prizing the title over the man.

70–80 min · Discussion · We do (10 min)
Structured discussion from the 30 tiered questions, with facilitation notes.
Anchor question: What does Lydia's boasting show about her values? Ask: what, if anything, has the family learned?
Anchor question: What does Lydia's boasting show about her values?
Facilitation: Ask: what, if anything, has the family learned?

80–87 min · Exit ticket / chapter quiz · You do (7 min)
Chapter quiz in the app and an exit ticket (answer given).
Chapter quiz in the app, then: In one sentence, what does this chapter suggest about shameless return? Support it with one short quotation. Model answer: Lydia's return shows that the crisis has taught her nothing. ("Lydia was Lydia still; untamed, unabashed, wild, noisy, and fearless", Chapter LI, paragraph 4). Accept any defensible claim backed by a quotation from the chapter; the answer key for the quiz is in the Quiz section.
Exit ticket: In one sentence, what does this chapter suggest about shameless return? Support it with one short quotation.
Answer: Model answer: Lydia's return shows that the crisis has taught her nothing. ("Lydia was Lydia still; untamed, unabashed, wild, noisy, and fearless", Chapter LI, paragraph 4). Accept any defensible claim backed by a quotation from the chapter; the answer key for the quiz is in the Quiz section.

87–90 min · Closure · I do (3 min)
Summarize the lesson and preview the next reading.
Today we saw how characterization shapes shameless return. Key takeaway: Lydia's shamelessness is complete.

Total: 90 minutes.

Teacher analysis (spoilers)

Literary elements

- Characterization: Lydia returns married and unashamed, boasting of her ring and of precedence over her sisters.
- Characterization: She lets slip that Darcy was at her wedding, a secret she was told to keep.

Themes and how they develop

- family and reputation: Lydia's shamelessness is complete.

Symbols and motifs

- silence and reserve: What characters leave unsaid (Darcy's reserve, Jane's composure, Elizabeth's secrets) drives misunderstanding. In this chapter: “carriage drove up to the door; her husband looked impenetrably grave; her daughters, alarmed, anxious, uneasy” (Chapter LI, paragraph 2).
- letters: Letters carry news, reveal character and change minds; Darcy's letter is the turning point of the novel. In this chapter: “bear such suspense; and hastily seizing a sheet of paper, wrote a short letter to her aunt, to request an explanation of” (Chapter LI, paragraph 32).

Key quotations (checked against the reading text)

- “Lydia was Lydia still; untamed, unabashed, wild, noisy, and fearless” (Chapter LI, paragraph 4) The narrator's list of five adjectives.
- “to hear herself called “Mrs. Wickham,” by each of them” (Chapter LI, paragraph 10) Her vanity in the title.
- “Pray write instantly, and let me understand it” (Chapter LI, paragraph 33) Elizabeth's letter to Mrs. Gardiner asking why Darcy was there.

Model claim-evidence-reasoning

Claim: Lydia's return shows that the crisis has taught her nothing.
Evidence: “Lydia was Lydia still; untamed, unabashed, wild, noisy, and fearless” (Chapter LI, paragraph 4)
Reasoning: "Lydia was Lydia still; untamed, unabashed, wild, noisy, and fearless," and she longs to hear herself called "Mrs. Wickham," prizing the title over the man.

Vocabulary with etymology notes

Word	Definition (in this sentence)	In context	Word history
stratagems (noun)	tricks or schemes	“Not that I shall though,” she added to herself, as she finished the letter; “and my dear aunt, if you do not tell me in an honourable manner, I shall certainly be reduced to tricks and stratagems to find it out.”	“stratagems”: Origin of “stratagem”: Old French stratageme; earlier Latin strategema. (Liber et Libri origin note, https://en.wiktionary.org/wiki/stratagem#Etymology)

austerity (noun)	sternness; severity	His countenance rather gained in austerity; and he scarcely opened his lips.
breakfasted (verb)	ate breakfast	"Well, and so we breakfasted at ten as usual; I thought it would never be over; for, by the by, you are to understand, that my uncle and aunt were horrid unpleasant all the time I was with them.
fearless (adjective)	oblivious of dangers or perils or calmly resolute in facing them	Lydia was Lydia still; untamed, unabashed, wild, noisy, and fearless.
impudent (adjective)	marked by casual disrespect	Elizabeth had not before believed him quite equal to such assurance; but she sat down, resolving within herself, to draw no limits in future to the impudence of an impudent man.	"impudent": Origin: Latin impudēns ("shameless"). (Liber et Libri origin note, https://en.wiktionary.org/wiki/impudent#Etymology)

Discussion questions

1. What does Lydia's boasting show about her values?
2. Where does characterization appear in this chapter, and what effect does it have? Point to one passage.
3. How does this chapter connect to the book's larger concern with first impressions and prejudice?

Classroom discussion questions (30, tiered)

Wait time after every question (3 s for DOK 1, 5 s for DOK 2, 8 to 10 s for DOK 3 and 4); think-pair-share on DOK 3 and 4; answer each response with a follow-up probe; close with student-generated questions. Focus sets by rigor level: Scaffolded support: 1, 2, 3, 4, 5, 6, 11, 12, 13, 14, 21, 22; HS Freshman: 1, 2, 3, 4, 5, 12, 13, 14, 15, 22, 23, 24; HS Sophomore: 1, 2, 3, 4, 13, 14, 15, 16, 17, 23, 24, 25; HS Junior: 1, 2, 3, 14, 15, 16, 17, 18, 24, 25, 26, 27; HS Senior: 1, 2, 3, 15, 16, 17, 18, 25, 26, 27, 28, 29; AP: 1, 2, 16, 17, 18, 19, 20, 26, 27, 28, 29, 30; College Freshman: 1, 2, 17, 18, 19, 20, 21, 22, 27, 28, 29, 30; College Sophomore: 1, 2, 11, 18, 19, 20, 21, 22, 23, 28, 29, 30; College Junior: 1, 11, 12, 19, 20, 21, 22, 23, 24, 25, 29, 30; College Senior: 1, 11, 12, 13, 20, 21, 22, 23, 24, 25, 26, 30; Graduate / PhD: 1, 11, 12, 13, 21, 22, 23, 24, 25, 26, 27, 28

Literal / recall

1. How do Lydia and Wickham behave on their visit to Longbourn? [DOK 1 · coldCallWithSupport · wait 3 s · AP: unit standards] Look for: Unashamed
2. What does Lydia boast about? [DOK 1 · turnAndTalk · wait 3 s · AP: unit standards] Look for: Being married first
3. Who does Lydia say attended her wedding? [DOK 1 · coldCallWithSupport · wait 3 s · AP: unit standards] Look for: Darcy
4. What social privilege does Lydia flaunt? [DOK 1 · turnAndTalk · wait 3 s · AP: unit standards] Look for: Precedence as a married woman
5. How does Elizabeth respond to the slip? [DOK 1 · coldCallWithSupport · wait 3 s · AP: unit standards] Look for: She writes to Mrs. Gardiner

6. Retell the three most important events of “Chapter LI” in order, in one sentence each. [DOK 1 · turnAndTalk · wait 3 s · AP: unit standards] Look for: Lydia and Wickham visit Longbourn, unashamed. Lydia boasts of being married and lets slip that Darcy attended her wedding.
7. Which characters appear or are mentioned in “Chapter LI”? Name two and one thing each says or does. [DOK 1 · coldCallWithSupport · wait 3 s · AP: unit standards] Look for: Names and actions taken from the chapter; check against the teacher summary.
8. Where and when does “Chapter LI” take place? Point to the line that tells you. [DOK 1 · turnAndTalk · wait 3 s · AP: unit standards] Look for: A place/time detail quoted from the chapter.
9. Reread: ““Not that I shall though,” she added to herself, as she finished the letter; “and my dear aunt, if you do not tell me in an honourable manner, I shall certainly be reduced to tricks and stratagems to find it out.”” What does “stratagems” mean here, and what is literally happening in this line? [DOK 1 · turnAndTalk · wait 3 s · AP: unit standards] Look for: stratagems: tricks or schemes.
10. Reread: “His countenance rather gained in austerity; and he scarcely opened his lips.” What does “austerity” mean here, and what is literally happening in this line? [DOK 1 · turnAndTalk · wait 3 s · AP: unit standards] Look for: austerity: sternness; severity.

Inferential / analytical

1. What does “Chapter LI” suggest about shameless return? State the inference and the line that supports it. [DOK 2 · thinkPairShare · wait 5 s · AP-LIT.LAN] Look for: The slip reveals Darcy's secret role.
2. Find one example of characterization in this chapter. What does it reveal that a plain statement would not? [DOK 2 · followUp · wait 5 s · AP-LIT.CHR] Look for: Look for what characters say, do and think, and how others react to them.
3. How does the irony in this chapter shape what we understand about shameless return? [DOK 3 · thinkPairShare · wait 8 s · AP-LIT.NAR] Look for: Look for gaps between what characters expect or say and what is true.
   Answer guidance: A defensible line of argument: Lydia's return shows that the crisis has taught her nothing. Useful evidence: “Lydia was Lydia still; untamed, unabashed, wild, noisy, and fearless” (Chapter LI, paragraph 4): The narrator's list of five adjectives. Theme link: Lydia's shamelessness is complete. Credit any position that is supported by quotation and reasoning; push one-sided answers to address the strongest counterpoint.
4. In the passage that begins “Their reception from Mr.”, why might Austen have chosen these particular words? Pick two and explain their connotations. [DOK 2 · followUp · wait 5 s · AP-LIT.FIG] Look for: Diction analysis of two words in the anchor passage.
5. What causes the main turn in “Chapter LI”, and what effect is it likely to have on what follows? [DOK 2 · followUp · wait 5 s · AP-LIT.STR] Look for: Lydia and Wickham visit Longbourn, unashamed. Lydia boasts of being married and lets slip that Darcy attended her wedding.
6. How does “Chapter LI” build on “Chapter L”? Name one link of cause and effect. [DOK 3 · thinkPairShare · wait 8 s · AP-LIT.STR] Look for: A causal or structural link between this and the previous chapter.
   Answer guidance: A defensible line of argument: Lydia's return shows that the crisis has taught her nothing. Useful evidence: “to hear herself called “Mrs. Wickham,” by each of them” (Chapter LI, paragraph 10): Her vanity in the title. Theme link: Lydia's shamelessness is complete. Credit any position that is supported by quotation and reasoning; push one-sided answers to address the strongest counterpoint.

7. What can we infer about a character's motives from what they say and do here, as opposed to what they claim? [DOK 3 · followUp · wait 8 s · AP-LIT.CHR] Look for: An inference about motive supported by a quoted line.
   Answer guidance: A defensible line of argument: Lydia's return shows that the crisis has taught her nothing. Useful evidence: “Pray write instantly, and let me understand it” (Chapter LI, paragraph 33): Elizabeth's letter to Mrs. Gardiner asking why Darcy was there. On characterization: She lets slip that Darcy was at her wedding, a secret she was told to keep. Credit any position that is supported by quotation and reasoning; push one-sided answers to address the strongest counterpoint.
8. The bell-ringer asked: “What does Lydia's boasting show about her values?” Now that we have read closely, how would you revise your first answer, and which line changed your mind? [DOK 2 · thinkPairShare · wait 5 s · AP-LIT.LAN] Look for: A revised answer anchored in the text.
9. Where does plot appear, and how does it connect this chapter to the larger concern with first impressions and prejudice? [DOK 3 · followUp · wait 8 s · AP-LIT.STR] Look for: Look for key events and the causes linking them.
   Answer guidance: A defensible line of argument: Lydia's return shows that the crisis has taught her nothing. Useful evidence: “Lydia was Lydia still; untamed, unabashed, wild, noisy, and fearless” (Chapter LI, paragraph 4): The narrator's list of five adjectives. Theme link: Lydia's shamelessness is complete. Credit any position that is supported by quotation and reasoning; push one-sided answers to address the strongest counterpoint.
10. Background: A married woman outranked her unmarried sisters socially, which Lydia flaunts. How does knowing this change the way you read one moment in the chapter? [DOK 3 · thinkPairShare · wait 8 s · AP-LIT.SET] Look for: A specific moment reread in light of the context.
    Answer guidance: A defensible line of argument: Lydia's return shows that the crisis has taught her nothing. Useful evidence: “to hear herself called “Mrs. Wickham,” by each of them” (Chapter LI, paragraph 10): Her vanity in the title. Theme link: Lydia's shamelessness is complete. Credit any position that is supported by quotation and reasoning; push one-sided answers to address the strongest counterpoint.

Evaluative / synthesis / creative

1. A critic might argue: “The slip reveals Darcy's secret role.” How far do you agree? Take a stand and defend it with two lines from the chapter. [DOK 3 · fourCorners · wait 8 s · AP-LIT.LAN] Look for: A defended position with evidence and one counterpoint.
   Answer guidance: A defensible line of argument: Lydia's return shows that the crisis has taught her nothing. Useful evidence: “Pray write instantly, and let me understand it” (Chapter LI, paragraph 33): Elizabeth's letter to Mrs. Gardiner asking why Darcy was there. Theme link: Lydia's shamelessness is complete. Credit any position that is supported by quotation and reasoning; push one-sided answers to address the strongest counterpoint.
2. Which character in this chapter acts most wisely, and which least? Judge them by a standard you name. [DOK 3 · thinkPairShare · wait 8 s · AP-LIT.CHR, AP-LIT.LAN] Look for: An evaluation using an explicit criterion and evidence.
   Answer guidance: A defensible line of argument: Lydia's return shows that the crisis has taught her nothing. Useful evidence: “Lydia was Lydia still; untamed, unabashed, wild, noisy, and fearless” (Chapter LI, paragraph 4): The narrator's list of five adjectives. On characterization: She lets slip that Darcy was at her wedding, a secret she was told to keep. Credit any position that is supported by quotation and reasoning; push one-sided answers to address the strongest counterpoint.

3. Rewrite one moment of “Chapter LI” from the point of view of a different character. What does the new angle reveal or hide about shameless return? [DOK 4 · thinkPairShare · wait 8 s · AP-LIT.LAN, AP-LIT.NAR] Look for: A creative product with a rationale tied to the text.

   Answer guidance: A defensible line of argument: Lydia's return shows that the crisis has taught her nothing. Useful evidence: “to hear herself called “Mrs. Wickham,” by each of them” (Chapter LI, paragraph 10): Her vanity in the title. Theme link: Lydia's shamelessness is complete. Credit any position that is supported by quotation and reasoning; push one-sided answers to address the strongest counterpoint.

4. Write three questions of your own about “Chapter LI”: one recall, one “why/how”, and one “should/what if”. Trade with a partner and answer theirs. [DOK 3 · studentGenerated · wait 8 s · AP-LIT.LAN] Look for: Student-generated questions at three levels.

   Answer guidance: A defensible line of argument: Lydia's return shows that the crisis has taught her nothing. Useful evidence: “Pray write instantly, and let me understand it” (Chapter LI, paragraph 33): Elizabeth's letter to Mrs. Gardiner asking why Darcy was there. Theme link: Lydia's shamelessness is complete. Credit any position that is supported by quotation and reasoning; push one-sided answers to address the strongest counterpoint.

5. Connect this chapter to pride and self-knowledge: is the link strong or weak so far? What would Austen need to show next to strengthen it? [DOK 4 · socraticCircle · wait 8 s · AP-LIT.LAN] Look for: A judgment of thematic development across the work.

   Answer guidance: A defensible line of argument: Lydia's return shows that the crisis has taught her nothing. Useful evidence: “Lydia was Lydia still; untamed, unabashed, wild, noisy, and fearless” (Chapter LI, paragraph 4): The narrator's list of five adjectives. Theme link: Lydia's shamelessness is complete. Credit any position that is supported by quotation and reasoning; push one-sided answers to address the strongest counterpoint.

6. Is the characterization in this chapter effective, or does it feel heavy-handed? Evaluate it as a reader would in a review. [DOK 3 · fourCorners · wait 8 s · AP-LIT.CHR, AP-LIT.LAN] Look for: An evaluative judgment with criteria and evidence.

   Answer guidance: A defensible line of argument: Lydia's return shows that the crisis has taught her nothing. Useful evidence: “to hear herself called “Mrs. Wickham,” by each of them” (Chapter LI, paragraph 10): Her vanity in the title. On characterization: She lets slip that Darcy was at her wedding, a secret she was told to keep. Credit any position that is supported by quotation and reasoning; push one-sided answers to address the strongest counterpoint.

7. Compare how “Chapter LI” treats shameless return with how another text, film or event you know treats a similar idea. What does Pride and Prejudice see that the other misses? [DOK 4 · socraticCircle · wait 8 s · AP-LIT.LAN] Look for: A cross-text synthesis.

   Answer guidance: A defensible line of argument: Lydia's return shows that the crisis has taught her nothing. Useful evidence: “Pray write instantly, and let me understand it” (Chapter LI, paragraph 33): Elizabeth's letter to Mrs. Gardiner asking why Darcy was there. Theme link: Lydia's shamelessness is complete. Credit any position that is supported by quotation and reasoning; push one-sided answers to address the strongest counterpoint.

8. Predict what “Chapter LII” will bring, using two clues from this chapter. After reading, evaluate your prediction. [DOK 3 · thinkPairShare · wait 8 s · AP-LIT.LAN, AP-LIT.STR] Look for: A prediction or judgment justified with textual clues.

   Answer guidance: A defensible line of argument: Lydia's return shows that the crisis has taught her nothing. Useful evidence: “Lydia was Lydia still; untamed, unabashed, wild, noisy, and fearless” (Chapter LI, paragraph 4): The narrator's list of five adjectives. Theme link: Lydia's shamelessness is complete. Credit any position that is supported by quotation and reasoning; push one-sided answers to address the strongest counterpoint.

9. Design a one-paragraph modern adaptation of this chapter (setting, characters, conflict). What must stay the same for it to still be about shameless return? [DOK 4 · thinkPairShare · wait 8 s · AP-LIT.LAN] Look for: A creative transfer that keeps the core idea.

   Answer guidance: A defensible line of argument: Lydia's return shows that the crisis has taught her nothing. Useful evidence: “to hear herself called “Mrs. Wickham,” by each of them” (Chapter LI, paragraph 10): Her vanity in the title. Theme link: Lydia's shamelessness is complete. Credit any position that is supported by quotation and reasoning; push one-sided answers to address the strongest counterpoint.

10. What question would you most like to ask Jane Austen about this chapter, and what answer do you think the text itself gives? [DOK 4 · studentGenerated · wait 8 s · AP-LIT.LAN] Look for: A student-generated question answered from evidence.

    Answer guidance: A defensible line of argument: Lydia's return shows that the crisis has taught her nothing. Useful evidence: “Pray write instantly, and let me understand it” (Chapter LI, paragraph 33): Elizabeth's letter to Mrs. Gardiner asking why Darcy was there. Theme link: Lydia's shamelessness is complete. Credit any position that is supported by quotation and reasoning; push one-sided answers to address the strongest counterpoint.

Annotation focus

- Characterization: look for what characters say, do and think, and how others react to them (anchor passage in the We do segment)
- Also notice Irony: gaps between what characters expect or say and what is true
- Also notice Plot: key events and the causes linking them

Chapter quiz: item bank (all eleven rigor versions)

1. [mc · recall · DOK 1] In the line “His countenance rather gained in austerity; and he scarcely opened his lips.”, what does “austerity” most nearly mean?

   A. sternness; severity

   B. approved; given permission

   C. bad handling or management

   D. react verbally

   Key: A (sternness; severity)

2. [mc · recall · DOK 1] In the line “Not that I shall though,’ she added to herself, as she finished the letter; ‘and my dear aunt, if you do not tell me in an honourable manner, I shall certainly be reduced to tricks and stratagems to find it out.”, what does “stratagems” most nearly mean?

   A. dull; lacking interest

   B. treat badly

   C. be a witness to

   D. tricks or schemes

Key: D (tricks or schemes)

3. [mc · recall · DOK 1] What does Lydia boast about?

   A. Her wealth

   B. Her education

   C. Being married first

   D. Her travel

   Key: C (Being married first)

4. [mc · recall · DOK 1] In the line "Well, and so we breakfasted at ten as usual; I thought it would never be over; for, by the by, you are to understand, that my uncle and aunt were horrid unpleasant all the time I was with them.", what does "breakfasted" most nearly mean?

   A. a card game for four players

   B. a pain in the head

   C. ate breakfast

   D. lavish; very generous (in giving thanks or praise)

   Key: C (ate breakfast)

5. [mc · recall · DOK 1] How does Elizabeth respond to the slip?

   A. She writes to Mrs. Gardiner

   B. She confronts Wickham

   C. She tells her mother

   D. She ignores it

   Key: A (She writes to Mrs. Gardiner)

6. [mc · recall · DOK 1] How do Lydia and Wickham behave on their visit to Longbourn?

   A. Repentant

   B. Unashamed

   C. Silent

   D. Tearful

   Key: B (Unashamed)

7. [fill · recall · DOK 1] Fill in the blank with the vocabulary word that fits: "Elizabeth had not before believed him quite equal to such assurance; but she sat down, resolving within herself, to draw no limits in future to the impudence of an _____ man." Word bank: impudent, breakfasted, austerity, stratagems

   Key: impudent

8. [fill · recall · DOK 1] Complete the quotation from Chapter LI, paragraph 4: "Lydia was Lydia still; untamed, _____, wild, noisy, and fearless"

   Key: unabashed

9. [mc · recall · DOK 1] What social privilege does Lydia flaunt?

   A. Owning land

   B. A title

   C. Precedence as a married woman

   D. A carriage

   Key: C (Precedence as a married woman)

10. [fill · recall · DOK 1] Complete the quotation from Chapter LI, paragraph 10: “to hear _____ called ‘Mrs. Wickham,’ by each of them”

    Key: herself

11. [mc · recall · DOK 1] Who does Lydia say attended her wedding?

    A. Lady Catherine

    B. Darcy

    C. Collins

    D. Bingley

    Key: B (Darcy)

12. [mc · inference · DOK 2] Which choice best states a central concern of “Chapter LI”?

    A. Farewells at Hunsford

    B. Shameless return

    C. Pompous flattery

    D. The second proposal

    Key: B (Shameless return)

13. [mc · analysis · DOK 3] Which literary element does this describe in “Chapter LI”? Lydia returns married and unashamed, boasting of her ring and of precedence over her sisters.

    A. Alliteration

    B. Symbolism

    C. Characterization

    D. Metaphor

    Key: C (Characterization)

14. [short · analysis · DOK 3] Analyze the word choice in “Pray write instantly, and let me understand it” (Chapter LI, paragraph 33). Pick two words and explain what they suggest.

    Sample answer: Elizabeth's letter to Mrs. Gardiner asking why Darcy was there. The evidence is “Pray write instantly, and let me understand it” (Chapter LI, paragraph 33). This develops family and reputation: Lydia's shamelessness is complete. The words “understand” and “instantly” carry that meaning: they are the charged choices in the line, and changing either would soften the effect.

15. [mc · analysis · DOK 3] Which literary element does this describe in “Chapter LI”? She lets slip that Darcy was at her wedding, a secret she was told to keep.

    A. Setting

    B. Tone / mood

    C. Characterization

    D. Symbolism

    Key: C (Characterization)

16. [short · synthesis · DOK 4] Synthesis: trace how family and reputation develops from Chapter XLVIII to Chapter LI. Use one quotation from each.

    Sample answer: Earlier, in Chapter XLVIII, paragraph 12, the text reads “The death of your daughter would have been a blessing in comparison of this” — Collins's letter: hypocrisy dressed as piety. In Chapter LI, “Lydia was Lydia still; untamed, unabashed, wild, noisy, and fearless" (Chapter LI, paragraph 4), which shows the narrator's list of five adjectives. Lydia's shamelessness is complete.

17. [fill · recall · DOK 1] Complete the quotation from Chapter LI, paragraph 1: "Their sister's wedding day arrived; and Jane and Elizabeth felt for her _____ more than she felt for herself." Word bank: especially, gracious, assurance, probably

    Key: probably

18. [fill · recall · DOK 1] Complete the quotation from Chapter LI, paragraph 6: "The bride and her mother could neither of them talk fast enough; and Wickham, who happened to sit near Elizabeth, began enquiring after his acquaintance in that _____, with a good humoured ease, which she felt very unable to equal in her replies." Word bank: probably, sisters, impenetrably, neighbourhood

    Key: neighbourhood

19. [short · inference · DOK 2] What does this passage from Chapter LI, paragraph 24 reveal about the character or situation? "I longed to know whether he would be married in his blue coat." Answer in two or three sentences with one detail.

    Sample answer: The passage (Chapter LI, paragraph 24) shows the situation turning on first impressions and prejudice: Lydia's shamelessness is complete. The words "whether" and "married" are the proof, because they show how the moment looks to the people in it. They suggest more than the narrator states outright.

20. [short · inference · DOK 2] What does this passage from Chapter LI, paragraph 11 reveal about the character or situation? "I am sure my sisters must all envy me." Answer in two or three sentences with one detail.

    Sample answer: The passage (Chapter LI, paragraph 11) shows the situation turning on first impressions and prejudice: Lydia's shamelessness is complete. The words "sisters" are the proof, because they show how the moment looks to the people in it. They suggest more than the narrator states outright.

21. [mc · inference · DOK 2] Which of these passages comes earliest in Chapter LI?

    A. "Their arrival was dreaded by the elder Miss Bennets; and Jane more especially, who gave Lydia the feelings which would have attended…"

    B. "The carriage was sent to meet them at ———, and they were to return in it, by dinnertime."

    C. "The family were assembled in the breakfast room to receive them."

    D. "Their sister's wedding day arrived; and Jane and Elizabeth felt for her probably more than she felt for herself."

    Key: D ("Their sister's wedding day arrived; and Jane and Elizabeth felt for her probably more than she felt for herself.")

22. [short · analysis · DOK 3] Claim: Lydia's return shows that the crisis has taught her nothing. Explain how this evidence supports the claim: "Lydia was Lydia still; untamed, unabashed, wild, noisy, and fearless" (Chapter LI, paragraph 4).

    Sample answer: "Lydia was Lydia still; untamed, unabashed, wild, noisy, and fearless," and she longs to hear herself called "Mrs. Wickham," prizing the title over the man. The evidence is "Lydia was Lydia still; untamed, unabashed, wild, noisy, and fearless" (Chapter LI, paragraph 4), which shows the narrator's list of five adjectives. This develops family and reputation: Lydia's shamelessness is complete.

23. [short · analysis · DOK 3] Analyze how the word choice in this passage from Chapter LI, paragraph 2 shapes its tone: "The family were assembled in the breakfast room to receive them." Pick two words and explain their effect.

    Sample answer: The words "breakfast" and "assembled" (Chapter LI, paragraph 2) make the tone heavy and deliberate rather than neutral. That weight points the reader to pride and self-knowledge: Lydia's shamelessness is complete. The author chooses them so the moment feels significant instead of passing.

24. [short · synthesis · DOK 4] Connect this passage from Chapter LI, paragraph 24 to the story's treatment of marriage and money: “And it was settled that we should all be there by eleven o’clock.” Use one other moment from the story as well.
    Sample answer: This passage (Chapter LI, paragraph 24) develops marriage and money: Lydia's shamelessness is complete. Its words “settled” and “eleven” carry that idea into this moment. The same concern returns in “Well, Monday morning came, and I was in such a fuss!” (Chapter LI, paragraph 24), so the two passages read as a pattern, not a single moment. Together they show the story treating marriage and money as central.

25. [mc · recall · DOK 1] Which word completes this sentence from Chapter LI, paragraph 3? “Her mother stepped forwards, embraced her, and welcomed her with rapture; gave her hand with an _____ smile to Wickham, who followed his lady, and wished them both joy, with an alacrity which showed no doubt of their happiness.”
    A. should
    B. affectionate
    C. breakfast
    D. husbands
    Key: B (affectionate)

26. [short · inference · DOK 2] What can you infer from this line? “Lydia was Lydia still; untamed, unabashed, wild, noisy, and fearless” (Chapter LI, paragraph 4) Answer in two or three sentences with one detail.
    Sample answer: The narrator's list of five adjectives. The evidence is “Lydia was Lydia still; untamed, unabashed, wild, noisy, and fearless” (Chapter LI, paragraph 4). This develops family and reputation: Lydia's shamelessness is complete.

27. [short · analysis · DOK 3] Analyze how the word choice in this passage from Chapter LI, paragraph 13 shapes its tone: “We shall be at Newcastle all the winter, and I dare say there will be some balls, and I will take care to get good partners for them all.” Pick two words and explain their effect.
    Sample answer: The words “partners” and “winter” (Chapter LI, paragraph 13) make the tone heavy and deliberate rather than neutral. That weight points the reader to class and social mobility: Lydia's shamelessness is complete. The author chooses them so the moment feels significant instead of passing.

28. [short · synthesis · DOK 4] Close reading: how do the diction and syntax of “to hear herself called ‘Mrs. Wickham,’ by each of them” (Chapter LI, paragraph 10) shape its meaning? Consider a second, competing reading.
    Sample answer: Her vanity in the title. The evidence is “to hear herself called ‘Mrs. Wickham,’ by each of them” (Chapter LI, paragraph 10). This develops family and reputation: Lydia's shamelessness is complete. The words “herself” and “called” carry that meaning: they are the charged choices in the line, and changing either would soften the effect. "Lydia was Lydia still; untamed, unabashed, wild, noisy, and fearless," and she longs to hear herself called "Mrs. Wickham," prizing the title over the man.

29. [short · synthesis · DOK 4] Connect this passage from Chapter LI, paragraph 7 to the story's treatment of marriage and money: “Only think of its being three months,’ she cried, ‘since I went away; it seems but a fortnight I declare; and yet there have been things enough happened in the time.” Use one other moment from the story as well.
    Sample answer: This passage (Chapter LI, paragraph 7) develops marriage and money: Lydia's shamelessness is complete. Its words “fortnight” and “happened” carry that idea into this moment. The same concern returns in “She got up, and ran out of the room; and returned no more, till she heard them passing through the hall to the…" (Chapter LI, paragraph 9), so the two passages read as a pattern, not a single moment. Together they show the story treating marriage and money as central.

30. [fill · recall · DOK 1 · AP: AP-LIT.STR] Complete the quotation from Chapter LI, paragraph 33: "Pray write instantly, and let me _____ it"

    Key: understand

31. [short · analysis · DOK 3 · AP: AP-LIT.FIG] Analyze how the word choice in this passage from Chapter LI, paragraph 25 shapes its tone: "But, luckily, he came back again in ten minutes time, and then we all set out." Pick two words and explain their effect.

    Sample answer: The words "luckily" and "minutes" (Chapter LI, paragraph 25) make the tone heavy and deliberate rather than neutral. That weight points the reader to class and social mobility: Lydia's shamelessness is complete. The author chooses them so the moment feels significant instead of passing.

32. [short · analysis · DOK 3 · AP: AP-LIT.FIG] Analyze how the word choice in this passage from Chapter LI, paragraph 18 shapes its tone: "These parties were acceptable to all; to avoid a family circle was even more desirable to such as did think, than such as did not." Pick two words and explain their effect.

    Sample answer: The words "acceptable" and "desirable" (Chapter LI, paragraph 18) make the tone heavy and deliberate rather than neutral. That weight points the reader to pride and self-knowledge: Lydia's shamelessness is complete. The author chooses them so the moment feels significant instead of passing.

33. [mc · inference · DOK 2 · AP: AP-LIT.LAN] What does this passage most clearly show? "to hear herself called 'Mrs. Wickham,' by each of them" (Chapter LI, paragraph 10)

    A. Elizabeth's response to her uncle's promise of help: the family closes ranks.

    B. Elizabeth's frustration in a series of questions.

    C. The narrator steps in to defend a love based on esteem rather than "first sight."

    D. Her vanity in the title.

    Key: D (Her vanity in the title.)

34. [short · synthesis · DOK 4 · AP: AP-LIT.LAN] Connect this passage from Chapter LI, paragraph 4 to the story's treatment of women's limited choices: "Elizabeth was disgusted, and even Miss Bennet was shocked." Use one other moment from the story as well.

    Sample answer: This passage (Chapter LI, paragraph 4) develops women's limited choices: Lydia's shamelessness is complete. Its words "disgusted" and "shocked" carry that idea into this moment. The same concern returns in "She blushed, and Jane blushed; but the cheeks of the two who caused their confusion, suffered no variation of colour." (Chapter LI, paragraph 5), so the two passages read as a pattern, not a single moment. Together they show the story treating women's limited choices as central.

35. [short · inference · DOK 2 · Program outcome: LeL-C2-LIT-1] What can you infer from this line? "to hear herself called 'Mrs. Wickham,' by each of them" (Chapter LI, paragraph 10) Answer in two or three sentences with one detail.

    Sample answer: Her vanity in the title. The evidence is "to hear herself called 'Mrs. Wickham,' by each of them" (Chapter LI, paragraph 10). This develops family and reputation: Lydia's shamelessness is complete.

36. [short · synthesis · DOK 4 · Program outcome: LeL-C2-LIT-1] Connect this passage from Chapter LI, paragraph 22 to the story's treatment of women's limited choices: "Lizzy, I never gave you an account of my wedding, I believe." Use one other moment from the story as well.

    Sample answer: This passage (Chapter LI, paragraph 22) develops women's limited choices: Lydia's shamelessness is complete. Its words "believe" and "wedding" carry that idea into this moment. The same concern returns in "Are not you curious to hear how it was managed?" (Chapter LI, paragraph 22), so the two passages read as a pattern, not a single moment. Together they show the story treating women's limited choices as central.

37. [mc · inference · DOK 2 · Program outcome: LeL-C3-LIT-1] What does this passage most clearly show? "Lydia was Lydia still; untamed, unabashed, wild, noisy, and fearless" (Chapter LI, paragraph 4)

    A. The narrator's list of five adjectives.

    B. The news delivered formally, a social ritual.

    C. Why Mr. Bennet married.

    D. Mrs. Bennet is annoyed that her daughters have come back early, before Jane could gain more time with Bingley.

    Key: A (The narrator's list of five adjectives.)

38. [mc · inference · DOK 2 · Program outcome: LeL-C4-LIT-1] What does this passage most clearly show? "Pray write instantly, and let me understand it" (Chapter LI, paragraph 33)

    A. The narrator shares Mr. Bennet's pleasure in absurdity.

    B. Mr. Bennet's serious warning, drawn from his own marriage.

    C. Wickham, just before giving it.

    D. Elizabeth's letter to Mrs. Gardiner asking why Darcy was there.

    Key: D (Elizabeth's letter to Mrs. Gardiner asking why Darcy was there.)

39. [short · synthesis · DOK 4 · Program outcome: LeL-C4-LIT-1] Close reading: how do the diction and syntax of "Lydia was Lydia still; untamed, unabashed, wild, noisy, and fearless" (Chapter LI, paragraph 4) shape its meaning? Consider a second, competing reading.

    Sample answer: The narrator's list of five adjectives. The evidence is "Lydia was Lydia still; untamed, unabashed, wild, noisy, and fearless" (Chapter LI, paragraph 4). This develops family and reputation: Lydia's shamelessness is complete. The words "unabashed" and "fearless" carry that meaning: they are the charged choices in the line, and changing either would soften the effect. "Lydia was Lydia still; untamed, unabashed, wild, noisy, and fearless," and she longs to hear herself called "Mrs. Wickham," prizing the title over the man.

Rigor version	Items (in order)	Mix
Scaffolded support	1, 2, 3, 4, 5, 6, 7, 8, 9, 10, 11, 12, 13, 14, 15, 16	recall 11, inference 1, analysis 3, synthesis 1
HS Freshman	5, 3, 17, 18, 10, 9, 2, 4, 12, 19, 20, 21, 22, 13, 23, 24	recall 8, inference 4, analysis 3, synthesis 1
HS Sophomore	11, 17, 1, 18, 9, 25, 19, 12, 26, 20, 21, 27, 15, 13, 28, 29	recall 6, inference 5, analysis 3, synthesis 2
HS Junior	11, 30, 7, 18, 9, 26, 19, 20, 12, 21, 31, 15, 23, 32, 29, 24	recall 5, inference 5, analysis 4, synthesis 2
HS Senior	8, 7, 17, 18, 10, 20, 19, 21, 12, 31, 27, 15, 13, 16, 28, 24	recall 5, inference 4, analysis 4, synthesis 3
AP	7, 10, 1, 26, 33, 20, 19, 32, 15, 27, 13, 23, 16, 24, 34, 29	recall 3, inference 4, analysis 5, synthesis 4
College Freshman	7, 8, 1, 21, 20, 19, 12, 32, 27, 13, 14, 31, 29, 28, 16, 34	recall 3, inference 4, analysis 5, synthesis 4
	7, 8, 20, 35, 12, 21, 15, 23, 27, 13, 32, 36, 16, 24, 29, 34

College Sophomore		recall 2, inference 4, analysis 5, synthesis 5
College Junior	7, 10, 12, 37, 35, 15, 27, 32, 13, 31, 23, 16, 34, 29, 36, 24	recall 2, inference 3, analysis 6, synthesis 5
College Senior	7, 10, 38, 21, 32, 31, 27, 23, 13, 15, 39, 36, 24, 34, 16, 29	recall 2, inference 2, analysis 6, synthesis 6
Graduate / PhD	4, 7, 10, 21, 15, 14, 23, 13, 27, 31, 28, 29, 24, 34, 16, 36	recall 3, inference 1, analysis 6, synthesis 6

Writing prompts (eleven rigor levels)

Scaffolded support (250 words; AP: see unit standards): Supported track (work from the passage your teacher selects). In "Chapter LI," how does Austen show shameless return? Write a paragraph that states your claim, quotes two details from the passage, and explains how each detail supports your idea. Use the characterization you noticed as one piece of evidence.

HS Freshman (350 words; AP: see unit standards): In Chapter LI, how does Austen develop the idea of shameless return? State a clear claim, support it with two or three quotations, and explain how the characterization in the chapter helps build that idea.

HS Sophomore (450 words; AP: see unit standards): Analyze how Chapter LI develops the idea of shameless return. Make a precise claim, support it with at least three pieces of textual evidence, and explain how the author's use of characterization and irony shapes that idea. Address one possible counterclaim.

HS Junior (550 words; AP: see unit standards): Analyze how the structure of Chapter LI (where it begins, turns and ends) and its characterization shape the reader's understanding of shameless return. Identify one place where the text leaves matters uncertain and explain how that uncertainty adds to its meaning.

HS Senior (600 words; AP: see unit standards): Two readers disagree about what Chapter LI suggests about shameless return. Lay out two plausible interpretations, weigh the evidence for each (including the chapter's characterization and irony), and argue for the stronger one in a sustained, well-organized essay.

AP (650 words; AP: AP-LIT.CHR, AP-LIT.LAN): Write a literary argument in which you analyze how Jane Austen uses characterization in Chapter LI to complicate the reader's understanding of shameless return. Develop a defensible thesis, select evidence purposefully, and explain how specific choices of diction and syntax create meaning.

College Freshman (1000 words; AP: see unit standards): Situate Chapter LI within its historical and literary context and argue how the chapter's treatment of shameless return responds to that context. Engage with at least one secondary perspective (a critic, historian or the author's own statements), integrate quotations smoothly, and cite in MLA style.

College Sophomore (1250 words; AP: see unit standards): Read Chapter LI alongside the conventions of its genre and period. Argue how the chapter's handling of shameless return follows or bends those conventions, using the characterization as evidence, and test your reading against one published critic. Document two secondary sources in MLA.

College Junior (1500 words; AP: see unit standards): Apply a named critical approach (for example formalist, historicist, feminist, psychoanalytic or ecocritical) to Chapter LI and its treatment of shameless return. State your method, show what it reveals in the chapter's characterization and irony, and identify where the text resists it.

College Senior (2000 words; AP: see unit standards): Develop a research argument that reads Chapter LI as evidence for a larger claim about shameless return in Pride and Prejudice. Connect close reading of the chapter to the whole novel, engage at least four scholarly sources, and state precisely where your reading departs from theirs (Chicago style).

Graduate / PhD (2500 words; AP: see unit standards): Develop an original argument that reads Chapter LI as a hinge in the novel's larger treatment of shameless return. Position your reading within a named critical conversation (for example formalist, historicist, psychoanalytic, feminist or postcolonial approaches), account for the textual history where relevant, and articulate the stakes of your intervention for scholarship on Pride and Prejudice.

SAT-style questions

1. "Not that I shall though," she added to herself, as she finished the letter; "and my dear aunt, if you do not tell me in an honourable manner, I shall certainly be reduced to tricks and stratagems to find it out."

   As used in the text, what does the word "stratagems" most nearly mean?

   A. marked by casual disrespect

   B. oblivious of dangers or perils or calmly resolute in facing them

   C. ate breakfast

   D. tricks or schemes

2. Their reception from Mr. Bennet, to whom they then turned, was not quite so cordial. His countenance rather gained in austerity; and he scarcely opened his lips. The easy assurance of the young couple, indeed, was enough to provoke him. Elizabeth was disgusted, and even Miss Bennet was shocked. Lydia was Lydia still; untamed, unabashed, wild, noisy, and fearless. She turned from sister to sister, demanding their congratulations, and when at length they all sat down, looked eagerly round the room, took notice of some little alteration in it, and observed, with a laugh, that it was a great while since she had been there.

   Which choice best states a central concern of "Chapter LI"?

   A. Family in crisis

   B. The first proposal

   C. Shameless return

   D. A misguided warning

SAT key: 1. D (tricks or schemes); 2. C (Shameless return)

Lesson 53: Chapter LII

Focus: the hidden benefactor

Objective: Students will analyze how plot develops in “Chapter LII” by writing a claim-evidence-reasoning paragraph that cites at least 2 quotations from the section, and will score at least 80% on the section quiz.

Standards: AP: see the unit standards

Content note (exploitation of a minor): The full story of Lydia's marriage is revealed; discuss responsibility.
Student preview: We learn how Lydia's marriage was arranged.
Suggested language: “Who acted responsibly here?”

Teacher only · spoilers

Mrs. Gardiner's letter reveals Darcy found the couple, paid Wickham's debts and settled the marriage, insisting on secrecy. Elizabeth speaks gently but pointedly to Wickham.

Background: Darcy's act protected the reputation of all the Bennet daughters.

Significance: Darcy's generosity proves his change and love.

Lesson plan and lecture script (90 minutes)

0–8 min · Bell-ringer · You do (8 min)
Students write to the bell-ringer, then pair-share.
Why did Darcy want his role kept secret? Write for five minutes. Starters: I think... because... / This connects to pride and prejudice because.... Content note before we start: We learn how Lydia's marriage was arranged.
Prompt: Why did Darcy want his role kept secret?
Sentence starters: I think… because… · This connects to pride and prejudice because…
Strong response: A strong response takes a position and anticipates this: Darcy has overcome his pride in the most practical way: by binding himself to Wickham as a brother-in-law.

8–18 min · Vocabulary with etymology notes · I do (10 min)
Five key words in context, with verified word histories.
Today's words: expedite — to speed up; to hasten; amounting — adding up (to); compromised — settled by agreement; presuming — too bold; taking liberties; postponed — hold back to a later time. “expedite”: Origin: Latin expedītus (“unimpeded”). “compromised”: Origin of “compromise”: Middle French compromis; earlier Late Latin compromissum (“a compromise”).
Words: expedite: to speed up; to hasten · amounting: adding up (to) · compromised: settled by agreement · presuming: too bold; taking liberties · postponed: hold back to a later time

18–28 min · Background and context · I do (10 min)
Mini-lecture (read or adapt the script).
Darcy's act protected the reputation of all the Bennet daughters. Darcy's generosity proves his change and love. Epistolary: Mrs. Gardiner's letter reveals that Darcy found the couple, paid Wickham's debts, bought his commission and arranged the marriage. Characterization: Darcy acted secretly, out of a sense of responsibility for not exposing Wickham, and, Mrs. Gardiner hints, out of love. Dialogue: At the end of the chapter Wickham fishes for Elizabeth's opinion with his old story; she closes the subject with courteous irony: she is no longer deceived, and no longer needs to fight. Watch for silence and reserve: What characters leave unsaid (Darcy's reserve, Jane's composure, Elizabeth's secrets) drives misunderstanding. In this chapter: "have given above. It was owing to him, to his reserve, and want of proper consideration, that Wickham's character had been so" (Chapter LII, paragraph 3).

28–40 min · I do: modeled close reading · I do (12 min)
Model the close reading of the anchor quotation using the written think-aloud below.
First, meaning. I read "He had been some days in town before he was able to discover them" slowly and put it in my own words: Mrs. Gardiner writes that Darcy spent days in London before he found Lydia and Wickham. Next, craft. I notice the plain detail of time and effort. The strongest word is "discover": it shows he searched hard in secret. Then, effect. What does Mrs. Gardiner's letter reveal about Darcy? My answer: Mrs. Gardiner's letter reveals that Darcy found Lydia and Wickham, paid his debts and arranged the marriage, quietly and without wanting credit; Elizabeth realizes how much Darcy did for her.

> He had been some days in town before he was able to discover them (Chapter LII, paragraph 3)

Think-aloud: First, meaning. I read "He had been some days in town before he was able to discover them" slowly and put it in my own words: Mrs. Gardiner writes that Darcy spent days in London before he found Lydia and Wickham. Next, craft. I notice the plain detail of time and effort. The strongest word is "discover": it shows he searched hard in secret. Then, effect. What does Mrs. Gardiner's letter reveal about Darcy? My answer: Mrs. Gardiner's letter reveals that Darcy found Lydia and Wickham, paid his debts and arranged the marriage, quietly and without wanting credit; Elizabeth realizes how much Darcy did for her.

40–55 min · We do: guided annotation · We do (15 min)
Guided analysis of a second quotation; expected answers given.
Ask: What words in this line stand out, and what do they suggest? Expected: The hint points to love for Elizabeth. Actions prove character, the novel's answer to first impressions. Ask: How does this line connect to pride and prejudice? Expected: Darcy has overcome his pride in the most practical way: by binding himself to Wickham as a brother-in-law. (The chapter opens with the letter she asked for.)

> Elizabeth had the satisfaction of receiving an answer to her letter (Chapter LII, paragraph 1)

Ask: What words in this line stand out, and what do they suggest?
Expected answer: The hint points to love for Elizabeth. Actions prove character, the novel's answer to first impressions.
Ask: How does this line connect to pride and prejudice?
Expected answer: Darcy has overcome his pride in the most practical way: by binding himself to Wickham as a brother-in-law. (The chapter opens with the letter she asked for.)

55–70 min · You do: independent annotation · You do (15 min)
Independent annotation and a claim-evidence-reasoning paragraph (exemplar given).
Annotate the chapter for epistolary, characterization (three marks with a margin note each), then write one claim-evidence-reasoning paragraph: what does this chapter suggest about the hidden benefactor? Then start your writing prompt at your assigned level (HS Sophomore: Analyze how Chapter LII develops the idea of the hidden benefactor. Make a precise claim, support it with at least three pieces of textual evidence, and explain how the author's use of plot and characterization shapes that idea. Address one possible counterclaim.) Exemplar: Darcy's secret rescue proves his character more than any speech could. When the text says "If he had another motive, I am sure it would never disgrace him" (Chapter LII, paragraph 3), it shows this directly. Mrs. Gardiner writes that "he had been some days in town before he was able to discover them," and hints that "another motive" would "never disgrace him," which Elizabeth understands as herself.
Task: Annotate the chapter for epistolary, characterization (three marks with a margin note each), then write one claim-evidence-reasoning paragraph: what does this chapter suggest about the hidden benefactor? Then start your writing prompt at your assigned level (HS Sophomore: Analyze how Chapter LII develops the idea of the hidden benefactor. Make a precise claim, support it with at least three pieces of textual evidence, and explain how the author's use of plot and characterization shapes that idea. Address one possible counterclaim.)
Exemplar: Darcy's secret rescue proves his character more than any speech could. When the text says "If he had another motive, I am sure it would never disgrace him" (Chapter LII, paragraph 3), it shows this directly. Mrs. Gardiner writes that "he had been some days in town before he was able to discover them," and hints that "another motive" would "never disgrace him," which Elizabeth understands as herself.

70–80 min · Discussion · We do (10 min)
Structured discussion from the 30 tiered questions, with facilitation notes.
Anchor question: Why did Darcy want his role kept secret? Ask: why does Darcy keep his help secret? What would announcing it have looked like? Ask: why doesn't Elizabeth confront Wickham with what she knows? What does her restraint show?
Anchor question: Why did Darcy want his role kept secret?
Facilitation: Ask: why does Darcy keep his help secret? What would announcing it have looked like? · Ask: why doesn't Elizabeth confront Wickham with what she knows? What does her restraint show?

80–87 min · Exit ticket / chapter quiz · You do (7 min)
Chapter quiz in the app and an exit ticket (answer given).
Chapter quiz in the app, then: In one sentence, what does this chapter suggest about the hidden benefactor? Support it with one short quotation. Model answer: Darcy's secret rescue proves his character more than any speech could. ("If he had another motive, I am sure it would never disgrace him", Chapter LII, paragraph 3). Accept any defensible claim backed by a quotation from the chapter; the answer key for the quiz is in the Quiz section.
Exit ticket: In one sentence, what does this chapter suggest about the hidden benefactor? Support it with one short quotation.
Answer: Model answer: Darcy's secret rescue proves his character more than any speech could. ("If he had another motive, I am sure it would never disgrace him", Chapter LII, paragraph 3). Accept any defensible claim backed by a quotation from the chapter; the answer key for the quiz is in the Quiz section.

> 87–90 min · Closure · I do (3 min)
> Summarize the lesson and preview the next reading.
> Today we saw how epistolary shapes the hidden benefactor. Key takeaway: Darcy has overcome his pride in the most practical way: by binding himself to Wickham as a brother-in-law.

Total: 90 minutes.

Teacher analysis (spoilers)

Literary elements

- Epistolary: Mrs. Gardiner's letter reveals that Darcy found the couple, paid Wickham's debts, bought his commission and arranged the marriage.
- Characterization: Darcy acted secretly, out of a sense of responsibility for not exposing Wickham, and, Mrs. Gardiner hints, out of love.
- Dialogue: At the end of the chapter Wickham fishes for Elizabeth's opinion with his old story; she closes the subject with courteous irony: she is no longer deceived, and no longer needs to fight.

Themes and how they develop

- pride and prejudice: Darcy has overcome his pride in the most practical way: by binding himself to Wickham as a brother-in-law.

Symbols and motifs

- silence and reserve: What characters leave unsaid (Darcy's reserve, Jane's composure, Elizabeth's secrets) drives misunderstanding. In this chapter: “have given above. It was owing to him, to his reserve, and want of proper consideration, that Wickham’s character had been so” (Chapter LII, paragraph 3).
- letters: Letters carry news, reveal character and change minds; Darcy's letter is the turning point of the novel. In this chapter: “Elizabeth had the satisfaction of receiving an answer to her letter, as soon as she possibly could. She was no sooner in” (Chapter LII, paragraph 1).

Key quotations (checked against the reading text)

- “He had been some days in town before he was able to discover them” (Chapter LII, paragraph 3) Darcy's personal effort.
- “If he had another motive, I am sure it would never disgrace him” (Chapter LII, paragraph 3) Mrs. Gardiner's hint about love.
- “Elizabeth had the satisfaction of receiving an answer to her letter” (Chapter LII, paragraph 1) The chapter opens with the letter she asked for.
- “Come, Mr. Wickham, we are brother and sister, you know. Do not let us quarrel about the past” (Chapter LII, paragraph 37) Elizabeth's polite dismissal of the man she once believed.

Model claim-evidence-reasoning

Claim: Darcy's secret rescue proves his character more than any speech could.
Evidence: "If he had another motive, I am sure it would never disgrace him" (Chapter LII, paragraph 3)
Reasoning: Mrs. Gardiner writes that "he had been some days in town before he was able to discover them," and hints that "another motive" would "never disgrace him," which Elizabeth understands as herself.

Vocabulary with etymology notes

Word	Definition (in this sentence)	In context	Word history
expedite (verb)	to speed up; to hasten	Since such were her feelings, it only remained, he thought, to secure and expedite a marriage, which, in his very first conversation with Wickham, he easily learnt, had never been his design.	"expedite": Origin: Latin expedītus ("unimpeded"). (Liber et Libri origin note, https://en.wiktionary.org/wiki/expedite#Etymology)
amounting (verb)	adding up (to)	His debts are to be paid, amounting, I believe, to considerably more than a thousand pounds, another thousand in addition to her own settled upon her, and his commission purchased.
compromised (verb)	settled by agreement	"I did hear, too, that there was a time, when sermon-making was not so palatable to you as it seems to be at present; that you actually declared your resolution of never taking orders, and that the business had been compromised accordingly."	"compromised": Origin of "compromise": Middle French compromis; earlier Late Latin compromissum ("a compromise"). (Liber et Libri origin note, https://en.wiktionary.org/wiki/compromise#Etymology)
presuming (adjective)	too bold; taking liberties	Pray forgive me, if I have been very presuming, or at least do not punish me so far, as to exclude me from P.
postponed (verb)	hold back to a later time	He did not judge your father to be a person whom he could so properly consult as your uncle, and therefore readily postponed seeing him, till after the departure of the former.
explicit (adjective)	precisely and clearly expressed or readily observable; leaving	But if you are really innocent and ignorant, I must be more explicit.	"explicit": Origin: French explicite; earlier Latin explicitus ("disentangled"). (Liber et Libri origin note, https:// nothing to implication		en.wiktionary.org/wiki/explicit#Etymology)

unsettled (adjective)	uncertain; not fixed	The vague and unsettled suspicions which uncertainty had produced of what Mr.
confide (verb)	reveal in private; tell confidentially	The motive professed was his conviction of its being owing to himself that Wickham's worthlessness had not been so well known, as to make it impossible for any young woman of character to love or confide in him.
sermons (noun)	religious talks given by a clergyman	"How should you have liked making sermons?"	"sermons": Origin of "sermon": Anglo-Norman sermun; earlier Latin sermō. (Liber et Libri origin note, https://en.wiktionary.org/wiki/sermon#Etymology)
foresee (verb)	realize beforehand	"I have just received your letter, and shall devote this whole morning to answering it, as I foresee that a little writing will not comprise what I have to tell you.

Discussion questions

1. Why did Darcy want his role kept secret?
2. Where does plot appear in this chapter, and what effect does it have? Point to one passage.
3. How does this chapter connect to the book's larger concern with pride and self-knowledge?

Classroom discussion questions (30, tiered)

Wait time after every question (3 s for DOK 1, 5 s for DOK 2, 8 to 10 s for DOK 3 and 4); think-pair-share on DOK 3 and 4; answer each response with a follow-up probe; close with student-generated questions. Focus sets by rigor level: Scaffolded support: 1, 2, 3, 4, 5, 6, 11, 12, 13, 14, 21, 22; HS Freshman: 1, 2, 3, 4, 5, 12, 13, 14, 15, 22, 23, 24; HS Sophomore: 1, 2, 3, 4, 13, 14, 15, 16, 17, 23, 24, 25; HS Junior: 1, 2, 3, 14, 15, 16, 17, 18, 24, 25, 26, 27; HS Senior: 1, 2, 3, 15, 16, 17, 18, 25, 26, 27, 28, 29; AP: 1, 2, 16, 17, 18, 19, 20, 26, 27, 28, 29, 30; College Freshman: 1, 2, 17, 18, 19, 20, 21, 22, 27, 28, 29, 30; College Sophomore: 1, 2, 11, 18, 19, 20, 21, 22, 23, 28, 29, 30; College Junior: 1, 11, 12, 19, 20, 21, 22, 23, 24, 25, 29, 30; College Senior: 1, 11, 12, 13, 20, 21, 22, 23, 24, 25, 26, 30; Graduate / PhD: 1, 11, 12, 13, 21, 22, 23, 24, 25, 26, 27, 28

Literal / recall

1. Who reveals Darcy's role? [DOK 1 · coldCallWithSupport · wait 3 s · AP: unit standards] Look for: Mrs. Gardiner
2. What did Darcy do? [DOK 1 · turnAndTalk · wait 3 s · AP: unit standards] Look for: Found them, paid debts, arranged the marriage

3. Why did Darcy act, he said? [DOK 1 · coldCallWithSupport · wait 3 s · AP: unit standards] Look for: He felt partly responsible
4. What did Darcy insist on? [DOK 1 · turnAndTalk · wait 3 s · AP: unit standards] Look for: Secrecy
5. How does Elizabeth treat Wickham afterward? [DOK 1 · coldCallWithSupport · wait 3 s · AP: unit standards] Look for: Gently but pointedly
6. Retell the three most important events of "Chapter LII" in order, in one sentence each. [DOK 1 · turnAndTalk · wait 3 s · AP: unit standards] Look for: Mrs. Gardiner's letter reveals Darcy found the couple, paid Wickham's debts and settled the marriage, insisting on secrecy. Elizabeth speaks gently but pointedly to Wickham.
7. Which characters appear or are mentioned in "Chapter LII"? Name two and one thing each says or does. [DOK 1 · coldCallWithSupport · wait 3 s · AP: unit standards] Look for: Names and actions taken from the chapter; check against the teacher summary.
8. Where and when does "Chapter LII" take place? Point to the line that tells you. [DOK 1 · turnAndTalk · wait 3 s · AP: unit standards] Look for: A place/time detail quoted from the chapter.
9. Reread: "Since such were her feelings, it only remained, he thought, to secure and expedite a marriage, which, in his very first conversation with Wickham, he easily learnt, had never been his design." What does "expedite" mean here, and what is literally happening in this line? [DOK 1 · turnAndTalk · wait 3 s · AP: unit standards] Look for: expedite: to speed up; to hasten.
10. Reread: "His debts are to be paid, amounting, I believe, to considerably more than a thousand pounds, another thousand in addition to her own settled upon her, and his commission purchased." What does "amounting" mean here, and what is literally happening in this line? [DOK 1 · turnAndTalk · wait 3 s · AP: unit standards] Look for: amounting: adding up (to).

Inferential / analytical

1. What does "Chapter LII" suggest about the hidden benefactor? State the inference and the line that supports it. [DOK 2 · thinkPairShare · wait 5 s · AP-LIT.LAN] Look for: Darcy's generosity proves his change and love.
2. Find one example of plot in this chapter. What does it reveal that a plain statement would not? [DOK 2 · followUp · wait 5 s · AP-LIT.STR] Look for: Look for key events and the causes linking them.
3. How does the characterization in this chapter shape what we understand about the hidden benefactor? [DOK 3 · thinkPairShare · wait 8 s · AP-LIT.CHR] Look for: Look for what characters say, do and think, and how others react to them.

   Answer guidance: A defensible line of argument: Darcy's secret rescue proves his character more than any speech could. Useful evidence: "He had been some days in town before he was able to discover them" (Chapter LII, paragraph 3): Darcy's personal effort. On characterization: Darcy acted secretly, out of a sense of responsibility for not exposing Wickham, and, Mrs. Gardiner hints, out of love. Credit any position that is supported by quotation and reasoning; push one-sided answers to address the strongest counterpoint.
4. In the passage that begins ""I did hear, too, that there was a time, when sermon-making was not so palatable to you as it seems to be at present; that you actually declared your resolution of never taking…", why might Austen have chosen these particular words? Pick two and explain their connotations. [DOK 2 · followUp · wait 5 s · AP-LIT.FIG] Look for: Diction analysis of two words in the anchor passage.
5. What causes the main turn in "Chapter LII", and what effect is it likely to have on what follows? [DOK 2 · followUp · wait 5 s · AP-LIT.STR] Look for: Mrs. Gardiner's letter reveals Darcy found the couple, paid Wickham's debts and settled the marriage, insisting on secrecy. Elizabeth speaks gently but pointedly to Wickham.

6. How does “Chapter LII” build on “Chapter LI”? Name one link of cause and effect. [DOK 3 · thinkPairShare · wait 8 s · AP-LIT.STR] Look for: A causal or structural link between this and the previous chapter.
   Answer guidance: A defensible line of argument: Darcy's secret rescue proves his character more than any speech could. Useful evidence: “If he had another motive, I am sure it would never disgrace him” (Chapter LII, paragraph 3): Mrs. Gardiner's hint about love. Theme link: Darcy has overcome his pride in the most practical way: by binding himself to Wickham as a brother-in-law. Credit any position that is supported by quotation and reasoning; push one-sided answers to address the strongest counterpoint.
7. What can we infer about a character's motives from what they say and do here, as opposed to what they claim? [DOK 3 · followUp · wait 8 s · AP-LIT.CHR] Look for: An inference about motive supported by a quoted line.
   Answer guidance: A defensible line of argument: Darcy's secret rescue proves his character more than any speech could. Useful evidence: “Elizabeth had the satisfaction of receiving an answer to her letter” (Chapter LII, paragraph 1): The chapter opens with the letter she asked for. On characterization: Darcy acted secretly, out of a sense of responsibility for not exposing Wickham, and, Mrs. Gardiner hints, out of love. Credit any position that is supported by quotation and reasoning; push one-sided answers to address the strongest counterpoint.
8. The bell-ringer asked: “Why did Darcy want his role kept secret?” Now that we have read closely, how would you revise your first answer, and which line changed your mind? [DOK 2 · thinkPairShare · wait 5 s · AP-LIT.LAN] Look for: A revised answer anchored in the text.
9. Where does theme appear, and how does it connect this chapter to the larger concern with pride and self-knowledge? [DOK 3 · followUp · wait 8 s · AP-LIT.LAN] Look for: Look for statements or moments that connect to the book's big ideas.
   Answer guidance: A defensible line of argument: Darcy's secret rescue proves his character more than any speech could. Useful evidence: “Come, Mr. Wickham, we are brother and sister, you know. Do not let us quarrel about the past” (Chapter LII, paragraph 37): Elizabeth's polite dismissal of the man she once believed. Theme link: Darcy has overcome his pride in the most practical way: by binding himself to Wickham as a brother-in-law. Credit any position that is supported by quotation and reasoning; push one-sided answers to address the strongest counterpoint.
10. Background: Darcy's act protected the reputation of all the Bennet daughters. How does knowing this change the way you read one moment in the chapter? [DOK 3 · thinkPairShare · wait 8 s · AP-LIT.SET] Look for: A specific moment reread in light of the context.
    Answer guidance: A defensible line of argument: Darcy's secret rescue proves his character more than any speech could. Useful evidence: “He had been some days in town before he was able to discover them” (Chapter LII, paragraph 3): Darcy's personal effort. Theme link: Darcy has overcome his pride in the most practical way: by binding himself to Wickham as a brother-in-law. Credit any position that is supported by quotation and reasoning; push one-sided answers to address the strongest counterpoint.

Evaluative / synthesis / creative

1. A critic might argue: “Darcy's generosity proves his change and love.” How far do you agree? Take a stand and defend it with two lines from the chapter. [DOK 3 · fourCorners · wait 8 s · AP-LIT.LAN] Look for: A defended position with evidence and one counterpoint.
   Answer guidance: A defensible line of argument: Darcy's secret rescue proves his character more than any speech could. Useful evidence: “If he had another motive, I am sure it would never disgrace him” (Chapter LII, paragraph 3): Mrs. Gardiner's hint about love. Theme link: Darcy has overcome his pride in the most practical way: by binding himself to Wickham as a brother-in-law. Credit any position that is supported by quotation and reasoning; push one-sided answers to address the strongest counterpoint.

2. Which character in this chapter acts most wisely, and which least? Judge them by a standard you name. [DOK 3 · thinkPairShare · wait 8 s · AP-LIT.CHR, AP-LIT.LAN] Look for: An evaluation using an explicit criterion and evidence.

   Answer guidance: A defensible line of argument: Darcy's secret rescue proves his character more than any speech could. Useful evidence: “Elizabeth had the satisfaction of receiving an answer to her letter” (Chapter LII, paragraph 1): The chapter opens with the letter she asked for. On characterization: Darcy acted secretly, out of a sense of responsibility for not exposing Wickham, and, Mrs. Gardiner hints, out of love. Credit any position that is supported by quotation and reasoning; push one-sided answers to address the strongest counterpoint.

3. Rewrite one moment of “Chapter LII” from the point of view of a different character. What does the new angle reveal or hide about the hidden benefactor? [DOK 4 · thinkPairShare · wait 8 s · AP-LIT.LAN, AP-LIT.NAR] Look for: A creative product with a rationale tied to the text.

   Answer guidance: A defensible line of argument: Darcy's secret rescue proves his character more than any speech could. Useful evidence: “Come, Mr. Wickham, we are brother and sister, you know. Do not let us quarrel about the past” (Chapter LII, paragraph 37): Elizabeth's polite dismissal of the man she once believed. Theme link: Darcy has overcome his pride in the most practical way: by binding himself to Wickham as a brother-in-law. Credit any position that is supported by quotation and reasoning; push one-sided answers to address the strongest counterpoint.

4. Write three questions of your own about “Chapter LII”: one recall, one “why/how”, and one “should/what if”. Trade with a partner and answer theirs. [DOK 3 · studentGenerated · wait 8 s · AP-LIT.LAN] Look for: Student-generated questions at three levels.

   Answer guidance: A defensible line of argument: Darcy's secret rescue proves his character more than any speech could. Useful evidence: “He had been some days in town before he was able to discover them” (Chapter LII, paragraph 3): Darcy's personal effort. Theme link: Darcy has overcome his pride in the most practical way: by binding himself to Wickham as a brother-in-law. Credit any position that is supported by quotation and reasoning; push one-sided answers to address the strongest counterpoint.

5. Connect this chapter to marriage and money: is the link strong or weak so far? What would Austen need to show next to strengthen it? [DOK 4 · socraticCircle · wait 8 s · AP-LIT.LAN] Look for: A judgment of thematic development across the work.

   Answer guidance: A defensible line of argument: Darcy's secret rescue proves his character more than any speech could. Useful evidence: “If he had another motive, I am sure it would never disgrace him” (Chapter LII, paragraph 3): Mrs. Gardiner's hint about love. Theme link: Darcy has overcome his pride in the most practical way: by binding himself to Wickham as a brother-in-law. Credit any position that is supported by quotation and reasoning; push one-sided answers to address the strongest counterpoint.

6. Is the plot in this chapter effective, or does it feel heavy-handed? Evaluate it as a reader would in a review. [DOK 3 · fourCorners · wait 8 s · AP-LIT.LAN, AP-LIT.STR] Look for: An evaluative judgment with criteria and evidence.

   Answer guidance: A defensible line of argument: Darcy's secret rescue proves his character more than any speech could. Useful evidence: “Elizabeth had the satisfaction of receiving an answer to her letter” (Chapter LII, paragraph 1): The chapter opens with the letter she asked for. Theme link: Darcy has overcome his pride in the most practical way: by binding himself to Wickham as a brother-in-law. Credit any position that is supported by quotation and reasoning; push one-sided answers to address the strongest counterpoint.

7. Compare how “Chapter LII” treats the hidden benefactor with how another text, film or event you know treats a similar idea. What does Pride and Prejudice see that the other misses? [DOK 4 · socraticCircle · wait 8 s · AP-LIT.LAN] Look for: A cross-text synthesis.

   Answer guidance: A defensible line of argument: Darcy's secret rescue proves his character more than any speech could. Useful evidence: “Come, Mr. Wickham, we are brother and sister, you know. Do not let us quarrel about the past” (Chapter LII, paragraph 37): Elizabeth's polite dismissal of the man she once believed. Theme link: Darcy has overcome his pride in the most practical way: by binding himself to Wickham as a brother-in-law. Credit any position that is supported by quotation and reasoning; push one-sided answers to address the strongest counterpoint.

8. Predict what “Chapter LIII” will bring, using two clues from this chapter. After reading, evaluate your prediction. [DOK 3 · thinkPairShare · wait 8 s · AP-LIT.LAN, AP-LIT.STR] Look for: A prediction or judgment justified with textual clues.

   Answer guidance: A defensible line of argument: Darcy's secret rescue proves his character more than any speech could. Useful evidence: “He had been some days in town before he was able to discover them” (Chapter LII, paragraph 3): Darcy's personal effort. Theme link: Darcy has overcome his pride in the most practical way: by binding himself to Wickham as a brother-in-law. Credit any position that is supported by quotation and reasoning; push one-sided answers to address the strongest counterpoint.

9. Design a one-paragraph modern adaptation of this chapter (setting, characters, conflict). What must stay the same for it to still be about the hidden benefactor? [DOK 4 · thinkPairShare · wait 8 s · AP-LIT.LAN] Look for: A creative transfer that keeps the core idea.

   Answer guidance: A defensible line of argument: Darcy's secret rescue proves his character more than any speech could. Useful evidence: “If he had another motive, I am sure it would never disgrace him” (Chapter LII, paragraph 3): Mrs. Gardiner's hint about love. Theme link: Darcy has overcome his pride in the most practical way: by binding himself to Wickham as a brother-in-law. Credit any position that is supported by quotation and reasoning; push one-sided answers to address the strongest counterpoint.

10. What question would you most like to ask Jane Austen about this chapter, and what answer do you think the text itself gives? [DOK 4 · studentGenerated · wait 8 s · AP-LIT.LAN] Look for: A student-generated question answered from evidence.

    Answer guidance: A defensible line of argument: Darcy's secret rescue proves his character more than any speech could. Useful evidence: “Elizabeth had the satisfaction of receiving an answer to her letter” (Chapter LII, paragraph 1): The chapter opens with the letter she asked for. Theme link: Darcy has overcome his pride in the most practical way: by binding himself to Wickham as a brother-in-law. Credit any position that is supported by quotation and reasoning; push one-sided answers to address the strongest counterpoint.

Annotation focus

- Plot: look for key events and the causes linking them (anchor passage in the We do segment)
- Also notice Characterization: what characters say, do and think, and how others react to them
- Also notice Theme: statements or moments that connect to the book's big ideas

Chapter quiz: item bank (all eleven rigor versions)

1. [fill · recall · DOK 1] Fill in the blank with the vocabulary word that fits: “But if you are really innocent and ignorant, I must be more _____.” Word bank: expedite, amounting, compromised, explicit
   Key: explicit
2. [mc · recall · DOK 1] What did Darcy do?
   A. Paid Collins
   B. Found them, paid debts, arranged the marriage
   C. Nothing
   D. Sent soldiers
   Key: B (Found them, paid debts, arranged the marriage)
3. [mc · recall · DOK 1] How does Elizabeth treat Wickham afterward?
   A. She refuses to speak
   B. Gently but pointedly
   C. With rage
   D. Flirtatiously
   Key: B (Gently but pointedly)
4. [mc · recall · DOK 1] In the line “Since such were her feelings, it only remained, he thought, to secure and expedite a marriage, which, in his very first conversation with Wickham, he easily learnt, had never been his design.”, what does “expedite” most nearly mean?
   A. be or come between
   B. a crafty and involved plot to achieve your (usually sinister) ends
   C. a light round box for hats
   D. to speed up; to hasten
   Key: D (to speed up; to hasten)
5. [mc · recall · DOK 1] What did Darcy insist on?
   A. Secrecy
   B. Public thanks
   C. A reward
   D. Elizabeth's hand
   Key: A (Secrecy)
6. [fill · recall · DOK 1] Fill in the blank with the vocabulary word that fits: “The vague and _____ suspicions which uncertainty had produced of what Mr.” Word bank: expedite, unsettled, compromised, amounting
   Key: unsettled
7. [mc · recall · DOK 1] In the line “Pray forgive me, if I have been very presuming, or at least do not punish me so far, as to exclude me from P.”, what does “presuming” most nearly mean?
   A. a person who prepared and sold medicines and gave medical advice
   B. too bold; taking liberties
   C. to increase; to make better
   D. frank; careless about hiding feelings

Key: B (too bold; taking liberties)

8. [mc · recall · DOK 1] In the line “His debts are to be paid, amounting, I believe, to considerably more than a thousand pounds, another thousand in addition to her own settled upon her, and his commission purchased.”, what does “amounting” most nearly mean?

   A. adding up (to)

   B. pull back or move away or backward

   C. complaints

   D. dull; lacking interest

   Key: A (adding up (to))

9. [fill · recall · DOK 1] Fill in the blank with the vocabulary word that fits: “The motive professed was his conviction of its being owing to himself that Wickham’s worthlessness had not been so well known, as to make it impossible for any young woman of character to love or _____ in him.” Word bank: expedite, amounting, compromised, confide

   Key: confide

10. [mc · inference · DOK 2] Which choice best states a central concern of “Chapter LII”?

    A. Doubts and preparations

    B. The entail and the officers

    C. The hidden benefactor

    D. The accomplished woman

    Key: C (The hidden benefactor)

11. [mc · inference · DOK 2] What does this passage most clearly show? “Come, Mr. Wickham, we are brother and sister, you know. Do not let us quarrel about the past” (Chapter LII, paragraph 37)

    A. He predicts his remorse will fade, and it does.

    B. Mrs. Bennet's delight: the name matters, not the man.

    C. Darcy's attraction, revealed to the reader.

    D. Elizabeth's polite dismissal of the man she once believed.

    Key: D (Elizabeth's polite dismissal of the man she once believed.)

12. [short · inference · DOK 2] What can you infer from this line? “He had been some days in town before he was able to discover them” (Chapter LII, paragraph 3) Answer in two or three sentences with one detail.

    Sample answer: Darcy's personal effort. The evidence is “He had been some days in town before he was able to discover them” (Chapter LII, paragraph 3). This develops pride and prejudice: Darcy has overcome his pride in the most practical way: by binding himself to Wickham as a brother-in-law.

13. [short · inference · DOK 2] What can you infer from this line? “If he had another motive, I am sure it would never disgrace him” (Chapter LII, paragraph 3) Answer in two or three sentences with one detail.

    Sample answer: Mrs. Gardiner's hint about love. The evidence is “If he had another motive, I am sure it would never disgrace him” (Chapter LII, paragraph 3). This develops pride and prejudice: Darcy has overcome his pride in the most practical way: by binding himself to Wickham as a brother-in-law.

14. [short · analysis · DOK 3] Analyze the word choice in “Elizabeth had the satisfaction of receiving an answer to her letter” (Chapter LII, paragraph 1). Pick two words and explain what they suggest.

    Sample answer: The chapter opens with the letter she asked for. The evidence is “Elizabeth had the satisfaction of receiving an answer to her letter” (Chapter LII, paragraph 1). This develops pride and prejudice: Darcy has overcome his pride in the most practical way: by binding himself to Wickham as a brother-in-law. The words “satisfaction” and “receiving” carry that meaning: they are the charged choices in the line, and changing either would soften the effect.

15. [mc · analysis · DOK 3] Which literary element does this describe in “Chapter LII”? Darcy acted secretly, out of a sense of responsibility for not exposing Wickham, and, Mrs. Gardiner hints, out of love.

    A. Characterization

    B. Irony

    C. Setting

    D. Hyperbole

    Key: A (Characterization)

16. [short · synthesis · DOK 4] Synthesis: trace how pride and prejudice develops from Chapter XLIV to Chapter LII. Use one quotation from each.

    Sample answer: Earlier, in Chapter XLIV, paragraph 10, the text reads “Never, even in the company of his dear friends at Netherfield, or his dignified relations at Rosings, had she seen him so desirous to…” — Direct evidence that Darcy's manners have changed; note the list of what has vanished. In Chapter LII, “He had been some days in town before he was able to discover them” (Chapter LII, paragraph 3) — Darcy's personal effort. Darcy has overcome his pride in the most practical way: by binding himself to Wickham as a brother-in-law.

17. [fill · recall · DOK 1] Complete the quotation from Chapter LII, paragraph 37: “Come, Mr. Wickham, we are _____ and sister, you know. Do not let us quarrel about the past”

    Key: brother

18. [mc · recall · DOK 1] In the line “I did hear, too, that there was a time, when sermon-making was not so palatable to you as it seems to be at present; that you actually declared your resolution of never taking orders, and that the business had been…”, what does “compromised” most nearly mean?

    A. bags for holding sewing or needlework

    B. making impossible

    C. treating as less valuable than it is

    D. settled by agreement

    Key: D (settled by agreement)

19. [fill · recall · DOK 1] Complete the quotation from Chapter LII, paragraph 1: “Elizabeth had the _____ of receiving an answer to her letter”

    Key: satisfaction

20. [mc · analysis · DOK 3] Which literary element does this describe in “Chapter LII”? Mrs. Gardiner's letter reveals that Darcy found the couple, paid Wickham's debts, bought his commission and arranged the marriage.

    A. Imagery

    B. Personification

    C. Epistolary

    D. Structure

    Key: C (Epistolary)

21. [fill · recall · DOK 1] Fill in the blank with the vocabulary word that fits: “He did not judge your father to be a person whom he could so properly consult as your uncle, and therefore readily _____ seeing him, till after the departure of the former." Word bank: amounting, expedite, compromised, postponed

Key: postponed

22. [mc · recall · DOK 1] Which word completes this sentence from Chapter LII, paragraph 4? "Mr. Darcy called, and was shut up with him _____ hours."

    A. generously

    B. acknowledged

    C. several

    D. repeatedly

    Key: C (several)

23. [mc · recall · DOK 1] Who reveals Darcy's role?

    A. Jane

    B. Wickham

    C. Mrs. Gardiner

    D. Lydia

    Key: C (Mrs. Gardiner)

24. [fill · recall · DOK 1] Complete the quotation from Chapter LII, paragraph 4: "He confessed himself obliged to leave the regiment, on account of some debts of honour, which were very pressing; and scrupled not to lay all the ill-_____ of Lydia's flight, on her own folly alone." Word bank: disapprobation, circumstances, consequences, something

    Key: consequences

25. [short · inference · DOK 2] What does this passage from Chapter LII, paragraph 4 reveal about the character or situation? "They met several times, for there was much to be discussed." Answer in two or three sentences with one detail.

    Sample answer: The passage (Chapter LII, paragraph 4) shows the situation turning on first impressions and prejudice: Darcy has overcome his pride in the most practical way: by binding himself to Wickham as a brother-in-law. The words "discussed" and "several" are the proof, because they show how the moment looks to the people in it. They suggest more than the narrator states outright.

26. [short · inference · DOK 2] What does this passage from Chapter LII, paragraph 4 reveal about the character or situation? "I must confess myself surprised by your application; I did not expect it from you." Answer in two or three sentences with one detail.

    Sample answer: The passage (Chapter LII, paragraph 4) shows the situation turning on first impressions and prejudice: Darcy has overcome his pride in the most practical way: by binding himself to Wickham as a brother-in-law. The words "application" and "surprised" are the proof, because they show how the moment looks to the people in it. They suggest more than the narrator states outright.

27. [short · analysis · DOK 3] Analyze how the word choice in this passage from Chapter LII, paragraph 4 shapes its tone: "They met again on Sunday, and then I saw him too." Pick two words and explain their effect.

    Sample answer: The words its wording (Chapter LII, paragraph 4) make the tone heavy and deliberate rather than neutral. That weight points the reader to class and social mobility: Darcy has overcome his pride in the most practical way: by binding himself to Wickham as a brother-in-law. The author chooses them so the moment feels significant instead of passing.

28. [short · analysis · DOK 3] Analyze how the word choice in this passage from Chapter LII, paragraph 4 shapes its tone: "But at last your uncle was forced to yield, and instead of being allowed to be of use to his niece, was forced to put up with only having the probable credit of it, which went sorely against the grain" Pick two words and explain their effect.

Sample answer: The words "probable" and "allowed" (Chapter LII, paragraph 4) make the tone heavy and deliberate rather than neutral. That weight points the reader to pride and self-knowledge: Darcy has overcome his pride in the most practical way: by binding himself to Wickham as a brother-in-law. The author chooses them so the moment feels significant instead of passing.

29. [short · synthesis · DOK 4] Connect this passage from Chapter LII, paragraph 4 to the story's treatment of women's limited choices: "But in spite of all this fine talking, my dear Lizzy, you may rest perfectly assured, that your uncle would never have yielded, if we had not given him credit for another interest in the affair." Use one other moment from the story as well.

Sample answer: This passage (Chapter LII, paragraph 4) develops women's limited choices: Darcy has overcome his pride in the most practical way: by binding himself to Wickham as a brother-in-law. Its words "perfectly" and "interest" carry that idea into this moment. The same concern returns in "I believe I have now told you everything." (Chapter LII, paragraph 4), so the two passages read as a pattern, not a single moment. Together they show the story treating women's limited choices as central.

30. [short · synthesis · DOK 4] Close reading: how do the diction and syntax of "If he had another motive, I am sure it would never disgrace him" (Chapter LII, paragraph 3) shape its meaning? Consider a second, competing reading.

Sample answer: Mrs. Gardiner's hint about love. The evidence is "If he had another motive, I am sure it would never disgrace him" (Chapter LII, paragraph 3). This develops pride and prejudice: Darcy has overcome his pride in the most practical way: by binding himself to Wickham as a brother-in-law. The words "disgrace" and "another" carry that meaning: they are the charged choices in the line, and changing either would soften the effect. Mrs. Gardiner writes that "he had been some days in town before he was able to discover them," and hints that "another motive" would "never disgrace him," which Elizabeth understands as herself.

31. [mc · recall · DOK 1 · AP: AP-LIT.CHR] Why did Darcy act, he said?

    A. He owed money
    B. He wanted praise
    C. He loves Lydia
    D. He felt partly responsible

    Key: D (He felt partly responsible)

32. [fill · recall · DOK 1 · AP: AP-LIT.STR] Complete the quotation from Chapter LII, paragraph 3: "He had been some days in town before he was able to _____ them"

    Key: discover

33. [short · analysis · DOK 3 · AP: AP-LIT.FIG] Analyze how the word choice in this passage from Chapter LII, paragraph 4 shapes its tone: "It was all over before I arrived; so my curiosity was not so dreadfully racked as yours seems to have been." Pick two words and explain their effect.

    Sample answer: The words "dreadfully" and "curiosity" (Chapter LII, paragraph 4) make the tone heavy and deliberate rather than neutral. That weight points the reader to class and social mobility: Darcy has overcome his pride in the most practical way: by binding himself to Wickham as a brother-in-law. The author chooses them so the moment feels significant instead of passing.

34. [short · synthesis · DOK 4 · AP: AP-LIT.LAN] Connect this passage from Chapter LII, paragraph 4 to the story's treatment of women's limited choices: "He saw Wickham, and afterwards insisted on seeing Lydia." Use one other moment from the story as well.

Sample answer: This passage (Chapter LII, paragraph 4) develops women's limited choices: Darcy has overcome his pride in the most practical way: by binding himself to Wickham as a brother-in-law. Its words “afterwards” and “insisted” carry that idea into this moment. The same concern returns in “But he found Lydia absolutely resolved on remaining where she was.” (Chapter LII, paragraph 4), so the two passages read as a pattern, not a single moment. Together they show the story treating women's limited choices as central.

35. [short · analysis · DOK 3 · AP: AP-LIT.FIG] Analyze how the word choice in this passage from Chapter LII, paragraph 4 shapes its tone: “She then took a large house in Edward-street, and has since maintained herself by letting lodgings.” Pick two words and explain their effect.
Sample answer: The words “maintained” and “lodgings” (Chapter LII, paragraph 4) make the tone heavy and deliberate rather than neutral. That weight points the reader to pride and self-knowledge: Darcy has overcome his pride in the most practical way: by binding himself to Wickham as a brother-in-law. The author chooses them so the moment feels significant instead of passing.

36. [short · synthesis · DOK 4 · AP: AP-LIT.LAN] Connect this passage from Chapter LII, paragraph 4 to the story's treatment of marriage and money: “He meant to resign his commission immediately; and as to his future situation, he could conjecture very little about it.” Use one other moment from the story as well.
Sample answer: This passage (Chapter LII, paragraph 4) develops marriage and money: Darcy has overcome his pride in the most practical way: by binding himself to Wickham as a brother-in-law. Its words “immediately” and “commission” carry that idea into this moment. The same concern returns in “Mr. Darcy asked him why he had not married your sister at once.” (Chapter LII, paragraph 4), so the two passages read as a pattern, not a single moment. Together they show the story treating marriage and money as central.

37. [fill · recall · DOK 1 · AP: AP-LIT.FIG] Complete the quotation from Chapter LII, paragraph 1: “She was no sooner in possession of it, than hurrying into the little copse, where she was least likely to be _____, she sat down on one of the benches, and prepared to be happy” Word bank: direction, repeatedly, something, interrupted
Key: interrupted

38. [fill · recall · DOK 1 · AP: AP-LIT.FIG] Complete the quotation from Chapter LII, paragraph 4: “There is a lady, it seems, a Mrs. Younge, who was some time ago governess to Miss Darcy, and was dismissed from her charge on some cause of _____, though he did not say what.” Word bank: generously, disapprobation, repeatedly, enquiries
Key: disapprobation

39. [mc · inference · DOK 2 · Dual Credit (Indiana College Core): ICC-WC-1.5] What does this passage most clearly show? “Elizabeth had the satisfaction of receiving an answer to her letter” (Chapter LII, paragraph 1)
A. The narrator's gently ironic picture of the lost ideal.
B. Darcy's reply suggests kinship between them.
C. Her vanity in the title.
D. The chapter opens with the letter she asked for.
Key: D (The chapter opens with the letter she asked for.)

40. [mc · inference · DOK 2 · Dual Credit (Indiana College Core): ICC-WC-1.5] What does this passage most clearly show? “If he had another motive, I am sure it would never disgrace him” (Chapter LII, paragraph 3)
A. Mrs. Gardiner's hint about love.
B. "Wisely" is ironic: his caution will deepen her misjudgment.
C. Collins's refusal of novels, written in a novel; Austen's joke at his expense.
D. Opening: Elizabeth's wit restored.

Key: A (Mrs. Gardiner's hint about love.)

41. [short · synthesis · DOK 4 · Dual Credit (Indiana College Core): ICC-WC-1.5] Evaluate this claim about the chapter: “Darcy's secret rescue proves his character more than any speech could.” Is it fully persuasive? Argue with evidence, including a passage that complicates it.

    Sample answer: The claim is persuasive in part. “If he had another motive, I am sure it would never disgrace him” (Chapter LII, paragraph 3) supports it: Mrs. Gardiner writes that "he had been some days in town before he was able to discover them," and hints that "another motive" would "never disgrace him," which Elizabeth understands as herself. But “Come, Mr. Wickham, we are brother and sister, you know. Do not let us quarrel about the past” (Chapter LII, paragraph 37) complicates it: Elizabeth's polite dismissal of the man she once believed, and its “not” marks a limit or reversal the claim passes over. A fair verdict is that the claim is mostly right but overstated; it needs a limiting clause to cover that passage.

42. [short · synthesis · DOK 4 · Program outcome: LeL-C2-LIT-1] Connect this passage from Chapter LII, paragraph 4 to the story's treatment of marriage and money: “I talked to her repeatedly in the most serious manner, representing to her all the wickedness of what she had done, and all the unhappiness she had brought on her family.” Use one other moment from the story as well.

    Sample answer: This passage (Chapter LII, paragraph 4) develops marriage and money: Darcy has overcome his pride in the most practical way: by binding himself to Wickham as a brother-in-law. Its words “representing” and “unhappiness” carry that idea into this moment. The same concern returns in “I was sometimes quite provoked, but then I recollected my dear Elizabeth and Jane, and for their sakes had patience…” (Chapter LII, paragraph 4), so the two passages read as a pattern, not a single moment. Together they show the story treating marriage and money as central.

43. [short · analysis · DOK 3 · Program outcome: LeL-GR-LIT-1] Claim: Darcy's secret rescue proves his character more than any speech could. Explain how this evidence supports the claim: “If he had another motive, I am sure it would never disgrace him” (Chapter LII, paragraph 3).

    Sample answer: Mrs. Gardiner writes that "he had been some days in town before he was able to discover them," and hints that "another motive" would "never disgrace him," which Elizabeth understands as herself. The evidence is “If he had another motive, I am sure it would never disgrace him” (Chapter LII, paragraph 3) — Mrs. Gardiner's hint about love. This develops pride and prejudice: Darcy has overcome his pride in the most practical way: by binding himself to Wickham as a brother-in-law.

Rigor version	Items (in order)	Mix
Scaffolded support	1, 2, 3, 4, 5, 6, 7, 8, 9, 10, 11, 12, 13, 14, 15, 16	recall 9, inference 4, analysis 2, synthesis 1
HS Freshman	5, 17, 2, 4, 18, 7, 8, 19, 3, 12, 10, 11, 20, 14, 15, 16	recall 9, inference 3, analysis 3, synthesis 1
HS Sophomore	21, 22, 3, 7, 23, 24, 18, 25, 26, 11, 10, 27, 28, 15, 29, 30	recall 7, inference 4, analysis 3, synthesis 2
HS Junior	7, 21, 5, 31, 9, 32, 25, 11, 26, 10, 14, 27, 28, 33, 34, 29	recall 6, inference 4, analysis 4, synthesis 2
HS Senior	1, 31, 22, 6, 9, 11, 25, 26, 10, 33, 28, 20, 35, 34, 29, 36	recall 5, inference 4, analysis 4, synthesis 3
AP	19, 37, 38, 25, 26, 11, 10, 28, 27, 20, 15, 33, 36, 29, 34, 16	recall 3, inference 4, analysis 5, synthesis 4
College Freshman	21, 38, 2, 11, 39, 40, 26, 20, 33, 35, 15, 27, 41, 36, 29, 34	recall 3, inference 4, analysis 5, synthesis 4

College Sophomore	37, 3, 21, 11, 40, 26, 15, 35, 27, 33, 28, 42, 16, 36, 41, 29	recall 3, inference 3, analysis 5, synthesis 5
College Junior	37, 21, 23, 25, 10, 27, 15, 20, 33, 28, 16, 29, 36, 41, 34, 42	recall 3, inference 2, analysis 5, synthesis 6
College Senior	21, 1, 10, 11, 20, 14, 15, 35, 33, 42, 41, 34, 30, 29, 36, 16	recall 2, inference 2, analysis 5, synthesis 7
Graduate / PhD	4, 21, 1, 11, 33, 15, 35, 27, 43, 20, 41, 36, 42, 16, 29, 34	recall 3, inference 1, analysis 6, synthesis 6

Writing prompts (eleven rigor levels)

Scaffolded support (250 words; AP: see unit standards): Supported track (work from the passage your teacher selects). In “Chapter LII,” how does Austen show the hidden benefactor? Write a paragraph that states your claim, quotes two details from the passage, and explains how each detail supports your idea. Use the plot you noticed as one piece of evidence.

HS Freshman (350 words; AP: see unit standards): In Chapter LII, how does Austen develop the idea of the hidden benefactor? State a clear claim, support it with two or three quotations, and explain how the plot in the chapter helps build that idea.

HS Sophomore (450 words; AP: see unit standards): Analyze how Chapter LII develops the idea of the hidden benefactor. Make a precise claim, support it with at least three pieces of textual evidence, and explain how the author's use of plot and characterization shapes that idea. Address one possible counterclaim.

HS Junior (550 words; AP: see unit standards): Analyze how the structure of Chapter LII (where it begins, turns and ends) and its plot shape the reader's understanding of the hidden benefactor. Identify one place where the text leaves matters uncertain and explain how that uncertainty adds to its meaning.

HS Senior (600 words; AP: see unit standards): Two readers disagree about what Chapter LII suggests about the hidden benefactor. Lay out two plausible interpretations, weigh the evidence for each (including the chapter's plot and characterization), and argue for the stronger one in a sustained, well-organized essay.

AP (650 words; AP: AP-LIT.STR, AP-LIT.LAN): Write a literary argument in which you analyze how Jane Austen uses plot in Chapter LII to complicate the reader's understanding of the hidden benefactor. Develop a defensible thesis, select evidence purposefully, and explain how specific choices of diction and syntax create meaning.

College Freshman (1000 words; AP: see unit standards): Situate Chapter LII within its historical and literary context and argue how the chapter's treatment of the hidden benefactor responds to that context. Engage with at least one secondary perspective (a critic, historian or the author's own statements), integrate quotations smoothly, and cite in MLA style.

College Sophomore (1250 words; AP: see unit standards): Read Chapter LII alongside the conventions of its genre and period. Argue how the chapter's handling of the hidden benefactor follows or bends those conventions, using the plot as evidence, and test your reading against one published critic. Document two secondary sources in MLA.

College Junior (1500 words; AP: see unit standards): Apply a named critical approach (for example formalist, historicist, feminist, psychoanalytic or ecocritical) to Chapter LII and its treatment of the hidden benefactor. State your method, show what it reveals in the chapter's plot and characterization, and identify where the text resists it.

College Senior (2000 words; AP: see unit standards): Develop a research argument that reads Chapter LII as evidence for a larger claim about the hidden benefactor in Pride and Prejudice. Connect close reading of the chapter to the whole novel, engage at least four scholarly sources, and state precisely where your reading departs from theirs (Chicago style).

Graduate / PhD (2500 words; AP: see unit standards): Develop an original argument that reads Chapter LII as a hinge in the novel's larger treatment of the hidden benefactor. Position your reading within a named critical conversation (for example formalist, historicist, psychoanalytic, feminist or postcolonial approaches), account for the textual history where relevant, and articulate the stakes of your intervention for scholarship on Pride and Prejudice.

SAT-style questions

1. "I did hear, too, that there was a time, when sermon-making was not so palatable to you as it seems to be at present; that you actually declared your resolution of never taking orders, and that the business had been compromised accordingly."

   As used in the text, what does the word "compromised" most nearly mean?

   A. realize beforehand

   B. reveal in private; tell confidentially

   C. religious talks given by a clergyman

   D. settled by agreement

2. "I did hear, too, that there was a time, when sermon-making was not so palatable to you as it seems to be at present; that you actually declared your resolution of never taking orders, and that the business had been compromised accordingly."

   Which choice best states a central concern of "Chapter LII"?

   A. The hidden benefactor

   B. Letters of judgment

   C. A revelation from the colonel

   D. The entail and the officers

SAT key: 1. D (settled by agreement); 2. A (The hidden benefactor)

Lesson 54: Chapter LIII

Focus: Bingley returns

Objective: Students will analyze how characterization develops in “Chapter LIII” by writing a claim-evidence-reasoning paragraph that cites at least 2 quotations from the section, and will score at least 80% on the section quiz.

Standards: AP: see the unit standards

Teacher only · spoilers

Bingley returns to Netherfield and calls at Longbourn with Darcy. Mrs. Bennet is rude to Darcy and gushing to Bingley. Darcy is silent; Elizabeth is anxious.

Background: Calls and returns of calls signal renewed courtship.

Significance: Mrs. Bennet's rudeness to Darcy is ironic since he saved her daughter.

Lesson plan and lecture script (90 minutes)

0–8 min · Bell-ringer · You do (8 min)
Students write to the bell-ringer, then pair-share.
Why is Mrs. Bennet's rudeness ironic? Write for five minutes. Starters: I think... because... / This connects to family and reputation because....
Prompt: Why is Mrs. Bennet's rudeness ironic?
Sentence starters: I think… because… · This connects to family and reputation because…
Strong response: A strong response takes a position and anticipates this: Mrs. Bennet's misplaced civility shames her daughters again, now in front of the man who rescued the family.

8–18 min · Vocabulary with etymology notes · I do (10 min)
Four key words in context, with verified word histories.
Today's words: fidgets — a restless, nervous state; rekindled — stirred up again; witnessing — be a witness to; mindful — remembering; aware. “mindful”: Origin: an English formation from mind + -ful.
Words: fidgets: a restless, nervous state · rekindled: stirred up again · witnessing: be a witness to · mindful: remembering; aware

18–28 min · Background and context · I do (10 min)
Mini-lecture (read or adapt the script).
Calls and returns of calls signal renewed courtship. Mrs. Bennet's rudeness to Darcy is ironic since he saved her daughter. Characterization: Mr. Bennet mocks his new son-in-law ("He simpers, and smirks, and makes love to us all"); Mrs. Bennet, told Bingley is returning, insists she does not care while planning a dinner for him. Irony: When Bingley and Darcy call, Mrs. Bennet is effusive to Bingley and coldly ceremonious to Darcy, the man who saved Lydia; Elizabeth alone knows the truth. Watch for silence and reserve: What characters leave unsaid (Darcy's reserve, Jane's composure, Elizabeth's secrets) drives misunderstanding. In this chapter: "seated by her; perhaps that was the reason of his silence; but it had not been so in Derbyshire. There he had" (Chapter LIII, paragraph 42).

28–40 min · I do: modeled close reading · I do (12 min)
Model the close reading of the anchor quotation using the written think-aloud below.
First, meaning. I read "He simpers, and smirks, and makes love to us all. I am prodigiously proud of him" slowly and put it in my own words: Mr. Bennet says Wickham simpers, smirks and makes love to everyone, and he is proud of him. Next, craft. I notice the heavy sarcasm, praise that is really contempt. The strongest word is "simpers": it shows falseness and empty charm. Then, effect. What is Mr. Bennet mocking in his praise of Wickham? My answer: In his praise of Wickham, Mr. Bennet is mocking Wickham's empty charm, calling him a fine fellow; he sees through him, and his humor covers bitterness at his own role in the disaster.

> He simpers, and smirks, and makes love to us all. I am prodigiously proud of him (Chapter LIII, paragraph 8)

Think-aloud: First, meaning. I read "He simpers, and smirks, and makes love to us all. I am prodigiously proud of him" slowly and put it in my own words: Mr. Bennet says Wickham simpers, smirks and makes love to everyone, and he is proud of him. Next, craft. I notice the heavy sarcasm, praise that is really contempt. The strongest word is "simpers": it shows falseness and empty charm. Then, effect. What is Mr. Bennet mocking in his praise of Wickham? My answer: In his praise of Wickham, Mr. Bennet is mocking Wickham's empty charm, calling him a fine fellow; he sees through him, and his humor covers bitterness at his own role in the disaster.

40–55 min · We do: guided annotation · We do (15 min)
Guided analysis of a second quotation; expected answers given.
Ask: What words in this line stand out, and what do they suggest? Expected: "Irremediable infamy" means disgrace that could never be undone; Darcy prevented it. Mrs. Bennet's coldness is ironic because the reader and Elizabeth know this. Family and reputation. Ask: How does this line connect to family and reputation? Expected: Mrs. Bennet's misplaced civility shames her daughters again, now in front of the man who rescued the family. (The dramatic irony stated directly.)

> Elizabeth particularly, who knew that her mother owed to the latter the preservation of her favourite daughter from irremediable infamy, was hurt and distressed to a most painful degree by a distinction so ill applied (Chapter LIII, paragraph 41)

Ask: What words in this line stand out, and what do they suggest?
Expected answer: "Irremediable infamy" means disgrace that could never be undone; Darcy prevented it. Mrs. Bennet's coldness is ironic because the reader and Elizabeth know this. Family and reputation.
Ask: How does this line connect to family and reputation?
Expected answer: Mrs. Bennet's misplaced civility shames her daughters again, now in front of the man who rescued the family. (The dramatic irony stated directly.)

55–70 min · You do: independent annotation · You do (15 min)
Independent annotation and a claim-evidence-reasoning paragraph (exemplar given).
Annotate the chapter for characterization, irony (three marks with a margin note each), then write one claim-evidence-reasoning paragraph: what does this chapter suggest about Bingley returns? Then start your writing prompt at your assigned level (HS Sophomore: Analyze how Chapter LIII develops the idea of Bingley returns. Make a precise claim, support it with at least three pieces of textual evidence, and explain how the author's use of characterization and plot shapes that idea. Address one possible counterclaim.) Exemplar: The return of Bingley and Darcy turns the family's ignorance into painful dramatic irony. When the text says "Elizabeth particularly, who knew that her mother owed to the latter the preservation of her favourite daughter from irremediable infamy, was hurt and distressed to a most painful degree by a distinction so ill applied" (Chapter LIII, paragraph 41), it shows this directly. Mrs. Bennet greets Darcy coldly, but Elizabeth knows "her mother owed to the latter the preservation of her favourite daughter from irremediable infamy," so the reader feels the injustice of "a distinction so ill applied."
Task: Annotate the chapter for characterization, irony (three marks with a margin note each), then write one claim-evidence-reasoning paragraph: what does this chapter suggest about Bingley returns? Then start your writing prompt at your assigned level (HS Sophomore: Analyze how Chapter LIII develops the idea of Bingley returns. Make a precise claim, support it with at least three pieces of textual evidence, and explain how the author's use of characterization and plot shapes that idea. Address one possible counterclaim.)
Exemplar: The return of Bingley and Darcy turns the family's ignorance into painful dramatic irony. When the text says "Elizabeth particularly, who knew that her mother owed to the latter the preservation of her favourite daughter from irremediable infamy, was hurt and distressed to a most painful degree by a distinction so ill applied" (Chapter LIII, paragraph 41), it shows this directly. Mrs. Bennet greets Darcy coldly, but Elizabeth knows "her mother owed to the latter the preservation of her favourite daughter from irremediable infamy," so the reader feels the injustice of "a distinction so ill applied."

70–80 min · Discussion · We do (10 min)
Structured discussion from the 30 tiered questions, with facilitation notes.
Anchor question: Why is Mrs. Bennet's rudeness ironic? Ask: should Elizabeth tell her mother the truth? What did Darcy want?
Anchor question: Why is Mrs. Bennet's rudeness ironic?
Facilitation: Ask: should Elizabeth tell her mother the truth? What did Darcy want?

80–87 min · Exit ticket / chapter quiz · You do (7 min)
Chapter quiz in the app and an exit ticket (answer given).
Chapter quiz in the app, then: In one sentence, what does this chapter suggest about Bingley returns? Support it with one short quotation. Model answer: The return of Bingley and Darcy turns the family's ignorance into painful dramatic irony. ("Elizabeth particularly, who knew that her mother owed to the latter the preservation of her favourite daughter from irremediable infamy, was hurt and distressed", Chapter LIII, paragraph 41). Accept any defensible claim backed by a quotation from the chapter; the answer key for the quiz is in the Quiz section.
Exit ticket: In one sentence, what does this chapter suggest about Bingley returns? Support it with one short quotation.
Answer: Model answer: The return of Bingley and Darcy turns the family's ignorance into painful dramatic irony. ("Elizabeth particularly, who knew that her mother owed to the latter the preservation of her favourite daughter from irremediable infamy, was hurt and distressed", Chapter LIII, paragraph 41). Accept any defensible claim backed by a quotation from the chapter; the answer key for the quiz is in the Quiz section.

87–90 min · Closure · I do (3 min)
Summarize the lesson and preview the next reading.
Today we saw how characterization shapes Bingley returns. Key takeaway: Mrs. Bennet's misplaced civility shames her daughters again, now in front of the man who rescued the family.

Total: 90 minutes.

Teacher analysis (spoilers)

Literary elements

- Characterization: Mr. Bennet mocks his new son-in-law ("He simpers, and smirks, and makes love to us all"); Mrs. Bennet, told Bingley is returning, insists she does not care while planning a dinner for him.
- Irony: When Bingley and Darcy call, Mrs. Bennet is effusive to Bingley and coldly ceremonious to Darcy, the man who saved Lydia; Elizabeth alone knows the truth.

Themes and how they develop

- family and reputation: Mrs. Bennet's misplaced civility shames her daughters again, now in front of the man who rescued the family.

Symbols and motifs

- silence and reserve: What characters leave unsaid (Darcy's reserve, Jane's composure, Elizabeth's secrets) drives misunderstanding. In this chapter: “seated by her; perhaps that was the reason of his silence; but it had not been so in Derbyshire. There he had” (Chapter LIII, paragraph 42).
- letters: Letters carry news, reveal character and change minds; Darcy's letter is the turning point of the novel. In this chapter: “Write to me very often, my dear” (Chapter LIII, paragraph 5).

Key quotations (checked against the reading text)

- “He simpers, and smirks, and makes love to us all. I am prodigiously proud of him” (Chapter LIII, paragraph 8) Mr. Bennet's sarcasm about Wickham: wit as a substitute for action.
- “Not that I care about it, though. He is nothing to us, you know, and I am sure I never want to see him again” (Chapter LIII, paragraph 14) Mrs. Bennet protests too much; comic self-contradiction.
- “Elizabeth particularly, who knew that her mother owed to the latter the preservation of her favourite daughter from irremediable infamy, was hurt and distressed to a most painful degree by a distinction so ill applied” (Chapter LIII, paragraph 41) The dramatic irony stated directly.

Model claim-evidence-reasoning

Claim: The return of Bingley and Darcy turns the family's ignorance into painful dramatic irony.
Evidence: “Elizabeth particularly, who knew that her mother owed to the latter the preservation of her favourite daughter from irremediable infamy, was hurt and distressed to a most painful degree by a distinction so ill applied” (Chapter LIII, paragraph 41)
Reasoning: Mrs. Bennet greets Darcy coldly, but Elizabeth knows "her mother owed to the latter the preservation of her favourite daughter from irremediable infamy," so the reader feels the injustice of "a distinction so ill applied."

Vocabulary with etymology notes

Word	Definition (in this sentence)	In context	Word history
fidgets (noun)	a restless, nervous state	Bennet was quite in the fidgets.
rekindled (verb)	stirred up again	Yet the misery, for which years of happiness were to offer no compensation, received soon afterwards material relief, from observing how much the beauty of her sister rekindled the admiration of her former lover.
witnessing (verb)	be a witness to	Her astonishment at his coming—at his coming to Netherfield, to Longbourn, and voluntarily seeking her again, was almost equal to what she had known on first witnessing his altered behaviour in Derbyshire.

mindful (adjective)	remembering; aware	Bennet was mindful of her intended civility, and they were invited and engaged to dine at Longbourn in a few days' time.	"mindful": Origin: an English formation from mind + -ful. (Liber et Libri origin note, https://en.wiktionary.org/wiki/mindful#Etymology)

Discussion questions

1. Why is Mrs. Bennet's rudeness ironic?
2. Where does characterization appear in this chapter, and what effect does it have? Point to one passage.
3. How does this chapter connect to the book's larger concern with marriage and money?

Classroom discussion questions (30, tiered)

Wait time after every question (3 s for DOK 1, 5 s for DOK 2, 8 to 10 s for DOK 3 and 4); think-pair-share on DOK 3 and 4; answer each response with a follow-up probe; close with student-generated questions. Focus sets by rigor level: Scaffolded support: 1, 2, 3, 4, 5, 6, 11, 12, 13, 14, 21, 22; HS Freshman: 1, 2, 3, 4, 5, 12, 13, 14, 15, 22, 23, 24; HS Sophomore: 1, 2, 3, 4, 13, 14, 15, 16, 17, 23, 24, 25; HS Junior: 1, 2, 3, 14, 15, 16, 17, 18, 24, 25, 26, 27; HS Senior: 1, 2, 3, 15, 16, 17, 18, 25, 26, 27, 28, 29; AP: 1, 2, 16, 17, 18, 19, 20, 26, 27, 28, 29, 30; College Freshman: 1, 2, 17, 18, 19, 20, 21, 22, 27, 28, 29, 30; College Sophomore: 1, 2, 11, 18, 19, 20, 21, 22, 23, 28, 29, 30; College Junior: 1, 11, 12, 19, 20, 21, 22, 23, 24, 25, 29, 30; College Senior: 1, 11, 12, 13, 20, 21, 22, 23, 24, 25, 26, 30; Graduate / PhD: 1, 11, 12, 13, 21, 22, 23, 24, 25, 26, 27, 28

Literal / recall

1. Who returns to Netherfield? [DOK 1 · coldCallWithSupport · wait 3 s · AP: unit standards] Look for: Bingley
2. Who comes with Bingley to Longbourn? [DOK 1 · turnAndTalk · wait 3 s · AP: unit standards] Look for: Darcy
3. How does Mrs. Bennet treat Darcy? [DOK 1 · coldCallWithSupport · wait 3 s · AP: unit standards] Look for: Rudely
4. How does Elizabeth feel when Bingley and Darcy call at Longbourn? [DOK 1 · turnAndTalk · wait 3 s · AP: unit standards] Look for: Anxious
5. What does Darcy do during the visit? [DOK 1 · coldCallWithSupport · wait 3 s · AP: unit standards] Look for: Speaks little
6. Retell the three most important events of "Chapter LIII" in order, in one sentence each. [DOK 1 · turnAndTalk · wait 3 s · AP: unit standards] Look for: Bingley returns to Netherfield and calls at Longbourn with Darcy. Mrs. Bennet is rude to Darcy and gushing to Bingley. Darcy is silent; Elizabeth is anxious.
7. Which characters appear or are mentioned in "Chapter LIII"? Name two and one thing each says or does. [DOK 1 · coldCallWithSupport · wait 3 s · AP: unit standards] Look for: Names and actions taken from the chapter; check against the teacher summary.
8. Where and when does "Chapter LIII" take place? Point to the line that tells you. [DOK 1 · turnAndTalk · wait 3 s · AP: unit standards] Look for: A place/time detail quoted from the chapter.
9. Reread: "Bennet was quite in the fidgets." What does "fidgets" mean here, and what is literally happening in this line? [DOK 1 · turnAndTalk · wait 3 s · AP: unit standards] Look for: fidgets: a restless, nervous state.
10. Reread: "Yet the misery, for which years of happiness were to offer no compensation, received soon afterwards material relief, from observing how much the beauty of her sister rekindled the admiration of her former lover." What does "rekindled" mean here, and what is literally happening in this line? [DOK 1 · turnAndTalk · wait 3 s · AP: unit standards] Look for: rekindled: stirred up again.

Inferential / analytical

1. What does “Chapter LIII” suggest about Bingley returns? State the inference and the line that supports it. [DOK 2 · thinkPairShare · wait 5 s · AP-LIT.LAN] Look for: Mrs. Bennet's rudeness to Darcy is ironic since he saved her daughter.
2. Find one example of characterization in this chapter. What does it reveal that a plain statement would not? [DOK 2 · followUp · wait 5 s · AP-LIT.CHR] Look for: Look for what characters say, do and think, and how others react to them.
3. How does the plot in this chapter shape what we understand about Bingley returns? [DOK 3 · thinkPairShare · wait 8 s · AP-LIT.STR] Look for: Look for key events and the causes linking them.
   Answer guidance: A defensible line of argument: The return of Bingley and Darcy turns the family's ignorance into painful dramatic irony. Useful evidence: “He simpers, and smirks, and makes love to us all. I am prodigiously proud of him” (Chapter LIII, paragraph 8): Mr. Bennet's sarcasm about Wickham: wit as a substitute for action. Theme link: Mrs. Bennet's misplaced civility shames her daughters again, now in front of the man who rescued the family. Credit any position that is supported by quotation and reasoning; push one-sided answers to address the strongest counterpoint.
4. In the passage that begins “But the spiritless condition which this event threw her into was shortly relieved, and her mind opened again to the agitation of hope by an article of news, which then began to be…”, why might Austen have chosen these particular words? Pick two and explain their connotations. [DOK 2 · followUp · wait 5 s · AP-LIT.FIG] Look for: Diction analysis of two words in the anchor passage.
5. What causes the main turn in “Chapter LIII”, and what effect is it likely to have on what follows? [DOK 2 · followUp · wait 5 s · AP-LIT.STR] Look for: Bingley returns to Netherfield and calls at Longbourn with Darcy. Mrs. Bennet is rude to Darcy and gushing to Bingley. Darcy is silent; Elizabeth is anxious.
6. How does “Chapter LIII” build on “Chapter LII”? Name one link of cause and effect. [DOK 3 · thinkPairShare · wait 8 s · AP-LIT.STR] Look for: A causal or structural link between this and the previous chapter.
   Answer guidance: A defensible line of argument: The return of Bingley and Darcy turns the family's ignorance into painful dramatic irony. Useful evidence: “Not that I care about it, though. He is nothing to us, you know, and I am sure I never want to see him again” (Chapter LIII, paragraph 14): Mrs. Bennet protests too much; comic self-contradiction. Theme link: Mrs. Bennet's misplaced civility shames her daughters again, now in front of the man who rescued the family. Credit any position that is supported by quotation and reasoning; push one-sided answers to address the strongest counterpoint.
7. What can we infer about a character's motives from what they say and do here, as opposed to what they claim? [DOK 3 · followUp · wait 8 s · AP-LIT.CHR] Look for: An inference about motive supported by a quoted line.
   Answer guidance: A defensible line of argument: The return of Bingley and Darcy turns the family's ignorance into painful dramatic irony. Useful evidence: “Elizabeth particularly, who knew that her mother owed to the latter the preservation of her favourite daughter from irremediable infamy, was hurt and distressed to a most painful degree by a distincti” (Chapter LIII, paragraph 41): The dramatic irony stated directly. On characterization: Mr. Bennet mocks his new son-in-law ("He simpers, and smirks, and makes love to us all"); Mrs. Bennet, told Bingley is returning, insists she does not care while planning a dinner for him. Credit any position that is supported by quotation and reasoning; push one-sided answers to address the strongest counterpoint.

8. The bell-ringer asked: “Why is Mrs. Bennet's rudeness ironic?” Now that we have read closely, how would you revise your first answer, and which line changed your mind? [DOK 2 · thinkPairShare · wait 5 s · AP-LIT.LAN] Look for: A revised answer anchored in the text.
9. Where does tone / mood appear, and how does it connect this chapter to the larger concern with marriage and money? [DOK 3 · followUp · wait 8 s · AP-LIT.FIG] Look for: Look for word choices that reveal the narrator's attitude or the scene's feeling.

   Answer guidance: A defensible line of argument: The return of Bingley and Darcy turns the family's ignorance into painful dramatic irony. Useful evidence: “He simpers, and smirks, and makes love to us all. I am prodigiously proud of him” (Chapter LIII, paragraph 8): Mr. Bennet's sarcasm about Wickham: wit as a substitute for action. Theme link: Mrs. Bennet's misplaced civility shames her daughters again, now in front of the man who rescued the family. Credit any position that is supported by quotation and reasoning; push one-sided answers to address the strongest counterpoint.
10. Background: Calls and returns of calls signal renewed courtship. How does knowing this change the way you read one moment in the chapter? [DOK 3 · thinkPairShare · wait 8 s · AP-LIT.SET] Look for: A specific moment reread in light of the context.

    Answer guidance: A defensible line of argument: The return of Bingley and Darcy turns the family's ignorance into painful dramatic irony. Useful evidence: “Not that I care about it, though. He is nothing to us, you know, and I am sure I never want to see him again” (Chapter LIII, paragraph 14): Mrs. Bennet protests too much; comic self-contradiction. Theme link: Mrs. Bennet's misplaced civility shames her daughters again, now in front of the man who rescued the family. Credit any position that is supported by quotation and reasoning; push one-sided answers to address the strongest counterpoint.

Evaluative / synthesis / creative

1. A critic might argue: “Mrs. Bennet's rudeness to Darcy is ironic since he saved her daughter.” How far do you agree? Take a stand and defend it with two lines from the chapter. [DOK 3 · fourCorners · wait 8 s · AP-LIT.LAN] Look for: A defended position with evidence and one counterpoint.

   Answer guidance: A defensible line of argument: The return of Bingley and Darcy turns the family's ignorance into painful dramatic irony. Useful evidence: “Elizabeth particularly, who knew that her mother owed to the latter the preservation of her favourite daughter from irremediable infamy, was hurt and distressed to a most painful degree by a distincti” (Chapter LIII, paragraph 41): The dramatic irony stated directly. Theme link: Mrs. Bennet's misplaced civility shames her daughters again, now in front of the man who rescued the family. Credit any position that is supported by quotation and reasoning; push one-sided answers to address the strongest counterpoint.
2. Which character in this chapter acts most wisely, and which least? Judge them by a standard you name. [DOK 3 · thinkPairShare · wait 8 s · AP-LIT.CHR, AP-LIT.LAN] Look for: An evaluation using an explicit criterion and evidence.

   Answer guidance: A defensible line of argument: The return of Bingley and Darcy turns the family's ignorance into painful dramatic irony. Useful evidence: “He simpers, and smirks, and makes love to us all. I am prodigiously proud of him” (Chapter LIII, paragraph 8): Mr. Bennet's sarcasm about Wickham: wit as a substitute for action. On characterization: Mr. Bennet mocks his new son-in-law ("He simpers, and smirks, and makes love to us all"); Mrs. Bennet, told Bingley is returning, insists she does not care while planning a dinner for him. Credit any position that is supported by quotation and reasoning; push one-sided answers to address the strongest counterpoint.

3. Rewrite one moment of “Chapter LIII” from the point of view of a different character. What does the new angle reveal or hide about Bingley returns? [DOK 4 · thinkPairShare · wait 8 s · AP-LIT.LAN, AP-LIT.NAR] Look for: A creative product with a rationale tied to the text.

   Answer guidance: A defensible line of argument: The return of Bingley and Darcy turns the family's ignorance into painful dramatic irony. Useful evidence: “Not that I care about it, though. He is nothing to us, you know, and I am sure I never want to see him again” (Chapter LIII, paragraph 14): Mrs. Bennet protests too much; comic self-contradiction. Theme link: Mrs. Bennet's misplaced civility shames her daughters again, now in front of the man who rescued the family. Credit any position that is supported by quotation and reasoning; push one-sided answers to address the strongest counterpoint.

4. Write three questions of your own about “Chapter LIII”: one recall, one “why/how”, and one “should/what if”. Trade with a partner and answer theirs. [DOK 3 · studentGenerated · wait 8 s · AP-LIT.LAN] Look for: Student-generated questions at three levels.

   Answer guidance: A defensible line of argument: The return of Bingley and Darcy turns the family's ignorance into painful dramatic irony. Useful evidence: “Elizabeth particularly, who knew that her mother owed to the latter the preservation of her favourite daughter from irremediable infamy, was hurt and distressed to a most painful degree by a distincti” (Chapter LIII, paragraph 41): The dramatic irony stated directly. Theme link: Mrs. Bennet's misplaced civility shames her daughters again, now in front of the man who rescued the family. Credit any position that is supported by quotation and reasoning; push one-sided answers to address the strongest counterpoint.

5. Connect this chapter to class and social mobility: is the link strong or weak so far? What would Austen need to show next to strengthen it? [DOK 4 · socraticCircle · wait 8 s · AP-LIT.LAN] Look for: A judgment of thematic development across the work.

   Answer guidance: A defensible line of argument: The return of Bingley and Darcy turns the family's ignorance into painful dramatic irony. Useful evidence: “He simpers, and smirks, and makes love to us all. I am prodigiously proud of him” (Chapter LIII, paragraph 8): Mr. Bennet's sarcasm about Wickham: wit as a substitute for action. Theme link: Mrs. Bennet's misplaced civility shames her daughters again, now in front of the man who rescued the family. Credit any position that is supported by quotation and reasoning; push one-sided answers to address the strongest counterpoint.

6. Is the characterization in this chapter effective, or does it feel heavy-handed? Evaluate it as a reader would in a review. [DOK 3 · fourCorners · wait 8 s · AP-LIT.CHR, AP-LIT.LAN] Look for: An evaluative judgment with criteria and evidence.

   Answer guidance: A defensible line of argument: The return of Bingley and Darcy turns the family's ignorance into painful dramatic irony. Useful evidence: “Not that I care about it, though. He is nothing to us, you know, and I am sure I never want to see him again” (Chapter LIII, paragraph 14): Mrs. Bennet protests too much; comic self-contradiction. On characterization: Mr. Bennet mocks his new son-in-law ("He simpers, and smirks, and makes love to us all"); Mrs. Bennet, told Bingley is returning, insists she does not care while planning a dinner for him. Credit any position that is supported by quotation and reasoning; push one-sided answers to address the strongest counterpoint.

7. Compare how “Chapter LIII” treats Bingley returns with how another text, film or event you know treats a similar idea. What does Pride and Prejudice see that the other misses? [DOK 4 · socraticCircle · wait 8 s · AP-LIT.LAN] Look for: A cross-text synthesis.

   Answer guidance: A defensible line of argument: The return of Bingley and Darcy turns the family's ignorance into painful dramatic irony. Useful evidence: “Elizabeth particularly, who knew that her mother owed to the latter the preservation of her favourite daughter from irremediable infamy, was hurt and distressed to a most painful degree by a distincti" (Chapter LIII, paragraph 41): The dramatic irony stated directly. Theme link: Mrs. Bennet's misplaced civility shames her daughters again, now in front of the man who rescued the family. Credit any position that is supported by quotation and reasoning; push one-sided answers to address the strongest counterpoint.

8. Predict what "Chapter LIV" will bring, using two clues from this chapter. After reading, evaluate your prediction. [DOK 3 · thinkPairShare · wait 8 s · AP-LIT.LAN, AP-LIT.STR] Look for: A prediction or judgment justified with textual clues.

   Answer guidance: A defensible line of argument: The return of Bingley and Darcy turns the family's ignorance into painful dramatic irony. Useful evidence: "He simpers, and smirks, and makes love to us all. I am prodigiously proud of him" (Chapter LIII, paragraph 8): Mr. Bennet's sarcasm about Wickham: wit as a substitute for action. Theme link: Mrs. Bennet's misplaced civility shames her daughters again, now in front of the man who rescued the family. Credit any position that is supported by quotation and reasoning; push one-sided answers to address the strongest counterpoint.

9. Design a one-paragraph modern adaptation of this chapter (setting, characters, conflict). What must stay the same for it to still be about Bingley returns? [DOK 4 · thinkPairShare · wait 8 s · AP-LIT.LAN] Look for: A creative transfer that keeps the core idea.

   Answer guidance: A defensible line of argument: The return of Bingley and Darcy turns the family's ignorance into painful dramatic irony. Useful evidence: "Not that I care about it, though. He is nothing to us, you know, and I am sure I never want to see him again" (Chapter LIII, paragraph 14): Mrs. Bennet protests too much; comic self-contradiction. Theme link: Mrs. Bennet's misplaced civility shames her daughters again, now in front of the man who rescued the family. Credit any position that is supported by quotation and reasoning; push one-sided answers to address the strongest counterpoint.

10. What question would you most like to ask Jane Austen about this chapter, and what answer do you think the text itself gives? [DOK 4 · studentGenerated · wait 8 s · AP-LIT.LAN] Look for: A student-generated question answered from evidence.

    Answer guidance: A defensible line of argument: The return of Bingley and Darcy turns the family's ignorance into painful dramatic irony. Useful evidence: "Elizabeth particularly, who knew that her mother owed to the latter the preservation of her favourite daughter from irremediable infamy, was hurt and distressed to a most painful degree by a distincti" (Chapter LIII, paragraph 41): The dramatic irony stated directly. Theme link: Mrs. Bennet's misplaced civility shames her daughters again, now in front of the man who rescued the family. Credit any position that is supported by quotation and reasoning; push one-sided answers to address the strongest counterpoint.

Annotation focus

- Characterization: look for what characters say, do and think, and how others react to them (anchor passage in the We do segment)
- Also notice Plot: key events and the causes linking them
- Also notice Tone / mood: word choices that reveal the narrator's attitude or the scene's feeling

Chapter quiz: item bank (all eleven rigor versions)

1. [mc · recall · DOK 1] What does Darcy do during the visit?

   A. Plays piano

B. Speaks little

C. Proposes

D. Leaves early angrily

Key: B (Speaks little)

2. [mc · recall · DOK 1] How does Mrs. Bennet treat Darcy?

A. Silently

B. Rudely

C. Lovingly

D. Graciously

Key: B (Rudely)

3. [fill · recall · DOK 1] Fill in the blank with the vocabulary word that fits: "Bennet was quite in the _____."

Word bank: rekindled, witnessing, mindful, fidgets

Key: fidgets

4. [mc · recall · DOK 1] Who returns to Netherfield?

A. Collins

B. Wickham

C. Fitzwilliam

D. Bingley

Key: D (Bingley)

5. [mc · recall · DOK 1] Who comes with Bingley to Longbourn?

A. Caroline

B. Darcy

C. Georgiana

D. Mr. Hurst

Key: B (Darcy)

6. [mc · recall · DOK 1] In the line "Her astonishment at his coming—at his coming to Netherfield, to Longbourn, and voluntarily seeking her again, was almost equal to what she had known on first witnessing his altered behaviour in Derbyshire.", what does "witnessing" most nearly mean?

A. odd; unusual in behavior

B. giving careful attention to detail; hard to please; excessively concerned with cleanliness

C. be a witness to

D. a state of nervous excitement

Key: C (be a witness to)

7. [mc · recall · DOK 1] In the line "Bennet was mindful of her intended civility, and they were invited and engaged to dine at Longbourn in a few days' time.", what does "mindful" most nearly mean?

A. remembering; aware

B. a cordial disposition

C. expressions of agreement

D. put into a rage; make violently angry

Key: A (remembering; aware)

8. [fill · recall · DOK 1] Complete the quotation from Chapter LIII, paragraph 41: “Elizabeth _____, who knew that her mother owed to the latter the preservation of her favourite daughter from irremediable infamy, was hurt and distressed to a most painful degree by a distinction so ill applied”
   Key: particularly
9. [fill · recall · DOK 1] Fill in the blank with the vocabulary word that fits: “Yet the misery, for which years of happiness were to offer no compensation, received soon afterwards material relief, from observing how much the beauty of her sister _____ the admiration of her former lover.” Word bank: rekindled, fidgets, mindful, witnessing
   Key: rekindled
10. [mc · recall · DOK 1] How does Elizabeth feel when Bingley and Darcy call at Longbourn?
    A. Anxious
    B. Bored
    C. Furious
    D. Relieved

    Key: A (Anxious)
11. [fill · recall · DOK 1] Complete the quotation from Chapter LIII, paragraph 14: “Not that I care about it, though. He is _____ to us, you know, and I am sure I never want to see him again”
    Key: nothing
12. [short · inference · DOK 2] What can you infer from this line? “He simpers, and smirks, and makes love to us all. I am prodigiously proud of him” (Chapter LIII, paragraph 8) Answer in two or three sentences with one detail.
    Sample answer: Mr. Bennet's sarcasm about Wickham: wit as a substitute for action. The evidence is “He simpers, and smirks, and makes love to us all. I am prodigiously proud of him” (Chapter LIII, paragraph 8).
13. [mc · analysis · DOK 3] Which literary element does this describe in “Chapter LIII”? When Bingley and Darcy call, Mrs. Bennet is effusive to Bingley and coldly ceremonious to Darcy, the man who saved Lydia; Elizabeth alone knows the truth.
    A. Irony
    B. Plot
    C. Alliteration
    D. Diction / vocabulary

    Key: A (Irony)
14. [short · analysis · DOK 3] Claim: The return of Bingley and Darcy turns the family's ignorance into painful dramatic irony. Explain how this evidence supports the claim: “Elizabeth particularly, who knew that her mother owed to the latter the preservation of her favourite daughter from irremediable infamy, was hurt and distressed to a most painful degree by a distinction so ill applied” (Chapter LIII, paragraph 41).
    Sample answer: Mrs. Bennet greets Darcy coldly, but Elizabeth knows "her mother owed to the latter the preservation of her favourite daughter from irremediable infamy," so the reader feels the injustice of "a distinction so ill applied.". The evidence is “Elizabeth particularly, who knew that her mother owed to the latter the preservation of her favourite daughter from irremediable infamy,…” (Chapter LIII, paragraph 41), which shows the dramatic irony stated directly. This develops family and reputation: Mrs. Bennet's misplaced civility shames her daughters again, now in front of the man who rescued the family.

15. [short · synthesis · DOK 4] Evaluate this claim about the chapter: “The return of Bingley and Darcy turns the family's ignorance into painful dramatic irony.” Is it fully persuasive? Argue with evidence, including a passage that complicates it.

    Sample answer: The claim is persuasive in part. “Elizabeth particularly, who knew that her mother owed to the latter the preservation of her favourite daughter from irremediable infamy, was hurt and…” (Chapter LIII, paragraph 41) supports it: Mrs. Bennet greets Darcy coldly, but Elizabeth knows "her mother owed to the latter the preservation of her favourite daughter from irremediable infamy," so the reader feels the injustice of "a distinction so ill applied.". But “Not that I care about it, though. He is nothing to us, you know, and I am sure I never want to see him again” (Chapter LIII, paragraph 14) complicates it: Mrs. Bennet protests too much; comic self-contradiction, and its “Not” marks a limit or reversal the claim passes over. The claim is therefore a strong reading, not a complete one, and a careful answer says where it stops applying.

16. [short · synthesis · DOK 4] Synthesis: trace how family and reputation develops from Chapter LI to Chapter LIII. Use one quotation from each.

    Sample answer: Earlier, in Chapter LI, paragraph 4, the text reads “Lydia was Lydia still; untamed, unabashed, wild, noisy, and fearless”, which shows the narrator's list of five adjectives. In Chapter LIII, “He simpers, and smirks, and makes love to us all. I am prodigiously proud of him” (Chapter LIII, paragraph 8) — Mr. Bennet's sarcasm about Wickham: wit as a substitute for action. Mrs. Bennet's misplaced civility shames her daughters again, now in front of the man who rescued the family.

17. [mc · recall · DOK 1] Which word completes this sentence from Chapter LIII, paragraph 20? “In spite of what her sister declared, and really believed to be her feelings, in the _____ of his arrival, Elizabeth could easily perceive that her spirits were affected by it.”

    A. latest
    B. twelvemonth
    C. daughter
    D. expectation

    Key: D (expectation)

18. [fill · recall · DOK 1] Complete the quotation from Chapter LIII, paragraph 17: “I saw you look at me today, Lizzy, when my aunt told us of the present report; and I know I appeared _____.” Word bank: twelvemonth, satisfied, distressed, arrival

    Key: distressed

19. [mc · recall · DOK 1] Which word completes this sentence from Chapter LIII, paragraph 27? “As the day of his _____ drew near, ‘I begin to be sorry that he comes at all,’ said Jane to her sister.”

    A. expectation
    B. arrival
    C. distressed
    D. neighbouring

    Key: B (arrival)

20. [mc · recall · DOK 1] Which word completes this sentence from Chapter LIII, paragraph 12? “If that had been _____, she would not have gone so soon.”

    A. nearer
    B. distressed
    C. expectation
    D. pleasure

Key: A (nearer)

21. [fill · recall · DOK 1] Complete the quotation from Chapter LIII, paragraph 8: “He simpers, and smirks, and makes love to us all. I am _____ proud of him”
    Key: prodigiously

22. [short · inference · DOK 2] What does this passage from Chapter LIII, paragraph 27 reveal about the character or situation? “It would be nothing; I could see him with perfect indifference, but I can hardly bear to hear it thus perpetually talked of.” Answer in two or three sentences with one detail.
    Sample answer: The passage (Chapter LIII, paragraph 27) shows the situation turning on first impressions and prejudice: Mrs. Bennet's misplaced civility shames her daughters again, now in front of the man who rescued the family. The words “indifference” and “perpetually” are the proof, because they show how the moment looks to the people in it. They suggest more than the narrator states outright.

23. [short · inference · DOK 2] What does this passage from Chapter LIII, paragraph 2 reveal about the character or situation? “The day of his and Lydia’s departure soon came, and Mrs. Bennet was forced to submit to a separation, which, as her husband by no means entered into her scheme of their all going to Newcastle, was likely to continue at least a twelvemonth.” Answer in two or three sentences with one detail.
    Sample answer: The passage (Chapter LIII, paragraph 2) shows the situation turning on first impressions and prejudice: Mrs. Bennet's misplaced civility shames her daughters again, now in front of the man who rescued the family. The words “twelvemonth” and “separation” are the proof, because they show how the moment looks to the people in it. They suggest more than the narrator states outright.

24. [short · analysis · DOK 3] Analyze how the word choice in this passage from Chapter LIII, paragraph 36 shapes its tone: “The colour which had been driven from her face returned for half a minute with an additional glow, and a smile of delight added lustre to her eyes, as she thought for that space of time, that his affection and wishes must still be unshaken.” Pick two words and explain their effect.
    Sample answer: The words “additional” and “affection” (Chapter LIII, paragraph 36) make the tone heavy and deliberate rather than neutral. That weight points the reader to pride and self-knowledge: Mrs. Bennet's misplaced civility shames her daughters again, now in front of the man who rescued the family. The author chooses them so the moment feels significant instead of passing.

25. [short · analysis · DOK 3] Analyze the word choice in “Elizabeth particularly, who knew that her mother owed to the latter the preservation of her favourite daughter from irremediable infamy, was hurt and distressed to a most painful degree by a distinction so ill applied” (Chapter LIII, paragraph 41). Pick two words and explain what they suggest.
    Sample answer: The dramatic irony stated directly. The evidence is “Elizabeth particularly, who knew that her mother owed to the latter the preservation of her favourite daughter from irremediable infamy,…” (Chapter LIII, paragraph 41). This develops family and reputation: Mrs. Bennet's misplaced civility shames her daughters again, now in front of the man who rescued the family. The words “preservation” and “irremediable” carry that meaning: they are the charged choices in the line, and changing either would soften the effect.

26. [short · analysis · DOK 3] Analyze how the word choice in this passage from Chapter LIII, paragraph 29 shapes its tone: “But on the third morning after his arrival in Hertfordshire, she saw him from her dressing-room window, enter the paddock, and ride towards the house.” Pick two words and explain their effect.
    Sample answer: The words “dressing” and “morning” (Chapter LIII, paragraph 29) make the tone heavy and deliberate rather than neutral. That weight points the reader to class and social mobility: Mrs. Bennet's misplaced civility shames her daughters again, now in front of the man who rescued the family. The author chooses them so the moment feels significant instead of passing.

27. [short · synthesis · DOK 4] Connect this passage from Chapter LIII, paragraph 42 to the story's treatment of marriage and money: “There he had talked to her friends, when he could not to herself.” Use one other moment from the story as well.
    Sample answer: This passage (Chapter LIII, paragraph 42) develops marriage and money: Mrs. Bennet's misplaced civility shames her daughters again, now in front of the man who rescued the family. Its words “herself” and “friends” carry that idea into this moment. The same concern returns in “She was in no humour for conversation with anyone but himself; and to him she had hardly courage to speak.” (Chapter LIII, paragraph 44), so the two passages read as a pattern, not a single moment. Together they show the story treating marriage and money as central.
28. [short · inference · DOK 2] What can you infer from this line? “Not that I care about it, though. He is nothing to us, you know, and I am sure I never want to see him again” (Chapter LIII, paragraph 14) Answer in two or three sentences with one detail.
    Sample answer: Mrs. Bennet protests too much; comic self-contradiction. The evidence is “Not that I care about it, though. He is nothing to us, you know, and I am sure I never want to see him again” (Chapter LIII, paragraph 14).
29. [short · analysis · DOK 3] Analyze how the word choice in this passage from Chapter LIII, paragraph 15 shapes its tone: “You may depend on it,’ replied the other, ‘for Mrs. Nicholls was in Meryton last night; I saw her passing by, and went out myself on purpose to know the truth of it; and she told me that it was certain true.” Pick two words and explain their effect.
    Sample answer: The words “replied” and “passing” (Chapter LIII, paragraph 15) make the tone heavy and deliberate rather than neutral. That weight points the reader to class and social mobility: Mrs. Bennet's misplaced civility shames her daughters again, now in front of the man who rescued the family. The author chooses them so the moment feels significant instead of passing.
30. [short · analysis · DOK 3] Analyze how the word choice in this passage from Chapter LIII, paragraph 17 shapes its tone: “I was only confused for the moment, because I felt that I should be looked at.” Pick two words and explain their effect.
    Sample answer: The words “confused” and “because” (Chapter LIII, paragraph 17) make the tone heavy and deliberate rather than neutral. That weight points the reader to pride and self-knowledge: Mrs. Bennet's misplaced civility shames her daughters again, now in front of the man who rescued the family. The author chooses them so the moment feels significant instead of passing.
31. [short · synthesis · DOK 4] Connect this passage from Chapter LIII, paragraph 20 to the story's treatment of women's limited choices: “They were more disturbed, more unequal, than she had often seen them.” Use one other moment from the story as well.
    Sample answer: This passage (Chapter LIII, paragraph 20) develops women's limited choices: Mrs. Bennet's misplaced civility shames her daughters again, now in front of the man who rescued the family. Its words “disturbed” and “unequal” carry that idea into this moment. The same concern returns in “As soon as ever Mr. Bingley comes, my dear,’ said Mrs. Bennet, ‘you will wait on him of course.” (Chapter LIII, paragraph 22), so the two passages read as a pattern, not a single moment. Together they show the story treating women's limited choices as central.
32. [fill · recall · DOK 1 · AP: AP-LIT.FIG] Complete the quotation from Chapter LIII, paragraph 1: “Mr. Wickham was so perfectly satisfied with this _____, that he never again distressed himself, or provoked his dear sister Elizabeth, by introducing the subject of it; and she was pleased to find that she had said enough to keep him quiet.” Word bank: changing, distressed, satisfied, conversation
    Key: conversation
33. [short · synthesis · DOK 4 · AP: AP-LIT.LAN] Connect this passage from Chapter LIII, paragraph 39 to the story's treatment of women's limited choices: “He looked serious as usual; and she thought, more as he had been used to look in Hertfordshire, than as she had seen him at Pemberley." Use one other moment from the story as well.

Sample answer: This passage (Chapter LIII, paragraph 39) develops women's limited choices: Mrs. Bennet's misplaced civility shames her daughters again, now in front of the man who rescued the family. Its words "thought" and "serious" carry that idea into this moment. The same concern returns in "Bingley, she had likewise seen for an instant, and in that short period saw him looking both pleased and embarrassed." (Chapter LIII, paragraph 40), so the two passages read as a pattern, not a single moment. Together they show the story treating women's limited choices as central.

34. [fill · recall · DOK 1 · AP: AP-LIT.FIG] Complete the quotation from Chapter LIII, paragraph 24: "His wife represented to him how absolutely necessary such an attention would be from all the _____ gentlemen, on his returning to Netherfield." Word bank: nearer, remarks, pleasure, neighbouring

Key: neighbouring

35. [mc · analysis · DOK 3 · AP: AP-LIT.CHR] Which literary element does this describe in "Chapter LIII"? Mr. Bennet mocks his new son-in-law ('He simpers, and smirks, and makes love to us all'); Mrs. Bennet, told Bingley is returning, insists she does not care while planning a dinner for him.

A. Simile

B. Theme

C. Characterization

D. Allusion

Key: C (Characterization)

36. [short · synthesis · DOK 4 · AP: AP-LIT.LAN] Connect this passage from Chapter LIII, paragraph 25 to the story's treatment of marriage and money: "I will not spend my hours in running after my neighbours every time they go away, and come back again." Use one other moment from the story as well.

Sample answer: This passage (Chapter LIII, paragraph 25) develops marriage and money: Mrs. Bennet's misplaced civility shames her daughters again, now in front of the man who rescued the family. Its words "neighbours" and "running" carry that idea into this moment. The same concern returns in "But, however, that shan't prevent my asking him to dine here, I am determined." (Chapter LIII, paragraph 26), so the two passages read as a pattern, not a single moment. Together they show the story treating marriage and money as central.

37. [mc · inference · DOK 2 · Dual Credit (Indiana College Core): ICC-WC-1.5] Which choice best states a central concern of "Chapter LIII"?

A. A ridiculous proposal

B. Bingley returns

C. Parental conflict over the refusal

D. The letter

Key: B (Bingley returns)

38. [mc · inference · DOK 2 · Dual Credit (Indiana College Core): ICC-WC-1.5] What does this passage most clearly show? "Not that I care about it, though. He is nothing to us, you know, and I am sure I never want to see him again" (Chapter LIII, paragraph 14)

A. The colonel on money.

B. Mrs. Bennet protests too much; comic self-contradiction.

C. Lady Catherine on the departure: she treats everything as about her.

D. Elizabeth mocks Darcy's snobbery about the Gardiners' address in trade-class London.

Key: B (Mrs. Bennet protests too much; comic self-contradiction.)

39. [short · synthesis · DOK 4 · Dual Credit (Indiana College Core): ICC-WC-1.5] Close reading: how do the diction and syntax of “He simpers, and smirks, and makes love to us all. I am prodigiously proud of him” (Chapter LIII, paragraph 8) shape its meaning? Consider a second, competing reading.
Sample answer: Mr. Bennet's sarcasm about Wickham: wit as a substitute for action. The evidence is “He simpers, and smirks, and makes love to us all. I am prodigiously proud of him” (Chapter LIII, paragraph 8). This develops family and reputation: Mrs. Bennet's misplaced civility shames her daughters again, now in front of the man who rescued the family. The words “prodigiously” and “simpers” carry that meaning: they are the charged choices in the line, and changing either would soften the effect. Mrs. Bennet greets Darcy coldly, but Elizabeth knows "her mother owed to the latter the preservation of her favourite daughter from irremediable infamy," so the reader feels the injustice of "a distinction so ill applied.".

40. [short · synthesis · DOK 4 · Program outcome: LeL-C2-LIT-1] Close reading: how do the diction and syntax of “Not that I care about it, though. He is nothing to us, you know, and I am sure I never want to see him again” (Chapter LIII, paragraph 14) shape its meaning? Consider a second, competing reading.
Sample answer: Mrs. Bennet protests too much; comic self-contradiction. The evidence is “Not that I care about it, though. He is nothing to us, you know, and I am sure I never want to see him again” (Chapter LIII, paragraph 14). This develops family and reputation: Mrs. Bennet's misplaced civility shames her daughters again, now in front of the man who rescued the family. The words “nothing” and “though” carry that meaning: they are the charged choices in the line, and changing either would soften the effect. Mrs. Bennet greets Darcy coldly, but Elizabeth knows "her mother owed to the latter the preservation of her favourite daughter from irremediable infamy," so the reader feels the injustice of "a distinction so ill applied.".

41. [mc · inference · DOK 2 · Program outcome: LeL-C3-LIT-1] What does this passage most clearly show? “Elizabeth particularly, who knew that her mother owed to the latter the preservation of her favourite daughter from irremediable infamy, was hurt and distressed to a most painful degree by a distinction so ill applied” (Chapter LIII, paragraph 41)
    A. Darcy's change is read as proof of love.
    B. He predicts his remorse will fade, and it does.
    C. Mrs. Bennet swears off Bingley moments before her husband reveals he has already visited him.
    D. The dramatic irony stated directly.

Key: D (The dramatic irony stated directly.)

Rigor version	Items (in order)	Mix
Scaffolded support	1, 2, 3, 4, 5, 6, 7, 8, 9, 10, 11, 12, 13, 14, 15, 16	recall 11, inference 1, analysis 2, synthesis 2
HS Freshman	9, 2, 17, 18, 10, 19, 20, 5, 6, 21, 22, 23, 24, 25, 26, 27	recall 10, inference 2, analysis 3, synthesis 1
HS Sophomore	3, 10, 2, 19, 8, 1, 9, 20, 22, 28, 23, 26, 29, 30, 16, 31	recall 8, inference 3, analysis 3, synthesis 2
HS Junior	2, 32, 1, 18, 7, 17, 19, 5, 23, 22, 30, 13, 24, 29, 33, 27	recall 8, inference 2, analysis 4, synthesis 2
HS Senior	34, 6, 21, 2, 10, 7, 20, 22, 23, 30, 26, 24, 35, 16, 36, 27	recall 7, inference 2, analysis 4, synthesis 3
AP	1, 5, 10, 9, 21, 22, 24, 25, 30, 35, 26, 15, 33, 16, 27, 36	recall 5, inference 1, analysis 5, synthesis 5

College Freshman	18, 20, 9, 4, 37, 38, 23, 24, 29, 26, 30, 14, 39, 36, 16, 27	recall 4, inference 3, analysis 5, synthesis 4
College Sophomore	9, 34, 4, 5, 2, 37, 26, 14, 30, 24, 36, 16, 15, 31, 27, 40	recall 5, inference 1, analysis 4, synthesis 6
College Junior	10, 18, 21, 38, 41, 30, 29, 24, 35, 26, 16, 15, 36, 33, 27, 31	recall 3, inference 2, analysis 5, synthesis 6
College Senior	2, 3, 9, 4, 5, 10, 14, 30, 29, 27, 33, 31, 36, 16, 15, 39	recall 6, inference 0, analysis 3, synthesis 7
Graduate / PhD	10, 3, 9, 4, 38, 14, 30, 13, 26, 16, 39, 31, 33, 15, 36, 27	recall 4, inference 1, analysis 4, synthesis 7

Writing prompts (eleven rigor levels)

Scaffolded support (250 words; AP: see unit standards): Supported track (work from the passage your teacher selects). In “Chapter LIII,” how does Austen show Bingley returns? Write a paragraph that states your claim, quotes two details from the passage, and explains how each detail supports your idea. Use the characterization you noticed as one piece of evidence.

HS Freshman (350 words; AP: see unit standards): In Chapter LIII, how does Austen develop the idea of Bingley returns? State a clear claim, support it with two or three quotations, and explain how the characterization in the chapter helps build that idea.

HS Sophomore (450 words; AP: see unit standards): Analyze how Chapter LIII develops the idea of Bingley returns. Make a precise claim, support it with at least three pieces of textual evidence, and explain how the author's use of characterization and plot shapes that idea. Address one possible counterclaim.

HS Junior (550 words; AP: see unit standards): Analyze how the structure of Chapter LIII (where it begins, turns and ends) and its characterization shape the reader's understanding of Bingley returns. Identify one place where the text leaves matters uncertain and explain how that uncertainty adds to its meaning.

HS Senior (600 words; AP: see unit standards): Two readers disagree about what Chapter LIII suggests about Bingley returns. Lay out two plausible interpretations, weigh the evidence for each (including the chapter's characterization and plot), and argue for the stronger one in a sustained, well-organized essay.

AP (650 words; AP: AP-LIT.CHR, AP-LIT.LAN): Write a literary argument in which you analyze how Jane Austen uses characterization in Chapter LIII to complicate the reader's understanding of Bingley returns. Develop a defensible thesis, select evidence purposefully, and explain how specific choices of diction and syntax create meaning.

College Freshman (1000 words; AP: see unit standards): Situate Chapter LIII within its historical and literary context and argue how the chapter's treatment of Bingley returns responds to that context. Engage with at least one secondary perspective (a critic, historian or the author's own statements), integrate quotations smoothly, and cite in MLA style.

College Sophomore (1250 words; AP: see unit standards): Read Chapter LIII alongside the conventions of its genre and period. Argue how the chapter's handling of Bingley returns follows or bends those conventions, using the characterization as evidence, and test your reading against one published critic. Document two secondary sources in MLA.

College Junior (1500 words; AP: see unit standards): Apply a named critical approach (for example formalist, historicist, feminist, psychoanalytic or ecocritical) to Chapter LIII and its treatment of Bingley returns. State your method, show what it reveals in the chapter's characterization and plot, and identify where the text resists it.

College Senior (2000 words; AP: see unit standards): Develop a research argument that reads Chapter LIII as evidence for a larger claim about Bingley returns in Pride and Prejudice. Connect close reading of the chapter to the whole novel, engage at least four scholarly sources, and state precisely where your reading departs from theirs (Chicago style).

Graduate / PhD (2500 words; AP: see unit standards): Develop an original argument that reads Chapter LIII as a hinge in the novel's larger treatment of Bingley returns. Position your reading within a named critical conversation (for example formalist, historicist, psychoanalytic, feminist or postcolonial approaches), account for the textual history where relevant, and articulate the stakes of your intervention for scholarship on Pride and Prejudice.

SAT-style questions

1. Bennet was quite in the fidgets.

   As used in the text, what does the word “fidgets” most nearly mean?

   A. stirred up again

   B. be a witness to

   C. remembering; aware

   D. a restless, nervous state

2. But the spiritless condition which this event threw her into was shortly relieved, and her mind opened again to the agitation of hope by an article of news, which then began to be in circulation. The housekeeper at Netherfield had received orders to prepare for the arrival of her master, who was coming down in a day or two, to shoot there for several weeks. Mrs. Bennet was quite in the fidgets. She looked at Jane, and smiled, and shook her head by turns.

   Which choice best states a central concern of “Chapter LIII”?

   A. Bingley returns

   B. Pemberley

   C. The great confrontation

   D. The accomplished woman

SAT key: 1. D (a restless, nervous state); 2. A (Bingley returns)

Lesson 55: Chapter LIV

Focus: renewed hope

Objective: Students will analyze how characterization develops in “Chapter LIV” by writing a claim-evidence-reasoning paragraph that cites at least 2 quotations from the section, and will score at least 80% on the section quiz.

Standards: AP: see the unit standards

Teacher only · spoilers

At dinner Bingley sits by Jane. Darcy is distant and seated far from Elizabeth. Jane claims she and Bingley are only friends; Elizabeth doubts it.

Background: Seating at dinner revealed intentions and status.

Significance: Restraint and miscommunication delay resolution.

Lesson plan and lecture script (90 minutes)

0–8 min · Bell-ringer · You do (8 min)
Students write to the bell-ringer, then pair-share.
Why is Jane insisting she is indifferent? Write for five minutes. Starters: I think... because... / This connects to pride and prejudice because....
Prompt: Why is Jane insisting she is indifferent?
Sentence starters: I think… because… · This connects to pride and prejudice because…
Strong response: A strong response takes a position and anticipates this: Jane claims indifference to Bingley that no one believes; both sisters struggle to read and to show their feelings.

8–18 min · Vocabulary with etymology notes · I do (10 min)
Five key words in context, with verified word histories.
Today's words: enabling — making possible for; venison — deer meat; roasted — cook with dry heat, usually in an oven; enraged — put into a rage; make violently angry; triumphant — joyful and proud especially because of triumph or success. “enabling”: Origin of “enable”: an English formation from en- + able. “venison”: From Old French venesoun, from Latin venatio "a hunt," from venari "to hunt." (Not from venire "to come.") “enraged”: Origin of “enrage”: Old French enrager. “triumphant”: Origin: Latin triumphāns.
Words: enabling: making possible for · venison: deer meat · roasted: cook with dry heat, usually in an oven · enraged: put into a rage; make violently angry · triumphant: joyful and proud especially because of triumph or success

18–28 min · Background and context · I do (10 min)
Mini-lecture (read or adapt the script).
Seating at dinner revealed intentions and status. Restraint and miscommunication delay resolution. Characterization: Elizabeth, alone, is vexed by Darcy's silence ("Teasing, teasing, man!") and then furious with herself for hoping. Point of view: Free indirect discourse puts us inside Elizabeth's confusion; she is now the one misreading reserve, but this time she knows she may be wrong. Watch for silence and reserve: What characters leave unsaid (Darcy's reserve, Jane's composure, Elizabeth's secrets) drives misunderstanding. In this chapter: "Why, if he came only to be silent, grave, and indifferent," said she, "did he come at all" (Chapter LIV, paragraph 2).

28–40 min · I do: modeled close reading · I do (12 min)
Model the close reading of the anchor quotation using the written think-aloud below.
First, meaning. I read "If he fears me, why come hither? If he no longer cares for me, why silent? Teasing, teasing, man" slowly and put it in my own words: Elizabeth asks herself why Darcy came if he fears her, and why he is silent if he no longer cares. Next, craft. I notice the rhetorical questions and the exclamation, which show her agitation. The strongest word is "Teasing": it shows she is annoyed and hopeful at once. Then, effect. Why is Elizabeth frustrated by Darcy's silence? My answer: Elizabeth is frustrated by Darcy's silence because she now cares about Darcy and cannot read his feelings; her frustration shows how her own feelings have changed.

> If he fears me, why come hither? If he no longer cares for me, why silent? Teasing, teasing, man (Chapter LIV, paragraph 4)

Think-aloud: First, meaning. I read "If he fears me, why come hither? If he no longer cares for me, why silent? Teasing, teasing, man" slowly and put it in my own words: Elizabeth asks herself why Darcy came if he fears her, and why he is silent if he no longer cares. Next, craft. I notice the rhetorical questions and the exclamation, which show her agitation. The strongest word is "Teasing": it shows she is annoyed and hopeful at once. Then, effect. Why is Elizabeth frustrated by Darcy's silence? My answer: Elizabeth is frustrated by Darcy's silence because she now cares about Darcy and cannot read his feelings; her frustration shows how her own feelings have changed.

40–55 min · We do: guided annotation · We do (15 min)
Guided analysis of a second quotation; expected answers given.
Ask: What words in this line stand out, and what do they suggest? Expected: The questions show she no longer assumes the worst; she is uncertain, which is progress. Jane's claim to want nothing "beyond" conversation is self-deception, which Elizabeth gently mocks. Ask: How does this line connect to pride and prejudice? Expected: Jane claims indifference to Bingley that no one believes; both sisters struggle to read and to show their feelings. (Jane's self-deception.)

> I assure you that I have now learnt to enjoy his conversation as an agreeable and sensible young man, without having a wish beyond it (Chapter LIV, paragraph 31)

Ask: What words in this line stand out, and what do they suggest?
Expected answer: The questions show she no longer assumes the worst; she is uncertain, which is progress. Jane's claim to want nothing "beyond" conversation is self-deception, which Elizabeth gently mocks.
Ask: How does this line connect to pride and prejudice?
Expected answer: Jane claims indifference to Bingley that no one believes; both sisters struggle to read and to show their feelings. (Jane's self-deception.)

55–70 min · You do: independent annotation · You do (15 min)
Independent annotation and a claim-evidence-reasoning paragraph (exemplar given).
Annotate the chapter for characterization, point of view (three marks with a margin note each), then write one claim-evidence-reasoning paragraph: what does this chapter suggest about renewed hope? Then start your writing prompt at your assigned level (HS Sophomore: Analyze how Chapter LIV develops the idea of renewed hope. Make a precise claim, support it with at least three pieces of textual evidence, and explain how the author's use of characterization and plot shapes that idea. Address one possible counterclaim.) Exemplar: In this chapter Elizabeth must read Darcy's reserve without prejudice and finds she cannot read it at all. When the text says “If he fears me, why come hither? If he no longer cares for me, why silent? Teasing, teasing, man” (Chapter LIV, paragraph 4), it shows this directly. She asks "If he fears me, why come hither? If he no longer cares for me, why silent?"; for the first time she does not jump to a conclusion, and the questions show her uncertainty.
Task: Annotate the chapter for characterization, point of view (three marks with a margin note each), then write one claim-evidence-reasoning paragraph: what does this chapter suggest about renewed hope? Then start your writing prompt at your assigned level (HS Sophomore: Analyze how Chapter LIV develops the idea of renewed hope. Make a precise claim, support it with at least three pieces of textual evidence, and explain how the author's use of characterization and plot shapes that idea. Address one possible counterclaim.)
Exemplar: In this chapter Elizabeth must read Darcy's reserve without prejudice and finds she cannot read it at all. When the text says “If he fears me, why come hither? If he no longer cares for me, why silent? Teasing, teasing, man” (Chapter LIV, paragraph 4), it shows this directly. She asks "If he fears me, why come hither? If he no longer cares for me, why silent?"; for the first time she does not jump to a conclusion, and the questions show her uncertainty.

70–80 min · Discussion · We do (10 min)
Structured discussion from the 30 tiered questions, with facilitation notes.
Anchor question: Why is Jane insisting she is indifferent? Compare Elizabeth's reading of Darcy's silence here with her reading of it in Chapter IX.
Anchor question: Why is Jane insisting she is indifferent?
Facilitation: Compare Elizabeth's reading of Darcy's silence here with her reading of it in Chapter IX.

80–87 min · Exit ticket / chapter quiz · You do (7 min)
Chapter quiz in the app and an exit ticket (answer given).
Chapter quiz in the app, then: In one sentence, what does this chapter suggest about renewed hope? Support it with one short quotation. Model answer: In this chapter Elizabeth must read Darcy's reserve without prejudice and finds she cannot read it at all. ("If he fears me, why come hither? If he no longer cares for me, why silent? Teasing, teasing, man", Chapter LIV, paragraph 4). Accept any defensible claim backed by a quotation from the chapter; the answer key for the quiz is in the Quiz section.
Exit ticket: In one sentence, what does this chapter suggest about renewed hope? Support it with one short quotation.
Answer: Model answer: In this chapter Elizabeth must read Darcy's reserve without prejudice and finds she cannot read it at all. ("If he fears me, why come hither? If he no longer cares for me, why silent? Teasing, teasing, man", Chapter LIV, paragraph 4). Accept any defensible claim backed by a quotation from the chapter; the answer key for the quiz is in the Quiz section.

87–90 min · Closure · I do (3 min)
Summarize the lesson and preview the next reading.
Today we saw how characterization shapes renewed hope. Key takeaway: Jane claims indifference to Bingley that no one believes; both sisters struggle to read and to show their feelings.

Total: 90 minutes.

Teacher analysis (spoilers)

Literary elements

- Characterization: Elizabeth, alone, is vexed by Darcy's silence ("Teasing, teasing, man!") and then furious with herself for hoping.
- Point of view: Free indirect discourse puts us inside Elizabeth's confusion; she is now the one misreading reserve, but this time she knows she may be wrong.

Themes and how they develop

- pride and prejudice: Jane claims indifference to Bingley that no one believes; both sisters struggle to read and to show their feelings.

Symbols and motifs

- silence and reserve: What characters leave unsaid (Darcy's reserve, Jane's composure, Elizabeth's secrets) drives misunderstanding. In this chapter: “Why, if he came only to be silent, grave, and indifferent,” said she, “did he come at all” (Chapter LIV, paragraph 2).

Key quotations (checked against the reading text)

- “If he fears me, why come hither? If he no longer cares for me, why silent? Teasing, teasing, man” (Chapter LIV, paragraph 4) Elizabeth's frustration in a series of questions.
- “A man who has once been refused! How could I ever be foolish enough to expect a renewal of his love” (Chapter LIV, paragraph 19) She assumes pride will keep Darcy from proposing again.
- “I assure you that I have now learnt to enjoy his conversation as an agreeable and sensible young man, without having a wish beyond it” (Chapter LIV, paragraph 31) Jane's self-deception.

Model claim-evidence-reasoning

Claim: In this chapter Elizabeth must read Darcy's reserve without prejudice and finds she cannot read it at all.
Evidence: “If he fears me, why come hither? If he no longer cares for me, why silent? Teasing, teasing, man” (Chapter LIV, paragraph 4)
Reasoning: She asks "If he fears me, why come hither? If he no longer cares for me, why silent?"; for the first time she does not jump to a conclusion, and the questions show her uncertainty.

Vocabulary with etymology notes

Word	Definition (in this sentence)	In context	Word history
enabling (verb)	making possible for	She was in hopes that the evening would afford some opportunity of bringing them together; that the whole of the visit would not pass away without enabling them to enter into something more of conversation, than the mere ceremonious salutation attending his entrance.	“enabling”: Origin of “enable”: an English formation from en- + able. (Liber et Libri origin note, https://en.wiktionary.org/wiki/enable#Etymology)
venison (noun)	deer meat	The venison was roasted to a turn—and everybody said they never saw so fat a haunch.	“venison”: From Old French venesoun, from Latin venatio "a hunt," from venari "to hunt." (Not from venire "to come.") (Online Etymology Dictionary (hand-checked note), https://www.etymonline.com/word/venison)
roasted (verb)	cook with dry heat, usually in an oven	The venison was roasted to a turn—and everybody said they never saw so fat a haunch.

enraged (verb)	put into a rage; make violently angry	She followed him with her eyes, envied everyone to whom he spoke, had scarcely patience enough to help anybody to coffee; and then was enraged against herself for being so silly!	"enraged": Origin of "enrage": Old French enrager. (Liber et Libri origin note, https://en.wiktionary.org/wiki/enrage#Etymology)
triumphant (adjective)	joyful and proud especially because of triumph or success	Elizabeth, with a triumphant sensation, looked towards his friend.	"triumphant": Origin: Latin triumphāns. (Liber et Libri origin note, https://en.wiktionary.org/wiki/triumphant#Etymology)

Discussion questions

1. Why is Jane insisting she is indifferent?
2. Where does characterization appear in this chapter, and what effect does it have? Point to one passage.
3. How does this chapter connect to the book's larger concern with class and social mobility?

Classroom discussion questions (30, tiered)

Wait time after every question (3 s for DOK 1, 5 s for DOK 2, 8 to 10 s for DOK 3 and 4); think-pair-share on DOK 3 and 4; answer each response with a follow-up probe; close with student-generated questions. Focus sets by rigor level: Scaffolded support: 1, 2, 3, 4, 5, 6, 11, 12, 13, 14, 21, 22; HS Freshman: 1, 2, 3, 4, 5, 12, 13, 14, 15, 22, 23, 24; HS Sophomore: 1, 2, 3, 4, 13, 14, 15, 16, 17, 23, 24, 25; HS Junior: 1, 2, 3, 14, 15, 16, 17, 18, 24, 25, 26, 27; HS Senior: 1, 2, 3, 15, 16, 17, 18, 25, 26, 27, 28, 29; AP: 1, 2, 16, 17, 18, 19, 20, 26, 27, 28, 29, 30; College Freshman: 1, 2, 17, 18, 19, 20, 21, 22, 27, 28, 29, 30; College Sophomore: 1, 2, 11, 18, 19, 20, 21, 22, 23, 28, 29, 30; College Junior: 1, 11, 12, 19, 20, 21, 22, 23, 24, 25, 29, 30; College Senior: 1, 11, 12, 13, 20, 21, 22, 23, 24, 25, 26, 30; Graduate / PhD: 1, 11, 12, 13, 21, 22, 23, 24, 25, 26, 27, 28

Literal / recall

1. Who sits by Jane at dinner? [DOK 1 · coldCallWithSupport · wait 3 s · AP: unit standards] Look for: Bingley
2. Where is Darcy seated? [DOK 1 · turnAndTalk · wait 3 s · AP: unit standards] Look for: Far from Elizabeth
3. What does Jane claim? [DOK 1 · coldCallWithSupport · wait 3 s · AP: unit standards] Look for: She and Bingley are only friends
4. How does Elizabeth respond when Jane says she and Bingley are only friends? [DOK 1 · turnAndTalk · wait 3 s · AP: unit standards] Look for: She doubts Jane
5. What delays the resolution? [DOK 1 · coldCallWithSupport · wait 3 s · AP: unit standards] Look for: Restraint and miscommunication
6. Retell the three most important events of "Chapter LIV" in order, in one sentence each. [DOK 1 · turnAndTalk · wait 3 s · AP: unit standards] Look for: At dinner Bingley sits by Jane. Darcy is distant and seated far from Elizabeth. Jane claims she and Bingley are only friends; Elizabeth doubts it.
7. Which characters appear or are mentioned in "Chapter LIV"? Name two and one thing each says or does. [DOK 1 · coldCallWithSupport · wait 3 s · AP: unit standards] Look for: Names and actions taken from the chapter; check against the teacher summary.
8. Where and when does "Chapter LIV" take place? Point to the line that tells you. [DOK 1 · turnAndTalk · wait 3 s · AP: unit standards] Look for: A place/time detail quoted from the chapter.

9. Reread: “She was in hopes that the evening would afford some opportunity of bringing them together; that the whole of the visit would not pass away without enabling them to enter into something more of conversation, than the…” What does “enabling” mean here, and what is literally happening in this line? [DOK 1 · turnAndTalk · wait 3 s · AP: unit standards] Look for: enabling: making possible for.
10. Reread: “The venison was roasted to a turn—and everybody said they never saw so fat a haunch.” What does “venison” mean here, and what is literally happening in this line? [DOK 1 · turnAndTalk · wait 3 s · AP: unit standards] Look for: venison: deer meat.

Inferential / analytical

1. What does “Chapter LIV” suggest about renewed hope? State the inference and the line that supports it. [DOK 2 · thinkPairShare · wait 5 s · AP-LIT.LAN] Look for: Restraint and miscommunication delay resolution.
2. Find one example of characterization in this chapter. What does it reveal that a plain statement would not? [DOK 2 · followUp · wait 5 s · AP-LIT.CHR] Look for: Look for what characters say, do and think, and how others react to them.
3. How does the plot in this chapter shape what we understand about renewed hope? [DOK 3 · thinkPairShare · wait 8 s · AP-LIT.STR] Look for: Look for key events and the causes linking them.
   Answer guidance: A defensible line of argument: In this chapter Elizabeth must read Darcy's reserve without prejudice and finds she cannot read it at all. Useful evidence: “If he fears me, why come hither? If he no longer cares for me, why silent? Teasing, teasing, man” (Chapter LIV, paragraph 4): Elizabeth's frustration in a series of questions. Theme link: Jane claims indifference to Bingley that no one believes; both sisters struggle to read and to show their feelings. Credit any position that is supported by quotation and reasoning; push one-sided answers to address the strongest counterpoint.
4. In the passage that begins “Elizabeth, with a triumphant sensation, looked towards his friend.”, why might Austen have chosen these particular words? Pick two and explain their connotations. [DOK 2 · followUp · wait 5 s · AP-LIT.FIG] Look for: Diction analysis of two words in the anchor passage.
5. What causes the main turn in “Chapter LIV”, and what effect is it likely to have on what follows? [DOK 2 · followUp · wait 5 s · AP-LIT.STR] Look for: At dinner Bingley sits by Jane. Darcy is distant and seated far from Elizabeth. Jane claims she and Bingley are only friends; Elizabeth doubts it.
6. How does “Chapter LIV” build on “Chapter LIII”? Name one link of cause and effect. [DOK 3 · thinkPairShare · wait 8 s · AP-LIT.STR] Look for: A causal or structural link between this and the previous chapter.
   Answer guidance: A defensible line of argument: In this chapter Elizabeth must read Darcy's reserve without prejudice and finds she cannot read it at all. Useful evidence: “A man who has once been refused! How could I ever be foolish enough to expect a renewal of his love” (Chapter LIV, paragraph 19): She assumes pride will keep Darcy from proposing again. Theme link: Jane claims indifference to Bingley that no one believes; both sisters struggle to read and to show their feelings. Credit any position that is supported by quotation and reasoning; push one-sided answers to address the strongest counterpoint.
7. What can we infer about a character's motives from what they say and do here, as opposed to what they claim? [DOK 3 · followUp · wait 8 s · AP-LIT.CHR] Look for: An inference about motive supported by a quoted line.
   Answer guidance: A defensible line of argument: In this chapter Elizabeth must read Darcy's reserve without prejudice and finds she cannot read it at all. Useful evidence: “I assure you that I have now learnt to enjoy his conversation as an agreeable and sensible young man, without having a wish beyond it” (Chapter LIV, paragraph 31): Jane's self-deception. On characterization: Elizabeth, alone, is vexed by Darcy's silence ("Teasing, teasing, man!") and then furious with herself for hoping. Credit any position that is supported by quotation and reasoning; push one-sided answers to address the strongest counterpoint.

8. The bell-ringer asked: “Why is Jane insisting she is indifferent?” Now that we have read closely, how would you revise your first answer, and which line changed your mind? [DOK 2 · thinkPairShare · wait 5 s · AP-LIT.LAN] Look for: A revised answer anchored in the text.
9. Where does tone / mood appear, and how does it connect this chapter to the larger concern with class and social mobility? [DOK 3 · followUp · wait 8 s · AP-LIT.FIG] Look for: Look for word choices that reveal the narrator's attitude or the scene's feeling.

   Answer guidance: A defensible line of argument: In this chapter Elizabeth must read Darcy's reserve without prejudice and finds she cannot read it at all. Useful evidence: “If he fears me, why come hither? If he no longer cares for me, why silent? Teasing, teasing, man” (Chapter LIV, paragraph 4): Elizabeth's frustration in a series of questions. Theme link: Jane claims indifference to Bingley that no one believes; both sisters struggle to read and to show their feelings. Credit any position that is supported by quotation and reasoning; push one-sided answers to address the strongest counterpoint.
10. Background: Seating at dinner revealed intentions and status. How does knowing this change the way you read one moment in the chapter? [DOK 3 · thinkPairShare · wait 8 s · AP-LIT.SET] Look for: A specific moment reread in light of the context.

    Answer guidance: A defensible line of argument: In this chapter Elizabeth must read Darcy's reserve without prejudice and finds she cannot read it at all. Useful evidence: “A man who has once been refused! How could I ever be foolish enough to expect a renewal of his love” (Chapter LIV, paragraph 19): She assumes pride will keep Darcy from proposing again. Theme link: Jane claims indifference to Bingley that no one believes; both sisters struggle to read and to show their feelings. Credit any position that is supported by quotation and reasoning; push one-sided answers to address the strongest counterpoint.

Evaluative / synthesis / creative

1. A critic might argue: “Restraint and miscommunication delay resolution.” How far do you agree? Take a stand and defend it with two lines from the chapter. [DOK 3 · fourCorners · wait 8 s · AP-LIT.LAN] Look for: A defended position with evidence and one counterpoint.

   Answer guidance: A defensible line of argument: In this chapter Elizabeth must read Darcy's reserve without prejudice and finds she cannot read it at all. Useful evidence: “I assure you that I have now learnt to enjoy his conversation as an agreeable and sensible young man, without having a wish beyond it” (Chapter LIV, paragraph 31): Jane's self-deception. Theme link: Jane claims indifference to Bingley that no one believes; both sisters struggle to read and to show their feelings. Credit any position that is supported by quotation and reasoning; push one-sided answers to address the strongest counterpoint.
2. Which character in this chapter acts most wisely, and which least? Judge them by a standard you name. [DOK 3 · thinkPairShare · wait 8 s · AP-LIT.CHR, AP-LIT.LAN] Look for: An evaluation using an explicit criterion and evidence.

   Answer guidance: A defensible line of argument: In this chapter Elizabeth must read Darcy's reserve without prejudice and finds she cannot read it at all. Useful evidence: “If he fears me, why come hither? If he no longer cares for me, why silent? Teasing, teasing, man” (Chapter LIV, paragraph 4): Elizabeth's frustration in a series of questions. On characterization: Elizabeth, alone, is vexed by Darcy's silence ("Teasing, teasing, man!") and then furious with herself for hoping. Credit any position that is supported by quotation and reasoning; push one-sided answers to address the strongest counterpoint.

3. Rewrite one moment of “Chapter LIV” from the point of view of a different character. What does the new angle reveal or hide about renewed hope? [DOK 4 · thinkPairShare · wait 8 s · AP-LIT.LAN, AP-LIT.NAR] Look for: A creative product with a rationale tied to the text.

   Answer guidance: A defensible line of argument: In this chapter Elizabeth must read Darcy's reserve without prejudice and finds she cannot read it at all. Useful evidence: “A man who has once been refused! How could I ever be foolish enough to expect a renewal of his love” (Chapter LIV, paragraph 19): She assumes pride will keep Darcy from proposing again. On point of view: Free indirect discourse puts us inside Elizabeth's confusion; she is now the one misreading reserve, but this time she knows she may be wrong. Credit any position that is supported by quotation and reasoning; push one-sided answers to address the strongest counterpoint.

4. Write three questions of your own about “Chapter LIV”: one recall, one “why/how”, and one “should/what if”. Trade with a partner and answer theirs. [DOK 3 · studentGenerated · wait 8 s · AP-LIT.LAN] Look for: Student-generated questions at three levels.

   Answer guidance: A defensible line of argument: In this chapter Elizabeth must read Darcy's reserve without prejudice and finds she cannot read it at all. Useful evidence: “I assure you that I have now learnt to enjoy his conversation as an agreeable and sensible young man, without having a wish beyond it” (Chapter LIV, paragraph 31): Jane's self-deception. Theme link: Jane claims indifference to Bingley that no one believes; both sisters struggle to read and to show their feelings. Credit any position that is supported by quotation and reasoning; push one-sided answers to address the strongest counterpoint.

5. Connect this chapter to women's limited choices: is the link strong or weak so far? What would Austen need to show next to strengthen it? [DOK 4 · socraticCircle · wait 8 s · AP-LIT.LAN] Look for: A judgment of thematic development across the work.

   Answer guidance: A defensible line of argument: In this chapter Elizabeth must read Darcy's reserve without prejudice and finds she cannot read it at all. Useful evidence: “If he fears me, why come hither? If he no longer cares for me, why silent? Teasing, teasing, man” (Chapter LIV, paragraph 4): Elizabeth's frustration in a series of questions. Theme link: Jane claims indifference to Bingley that no one believes; both sisters struggle to read and to show their feelings. Credit any position that is supported by quotation and reasoning; push one-sided answers to address the strongest counterpoint.

6. Is the characterization in this chapter effective, or does it feel heavy-handed? Evaluate it as a reader would in a review. [DOK 3 · fourCorners · wait 8 s · AP-LIT.CHR, AP-LIT.LAN] Look for: An evaluative judgment with criteria and evidence.

   Answer guidance: A defensible line of argument: In this chapter Elizabeth must read Darcy's reserve without prejudice and finds she cannot read it at all. Useful evidence: “A man who has once been refused! How could I ever be foolish enough to expect a renewal of his love” (Chapter LIV, paragraph 19): She assumes pride will keep Darcy from proposing again. On characterization: Elizabeth, alone, is vexed by Darcy's silence ("Teasing, teasing, man!") and then furious with herself for hoping. Credit any position that is supported by quotation and reasoning; push one-sided answers to address the strongest counterpoint.

7. Compare how “Chapter LIV” treats renewed hope with how another text, film or event you know treats a similar idea. What does Pride and Prejudice see that the other misses? [DOK 4 · socraticCircle · wait 8 s · AP-LIT.LAN] Look for: A cross-text synthesis.

   Answer guidance: A defensible line of argument: In this chapter Elizabeth must read Darcy's reserve without prejudice and finds she cannot read it at all. Useful evidence: “I assure you that I have now learnt to enjoy his conversation as an agreeable and sensible young man, without having a wish beyond it” (Chapter LIV, paragraph 31): Jane's self-deception. Theme link: Jane claims indifference to Bingley that no one believes; both sisters struggle to read and to show their feelings. Credit any position that is supported by quotation and reasoning; push one-sided answers to address the strongest counterpoint.

8. Predict what "Chapter LV" will bring, using two clues from this chapter. After reading, evaluate your prediction. [DOK 3 · thinkPairShare · wait 8 s · AP-LIT.LAN, AP-LIT.STR] Look for: A prediction or judgment justified with textual clues.

   Answer guidance: A defensible line of argument: In this chapter Elizabeth must read Darcy's reserve without prejudice and finds she cannot read it at all. Useful evidence: "If he fears me, why come hither? If he no longer cares for me, why silent? Teasing, teasing, man" (Chapter LIV, paragraph 4): Elizabeth's frustration in a series of questions. Theme link: Jane claims indifference to Bingley that no one believes; both sisters struggle to read and to show their feelings. Credit any position that is supported by quotation and reasoning; push one-sided answers to address the strongest counterpoint.

9. Design a one-paragraph modern adaptation of this chapter (setting, characters, conflict). What must stay the same for it to still be about renewed hope? [DOK 4 · thinkPairShare · wait 8 s · AP-LIT.LAN] Look for: A creative transfer that keeps the core idea.

   Answer guidance: A defensible line of argument: In this chapter Elizabeth must read Darcy's reserve without prejudice and finds she cannot read it at all. Useful evidence: "A man who has once been refused! How could I ever be foolish enough to expect a renewal of his love" (Chapter LIV, paragraph 19): She assumes pride will keep Darcy from proposing again. Theme link: Jane claims indifference to Bingley that no one believes; both sisters struggle to read and to show their feelings. Credit any position that is supported by quotation and reasoning; push one-sided answers to address the strongest counterpoint.

10. What question would you most like to ask Jane Austen about this chapter, and what answer do you think the text itself gives? [DOK 4 · studentGenerated · wait 8 s · AP-LIT.LAN] Look for: A student-generated question answered from evidence.

    Answer guidance: A defensible line of argument: In this chapter Elizabeth must read Darcy's reserve without prejudice and finds she cannot read it at all. Useful evidence: "I assure you that I have now learnt to enjoy his conversation as an agreeable and sensible young man, without having a wish beyond it" (Chapter LIV, paragraph 31): Jane's self-deception. Theme link: Jane claims indifference to Bingley that no one believes; both sisters struggle to read and to show their feelings. Credit any position that is supported by quotation and reasoning; push one-sided answers to address the strongest counterpoint.

Annotation focus

- Characterization: look for what characters say, do and think, and how others react to them (anchor passage in the We do segment)
- Also notice Plot: key events and the causes linking them
- Also notice Tone / mood: word choices that reveal the narrator's attitude or the scene's feeling

Chapter quiz: item bank (all eleven rigor versions)

1. [mc · recall · DOK 1] In the line "She followed him with her eyes, envied everyone to whom he spoke, had scarcely patience enough to help anybody to coffee; and then was enraged against herself for being so silly!", what does "enraged" most nearly mean?

   A. try to prevent; show opposition to

   B. put into a rage; make violently angry

C. carry on a conversation

D. outvoted; overridden

Key: B (put into a rage; make violently angry)

2. [fill · recall · DOK 1] Complete the quotation from Chapter LIV, paragraph 19: “A man who has once been _____! How could I ever be foolish enough to expect a renewal of his love”

Key: refused

3. [mc · recall · DOK 1] How does Elizabeth respond when Jane says she and Bingley are only friends?

A. She believes her

B. She laughs

C. She doubts Jane

D. She scolds her

Key: C (She doubts Jane)

4. [mc · recall · DOK 1] What does Jane claim?

A. She dislikes him

B. She and Bingley are only friends

C. They are engaged

D. She will leave

Key: B (She and Bingley are only friends)

5. [mc · recall · DOK 1] Who sits by Jane at dinner?

A. Collins

B. Darcy

C. Bingley

D. Wickham

Key: C (Bingley)

6. [mc · recall · DOK 1] Where is Darcy seated?

A. Beside Jane

B. Far from Elizabeth

C. He leaves

D. Beside Elizabeth

Key: B (Far from Elizabeth)

7. [mc · recall · DOK 1] In the line “The venison was roasted to a turn—and everybody said they never saw so fat a haunch.”, what does “venison” most nearly mean?

A. give displeasure to

B. tricks or schemes

C. deer meat

D. overbearing pride evidenced by a superior manner toward inferiors

Key: C (deer meat)

8. [mc · recall · DOK 1] What delays the resolution?

A. Restraint and miscommunication

B. Money

C. War

D. Illness

Key: A (Restraint and miscommunication)

9. [mc · recall · DOK 1] In the line “She was in hopes that the evening would afford some opportunity of bringing them together; that the whole of the visit would not pass away without enabling them to enter into something more of conversation, than the…”, what does “enabling” most nearly mean?

   A. in a self-collected or self-possessed manner

   B. making possible for

   C. made to feel ashamed or less proud

   D. a long dining-room cabinet with a flat top

   Key: B (making possible for)

10. [fill · recall · DOK 1] Fill in the blank with the vocabulary word that fits: “Elizabeth, with a _____ sensation, looked towards his friend.” Word bank: triumphant, venison, roasted, enabling

    Key: triumphant

11. [fill · recall · DOK 1] Complete the quotation from Chapter LIV, paragraph 4: “If he fears me, why come hither? If he no longer cares for me, why silent? Teasing, _____, man”

    Key: teasing

12. [short · inference · DOK 2] What can you infer from this line? “A man who has once been refused! How could I ever be foolish enough to expect a renewal of his love” (Chapter LIV, paragraph 19) Answer in two or three sentences with one detail.

    Sample answer: She assumes pride will keep Darcy from proposing again. The evidence is “A man who has once been refused! How could I ever be foolish enough to expect a renewal of his love” (Chapter LIV, paragraph 19).

13. [mc · inference · DOK 2] Which choice best states a central concern of “Chapter LIV”?

    A. Pompous flattery

    B. Wit as courtship

    C. Visit to Hunsford

    D. Renewed hope

    Key: D (Renewed hope)

14. [mc · analysis · DOK 3] Which literary element does this describe in “Chapter LIV”? Elizabeth, alone, is vexed by Darcy's silence (‘Teasing, teasing, man!’) and then furious with herself for hoping.

    A. Simile

    B. Symbolism

    C. Characterization

    D. Alliteration

    Key: C (Characterization)

15. [mc · analysis · DOK 3] Which literary element does this describe in “Chapter LIV”? Free indirect discourse puts us inside Elizabeth's confusion; she is now the one misreading reserve, but this time she knows she may be wrong.

    A. Point of view

B. Imagery

C. Personification

D. Setting

Key: A (Point of view)

16. [short · synthesis · DOK 4] Evaluate this claim about the chapter: “In this chapter Elizabeth must read Darcy's reserve without prejudice and finds she cannot read it at all.” Is it fully persuasive? Argue with evidence, including a passage that complicates it.

    Sample answer: The claim is persuasive in part. “If he fears me, why come hither? If he no longer cares for me, why silent? Teasing, teasing, man” (Chapter LIV, paragraph 4) supports it: She asks "If he fears me, why come hither? If he no longer cares for me, why silent?"; for the first time she does not jump to a conclusion, and the questions show her uncertainty. But “I assure you that I have now learnt to enjoy his conversation as an agreeable and sensible young man, without having a wish beyond it” (Chapter LIV, paragraph 31) complicates it: the line (Jane's self-deception) shows the same issue from another side, and its “without” marks a limit or reversal the claim passes over. The claim is therefore a strong reading, not a complete one, and a careful answer says where it stops applying.

17. [fill · recall · DOK 1] Complete the quotation from Chapter LIV, paragraph 31: “I assure you that I have now learnt to enjoy his _____ as an agreeable and sensible young man, without having a wish beyond it”

    Key: conversation

18. [mc · recall · DOK 1] Which word completes this sentence from Chapter LIV, paragraph 13? “It gave her all the _____ that her spirits could boast; for she was in no cheerful humour.”

    A. pleasure

    B. entering

    C. gentlemen

    D. animation

    Key: D (animation)

19. [short · inference · DOK 2] What does this passage from Chapter LIV, paragraph 31 reveal about the character or situation? “I am perfectly satisfied from what his manners now are, that he never had any design of engaging my affection.” Answer in two or three sentences with one detail.

    Sample answer: The passage (Chapter LIV, paragraph 31) shows the situation turning on first impressions and prejudice: Jane claims indifference to Bingley that no one believes; both sisters struggle to read and to show their feelings. The words “affection” and “satisfied” are the proof, because they show how the moment looks to the people in it. They suggest more than the narrator states outright.

20. [mc · inference · DOK 2] Which of these passages comes earliest in Chapter LIV?

    A. “As soon as they were gone, Elizabeth walked out to recover her spirits; or in other words, to dwell without interruption on those subjects…”

    B. “He could be still amiable, still pleasing, to my uncle and aunt, when he was in town; and why not to me?”

    C. “Why, if he came only to be silent, grave, and indifferent,’ said she, ‘did he come at all?”

    D. “She could settle it in no way that gave her pleasure.”

    Key: A (“As soon as they were gone, Elizabeth walked out to recover her spirits; or in other words, to dwell without interruption on those subjects…”)

21. [short · analysis · DOK 3] Analyze how the word choice in this passage from Chapter LIV, paragraph 14 shapes its tone: “She looked forward to their entrance, as the point on which all her chance of pleasure for the evening must depend.” Pick two words and explain their effect.
    Sample answer: The words “entrance” and “pleasure” (Chapter LIV, paragraph 14) make the tone heavy and deliberate rather than neutral. That weight points the reader to class and social mobility: Jane claims indifference to Bingley that no one believes; both sisters struggle to read and to show their feelings. The author chooses them so the moment feels significant instead of passing.

22. [short · analysis · DOK 3] Analyze how the word choice in this passage from Chapter LIV, paragraph 4 shapes its tone: “He could be still amiable, still pleasing, to my uncle and aunt, when he was in town; and why not to me?” Pick two words and explain their effect.
    Sample answer: The words “pleasing” and “amiable” (Chapter LIV, paragraph 4) make the tone heavy and deliberate rather than neutral. That weight points the reader to pride and self-knowledge: Jane claims indifference to Bingley that no one believes; both sisters struggle to read and to show their feelings. The author chooses them so the moment feels significant instead of passing.

23. [short · synthesis · DOK 4] Connect this passage from Chapter LIV, paragraph 25 to the story's treatment of women's limited choices: “They were confined for the evening at different tables, and she had nothing to hope but that his eyes were so often turned towards her side of the room, as to make him play as unsuccessfully as herself.” Use one other moment from the story as well.
    Sample answer: This passage (Chapter LIV, paragraph 25) develops women's limited choices: Jane claims indifference to Bingley that no one believes; both sisters struggle to read and to show their feelings. Its words “unsuccessfully” and “different” carry that idea into this moment. The same concern returns in “And what do you think she said besides? ‘Ah!” (Chapter LIV, paragraph 27), so the two passages read as a pattern, not a single moment. Together they show the story treating women's limited choices as central.

24. [fill · recall · DOK 1] Complete the quotation from Chapter LIV, paragraph 1: “As soon as they were gone, Elizabeth walked out to recover her spirits; or in other words, to dwell without _____ on those subjects that must deaden them more.” Word bank: admiration, repaired, interruption, longer
    Key: interruption

25. [mc · recall · DOK 1] In the line “The venison was roasted to a turn—and everybody said they never saw so fat a haunch.”, what does “roasted” most nearly mean?
    A. something immaterial that stands in the way and must be circumvented or surmounted
    B. cook with dry heat, usually in an oven
    C. regard as untrustworthy; regard with suspicion; have no faith or confidence in
    D. felt angry about

    Key: B (cook with dry heat, usually in an oven)

26. [short · inference · DOK 2] What does this passage from Chapter LIV, paragraph 13 reveal about the character or situation? “Mr. Darcy was almost as far from her, as the table could divide them.” Answer in two or three sentences with one detail.
    Sample answer: The passage (Chapter LIV, paragraph 13) shows the situation turning on first impressions and prejudice: Jane claims indifference to Bingley that no one believes; both sisters struggle to read and to show their feelings. The words “divide” and “almost” are the proof, because they show how the moment looks to the people in it. They suggest more than the narrator states outright.

27. [short · analysis · DOK 3] Analyze how the word choice in this passage from Chapter LIV, paragraph 36 shapes its tone: “We all love to instruct, though we can teach only what is not worth knowing.” Pick two words and explain their effect.

Sample answer: The words “instruct” and “knowing” (Chapter LIV, paragraph 36) make the tone heavy and deliberate rather than neutral. That weight points the reader to class and social mobility: Jane claims indifference to Bingley that no one believes; both sisters struggle to read and to show their feelings. The author chooses them so the moment feels significant instead of passing.

28. [short · analysis · DOK 3] Analyze how the word choice in this passage from Chapter LIV, paragraph 19 shapes its tone: “Is there one among the sex, who would not protest against such a weakness as a second proposal to the same woman?” Pick two words and explain their effect.

    Sample answer: The words “weakness” and “proposal” (Chapter LIV, paragraph 19) make the tone heavy and deliberate rather than neutral. That weight points the reader to pride and self-knowledge: Jane claims indifference to Bingley that no one believes; both sisters struggle to read and to show their feelings. The author chooses them so the moment feels significant instead of passing.

29. [short · synthesis · DOK 4] Connect this passage from Chapter LIV, paragraph 27 to the story's treatment of marriage and money: “I do think Mrs. Long is as good a creature as ever lived—and her nieces are very pretty behaved girls, and not at all handsome: I like them prodigiously.” Use one other moment from the story as well.

    Sample answer: This passage (Chapter LIV, paragraph 27) develops marriage and money: Jane claims indifference to Bingley that no one believes; both sisters struggle to read and to show their feelings. Its words “prodigiously” and “handsome” carry that idea into this moment. The same concern returns in “The dinner was as well dressed as any I ever saw.” (Chapter LIV, paragraph 27), so the two passages read as a pattern, not a single moment. Together they show the story treating marriage and money as central.

30. [mc · recall · DOK 1 · AP: AP-LIT.FIG] Which word completes this sentence from Chapter LIV, paragraph 6? “Now,’ said she, ‘that this first meeting is over, I feel _____ easy.”

    A. perfectly

    B. mother

    C. repaired

    D. entering

    Key: A (perfectly)

31. [fill · recall · DOK 1 · AP: AP-LIT.FIG] Complete the quotation from Chapter LIV, paragraph 14: “Anxious and uneasy, the period which passed in the drawing-room, before the _____ came, was wearisome and dull to a degree, that almost made her uncivil.” Word bank: gentlemen, longer, cannot, admiration

    Key: gentlemen

32. [short · synthesis · DOK 4 · AP: AP-LIT.LAN] Synthesis: trace how pride and prejudice develops from Chapter LII to Chapter LIV. Use one quotation from each.

    Sample answer: Earlier, in Chapter LII, paragraph 3, the text reads “He had been some days in town before he was able to discover them” — Darcy's personal effort. In Chapter LIV, “If he fears me, why come hither? If he no longer cares for me, why silent? Teasing, teasing, man” (Chapter LIV, paragraph 4) — Elizabeth's frustration in a series of questions. Jane claims indifference to Bingley that no one believes; both sisters struggle to read and to show their feelings.

33. [short · synthesis · DOK 4 · AP: AP-LIT.FIG] Close reading: how do the diction and syntax of “A man who has once been refused! How could I ever be foolish enough to expect a renewal of his love” (Chapter LIV, paragraph 19) shape its meaning? Consider a second, competing reading.

    Sample answer: She assumes pride will keep Darcy from proposing again. The evidence is “A man who has once been refused! How could I ever be foolish enough to expect a renewal of his love” (Chapter LIV, paragraph 19). This develops pride and prejudice: Jane claims indifference to Bingley that no one believes; both sisters struggle to read and to show their feelings. The words “renewal” and “refused” carry that meaning: they are the charged choices in the line, and changing either would soften the effect. She asks "If he fears me, why come hither? If he no longer cares for me, why silent?"; for the first time she does not jump to a conclusion, and the questions show her uncertainty.

34. [mc · inference · DOK 2 · Dual Credit (Indiana College Core): ICC-WC-1.5] What does this passage most clearly show? “If he fears me, why come hither? If he no longer cares for me, why silent? Teasing, teasing, man” (Chapter LIV, paragraph 4)

    A. Elizabeth's frustration in a series of questions.

    B. Mrs. Bennet swears off Bingley moments before her husband reveals he has already visited him.

    C. The visual image that divides the Bingley sisters and Darcy.

    D. Mary's distinction; useful for the title.

    Key: A (Elizabeth's frustration in a series of questions.)

35. [short · analysis · DOK 3 · Dual Credit (Indiana College Core): ICC-WC-1.5] Analyze the word choice in “I assure you that I have now learnt to enjoy his conversation as an agreeable and sensible young man, without having a wish beyond it” (Chapter LIV, paragraph 31). Pick two words and explain what they suggest.

    Sample answer: Jane's self-deception. The evidence is “I assure you that I have now learnt to enjoy his conversation as an agreeable and sensible young man, without having a wish beyond it” (Chapter LIV, paragraph 31). This develops pride and prejudice: Jane claims indifference to Bingley that no one believes; both sisters struggle to read and to show their feelings. The words “conversation” and “agreeable” carry that meaning: they are the charged choices in the line, and changing either would soften the effect.

36. [short · synthesis · DOK 4 · Dual Credit (Indiana College Core): ICC-WC-1.5] Connect this passage from Chapter LIV, paragraph 6 to the story's treatment of women's limited choices: “It will then be publicly seen, that on both sides, we meet only as common and indifferent acquaintance.” Use one other moment from the story as well.

    Sample answer: This passage (Chapter LIV, paragraph 6) develops women's limited choices: Jane claims indifference to Bingley that no one believes; both sisters struggle to read and to show their feelings. Its words “acquaintance” and “indifferent” carry that idea into this moment. The same concern returns in “I think you are in very great danger of making him as much in love with you as ever.” (Chapter LIV, paragraph 9), so the two passages read as a pattern, not a single moment. Together they show the story treating women's limited choices as central.

37. [short · synthesis · DOK 4 · Dual Credit (Indiana College Core): ICC-WC-1.5] Connect this passage from Chapter LIV, paragraph 11 to the story's treatment of marriage and money: “On Tuesday there was a large party assembled at Longbourn; and the two who were most anxiously expected, to the credit of their punctuality as sportsmen, were in very good time.” Use one other moment from the story as well.

    Sample answer: This passage (Chapter LIV, paragraph 11) develops marriage and money: Jane claims indifference to Bingley that no one believes; both sisters struggle to read and to show their feelings. Its words “punctuality” and “anxiously” carry that idea into this moment. The same concern returns in “He bore it with noble indifference, and she would have imagined that Bingley had received his sanction to be happy, had…” (Chapter LIV, paragraph 12), so the two passages read as a pattern, not a single moment. Together they show the story treating marriage and money as central.

38. [fill · recall · DOK 1 · Program outcome: LeL-C2-LIT-1] Complete the quotation from Chapter LIV, paragraph 11: “When they _____ to the dining-room, Elizabeth eagerly watched to see whether Bingley would take the place, which, in all their former parties, had belonged to him, by her sister.” Word bank: discourse, repaired, cannot, interruption

    Key: repaired

Rigor version	Items (in order)	Mix
Scaffolded support	1, 2, 3, 4, 5, 6, 7, 8, 9, 10, 11, 12, 13, 14, 15, 16	recall 11, inference 2, analysis 2, synthesis 1
HS Freshman	2, 17, 4, 18, 6, 8, 7, 5, 19, 12, 13, 20, 15, 21, 22, 23	recall 8, inference 4, analysis 3, synthesis 1
HS Sophomore	10, 3, 8, 9, 24, 25, 12, 19, 26, 20, 13, 14, 27, 28, 29, 16	recall 6, inference 5, analysis 3, synthesis 2
HS Junior	10, 30, 17, 6, 31, 19, 26, 20, 13, 12, 22, 28, 27, 21, 16, 32	recall 5, inference 5, analysis 4, synthesis 2
HS Senior	10, 11, 9, 30, 26, 13, 19, 12, 20, 27, 14, 28, 22, 29, 32, 23	recall 4, inference 5, analysis 4, synthesis 3
AP	10, 9, 4, 2, 20, 26, 19, 15, 27, 22, 21, 28, 33, 23, 32, 16	recall 4, inference 3, analysis 5, synthesis 4
College Freshman	31, 24, 9, 19, 20, 12, 34, 35, 21, 22, 14, 28, 32, 36, 23, 37	recall 3, inference 4, analysis 5, synthesis 4
College Sophomore	38, 8, 10, 13, 20, 26, 14, 28, 21, 27, 35, 29, 36, 37, 23, 32	recall 3, inference 3, analysis 5, synthesis 5
College Junior	4, 38, 10, 5, 13, 22, 28, 21, 27, 15, 37, 23, 32, 29, 36, 16	recall 4, inference 1, analysis 5, synthesis 6
College Senior	4, 10, 2, 20, 14, 27, 28, 15, 21, 22, 16, 32, 29, 23, 37, 36	recall 3, inference 1, analysis 6, synthesis 6
Graduate / PhD	18, 10, 11, 13, 14, 27, 15, 21, 35, 16, 33, 32, 37, 23, 29, 36	recall 3, inference 1, analysis 5, synthesis 7

Writing prompts (eleven rigor levels)

Scaffolded support (250 words; AP: see unit standards): Supported track (work from the passage your teacher selects). In “Chapter LIV,” how does Austen show renewed hope? Write a paragraph that states your claim, quotes two details from the passage, and explains how each detail supports your idea. Use the characterization you noticed as one piece of evidence.

HS Freshman (350 words; AP: see unit standards): In Chapter LIV, how does Austen develop the idea of renewed hope? State a clear claim, support it with two or three quotations, and explain how the characterization in the chapter helps build that idea.

HS Sophomore (450 words; AP: see unit standards): Analyze how Chapter LIV develops the idea of renewed hope. Make a precise claim, support it with at least three pieces of textual evidence, and explain how the author's use of characterization and plot shapes that idea. Address one possible counterclaim.

HS Junior (550 words; AP: see unit standards): Analyze how the structure of Chapter LIV (where it begins, turns and ends) and its characterization shape the reader's understanding of renewed hope. Identify one place where the text leaves matters uncertain and explain how that uncertainty adds to its meaning.

HS Senior (600 words; AP: see unit standards): Two readers disagree about what Chapter LIV suggests about renewed hope. Lay out two plausible interpretations, weigh the evidence for each (including the chapter's characterization and plot), and argue for the stronger one in a sustained, well-organized essay.

AP (650 words; AP: AP-LIT.CHR, AP-LIT.LAN): Write a literary argument in which you analyze how Jane Austen uses characterization in Chapter LIV to complicate the reader's understanding of renewed hope. Develop a defensible thesis, select evidence purposefully, and explain how specific choices of diction and syntax create meaning.

College Freshman (1000 words; AP: see unit standards): Situate Chapter LIV within its historical and literary context and argue how the chapter's treatment of renewed hope responds to that context. Engage with at least one secondary perspective (a critic, historian or the author's own statements), integrate quotations smoothly, and cite in MLA style.

College Sophomore (1250 words; AP: see unit standards): Read Chapter LIV alongside the conventions of its genre and period. Argue how the chapter's handling of renewed hope follows or bends those conventions, using the characterization as evidence, and test your reading against one published critic. Document two secondary sources in MLA.

College Junior (1500 words; AP: see unit standards): Apply a named critical approach (for example formalist, historicist, feminist, psychoanalytic or ecocritical) to Chapter LIV and its treatment of renewed hope. State your method, show what it reveals in the chapter's characterization and plot, and identify where the text resists it.

College Senior (2000 words; AP: see unit standards): Develop a research argument that reads Chapter LIV as evidence for a larger claim about renewed hope in Pride and Prejudice. Connect close reading of the chapter to the whole novel, engage at least four scholarly sources, and state precisely where your reading departs from theirs (Chicago style).

Graduate / PhD (2500 words; AP: see unit standards): Develop an original argument that reads Chapter LIV as a hinge in the novel's larger treatment of renewed hope. Position your reading within a named critical conversation (for example formalist, historicist, psychoanalytic, feminist or postcolonial approaches), account for the textual history where relevant, and articulate the stakes of your intervention for scholarship on Pride and Prejudice.

SAT-style questions

1. She was in hopes that the evening would afford some opportunity of bringing them together; that the whole of the visit would not pass away without enabling them to enter into something more of conversation, than the mere ceremonious salutation attending his entrance.

   As used in the text, what does the word “enabling” most nearly mean?

   A. joyful and proud especially because of triumph or success

   B. cook with dry heat, usually in an oven

   C. put into a rage; make violently angry

   D. making possible for

2. Elizabeth, with a triumphant sensation, looked towards his friend. He bore it with noble indifference, and she would have imagined that Bingley had received his sanction to be happy, had she not seen his eyes likewise turned towards Mr. Darcy, with an expression of half-laughing alarm.

Which choice best states a central concern of "Chapter LIV"?

A. Renewed hope
B. Jealousy at Pemberley
C. Pemberley
D. Bingley returns

SAT key: 1. D (making possible for); 2. A (Renewed hope)

Lesson 56: Chapter LV

Focus: happiness for Jane

Objective: Students will analyze how plot develops in "Chapter LV" by writing a claim-evidence-reasoning paragraph that cites at least 2 quotations from the section, and will score at least 80% on the section quiz.

Standards: AP: see the unit standards

Teacher only · spoilers

Bingley proposes to Jane, who is overjoyed. Mr. Bennet jokes that they are so easy-going every servant will cheat them. The family celebrates.

Background: Engagements needed the father's consent.

Significance: Jane's happiness rewards her patience and goodness.

Lesson plan and lecture script (90 minutes)

0–8 min · Bell-ringer · You do (8 min)
Students write to the bell-ringer, then pair-share.
Do Jane and Bingley deserve each other? Why? Write for five minutes. Starters: I think... because... / This connects to marriage and money because....
Prompt: Do Jane and Bingley deserve each other? Why?
Sentence starters: I think… because… · This connects to marriage and money because…
Strong response: A strong response takes a position and anticipates this: a marriage of affection and fortune both.

8–18 min · Vocabulary with etymology notes · I do (10 min)
Five key words in context, with verified word histories.
Today's words: simpered — smiled in a silly, self-conscious way; panegyric — a speech or piece of writing full of praise; premeditation — planning something beforehand; tempers — natures; dispositions; dispense — administer or bestow, as in small portions. "panegyric": Origin: French panégyrique. "dispense": Origin: Old French dispenser; earlier Latin dispēnsāre ("to weigh out").
Words: simpered: smiled in a silly, self-conscious way · panegyric: a speech or piece of writing full of praise · premeditation: planning something beforehand · tempers: natures; dispositions · dispense: administer or bestow, as in small portions

18–28 min · Background and context · I do (10 min)
Mini-lecture (read or adapt the script).
Engagements needed the father's consent. Jane's happiness rewards her patience and goodness. Characterization: Bingley proposes to Jane; Jane calls herself "the most fortunate creature that ever existed." Characterization: Mr. Bennet jokes that Jane and Bingley are so easy-going "every servant will cheat you." Watch for silence and reserve: What characters leave unsaid (Darcy's reserve, Jane's composure, Elizabeth's secrets) drives misunderstanding. In this chapter: "Bingley that could provoke his ridicule, or disgust him into silence; and he was more communicative, and less eccentric than the other" (Chapter LV, paragraph 20).

28–40 min · I do: modeled close reading · I do (12 min)
Model the close reading of the anchor quotation using the written think-aloud below.
First, meaning. I read "I am certainly the most fortunate creature that ever existed" slowly and put it in my own words: Jane says she is the most fortunate creature that ever existed. Next, craft. I notice her exclamation, which overflows with gratitude and surprise. The strongest word is "fortunate": it shows she sees her happiness as luck, not desert. Then, effect. What does Jane's joy reveal? My answer: Jane's joy at her engagement to Bingley reveals her modesty and goodness; she wishes only that Elizabeth could be equally happy.

> I am certainly the most fortunate creature that ever existed (Chapter LV, paragraph 52)

Think-aloud: First, meaning. I read "I am certainly the most fortunate creature that ever existed" slowly and put it in my own words: Jane says she is the most fortunate creature that ever existed. Next, craft. I notice her exclamation, which overflows with gratitude and surprise. The strongest word is "fortunate": it shows she sees her happiness as luck, not desert. Then, effect. What does Jane's joy reveal? My answer: Jane's joy at her engagement to Bingley reveals her modesty and goodness; she wishes only that Elizabeth could be equally happy.

40–55 min · We do: guided annotation · We do (15 min)
Guided analysis of a second quotation; expected answers given.
Ask: What words in this line stand out, and what do they suggest? Expected: Mrs. Bennet's excitement: repetition is her voice. Look at the craft: Mr. Bennet jokes that Jane and Bingley are so easy-going "every servant will cheat you." Ask: How does this line connect to marriage and money? Expected: A marriage of affection and fortune both. (Mrs. Bennet's excitement: repetition is her voice.)

> He is come—Mr. Bingley is come (Chapter LV, paragraph 7)

Ask: What words in this line stand out, and what do they suggest?
Expected answer: Mrs. Bennet's excitement: repetition is her voice. Look at the craft: Mr. Bennet jokes that Jane and Bingley are so easy-going "every servant will cheat you."
Ask: How does this line connect to marriage and money?
Expected answer: A marriage of affection and fortune both. (Mrs. Bennet's excitement: repetition is her voice.)

55–70 min · You do: independent annotation · You do (15 min)
Independent annotation and a claim-evidence-reasoning paragraph (exemplar given).
Annotate the chapter for characterization, characterization (three marks with a margin note each), then write one claim-evidence-reasoning paragraph: what does this chapter suggest about happiness for Jane? Then start your writing prompt at your assigned level (HS Sophomore: Analyze how Chapter LV develops the idea of happiness for Jane. Make a precise claim, support it with at least three pieces of textual evidence, and explain how the author's use of plot and characterization shapes that idea. Address one possible counterclaim.) Exemplar: Jane's engagement rewards her patience and goodness. When the text says “I am certainly the most fortunate creature that ever existed” (Chapter LV, paragraph 52), it shows this directly. She calls herself "the most fortunate creature that ever existed" and asks "why am I thus singled from my family," showing humility even in triumph.
Task: Annotate the chapter for characterization, characterization (three marks with a margin note each), then write one claim-evidence-reasoning paragraph: what does this chapter suggest about happiness for Jane? Then start your writing prompt at your assigned level (HS Sophomore: Analyze how Chapter LV develops the idea of happiness for Jane. Make a precise claim, support it with at least three pieces of textual evidence, and explain how the author's use of plot and characterization shapes that idea. Address one possible counterclaim.)
Exemplar: Jane's engagement rewards her patience and goodness. When the text says “I am certainly the most fortunate creature that ever existed” (Chapter LV, paragraph 52), it shows this directly. She calls herself "the most fortunate creature that ever existed" and asks "why am I thus singled from my family," showing humility even in triumph.

70–80 min · Discussion · We do (10 min)
Structured discussion from the 30 tiered questions, with facilitation notes.
Anchor question: Do Jane and Bingley deserve each other? Why? Compare Jane's and Lydia's marriages.
Anchor question: Do Jane and Bingley deserve each other? Why?
Facilitation: Compare Jane's and Lydia's marriages.

80–87 min · Exit ticket / chapter quiz · You do (7 min)
Chapter quiz in the app and an exit ticket (answer given).
Chapter quiz in the app, then: In one sentence, what does this chapter suggest about happiness for Jane? Support it with one short quotation. Model answer: Jane's engagement rewards her patience and goodness. (“I am certainly the most fortunate creature that ever existed”, Chapter LV, paragraph 52). Accept any defensible claim backed by a quotation from the chapter; the answer key for the quiz is in the Quiz section.
Exit ticket: In one sentence, what does this chapter suggest about happiness for Jane? Support it with one short quotation.
Answer: Model answer: Jane's engagement rewards her patience and goodness. (“I am certainly the most fortunate creature that ever existed”, Chapter LV, paragraph 52). Accept any defensible claim backed by a quotation from the chapter; the answer key for the quiz is in the Quiz section.

87–90 min · Closure · I do (3 min)
Summarize the lesson and preview the next reading.
Today we saw how characterization shapes happiness for Jane. Key takeaway: a marriage of affection and fortune both.

Total: 90 minutes.

Teacher analysis (spoilers)

Literary elements

- Characterization: Bingley proposes to Jane; Jane calls herself "the most fortunate creature that ever existed."
- Characterization: Mr. Bennet jokes that Jane and Bingley are so easy-going "every servant will cheat you."

Themes and how they develop

- marriage and money: a marriage of affection and fortune both.

Symbols and motifs

- silence and reserve: What characters leave unsaid (Darcy's reserve, Jane's composure, Elizabeth's secrets) drives misunderstanding. In this chapter: “Bingley that could provoke his ridicule, or disgust him into silence; and he was more communicative, and less eccentric than the other” (Chapter LV, paragraph 20).
- letters: Letters carry news, reveal character and change minds; Darcy's letter is the turning point of the novel. In this chapter: “away from him and her daughter. Elizabeth, who had a letter to write, went into the breakfast room for that purpose soon” (Chapter LV, paragraph 20).

Key quotations (checked against the reading text)

- “I am certainly the most fortunate creature that ever existed” (Chapter LV, paragraph 52) Jane's joy.
- “He is come—Mr. Bingley is come” (Chapter LV, paragraph 7) Mrs. Bennet's excitement: repetition is her voice.
- “why am I thus singled from my family, and blessed above them all” (Chapter LV, paragraph 52) Jane's humility.

Model claim-evidence-reasoning

Claim: Jane's engagement rewards her patience and goodness.
Evidence: “I am certainly the most fortunate creature that ever existed” (Chapter LV, paragraph 52)
Reasoning: She calls herself "the most fortunate creature that ever existed" and asks "why am I thus singled from my family," showing humility even in triumph.

Vocabulary with etymology notes

Word	Definition (in this sentence)	In context	Word history
simpered (verb)	smiled in a silly, self-conscious way	Kitty simpered and smiled, and hoped her turn was coming soon.

panegyric (noun)	a speech or piece of writing full of praise	This naturally introduced a panegyric from Jane on his diffidence, and the little value he put on his own good qualities.	"panegyric": Origin: French panégyrique. (Liber et Libri origin note, https://en.wiktionary.org/wiki/panegyric#Etymology)
premeditation (noun)	planning something beforehand	Jane instantly gave a look at Elizabeth, which spoke her distress at such premeditation, and her entreaty that she would not give into it.
tempers (noun)	natures; dispositions	Your tempers are by no means unlike.
dispense (verb)	administer or bestow, as in small portions	Her younger sisters soon began to make interest with her for objects of happiness which she might in future be able to dispense.	"dispense": Origin: Old French dispenser; earlier Latin dispēnsāre ("to weigh out"). (Liber et Libri origin note, https://en.wiktionary.org/wiki/dispense#Etymology)
eccentric (adjective)	odd; unusual in behavior	There was nothing of presumption or folly in Bingley that could provoke his ridicule, or disgust him into silence; and he was more communicative, and less eccentric than the other had ever seen him.
provoke (verb)	call forth (emotions, feelings, and responses)	There was nothing of presumption or folly in Bingley that could provoke his ridicule, or disgust him into silence; and he was more communicative, and less eccentric than the other had ever seen him.
embracing (verb)	hugging	Jane could have no reserves from Elizabeth, where confidence would give pleasure; and instantly embracing her, acknowledged, with the liveliest emotion, that she was the happiest creature in the world.	"embracing": Origin of "embrace": Old French embracer. (Liber et Libri origin note, https://en.wiktionary.org/wiki/embrace#Etymology)
ingenious (adjective)	showing inventiveness and skill	But on returning to the drawing-room, when her letter was finished, she saw, to her infinite surprise, there was reason to fear that her mother had been too ingenious for her.

Discussion questions

1. Do Jane and Bingley deserve each other? Why?
2. Where does plot appear in this chapter, and what effect does it have? Point to one passage.
3. How does this chapter connect to the book's larger concern with women's limited choices?

Classroom discussion questions (30, tiered)

Wait time after every question (3 s for DOK 1, 5 s for DOK 2, 8 to 10 s for DOK 3 and 4); think-pair-share on DOK 3 and 4; answer each response with a follow-up probe; close with student-generated questions. Focus sets by rigor level: Scaffolded support: 1, 2, 3, 4, 5, 6, 11, 12, 13, 14, 21, 22; HS Freshman: 1, 2, 3, 4, 5, 12, 13, 14, 15, 22, 23, 24; HS Sophomore: 1, 2, 3, 4, 13, 14, 15, 16, 17, 23, 24, 25; HS Junior: 1, 2, 3, 14, 15, 16, 17, 18, 24, 25, 26, 27; HS Senior: 1, 2, 3, 15, 16, 17, 18, 25, 26, 27, 28, 29; AP: 1, 2, 16, 17, 18, 19, 20, 26, 27, 28, 29, 30; College Freshman: 1, 2, 17, 18, 19, 20, 21, 22, 27, 28, 29, 30; College Sophomore: 1, 2, 11, 18, 19, 20, 21, 22, 23, 28, 29, 30; College Junior: 1, 11, 12, 19, 20, 21, 22, 23, 24, 25, 29, 30; College Senior: 1, 11, 12, 13, 20, 21, 22, 23, 24, 25, 26, 30; Graduate / PhD: 1, 11, 12, 13, 21, 22, 23, 24, 25, 26, 27, 28

Literal / recall

1. Who proposes to Jane? [DOK 1 · coldCallWithSupport · wait 3 s · AP: unit standards] Look for: Bingley
2. How does Jane react to Bingley's proposal? [DOK 1 · turnAndTalk · wait 3 s · AP: unit standards] Look for: Overjoyed
3. What does Mr. Bennet joke? [DOK 1 · coldCallWithSupport · wait 3 s · AP: unit standards] Look for: Every servant will cheat them
4. Who must consent? [DOK 1 · turnAndTalk · wait 3 s · AP: unit standards] Look for: Mr. Bennet
5. What does Jane's engagement reward? [DOK 1 · coldCallWithSupport · wait 3 s · AP: unit standards] Look for: Patience and goodness
6. Retell the three most important events of “Chapter LV” in order, in one sentence each. [DOK 1 · turnAndTalk · wait 3 s · AP: unit standards] Look for: Bingley proposes to Jane, who is overjoyed. Mr. Bennet jokes that they are so easy-going every servant will cheat them. The family celebrates.
7. Which characters appear or are mentioned in “Chapter LV”? Name two and one thing each says or does. [DOK 1 · coldCallWithSupport · wait 3 s · AP: unit standards] Look for: Names and actions taken from the chapter; check against the teacher summary.
8. Where and when does “Chapter LV” take place? Point to the line that tells you. [DOK 1 · turnAndTalk · wait 3 s · AP: unit standards] Look for: A place/time detail quoted from the chapter.
9. Reread: “Kitty simpered and smiled, and hoped her turn was coming soon.” What does “simpered” mean here, and what is literally happening in this line? [DOK 1 · turnAndTalk · wait 3 s · AP: unit standards] Look for: simpered: smiled in a silly, self-conscious way.
10. Reread: “This naturally introduced a panegyric from Jane on his diffidence, and the little value he put on his own good qualities.” What does “panegyric” mean here, and what is literally happening in this line? [DOK 1 · turnAndTalk · wait 3 s · AP: unit standards] Look for: panegyric: a speech or piece of writing full of praise.

Inferential / analytical

1. What does “Chapter LV” suggest about happiness for Jane? State the inference and the line that supports it. [DOK 2 · thinkPairShare · wait 5 s · AP-LIT.LAN] Look for: Jane's happiness rewards her patience and goodness.
2. Find one example of plot in this chapter. What does it reveal that a plain statement would not? [DOK 2 · followUp · wait 5 s · AP-LIT.STR] Look for: Look for key events and the causes linking them.
3. How does the characterization in this chapter shape what we understand about happiness for Jane? [DOK 3 · thinkPairShare · wait 8 s · AP-LIT.CHR] Look for: Look for what characters say, do and think, and how others react to them.

   Answer guidance: A defensible line of argument: Jane's engagement rewards her patience and goodness. Useful evidence: “I am certainly the most fortunate creature that ever existed” (Chapter LV, paragraph 52):

Jane's joy. On characterization: Mr. Bennet jokes that Jane and Bingley are so easy-going "every servant will cheat you." Credit any position that is supported by quotation and reasoning; push one-sided answers to address the strongest counterpoint.

4. In the passage that begins “She then sat still five minutes longer; but unable to waste such a precious occasion, she suddenly got up, and saying to Kitty, “Come here, my love, I want to speak to you,””, why might Austen have chosen these particular words? Pick two and explain their connotations. [DOK 2 · followUp · wait 5 s · AP-LIT.FIG] Look for: Diction analysis of two words in the anchor passage.
5. What causes the main turn in “Chapter LV”, and what effect is it likely to have on what follows? [DOK 2 · followUp · wait 5 s · AP-LIT.STR] Look for: Bingley proposes to Jane, who is overjoyed. Mr. Bennet jokes that they are so easy-going every servant will cheat them. The family celebrates.
6. How does “Chapter LV” build on “Chapter LIV”? Name one link of cause and effect. [DOK 3 · thinkPairShare · wait 8 s · AP-LIT.STR] Look for: A causal or structural link between this and the previous chapter.
   Answer guidance: A defensible line of argument: Jane's engagement rewards her patience and goodness. Useful evidence: “He is come—Mr. Bingley is come” (Chapter LV, paragraph 7): Mrs. Bennet's excitement: repetition is her voice. Theme link: a marriage of affection and fortune both. Credit any position that is supported by quotation and reasoning; push one-sided answers to address the strongest counterpoint.
7. What can we infer about a character's motives from what they say and do here, as opposed to what they claim? [DOK 3 · followUp · wait 8 s · AP-LIT.CHR] Look for: An inference about motive supported by a quoted line.
   Answer guidance: A defensible line of argument: Jane's engagement rewards her patience and goodness. Useful evidence: “why am I thus singled from my family, and blessed above them all” (Chapter LV, paragraph 52): Jane's humility. On characterization: Mr. Bennet jokes that Jane and Bingley are so easy-going "every servant will cheat you." Credit any position that is supported by quotation and reasoning; push one-sided answers to address the strongest counterpoint.
8. The bell-ringer asked: “Do Jane and Bingley deserve each other? Why?” Now that we have read closely, how would you revise your first answer, and which line changed your mind? [DOK 2 · thinkPairShare · wait 5 s · AP-LIT.LAN] Look for: A revised answer anchored in the text.
9. Where does tone / mood appear, and how does it connect this chapter to the larger concern with women's limited choices? [DOK 3 · followUp · wait 8 s · AP-LIT.FIG] Look for: Look for word choices that reveal the narrator's attitude or the scene's feeling.
   Answer guidance: A defensible line of argument: Jane's engagement rewards her patience and goodness. Useful evidence: “I am certainly the most fortunate creature that ever existed” (Chapter LV, paragraph 52): Jane's joy. Theme link: a marriage of affection and fortune both. Credit any position that is supported by quotation and reasoning; push one-sided answers to address the strongest counterpoint.
10. Background: Engagements needed the father's consent. How does knowing this change the way you read one moment in the chapter? [DOK 3 · thinkPairShare · wait 8 s · AP-LIT.SET] Look for: A specific moment reread in light of the context.
    Answer guidance: A defensible line of argument: Jane's engagement rewards her patience and goodness. Useful evidence: “He is come—Mr. Bingley is come” (Chapter LV, paragraph 7): Mrs. Bennet's excitement: repetition is her voice. Theme link: a marriage of affection and fortune both. Credit any position that is supported by quotation and reasoning; push one-sided answers to address the strongest counterpoint.

Evaluative / synthesis / creative

1. A critic might argue: “Jane's happiness rewards her patience and goodness.” How far do you agree? Take a stand and defend it with two lines from the chapter. [DOK 3 · fourCorners · wait 8 s · AP-LIT.LAN] Look for: A defended position with evidence and one counterpoint.
   Answer guidance: A defensible line of argument: Jane's engagement rewards her patience and goodness. Useful evidence: “why am I thus singled from my family, and blessed above them all” (Chapter LV, paragraph 52): Jane's humility. Theme link: a marriage of affection and fortune both. Credit any position that is supported by quotation and reasoning; push one-sided answers to address the strongest counterpoint.
2. Which character in this chapter acts most wisely, and which least? Judge them by a standard you name. [DOK 3 · thinkPairShare · wait 8 s · AP-LIT.CHR, AP-LIT.LAN] Look for: An evaluation using an explicit criterion and evidence.
   Answer guidance: A defensible line of argument: Jane's engagement rewards her patience and goodness. Useful evidence: “I am certainly the most fortunate creature that ever existed” (Chapter LV, paragraph 52): Jane's joy. On characterization: Mr. Bennet jokes that Jane and Bingley are so easy-going "every servant will cheat you." Credit any position that is supported by quotation and reasoning; push one-sided answers to address the strongest counterpoint.
3. Rewrite one moment of “Chapter LV” from the point of view of a different character. What does the new angle reveal or hide about happiness for Jane? [DOK 4 · thinkPairShare · wait 8 s · AP-LIT.LAN, AP-LIT.NAR] Look for: A creative product with a rationale tied to the text.
   Answer guidance: A defensible line of argument: Jane's engagement rewards her patience and goodness. Useful evidence: “He is come—Mr. Bingley is come” (Chapter LV, paragraph 7): Mrs. Bennet's excitement: repetition is her voice. Theme link: a marriage of affection and fortune both. Credit any position that is supported by quotation and reasoning; push one-sided answers to address the strongest counterpoint.
4. Write three questions of your own about “Chapter LV”: one recall, one “why/how”, and one “should/what if”. Trade with a partner and answer theirs. [DOK 3 · studentGenerated · wait 8 s · AP-LIT.LAN] Look for: Student-generated questions at three levels.
   Answer guidance: A defensible line of argument: Jane's engagement rewards her patience and goodness. Useful evidence: “why am I thus singled from my family, and blessed above them all” (Chapter LV, paragraph 52): Jane's humility. Theme link: a marriage of affection and fortune both. Credit any position that is supported by quotation and reasoning; push one-sided answers to address the strongest counterpoint.
5. Connect this chapter to first impressions and prejudice: is the link strong or weak so far? What would Austen need to show next to strengthen it? [DOK 4 · socraticCircle · wait 8 s · AP-LIT.LAN] Look for: A judgment of thematic development across the work.
   Answer guidance: A defensible line of argument: Jane's engagement rewards her patience and goodness. Useful evidence: “I am certainly the most fortunate creature that ever existed” (Chapter LV, paragraph 52): Jane's joy. Theme link: a marriage of affection and fortune both. Credit any position that is supported by quotation and reasoning; push one-sided answers to address the strongest counterpoint.
6. Is the plot in this chapter effective, or does it feel heavy-handed? Evaluate it as a reader would in a review. [DOK 3 · fourCorners · wait 8 s · AP-LIT.LAN, AP-LIT.STR] Look for: An evaluative judgment with criteria and evidence.
   Answer guidance: A defensible line of argument: Jane's engagement rewards her patience and goodness. Useful evidence: “He is come—Mr. Bingley is come” (Chapter LV, paragraph 7): Mrs. Bennet's excitement:

repetition is her voice. Theme link: a marriage of affection and fortune both. Credit any position that is supported by quotation and reasoning; push one-sided answers to address the strongest counterpoint.

7. Compare how “Chapter LV” treats happiness for Jane with how another text, film or event you know treats a similar idea. What does Pride and Prejudice see that the other misses? [DOK 4 · socraticCircle · wait 8 s · AP-LIT.LAN] Look for: A cross-text synthesis.

   Answer guidance: A defensible line of argument: Jane's engagement rewards her patience and goodness. Useful evidence: “why am I thus singled from my family, and blessed above them all” (Chapter LV, paragraph 52): Jane's humility. Theme link: a marriage of affection and fortune both. Credit any position that is supported by quotation and reasoning; push one-sided answers to address the strongest counterpoint.

8. Predict what “Chapter LVI” will bring, using two clues from this chapter. After reading, evaluate your prediction. [DOK 3 · thinkPairShare · wait 8 s · AP-LIT.LAN, AP-LIT.STR] Look for: A prediction or judgment justified with textual clues.

   Answer guidance: A defensible line of argument: Jane's engagement rewards her patience and goodness. Useful evidence: “I am certainly the most fortunate creature that ever existed” (Chapter LV, paragraph 52): Jane's joy. Theme link: a marriage of affection and fortune both. Credit any position that is supported by quotation and reasoning; push one-sided answers to address the strongest counterpoint.

9. Design a one-paragraph modern adaptation of this chapter (setting, characters, conflict). What must stay the same for it to still be about happiness for Jane? [DOK 4 · thinkPairShare · wait 8 s · AP-LIT.LAN] Look for: A creative transfer that keeps the core idea.

   Answer guidance: A defensible line of argument: Jane's engagement rewards her patience and goodness. Useful evidence: “He is come—Mr. Bingley is come” (Chapter LV, paragraph 7): Mrs. Bennet's excitement: repetition is her voice. Theme link: a marriage of affection and fortune both. Credit any position that is supported by quotation and reasoning; push one-sided answers to address the strongest counterpoint.

10. What question would you most like to ask Jane Austen about this chapter, and what answer do you think the text itself gives? [DOK 4 · studentGenerated · wait 8 s · AP-LIT.LAN] Look for: A student-generated question answered from evidence.

    Answer guidance: A defensible line of argument: Jane's engagement rewards her patience and goodness. Useful evidence: “why am I thus singled from my family, and blessed above them all” (Chapter LV, paragraph 52): Jane's humility. Theme link: a marriage of affection and fortune both. Credit any position that is supported by quotation and reasoning; push one-sided answers to address the strongest counterpoint.

Annotation focus

- Plot: look for key events and the causes linking them (anchor passage in the We do segment)
- Also notice Characterization: what characters say, do and think, and how others react to them
- Also notice Tone / mood: word choices that reveal the narrator's attitude or the scene's feeling

Chapter quiz: item bank (all eleven rigor versions)

1. [mc · recall · DOK 1] How does Jane react to Bingley's proposal?

   A. Overjoyed

   B. Unsure

C. Angry

D. Upset

Key: A (Overjoyed)

2. [fill · recall · DOK 1] Fill in the blank with the vocabulary word that fits: “There was nothing of presumption or folly in Bingley that could _____ his ridicule, or disgust him into silence; and he was more communicative, and less eccentric than the other had ever seen him.” Word bank: panegyric, simpered, provoke, premeditation

   Key: provoke

3. [mc · recall · DOK 1] Who proposes to Jane?

   A. Wickham

   B. Collins

   C. Darcy

   D. Bingley

   Key: D (Bingley)

4. [fill · recall · DOK 1] Fill in the blank with the vocabulary word that fits: “Jane could have no reserves from Elizabeth, where confidence would give pleasure; and instantly _____ her, acknowledged, with the liveliest emotion, that she was the happiest creature in the world.” Word bank: premeditation, panegyric, embracing, simpered

   Key: embracing

5. [fill · recall · DOK 1] Complete the quotation from Chapter LV, paragraph 52: “I am _____ the most fortunate creature that ever existed”

   Key: certainly

6. [mc · recall · DOK 1] In the line “Your tempers are by no means unlike.”, what does “tempers” most nearly mean?

   A. natures; dispositions

   B. a person who makes or sells women's hats

   C. irritated; annoyed

   D. thoughts about the past

   Key: A (natures; dispositions)

7. [mc · recall · DOK 1] Who must consent?

   A. Caroline

   B. Darcy

   C. Lady Catherine

   D. Mr. Bennet

   Key: D (Mr. Bennet)

8. [mc · recall · DOK 1] In the line “Kitty simpered and smiled, and hoped her turn was coming soon.”, what does “simpered” most nearly mean?

   A. smiled in a silly, self-conscious way

   B. a storehouse for goods and merchandise

   C. a single word or sound (here, "a syllable said" = a word said)

D. a person lacking intelligence or common sense

Key: A (smiled in a silly, self-conscious way)

9. [mc · recall · DOK 1] In the line “Jane instantly gave a look at Elizabeth, which spoke her distress at such premeditation, and her entreaty that she would not give into it.”, what does “premeditation” most nearly mean?

   A. try to prevent; show opposition to

   B. helped; came to the aid of

   C. planning something beforehand

   D. a card game (also spelled casino)

   Key: C (planning something beforehand)

10. [mc · recall · DOK 1] In the line “This naturally introduced a panegyric from Jane on his diffidence, and the little value he put on his own good qualities.”, what does “panegyric” most nearly mean?

    A. a speech or piece of writing full of praise

    B. easy to manage or control

    C. kept from leaving

    D. the quality of having an inferior or less favorable position

    Key: A (a speech or piece of writing full of praise)

11. [fill · recall · DOK 1] Fill in the blank with the vocabulary word that fits: “Her younger sisters soon began to make interest with her for objects of happiness which she might in future be able to _____.” Word bank: dispense, panegyric, simpered, premeditation

    Key: dispense

12. [short · inference · DOK 2] What can you infer from this line? “He is come—Mr. Bingley is come” (Chapter LV, paragraph 7) Answer in two or three sentences with one detail.

    Sample answer: Mrs. Bennet's excitement: repetition is her voice. The evidence is “He is come—Mr. Bingley is come” (Chapter LV, paragraph 7). This develops marriage and money: a marriage of affection and fortune both.

13. [mc · inference · DOK 2] Which choice best states a central concern of “Chapter LV”?

    A. Happiness for Jane

    B. The letter

    C. Reflections on love

    D. A ridiculous proposal

    Key: A (Happiness for Jane)

14. [mc · analysis · DOK 3] In this chapter, which theme does the following most directly develop? A marriage of affection and fortune both.

    A. First impressions and prejudice

    B. Pride and self-knowledge

    C. Class and social mobility

    D. Marriage and money

    Key: D (Marriage and money)

15. [mc · analysis · DOK 3] Which literary element does this describe in "Chapter LV"? Bingley proposes to Jane; Jane calls herself 'the most fortunate creature that ever existed.'

    A. Symbolism

    B. Hyperbole

    C. Characterization

    D. Irony

    Key: C (Characterization)

16. [short · synthesis · DOK 4] Synthesis: trace how marriage and money develops from Chapter L to Chapter LV. Use one quotation from each.

    Sample answer: Earlier, in Chapter L, paragraph 1, the text reads "instead of spending his whole income, he had laid by an annual sum, for the better provision of his children" — Mr. Bennet's regret. In Chapter LV, "I am certainly the most fortunate creature that ever existed" (Chapter LV, paragraph 52) — Jane's joy. A marriage of affection and fortune both.

17. [fill · recall · DOK 1] Complete the quotation from Chapter LV, paragraph 26: "She then hastened away to her mother, who had _____ broken up the card party, and was sitting upstairs with Kitty." Word bank: purposely, happiness, everything, called

    Key: purposely

18. [mc · recall · DOK 1] What does Jane's engagement reward?

    A. Wit

    B. Wealth

    C. Patience and goodness

    D. Scheming

    Key: C (Patience and goodness)

19. [fill · recall · DOK 1] Complete the quotation from Chapter LV, paragraph 52: "why am I thus _____ from my family, and blessed above them all"

    Key: singled

20. [mc · recall · DOK 1] What does Mr. Bennet joke?

    A. They will be poor

    B. Every servant will cheat them

    C. They will move abroad

    D. They will fight

    Key: B (Every servant will cheat them)

21. [short · inference · DOK 2] What does this passage from Chapter LV, paragraph 24 reveal about the character or situation? "But she would not allow herself to stay with her sister, or say half that remained to be said, for the present." Answer in two or three sentences with one detail.

    Sample answer: The passage (Chapter LV, paragraph 24) shows the situation turning on first impressions and prejudice: a marriage of affection and fortune both. The words "remained" and "herself" are the proof, because they show how the moment looks to the people in it. They suggest more than the narrator states outright.

22. [short · inference · DOK 2] What can you infer from this line? "I am certainly the most fortunate creature that ever existed" (Chapter LV, paragraph 52) Answer in two or three sentences with one detail.

    Sample answer: Jane's joy. The evidence is "I am certainly the most fortunate creature that ever existed" (Chapter LV, paragraph 52). This develops marriage and money: a marriage of affection and fortune both.

23. [mc · inference · DOK 2] Which of these passages comes earliest in Chapter LV?

    A. “His friend had left him that morning for London, but was to return home in ten days’ time.”

    B. “He sat with them above an hour, and was in remarkably good spirits.”

    C. “Mrs. Bennet invited him to dine with them; but, with many expressions of concern, he confessed himself engaged elsewhere.”

    D. “A few days after this visit, Mr. Bingley called again, and alone.”

    Key: D (“A few days after this visit, Mr. Bingley called again, and alone.”)

24. [short · analysis · DOK 3] Analyze how the word choice in this passage from Chapter LV, paragraph 54 shapes its tone: “Mrs. Bennet was privileged to whisper it to Mrs. Philips, and she ventured, without any permission, to do the same by all her neighbours in Meryton.” Pick two words and explain their effect.

    Sample answer: The words “privileged” and “neighbours” (Chapter LV, paragraph 54) make the tone heavy and deliberate rather than neutral. That weight points the reader to class and social mobility: a marriage of affection and fortune both. The author chooses them so the moment feels significant instead of passing.

25. [short · analysis · DOK 3] Analyze the word choice in “why am I thus singled from my family, and blessed above them all” (Chapter LV, paragraph 52). Pick two words and explain what they suggest.

    Sample answer: Jane's humility. The evidence is “why am I thus singled from my family, and blessed above them all” (Chapter LV, paragraph 52). This develops marriage and money: a marriage of affection and fortune both. The words “singled” and “blessed” carry that meaning: they are the charged choices in the line, and changing either would soften the effect.

26. [short · synthesis · DOK 4] Connect this passage from Chapter LV, paragraph 8 to the story's treatment of women's limited choices: “We will be down as soon as we can,’ said Jane; ‘but I dare say Kitty is forwarder than either of us, for she went upstairs half an hour ago.” Use one other moment from the story as well.

    Sample answer: This passage (Chapter LV, paragraph 8) develops women's limited choices: a marriage of affection and fortune both. Its words “forwarder” and “upstairs” carry that idea into this moment. The same concern returns in “The same anxiety to get them by themselves was visible again in the evening.” (Chapter LV, paragraph 11), so the two passages read as a pattern, not a single moment. Together they show the story treating women's limited choices as central.

27. [short · inference · DOK 2] What does this passage from Chapter LV, paragraph 49 reveal about the character or situation? “He made a little mistake to be sure; but it is to the credit of his modesty.” Answer in two or three sentences with one detail.

    Sample answer: The passage (Chapter LV, paragraph 49) shows the situation turning on first impressions and prejudice: a marriage of affection and fortune both. The words “modesty” and “mistake” are the proof, because they show how the moment looks to the people in it. They suggest more than the narrator states outright.

28. [short · analysis · DOK 3] Analyze how the word choice in this passage from Chapter LV, paragraph 1 shapes its tone: “Mrs. Bennet invited him to dine with them; but, with many expressions of concern, he confessed himself engaged elsewhere.” Pick two words and explain their effect.

    Sample answer: The words “expressions” and “confessed” (Chapter LV, paragraph 1) make the tone heavy and deliberate rather than neutral. That weight points the reader to pride and self-knowledge: a marriage of affection and fortune both. The author chooses them so the moment feels significant instead of passing.

29. [short · analysis · DOK 3] Analyze how the word choice in this passage from Chapter LV, paragraph 32 shapes its tone: “They shook hands with great cordiality; and then till her sister came down, she had to listen to all he had to say, of his own happiness, and of Jane’s perfections; and in spite of his being a lover, Elizabeth really believed all his…” Pick two words and explain their effect.

    Sample answer: The words “understanding” and “expectations” (Chapter LV, paragraph 32) make the tone heavy and deliberate rather than neutral. That weight points the reader to pride and self-knowledge: a marriage of affection and fortune both. The author chooses them so the moment feels significant instead of passing.

30. [short · synthesis · DOK 4] Connect this passage from Chapter LV, paragraph 39 to the story's treatment of women's limited choices: “Why, he has four or five thousand a year, and very likely more.’ Then addressing her daughter, ‘Oh! my dear, dear Jane, I am so happy!” Use one other moment from the story as well.
    Sample answer: This passage (Chapter LV, paragraph 39) develops women's limited choices: a marriage of affection and fortune both. Its words “addressing” and “thousand” carry that idea into this moment. The same concern returns in “Bingley, from this time, was of course a daily visitor at Longbourn; coming frequently before breakfast, and always…” (Chapter LV, paragraph 42), so the two passages read as a pattern, not a single moment. Together they show the story treating women's limited choices as central.
31. [short · synthesis · DOK 4] Connect this passage from Chapter LV, paragraph 44 to the story's treatment of marriage and money: “He has made me so happy,’ said she, one evening, ‘by telling me, that he was totally ignorant of my being in town last spring!” Use one other moment from the story as well.
    Sample answer: This passage (Chapter LV, paragraph 44) develops marriage and money: a marriage of affection and fortune both. Its words “ignorant” and “evening” carry that idea into this moment. The same concern returns in “But when they see, as I trust they will, that their brother is happy with me, they will learn to be contented, and we…” (Chapter LV, paragraph 46), so the two passages read as a pattern, not a single moment. Together they show the story treating marriage and money as central.
32. [short · analysis · DOK 3 · AP: AP-LIT.LAN] Claim: Jane's engagement rewards her patience and goodness. Explain how this evidence supports the claim: “I am certainly the most fortunate creature that ever existed” (Chapter LV, paragraph 52).
    Sample answer: She calls herself "the most fortunate creature that ever existed" and asks "why am I thus singled from my family," showing humility even in triumph. The evidence is “I am certainly the most fortunate creature that ever existed” (Chapter LV, paragraph 52) — Jane's joy. This develops marriage and money: a marriage of affection and fortune both.
33. [short · synthesis · DOK 4 · AP: AP-LIT.FIG] Close reading: how do the diction and syntax of “He is come—Mr. Bingley is come” (Chapter LV, paragraph 7) shape its meaning? Consider a second, competing reading.
    Sample answer: Mrs. Bennet's excitement: repetition is her voice. The evidence is “He is come—Mr. Bingley is come” (Chapter LV, paragraph 7). This develops marriage and money: a marriage of affection and fortune both. She calls herself "the most fortunate creature that ever existed" and asks "why am I thus singled from my family," showing humility even in triumph.
34. [short · synthesis · DOK 4 · AP: AP-LIT.LAN] Connect this passage from Chapter LV, paragraph 16 to the story's treatment of marriage and money: “Elizabeth made no attempt to reason with her mother, but remained quietly in the hall, till she and Kitty were out of sight, then returned into the drawing-room.” Use one other moment from the story as well.
    Sample answer: This passage (Chapter LV, paragraph 16) develops marriage and money: a marriage of affection and fortune both. Its words “remained” and “returned” carry that idea into this moment. The same concern returns in “His ease and cheerfulness rendered him a most agreeable addition to their evening party; and he bore with the…” (Chapter LV, paragraph 17), so the two passages read as a pattern, not a single moment. Together they show the story treating marriage and money as central.
35. [mc · recall · DOK 1 · AP: AP-LIT.FIG] Which word completes this sentence from Chapter LV, paragraph 6? “In ran Mrs. Bennet to her _____’s room, in her dressing gown, and with her hair half finished, crying out—”
    A. daughter
    B. affection

C. circumspection

D. called

Key: A (daughter)

36. [mc · analysis · DOK 3 · AP: AP-LIT.CHR] Which literary element does this describe in “Chapter LV”? Mr. Bennet jokes that Jane and Bingley are so easy-going ‘every servant will cheat you.’

A. Diction / vocabulary

B. Simile

C. Characterization

D. Setting

Key: C (Characterization)

37. [fill · recall · DOK 1 · AP: AP-LIT.FIG] Complete the quotation from Chapter LV, paragraph 14: “In a few _____, Mrs. Bennet half opened the door and called out, ‘Lizzy, my dear, I want to speak with you.’” Word bank: minutes, affectionate, everything, remarkably

Key: minutes

38. [mc · recall · DOK 1 · Dual Credit (Indiana College Core): ICC-WC-1.5] Which word completes this sentence from Chapter LV, paragraph 19? “Seriously, however, she felt tolerably persuaded that all this must have taken place with that gentleman’s _____.”

A. daughter

B. circumspection

C. concurrence

D. invitation

Key: C (concurrence)

39. [short · synthesis · DOK 4 · Dual Credit (Indiana College Core): ICC-WC-1.5] Close reading: how do the diction and syntax of “I am certainly the most fortunate creature that ever existed” (Chapter LV, paragraph 52) shape its meaning? Consider a second, competing reading.

Sample answer: Jane's joy. The evidence is “I am certainly the most fortunate creature that ever existed” (Chapter LV, paragraph 52). This develops marriage and money: a marriage of affection and fortune both. The words “certainly” and “fortunate” carry that meaning: they are the charged choices in the line, and changing either would soften the effect. She calls herself "the most fortunate creature that ever existed" and asks "why am I thus singled from my family," showing humility even in triumph.

40. [fill · recall · DOK 1 · Program outcome: LeL-C3-LIT-1] Fill in the blank with the vocabulary word that fits: “There was nothing of presumption or folly in Bingley that could provoke his ridicule, or disgust him into silence; and he was more communicative, and less _____ than the other had ever seen him.” Word bank: simpered, eccentric, panegyric, premeditation

Key: eccentric

41. [short · analysis · DOK 3 · Program outcome: LeL-C3-LIT-1] Analyze how the word choice in this passage from Chapter LV, paragraph 27 shapes its tone: “Elizabeth, who was left by herself, now smiled at the rapidity and ease with which an affair was finally settled, that had given them so many previous months of suspense and vexation.” Pick two words and explain their effect.

Sample answer: The words “rapidity” and “suspense” (Chapter LV, paragraph 27) make the tone heavy and deliberate rather than neutral. That weight points the reader to class and social mobility: a marriage of affection and fortune both. The author chooses them so the moment feels significant instead of passing.

Rigor version	Items (in order)	Mix
Scaffolded support	1, 2, 3, 4, 5, 6, 7, 8, 9, 10, 11, 12, 13, 14, 15, 16	recall 11, inference 2, analysis 2, synthesis 1
HS Freshman	17, 18, 19, 20, 8, 5, 6, 7, 13, 21, 22, 23, 24, 25, 15, 26	recall 8, inference 4, analysis 3, synthesis 1
HS Sophomore	7, 4, 10, 11, 8, 2, 21, 22, 27, 23, 13, 28, 15, 29, 30, 31	recall 6, inference 5, analysis 3, synthesis 2
HS Junior	17, 7, 9, 5, 10, 11, 23, 27, 13, 21, 32, 29, 24, 25, 33, 34	recall 6, inference 4, analysis 4, synthesis 2
HS Senior	1, 2, 5, 35, 13, 21, 12, 23, 27, 36, 15, 25, 29, 16, 30, 31	recall 4, inference 5, analysis 4, synthesis 3
AP	11, 37, 18, 13, 21, 23, 12, 14, 36, 29, 25, 24, 30, 34, 26, 31	recall 3, inference 4, analysis 5, synthesis 4
College Freshman	11, 2, 38, 27, 21, 23, 13, 28, 24, 29, 25, 15, 34, 31, 39, 16	recall 3, inference 4, analysis 5, synthesis 4
College Sophomore	4, 11, 13, 23, 21, 27, 14, 36, 29, 25, 15, 16, 26, 31, 39, 34	recall 2, inference 4, analysis 5, synthesis 5
College Junior	11, 40, 21, 23, 13, 25, 36, 15, 14, 41, 29, 16, 26, 34, 30, 31	recall 2, inference 3, analysis 6, synthesis 5
College Senior	4, 11, 3, 23, 29, 41, 14, 36, 28, 25, 34, 30, 16, 31, 39, 26	recall 3, inference 1, analysis 6, synthesis 6
Graduate / PhD	19, 11, 3, 41, 14, 24, 36, 28, 25, 29, 15, 26, 31, 30, 34, 16	recall 3, inference 0, analysis 8, synthesis 5

Writing prompts (eleven rigor levels)

Scaffolded support (250 words; AP: see unit standards): Supported track (work from the passage your teacher selects). In “Chapter LV,” how does Austen show happiness for Jane? Write a paragraph that states your claim, quotes two details from the passage, and explains how each detail supports your idea. Use the plot you noticed as one piece of evidence.

HS Freshman (350 words; AP: see unit standards): In Chapter LV, how does Austen develop the idea of happiness for Jane? State a clear claim, support it with two or three quotations, and explain how the plot in the chapter helps build that idea.

HS Sophomore (450 words; AP: see unit standards): Analyze how Chapter LV develops the idea of happiness for Jane. Make a precise claim, support it with at least three pieces of textual evidence, and explain how the author's use of plot and characterization shapes that idea. Address one possible counterclaim.

HS Junior (550 words; AP: see unit standards): Analyze how the structure of Chapter LV (where it begins, turns and ends) and its plot shape the reader's understanding of happiness for Jane. Identify one place where the text leaves matters uncertain and explain how that uncertainty adds to its meaning.

HS Senior (600 words; AP: see unit standards): Two readers disagree about what Chapter LV suggests about happiness for Jane. Lay out two plausible interpretations, weigh the evidence for each (including the chapter's plot and characterization), and argue for the stronger one in a sustained, well-organized essay.

AP (650 words; AP: AP-LIT.STR, AP-LIT.LAN): Write a literary argument in which you analyze how Jane Austen uses plot in Chapter LV to complicate the reader's understanding of happiness for Jane. Develop a defensible thesis, select evidence purposefully, and explain how specific choices of diction and syntax create meaning.

College Freshman (1000 words; AP: see unit standards): Situate Chapter LV within its historical and literary context and argue how the chapter's treatment of happiness for Jane responds to that context. Engage with at least one secondary perspective (a critic, historian or the author's own statements), integrate quotations smoothly, and cite in MLA style.

College Sophomore (1250 words; AP: see unit standards): Read Chapter LV alongside the conventions of its genre and period. Argue how the chapter's handling of happiness for Jane follows or bends those conventions, using the plot as evidence, and test your reading against one published critic. Document two secondary sources in MLA.

College Junior (1500 words; AP: see unit standards): Apply a named critical approach (for example formalist, historicist, feminist, psychoanalytic or ecocritical) to Chapter LV and its treatment of happiness for Jane. State your method, show what it reveals in the chapter's plot and characterization, and identify where the text resists it.

College Senior (2000 words; AP: see unit standards): Develop a research argument that reads Chapter LV as evidence for a larger claim about happiness for Jane in Pride and Prejudice. Connect close reading of the chapter to the whole novel, engage at least four scholarly sources, and state precisely where your reading departs from theirs (Chicago style).

Graduate / PhD (2500 words; AP: see unit standards): Develop an original argument that reads Chapter LV as a hinge in the novel's larger treatment of happiness for Jane. Position your reading within a named critical conversation (for example formalist, historicist, psychoanalytic, feminist or postcolonial approaches), account for the textual history where relevant, and articulate the stakes of your intervention for scholarship on Pride and Prejudice.

SAT-style questions

1. Jane instantly gave a look at Elizabeth, which spoke her distress at such premeditation, and her entreaty that she would not give into it.

   As used in the text, what does the word “premeditation” most nearly mean?

   A. call forth (emotions, feelings, and responses)

   B. showing inventiveness and skill

   C. planning something beforehand

   D. hugging

2. She then sat still five minutes longer; but unable to waste such a precious occasion, she suddenly got up, and saying to Kitty, "Come here, my love, I want to speak to you," took her out of the room. Jane instantly gave a look at Elizabeth, which spoke her distress at such premeditation, and her entreaty that she would not give into it.

Which choice best states a central concern of "Chapter LV"?

A. Trusted relatives

B. Happiness for Jane

C. Wit as courtship

D. Endings and futures

SAT key: 1. C (planning something beforehand); 2. B (Happiness for Jane)

Lesson 57: Chapter LVI

Focus: the great confrontation

Objective: Students will analyze how conflict develops in “Chapter LVI” by writing a claim-evidence-reasoning paragraph that cites at least 2 quotations from the section, and will score at least 80% on the section quiz.

Standards: AP: see the unit standards

Teacher only · spoilers

Lady Catherine arrives unexpectedly and demands that Elizabeth promise never to marry Darcy, claiming he is engaged to Anne. Elizabeth refuses to promise anything, defending her right to choose.

Background: Aristocratic marriages were often arranged to keep wealth in families.

Significance: Elizabeth's defiance is a high point of independence against rank.

Lesson plan and lecture script (90 minutes)

0–8 min · Bell-ringer · You do (8 min)
Students write to the bell-ringer, then pair-share.
What gives Elizabeth the courage to defy Lady Catherine? Write for five minutes. Starters: I think... because... / This connects to women's choices because....
Prompt: What gives Elizabeth the courage to defy Lady Catherine?
Sentence starters: I think… because… · This connects to women's choices because…
Strong response: A strong response takes a position and anticipates this: Elizabeth asserts her right to choose her own happiness.

8–18 min · Vocabulary with etymology notes · I do (10 min)
Five key words in context, with verified word histories.
Today's words: dissuaded — talked out of something; upstart — having risen above one's position and behaving arrogantly; trifled — treated lightly; toyed with; equipage — a carriage with its horses and servants; retains — keeps. “dissuaded”: Origin of “dissuade”: Middle French dissuader; earlier Latin dissuādeō. “upstart”: Origin: an English formation from up- + start. “trifled”: Origin of “trifle”: possibly Old French trufle (“mockery”).
Words: dissuaded: talked out of something · upstart: having risen above one's position and behaving arrogantly · trifled: treated lightly; toyed with · equipage: a carriage with its horses and servants · retains: keeps

18–28 min · Background and context · I do (10 min)
Mini-lecture (read or adapt the script).
Aristocratic marriages were often arranged to keep wealth in families. Elizabeth's defiance is a high point of independence against rank. Characterization: Lady Catherine arrives to forbid Elizabeth's engagement to Darcy; Elizabeth refuses to promise anything. Dialogue: The confrontation is the novel's most dramatic exchange: rank against reason. Watch for rank and condescension: Rank is displayed and enforced, above all at Rosings by Lady Catherine; Elizabeth refuses to be cowed. In this chapter: "Elizabeth had mentioned her name to her mother, on her ladyship's entrance, though no request of introduction had been made" (Chapter LVI, paragraph 3).

28–40 min · I do: modeled close reading · I do (12 min)
Model the close reading of the anchor quotation using the written think-aloud below.
First, meaning. I read "Are the shades of Pemberley to be thus polluted" slowly and put it in my own words: Lady Catherine asks whether Pemberley's shades are to be polluted by Elizabeth's family. Next, craft. I notice her grand, insulting language, as if Elizabeth were a disease. The strongest word is "polluted": it treats Elizabeth's family as dirt. Then, effect. What does Lady Catherine fear? My answer: Lady Catherine fears that Elizabeth's low connections will disgrace Pemberley if Darcy marries her; her snobbery is exposed, and her visit will instead show Darcy that Elizabeth has not refused him.

> Are the shades of Pemberley to be thus polluted (Chapter LVI, paragraph 62)

Think-aloud: First, meaning. I read "Are the shades of Pemberley to be thus polluted" slowly and put it in my own words: Lady Catherine asks whether Pemberley's shades are to be polluted by Elizabeth's family. Next, craft. I notice her grand, insulting language, as if Elizabeth were a disease. The strongest word is "polluted": it treats Elizabeth's family as dirt. Then, effect. What does Lady Catherine fear? My answer: Lady Catherine fears that Elizabeth's low connections will disgrace Pemberley if Darcy marries her; her snobbery is exposed, and her visit will instead show Darcy that Elizabeth has not refused him.

40–55 min · We do: guided annotation · We do (15 min)
Guided analysis of a second quotation; expected answers given.
Ask: What words in this line stand out, and what do they suggest? Expected: "In my own opinion" asserts independence. Women's choices. Ask: How does this line connect to women's choices? Expected: Elizabeth asserts her right to choose her own happiness. (Elizabeth's independence.)

> I am only resolved to act in that manner which will, in my own opinion, constitute my happiness (Chapter LVI, paragraph 68)

Ask: What words in this line stand out, and what do they suggest?
Expected answer: "In my own opinion" asserts independence. Women's choices.
Ask: How does this line connect to women's choices?
Expected answer: Elizabeth asserts her right to choose her own happiness. (Elizabeth's independence.)

55–70 min · You do: independent annotation · You do (15 min)

Independent annotation and a claim-evidence-reasoning paragraph (exemplar given).

Annotate the chapter for characterization, dialogue (three marks with a margin note each), then write one claim-evidence-reasoning paragraph: what does this chapter suggest about the great confrontation? Then start your writing prompt at your assigned level (HS Sophomore: Analyze how Chapter LVI develops the idea of the great confrontation. Make a precise claim, support it with at least three pieces of textual evidence, and explain how the author's use of conflict and characterization shapes that idea. Address one possible counterclaim.) Exemplar: Elizabeth's refusal to obey Lady Catherine asserts her right to choose her own happiness. When the text says "I am only resolved to act in that manner which will, in my own opinion, constitute my happiness" (Chapter LVI, paragraph 68), it shows this directly. She is "only resolved to act in that manner which will, in my own opinion, constitute my happiness," rejecting rank as a reason for obedience.

Task: Annotate the chapter for characterization, dialogue (three marks with a margin note each), then write one claim-evidence-reasoning paragraph: what does this chapter suggest about the great confrontation? Then start your writing prompt at your assigned level (HS Sophomore: Analyze how Chapter LVI develops the idea of the great confrontation. Make a precise claim, support it with at least three pieces of textual evidence, and explain how the author's use of conflict and characterization shapes that idea. Address one possible counterclaim.)

Exemplar: Elizabeth's refusal to obey Lady Catherine asserts her right to choose her own happiness. When the text says "I am only resolved to act in that manner which will, in my own opinion, constitute my happiness" (Chapter LVI, paragraph 68), it shows this directly. She is "only resolved to act in that manner which will, in my own opinion, constitute my happiness," rejecting rank as a reason for obedience.

70–80 min · Discussion · We do (10 min)

Structured discussion from the 30 tiered questions, with facilitation notes.

Anchor question: What gives Elizabeth the courage to defy Lady Catherine? Ask: what gives Elizabeth the courage? Compare with Charlotte.

Anchor question: What gives Elizabeth the courage to defy Lady Catherine?

Facilitation: Ask: what gives Elizabeth the courage? Compare with Charlotte.

80–87 min · Exit ticket / chapter quiz · You do (7 min)

Chapter quiz in the app and an exit ticket (answer given).

Chapter quiz in the app, then: In one sentence, what does this chapter suggest about the great confrontation? Support it with one short quotation. Model answer: Elizabeth's refusal to obey Lady Catherine asserts her right to choose her own happiness. ("I am only resolved to act in that manner which will, in my own opinion, constitute my happiness", Chapter LVI, paragraph 68). Accept any defensible claim backed by a quotation from the chapter; the answer key for the quiz is in the Quiz section.

Exit ticket: In one sentence, what does this chapter suggest about the great confrontation? Support it with one short quotation.

Answer: Model answer: Elizabeth's refusal to obey Lady Catherine asserts her right to choose her own happiness. ("I am only resolved to act in that manner which will, in my own opinion, constitute my happiness", Chapter LVI, paragraph 68). Accept any defensible claim backed by a quotation from the chapter; the answer key for the quiz is in the Quiz section.

> 87–90 min · Closure · I do (3 min)
> Summarize the lesson and preview the next reading.
> Today we saw how characterization shapes the great confrontation. Key takeaway: Elizabeth asserts her right to choose her own happiness.

Total: 90 minutes.

Teacher analysis (spoilers)

Literary elements

- Characterization: Lady Catherine arrives to forbid Elizabeth's engagement to Darcy; Elizabeth refuses to promise anything.
- Dialogue: The confrontation is the novel's most dramatic exchange: rank against reason.

Themes and how they develop

- women's choices: Elizabeth asserts her right to choose her own happiness.

Symbols and motifs

- rank and condescension: Rank is displayed and enforced, above all at Rosings by Lady Catherine; Elizabeth refuses to be cowed. In this chapter: “Elizabeth had mentioned her name to her mother, on her ladyship’s entrance, though no request of introduction had been made” (Chapter LVI, paragraph 3).
- silence and reserve: What characters leave unsaid (Darcy's reserve, Jane's composure, Elizabeth's secrets) drives misunderstanding. In this chapter: “with the utmost politeness. After sitting for a moment in silence, she said very stiffly to Elizabeth” (Chapter LVI, paragraph 4).

Key quotations (checked against the reading text)

- “Are the shades of Pemberley to be thus polluted” (Chapter LVI, paragraph 62) Lady Catherine's snobbery.
- “I am only resolved to act in that manner which will, in my own opinion, constitute my happiness” (Chapter LVI, paragraph 68) Elizabeth's independence.
- “Obstinate, headstrong girl! I am ashamed of you” (Chapter LVI, paragraph 47) Lady Catherine's fury.

Model claim-evidence-reasoning

Claim: Elizabeth's refusal to obey Lady Catherine asserts her right to choose her own happiness.
Evidence: “I am only resolved to act in that manner which will, in my own opinion, constitute my happiness” (Chapter LVI, paragraph 68)
Reasoning: She is "only resolved to act in that manner which will, in my own opinion, constitute my happiness," rejecting rank as a reason for obedience.

Vocabulary with etymology notes

Word	Definition (in this sentence)	In context	Word history

dissuaded (verb)	talked out of something	You are to understand, Miss Bennet, that I came here with the determined resolution of carrying my purpose; nor will I be dissuaded from it.	"dissuaded": Origin of "dissuade": Middle French dissuader; earlier Latin dissuādeō. (Liber et Libri origin note, https://en.wiktionary.org/wiki/dissuade#Etymology)
upstart (adjective)	having risen above one's position and behaving arrogantly	The upstart pretensions of a young woman without family, connections, or fortune.	"upstart": Origin: an English formation from up- + start. (Liber et Libri origin note, https://en.wiktionary.org/wiki/upstart#Etymology)
trifled (verb)	treated lightly; toyed with	"Miss Bennet," replied her ladyship, in an angry tone, "you ought to know that I am not to be trifled with.	"trifled": Origin of "trifle": possibly Old French trufle ("mockery"). (Liber et Libri origin note, https://en.wiktionary.org/wiki/trifle#Etymology)
equipage (noun)	a carriage with its horses and servants	It was too early in the morning for visitors, and besides, the equipage did not answer to that of any of their neighbours.
retains (verb)	keeps	"It ought to be so; it must be so, while he retains the use of his reason.
decorum (noun)	propriety in manners and conduct	"Because honour, decorum, prudence, nay, interest, forbid it.
parasol (noun)	a handheld collapsible source of shade	Elizabeth obeyed, and running into her own room for her parasol, attended her noble guest downstairs.	"parasol": Origin: French parasol. (Liber et Libri origin note, https://en.wiktionary.org/wiki/parasol#Etymology)

Discussion questions

1. What gives Elizabeth the courage to defy Lady Catherine?
2. Where does conflict appear in this chapter, and what effect does it have? Point to one passage.
3. How does this chapter connect to the book's larger concern with first impressions and prejudice?

Classroom discussion questions (30, tiered)

Wait time after every question (3 s for DOK 1, 5 s for DOK 2, 8 to 10 s for DOK 3 and 4); think-pair-share on DOK 3 and 4; answer each response with a follow-up probe; close with student-generated questions. Focus sets by rigor level: Scaffolded support: 1, 2, 3, 4, 5, 6, 11, 12, 13, 14, 21, 22; HS Freshman: 1, 2, 3, 4, 5, 12, 13, 14, 15, 22, 23, 24; HS Sophomore: 1, 2, 3, 4, 13, 14, 15, 16, 17, 23, 24, 25; HS Junior: 1, 2, 3, 14, 15, 16, 17, 18, 24, 25, 26, 27; HS Senior: 1, 2, 3, 15, 16, 17, 18, 25, 26, 27, 28, 29; AP: 1, 2, 16, 17, 18, 19, 20, 26, 27, 28, 29, 30; College Freshman: 1, 2, 17, 18, 19, 20, 21, 22, 27, 28, 29, 30; College Sophomore: 1, 2, 11, 18, 19, 20, 21, 22, 23, 28, 29, 30; College Junior: 1, 11, 12, 19, 20, 21, 22, 23, 24, 25, 29, 30; College Senior: 1, 11, 12, 13, 20, 21, 22, 23, 24, 25, 26, 30; Graduate / PhD: 1, 11, 12, 13, 21, 22, 23, 24, 25, 26, 27, 28

Literal / recall

1. Who visits Longbourn unexpectedly? [DOK 1 · coldCallWithSupport · wait 3 s · AP: unit standards] Look for: Lady Catherine
2. What does she demand? [DOK 1 · turnAndTalk · wait 3 s · AP: unit standards] Look for: A promise not to marry Darcy
3. Whom does she claim Darcy will marry? [DOK 1 · coldCallWithSupport · wait 3 s · AP: unit standards] Look for: Anne de Bourgh
4. How does Elizabeth respond to Lady Catherine's demand? [DOK 1 · turnAndTalk · wait 3 s · AP: unit standards] Look for: Refuses to promise
5. What is ironic about this visit? [DOK 1 · coldCallWithSupport · wait 3 s · AP: unit standards] Look for: It gives Darcy hope
6. Retell the three most important events of "Chapter LVI" in order, in one sentence each. [DOK 1 · turnAndTalk · wait 3 s · AP: unit standards] Look for: Lady Catherine arrives unexpectedly and demands that Elizabeth promise never to marry Darcy, claiming he is engaged to Anne. Elizabeth refuses to promise anything, defending her right to choose.
7. Which characters appear or are mentioned in "Chapter LVI"? Name two and one thing each says or does. [DOK 1 · coldCallWithSupport · wait 3 s · AP: unit standards] Look for: Names and actions taken from the chapter; check against the teacher summary.
8. Where and when does "Chapter LVI" take place? Point to the line that tells you. [DOK 1 · turnAndTalk · wait 3 s · AP: unit standards] Look for: A place/time detail quoted from the chapter.
9. Reread: "You are to understand, Miss Bennet, that I came here with the determined resolution of carrying my purpose; nor will I be dissuaded from it." What does "dissuaded" mean here, and what is literally happening in this line? [DOK 1 · turnAndTalk · wait 3 s · AP: unit standards] Look for: dissuaded: talked out of something.
10. Reread: "The upstart pretensions of a young woman without family, connections, or fortune." What does "upstart" mean here, and what is literally happening in this line? [DOK 1 · turnAndTalk · wait 3 s · AP: unit standards] Look for: upstart: having risen above one's position and behaving arrogantly.

Inferential / analytical

1. What does "Chapter LVI" suggest about the great confrontation? State the inference and the line that supports it. [DOK 2 · thinkPairShare · wait 5 s · AP-LIT.LAN] Look for: Elizabeth's defiance is a high point of independence against rank.
2. Find one example of conflict in this chapter. What does it reveal that a plain statement would not? [DOK 2 · followUp · wait 5 s · AP-LIT.STR] Look for: Look for the forces, people or desires pulling against each other.
3. How does the characterization in this chapter shape what we understand about the great confrontation? [DOK 3 · thinkPairShare · wait 8 s · AP-LIT.CHR] Look for: Look for what characters say, do and think, and how others react to them.

   Answer guidance: A defensible line of argument: Elizabeth's refusal to obey Lady Catherine asserts her right to choose her own happiness. Useful evidence: "Are the shades of Pemberley to be thus polluted" (Chapter LVI, paragraph 62): Lady Catherine's snobbery. On characterization: Lady Catherine arrives to forbid Elizabeth's engagement to Darcy; Elizabeth refuses to promise anything. Credit any position that is supported by quotation and reasoning; push one-sided answers to address the strongest counterpoint.

4. In the passage that begins “Elizabeth obeyed, and running into her own room for her parasol, attended her noble guest downstairs.”, why might Austen have chosen these particular words? Pick two and explain their connotations. [DOK 2 · followUp · wait 5 s · AP-LIT.FIG] Look for: Diction analysis of two words in the anchor passage.
5. What causes the main turn in “Chapter LVI”, and what effect is it likely to have on what follows? [DOK 2 · followUp · wait 5 s · AP-LIT.STR] Look for: Lady Catherine arrives unexpectedly and demands that Elizabeth promise never to marry Darcy, claiming he is engaged to Anne. Elizabeth refuses to promise anything, defending her right to choose.
6. How does “Chapter LVI” build on “Chapter LV”? Name one link of cause and effect. [DOK 3 · thinkPairShare · wait 8 s · AP-LIT.STR] Look for: A causal or structural link between this and the previous chapter.
   Answer guidance: A defensible line of argument: Elizabeth's refusal to obey Lady Catherine asserts her right to choose her own happiness. Useful evidence: “I am only resolved to act in that manner which will, in my own opinion, constitute my happiness” (Chapter LVI, paragraph 68): Elizabeth's independence. Theme link: Elizabeth asserts her right to choose her own happiness. Credit any position that is supported by quotation and reasoning; push one-sided answers to address the strongest counterpoint.
7. What can we infer about a character's motives from what they say and do here, as opposed to what they claim? [DOK 3 · followUp · wait 8 s · AP-LIT.CHR] Look for: An inference about motive supported by a quoted line.
   Answer guidance: A defensible line of argument: Elizabeth's refusal to obey Lady Catherine asserts her right to choose her own happiness. Useful evidence: “Obstinate, headstrong girl! I am ashamed of you” (Chapter LVI, paragraph 47): Lady Catherine's fury. On characterization: Lady Catherine arrives to forbid Elizabeth's engagement to Darcy; Elizabeth refuses to promise anything. Credit any position that is supported by quotation and reasoning; push one-sided answers to address the strongest counterpoint.
8. The bell-ringer asked: “What gives Elizabeth the courage to defy Lady Catherine?” Now that we have read closely, how would you revise your first answer, and which line changed your mind? [DOK 2 · thinkPairShare · wait 5 s · AP-LIT.LAN] Look for: A revised answer anchored in the text.
9. Where does irony appear, and how does it connect this chapter to the larger concern with first impressions and prejudice? [DOK 3 · followUp · wait 8 s · AP-LIT.NAR] Look for: Look for gaps between what characters expect or say and what is true.
   Answer guidance: A defensible line of argument: Elizabeth's refusal to obey Lady Catherine asserts her right to choose her own happiness. Useful evidence: “Are the shades of Pemberley to be thus polluted” (Chapter LVI, paragraph 62): Lady Catherine's snobbery. Theme link: Elizabeth asserts her right to choose her own happiness. Credit any position that is supported by quotation and reasoning; push one-sided answers to address the strongest counterpoint.
10. Background: Aristocratic marriages were often arranged to keep wealth in families. How does knowing this change the way you read one moment in the chapter? [DOK 3 · thinkPairShare · wait 8 s · AP-LIT.SET] Look for: A specific moment reread in light of the context.
    Answer guidance: A defensible line of argument: Elizabeth's refusal to obey Lady Catherine asserts her right to choose her own happiness. Useful evidence: “I am only resolved to act in that manner which will, in my own opinion, constitute my happiness” (Chapter LVI, paragraph 68): Elizabeth's independence. Theme link: Elizabeth asserts her right to choose her own happiness. Credit any position that is supported by quotation and reasoning; push one-sided answers to address the strongest counterpoint.

Evaluative / synthesis / creative

1. A critic might argue: “Elizabeth's defiance is a high point of independence against rank.” How far do you agree? Take a stand and defend it with two lines from the chapter. [DOK 3 · fourCorners · wait 8 s · AP-LIT.LAN] Look for: A defended position with evidence and one counterpoint.
   Answer guidance: A defensible line of argument: Elizabeth's refusal to obey Lady Catherine asserts her right to choose her own happiness. Useful evidence: “Obstinate, headstrong girl! I am ashamed of you” (Chapter LVI, paragraph 47): Lady Catherine's fury. Theme link: Elizabeth asserts her right to choose her own happiness. Credit any position that is supported by quotation and reasoning; push one-sided answers to address the strongest counterpoint.
2. Which character in this chapter acts most wisely, and which least? Judge them by a standard you name. [DOK 3 · thinkPairShare · wait 8 s · AP-LIT.CHR, AP-LIT.LAN] Look for: An evaluation using an explicit criterion and evidence.
   Answer guidance: A defensible line of argument: Elizabeth's refusal to obey Lady Catherine asserts her right to choose her own happiness. Useful evidence: “Are the shades of Pemberley to be thus polluted” (Chapter LVI, paragraph 62): Lady Catherine's snobbery. On characterization: Lady Catherine arrives to forbid Elizabeth's engagement to Darcy; Elizabeth refuses to promise anything. Credit any position that is supported by quotation and reasoning; push one-sided answers to address the strongest counterpoint.
3. Rewrite one moment of “Chapter LVI” from the point of view of a different character. What does the new angle reveal or hide about the great confrontation? [DOK 4 · thinkPairShare · wait 8 s · AP-LIT.LAN, AP-LIT.NAR] Look for: A creative product with a rationale tied to the text.
   Answer guidance: A defensible line of argument: Elizabeth's refusal to obey Lady Catherine asserts her right to choose her own happiness. Useful evidence: “I am only resolved to act in that manner which will, in my own opinion, constitute my happiness” (Chapter LVI, paragraph 68): Elizabeth's independence. Theme link: Elizabeth asserts her right to choose her own happiness. Credit any position that is supported by quotation and reasoning; push one-sided answers to address the strongest counterpoint.
4. Write three questions of your own about “Chapter LVI”: one recall, one “why/how”, and one “should/what if”. Trade with a partner and answer theirs. [DOK 3 · studentGenerated · wait 8 s · AP-LIT.LAN] Look for: Student-generated questions at three levels.
   Answer guidance: A defensible line of argument: Elizabeth's refusal to obey Lady Catherine asserts her right to choose her own happiness. Useful evidence: “Obstinate, headstrong girl! I am ashamed of you” (Chapter LVI, paragraph 47): Lady Catherine's fury. Theme link: Elizabeth asserts her right to choose her own happiness. Credit any position that is supported by quotation and reasoning; push one-sided answers to address the strongest counterpoint.
5. Connect this chapter to pride and self-knowledge: is the link strong or weak so far? What would Austen need to show next to strengthen it? [DOK 4 · socraticCircle · wait 8 s · AP-LIT.LAN] Look for: A judgment of thematic development across the work.
   Answer guidance: A defensible line of argument: Elizabeth's refusal to obey Lady Catherine asserts her right to choose her own happiness. Useful evidence: “Are the shades of Pemberley to be thus polluted” (Chapter LVI, paragraph 62): Lady Catherine's snobbery. Theme link: Elizabeth asserts her right to choose her own happiness. Credit any position that is supported by quotation and reasoning; push one-sided answers to address the strongest counterpoint.
6. Is the conflict in this chapter effective, or does it feel heavy-handed? Evaluate it as a reader would in a review. [DOK 3 · fourCorners · wait 8 s · AP-LIT.LAN, AP-LIT.STR] Look for: An evaluative judgment with criteria and evidence.

Answer guidance: A defensible line of argument: Elizabeth's refusal to obey Lady Catherine asserts her right to choose her own happiness. Useful evidence: “I am only resolved to act in that manner which will, in my own opinion, constitute my happiness” (Chapter LVI, paragraph 68): Elizabeth's independence. Theme link: Elizabeth asserts her right to choose her own happiness. Credit any position that is supported by quotation and reasoning; push one-sided answers to address the strongest counterpoint.

7. Compare how “Chapter LVI” treats the great confrontation with how another text, film or event you know treats a similar idea. What does Pride and Prejudice see that the other misses? [DOK 4 · socraticCircle · wait 8 s · AP-LIT.LAN] Look for: A cross-text synthesis.

   Answer guidance: A defensible line of argument: Elizabeth's refusal to obey Lady Catherine asserts her right to choose her own happiness. Useful evidence: “Obstinate, headstrong girl! I am ashamed of you” (Chapter LVI, paragraph 47): Lady Catherine's fury. Theme link: Elizabeth asserts her right to choose her own happiness. Credit any position that is supported by quotation and reasoning; push one-sided answers to address the strongest counterpoint.

8. Predict what “Chapter LVII” will bring, using two clues from this chapter. After reading, evaluate your prediction. [DOK 3 · thinkPairShare · wait 8 s · AP-LIT.LAN, AP-LIT.STR] Look for: A prediction or judgment justified with textual clues.

   Answer guidance: A defensible line of argument: Elizabeth's refusal to obey Lady Catherine asserts her right to choose her own happiness. Useful evidence: “Are the shades of Pemberley to be thus polluted” (Chapter LVI, paragraph 62): Lady Catherine's snobbery. Theme link: Elizabeth asserts her right to choose her own happiness. Credit any position that is supported by quotation and reasoning; push one-sided answers to address the strongest counterpoint.

9. Design a one-paragraph modern adaptation of this chapter (setting, characters, conflict). What must stay the same for it to still be about the great confrontation? [DOK 4 · thinkPairShare · wait 8 s · AP-LIT.LAN] Look for: A creative transfer that keeps the core idea.

   Answer guidance: A defensible line of argument: Elizabeth's refusal to obey Lady Catherine asserts her right to choose her own happiness. Useful evidence: “I am only resolved to act in that manner which will, in my own opinion, constitute my happiness” (Chapter LVI, paragraph 68): Elizabeth's independence. Theme link: Elizabeth asserts her right to choose her own happiness. Credit any position that is supported by quotation and reasoning; push one-sided answers to address the strongest counterpoint.

10. What question would you most like to ask Jane Austen about this chapter, and what answer do you think the text itself gives? [DOK 4 · studentGenerated · wait 8 s · AP-LIT.LAN] Look for: A student-generated question answered from evidence.

    Answer guidance: A defensible line of argument: Elizabeth's refusal to obey Lady Catherine asserts her right to choose her own happiness. Useful evidence: “Obstinate, headstrong girl! I am ashamed of you” (Chapter LVI, paragraph 47): Lady Catherine's fury. Theme link: Elizabeth asserts her right to choose her own happiness. Credit any position that is supported by quotation and reasoning; push one-sided answers to address the strongest counterpoint.

Annotation focus

- Conflict: look for the forces, people or desires pulling against each other (anchor passage in the We do segment)
- Also notice Characterization: what characters say, do and think, and how others react to them

- Also notice Irony: gaps between what characters expect or say and what is true

Chapter quiz: item bank (all eleven rigor versions)

1. [fill · recall · DOK 1] Complete the quotation from Chapter LVI, paragraph 47: “Obstinate, _____ girl! I am ashamed of you”

   Key: headstrong

2. [mc · recall · DOK 1] Who visits Longbourn unexpectedly?

   A. Georgiana

   B. Collins

   C. Lady Catherine

   D. Caroline

   Key: C (Lady Catherine)

3. [fill · recall · DOK 1] Complete the quotation from Chapter LVI, paragraph 2: “They were of course all intending to be surprised; but their _____ was beyond their expectation; and on the part of Mrs. Bennet and Kitty, though she was perfectly unknown to them, even inferior to what Elizabeth felt.” Word bank: astonishment, different, assured, confess

   Key: astonishment

4. [mc · recall · DOK 1] In the line “The upstart pretensions of a young woman without family, connections, or fortune.”, what does “upstart” most nearly mean?

   A. lavish; very generous (in giving thanks or praise)

   B. legally

   C. alarm and dismay

   D. having risen above one's position and behaving arrogantly

   Key: D (having risen above one's position and behaving arrogantly)

5. [mc · recall · DOK 1] Which word completes this sentence from Chapter LVI, paragraph 23? “You can be at no loss, Miss Bennet, to _____ the reason of my journey hither.”

   A. understand

   B. confirmation

   C. introduction

   D. conversation

   Key: A (understand)

6. [fill · recall · DOK 1] Complete the quotation from Chapter LVI, paragraph 17: “Miss Bennet, there seemed to be a prettyish kind of a little _____ on one side of your lawn.” Word bank: behaviour, understand, wilderness, conversation

   Key: wilderness

7. [fill · recall · DOK 1] Complete the quotation from Chapter LVI, paragraph 68: “I am only resolved to act in that manner which will, in my own opinion, _____ my happiness”

   Key: constitute

8. [fill · recall · DOK 1] Fill in the blank with the vocabulary word that fits: “It ought to be so; it must be so, while he _____ the use of his reason.” Word bank: upstart, retains, trifled, dissuaded

   Key: retains

9. [mc · recall · DOK 1] How does Elizabeth respond to Lady Catherine's demand?

    A. Cries

    B. Faints

    C. Refuses to promise

    D. Agrees

    Key: C (Refuses to promise)

10. [fill · recall · DOK 1] Complete the quotation from Chapter LVI, paragraph 37: “If I have, I shall be the last person to _____ it.” Word bank: confess, earliest, conversation, account

    Key: confess

11. [short · inference · DOK 2] What does this passage from Chapter LVI, paragraph 44 reveal about the character or situation? “If there is no other objection to my marrying your nephew, I shall certainly not be kept from it, by knowing that his mother and aunt wished him to marry Miss de Bourgh.” Answer in two or three sentences with one detail.

    Sample answer: The passage (Chapter LVI, paragraph 44) shows the situation turning on first impressions and prejudice: Elizabeth asserts her right to choose her own happiness. The words “certainly” and “objection” are the proof, because they show how the moment looks to the people in it. They suggest more than the narrator states outright.

12. [short · inference · DOK 2] What does this passage from Chapter LVI, paragraph 3 reveal about the character or situation? “She entered the room with an air more than usually ungracious, made no other reply to Elizabeth’s salutation, than a slight inclination of the head, and sat down without saying a word.” Answer in two or three sentences with one detail.

    Sample answer: The passage (Chapter LVI, paragraph 3) shows the situation turning on first impressions and prejudice: Elizabeth asserts her right to choose her own happiness. The words “inclination” and “ungracious” are the proof, because they show how the moment looks to the people in it. They suggest more than the narrator states outright.

13. [mc · inference · DOK 2] Which choice best states a central concern of “Chapter LVI”?

    A. Parental conflict over the refusal

    B. The great confrontation

    C. Neighbors and gossip

    D. Letters of judgment

    Key: B (The great confrontation)

14. [mc · analysis · DOK 3] Which literary element does this describe in “Chapter LVI”? The confrontation is the novel's most dramatic exchange: rank against reason.

    A. Dialogue

    B. Simile

    C. Setting

    D. Imagery

    Key: A (Dialogue)

15. [short · analysis · DOK 3] Analyze how the word choice in this passage from Chapter LVI, paragraph 17 shapes its tone: “I should be glad to take a turn in it, if you will favour me with your company.” Pick two words and explain their effect.

    Sample answer: The words “company” and “favour” (Chapter LVI, paragraph 17) make the tone heavy and deliberate rather than neutral. That weight points the reader to pride and self-knowledge: Elizabeth asserts her right to choose her own happiness. The author chooses them so the moment feels significant instead of passing.

16. [short · synthesis · DOK 4] Connect this passage from Chapter LVI, paragraph 23 to the story's treatment of women's limited choices: “Your own heart, your own conscience, must tell you why I come.” Use one other moment from the story as well.
    Sample answer: This passage (Chapter LVI, paragraph 23) develops women's limited choices: Elizabeth asserts her right to choose her own happiness. Its words “conscience” carry that idea into this moment. The same concern returns in “If you believed it impossible to be true,’ said Elizabeth, colouring with astonishment and disdain, ‘I wonder you took…” (Chapter LVI, paragraph 27), so the two passages read as a pattern, not a single moment. Together they show the story treating women's limited choices as central.
17. [mc · recall · DOK 1] What does she demand?
    A. Money
    B. A visit to Rosings
    C. A promise not to marry Darcy
    D. An apology

    Key: C (A promise not to marry Darcy)
18. [mc · recall · DOK 1] In the line “It was too early in the morning for visitors, and besides, the equipage did not answer to that of any of their neighbours.”, what does “equipage” most nearly mean?
    A. having the requisite qualities or resources to meet a task
    B. frank; careless about hiding feelings
    C. an expert; a skilled person
    D. a carriage with its horses and servants

    Key: D (a carriage with its horses and servants)
19. [mc · recall · DOK 1] In the line “You are to understand, Miss Bennet, that I came here with the determined resolution of carrying my purpose; nor will I be dissuaded from it.”, what does “dissuaded” most nearly mean?
    A. care and protection
    B. talked out of something
    C. an activity that diverts or amuses or stimulates
    D. look down on with disdain

    Key: B (talked out of something)
20. [fill · recall · DOK 1] Fill in the blank with the vocabulary word that fits: “Because honour, _____, prudence, nay, interest, forbid it.” Word bank: decorum, dissuaded, upstart, trifled
    Key: decorum
21. [mc · recall · DOK 1] Whom does she claim Darcy will marry?
    A. Georgiana
    B. Anne de Bourgh
    C. Caroline
    D. Charlotte

    Key: B (Anne de Bourgh)

22. [short · inference · DOK 2] What can you infer from this line? “I am only resolved to act in that manner which will, in my own opinion, constitute my happiness” (Chapter LVI, paragraph 68) Answer in two or three sentences with one detail.
    Sample answer: Elizabeth's independence. The evidence is “I am only resolved to act in that manner which will, in my own opinion, constitute my happiness” (Chapter LVI, paragraph 68). This develops women's choices: Elizabeth asserts her right to choose her own happiness.
23. [short · inference · DOK 2] What can you infer from this line? “Are the shades of Pemberley to be thus polluted” (Chapter LVI, paragraph 62) Answer in two or three sentences with one detail.
    Sample answer: Lady Catherine's snobbery. The evidence is “Are the shades of Pemberley to be thus polluted” (Chapter LVI, paragraph 62). This develops women's choices: Elizabeth asserts her right to choose her own happiness.
24. [mc · analysis · DOK 3] Which literary element does this describe in “Chapter LVI”? Lady Catherine arrives to forbid Elizabeth's engagement to Darcy; Elizabeth refuses to promise anything.
    A. Personification
    B. Tone / mood
    C. Metaphor
    D. Characterization

    Key: D (Characterization)
25. [short · analysis · DOK 3] Analyze the word choice in “Obstinate, headstrong girl! I am ashamed of you” (Chapter LVI, paragraph 47). Pick two words and explain what they suggest.
    Sample answer: Lady Catherine's fury. The evidence is “Obstinate, headstrong girl! I am ashamed of you” (Chapter LVI, paragraph 47). This develops women's choices: Elizabeth asserts her right to choose her own happiness. The words “headstrong” and “ashamed” carry that meaning: they are the charged choices in the line, and changing either would soften the effect.
26. [short · synthesis · DOK 4] Synthesis: trace how women's choices develops from Chapter XX to Chapter LVI. Use one quotation from each.
    Sample answer: Earlier, in Chapter XX, paragraph 18, the text reads “An unhappy alternative is before you, Elizabeth” — Mr. Bennet's announcement. In Chapter LVI, “Are the shades of Pemberley to be thus polluted” (Chapter LVI, paragraph 62) — Lady Catherine's snobbery. Elizabeth asserts her right to choose her own happiness.
27. [mc · recall · DOK 1] Which word completes this sentence from Chapter LVI, paragraph 10? “It is nothing in _____ of Rosings, my lady, I dare say; but I assure you it is much larger than Sir William Lucas’s.”
    A. account
    B. different
    C. comparison
    D. suppose

    Key: C (comparison)
28. [mc · recall · DOK 1] In the line “Miss Bennet,’ replied her ladyship, in an angry tone, ‘you ought to know that I am not to be trifled with.”, what does “trifled” most nearly mean?
    A. floor covering consisting of a piece of thick heavy fabric (usually with nap or pile)
    B. treated lightly; toyed with
    C. comforted
    D. insulted; offended openly

Key: B (treated lightly; toyed with)

29. [mc · recall · DOK 1] Which word completes this sentence from Chapter LVI, paragraph 43? “Have you not heard me say, that from his _____ hours he was destined for his cousin?”

    A. behaviour

    B. introduction

    C. assured

    D. earliest

    Key: D (earliest)

30. [short · analysis · DOK 3] Analyze how the word choice in this passage from Chapter LVI, paragraph 60 shapes its tone: “I shall not go away, till you have given me the assurance I require.” Pick two words and explain their effect.

    Sample answer: The words “assurance” and “require” (Chapter LVI, paragraph 60) make the tone heavy and deliberate rather than neutral. That weight points the reader to pride and self-knowledge: Elizabeth asserts her right to choose her own happiness. The author chooses them so the moment feels significant instead of passing.

31. [short · synthesis · DOK 4] Connect this passage from Chapter LVI, paragraph 61 to the story's treatment of women's limited choices: “I must beg, therefore, to be importuned no farther on the subject.” Use one other moment from the story as well.

    Sample answer: This passage (Chapter LVI, paragraph 61) develops women's limited choices: Elizabeth asserts her right to choose her own happiness. Its words “importuned” and “therefore” carry that idea into this moment. The same concern returns in “Do you not consider that a connection with you must disgrace him in the eyes of everybody?” (Chapter LVI, paragraph 65), so the two passages read as a pattern, not a single moment. Together they show the story treating women's limited choices as central.

32. [short · analysis · DOK 3 · AP: AP-LIT.FIG] Analyze how the word choice in this passage from Chapter LVI, paragraph 51 shapes its tone: “In marrying your nephew, I should not consider myself as quitting that sphere.” Pick two words and explain their effect.

    Sample answer: The words “quitting” and “marrying” (Chapter LVI, paragraph 51) make the tone heavy and deliberate rather than neutral. That weight points the reader to class and social mobility: Elizabeth asserts her right to choose her own happiness. The author chooses them so the moment feels significant instead of passing.

33. [short · analysis · DOK 3 · AP: AP-LIT.FIG] Analyze how the word choice in this passage from Chapter LVI, paragraph 11 shapes its tone: “This must be a most inconvenient sitting room for the evening, in summer; the windows are full west.” Pick two words and explain their effect.

    Sample answer: The words “inconvenient” and “evening” (Chapter LVI, paragraph 11) make the tone heavy and deliberate rather than neutral. That weight points the reader to class and social mobility: Elizabeth asserts her right to choose her own happiness. The author chooses them so the moment feels significant instead of passing.

34. [short · synthesis · DOK 4 · AP: AP-LIT.LAN] Connect this passage from Chapter LVI, paragraph 38 to the story's treatment of marriage and money: “I am almost the nearest relation he has in the world, and am entitled to know all his dearest concerns.” Use one other moment from the story as well.

    Sample answer: This passage (Chapter LVI, paragraph 38) develops marriage and money: Elizabeth asserts her right to choose her own happiness. Its words “relation” and “entitled” carry that idea into this moment. The same concern returns in “This match, to which you have the presumption to aspire, can never take place.” (Chapter LVI, paragraph 40), so the two passages read as a pattern, not a single moment. Together they show the story treating marriage and money as central.

35. [short · synthesis · DOK 4 · AP: AP-LIT.LAN] Connect this passage from Chapter LVI, paragraph 71 to the story's treatment of marriage and money: “Do not imagine, Miss Bennet, that your ambition will ever be gratified.” Use one other moment from the story as well.
    Sample answer: This passage (Chapter LVI, paragraph 71) develops marriage and money: Elizabeth asserts her right to choose her own happiness. Its words “gratified” and “ambition” carry that idea into this moment. The same concern returns in “In this manner Lady Catherine talked on, till they were at the door of the carriage, when turning hastily round, she…” (Chapter LVI, paragraph 72), so the two passages read as a pattern, not a single moment. Together they show the story treating marriage and money as central.
36. [short · synthesis · DOK 4 · AP: AP-LIT.FIG] Close reading: how do the diction and syntax of “Are the shades of Pemberley to be thus polluted” (Chapter LVI, paragraph 62) shape its meaning? Consider a second, competing reading.
    Sample answer: Lady Catherine's snobbery. The evidence is “Are the shades of Pemberley to be thus polluted” (Chapter LVI, paragraph 62). This develops women's choices: Elizabeth asserts her right to choose her own happiness. The words “polluted” and “shades” carry that meaning: they are the charged choices in the line, and changing either would soften the effect. She is "only resolved to act in that manner which will, in my own opinion, constitute my happiness," rejecting rank as a reason for obedience.
37. [mc · recall · DOK 1 · Dual Credit (Indiana College Core): ICC-WC-1.5] What is ironic about this visit?
    A. It gives Darcy hope
    B. It ends the romance
    C. It is friendly
    D. It brings Collins

    Key: A (It gives Darcy hope)
38. [short · synthesis · DOK 4 · Dual Credit (Indiana College Core): ICC-WC-1.5] Close reading: how do the diction and syntax of “I am only resolved to act in that manner which will, in my own opinion, constitute my happiness” (Chapter LVI, paragraph 68) shape its meaning? Consider a second, competing reading.
    Sample answer: Elizabeth's independence. The evidence is “I am only resolved to act in that manner which will, in my own opinion, constitute my happiness” (Chapter LVI, paragraph 68). This develops women's choices: Elizabeth asserts her right to choose her own happiness. The words “constitute” and “happiness” carry that meaning: they are the charged choices in the line, and changing either would soften the effect. She is "only resolved to act in that manner which will, in my own opinion, constitute my happiness," rejecting rank as a reason for obedience.
39. [short · analysis · DOK 3 · Program outcome: LeL-C3-LIT-1] Claim: Elizabeth's refusal to obey Lady Catherine asserts her right to choose her own happiness. Explain how this evidence supports the claim: “I am only resolved to act in that manner which will, in my own opinion, constitute my happiness” (Chapter LVI, paragraph 68).
    Sample answer: She is "only resolved to act in that manner which will, in my own opinion, constitute my happiness," rejecting rank as a reason for obedience. The evidence is “I am only resolved to act in that manner which will, in my own opinion, constitute my happiness” (Chapter LVI, paragraph 68) — Elizabeth's independence. This develops women's choices: Elizabeth asserts her right to choose her own happiness.

Rigor version	Items (in order)	Mix
Scaffolded support	1, 2, 3, 4, 5, 6, 7, 8, 9, 10, 11, 12, 13, 14, 15, 16	recall 10, inference 3, analysis 2, synthesis 1
		recall 9, inference 3, analysis 3, synthesis 1

HS Freshman	17, 18, 19, 2, 8, 4, 20, 21, 1, 22, 13, 23, 24, 14, 25, 26
HS Sophomore	19, 27, 28, 4, 10, 2, 29, 1, 12, 11, 13, 14, 30, 24, 16, 31	recall 8, inference 3, analysis 3, synthesis 2
HS Junior	29, 1, 6, 20, 17, 3, 21, 11, 13, 12, 24, 32, 30, 15, 26, 31	recall 7, inference 3, analysis 4, synthesis 2
HS Senior	8, 20, 28, 27, 29, 19, 12, 13, 11, 32, 33, 15, 24, 34, 26, 31	recall 6, inference 3, analysis 4, synthesis 3
AP	20, 18, 7, 11, 13, 12, 15, 33, 25, 24, 14, 34, 35, 16, 36, 26	recall 3, inference 3, analysis 5, synthesis 5
College Freshman	1, 8, 37, 12, 11, 13, 23, 32, 15, 25, 24, 14, 38, 16, 26, 35	recall 3, inference 4, analysis 5, synthesis 4
College Sophomore	20, 2, 8, 17, 13, 22, 25, 32, 14, 30, 33, 34, 35, 26, 16, 31	recall 4, inference 2, analysis 5, synthesis 5
College Junior	4, 21, 8, 20, 13, 39, 33, 25, 32, 24, 36, 16, 34, 26, 35, 31	recall 4, inference 1, analysis 5, synthesis 6
College Senior	9, 8, 20, 13, 30, 24, 25, 33, 14, 15, 16, 31, 34, 36, 26, 35	recall 3, inference 1, analysis 6, synthesis 6
Graduate / PhD	19, 8, 20, 13, 39, 33, 30, 15, 32, 14, 24, 16, 34, 35, 31, 26	recall 3, inference 1, analysis 7, synthesis 5

Writing prompts (eleven rigor levels)

Scaffolded support (250 words; AP: see unit standards): Supported track (work from the passage your teacher selects). In “Chapter LVI,” how does Austen show the great confrontation? Write a paragraph that states your claim, quotes two details from the passage, and explains how each detail supports your idea. Use the conflict you noticed as one piece of evidence.

HS Freshman (350 words; AP: see unit standards): In Chapter LVI, how does Austen develop the idea of the great confrontation? State a clear claim, support it with two or three quotations, and explain how the conflict in the chapter helps build that idea.

HS Sophomore (450 words; AP: see unit standards): Analyze how Chapter LVI develops the idea of the great confrontation. Make a precise claim, support it with at least three pieces of textual evidence, and explain how the author's use of conflict and characterization shapes that idea. Address one possible counterclaim.

HS Junior (550 words; AP: see unit standards): Analyze how the structure of Chapter LVI (where it begins, turns and ends) and its conflict shape the reader's understanding of the great confrontation. Identify one place where the text leaves matters uncertain and explain how that uncertainty adds to its meaning.

HS Senior (600 words; AP: see unit standards): Two readers disagree about what Chapter LVI suggests about the great confrontation. Lay out two plausible interpretations, weigh the evidence for each (including the chapter's conflict and characterization), and argue for the stronger one in a sustained, well-organized essay.

AP (650 words; AP: AP-LIT.STR, AP-LIT.LAN): Write a literary argument in which you analyze how Jane Austen uses conflict in Chapter LVI to complicate the reader's understanding of the great confrontation. Develop a defensible thesis, select evidence purposefully, and explain how specific choices of diction and syntax create meaning.

College Freshman (1000 words; AP: see unit standards): Situate Chapter LVI within its historical and literary context and argue how the chapter's treatment of the great confrontation responds to that context. Engage with at least one secondary perspective (a critic, historian or the author's own statements), integrate quotations smoothly, and cite in MLA style.

College Sophomore (1250 words; AP: see unit standards): Read Chapter LVI alongside the conventions of its genre and period. Argue how the chapter's handling of the great confrontation follows or bends those conventions, using the conflict as evidence, and test your reading against one published critic. Document two secondary sources in MLA.

College Junior (1500 words; AP: see unit standards): Apply a named critical approach (for example formalist, historicist, feminist, psychoanalytic or ecocritical) to Chapter LVI and its treatment of the great confrontation. State your method, show what it reveals in the chapter's conflict and characterization, and identify where the text resists it.

College Senior (2000 words; AP: see unit standards): Develop a research argument that reads Chapter LVI as evidence for a larger claim about the great confrontation in Pride and Prejudice. Connect close reading of the chapter to the whole novel, engage at least four scholarly sources, and state precisely where your reading departs from theirs (Chicago style).

Graduate / PhD (2500 words; AP: see unit standards): Develop an original argument that reads Chapter LVI as a hinge in the novel's larger treatment of the great confrontation. Position your reading within a named critical conversation (for example formalist, historicist, psychoanalytic, feminist or postcolonial approaches), account for the textual history where relevant, and articulate the stakes of your intervention for scholarship on Pride and Prejudice.

SAT-style questions

1. "Miss Bennet," replied her ladyship, in an angry tone, "you ought to know that I am not to be trifled with.

   As used in the text, what does the word "trifled" most nearly mean?

   A. treated lightly; toyed with

   B. a handheld collapsible source of shade

   C. keeps

   D. propriety in manners and conduct

2. Elizabeth obeyed, and running into her own room for her parasol, attended her noble guest downstairs. As they passed through the hall, Lady Catherine opened the doors into the dining-parlour and drawing-room, and pronouncing them, after a short survey, to be decent looking rooms, walked on.

   Which choice best states a central concern of "Chapter LVI"?

   A. An imperious hostess

   B. Self-recognition

   C. Parental failure

   D. The great confrontation

SAT key: 1. A (treated lightly; toyed with); 2. D (The great confrontation)

Lesson 58: Chapter LVII

Focus: a misguided warning

Objective: Students will analyze how irony develops in “Chapter LVII” by writing a claim-evidence-reasoning paragraph that cites at least 2 quotations from the section, and will score at least 80% on the section quiz.

Standards: AP: see the unit standards

Teacher only · spoilers

Mr. Bennet reads Elizabeth a letter from Collins warning against an engagement with Darcy and laughs at the idea, not knowing her feelings. Elizabeth must hide her pain.

Background: News traveled quickly through gossip networks in the gentry.

Significance: Mr. Bennet's laughter is painful dramatic irony.

Lesson plan and lecture script (90 minutes)

0–8 min · Bell-ringer · You do (8 min)
Students write to the bell-ringer, then pair-share.
Why can't Elizabeth tell her father the truth? Write for five minutes. Starters: I think... because... / This connects to family and reputation because....
Prompt: Why can't Elizabeth tell her father the truth?
Sentence starters: I think… because… · This connects to family and reputation because…
Strong response: A strong response takes a position and anticipates this: her father's wit fails her.

8–18 min · Vocabulary with etymology notes · I do (10 min)
Five key words in context, with verified word histories.
Today's words: cautioning — warning; abominate — to hate; advertised — informed; told; blemish — a mark or flaw that spoils the appearance of something (especially on a person's body); diverted — amused. “cautioning”: Origin of “caution”: Old French caution (“security”); earlier Latin cautiō. “advertised”: Origin of “advertise”: probably Anglo-Norman advertir (“to inform”). “diverted”: Origin of “divert”: Old French divertir.
Words: cautioning: warning · abominate: to hate · advertised: informed; told · blemish: a mark or flaw that spoils the appearance of something (especially on a person's body) · diverted: amused

18–28 min · Background and context · I do (10 min)
Mini-lecture (read or adapt the script).
News traveled quickly through gossip networks in the gentry. Mr. Bennet's laughter is painful dramatic irony. Characterization: Mr. Bennet reads Collins's letter warning against the match and laughs at the idea of Darcy loving Elizabeth. Irony: Mr. Bennet's joke wounds Elizabeth, who cannot laugh. Watch for rank and condescension: Rank is displayed and enforced, above all at Rosings by Lady Catherine; Elizabeth refuses to be cowed. In this chapter: “appeared, had actually taken the trouble of this journey from Rosings, for the sole purpose of breaking off her supposed engagement with” (Chapter LVII, paragraph 1).

28–40 min · I do: modeled close reading · I do (12 min)
Model the close reading of the anchor quotation using the written think-aloud below.
First, meaning. I read "Mr. Darcy, who never looks at any woman but to see a blemish" slowly and put it in my own words: Mr. Bennet laughs at the rumor that Darcy, who sees only flaws in women, wants to marry Elizabeth. Next, craft. I notice his amusement at what he thinks is absurd, read aloud from Collins's letter. The strongest word is "blemish": it shows his idea of Darcy as critical. Then, effect. Why is Mr. Bennet's joke about Darcy ironic? My answer: Mr. Bennet's joke about Darcy is ironic because he thinks Darcy despises Elizabeth, but the rumor of a proposal is true; Elizabeth has to laugh along while hiding her feelings.

> Mr. Darcy, who never looks at any woman but to see a blemish (Chapter LVII, paragraph 18)

Think-aloud: First, meaning. I read "Mr. Darcy, who never looks at any woman but to see a blemish" slowly and put it in my own words: Mr. Bennet laughs at the rumor that Darcy, who sees only flaws in women, wants to marry Elizabeth. Next, craft. I notice his amusement at what he thinks is absurd, read aloud from Collins's letter. The strongest word is "blemish": it shows his idea of Darcy as critical. Then, effect. Why is Mr. Bennet's joke about Darcy ironic? My answer: Mr. Bennet's joke about Darcy is ironic because he thinks Darcy despises Elizabeth, but the rumor of a proposal is true; Elizabeth has to laugh along while hiding her feelings.

40–55 min · We do: guided annotation · We do (15 min)
Guided analysis of a second quotation; expected answers given.
Ask: What words in this line stand out, and what do they suggest? Expected: Mr. Bennet's philosophy. Look at the craft: Mr. Bennet's joke wounds Elizabeth, who cannot laugh. Ask: How does this line connect to family and reputation? Expected: Her father's wit fails her. (Mr. Bennet's philosophy.)

> For what do we live but to make sport for our neighbours, and laugh at them in our turn (Chapter LVII, paragraph 22)

Ask: What words in this line stand out, and what do they suggest?
Expected answer: Mr. Bennet's philosophy. Look at the craft: Mr. Bennet's joke wounds Elizabeth, who cannot laugh.
Ask: How does this line connect to family and reputation?
Expected answer: Her father's wit fails her. (Mr. Bennet's philosophy.)

55–70 min · You do: independent annotation · You do (15 min)
Independent annotation and a claim-evidence-reasoning paragraph (exemplar given).
Annotate the chapter for characterization, irony (three marks with a margin note each), then write one claim-evidence-reasoning paragraph: what does this chapter suggest about a misguided warning? Then start your writing prompt at your assigned level (HS Sophomore: Analyze how Chapter LVII develops the idea of a misguided warning. Make a precise claim, support it with at least three pieces of textual evidence, and explain how the author's use of irony and characterization shapes that idea. Address one possible counterclaim.) Exemplar: Mr. Bennet's philosophy of laughter fails Elizabeth when it matters. When the text says “The discomposure of spirits which this extraordinary visit threw Elizabeth into could not be easily overcome” (Chapter LVII, paragraph 1), it shows this directly. He asks "For what do we live, but to make sport for our neighbours, and laugh at them in our turn?" but Elizabeth "could not be easily overcome," her feelings beyond his joke.
Task: Annotate the chapter for characterization, irony (three marks with a margin note each), then write one claim-evidence-reasoning paragraph: what does this chapter suggest about a misguided warning? Then start your writing prompt at your assigned level (HS Sophomore: Analyze how Chapter LVII develops the idea of a misguided warning. Make a precise claim, support it with at least three pieces of textual evidence, and explain how the author's use of irony and characterization shapes that idea. Address one possible counterclaim.)
Exemplar: Mr. Bennet's philosophy of laughter fails Elizabeth when it matters. When the text says “The discomposure of spirits which this extraordinary visit threw Elizabeth into could not be easily overcome” (Chapter LVII, paragraph 1), it shows this directly. He asks "For what do we live, but to make sport for our neighbours, and laugh at them in our turn?" but Elizabeth "could not be easily overcome," her feelings beyond his joke.

70–80 min · Discussion · We do (10 min)
Structured discussion from the 30 tiered questions, with facilitation notes.
Anchor question: Why can't Elizabeth tell her father the truth? Ask: is Mr. Bennet's philosophy wise or cowardly?
Anchor question: Why can't Elizabeth tell her father the truth?
Facilitation: Ask: is Mr. Bennet's philosophy wise or cowardly?

80–87 min · Exit ticket / chapter quiz · You do (7 min)
Chapter quiz in the app and an exit ticket (answer given).
Chapter quiz in the app, then: In one sentence, what does this chapter suggest about a misguided warning? Support it with one short quotation. Model answer: Mr. Bennet's philosophy of laughter fails Elizabeth when it matters. (“The discomposure of spirits which this extraordinary visit threw Elizabeth into could not be easily overcome”, Chapter LVII, paragraph 1). Accept any defensible claim backed by a quotation from the chapter; the answer key for the quiz is in the Quiz section.
Exit ticket: In one sentence, what does this chapter suggest about a misguided warning? Support it with one short quotation.
Answer: Model answer: Mr. Bennet's philosophy of laughter fails Elizabeth when it matters. (“The discomposure of spirits which this extraordinary visit threw Elizabeth into could not be easily overcome”, Chapter LVII, paragraph 1). Accept any defensible claim backed by a quotation from the chapter; the answer key for the quiz is in the Quiz section.

> 87–90 min · Closure · I do (3 min)
> Summarize the lesson and preview the next reading.
> Today we saw how characterization shapes a misguided warning. Key takeaway: her father's wit fails her.

Total: 90 minutes.

Teacher analysis (spoilers)

Literary elements

- Characterization: Mr. Bennet reads Collins's letter warning against the match and laughs at the idea of Darcy loving Elizabeth.
- Irony: Mr. Bennet's joke wounds Elizabeth, who cannot laugh.

Themes and how they develop

- family and reputation: her father's wit fails her.

Symbols and motifs

- rank and condescension: Rank is displayed and enforced, above all at Rosings by Lady Catherine; Elizabeth refuses to be cowed. In this chapter: “appeared, had actually taken the trouble of this journey from Rosings, for the sole purpose of breaking off her supposed engagement with” (Chapter LVII, paragraph 1).
- letters: Letters carry news, reveal character and change minds; Darcy's letter is the turning point of the novel. In this chapter: “her father, who came out of his library with a letter in his hand” (Chapter LVII, paragraph 6).

Key quotations (checked against the reading text)

- “Mr. Darcy, who never looks at any woman but to see a blemish” (Chapter LVII, paragraph 18) Mr. Bennet's joke.
- “For what do we live but to make sport for our neighbours, and laugh at them in our turn” (Chapter LVII, paragraph 22) Mr. Bennet's philosophy.
- “The discomposure of spirits which this extraordinary visit threw Elizabeth into could not be easily overcome” (Chapter LVII, paragraph 1) Opening.

Model claim-evidence-reasoning

Claim: Mr. Bennet's philosophy of laughter fails Elizabeth when it matters.
Evidence: “The discomposure of spirits which this extraordinary visit threw Elizabeth into could not be easily overcome” (Chapter LVII, paragraph 1)
Reasoning: He asks "For what do we live, but to make sport for our neighbours, and laugh at them in our turn?" but Elizabeth "could not be easily overcome," her feelings beyond his joke.

Vocabulary with etymology notes

Word	Definition (in this sentence)	In context	Word history
cautioning (verb)	warning	“ ‘My motive for cautioning you is as follows.	“cautioning”: Origin of “caution”: Old French caution (“security”); earlier Latin cautiō. (Liber et Libri origin note, https://en.wiktionary.org/wiki/caution#Etymology)
abominate (verb)	to hate	Much as I abominate writing, I would not give up Mr.
advertised (verb)	informed; told	Collins and myself on this happy event, let me now add a short hint on the subject of another: of which we have been advertised by the same authority.	“advertised”: Origin of “advertise”: probably Anglo-Norman advertir (“to inform”). (Liber et Libri origin note, https://en.wiktionary.org/wiki/advertise#Etymology)
blemish (noun)	a mark or flaw that spoils the appearance of something (especially on a person's body)	Darcy, who never looks at any woman but to see a blemish, and who probably never looked at you in his life!
diverted (verb)	amused	“Oh!” cried Elizabeth, “I am excessively diverted.	“diverted”: Origin of “divert”: Old French divertir. (Liber et Libri origin note, https://en.wiktionary.org/wiki/divert#Etymology)
consequent (adjective)	following or accompanying as a consequence	It suddenly struck her that it might be from Lady Catherine; and she anticipated with dismay all the consequent explanations.	“consequent”: Origin: Middle French conséquent; earlier Latin consequens. (Liber et Libri origin note, https://en.wiktionary.org/wiki/consequent#Etymology)

Discussion questions

1. Why can't Elizabeth tell her father the truth?
2. Where does irony appear in this chapter, and what effect does it have? Point to one passage.
3. How does this chapter connect to the book's larger concern with pride and self-knowledge?

Classroom discussion questions (30, tiered)

Wait time after every question (3 s for DOK 1, 5 s for DOK 2, 8 to 10 s for DOK 3 and 4); think-pair-share on DOK 3 and 4; answer each response with a follow-up probe; close with student-generated questions. Focus sets by rigor level: Scaffolded support: 1, 2, 3, 4, 5, 6, 11, 12, 13, 14, 21, 22; HS Freshman: 1, 2, 3, 4, 5, 12, 13, 14, 15, 22, 23, 24; HS Sophomore: 1, 2, 3, 4, 13, 14, 15, 16, 17, 23, 24, 25; HS Junior: 1, 2, 3, 14, 15, 16, 17, 18, 24, 25, 26, 27; HS Senior: 1, 2, 3, 15, 16, 17, 18, 25, 26, 27, 28, 29; AP: 1, 2, 16, 17, 18, 19, 20, 26, 27, 28, 29, 30; College Freshman: 1, 2, 17, 18, 19, 20, 21, 22, 27, 28, 29, 30; College Sophomore: 1, 2, 11, 18, 19, 20, 21, 22, 23, 28, 29, 30; College Junior: 1, 11, 12, 19, 20, 21, 22, 23, 24, 25, 29, 30; College Senior: 1, 11, 12, 13, 20, 21, 22, 23, 24, 25, 26, 30; Graduate / PhD: 1, 11, 12, 13, 21, 22, 23, 24, 25, 26, 27, 28

Literal / recall

1. Who sends a warning letter? [DOK 1 · coldCallWithSupport · wait 3 s · AP: unit standards] Look for: Mr. Collins
2. What is the warning about? [DOK 1 · turnAndTalk · wait 3 s · AP: unit standards] Look for: An engagement with Darcy
3. How does Mr. Bennet react to Collins's warning letter? [DOK 1 · coldCallWithSupport · wait 3 s · AP: unit standards] Look for: He laughs
4. How does Elizabeth feel while her father laughs at the letter? [DOK 1 · turnAndTalk · wait 3 s · AP: unit standards] Look for: She must hide her pain
5. What device does Austen use? [DOK 1 · coldCallWithSupport · wait 3 s · AP: unit standards] Look for: Dramatic irony
6. Retell the three most important events of "Chapter LVII" in order, in one sentence each. [DOK 1 · turnAndTalk · wait 3 s · AP: unit standards] Look for: Mr. Bennet reads Elizabeth a letter from Collins warning against an engagement with Darcy and laughs at the idea, not knowing her feelings. Elizabeth must hide her pain.
7. Which characters appear or are mentioned in "Chapter LVII"? Name two and one thing each says or does. [DOK 1 · coldCallWithSupport · wait 3 s · AP: unit standards] Look for: Names and actions taken from the chapter; check against the teacher summary.
8. Where and when does "Chapter LVII" take place? Point to the line that tells you. [DOK 1 · turnAndTalk · wait 3 s · AP: unit standards] Look for: A place/time detail quoted from the chapter.
9. Reread: "" 'My motive for cautioning you is as follows." What does "cautioning" mean here, and what is literally happening in this line? [DOK 1 · turnAndTalk · wait 3 s · AP: unit standards] Look for: cautioning: warning.
10. Reread: "Much as I abominate writing, I would not give up Mr." What does "abominate" mean here, and what is literally happening in this line? [DOK 1 · turnAndTalk · wait 3 s · AP: unit standards] Look for: abominate: to hate.

Inferential / analytical

1. What does "Chapter LVII" suggest about a misguided warning? State the inference and the line that supports it. [DOK 2 · thinkPairShare · wait 5 s · AP-LIT.LAN] Look for: Mr. Bennet's laughter is painful dramatic irony.
2. Find one example of irony in this chapter. What does it reveal that a plain statement would not? [DOK 2 · followUp · wait 5 s · AP-LIT.NAR] Look for: Look for gaps between what characters expect or say and what is true.
3. How does the characterization in this chapter shape what we understand about a misguided warning? [DOK 3 · thinkPairShare · wait 8 s · AP-LIT.CHR] Look for: Look for what characters say, do and think, and how others react to them.

   Answer guidance: A defensible line of argument: Mr. Bennet's philosophy of laughter fails Elizabeth when it matters. Useful evidence: "Mr. Darcy, who never looks at any woman but to see a blemish" (Chapter LVII, paragraph 18): Mr. Bennet's joke. On characterization: Mr. Bennet reads Collins's letter warning against the match and laughs at the idea of Darcy loving Elizabeth. Credit any position that is supported by quotation and reasoning; push one-sided answers to address the strongest counterpoint.
4. In the passage that begins "If he had been wavering before as to what he should do, which had often seemed likely, the advice and entreaty of so near a relation might settle every doubt, and determine him at…", why might Austen have chosen these particular words? Pick two and explain their connotations. [DOK 2 · followUp · wait 5 s · AP-LIT.FIG] Look for: Diction analysis of two words in the anchor passage.

5. What causes the main turn in “Chapter LVII”, and what effect is it likely to have on what follows? [DOK 2 · followUp · wait 5 s · AP-LIT.STR] Look for: Mr. Bennet reads Elizabeth a letter from Collins warning against an engagement with Darcy and laughs at the idea, not knowing her feelings. Elizabeth must hide her pain.
6. How does “Chapter LVII” build on “Chapter LVI”? Name one link of cause and effect. [DOK 3 · thinkPairShare · wait 8 s · AP-LIT.STR] Look for: A causal or structural link between this and the previous chapter.
   Answer guidance: A defensible line of argument: Mr. Bennet's philosophy of laughter fails Elizabeth when it matters. Useful evidence: “For what do we live but to make sport for our neighbours, and laugh at them in our turn” (Chapter LVII, paragraph 22): Mr. Bennet's philosophy. Theme link: her father's wit fails her. Credit any position that is supported by quotation and reasoning; push one-sided answers to address the strongest counterpoint.
7. What can we infer about a character's motives from what they say and do here, as opposed to what they claim? [DOK 3 · followUp · wait 8 s · AP-LIT.CHR] Look for: An inference about motive supported by a quoted line.
   Answer guidance: A defensible line of argument: Mr. Bennet's philosophy of laughter fails Elizabeth when it matters. Useful evidence: “The discomposure of spirits which this extraordinary visit threw Elizabeth into could not be easily overcome” (Chapter LVII, paragraph 1): Opening. On characterization: Mr. Bennet reads Collins's letter warning against the match and laughs at the idea of Darcy loving Elizabeth. Credit any position that is supported by quotation and reasoning; push one-sided answers to address the strongest counterpoint.
8. The bell-ringer asked: “Why can't Elizabeth tell her father the truth?” Now that we have read closely, how would you revise your first answer, and which line changed your mind? [DOK 2 · thinkPairShare · wait 5 s · AP-LIT.LAN] Look for: A revised answer anchored in the text.
9. Where does tone / mood appear, and how does it connect this chapter to the larger concern with pride and self-knowledge? [DOK 3 · followUp · wait 8 s · AP-LIT.FIG] Look for: Look for word choices that reveal the narrator's attitude or the scene's feeling.
   Answer guidance: A defensible line of argument: Mr. Bennet's philosophy of laughter fails Elizabeth when it matters. Useful evidence: “Mr. Darcy, who never looks at any woman but to see a blemish” (Chapter LVII, paragraph 18): Mr. Bennet's joke. Theme link: her father's wit fails her. Credit any position that is supported by quotation and reasoning; push one-sided answers to address the strongest counterpoint.
10. Background: News traveled quickly through gossip networks in the gentry. How does knowing this change the way you read one moment in the chapter? [DOK 3 · thinkPairShare · wait 8 s · AP-LIT.SET] Look for: A specific moment reread in light of the context.
    Answer guidance: A defensible line of argument: Mr. Bennet's philosophy of laughter fails Elizabeth when it matters. Useful evidence: “For what do we live but to make sport for our neighbours, and laugh at them in our turn” (Chapter LVII, paragraph 22): Mr. Bennet's philosophy. Theme link: her father's wit fails her. Credit any position that is supported by quotation and reasoning; push one-sided answers to address the strongest counterpoint.

Evaluative / synthesis / creative

1. A critic might argue: “Mr. Bennet's laughter is painful dramatic irony.” How far do you agree? Take a stand and defend it with two lines from the chapter. [DOK 3 · fourCorners · wait 8 s · AP-LIT.LAN] Look for: A defended position with evidence and one counterpoint.
   Answer guidance: A defensible line of argument: Mr. Bennet's philosophy of laughter fails Elizabeth when it matters. Useful evidence: “The discomposure of spirits which this extraordinary visit threw Elizabeth into could not be easily overcome” (Chapter LVII, paragraph 1): Opening. Theme link: her father's wit fails her. Credit any position that is supported by quotation and reasoning; push one-sided answers to address the strongest counterpoint.

2. Which character in this chapter acts most wisely, and which least? Judge them by a standard you name. [DOK 3 · thinkPairShare · wait 8 s · AP-LIT.CHR, AP-LIT.LAN] Look for: An evaluation using an explicit criterion and evidence.

   Answer guidance: A defensible line of argument: Mr. Bennet's philosophy of laughter fails Elizabeth when it matters. Useful evidence: “Mr. Darcy, who never looks at any woman but to see a blemish” (Chapter LVII, paragraph 18): Mr. Bennet's joke. On characterization: Mr. Bennet reads Collins's letter warning against the match and laughs at the idea of Darcy loving Elizabeth. Credit any position that is supported by quotation and reasoning; push one-sided answers to address the strongest counterpoint.

3. Rewrite one moment of “Chapter LVII” from the point of view of a different character. What does the new angle reveal or hide about a misguided warning? [DOK 4 · thinkPairShare · wait 8 s · AP-LIT.LAN, AP-LIT.NAR] Look for: A creative product with a rationale tied to the text.

   Answer guidance: A defensible line of argument: Mr. Bennet's philosophy of laughter fails Elizabeth when it matters. Useful evidence: “For what do we live but to make sport for our neighbours, and laugh at them in our turn” (Chapter LVII, paragraph 22): Mr. Bennet's philosophy. Theme link: her father's wit fails her. Credit any position that is supported by quotation and reasoning; push one-sided answers to address the strongest counterpoint.

4. Write three questions of your own about “Chapter LVII”: one recall, one “why/how”, and one “should/what if”. Trade with a partner and answer theirs. [DOK 3 · studentGenerated · wait 8 s · AP-LIT.LAN] Look for: Student-generated questions at three levels.

   Answer guidance: A defensible line of argument: Mr. Bennet's philosophy of laughter fails Elizabeth when it matters. Useful evidence: “The discomposure of spirits which this extraordinary visit threw Elizabeth into could not be easily overcome” (Chapter LVII, paragraph 1): Opening. Theme link: her father's wit fails her. Credit any position that is supported by quotation and reasoning; push one-sided answers to address the strongest counterpoint.

5. Connect this chapter to marriage and money: is the link strong or weak so far? What would Austen need to show next to strengthen it? [DOK 4 · socraticCircle · wait 8 s · AP-LIT.LAN] Look for: A judgment of thematic development across the work.

   Answer guidance: A defensible line of argument: Mr. Bennet's philosophy of laughter fails Elizabeth when it matters. Useful evidence: “Mr. Darcy, who never looks at any woman but to see a blemish” (Chapter LVII, paragraph 18): Mr. Bennet's joke. Theme link: her father's wit fails her. Credit any position that is supported by quotation and reasoning; push one-sided answers to address the strongest counterpoint.

6. Is the irony in this chapter effective, or does it feel heavy-handed? Evaluate it as a reader would in a review. [DOK 3 · fourCorners · wait 8 s · AP-LIT.LAN, AP-LIT.NAR] Look for: An evaluative judgment with criteria and evidence.

   Answer guidance: A defensible line of argument: Mr. Bennet's philosophy of laughter fails Elizabeth when it matters. Useful evidence: “For what do we live but to make sport for our neighbours, and laugh at them in our turn” (Chapter LVII, paragraph 22): Mr. Bennet's philosophy. On irony: Mr. Bennet's joke wounds Elizabeth, who cannot laugh. Credit any position that is supported by quotation and reasoning; push one-sided answers to address the strongest counterpoint.

7. Compare how “Chapter LVII” treats a misguided warning with how another text, film or event you know treats a similar idea. What does Pride and Prejudice see that the other misses? [DOK 4 · socraticCircle · wait 8 s · AP-LIT.LAN] Look for: A cross-text synthesis.
   Answer guidance: A defensible line of argument: Mr. Bennet's philosophy of laughter fails Elizabeth when it matters. Useful evidence: “The discomposure of spirits which this extraordinary visit threw Elizabeth into could not be easily overcome” (Chapter LVII, paragraph 1): Opening. Theme link: her father's wit fails her. Credit any position that is supported by quotation and reasoning; push one-sided answers to address the strongest counterpoint.
8. Predict what “Chapter LVIII” will bring, using two clues from this chapter. After reading, evaluate your prediction. [DOK 3 · thinkPairShare · wait 8 s · AP-LIT.LAN, AP-LIT.STR] Look for: A prediction or judgment justified with textual clues.
   Answer guidance: A defensible line of argument: Mr. Bennet's philosophy of laughter fails Elizabeth when it matters. Useful evidence: “Mr. Darcy, who never looks at any woman but to see a blemish” (Chapter LVII, paragraph 18): Mr. Bennet's joke. Theme link: her father's wit fails her. Credit any position that is supported by quotation and reasoning; push one-sided answers to address the strongest counterpoint.
9. Design a one-paragraph modern adaptation of this chapter (setting, characters, conflict). What must stay the same for it to still be about a misguided warning? [DOK 4 · thinkPairShare · wait 8 s · AP-LIT.LAN] Look for: A creative transfer that keeps the core idea.
   Answer guidance: A defensible line of argument: Mr. Bennet's philosophy of laughter fails Elizabeth when it matters. Useful evidence: “For what do we live but to make sport for our neighbours, and laugh at them in our turn” (Chapter LVII, paragraph 22): Mr. Bennet's philosophy. Theme link: her father's wit fails her. Credit any position that is supported by quotation and reasoning; push one-sided answers to address the strongest counterpoint.
10. What question would you most like to ask Jane Austen about this chapter, and what answer do you think the text itself gives? [DOK 4 · studentGenerated · wait 8 s · AP-LIT.LAN] Look for: A student-generated question answered from evidence.
    Answer guidance: A defensible line of argument: Mr. Bennet's philosophy of laughter fails Elizabeth when it matters. Useful evidence: “The discomposure of spirits which this extraordinary visit threw Elizabeth into could not be easily overcome” (Chapter LVII, paragraph 1): Opening. Theme link: her father's wit fails her. Credit any position that is supported by quotation and reasoning; push one-sided answers to address the strongest counterpoint.

Annotation focus

- Irony: look for gaps between what characters expect or say and what is true (anchor passage in the We do segment)
- Also notice Characterization: what characters say, do and think, and how others react to them
- Also notice Tone / mood: word choices that reveal the narrator's attitude or the scene's feeling

Chapter quiz: item bank (all eleven rigor versions)

1. [fill · recall · DOK 1] Complete the quotation from Chapter LVII, paragraph 14: “Something very much to the _____ of course.” Word bank: congratulate, everything, dependence, purpose
   Key: purpose

2. [mc · recall · DOK 1] How does Elizabeth feel while her father laughs at the letter?
   A. Delighted
   B. Indifferent
   C. Relieved
   D. She must hide her pain

   Key: D (She must hide her pain)

3. [mc · recall · DOK 1] What is the warning about?
   A. The entail
   B. An engagement with Darcy
   C. Lydia
   D. Jane

   Key: B (An engagement with Darcy)

4. [mc · recall · DOK 1] In the line “Much as I abominate writing, I would not give up Mr.”, what does “abominate” most nearly mean?
   A. feel happiness or joy
   B. to hate
   C. in a strenuous manner; strongly or vigorously
   D. to strike back

   Key: B (to hate)

5. [mc · recall · DOK 1] In the line “Collins and myself on this happy event, let me now add a short hint on the subject of another: of which we have been advertised by the same authority.”, what does “advertised” most nearly mean?
   A. informed; told
   B. something very like another; a copy
   C. a soldier standing guard
   D. consider bad or wrong

   Key: A (informed; told)

6. [mc · recall · DOK 1] How does Mr. Bennet react to Collins's warning letter?
   A. He is silent
   B. He laughs
   C. He is angry
   D. He is sad

   Key: B (He laughs)

7. [fill · recall · DOK 1] Complete the quotation from Chapter LVII, paragraph 1: “Lady Catherine it appeared, had actually taken the trouble of this journey from Rosings, for the sole purpose of breaking off her supposed _____ with Mr. Darcy.” Word bank: dependence, supposition, engagement, expectation

   Key: engagement

8. [fill · recall · DOK 1] Complete the quotation from Chapter LVII, paragraph 18: “Mr. Darcy, who never looks at any woman but to see a _____”

   Key: blemish

9. [mc · recall · DOK 1] What device does Austen use?

   A. Allegory

   B. Dramatic irony

   C. Foreshadowing only

   D. Flashback

   Key: B (Dramatic irony)

10. [fill · recall · DOK 1] Complete the quotation from Chapter LVII, paragraph 4: “I shall then give over every _____, every wish of his constancy.” Word bank: supposition, congratulate, purpose, expectation

    Key: expectation

11. [mc · inference · DOK 2] Which of these passages comes earliest in Chapter LVII?

    A. “Lady Catherine it appeared, had actually taken the trouble of this journey from Rosings, for the sole purpose of breaking off her supposed…”

    B. “She had not herself forgotten to feel that the marriage of her sister must bring them more frequently together.”

    C. “It was a rational scheme to be sure! but from what the report of their engagement could originate, Elizabeth was at a loss to imagine”

    D. “And her neighbours at Lucas lodge, therefore, (for through their communication with the Collinses, the report she concluded had reached…”

    Key: A (“Lady Catherine it appeared, had actually taken the trouble of this journey from Rosings, for the sole purpose of breaking off her supposed…”)

12. [short · inference · DOK 2] What can you infer from this line? “For what do we live but to make sport for our neighbours, and laugh at them in our turn” (Chapter LVII, paragraph 22) Answer in two or three sentences with one detail.

    Sample answer: Mr. Bennet's philosophy. The evidence is “For what do we live but to make sport for our neighbours, and laugh at them in our turn” (Chapter LVII, paragraph 22). This develops family and reputation: her father's wit fails her.

13. [short · inference · DOK 2] What does this passage from Chapter LVII, paragraph 10 reveal about the character or situation? “I have received a letter this morning that has astonished me exceedingly.” Answer in two or three sentences with one detail.

    Sample answer: The passage (Chapter LVII, paragraph 10) shows the situation turning on first impressions and prejudice: her father's wit fails her. The words “exceedingly” and “astonished” are the proof, because they show how the moment looks to the people in it. They suggest more than the narrator states outright.

14. [short · analysis · DOK 3] Analyze how the word choice in this passage from Chapter LVII, paragraph 17 shapes its tone: “We have reason to imagine that his aunt, Lady Catherine de Bourgh, does not look on the match with a friendly eye.’” Pick two words and explain their effect.

    Sample answer: The words “friendly” and “imagine” (Chapter LVII, paragraph 17) make the tone heavy and deliberate rather than neutral. That weight points the reader to pride and self-knowledge: her father's wit fails her. The author chooses them so the moment feels significant instead of passing.

15. [short · analysis · DOK 3] Analyze how the word choice in this passage from Chapter LVII, paragraph 14 shapes its tone: “He begins with congratulations on the approaching nuptials of my eldest daughter, of which it seems he has been told, by some of the good-natured, gossiping Lucases.” Pick two words and explain their effect.

    Sample answer: The words “congratulations” and “approaching” (Chapter LVII, paragraph 14) make the tone heavy and deliberate rather than neutral. That weight points the reader to class and social mobility: her father's wit fails her. The author chooses them so the moment feels significant instead of passing.

16. [short · synthesis · DOK 4] Evaluate this claim about the chapter: “Mr. Bennet's philosophy of laughter fails Elizabeth when it matters.” Is it fully persuasive? Argue with evidence, including a passage that complicates it.
    Sample answer: The claim is persuasive in part. “The discomposure of spirits which this extraordinary visit threw Elizabeth into could not be easily overcome” (Chapter LVII, paragraph 1) supports it: He asks "For what do we live, but to make sport for our neighbours, and laugh at them in our turn?" but Elizabeth "could not be easily overcome," her feelings beyond his joke. But “For what do we live but to make sport for our neighbours, and laugh at them in our turn” (Chapter LVII, paragraph 22) complicates it: the line (Mr. Bennet's philosophy) shows the same issue from another side, and its “but” marks a limit or reversal the claim passes over. Weighing the two passages, the claim survives, but only once it admits the tension the second passage creates.
17. [fill · recall · DOK 1] Fill in the blank with the vocabulary word that fits: “Oh!’ cried Elizabeth, ‘I am excessively _____.” Word bank: abominate, cautioning, diverted, advertised
    Key: diverted
18. [mc · recall · DOK 1] In the line “‘My motive for cautioning you is as follows.”, what does “cautioning” most nearly mean?
    A. warning
    B. feeling unsure
    C. an event that happens
    D. gave; passed on

    Key: A (warning)
19. [fill · recall · DOK 1] Complete the quotation from Chapter LVII, paragraph 1: “The discomposure of spirits which this _____ visit threw Elizabeth into could not be easily overcome”
    Key: extraordinary
20. [mc · analysis · DOK 3] Which literary element does this describe in “Chapter LVII”? Mr. Bennet reads Collins's letter warning against the match and laughs at the idea of Darcy loving Elizabeth.
    A. Metaphor
    B. Characterization
    C. Symbolism
    D. Alliteration

    Key: B (Characterization)
21. [short · analysis · DOK 3] Analyze how the word choice in this passage from Chapter LVII, paragraph 1 shapes its tone: “It was a rational scheme to be sure! but from what the report of their engagement could originate, Elizabeth was at a loss to imagine” Pick two words and explain their effect.
    Sample answer: The words “engagement” and “originate” (Chapter LVII, paragraph 1) make the tone heavy and deliberate rather than neutral. That weight points the reader to pride and self-knowledge: her father's wit fails her. The author chooses them so the moment feels significant instead of passing.
22. [short · synthesis · DOK 4] Synthesis: trace how family and reputation develops from Chapter LIII to Chapter LVII. Use one quotation from each.
    Sample answer: Earlier, in Chapter LIII, paragraph 8, the text reads “He simpers, and smirks, and makes love to us all. I am prodigiously proud of him” — Mr. Bennet's sarcasm about Wickham: wit as a substitute for action. In Chapter LVII, “Mr.

Darcy, who never looks at any woman but to see a blemish" (Chapter LVII, paragraph 18) — Mr. Bennet's joke. Her father's wit fails her.

23. [fill · recall · DOK 1] Complete the quotation from Chapter LVII, paragraph 22: "For what do we live but to make sport for our _____, and laugh at them in our turn"

    Key: neighbours

24. [mc · recall · DOK 1] Which word completes this sentence from Chapter LVII, paragraph 10? "As it _____ concerns yourself, you ought to know its contents."

    A. unblemished

    B. principally

    C. supposition

    D. congratulate

    Key: B (principally)

25. [short · synthesis · DOK 4] Connect this passage from Chapter LVII, paragraph 24 to the story's treatment of marriage and money: "Nay, when I read a letter of his, I cannot help giving him the preference even over Wickham, much as I value the impudence and hypocrisy of my son-in-law." Use one other moment from the story as well.

    Sample answer: This passage (Chapter LVII, paragraph 24) develops marriage and money: her father's wit fails her. Its words "preference" and "hypocrisy" carry that idea into this moment. The same concern returns in "It was necessary to laugh, when she would rather have cried." (Chapter LVII, paragraph 25), so the two passages read as a pattern, not a single moment. Together they show the story treating marriage and money as central.

26. [mc · inference · DOK 2 · AP: AP-LIT.LAN] Which choice best states a central concern of "Chapter LVII"?

    A. Shameless return

    B. An imperious hostess

    C. Letters of judgment

    D. A misguided warning

    Key: D (A misguided warning)

27. [fill · recall · DOK 1 · AP: AP-LIT.FIG] Fill in the blank with the vocabulary word that fits: "It suddenly struck her that it might be from Lady Catherine; and she anticipated with dismay all the _____ explanations."

    Word bank: consequent, cautioning, abominate, advertised

    Key: consequent

28. [mc · recall · DOK 1 · AP: AP-LIT.STR] Who sends a warning letter?

    A. Lady Catherine

    B. Charlotte

    C. Mr. Collins

    D. Wickham

    Key: C (Mr. Collins)

29. [mc · analysis · DOK 3 · AP: AP-LIT.NAR] Which literary element does this describe in "Chapter LVII"? Mr. Bennet's joke wounds Elizabeth, who cannot laugh.

    A. Alliteration

    B. Irony

    C. Theme

D. Diction / vocabulary

Key: B (Irony)

30. [short · synthesis · DOK 4 · AP: AP-LIT.LAN] Connect this passage from Chapter LVII, paragraph 22 to the story's treatment of women's limited choices: “It was an encouragement of vice; and had I been the rector of Longbourn, I should very strenuously have opposed it.” Use one other moment from the story as well.
Sample answer: This passage (Chapter LVII, paragraph 22) develops women's limited choices: her father's wit fails her. Its words “encouragement” and “strenuously” carry that idea into this moment. The same concern returns in “The rest of his letter is only about his dear Charlotte’s situation, and his expectation of a young olive-branch.” (Chapter LVII, paragraph 22), so the two passages read as a pattern, not a single moment. Together they show the story treating women's limited choices as central.

31. [short · synthesis · DOK 4 · AP: AP-LIT.LAN] Connect this passage from Chapter LVII, paragraph 6 to the story's treatment of marriage and money: “The next morning, as she was going downstairs, she was met by her father, who came out of his library with a letter in his hand.” Use one other moment from the story as well.
Sample answer: This passage (Chapter LVII, paragraph 6) develops marriage and money: her father's wit fails her. Its words “downstairs” and “morning” carry that idea into this moment. The same concern returns in “She followed him thither; and her curiosity to know what he had to tell her, was heightened by the supposition of its…” (Chapter LVII, paragraph 8), so the two passages read as a pattern, not a single moment. Together they show the story treating marriage and money as central.

32. [short · analysis · DOK 3 · AP: AP-LIT.LAN] Claim: Mr. Bennet's philosophy of laughter fails Elizabeth when it matters. Explain how this evidence supports the claim: “The discomposure of spirits which this extraordinary visit threw Elizabeth into could not be easily overcome” (Chapter LVII, paragraph 1).
Sample answer: He asks "For what do we live, but to make sport for our neighbours, and laugh at them in our turn?" but Elizabeth "could not be easily overcome," her feelings beyond his joke. The evidence is “The discomposure of spirits which this extraordinary visit threw Elizabeth into could not be easily overcome” (Chapter LVII, paragraph 1) — Opening. This develops family and reputation: her father's wit fails her.

33. [short · synthesis · DOK 4 · AP: AP-LIT.LAN] Connect this passage from Chapter LVII, paragraph 3 to the story's treatment of women's limited choices: “In that case he would return no more.” Use one other moment from the story as well.
Sample answer: This passage (Chapter LVII, paragraph 3) develops women's limited choices: her father's wit fails her. Its words “return” carry that idea into this moment. The same concern returns in “If he is satisfied with only regretting me, when he might have obtained my affections and hand, I shall soon cease to…” (Chapter LVII, paragraph 4), so the two passages read as a pattern, not a single moment. Together they show the story treating women's limited choices as central.

34. [short · inference · DOK 2 · Dual Credit (Indiana College Core): ICC-WC-1.5] What can you infer from this line? “Mr. Darcy, who never looks at any woman but to see a blemish” (Chapter LVII, paragraph 18) Answer in two or three sentences with one detail.
Sample answer: Mr. Bennet's joke. The evidence is “Mr. Darcy, who never looks at any woman but to see a blemish” (Chapter LVII, paragraph 18). This develops family and reputation: her father's wit fails her.

35. [short · synthesis · DOK 4 · Dual Credit (Indiana College Core): ICC-WC-1.5] Close reading: how do the diction and syntax of “For what do we live but to make sport for our neighbours, and laugh at them in our turn” (Chapter LVII, paragraph 22) shape its meaning? Consider a second, competing reading.
Sample answer: Mr. Bennet's philosophy. The evidence is “For what do we live but to make sport for our neighbours, and laugh at them in our turn” (Chapter LVII, paragraph 22). This develops family and reputation: her father's wit fails her. The words “neighbours” and “sport” carry that meaning: they are the charged choices in the line, and changing either would soften the effect. He asks "For what do we live, but to make sport for our neighbours, and laugh at them in our turn?" but Elizabeth "could not be easily overcome," her feelings beyond his joke.

36. [short · analysis · DOK 3 · Program outcome: LeL-GR-LIT-1] Analyze the word choice in “The discomposure of spirits which this extraordinary visit threw Elizabeth into could not be easily overcome” (Chapter LVII, paragraph 1). Pick two words and explain what they suggest.
    Sample answer: Opening. The evidence is “The discomposure of spirits which this extraordinary visit threw Elizabeth into could not be easily overcome” (Chapter LVII, paragraph 1). This develops family and reputation: her father's wit fails her. The words “extraordinary” and “discomposure” carry that meaning: they are the charged choices in the line, and changing either would soften the effect.

Rigor version	Items (in order)	Mix
Scaffolded support	1, 2, 3, 4, 5, 6, 7, 8, 9, 10, 11, 12, 13, 14, 15, 16	recall 10, inference 3, analysis 2, synthesis 1
HS Freshman	17, 9, 5, 10, 3, 6, 1, 18, 19, 12, 13, 11, 20, 15, 21, 22	recall 9, inference 3, analysis 3, synthesis 1
HS Sophomore	23, 6, 7, 17, 24, 4, 10, 1, 9, 13, 11, 15, 20, 14, 22, 25	recall 9, inference 2, analysis 3, synthesis 2
HS Junior	4, 3, 9, 5, 6, 8, 17, 1, 13, 11, 26, 21, 14, 15, 25, 22	recall 8, inference 3, analysis 3, synthesis 2
HS Senior	3, 8, 27, 7, 28, 24, 6, 13, 11, 29, 15, 14, 21, 30, 16, 31	recall 7, inference 2, analysis 4, synthesis 3
AP	9, 5, 7, 17, 12, 11, 20, 14, 32, 15, 21, 33, 16, 30, 31, 25	recall 4, inference 2, analysis 5, synthesis 5
College Freshman	24, 17, 7, 28, 11, 26, 34, 21, 15, 14, 30, 22, 35, 25, 33, 31	recall 4, inference 3, analysis 3, synthesis 6
College Sophomore	23, 1, 28, 18, 11, 14, 29, 32, 15, 21, 16, 25, 33, 22, 30, 31	recall 4, inference 1, analysis 5, synthesis 6
College Junior	6, 1, 28, 27, 26, 11, 14, 15, 21, 25, 35, 30, 22, 33, 16, 31	recall 4, inference 2, analysis 3, synthesis 7
College Senior	24, 17, 28, 7, 11, 29, 32, 14, 21, 15, 25, 16, 22, 33, 30, 31	recall 4, inference 1, analysis 5, synthesis 6
Graduate / PhD	24, 17, 28, 27, 11, 21, 36, 14, 20, 15, 30, 31, 16, 22, 25, 33	recall 4, inference 1, analysis 5, synthesis 6

Writing prompts (eleven rigor levels)

Scaffolded support (250 words; AP: see unit standards): Supported track (work from the passage your teacher selects). In “Chapter LVII,” how does Austen show a misguided warning? Write a paragraph that states your claim, quotes two details from the passage, and explains how each detail supports your idea. Use the irony you noticed as one piece of evidence.

HS Freshman (350 words; AP: see unit standards): In Chapter LVII, how does Austen develop the idea of a misguided warning? State a clear claim, support it with two or three quotations, and explain how the irony in the chapter helps build that idea.

HS Sophomore (450 words; AP: see unit standards): Analyze how Chapter LVII develops the idea of a misguided warning. Make a precise claim, support it with at least three pieces of textual evidence, and explain how the author's use of irony and characterization shapes that idea. Address one possible counterclaim.

HS Junior (550 words; AP: see unit standards): Analyze how the structure of Chapter LVII (where it begins, turns and ends) and its irony shape the reader's understanding of a misguided warning. Identify one place where the text leaves matters uncertain and explain how that uncertainty adds to its meaning. Distinguish what is directly stated from what is really meant.

HS Senior (600 words; AP: see unit standards): Two readers disagree about what Chapter LVII suggests about a misguided warning. Lay out two plausible interpretations, weigh the evidence for each (including the chapter's irony and characterization), and argue for the stronger one in a sustained, well-organized essay. Distinguish what is directly stated from what is really meant.

AP (650 words; AP: AP-LIT.NAR, AP-LIT.LAN): Write a literary argument in which you analyze how Jane Austen uses irony in Chapter LVII to complicate the reader's understanding of a misguided warning. Develop a defensible thesis, select evidence purposefully, and explain how specific choices of diction and syntax create meaning.

College Freshman (1000 words; AP: see unit standards): Situate Chapter LVII within its historical and literary context and argue how the chapter's treatment of a misguided warning responds to that context. Engage with at least one secondary perspective (a critic, historian or the author's own statements), integrate quotations smoothly, and cite in MLA style.

College Sophomore (1250 words; AP: see unit standards): Read Chapter LVII alongside the conventions of its genre and period. Argue how the chapter's handling of a misguided warning follows or bends those conventions, using the irony as evidence, and test your reading against one published critic. Document two secondary sources in MLA.

College Junior (1500 words; AP: see unit standards): Apply a named critical approach (for example formalist, historicist, feminist, psychoanalytic or ecocritical) to Chapter LVII and its treatment of a misguided warning. State your method, show what it reveals in the chapter's irony and characterization, and identify where the text resists it.

College Senior (2000 words; AP: see unit standards): Develop a research argument that reads Chapter LVII as evidence for a larger claim about a misguided warning in Pride and Prejudice. Connect close reading of the chapter to the whole novel, engage at least four scholarly sources, and state precisely where your reading departs from theirs (Chicago style).

Graduate / PhD (2500 words; AP: see unit standards): Develop an original argument that reads Chapter LVII as a hinge in the novel's larger treatment of a misguided warning. Position your reading within a named critical conversation (for example formalist, historicist, psychoanalytic, feminist or postcolonial approaches), account for the textual history where relevant, and articulate the stakes of your intervention for scholarship on Pride and Prejudice.

SAT-style questions

1. Collins and myself on this happy event, let me now add a short hint on the subject of another: of which we have been advertised by the same authority.

As used in the text, what does the word "advertised" most nearly mean?

A. informed; told

B. following or accompanying as a consequence

C. amused

D. a mark or flaw that spoils the appearance of something (especially on a person's body)

2. If he had been wavering before as to what he should do, which had often seemed likely, the advice and entreaty of so near a relation might settle every doubt, and determine him at once to be as happy, as dignity unblemished could make him. In that case he would return no more. Lady Catherine might see him in her way through town; and his engagement to Bingley of coming again to Netherfield must give way.

Which choice best states a central concern of "Chapter LVII"?

A. Letters of judgment

B. The second proposal

C. A misguided warning

D. Puzzling visits

SAT key: 1. A (informed; told); 2. C (A misguided warning)

Lesson 59: Chapter LVIII

Focus: the second proposal

Objective: Students will analyze how characterization develops in "Chapter LVIII" by writing a claim-evidence-reasoning paragraph that cites at least 2 quotations from the section, and will score at least 80% on the section quiz.

Standards: AP: see the unit standards

Teacher only · spoilers

Walking out together, Elizabeth thanks Darcy for what he did for Lydia. He says he thought only of her, and renews his proposal; she accepts. They admit how each has changed: he was proud and selfish, she prejudiced. Lady Catherine's visit, he says, gave him hope.

Background: Proposals during walks were among the few private moments a courting couple had.

Significance: Mutual change makes the resolution earned rather than merely romantic.

Lesson plan and lecture script (90 minutes)

0–8 min · Bell-ringer · You do (8 min)
Students write to the bell-ringer, then pair-share.
How have both characters changed, and who changed more? Write for five minutes. Starters: I think... because... / This connects to pride and prejudice because....
Prompt: How have both characters changed, and who changed more?
Sentence starters: I think… because… · This connects to pride and prejudice because…
Strong response: A strong response takes a position and anticipates this: both acknowledge their faults.

8–18 min · Vocabulary with etymology notes · I do (10 min)
Five key words in context, with verified word histories.
Today's words: retrospections — thoughts about the past; outstrip — to get ahead of; unexampled — never seen before; unequaled; annexed — attached; narrowly — closely; carefully. "annexed": Origin of "annex": French annexe; earlier Latin annexus. "narrowly": Origin: an English formation from narrow + -ly.
Words: retrospections: thoughts about the past · outstrip: to get ahead of · unexampled: never seen before; unequaled · annexed: attached · narrowly: closely; carefully

18–28 min · Background and context · I do (10 min)
Mini-lecture (read or adapt the script).
Proposals during walks were among the few private moments a courting couple had. Mutual change makes the resolution earned rather than merely romantic. Characterization: Darcy's second proposal; Elizabeth accepts; they explain their changes. Dialogue: Darcy admits he was "a selfish being all my life." Watch for rank and condescension: Rank is displayed and enforced, above all at Rosings by Lady Catherine; Elizabeth refuses to be cowed. In this chapter: "emphatically on every expression of the latter, which, in her ladyship's apprehension, peculiarly denoted her perverseness and assurance, in the belief that" (Chapter LVIII, paragraph 9).

28–40 min · I do: modeled close reading · I do (12 min)
Model the close reading of the anchor quotation using the written think-aloud below.
First, meaning. I read "My affections and wishes are unchanged, but one word from you will silence me on this subject forever" slowly and put it in my own words: Darcy tells Elizabeth his feelings are unchanged, but one word from her will silence him forever. Next, craft. I notice his humility, which contrasts with his proud first proposal. The strongest word is "unchanged": it shows his love has lasted through rejection. Then, effect. What does Darcy offer in his second proposal? My answer: In his second proposal Darcy offers his unchanged love with respect and gives Elizabeth the power to refuse; Elizabeth accepts, and both have overcome their pride and prejudice.

> My affections and wishes are unchanged, but one word from you will silence me on this subject forever (Chapter LVIII, paragraph 7)

Think-aloud: First, meaning. I read "My affections and wishes are unchanged, but one word from you will silence me on this subject forever" slowly and put it in my own words: Darcy tells Elizabeth his feelings are unchanged, but one word from her will silence him forever. Next, craft. I notice his humility, which contrasts with his proud first proposal. The strongest word is "unchanged": it shows his love has lasted through rejection. Then, effect. What does Darcy offer in his second proposal? My answer: In his second proposal Darcy offers his unchanged love with respect and gives Elizabeth the power to refuse; Elizabeth accepts, and both have overcome their pride and prejudice.

40–55 min · We do: guided annotation · We do (15 min)
Guided analysis of a second quotation; expected answers given.
Ask: What words in this line stand out, and what do they suggest? Expected: Darcy's self-knowledge. Look at the craft: Darcy admits he was "a selfish being all my life." Ask: How does this line connect to pride and prejudice? Expected: Both acknowledge their faults. (Darcy's self-knowledge.)

> I have been a selfish being all my life, in practice, though not in principle (Chapter LVIII, paragraph 24)

Ask: What words in this line stand out, and what do they suggest?
Expected answer: Darcy's self-knowledge. Look at the craft: Darcy admits he was "a selfish being all my life."
Ask: How does this line connect to pride and prejudice?
Expected answer: Both acknowledge their faults. (Darcy's self-knowledge.)

55–70 min · You do: independent annotation · You do (15 min)
Independent annotation and a claim-evidence-reasoning paragraph (exemplar given).
Annotate the chapter for characterization, dialogue (three marks with a margin note each), then write one claim-evidence-reasoning paragraph: what does this chapter suggest about the second proposal? Then start your writing prompt at your assigned level (HS Sophomore: Analyze how Chapter LVIII develops the idea of the second proposal. Make a precise claim, support it with at least three pieces of textual evidence, and explain how the author's use of characterization and theme shapes that idea. Address one possible counterclaim.) Exemplar: The second proposal succeeds because both have learned humility. When the text says "My affections and wishes are unchanged, but one word from you will silence me on this subject forever" (Chapter LVIII, paragraph 7), it shows this directly. Darcy says "my affections and wishes are unchanged, but one word from you will silence me," and admits "I have been a selfish being all my life."
Task: Annotate the chapter for characterization, dialogue (three marks with a margin note each), then write one claim-evidence-reasoning paragraph: what does this chapter suggest about the second proposal? Then start your writing prompt at your assigned level (HS Sophomore: Analyze how Chapter LVIII develops the idea of the second proposal. Make a precise claim, support it with at least three pieces of textual evidence, and explain how the author's use of characterization and theme shapes that idea. Address one possible counterclaim.)
Exemplar: The second proposal succeeds because both have learned humility. When the text says "My affections and wishes are unchanged, but one word from you will silence me on this subject forever" (Chapter LVIII, paragraph 7), it shows this directly. Darcy says "my affections and wishes are unchanged, but one word from you will silence me," and admits "I have been a selfish being all my life."

70–80 min · Discussion · We do (10 min)
Structured discussion from the 30 tiered questions, with facilitation notes.
Anchor question: How have both characters changed, and who changed more? Compare the two proposals line by line.
Anchor question: How have both characters changed, and who changed more?
Facilitation: Compare the two proposals line by line.

80–87 min · Exit ticket / chapter quiz · You do (7 min)
Chapter quiz in the app and an exit ticket (answer given).
Chapter quiz in the app, then: In one sentence, what does this chapter suggest about the second proposal? Support it with one short quotation. Model answer: The second proposal succeeds because both have learned humility. ("My affections and wishes are unchanged, but one word from you will silence me on this subject forever", Chapter LVIII, paragraph 7). Accept any defensible claim backed by a quotation from the chapter; the answer key for the quiz is in the Quiz section.
Exit ticket: In one sentence, what does this chapter suggest about the second proposal? Support it with one short quotation.
Answer: Model answer: The second proposal succeeds because both have learned humility. ("My affections and wishes are unchanged, but one word from you will silence me on this subject forever", Chapter LVIII, paragraph 7). Accept any defensible claim backed by a quotation from the chapter; the answer key for the quiz is in the Quiz section.

> 87–90 min · Closure · I do (3 min)
> Summarize the lesson and preview the next reading.
> Today we saw how characterization shapes the second proposal. Key takeaway: both acknowledge their faults.

Total: 90 minutes.

Teacher analysis (spoilers)

Literary elements

- Characterization: Darcy's second proposal; Elizabeth accepts; they explain their changes.
- Dialogue: Darcy admits he was "a selfish being all my life."

Themes and how they develop

- pride and prejudice: both acknowledge their faults.

Symbols and motifs

- rank and condescension: Rank is displayed and enforced, above all at Rosings by Lady Catherine; Elizabeth refuses to be cowed. In this chapter: “emphatically on every expression of the latter, which, in her ladyship’s apprehension, peculiarly denoted her perverseness and assurance, in the belief that” (Chapter LVIII, paragraph 9).
- silence and reserve: What characters leave unsaid (Darcy's reserve, Jane's composure, Elizabeth's secrets) drives misunderstanding. In this chapter: “and wishes are unchanged, but one word from you will silence me on this subject forever” (Chapter LVIII, paragraph 7).

Key quotations (checked against the reading text)

- “My affections and wishes are unchanged, but one word from you will silence me on this subject forever” (Chapter LVIII, paragraph 7) Darcy's humility.
- “I have been a selfish being all my life, in practice, though not in principle” (Chapter LVIII, paragraph 24) Darcy's self-knowledge.
- “It taught me to hope” (Chapter LVIII, paragraph 10) Lady Catherine's report gave him hope.

Model claim-evidence-reasoning

Claim: The second proposal succeeds because both have learned humility.
Evidence: “My affections and wishes are unchanged, but one word from you will silence me on this subject forever” (Chapter LVIII, paragraph 7)
Reasoning: Darcy says "my affections and wishes are unchanged, but one word from you will silence me," and admits "I have been a selfish being all my life."

Vocabulary with etymology notes

Word	Definition (in this sentence)	In context	Word history

retrospections (noun)	thoughts about the past	Your retrospections must be so totally void of reproach, that the contentment arising from them, is not of philosophy, but what is much better, of ignorance.
outstrip (verb)	to get ahead of	Bingley and Jane, however, soon allowed the others to outstrip them.
unexampled (adjective)	never seen before; unequaled	I can no longer help thanking you for your unexampled kindness to my poor sister.
annexed (verb)	attached	"We will not quarrel for the greater share of blame annexed to that evening," said Elizabeth.	"annexed": Origin of "annex": French annexe; earlier Latin annexus. (Liber et Libri origin note, https://en.wiktionary.org/wiki/annex#Etymology)
narrowly (adverb)	closely; carefully	I had narrowly observed her during the two visits which I had lately made her here; and I was convinced of her affection."	"narrowly": Origin: an English formation from narrow + -ly. (Liber et Libri origin note, https://en.wiktionary.org/wiki/narrowly#Etymology)
abusing (verb)	treat badly	After abusing you so abominably to your face, I could have no scruple in abusing you to all your relations."
watches (noun)	a small portable timepiece	After walking several miles in a leisurely manner, and too busy to know anything about it, they found at last, on examining their watches, that it was time to be at home.
premises (noun)	ideas an argument or judgment rests on	For though your accusations were ill-founded, formed on mistaken premises, my behaviour to you at the time had merited the severest reproof.

Discussion questions

1. How have both characters changed, and who changed more?
2. Where does characterization appear in this chapter, and what effect does it have? Point to one passage.
3. How does this chapter connect to the book's larger concern with marriage and money?

Classroom discussion questions (30, tiered)

Wait time after every question (3 s for DOK 1, 5 s for DOK 2, 8 to 10 s for DOK 3 and 4); think-pair-share on DOK 3 and 4; answer each response with a follow-up probe; close with student-generated questions. Focus sets by rigor level: Scaffolded support: 1, 2, 3, 4, 5, 6, 11, 12, 13, 14, 21, 22; HS Freshman: 1, 2, 3, 4, 5, 12, 13, 14, 15, 22, 23, 24; HS Sophomore: 1, 2, 3, 4, 13, 14, 15, 16, 17, 23, 24, 25; HS Junior: 1, 2, 3, 14, 15, 16, 17, 18, 24, 25, 26, 27; HS Senior: 1, 2, 3, 15, 16, 17, 18, 25, 26, 27, 28, 29; AP: 1, 2, 16,

17, 18, 19, 20, 26, 27, 28, 29, 30; College Freshman: 1, 2, 17, 18, 19, 20, 21, 22, 27, 28, 29, 30; College Sophomore: 1, 2, 11, 18, 19, 20, 21, 22, 23, 28, 29, 30; College Junior: 1, 11, 12, 19, 20, 21, 22, 23, 24, 25, 29, 30; College Senior: 1, 11, 12, 13, 20, 21, 22, 23, 24, 25, 26, 30; Graduate / PhD: 1, 11, 12, 13, 21, 22, 23, 24, 25, 26, 27, 28

Literal / recall

1. What does Elizabeth thank Darcy for? [DOK 1 · coldCallWithSupport · wait 3 s · AP: unit standards] Look for: Helping Lydia
2. What does Darcy do? [DOK 1 · turnAndTalk · wait 3 s · AP: unit standards] Look for: Renews his proposal
3. How does Elizabeth respond to Darcy's second proposal? [DOK 1 · coldCallWithSupport · wait 3 s · AP: unit standards] Look for: Accepts
4. What do they admit? [DOK 1 · turnAndTalk · wait 3 s · AP: unit standards] Look for: He was proud, she was prejudiced
5. What gave Darcy hope? [DOK 1 · coldCallWithSupport · wait 3 s · AP: unit standards] Look for: Lady Catherine's report of Elizabeth's refusal to promise
6. Retell the three most important events of “Chapter LVIII” in order, in one sentence each. [DOK 1 · turnAndTalk · wait 3 s · AP: unit standards] Look for: Walking out together, Elizabeth thanks Darcy for what he did for Lydia. He says he thought only of her, and renews his proposal; she accepts. They admit how each has changed: he was proud and selfish, she prejudiced. Lady Catherine's visit, he says, gave him hope.
7. Which characters appear or are mentioned in “Chapter LVIII”? Name two and one thing each says or does. [DOK 1 · coldCallWithSupport · wait 3 s · AP: unit standards] Look for: Names and actions taken from the chapter; check against the teacher summary.
8. Where and when does “Chapter LVIII” take place? Point to the line that tells you. [DOK 1 · turnAndTalk · wait 3 s · AP: unit standards] Look for: A place/time detail quoted from the chapter.
9. Reread: “Your retrospections must be so totally void of reproach, that the contentment arising from them, is not of philosophy, but what is much better, of ignorance.” What does “retrospections” mean here, and what is literally happening in this line? [DOK 1 · turnAndTalk · wait 3 s · AP: unit standards] Look for: retrospections: thoughts about the past.
10. Reread: “Bingley and Jane, however, soon allowed the others to outstrip them.” What does “outstrip” mean here, and what is literally happening in this line? [DOK 1 · turnAndTalk · wait 3 s · AP: unit standards] Look for: outstrip: to get ahead of.

Inferential / analytical

1. What does “Chapter LVIII” suggest about the second proposal? State the inference and the line that supports it. [DOK 2 · thinkPairShare · wait 5 s · AP-LIT.LAN] Look for: Mutual change makes the resolution earned rather than merely romantic.
2. Find one example of characterization in this chapter. What does it reveal that a plain statement would not? [DOK 2 · followUp · wait 5 s · AP-LIT.CHR] Look for: Look for what characters say, do and think, and how others react to them.
3. How does the theme in this chapter shape what we understand about the second proposal? [DOK 3 · thinkPairShare · wait 8 s · AP-LIT.LAN] Look for: Look for statements or moments that connect to the book's big ideas.
   Answer guidance: A defensible line of argument: The second proposal succeeds because both have learned humility. Useful evidence: “My affections and wishes are unchanged, but one word from you will silence me on this subject forever” (Chapter LVIII, paragraph 7): Darcy's humility. Theme link: both acknowledge their faults. Credit any position that is supported by quotation and reasoning; push one-sided answers to address the strongest counterpoint.

4. In the passage that begins ““Mr.”, why might Austen have chosen these particular words? Pick two and explain their connotations. [DOK 2 · followUp · wait 5 s · AP-LIT.FIG] Look for: Diction analysis of two words in the anchor passage.
5. What causes the main turn in “Chapter LVIII”, and what effect is it likely to have on what follows? [DOK 2 · followUp · wait 5 s · AP-LIT.STR] Look for: Walking out together, Elizabeth thanks Darcy for what he did for Lydia. He says he thought only of her, and renews his proposal; she accepts. They admit how each has changed: he was proud and selfish, she prejudiced. Lady Catherine's visit, he says, gave him hope.
6. How does “Chapter LVIII” build on “Chapter LVII”? Name one link of cause and effect. [DOK 3 · thinkPairShare · wait 8 s · AP-LIT.STR] Look for: A causal or structural link between this and the previous chapter.
   Answer guidance: A defensible line of argument: The second proposal succeeds because both have learned humility. Useful evidence: “I have been a selfish being all my life, in practice, though not in principle” (Chapter LVIII, paragraph 24): Darcy's self-knowledge. Theme link: both acknowledge their faults. Credit any position that is supported by quotation and reasoning; push one-sided answers to address the strongest counterpoint.
7. What can we infer about a character's motives from what they say and do here, as opposed to what they claim? [DOK 3 · followUp · wait 8 s · AP-LIT.CHR] Look for: An inference about motive supported by a quoted line.
   Answer guidance: A defensible line of argument: The second proposal succeeds because both have learned humility. Useful evidence: “It taught me to hope” (Chapter LVIII, paragraph 10): Lady Catherine's report gave him hope. On characterization: Darcy's second proposal; Elizabeth accepts; they explain their changes. Credit any position that is supported by quotation and reasoning; push one-sided answers to address the strongest counterpoint.
8. The bell-ringer asked: “How have both characters changed, and who changed more?” Now that we have read closely, how would you revise your first answer, and which line changed your mind? [DOK 2 · thinkPairShare · wait 5 s · AP-LIT.LAN] Look for: A revised answer anchored in the text.
9. Where does plot appear, and how does it connect this chapter to the larger concern with marriage and money? [DOK 3 · followUp · wait 8 s · AP-LIT.STR] Look for: Look for key events and the causes linking them.
   Answer guidance: A defensible line of argument: The second proposal succeeds because both have learned humility. Useful evidence: “My affections and wishes are unchanged, but one word from you will silence me on this subject forever” (Chapter LVIII, paragraph 7): Darcy's humility. Theme link: both acknowledge their faults. Credit any position that is supported by quotation and reasoning; push one-sided answers to address the strongest counterpoint.
10. Background: Proposals during walks were among the few private moments a courting couple had. How does knowing this change the way you read one moment in the chapter? [DOK 3 · thinkPairShare · wait 8 s · AP-LIT.SET] Look for: A specific moment reread in light of the context.
    Answer guidance: A defensible line of argument: The second proposal succeeds because both have learned humility. Useful evidence: “I have been a selfish being all my life, in practice, though not in principle” (Chapter LVIII, paragraph 24): Darcy's self-knowledge. Theme link: both acknowledge their faults. Credit any position that is supported by quotation and reasoning; push one-sided answers to address the strongest counterpoint.

Evaluative / synthesis / creative

1. A critic might argue: “Mutual change makes the resolution earned rather than merely romantic.” How far do you agree? Take a stand and defend it with two lines from the chapter. [DOK 3 · fourCorners · wait 8 s · AP-LIT.LAN] Look for: A defended position with evidence and one counterpoint.
   Answer guidance: A defensible line of argument: The second proposal succeeds because both have learned humility. Useful evidence: “It taught me to hope” (Chapter LVIII, paragraph 10): Lady Catherine's report gave him hope. Theme link: both acknowledge their faults. Credit any position that is supported by quotation and reasoning; push one-sided answers to address the strongest counterpoint.
2. Which character in this chapter acts most wisely, and which least? Judge them by a standard you name. [DOK 3 · thinkPairShare · wait 8 s · AP-LIT.CHR, AP-LIT.LAN] Look for: An evaluation using an explicit criterion and evidence.
   Answer guidance: A defensible line of argument: The second proposal succeeds because both have learned humility. Useful evidence: “My affections and wishes are unchanged, but one word from you will silence me on this subject forever” (Chapter LVIII, paragraph 7): Darcy's humility. On characterization: Darcy's second proposal; Elizabeth accepts; they explain their changes. Credit any position that is supported by quotation and reasoning; push one-sided answers to address the strongest counterpoint.
3. Rewrite one moment of “Chapter LVIII” from the point of view of a different character. What does the new angle reveal or hide about the second proposal? [DOK 4 · thinkPairShare · wait 8 s · AP-LIT.LAN, AP-LIT.NAR] Look for: A creative product with a rationale tied to the text.
   Answer guidance: A defensible line of argument: The second proposal succeeds because both have learned humility. Useful evidence: “I have been a selfish being all my life, in practice, though not in principle” (Chapter LVIII, paragraph 24): Darcy's self-knowledge. Theme link: both acknowledge their faults. Credit any position that is supported by quotation and reasoning; push one-sided answers to address the strongest counterpoint.
4. Write three questions of your own about “Chapter LVIII”: one recall, one “why/how”, and one “should/what if”. Trade with a partner and answer theirs. [DOK 3 · studentGenerated · wait 8 s · AP-LIT.LAN] Look for: Student-generated questions at three levels.
   Answer guidance: A defensible line of argument: The second proposal succeeds because both have learned humility. Useful evidence: “It taught me to hope” (Chapter LVIII, paragraph 10): Lady Catherine's report gave him hope. Theme link: both acknowledge their faults. Credit any position that is supported by quotation and reasoning; push one-sided answers to address the strongest counterpoint.
5. Connect this chapter to class and social mobility: is the link strong or weak so far? What would Austen need to show next to strengthen it? [DOK 4 · socraticCircle · wait 8 s · AP-LIT.LAN] Look for: A judgment of thematic development across the work.
   Answer guidance: A defensible line of argument: The second proposal succeeds because both have learned humility. Useful evidence: “My affections and wishes are unchanged, but one word from you will silence me on this subject forever” (Chapter LVIII, paragraph 7): Darcy's humility. Theme link: both acknowledge their faults. Credit any position that is supported by quotation and reasoning; push one-sided answers to address the strongest counterpoint.
6. Is the characterization in this chapter effective, or does it feel heavy-handed? Evaluate it as a reader would in a review. [DOK 3 · fourCorners · wait 8 s · AP-LIT.CHR, AP-LIT.LAN] Look for: An evaluative judgment with criteria and evidence.
   Answer guidance: A defensible line of argument: The second proposal succeeds because both have learned humility. Useful evidence: “I have been a selfish being all my life, in practice, though not in principle” (Chapter LVIII, paragraph 24): Darcy's self-knowledge. On characterization: Darcy's second proposal; Elizabeth accepts; they explain their changes. Credit any position that is supported by quotation and reasoning; push one-sided answers to address the strongest counterpoint.

7. Compare how “Chapter LVIII” treats the second proposal with how another text, film or event you know treats a similar idea. What does Pride and Prejudice see that the other misses? [DOK 4 · socraticCircle · wait 8 s · AP-LIT.LAN] Look for: A cross-text synthesis.

   Answer guidance: A defensible line of argument: The second proposal succeeds because both have learned humility. Useful evidence: “It taught me to hope” (Chapter LVIII, paragraph 10): Lady Catherine's report gave him hope. Theme link: both acknowledge their faults. Credit any position that is supported by quotation and reasoning; push one-sided answers to address the strongest counterpoint.

8. Predict what “Chapter LIX” will bring, using two clues from this chapter. After reading, evaluate your prediction. [DOK 3 · thinkPairShare · wait 8 s · AP-LIT.LAN, AP-LIT.STR] Look for: A prediction or judgment justified with textual clues.

   Answer guidance: A defensible line of argument: The second proposal succeeds because both have learned humility. Useful evidence: “My affections and wishes are unchanged, but one word from you will silence me on this subject forever” (Chapter LVIII, paragraph 7): Darcy's humility. Theme link: both acknowledge their faults. Credit any position that is supported by quotation and reasoning; push one-sided answers to address the strongest counterpoint.

9. Design a one-paragraph modern adaptation of this chapter (setting, characters, conflict). What must stay the same for it to still be about the second proposal? [DOK 4 · thinkPairShare · wait 8 s · AP-LIT.LAN] Look for: A creative transfer that keeps the core idea.

   Answer guidance: A defensible line of argument: The second proposal succeeds because both have learned humility. Useful evidence: “I have been a selfish being all my life, in practice, though not in principle” (Chapter LVIII, paragraph 24): Darcy's self-knowledge. Theme link: both acknowledge their faults. Credit any position that is supported by quotation and reasoning; push one-sided answers to address the strongest counterpoint.

10. What question would you most like to ask Jane Austen about this chapter, and what answer do you think the text itself gives? [DOK 4 · studentGenerated · wait 8 s · AP-LIT.LAN] Look for: A student-generated question answered from evidence.

    Answer guidance: A defensible line of argument: The second proposal succeeds because both have learned humility. Useful evidence: “It taught me to hope” (Chapter LVIII, paragraph 10): Lady Catherine's report gave him hope. Theme link: both acknowledge their faults. Credit any position that is supported by quotation and reasoning; push one-sided answers to address the strongest counterpoint.

Annotation focus

- Characterization: look for what characters say, do and think, and how others react to them (anchor passage in the We do segment)
- Also notice Theme: statements or moments that connect to the book's big ideas
- Also notice Plot: key events and the causes linking them

Chapter quiz: item bank (all eleven rigor versions)

1. [mc · recall · DOK 1] In the line “Bingley and Jane, however, soon allowed the others to outstrip them.”, what does “outstrip” most nearly mean?

   A. acting or arriving or performed exactly at the time appointed

   B. dull; lacking interest

   C. to get ahead of

   D. regularity; steadiness

   Key: C (to get ahead of)

2. [mc · recall · DOK 1] Which word completes this sentence from Chapter LVIII, paragraph 20? “There was one part _____, the opening of it, which I should dread your having the power of reading again.”

   A. especially

   B. yourself

   C. intentionally

   D. preservation

   Key: A (especially)

3. [mc · recall · DOK 1] How does Elizabeth respond to Darcy's second proposal?

   A. Accepts

   B. Asks for time

   C. Laughs

   D. Refuses

   Key: A (Accepts)

4. [fill · recall · DOK 1] Fill in the blank with the vocabulary word that fits: “For though your accusations were ill-founded, formed on mistaken _____, my behaviour to you at the time had merited the severest reproof.”
   Word bank: unexampled, outstrip, premises, retrospections
   Key: premises

5. [mc · recall · DOK 1] Which word completes this sentence from Chapter LVIII, paragraph 32? “How soon any other wishes _____ themselves I can hardly tell, but I believe in about half an hour after I had seen you.”

   A. intentionally

   B. exceedingly

   C. bitterness

   D. introduced

   Key: D (introduced)

6. [fill · recall · DOK 1] Complete the quotation from Chapter LVIII, paragraph 24: “I have been a selfish being all my life, in practice, though not in _____”
   Key: principle

7. [fill · recall · DOK 1] Complete the quotation from Chapter LVIII, paragraph 27: “My manners must have been in fault, but not _____ I assure you.” Word bank: intentionally, especially, occasion, introduced
   Key: intentionally

8. [fill · recall · DOK 1] Complete the quotation from Chapter LVIII, paragraph 7: “My _____ and wishes are unchanged, but one word from you will silence me on this subject forever”
   Key: affections
9. [fill · recall · DOK 1] Fill in the blank with the vocabulary word that fits: “I had _____ observed her during the two visits which I had lately made her here; and I was convinced of her affection.” Word bank: narrowly, unexampled, retrospections, outstrip
   Key: narrowly
10. [mc · recall · DOK 1] In the line “Your retrospections must be so totally void of reproach, that the contentment arising from them, is not of philosophy, but what is much better, of ignorance.”, what does “retrospections” most nearly mean?
    A. informed; told
    B. a storehouse for goods and merchandise
    C. thoughts about the past
    D. passages copied out of a book

    Key: C (thoughts about the past)
11. [short · inference · DOK 2] What does this passage from Chapter LVIII, paragraph 27 reveal about the character or situation? “I never meant to deceive you, but my spirits might often lead me wrong.” Answer in two or three sentences with one detail.
    Sample answer: The passage (Chapter LVIII, paragraph 27) shows the situation turning on first impressions and prejudice: both acknowledge their faults. The words “deceive” and “spirits” are the proof, because they show how the moment looks to the people in it. They suggest more than the narrator states outright.
12. [short · inference · DOK 2] What can you infer from this line? “My affections and wishes are unchanged, but one word from you will silence me on this subject forever” (Chapter LVIII, paragraph 7) Answer in two or three sentences with one detail.
    Sample answer: Darcy's humility. The evidence is “My affections and wishes are unchanged, but one word from you will silence me on this subject forever” (Chapter LVIII, paragraph 7). This develops pride and prejudice: both acknowledge their faults.
13. [short · inference · DOK 2] What does this passage from Chapter LVIII, paragraph 2 reveal about the character or situation? “Now was the moment for her resolution to be executed, and, while her courage was high, she immediately said—” Answer in two or three sentences with one detail.
    Sample answer: The passage (Chapter LVIII, paragraph 2) shows the situation turning on first impressions and prejudice: both acknowledge their faults. The words “immediately” and “resolution” are the proof, because they show how the moment looks to the people in it. They suggest more than the narrator states outright.
14. [short · analysis · DOK 3] Analyze how the word choice in this passage from Chapter LVIII, paragraph 40 shapes its tone: “I told him, moreover, that I believed myself mistaken in supposing, as I had done, that your sister was indifferent to him; and as I could easily perceive that his attachment to her was unabated, I felt no doubt of their happiness together.” Pick two words and explain their effect.
    Sample answer: The words “indifferent” and “attachment” (Chapter LVIII, paragraph 40) make the tone heavy and deliberate rather than neutral. That weight points the reader to pride and self-knowledge: both acknowledge their faults. The author chooses them so the moment feels significant instead of passing.
15. [short · analysis · DOK 3] Analyze how the word choice in this passage from Chapter LVIII, paragraph 6 shapes its tone: “That the wish of giving happiness to you might add force to the other inducements which led me on, I shall not attempt to deny." Pick two words and explain their effect.

Sample answer: The words "inducements" and "happiness" (Chapter LVIII, paragraph 6) make the tone heavy and deliberate rather than neutral. That weight points the reader to class and social mobility: both acknowledge their faults. The author chooses them so the moment feels significant instead of passing.

16. [short · synthesis · DOK 4] Connect this passage from Chapter LVIII, paragraph 16 to the story's treatment of women's limited choices: "You thought me then devoid of every proper feeling, I am sure you did." Use one other moment from the story as well.

    Sample answer: This passage (Chapter LVIII, paragraph 16) develops women's limited choices: both acknowledge their faults. Its words "thought" and "feeling" carry that idea into this moment. The same concern returns in "Did it,' said he, 'did it soon make you think better of me?" (Chapter LVIII, paragraph 18), so the two passages read as a pattern, not a single moment. Together they show the story treating women's limited choices as central.

17. [mc · recall · DOK 1] What does Elizabeth thank Darcy for?

    A. Leaving
    B. Showing her Pemberley
    C. His letter
    D. Helping Lydia

    Key: D (Helping Lydia)

18. [mc · recall · DOK 1] In the line "I can no longer help thanking you for your unexampled kindness to my poor sister.", what does "unexampled" most nearly mean?

    A. make unwilling
    B. asking; appealing (to someone)
    C. frightening; alarming
    D. never seen before; unequaled

    Key: D (never seen before; unequaled)

19. [fill · recall · DOK 1] Complete the quotation from Chapter LVIII, paragraph 2: "They walked towards the Lucases, because Kitty wished to call upon Maria; and as Elizabeth saw no _____ for making it a general concern, when Kitty left them, she went boldly on with him alone." Word bank: occasion, exceedingly, countenance, attention

    Key: occasion

20. [mc · recall · DOK 1] In the line "'We will not quarrel for the greater share of blame annexed to that evening,' said Elizabeth.", what does "annexed" most nearly mean?

    A. an entrance hall
    B. attached
    C. getting involved in other people's affairs
    D. an event that happens

    Key: B (attached)

21. [mc · recall · DOK 1] What does Darcy do?

    A. Renews his proposal
    B. Says goodbye forever
    C. Leaves for London
    D. Insults her family

Key: A (Renews his proposal)

22. [mc · recall · DOK 1] What do they admit?

    A. He was proud, she was prejudiced

    B. They do not care

    C. They are poor

    D. They should never have met

    Key: A (He was proud, she was prejudiced)

23. [fill · recall · DOK 1] Complete the quotation from Chapter LVIII, paragraph 15: “I had not the _____ idea of their being ever felt in such a way.” Word bank: preservation, thoughtlessness, smallest, prejudices

    Key: smallest

24. [short · analysis · DOK 3] Analyze how the word choice in this passage from Chapter LVIII, paragraph 32 shapes its tone: “My object then,’ replied Darcy, ‘was to show you, by every civility in my power, that I was not so mean as to resent the past; and I hoped to obtain your forgiveness, to lessen your ill opinion, by letting you see that your reproofs had…” Pick two words and explain their effect.

    Sample answer: The words “forgiveness” and “reproofs” (Chapter LVIII, paragraph 32) make the tone heavy and deliberate rather than neutral. That weight points the reader to class and social mobility: both acknowledge their faults. The author chooses them so the moment feels significant instead of passing.

25. [short · analysis · DOK 3] Analyze the word choice in “It taught me to hope” (Chapter LVIII, paragraph 10). Pick two words and explain what they suggest.

    Sample answer: Lady Catherine's report gave him hope. The evidence is “It taught me to hope” (Chapter LVIII, paragraph 10). This develops pride and prejudice: both acknowledge their faults. The words “taught” and “hope” carry that meaning: they are the charged choices in the line, and changing either would soften the effect.

26. [mc · analysis · DOK 3] Which literary element does this describe in “Chapter LVIII”? Darcy admits he was ‘a selfish being all my life.’

    A. Theme

    B. Diction / vocabulary

    C. Structure

    D. Dialogue

    Key: D (Dialogue)

27. [short · synthesis · DOK 4] Synthesis: trace how pride and prejudice develops from Chapter LIV to Chapter LVIII. Use one quotation from each.

    Sample answer: Earlier, in Chapter LIV, paragraph 4, the text reads “If he fears me, why come hither? If he no longer cares for me, why silent? Teasing, teasing, man” — Elizabeth's frustration in a series of questions. In Chapter LVIII, “My affections and wishes are unchanged, but one word from you will silence me on this subject forever” (Chapter LVIII, paragraph 7) — Darcy's humility. Both acknowledge their faults.

28. [fill · recall · DOK 1] Fill in the blank with the vocabulary word that fits: “After walking several miles in a leisurely manner, and too busy to know anything about it, they found at last, on examining their _____, that it was time to be at home.” Word bank: unexampled, outstrip, watches, retrospections

    Key: watches

29. [mc · recall · DOK 1] Which word completes this sentence from Chapter LVIII, paragraph 6? “If you will thank me,’ he replied, ‘let it be for _____ alone.”

    A. thoughtlessness

B. especially

C. yourself

D. countenance

Key: C (yourself)

30. [mc · inference · DOK 2] Which choice best states a central concern of “Chapter LVIII”?

A. The second proposal

B. Scandal

C. A ridiculous proposal

D. Sisters and judgment

Key: A (The second proposal)

31. [short · synthesis · DOK 4] Connect this passage from Chapter LVIII, paragraph 20 to the story's treatment of marriage and money: “I knew,’ said he, ‘that what I wrote must give you pain, but it was necessary.” Use one other moment from the story as well.

Sample answer: This passage (Chapter LVIII, paragraph 20) develops marriage and money: both acknowledge their faults. Its words “necessary” carry that idea into this moment. The same concern returns in “When I wrote that letter,’ replied Darcy, ‘I believed myself perfectly calm and cool, but I am since convinced that it…” (Chapter LVIII, paragraph 22), so the two passages read as a pattern, not a single moment. Together they show the story treating marriage and money as central.

32. [short · analysis · DOK 3 · AP: AP-LIT.FIG] Analyze how the word choice in this passage from Chapter LVIII, paragraph 8 shapes its tone: “The happiness which this reply produced was such as he had probably never felt before; and he expressed himself on the occasion as sensibly and as warmly as a man violently in love can be supposed to do.” Pick two words and explain their effect.

Sample answer: The words “happiness” and “expressed” (Chapter LVIII, paragraph 8) make the tone heavy and deliberate rather than neutral. That weight points the reader to pride and self-knowledge: both acknowledge their faults. The author chooses them so the moment feels significant instead of passing.

33. [short · synthesis · DOK 4 · AP: AP-LIT.LAN] Connect this passage from Chapter LVIII, paragraph 45 to the story's treatment of women's limited choices: “But his anger, I am persuaded, lasted no longer than he remained in any doubt of your sister’s sentiments.” Use one other moment from the story as well.

Sample answer: This passage (Chapter LVIII, paragraph 45) develops women's limited choices: both acknowledge their faults. Its words “sentiments” and “persuaded” carry that idea into this moment. The same concern returns in “I was obliged to confess one thing, which for a time, and not unjustly, offended him.” (Chapter LVIII, paragraph 45), so the two passages read as a pattern, not a single moment. Together they show the story treating women's limited choices as central.

34. [fill · recall · DOK 1 · AP: AP-LIT.FIG] Fill in the blank with the vocabulary word that fits: “After _____ you so abominably to your face, I could have no scruple in abusing you to all your relations.” Word bank: retrospections, unexampled, outstrip, abusing

Key: abusing

35. [mc · inference · DOK 2 · AP: AP-LIT.LAN] What does this passage most clearly show? “It taught me to hope” (Chapter LVIII, paragraph 10)

A. Mary's distinction; useful for the title.

B. Lady Catherine's report gave him hope.

C. Mrs. Gardiner's hint about love.

D. Charlotte's cynical realism, foreshadowing her choice.

Key: B (Lady Catherine's report gave him hope.)

36. [mc · analysis · DOK 3 · AP: AP-LIT.CHR] Which literary element does this describe in “Chapter LVIII”? Darcy's second proposal; Elizabeth accepts; they explain their changes.

    A. Symbolism

    B. Characterization

    C. Allusion

    D. Simile

    Key: B (Characterization)

37. [short · synthesis · DOK 4 · Dual Credit (Indiana College Core): ICC-WC-1.5] Close reading: how do the diction and syntax of “My affections and wishes are unchanged, but one word from you will silence me on this subject forever” (Chapter LVIII, paragraph 7) shape its meaning? Consider a second, competing reading.

    Sample answer: Darcy's humility. The evidence is “My affections and wishes are unchanged, but one word from you will silence me on this subject forever” (Chapter LVIII, paragraph 7). This develops pride and prejudice: both acknowledge their faults. The words “affections” and “unchanged” carry that meaning: they are the charged choices in the line, and changing either would soften the effect. Darcy says "my affections and wishes are unchanged, but one word from you will silence me," and admits "I have been a selfish being all my life.".

38. [short · inference · DOK 2 · Program outcome: LeL-C4-LIT-1] What can you infer from this line? “I have been a selfish being all my life, in practice, though not in principle” (Chapter LVIII, paragraph 24) Answer in two or three sentences with one detail.

    Sample answer: Darcy's self-knowledge. The evidence is “I have been a selfish being all my life, in practice, though not in principle” (Chapter LVIII, paragraph 24). This develops pride and prejudice: both acknowledge their faults.

39. [mc · recall · DOK 1 · Program outcome: LeL-GR-LIT-1] What gave Darcy hope?

    A. Lydia's slip

    B. Bingley's advice

    C. Lady Catherine's report of Elizabeth's refusal to promise

    D. A letter from Jane

    Key: C (Lady Catherine's report of Elizabeth's refusal to promise)

Rigor version	Items (in order)	Mix
Scaffolded support	1, 2, 3, 4, 5, 6, 7, 8, 9, 10, 11, 12, 13, 14, 15, 16	recall 10, inference 3, analysis 2, synthesis 1
HS Freshman	17, 7, 18, 19, 10, 20, 21, 22, 3, 23, 13, 11, 24, 25, 26, 27	recall 10, inference 2, analysis 3, synthesis 1
HS Sophomore	1, 4, 28, 2, 3, 23, 29, 7, 11, 30, 13, 25, 24, 14, 31, 27	recall 8, inference 3, analysis 3, synthesis 2
HS Junior	4, 8, 20, 5, 18, 7, 23, 19, 13, 11, 25, 32, 26, 15, 33, 16	recall 8, inference 2, analysis 4, synthesis 2
HS Senior	1, 22, 8, 2, 34, 29, 12, 11, 13, 24, 25, 26, 32, 16, 31, 33	recall 6, inference 3, analysis 4, synthesis 3
AP	18, 17, 9, 34, 35, 13, 11, 24, 15, 32, 36, 14, 27, 31, 16, 33	recall 4, inference 3, analysis 5, synthesis 4
College Freshman	3, 1, 4, 9, 17, 24, 26, 15, 25, 32, 14, 16, 27, 37, 31, 33	recall 5, inference 0, analysis 6, synthesis 5

College Sophomore	22, 28, 9, 17, 21, 14, 24, 26, 25, 32, 15, 27, 37, 31, 33, 16	recall 5, inference 0, analysis 6, synthesis 5
College Junior	9, 18, 34, 21, 35, 13, 12, 15, 24, 32, 36, 14, 31, 16, 27, 33	recall 4, inference 3, analysis 5, synthesis 4
College Senior	34, 17, 21, 28, 35, 38, 30, 12, 15, 14, 32, 24, 16, 27, 31, 33	recall 4, inference 4, analysis 4, synthesis 4
Graduate / PhD	39, 9, 34, 17, 29, 11, 13, 14, 32, 15, 36, 24, 16, 33, 31, 27	recall 5, inference 2, analysis 5, synthesis 4

Writing prompts (eleven rigor levels)

Scaffolded support (250 words; AP: see unit standards): Supported track (work from the passage your teacher selects). In “Chapter LVIII,” how does Austen show the second proposal? Write a paragraph that states your claim, quotes two details from the passage, and explains how each detail supports your idea. Use the characterization you noticed as one piece of evidence.

HS Freshman (350 words; AP: see unit standards): In Chapter LVIII, how does Austen develop the idea of the second proposal? State a clear claim, support it with two or three quotations, and explain how the characterization in the chapter helps build that idea.

HS Sophomore (450 words; AP: see unit standards): Analyze how Chapter LVIII develops the idea of the second proposal. Make a precise claim, support it with at least three pieces of textual evidence, and explain how the author's use of characterization and theme shapes that idea. Address one possible counterclaim.

HS Junior (550 words; AP: see unit standards): Analyze how the structure of Chapter LVIII (where it begins, turns and ends) and its characterization shape the reader's understanding of the second proposal. Identify one place where the text leaves matters uncertain and explain how that uncertainty adds to its meaning.

HS Senior (600 words; AP: see unit standards): Two readers disagree about what Chapter LVIII suggests about the second proposal. Lay out two plausible interpretations, weigh the evidence for each (including the chapter's characterization and theme), and argue for the stronger one in a sustained, well-organized essay.

AP (650 words; AP: AP-LIT.CHR, AP-LIT.LAN): Write a literary argument in which you analyze how Jane Austen uses characterization in Chapter LVIII to complicate the reader's understanding of the second proposal. Develop a defensible thesis, select evidence purposefully, and explain how specific choices of diction and syntax create meaning.

College Freshman (1000 words; AP: see unit standards): Situate Chapter LVIII within its historical and literary context and argue how the chapter's treatment of the second proposal responds to that context. Engage with at least one secondary perspective (a critic, historian or the author's own statements), integrate quotations smoothly, and cite in MLA style.

College Sophomore (1250 words; AP: see unit standards): Read Chapter LVIII alongside the conventions of its genre and period. Argue how the chapter's handling of the second proposal follows or bends those conventions, using the characterization as evidence, and test your reading against one published critic. Document two secondary sources in MLA.

College Junior (1500 words; AP: see unit standards): Apply a named critical approach (for example formalist, historicist, feminist, psychoanalytic or ecocritical) to Chapter LVIII and its treatment of the second proposal. State your method, show what it reveals in the chapter's characterization and theme, and identify where the text resists it.

College Senior (2000 words; AP: see unit standards): Develop a research argument that reads Chapter LVIII as evidence for a larger claim about the second proposal in Pride and Prejudice. Connect close reading of the chapter to the whole novel, engage at least four scholarly sources, and state precisely where your reading departs from theirs (Chicago style).

Graduate / PhD (2500 words; AP: see unit standards): Develop an original argument that reads Chapter LVIII as a hinge in the novel's larger treatment of the second proposal. Position your reading within a named critical conversation (for example formalist, historicist, psychoanalytic, feminist or postcolonial approaches), account for the textual history where relevant, and articulate the stakes of your intervention for scholarship on Pride and Prejudice.

SAT-style questions

1. I can no longer help thanking you for your unexampled kindness to my poor sister.

   As used in the text, what does the word “unexampled” most nearly mean?

   A. never seen before; unequaled

   B. ideas an argument or judgment rests on

   C. a small portable timepiece

   D. treat badly

2. “Mr. Darcy, I am a very selfish creature; and, for the sake of giving relief to my own feelings, care not how much I may be wounding yours. I can no longer help thanking you for your unexampled kindness to my poor sister. Ever since I have known it, I have been most anxious to acknowledge to you how gratefully I feel it. Were it known to the rest of my family, I should not have merely my own gratitude to express.”

   Which choice best states a central concern of “Chapter LVIII”?

   A. The first proposal

   B. First impressions at the ball

   C. Happiness for Jane

   D. The second proposal

SAT key: 1. A (never seen before; unequaled); 2. D (The second proposal)

Lesson 60: Chapter LIX

Focus: confiding and consent

Objective: Students will analyze how characterization develops in "Chapter LIX" by writing a claim-evidence-reasoning paragraph that cites at least 2 quotations from the section, and will score at least 80% on the section quiz.

Standards: AP: see the unit standards

Teacher only · spoilers

Elizabeth tells Jane, who is astonished; Elizabeth jokes she began to love Darcy on seeing Pemberley's grounds. Darcy asks Mr. Bennet's consent; Mr. Bennet questions Elizabeth seriously, fearing she might marry without respect. She explains Darcy's goodness and his role in Lydia's marriage. Mrs. Bennet is dazzled by his wealth.

Background: A father's consent was legally and socially central.

Significance: Mr. Bennet finally acts like a caring father.

Lesson plan and lecture script (90 minutes)

0–8 min · Bell-ringer · You do (8 min)
Students write to the bell-ringer, then pair-share.
Why does Mr. Bennet worry about Elizabeth? Write for five minutes. Starters: I think... because... / This connects to marriage and money because....
Prompt: Why does Mr. Bennet worry about Elizabeth?
Sentence starters: I think… because… · This connects to marriage and money because…
Strong response: A strong response takes a position and anticipates this: Mr. Bennet warns against an unequal marriage.

8–18 min · Vocabulary with etymology notes · I do (10 min)
Two key words in context, with verified word histories.
Today's words: overflows — spills over; epithet — a descriptive name or title. "overflows": Origin of "overflow": an English formation from over- + flow.
Words: overflows: spills over · epithet: a descriptive name or title

18–28 min · Background and context · I do (10 min)
Mini-lecture (read or adapt the script).
A father's consent was legally and socially central. Mr. Bennet finally acts like a caring father. Characterization: Elizabeth tells Jane and her father; Mr. Bennet worries she does not love Darcy. Dialogue: Father and daughter's most serious talk. Watch for silence and reserve: What characters leave unsaid (Darcy's reserve, Jane's composure, Elizabeth's secrets) drives misunderstanding. In this chapter: "extraordinary. The acknowledged lovers talked and laughed, the unacknowledged were silent. Darcy was not of a disposition in which happiness overflows in" (Chapter LIX, paragraph 2).

28–40 min · I do: modeled close reading · I do (12 min)
Model the close reading of the anchor quotation using the written think-aloud below.
First, meaning. I read "I could not have parted with you, my Lizzy, to anyone less worthy" slowly and put it in my own words: Mr. Bennet tells Elizabeth he could not have parted with her to anyone less worthy. Next, craft. I notice his tenderness, rare for a man who usually jokes. The strongest word is "worthy": it shows his approval after learning the truth. Then, effect. What does Mr. Bennet's approval mean? My answer: Mr. Bennet's approval means he now accepts Darcy, once he knows Darcy's character and his help to Lydia; his blessing shows how much he values Elizabeth's happiness.

> I could not have parted with you, my Lizzy, to anyone less worthy (Chapter LIX, paragraph 37)

Think-aloud: First, meaning. I read "I could not have parted with you, my Lizzy, to anyone less worthy" slowly and put it in my own words: Mr. Bennet tells Elizabeth he could not have parted with her to anyone less worthy. Next, craft. I notice his tenderness, rare for a man who usually jokes. The strongest word is "worthy": it shows his approval after learning the truth. Then, effect. What does Mr. Bennet's approval mean? My answer: Mr. Bennet's approval means he now accepts Darcy, once he knows Darcy's character and his help to Lydia; his blessing shows how much he values Elizabeth's happiness.

40–55 min · We do: guided annotation · We do (15 min)
Guided analysis of a second quotation; expected answers given.
Ask: What words in this line stand out, and what do they suggest? Expected: "Esteemed" means respected; he married without esteem and knows the cost. This links marriage to the book's argument about judgment. Ask: How does this line connect to marriage and money? Expected: Mr. Bennet warns against an unequal marriage. (Mr. Bennet's serious warning, drawn from his own marriage.)

> I know that you could be neither happy nor respectable, unless you truly esteemed your husband (Chapter LIX, paragraph 35)

Ask: What words in this line stand out, and what do they suggest?
Expected answer: "Esteemed" means respected; he married without esteem and knows the cost. This links marriage to the book's argument about judgment.
Ask: How does this line connect to marriage and money?
Expected answer: Mr. Bennet warns against an unequal marriage. (Mr. Bennet's serious warning, drawn from his own marriage.)

55–70 min · You do: independent annotation · You do (15 min)
Independent annotation and a claim-evidence-reasoning paragraph (exemplar given).
Annotate the chapter for characterization, dialogue (three marks with a margin note each), then write one claim-evidence-reasoning paragraph: what does this chapter suggest about confiding and consent? Then start your writing prompt at your assigned level (HS Sophomore: Analyze how Chapter LIX develops the idea of confiding and consent. Make a precise claim, support it with at least three pieces of textual evidence, and explain how the author's use of characterization and plot shapes that idea. Address one possible counterclaim.) Exemplar: Mr. Bennet's blessing shows that he has learned from his own unhappy marriage. When the text says "I know that you could be neither happy nor respectable, unless you truly esteemed your husband" (Chapter LIX, paragraph 35), it shows this directly. He warns that she "could be neither happy nor respectable, unless you truly esteemed your husband," and, once convinced, says "I could not have parted with you, my Lizzy, to anyone less worthy."
Task: Annotate the chapter for characterization, dialogue (three marks with a margin note each), then write one claim-evidence-reasoning paragraph: what does this chapter suggest about confiding and consent? Then start your writing prompt at your assigned level (HS Sophomore: Analyze how Chapter LIX develops the idea of confiding and consent. Make a precise claim, support it with at least three pieces of textual evidence, and explain how the author's use of characterization and plot shapes that idea. Address one possible counterclaim.)
Exemplar: Mr. Bennet's blessing shows that he has learned from his own unhappy marriage. When the text says "I know that you could be neither happy nor respectable, unless you truly esteemed your husband" (Chapter LIX, paragraph 35), it shows this directly. He warns that she "could be neither happy nor respectable, unless you truly esteemed your husband," and, once convinced, says "I could not have parted with you, my Lizzy, to anyone less worthy."

70–80 min · Discussion · We do (10 min)
Structured discussion from the 30 tiered questions, with facilitation notes.
Anchor question: Why does Mr. Bennet worry about Elizabeth? Ask: why does Mr. Bennet's warning carry special weight? Recall Chapter XLII.
Anchor question: Why does Mr. Bennet worry about Elizabeth?
Facilitation: Ask: why does Mr. Bennet's warning carry special weight? Recall Chapter XLII.

80–87 min · Exit ticket / chapter quiz · You do (7 min)
Chapter quiz in the app and an exit ticket (answer given).
Chapter quiz in the app, then: In one sentence, what does this chapter suggest about confiding and consent? Support it with one short quotation. Model answer: Mr. Bennet's blessing shows that he has learned from his own unhappy marriage. ("I know that you could be neither happy nor respectable, unless you truly esteemed your husband", Chapter LIX, paragraph 35). Accept any defensible claim backed by a quotation from the chapter; the answer key for the quiz is in the Quiz section.
Exit ticket: In one sentence, what does this chapter suggest about confiding and consent? Support it with one short quotation.
Answer: Model answer: Mr. Bennet's blessing shows that he has learned from his own unhappy marriage. ("I know that you could be neither happy nor respectable, unless you truly esteemed your husband", Chapter LIX, paragraph 35). Accept any defensible claim backed by a quotation from the chapter; the answer key for the quiz is in the Quiz section.

> 87–90 min · Closure · I do (3 min)
> Summarize the lesson and preview the next reading.
> Today we saw how characterization shapes confiding and consent. Key takeaway: Mr. Bennet warns against an unequal marriage.

Total: 90 minutes.

Teacher analysis (spoilers)

Literary elements

- Characterization: Elizabeth tells Jane and her father; Mr. Bennet worries she does not love Darcy.
- Dialogue: Father and daughter's most serious talk.

Themes and how they develop

- marriage and money: Mr. Bennet warns against an unequal marriage.

Symbols and motifs

- silence and reserve: What characters leave unsaid (Darcy's reserve, Jane's composure, Elizabeth's secrets) drives misunderstanding. In this chapter: “extraordinary. The acknowledged lovers talked and laughed, the unacknowledged were silent. Darcy was not of a disposition in which happiness overflows in” (Chapter LIX, paragraph 2).
- letters: Letters carry news, reveal character and change minds; Darcy's letter is the turning point of the novel. In this chapter: “embarrassment a few days before, on his reading Mr. Collins’s letter; and after laughing at her some time, allowed her at last” (Chapter LIX, paragraph 40).

Key quotations (checked against the reading text)

- “I could not have parted with you, my Lizzy, to anyone less worthy” (Chapter LIX, paragraph 37) Mr. Bennet's blessing.
- “My dear Lizzy, where can you have been walking to” (Chapter LIX, paragraph 1) Jane's question.
- “I know that you could be neither happy nor respectable, unless you truly esteemed your husband” (Chapter LIX, paragraph 35) Mr. Bennet's serious warning, drawn from his own marriage.

Model claim-evidence-reasoning

Claim: Mr. Bennet's blessing shows that he has learned from his own unhappy marriage.
Evidence: “I know that you could be neither happy nor respectable, unless you truly esteemed your husband” (Chapter LIX, paragraph 35)
Reasoning: He warns that she "could be neither happy nor respectable, unless you truly esteemed your husband," and, once convinced, says "I could not have parted with you, my Lizzy, to anyone less worthy."

Vocabulary with etymology notes

Word		In context	Word history

	Definition (in this sentence)
overflows (verb)	spills over	Darcy was not of a disposition in which happiness overflows in mirth; and Elizabeth, agitated and confused, rather knew that she was happy, than felt herself to be so; for, besides the immediate embarrassment, there were other evils before her.	"overflows": Origin of "overflow": an English formation from over- + flow. (Liber et Libri origin note, https://en.wiktionary.org/wiki/overflow#Etymology)
epithet (noun)	a descriptive name or title	Elizabeth could hardly help laughing at so convenient a proposal; yet was really vexed that her mother should be always giving him such an epithet.

Discussion questions

1. Why does Mr. Bennet worry about Elizabeth?
2. Where does characterization appear in this chapter, and what effect does it have? Point to one passage.
3. How does this chapter connect to the book's larger concern with class and social mobility?

Classroom discussion questions (30, tiered)

Wait time after every question (3 s for DOK 1, 5 s for DOK 2, 8 to 10 s for DOK 3 and 4); think-pair-share on DOK 3 and 4; answer each response with a follow-up probe; close with student-generated questions. Focus sets by rigor level: Scaffolded support: 1, 2, 3, 4, 5, 6, 11, 12, 13, 14, 21, 22; HS Freshman: 1, 2, 3, 4, 5, 12, 13, 14, 15, 22, 23, 24; HS Sophomore: 1, 2, 3, 4, 13, 14, 15, 16, 17, 23, 24, 25; HS Junior: 1, 2, 3, 14, 15, 16, 17, 18, 24, 25, 26, 27; HS Senior: 1, 2, 3, 15, 16, 17, 18, 25, 26, 27, 28, 29; AP: 1, 2, 16, 17, 18, 19, 20, 26, 27, 28, 29, 30; College Freshman: 1, 2, 17, 18, 19, 20, 21, 22, 27, 28, 29, 30; College Sophomore: 1, 2, 11, 18, 19, 20, 21, 22, 23, 28, 29, 30; College Junior: 1, 11, 12, 19, 20, 21, 22, 23, 24, 25, 29, 30; College Senior: 1, 11, 12, 13, 20, 21, 22, 23, 24, 25, 26, 30; Graduate / PhD: 1, 11, 12, 13, 21, 22, 23, 24, 25, 26, 27, 28

Literal / recall

1. Whom does Elizabeth tell first about her engagement? [DOK 1 · coldCallWithSupport · wait 3 s · AP: unit standards] Look for: Jane
2. How does Jane react to Elizabeth's news? [DOK 1 · turnAndTalk · wait 3 s · AP: unit standards] Look for: Astonished
3. Whom does Darcy ask for consent? [DOK 1 · coldCallWithSupport · wait 3 s · AP: unit standards] Look for: Mr. Bennet
4. What does Mr. Bennet fear? [DOK 1 · turnAndTalk · wait 3 s · AP: unit standards] Look for: She will marry without respect
5. How does Mrs. Bennet react to the engagement to Darcy? [DOK 1 · coldCallWithSupport · wait 3 s · AP: unit standards] Look for: Dazzled by his wealth
6. Retell the three most important events of "Chapter LIX" in order, in one sentence each. [DOK 1 · turnAndTalk · wait 3 s · AP: unit standards] Look for: Elizabeth tells Jane, who is astonished; Elizabeth jokes she began to love Darcy on seeing Pemberley's grounds. Darcy asks Mr. Bennet's consent; Mr. Bennet questions Elizabeth seriously, fearing she might marry without respect. She explains Darcy's goodness and his role in Lydia's marriage. Mrs. Bennet is dazzled by his wealth.

7. Which characters appear or are mentioned in “Chapter LIX”? Name two and one thing each says or does. [DOK 1 · coldCallWithSupport · wait 3 s · AP: unit standards] Look for: Names and actions taken from the chapter; check against the teacher summary.
8. Where and when does “Chapter LIX” take place? Point to the line that tells you. [DOK 1 · turnAndTalk · wait 3 s · AP: unit standards] Look for: A place/time detail quoted from the chapter.
9. Reread: “Darcy was not of a disposition in which happiness overflows in mirth; and Elizabeth, agitated and confused, rather knew that she was happy, than felt herself to be so; for, besides the immediate embarrassment, there…” What does “overflows” mean here, and what is literally happening in this line? [DOK 1 · turnAndTalk · wait 3 s · AP: unit standards] Look for: overflows: spills over.
10. Reread: “Elizabeth could hardly help laughing at so convenient a proposal; yet was really vexed that her mother should be always giving him such an epithet.” What does “epithet” mean here, and what is literally happening in this line? [DOK 1 · turnAndTalk · wait 3 s · AP: unit standards] Look for: epithet: a descriptive name or title.

Inferential / analytical

1. What does “Chapter LIX” suggest about confiding and consent? State the inference and the line that supports it. [DOK 2 · thinkPairShare · wait 5 s · AP-LIT.LAN] Look for: Mr. Bennet finally acts like a caring father.
2. Find one example of characterization in this chapter. What does it reveal that a plain statement would not? [DOK 2 · followUp · wait 5 s · AP-LIT.CHR] Look for: Look for what characters say, do and think, and how others react to them.
3. How does the plot in this chapter shape what we understand about confiding and consent? [DOK 3 · thinkPairShare · wait 8 s · AP-LIT.STR] Look for: Look for key events and the causes linking them.
   Answer guidance: A defensible line of argument: Mr. Bennet's blessing shows that he has learned from his own unhappy marriage. Useful evidence: “I could not have parted with you, my Lizzy, to anyone less worthy” (Chapter LIX, paragraph 37): Mr. Bennet's blessing. Theme link: Mr. Bennet warns against an unequal marriage. Credit any position that is supported by quotation and reasoning; push one-sided answers to address the strongest counterpoint.
4. In the passage that begins “The evening passed quietly, unmarked by anything extraordinary.”, why might Austen have chosen these particular words? Pick two and explain their connotations. [DOK 2 · followUp · wait 5 s · AP-LIT.FIG] Look for: Diction analysis of two words in the anchor passage.
5. What causes the main turn in “Chapter LIX”, and what effect is it likely to have on what follows? [DOK 2 · followUp · wait 5 s · AP-LIT.STR] Look for: Elizabeth tells Jane, who is astonished; Elizabeth jokes she began to love Darcy on seeing Pemberley's grounds. Darcy asks Mr. Bennet's consent; Mr. Bennet questions Elizabeth seriously, fearing she might marry without respect. She explains Darcy's goodness and his role in Lydia's marriage. Mrs.…
6. How does “Chapter LIX” build on “Chapter LVIII”? Name one link of cause and effect. [DOK 3 · thinkPairShare · wait 8 s · AP-LIT.STR] Look for: A causal or structural link between this and the previous chapter.
   Answer guidance: A defensible line of argument: Mr. Bennet's blessing shows that he has learned from his own unhappy marriage. Useful evidence: “My dear Lizzy, where can you have been walking to” (Chapter LIX, paragraph 1): Jane's question. Theme link: Mr. Bennet warns against an unequal marriage. Credit any position that is supported by quotation and reasoning; push one-sided answers to address the strongest counterpoint.
7. What can we infer about a character's motives from what they say and do here, as opposed to what they claim? [DOK 3 · followUp · wait 8 s · AP-LIT.CHR] Look for: An inference about motive supported by a quoted line.

Answer guidance: A defensible line of argument: Mr. Bennet's blessing shows that he has learned from his own unhappy marriage. Useful evidence: “I know that you could be neither happy nor respectable, unless you truly esteemed your husband” (Chapter LIX, paragraph 35): Mr. Bennet's serious warning, drawn from his own marriage. On characterization: Elizabeth tells Jane and her father; Mr. Bennet worries she does not love Darcy. Credit any position that is supported by quotation and reasoning; push one-sided answers to address the strongest counterpoint.

8. The bell-ringer asked: “Why does Mr. Bennet worry about Elizabeth?” Now that we have read closely, how would you revise your first answer, and which line changed your mind? [DOK 2 · thinkPairShare · wait 5 s · AP-LIT.LAN] Look for: A revised answer anchored in the text.
9. Where does irony appear, and how does it connect this chapter to the larger concern with class and social mobility? [DOK 3 · followUp · wait 8 s · AP-LIT.NAR] Look for: Look for gaps between what characters expect or say and what is true.

   Answer guidance: A defensible line of argument: Mr. Bennet's blessing shows that he has learned from his own unhappy marriage. Useful evidence: “I could not have parted with you, my Lizzy, to anyone less worthy” (Chapter LIX, paragraph 37): Mr. Bennet's blessing. Theme link: Mr. Bennet warns against an unequal marriage. Credit any position that is supported by quotation and reasoning; push one-sided answers to address the strongest counterpoint.
10. Background: A father's consent was legally and socially central. How does knowing this change the way you read one moment in the chapter? [DOK 3 · thinkPairShare · wait 8 s · AP-LIT.SET] Look for: A specific moment reread in light of the context.

    Answer guidance: A defensible line of argument: Mr. Bennet's blessing shows that he has learned from his own unhappy marriage. Useful evidence: “My dear Lizzy, where can you have been walking to” (Chapter LIX, paragraph 1): Jane's question. Theme link: Mr. Bennet warns against an unequal marriage. Credit any position that is supported by quotation and reasoning; push one-sided answers to address the strongest counterpoint.

Evaluative / synthesis / creative

1. A critic might argue: “Mr. Bennet finally acts like a caring father.” How far do you agree? Take a stand and defend it with two lines from the chapter. [DOK 3 · fourCorners · wait 8 s · AP-LIT.LAN] Look for: A defended position with evidence and one counterpoint.

   Answer guidance: A defensible line of argument: Mr. Bennet's blessing shows that he has learned from his own unhappy marriage. Useful evidence: “I know that you could be neither happy nor respectable, unless you truly esteemed your husband” (Chapter LIX, paragraph 35): Mr. Bennet's serious warning, drawn from his own marriage. Theme link: Mr. Bennet warns against an unequal marriage. Credit any position that is supported by quotation and reasoning; push one-sided answers to address the strongest counterpoint.
2. Which character in this chapter acts most wisely, and which least? Judge them by a standard you name. [DOK 3 · thinkPairShare · wait 8 s · AP-LIT.CHR, AP-LIT.LAN] Look for: An evaluation using an explicit criterion and evidence.

   Answer guidance: A defensible line of argument: Mr. Bennet's blessing shows that he has learned from his own unhappy marriage. Useful evidence: “I could not have parted with you, my Lizzy, to anyone less worthy” (Chapter LIX, paragraph 37): Mr. Bennet's blessing. On characterization: Elizabeth tells Jane and her father; Mr. Bennet worries she does not love Darcy. Credit any position that is supported by quotation and reasoning; push one-sided answers to address the strongest counterpoint.

3. Rewrite one moment of “Chapter LIX” from the point of view of a different character. What does the new angle reveal or hide about confiding and consent? [DOK 4 · thinkPairShare · wait 8 s · AP-LIT.LAN, AP-LIT.NAR] Look for: A creative product with a rationale tied to the text.

   Answer guidance: A defensible line of argument: Mr. Bennet's blessing shows that he has learned from his own unhappy marriage. Useful evidence: “My dear Lizzy, where can you have been walking to” (Chapter LIX, paragraph 1): Jane's question. Theme link: Mr. Bennet warns against an unequal marriage. Credit any position that is supported by quotation and reasoning; push one-sided answers to address the strongest counterpoint.

4. Write three questions of your own about “Chapter LIX”: one recall, one “why/how”, and one “should/what if”. Trade with a partner and answer theirs. [DOK 3 · studentGenerated · wait 8 s · AP-LIT.LAN] Look for: Student-generated questions at three levels.

   Answer guidance: A defensible line of argument: Mr. Bennet's blessing shows that he has learned from his own unhappy marriage. Useful evidence: “I know that you could be neither happy nor respectable, unless you truly esteemed your husband” (Chapter LIX, paragraph 35): Mr. Bennet's serious warning, drawn from his own marriage. Theme link: Mr. Bennet warns against an unequal marriage. Credit any position that is supported by quotation and reasoning; push one-sided answers to address the strongest counterpoint.

5. Connect this chapter to women's limited choices: is the link strong or weak so far? What would Austen need to show next to strengthen it? [DOK 4 · socraticCircle · wait 8 s · AP-LIT.LAN] Look for: A judgment of thematic development across the work.

   Answer guidance: A defensible line of argument: Mr. Bennet's blessing shows that he has learned from his own unhappy marriage. Useful evidence: “I could not have parted with you, my Lizzy, to anyone less worthy” (Chapter LIX, paragraph 37): Mr. Bennet's blessing. Theme link: Mr. Bennet warns against an unequal marriage. Credit any position that is supported by quotation and reasoning; push one-sided answers to address the strongest counterpoint.

6. Is the characterization in this chapter effective, or does it feel heavy-handed? Evaluate it as a reader would in a review. [DOK 3 · fourCorners · wait 8 s · AP-LIT.CHR, AP-LIT.LAN] Look for: An evaluative judgment with criteria and evidence.

   Answer guidance: A defensible line of argument: Mr. Bennet's blessing shows that he has learned from his own unhappy marriage. Useful evidence: “My dear Lizzy, where can you have been walking to” (Chapter LIX, paragraph 1): Jane's question. On characterization: Elizabeth tells Jane and her father; Mr. Bennet worries she does not love Darcy. Credit any position that is supported by quotation and reasoning; push one-sided answers to address the strongest counterpoint.

7. Compare how “Chapter LIX” treats confiding and consent with how another text, film or event you know treats a similar idea. What does Pride and Prejudice see that the other misses? [DOK 4 · socraticCircle · wait 8 s · AP-LIT.LAN] Look for: A cross-text synthesis.

   Answer guidance: A defensible line of argument: Mr. Bennet's blessing shows that he has learned from his own unhappy marriage. Useful evidence: “I know that you could be neither happy nor respectable, unless you truly esteemed your husband” (Chapter LIX, paragraph 35): Mr. Bennet's serious warning, drawn from his own marriage. Theme link: Mr. Bennet warns against an unequal marriage. Credit any position that is supported by quotation and reasoning; push one-sided answers to address the strongest counterpoint.

8. Predict what “Chapter LX” will bring, using two clues from this chapter. After reading, evaluate your prediction. [DOK 3 · thinkPairShare · wait 8 s · AP-LIT.LAN, AP-LIT.STR] Look for: A prediction or judgment justified with textual clues.

   Answer guidance: A defensible line of argument: Mr. Bennet's blessing shows that he has learned from his own unhappy marriage. Useful evidence: “I could not have parted with you, my Lizzy, to anyone less worthy” (Chapter LIX, paragraph 37): Mr. Bennet's blessing. Theme link: Mr. Bennet warns against an unequal marriage. Credit any position that is supported by quotation and reasoning; push one-sided answers to address the strongest counterpoint.

9. Design a one-paragraph modern adaptation of this chapter (setting, characters, conflict). What must stay the same for it to still be about confiding and consent? [DOK 4 · thinkPairShare · wait 8 s · AP-LIT.LAN] Look for: A creative transfer that keeps the core idea.

   Answer guidance: A defensible line of argument: Mr. Bennet's blessing shows that he has learned from his own unhappy marriage. Useful evidence: “My dear Lizzy, where can you have been walking to” (Chapter LIX, paragraph 1): Jane's question. Theme link: Mr. Bennet warns against an unequal marriage. Credit any position that is supported by quotation and reasoning; push one-sided answers to address the strongest counterpoint.

10. What question would you most like to ask Jane Austen about this chapter, and what answer do you think the text itself gives? [DOK 4 · studentGenerated · wait 8 s · AP-LIT.LAN] Look for: A student-generated question answered from evidence.

    Answer guidance: A defensible line of argument: Mr. Bennet's blessing shows that he has learned from his own unhappy marriage. Useful evidence: “I know that you could be neither happy nor respectable, unless you truly esteemed your husband” (Chapter LIX, paragraph 35): Mr. Bennet's serious warning, drawn from his own marriage. Theme link: Mr. Bennet warns against an unequal marriage. Credit any position that is supported by quotation and reasoning; push one-sided answers to address the strongest counterpoint.

Annotation focus

- Characterization: look for what characters say, do and think, and how others react to them (anchor passage in the We do segment)
- Also notice Plot: key events and the causes linking them
- Also notice Irony: gaps between what characters expect or say and what is true

Chapter quiz: item bank (all eleven rigor versions)

1. [mc · recall · DOK 1] How does Mrs. Bennet react to the engagement to Darcy?

   A. Angry

   B. Calm

   C. Dazzled by his wealth

   D. Sad

   Key: C (Dazzled by his wealth)

2. [fill · recall · DOK 1] Fill in the blank with the vocabulary word that fits: “Elizabeth could hardly help laughing at so convenient a proposal; yet was really vexed that her mother should be always giving him such an _____.” Word bank: overflows, epithet

   Key: epithet

3. [fill · recall · DOK 1] Fill in the blank with the vocabulary word that fits: “Darcy was not of a disposition in which happiness _____ in mirth; and Elizabeth, agitated and confused, rather knew that she was happy, than felt herself to be so; for, besides the immediate embarrassment, there were other evils before her.” Word bank: epithet, overflows

   Key: overflows

4. [mc · recall · DOK 1] Whom does Elizabeth tell first about her engagement?

   A. Lydia

   B. Charlotte

   C. Mrs. Gardiner

   D. Jane

   Key: D (Jane)

5. [mc · recall · DOK 1] What does Mr. Bennet fear?

   A. She will marry without respect

   B. Lydia will object

   C. Darcy is poor

   D. She will move abroad

   Key: A (She will marry without respect)

6. [mc · recall · DOK 1] How does Jane react to Elizabeth's news?

   A. Tearful

   B. Angry

   C. Astonished

   D. Indifferent

   Key: C (Astonished)

7. [fill · recall · DOK 1] Complete the quotation from Chapter LIX, paragraph 35: “I know that you could be neither happy nor _____, unless you truly esteemed your husband”

   Key: respectable

8. [fill · recall · DOK 1] Complete the quotation from Chapter LIX, paragraph 37: “I could not have _____ with you, my Lizzy, to anyone less worthy”

   Key: parted

9. [mc · recall · DOK 1] Whom does Darcy ask for consent?

   A. Mr. Bennet

   B. Mrs. Bennet

   C. Jane

   D. Lady Catherine

   Key: A (Mr. Bennet)

10. [short · inference · DOK 2] What can you infer from this line? “My dear Lizzy, where can you have been walking to” (Chapter LIX, paragraph 1) Answer in two or three sentences with one detail.
    Sample answer: Jane's question. The evidence is “My dear Lizzy, where can you have been walking to” (Chapter LIX, paragraph 1). This develops marriage and money: Mr. Bennet warns against an unequal marriage.
11. [mc · inference · DOK 2] Which choice best states a central concern of “Chapter LIX”?
    A. Letters of judgment
    B. A journey and a mercenary suitor
    C. Confiding and consent
    D. Darcy at Rosings

    Key: C (Confiding and consent)
12. [mc · analysis · DOK 3] In this chapter, which theme does the following most directly develop? Mr. Bennet warns against an unequal marriage.
    A. First impressions and prejudice
    B. Pride and self-knowledge
    C. Class and social mobility
    D. Marriage and money

    Key: D (Marriage and money)
13. [mc · analysis · DOK 3] Which literary element does this describe in “Chapter LIX”? Elizabeth tells Jane and her father; Mr. Bennet worries she does not love Darcy.
    A. Imagery
    B. Characterization
    C. Metaphor
    D. Setting

    Key: B (Characterization)
14. [mc · analysis · DOK 3] Which literary element does this describe in “Chapter LIX”? Father and daughter's most serious talk.
    A. Conflict
    B. Simile
    C. Dialogue
    D. Metaphor

    Key: C (Dialogue)
15. [short · synthesis · DOK 4] Synthesis: trace how marriage and money develops from Chapter LV to Chapter LIX. Use one quotation from each.
    Sample answer: Earlier, in Chapter LV, paragraph 52, the text reads “I am certainly the most fortunate creature that ever existed” — Jane's joy. In Chapter LIX, “I could not have parted with you, my Lizzy, to anyone less worthy” (Chapter LIX, paragraph 37) — Mr. Bennet's blessing. Mr. Bennet warns against an unequal marriage.
16. [short · synthesis · DOK 4] Close reading: how do the diction and syntax of “I could not have parted with you, my Lizzy, to anyone less worthy” (Chapter LIX, paragraph 37) shape its meaning? Consider a second, competing reading.
    Sample answer: Mr. Bennet's blessing. The evidence is “I could not have parted with you, my Lizzy, to anyone less worthy”

(Chapter LIX, paragraph 37). This develops marriage and money: Mr. Bennet warns against an unequal marriage. The words “anyone” and “worthy” carry that meaning: they are the charged choices in the line, and changing either would soften the effect. He warns that she "could be neither happy nor respectable, unless you truly esteemed your husband," and, once convinced, says "I could not have parted with you, my Lizzy, to anyone less worthy.".

17. [short · inference · DOK 2] What can you infer from this line? “I could not have parted with you, my Lizzy, to anyone less worthy” (Chapter LIX, paragraph 37) Answer in two or three sentences with one detail.
Sample answer: Mr. Bennet's blessing. The evidence is “I could not have parted with you, my Lizzy, to anyone less worthy” (Chapter LIX, paragraph 37). This develops marriage and money: Mr. Bennet warns against an unequal marriage.

18. [mc · recall · DOK 1] Which word completes this sentence from Chapter LIX, paragraph 20? “I had no notion but he would go a shooting, or _____ or other, and not disturb us with his company.”

    A. upstairs
    B. something
    C. occasion
    D. assurances

    Key: B (something)

19. [fill · recall · DOK 1] Complete the quotation from Chapter LIX, paragraph 18: “How _____ did you tell me of what passed at Pemberley and Lambton!” Word bank: little, assurances, abhorrence, morning
Key: little

20. [fill · recall · DOK 1] Complete the quotation from Chapter LIX, paragraph 1: “My dear Lizzy, where can you have been _____ to”
Key: walking

21. [short · inference · DOK 2] What does this passage from Chapter LIX, paragraph 41 reveal about the character or situation? “Everything was too recent for gaiety, but the evening passed tranquilly away; there was no longer anything material to be dreaded, and the comfort of ease and familiarity would come in time.” Answer in two or three sentences with one detail.
Sample answer: The passage (Chapter LIX, paragraph 41) shows the situation turning on first impressions and prejudice: Mr. Bennet warns against an unequal marriage. The words “familiarity” and “tranquilly” are the proof, because they show how the moment looks to the people in it. They suggest more than the narrator states outright.

22. [mc · inference · DOK 2] Which of these passages comes earliest in Chapter LIX?

    A. “Though suspicion was very far from Miss Bennet’s general habits, she was absolutely incredulous here.”
    B. “Perhaps I did not always love him so well as I do now.”
    C. “My dear, dear Lizzy, I would—I do congratulate you—but are you certain? forgive the question—are you quite certain that you can be happy…”
    D. “My sole dependence was on you; and I am sure nobody else will believe me, if you do not.”

    Key: A (“Though suspicion was very far from Miss Bennet’s general habits, she was absolutely incredulous here.”)

23. [short · inference · DOK 2] What does this passage from Chapter LIX, paragraph 20 reveal about the character or situation? “What can he mean by being so tiresome as to be always coming here?” Answer in two or three sentences with one detail.
Sample answer: The passage (Chapter LIX, paragraph 20) shows the situation turning on first impressions and prejudice: Mr. Bennet warns against an unequal marriage. The words “tiresome” and “always” are the proof, because they show how the moment looks to the people in it. They suggest more than the narrator states outright.

24. [short · analysis · DOK 3] Analyze how the word choice in this passage from Chapter LIX, paragraph 27 shapes its tone: “During their walk, it was resolved that Mr. Bennet’s consent should be asked in the course of the evening.” Pick two words and explain their effect.
    Sample answer: The words “resolved” and “evening” (Chapter LIX, paragraph 27) make the tone heavy and deliberate rather than neutral. That weight points the reader to pride and self-knowledge: Mr. Bennet warns against an unequal marriage. The author chooses them so the moment feels significant instead of passing.
25. [short · analysis · DOK 3] Analyze how the word choice in this passage from Chapter LIX, paragraph 9 shapes its tone: “My dear, dear Lizzy, I would—I do congratulate you—but are you certain? forgive the question—are you quite certain that you can be happy with him?” Pick two words and explain their effect.
    Sample answer: The words “congratulate” and “question” (Chapter LIX, paragraph 9) make the tone heavy and deliberate rather than neutral. That weight points the reader to pride and self-knowledge: Mr. Bennet warns against an unequal marriage. The author chooses them so the moment feels significant instead of passing.
26. [short · synthesis · DOK 4] Connect this passage from Chapter LIX, paragraph 18 to the story's treatment of marriage and money: “Were it for nothing but his love of you, I must always have esteemed him; but now, as Bingley’s friend and your husband, there can be only Bingley and yourself more dear to me.” Use one other moment from the story as well.
    Sample answer: This passage (Chapter LIX, paragraph 18) develops marriage and money: Mr. Bennet warns against an unequal marriage. Its words “esteemed” and “yourself” carry that idea into this moment. The same concern returns in “But now she would no longer conceal from her his share in Lydia’s marriage.” (Chapter LIX, paragraph 19), so the two passages read as a pattern, not a single moment. Together they show the story treating marriage and money as central.
27. [fill · recall · DOK 1 · AP: AP-LIT.FIG] Complete the quotation from Chapter LIX, paragraph 25: “As she went _____ to get ready, Mrs. Bennet followed her, saying—” Word bank: upstairs, little, incredulous, abhorrence
    Key: upstairs
28. [short · analysis · DOK 3 · AP: AP-LIT.FIG] Analyze how the word choice in this passage from Chapter LIX, paragraph 44 shapes its tone: “But before she had been three minutes in her own room, her mother followed her.” Pick two words and explain their effect.
    Sample answer: The words “followed” and “minutes” (Chapter LIX, paragraph 44) make the tone heavy and deliberate rather than neutral. That weight points the reader to class and social mobility: Mr. Bennet warns against an unequal marriage. The author chooses them so the moment feels significant instead of passing.
29. [short · synthesis · DOK 4 · AP: AP-LIT.LAN] Connect this passage from Chapter LIX, paragraph 30 to the story's treatment of women's limited choices: “How earnestly did she then wish that her former opinions had been more reasonable, her expressions more moderate!” Use one other moment from the story as well.
    Sample answer: This passage (Chapter LIX, paragraph 30) develops women's limited choices: Mr. Bennet warns against an unequal marriage. Its words “expressions” and “reasonable” carry that idea into this moment. The same concern returns in “He is rich, to be sure, and you may have more fine clothes and fine carriages than Jane.” (Chapter LIX, paragraph 31), so the two passages read as a pattern, not a single moment. Together they show the story treating women's limited choices as central.
30. [short · synthesis · DOK 4 · AP: AP-LIT.LAN] Connect this passage from Chapter LIX, paragraph 34 to the story's treatment of marriage and money: “You do not know what he really is; then pray do not pain me by speaking of him in such terms.” Use one other moment from the story as well.
    Sample answer: This passage (Chapter LIX, paragraph 34) develops marriage and money: Mr. Bennet warns against an unequal marriage. Its words “speaking” and “really” carry that idea into this moment. The same concern returns in “And so, Darcy did everything; made up the match, gave the money, paid the fellow’s debts, and got him his commission!” (Chapter LIX, paragraph 39), so the two passages read as a pattern, not a single moment. Together they show the story treating marriage and money as central.

31. [short · analysis · DOK 3 · AP: AP-LIT.FIG] Analyze how the word choice in this passage from Chapter LIX, paragraph 25 shapes its tone: “Darcy professed a great curiosity to see the view from the Mount, and Elizabeth silently consented.” Pick two words and explain their effect.
    Sample answer: The words “curiosity” and “professed” (Chapter LIX, paragraph 25) make the tone heavy and deliberate rather than neutral. That weight points the reader to class and social mobility: Mr. Bennet warns against an unequal marriage. The author chooses them so the moment feels significant instead of passing.
32. [short · synthesis · DOK 4 · AP: AP-LIT.LAN] Connect this passage from Chapter LIX, paragraph 16 to the story's treatment of women's limited choices: “But I believe I must date it from my first seeing his beautiful grounds at Pemberley.” Use one other moment from the story as well.
    Sample answer: This passage (Chapter LIX, paragraph 16) develops women's limited choices: Mr. Bennet warns against an unequal marriage. Its words “beautiful” and “believe” carry that idea into this moment. The same concern returns in “When convinced on that article, Miss Bennet had nothing farther to wish.” (Chapter LIX, paragraph 17), so the two passages read as a pattern, not a single moment. Together they show the story treating women's limited choices as central.
33. [fill · recall · DOK 1 · AP: AP-LIT.FIG] Complete the quotation from Chapter LIX, paragraph 3: “Though suspicion was very far from Miss Bennet’s general habits, she was absolutely _____ here.” Word bank: morning, unwilling, incredulous, abhorrence
    Key: incredulous
34. [short · analysis · DOK 3 · Program outcome: LeL-C2-LIT-1] Claim: Mr. Bennet's blessing shows that he has learned from his own unhappy marriage. Explain how this evidence supports the claim: “I know that you could be neither happy nor respectable, unless you truly esteemed your husband” (Chapter LIX, paragraph 35).
    Sample answer: He warns that she "could be neither happy nor respectable, unless you truly esteemed your husband," and, once convinced, says "I could not have parted with you, my Lizzy, to anyone less worthy.". The evidence is “I know that you could be neither happy nor respectable, unless you truly esteemed your husband” (Chapter LIX, paragraph 35) — Mr. Bennet's serious warning, drawn from his own marriage. This develops marriage and money: Mr. Bennet warns against an unequal marriage.
35. [short · synthesis · DOK 4 · Program outcome: LeL-C2-LIT-1] Close reading: how do the diction and syntax of “My dear Lizzy, where can you have been walking to” (Chapter LIX, paragraph 1) shape its meaning? Consider a second, competing reading.
    Sample answer: Jane's question. The evidence is “My dear Lizzy, where can you have been walking to” (Chapter LIX, paragraph 1). This develops marriage and money: Mr. Bennet warns against an unequal marriage. The words “walking” and “where” carry that meaning: they are the charged choices in the line, and changing either would soften the effect. He warns that she "could be neither happy nor respectable, unless you truly esteemed your husband," and, once convinced, says "I could not have parted with you, my Lizzy, to anyone less worthy.".

Rigor version	Items (in order)	Mix
Scaffolded support	1, 2, 3, 4, 5, 6, 7, 8, 9, 10, 11, 12, 13, 14, 15, 16	recall 9, inference 2, analysis 3, synthesis 2
HS Freshman	3, 5, 7, 8, 9, 2, 1, 4, 6, 10, 11, 17, 12, 14, 13, 15	recall 9, inference 3, analysis 3, synthesis 1
HS Sophomore	8, 18, 19, 5, 20, 9, 21, 22, 17, 11, 23, 12, 24, 25, 26, 15	recall 6, inference 5, analysis 3, synthesis 2
HS Junior	27, 19, 4, 6, 1, 21, 23, 11, 22, 17, 12, 13, 25, 28, 29, 30	recall 5, inference 5, analysis 4, synthesis 2

HS Senior	18, 2, 6, 3, 22, 21, 23, 11, 17, 31, 12, 13, 25, 29, 26, 32	recall 4, inference 5, analysis 4, synthesis 3
AP	8, 33, 4, 17, 21, 23, 22, 25, 28, 14, 13, 31, 26, 15, 32, 30	recall 3, inference 4, analysis 5, synthesis 4
College Freshman	6, 27, 2, 21, 23, 22, 11, 25, 28, 12, 13, 14, 32, 30, 29, 16	recall 3, inference 4, analysis 5, synthesis 4
College Sophomore	3, 8, 11, 22, 23, 21, 34, 14, 31, 24, 13, 35, 32, 26, 29, 15	recall 2, inference 4, analysis 5, synthesis 5
College Junior	1, 4, 2, 8, 11, 13, 28, 25, 24, 31, 32, 29, 26, 15, 16, 30	recall 4, inference 1, analysis 5, synthesis 6
College Senior	3, 2, 11, 22, 25, 24, 28, 14, 31, 13, 32, 15, 29, 26, 16, 30	recall 2, inference 2, analysis 6, synthesis 6
Graduate / PhD	33, 2, 4, 6, 12, 34, 28, 25, 24, 13, 29, 26, 16, 15, 32, 30	recall 4, inference 0, analysis 6, synthesis 6

Writing prompts (eleven rigor levels)

Scaffolded support (250 words; AP: see unit standards): Supported track (work from the passage your teacher selects). In “Chapter LIX,” how does Austen show confiding and consent? Write a paragraph that states your claim, quotes two details from the passage, and explains how each detail supports your idea. Use the characterization you noticed as one piece of evidence.

HS Freshman (350 words; AP: see unit standards): In Chapter LIX, how does Austen develop the idea of confiding and consent? State a clear claim, support it with two or three quotations, and explain how the characterization in the chapter helps build that idea.

HS Sophomore (450 words; AP: see unit standards): Analyze how Chapter LIX develops the idea of confiding and consent. Make a precise claim, support it with at least three pieces of textual evidence, and explain how the author's use of characterization and plot shapes that idea. Address one possible counterclaim.

HS Junior (550 words; AP: see unit standards): Analyze how the structure of Chapter LIX (where it begins, turns and ends) and its characterization shape the reader's understanding of confiding and consent. Identify one place where the text leaves matters uncertain and explain how that uncertainty adds to its meaning.

HS Senior (600 words; AP: see unit standards): Two readers disagree about what Chapter LIX suggests about confiding and consent. Lay out two plausible interpretations, weigh the evidence for each (including the chapter's characterization and plot), and argue for the stronger one in a sustained, well-organized essay.

AP (650 words; AP: AP-LIT.CHR, AP-LIT.LAN): Write a literary argument in which you analyze how Jane Austen uses characterization in Chapter LIX to complicate the reader's understanding of confiding and consent. Develop a defensible thesis, select evidence purposefully, and explain how specific choices of diction and syntax create meaning.

College Freshman (1000 words; AP: see unit standards): Situate Chapter LIX within its historical and literary context and argue how the chapter's treatment of confiding and consent responds to that context. Engage with at least one secondary perspective (a critic, historian or the author's own statements), integrate quotations smoothly, and cite in MLA style.

College Sophomore (1250 words; AP: see unit standards): Read Chapter LIX alongside the conventions of its genre and period. Argue how the chapter's handling of confiding and consent follows or bends those conventions, using the characterization as evidence, and test your reading against one published critic. Document two secondary sources in MLA.

College Junior (1500 words; AP: see unit standards): Apply a named critical approach (for example formalist, historicist, feminist, psychoanalytic or ecocritical) to Chapter LIX and its treatment of confiding and consent. State your method, show what it reveals in the chapter's characterization and plot, and identify where the text resists it.

College Senior (2000 words; AP: see unit standards): Develop a research argument that reads Chapter LIX as evidence for a larger claim about confiding and consent in Pride and Prejudice. Connect close reading of the chapter to the whole novel, engage at least four scholarly sources, and state precisely where your reading departs from theirs (Chicago style).

Graduate / PhD (2500 words; AP: see unit standards): Develop an original argument that reads Chapter LIX as a hinge in the novel's larger treatment of confiding and consent. Position your reading within a named critical conversation (for example formalist, historicist, psychoanalytic, feminist or postcolonial approaches), account for the textual history where relevant, and articulate the stakes of your intervention for scholarship on Pride and Prejudice.

SAT-style questions

1. The evening passed quietly, unmarked by anything extraordinary. The acknowledged lovers talked and laughed, the unacknowledged were silent. Darcy was not of a disposition in which happiness overflows in mirth; and Elizabeth, agitated and confused, rather knew that she was happy, than felt herself to be so; for, besides the immediate embarrassment, there were other evils before her. She anticipated what would be felt in the family when her situation became known; she was aware that no one liked him but Jane; and even feared that with the others it was a dislike which not all his fortune and consequence might do away.

   Which choice best states a central concern of “Chapter LIX”?

   A. Confiding and consent

   B. Disappointment and philosophy

   C. Visit to Hunsford

   D. The second proposal

SAT key: 1. A (Confiding and consent)

Lesson 61: Chapter LX

Focus: reflections on love

Objective: Students will analyze how characterization develops in “Chapter LX” by writing a claim-evidence-reasoning paragraph that cites at least 2 quotations from the section, and will score at least 80% on the section quiz.

Standards: AP: see the unit standards

Teacher only · spoilers

Elizabeth asks Darcy when he fell in love; he says he was in the middle before he knew he had begun. They discuss her impertinence. Darcy writes to Lady Catherine.

Background: Courtship conversation allowed reflection on character.

Significance: The answer emphasizes gradual, rational love over sudden passion.

Lesson plan and lecture script (90 minutes)

0–8 min · Bell-ringer · You do (8 min)
Students write to the bell-ringer, then pair-share.
What does Darcy's answer suggest about love? Write for five minutes. Starters: I think... because... / This connects to first impressions because....
Prompt: What does Darcy's answer suggest about love?
Sentence starters: I think… because… · This connects to first impressions because…
Strong response: A strong response takes a position and anticipates this: love that grew slowly, against first impressions.

8–18 min · Vocabulary with etymology notes · I do (10 min)
Five key words in context, with verified word histories.
Today's words: evenness — regularity; steadiness; overrated — valued too highly; parading — showy; ostentatious; assiduously — with care and persistence; obsequious — attempting to win favor from influential people by flattery.
Words: evenness: regularity; steadiness · overrated: valued too highly · parading: showy; ostentatious · assiduously: with care and persistence · obsequious: attempting to win favor from influential people by flattery

18–28 min · Background and context · I do (10 min)
Mini-lecture (read or adapt the script).
Courtship conversation allowed reflection on character. The answer emphasizes gradual, rational love over sudden passion. Dialogue: Elizabeth asks Darcy how he fell in love; he answers that he "was in the middle before I knew that I had begun." Characterization: Elizabeth's playfulness returns; she teases him for loving her "impertinence." Watch for silence and reserve: What characters leave unsaid (Darcy's reserve, Jane's composure, Elizabeth's secrets) drives misunderstanding. In this chapter: "Because you were grave and silent, and gave me no encouragement" (Chapter LX, paragraph 8).

28–40 min · I do: modeled close reading · I do (12 min)
Model the close reading of the anchor quotation using the written think-aloud below.
First, meaning. I read "I was in the middle before I knew that I had begun" slowly and put it in my own words: Darcy says he cannot fix the hour or the moment; he was in the middle before he knew he had begun. Next, craft. I notice the paradox of being in the middle of something without knowing it started. The strongest word is "middle": it shows love grew gradually, not at first sight. Then, effect. How does Darcy explain when he fell in love? My answer: Darcy explains that he cannot fix when he fell in love because he was in the middle before he knew he had begun; their love grew slowly through knowledge and change, not first impressions.

> I was in the middle before I knew that I had begun (Chapter LX, paragraph 2)

Think-aloud: First, meaning. I read "I was in the middle before I knew that I had begun" slowly and put it in my own words: Darcy says he cannot fix the hour or the moment; he was in the middle before he knew he had begun. Next, craft. I notice the paradox of being in the middle of something without knowing it started. The strongest word is "middle": it shows love grew gradually, not at first sight. Then, effect. How does Darcy explain when he fell in love? My answer: Darcy explains that he cannot fix when he fell in love because he was in the middle before he knew he had begun; their love grew slowly through knowledge and change, not first impressions.

40–55 min · We do: guided annotation · We do (15 min)
Guided analysis of a second quotation; expected answers given.
Ask: What words in this line stand out, and what do they suggest? Expected: The paradox describes gradual love; it answers the novel's original title, First Impressions. Ask: How does this line connect to first impressions? Expected: Love that grew slowly, against first impressions. (Opening: Elizabeth's wit restored.)

> Elizabeth's spirits soon rising to playfulness again, she wanted Mr. Darcy to account for his having ever fallen in love with her (Chapter LX, paragraph 1)

Ask: What words in this line stand out, and what do they suggest?
Expected answer: The paradox describes gradual love; it answers the novel's original title, First Impressions.
Ask: How does this line connect to first impressions?
Expected answer: Love that grew slowly, against first impressions. (Opening: Elizabeth's wit restored.)

55–70 min · You do: independent annotation · You do (15 min)
Independent annotation and a claim-evidence-reasoning paragraph (exemplar given).
Annotate the chapter for dialogue, characterization (three marks with a margin note each), then write one claim-evidence-reasoning paragraph: what does this chapter suggest about reflections on love? Then start your writing prompt at your assigned level (HS Sophomore: Analyze how Chapter LX develops the idea of reflections on love. Make a precise claim, support it with at least three pieces of textual evidence, and explain how the author's use of characterization and theme shapes that idea. Address one possible counterclaim.) Exemplar: The novel ends its love story by rejecting love at first sight. When the text says “I was in the middle before I knew that I had begun” (Chapter LX, paragraph 2), it shows this directly. Darcy says "I was in the middle before I knew that I had begun," which describes affection that grew from knowledge rather than from a first impression.
Task: Annotate the chapter for dialogue, characterization (three marks with a margin note each), then write one claim-evidence-reasoning paragraph: what does this chapter suggest about reflections on love? Then start your writing prompt at your assigned level (HS Sophomore: Analyze how Chapter LX develops the idea of reflections on love. Make a precise claim, support it with at least three pieces of textual evidence, and explain how the author's use of characterization and theme shapes that idea. Address one possible counterclaim.)
Exemplar: The novel ends its love story by rejecting love at first sight. When the text says “I was in the middle before I knew that I had begun” (Chapter LX, paragraph 2), it shows this directly. Darcy says "I was in the middle before I knew that I had begun," which describes affection that grew from knowledge rather than from a first impression.

70–80 min · Discussion · We do (10 min)
Structured discussion from the 30 tiered questions, with facilitation notes.
Anchor question: What does Darcy's answer suggest about love? Ask: is Austen's view of love more realistic than "love at first sight"?
Anchor question: What does Darcy's answer suggest about love?
Facilitation: Ask: is Austen's view of love more realistic than "love at first sight"?

80–87 min · Exit ticket / chapter quiz · You do (7 min)
Chapter quiz in the app and an exit ticket (answer given).
Chapter quiz in the app, then: In one sentence, what does this chapter suggest about reflections on love? Support it with one short quotation. Model answer: The novel ends its love story by rejecting love at first sight. (“I was in the middle before I knew that I had begun”, Chapter LX, paragraph 2). Accept any defensible claim backed by a quotation from the chapter; the answer key for the quiz is in the Quiz section.
Exit ticket: In one sentence, what does this chapter suggest about reflections on love? Support it with one short quotation.
Answer: Model answer: The novel ends its love story by rejecting love at first sight. (“I was in the middle before I knew that I had begun”, Chapter LX, paragraph 2). Accept any defensible claim backed by a quotation from the chapter; the answer key for the quiz is in the Quiz section.

87–90 min · Closure · I do (3 min)
Summarize the lesson and preview the next reading.
Today we saw how dialogue shapes reflections on love. Key takeaway: love that grew slowly, against first impressions.

Total: 90 minutes.

Teacher analysis (spoilers)

Literary elements

- Dialogue: Elizabeth asks Darcy how he fell in love; he answers that he "was in the middle before I knew that I had begun."
- Characterization: Elizabeth's playfulness returns; she teases him for loving her "impertinence."

Themes and how they develop

- first impressions: love that grew slowly, against first impressions.

Symbols and motifs

- silence and reserve: What characters leave unsaid (Darcy's reserve, Jane's composure, Elizabeth's secrets) drives misunderstanding. In this chapter: “Because you were grave and silent, and gave me no encouragement” (Chapter LX, paragraph 8).
- letters: Letters carry news, reveal character and change minds; Darcy's letter is the turning point of the novel. In this chapter: “And if I had not a letter to write myself, I might sit by you, and admire the” (Chapter LX, paragraph 19).

Key quotations (checked against the reading text)

- “I was in the middle before I knew that I had begun” (Chapter LX, paragraph 2) Darcy's account: love as a gradual process.
- “Elizabeth’s spirits soon rising to playfulness again, she wanted Mr. Darcy to account for his having ever fallen in love with her” (Chapter LX, paragraph 1) Opening: Elizabeth's wit restored.
- “I am the happiest creature in the world” (Chapter LX, paragraph 21) Elizabeth's letter to Mrs. Gardiner echoes Jane's joy.

Model claim-evidence-reasoning

Claim: The novel ends its love story by rejecting love at first sight.
Evidence: “I was in the middle before I knew that I had begun” (Chapter LX, paragraph 2)
Reasoning: Darcy says "I was in the middle before I knew that I had begun," which describes affection that grew from knowledge rather than from a first impression.

Vocabulary with etymology notes

Word	Definition (in this sentence)	In context	Word history
evenness (noun)	regularity; steadiness	“And if I had not a letter to write myself, I might sit by you, and admire the evenness of your writing, as another young lady once did.

overrated (verb)	valued too highly	Darcy had been overrated, Elizabeth had never yet answered Mrs.
parading (adjective)	showy; ostentatious	Darcy exposed to all the parading and obsequious civility of her husband.
assiduously (adverb)	with care and persistence	Had you not been really amiable you would have hated me for it; but in spite of the pains you took to disguise yourself, your feelings were always noble and just; and in your heart, you thoroughly despised the persons who so assiduously courted you.
obsequious (adjective)	attempting to win favor from influential people by flattery	Darcy exposed to all the parading and obsequious civility of her husband.

Discussion questions

1. What does Darcy's answer suggest about love?
2. Where does characterization appear in this chapter, and what effect does it have? Point to one passage.
3. How does this chapter connect to the book's larger concern with women's limited choices?

Classroom discussion questions (30, tiered)

Wait time after every question (3 s for DOK 1, 5 s for DOK 2, 8 to 10 s for DOK 3 and 4); think-pair-share on DOK 3 and 4; answer each response with a follow-up probe; close with student-generated questions. Focus sets by rigor level: Scaffolded support: 1, 2, 3, 4, 5, 6, 11, 12, 13, 14, 21, 22; HS Freshman: 1, 2, 3, 4, 5, 12, 13, 14, 15, 22, 23, 24; HS Sophomore: 1, 2, 3, 4, 13, 14, 15, 16, 17, 23, 24, 25; HS Junior: 1, 2, 3, 14, 15, 16, 17, 18, 24, 25, 26, 27; HS Senior: 1, 2, 3, 15, 16, 17, 18, 25, 26, 27, 28, 29; AP: 1, 2, 16, 17, 18, 19, 20, 26, 27, 28, 29, 30; College Freshman: 1, 2, 17, 18, 19, 20, 21, 22, 27, 28, 29, 30; College Sophomore: 1, 2, 11, 18, 19, 20, 21, 22, 23, 28, 29, 30; College Junior: 1, 11, 12, 19, 20, 21, 22, 23, 24, 25, 29, 30; College Senior: 1, 11, 12, 13, 20, 21, 22, 23, 24, 25, 26, 30; Graduate / PhD: 1, 11, 12, 13, 21, 22, 23, 24, 25, 26, 27, 28

Literal / recall

1. What does Elizabeth ask Darcy? [DOK 1 · coldCallWithSupport · wait 3 s · AP: unit standards] Look for: When he fell in love
2. What is Darcy's answer? [DOK 1 · turnAndTalk · wait 3 s · AP: unit standards] Look for: He was in the middle before he knew he had begun
3. What quality of hers does she joke about? [DOK 1 · coldCallWithSupport · wait 3 s · AP: unit standards] Look for: Impertinence
4. Whom does Darcy write to? [DOK 1 · turnAndTalk · wait 3 s · AP: unit standards] Look for: Lady Catherine
5. What kind of love does the novel value? [DOK 1 · coldCallWithSupport · wait 3 s · AP: unit standards] Look for: Gradual and rational
6. Retell the three most important events of “Chapter LX” in order, in one sentence each. [DOK 1 · turnAndTalk · wait 3 s · AP: unit standards] Look for: Elizabeth asks Darcy when he fell in love; he says he was in the middle before he knew he had begun. They discuss her impertinence. Darcy writes to Lady Catherine.
7. Which characters appear or are mentioned in “Chapter LX”? Name two and one thing each says or does. [DOK 1 · coldCallWithSupport · wait 3 s · AP: unit standards] Look for: Names and actions taken from the chapter; check against the teacher summary.

8. Where and when does “Chapter LX” take place? Point to the line that tells you. [DOK 1 · turnAndTalk · wait 3 s · AP: unit standards] Look for: A place/time detail quoted from the chapter.
9. Reread: ““And if I had not a letter to write myself, I might sit by you, and admire the evenness of your writing, as another young lady once did.” What does “evenness” mean here, and what is literally happening in this line? [DOK 1 · turnAndTalk · wait 3 s · AP: unit standards] Look for: evenness: regularity; steadiness.
10. Reread: “Darcy had been overrated, Elizabeth had never yet answered Mrs.” What does “overrated” mean here, and what is literally happening in this line? [DOK 1 · turnAndTalk · wait 3 s · AP: unit standards] Look for: overrated: valued too highly.

Inferential / analytical

1. What does “Chapter LX” suggest about reflections on love? State the inference and the line that supports it. [DOK 2 · thinkPairShare · wait 5 s · AP-LIT.LAN] Look for: The answer emphasizes gradual, rational love over sudden passion.
2. Find one example of characterization in this chapter. What does it reveal that a plain statement would not? [DOK 2 · followUp · wait 5 s · AP-LIT.CHR] Look for: Look for what characters say, do and think, and how others react to them.
3. How does the theme in this chapter shape what we understand about reflections on love? [DOK 3 · thinkPairShare · wait 8 s · AP-LIT.LAN] Look for: Look for statements or moments that connect to the book's big ideas.
   Answer guidance: A defensible line of argument: The novel ends its love story by rejecting love at first sight. Useful evidence: “I was in the middle before I knew that I had begun” (Chapter LX, paragraph 2): Darcy's account: love as a gradual process. Theme link: love that grew slowly, against first impressions. Credit any position that is supported by quotation and reasoning; push one-sided answers to address the strongest counterpoint.
4. In the passage that begins ““And if I had not a letter to write myself, I might sit by you, and admire the evenness of your writing, as another young lady once did.”, why might Austen have chosen these particular words? Pick two and explain their connotations. [DOK 2 · followUp · wait 5 s · AP-LIT.FIG] Look for: Diction analysis of two words in the anchor passage.
5. What causes the main turn in “Chapter LX”, and what effect is it likely to have on what follows? [DOK 2 · followUp · wait 5 s · AP-LIT.STR] Look for: Elizabeth asks Darcy when he fell in love; he says he was in the middle before he knew he had begun. They discuss her impertinence. Darcy writes to Lady Catherine.
6. How does “Chapter LX” build on “Chapter LIX”? Name one link of cause and effect. [DOK 3 · thinkPairShare · wait 8 s · AP-LIT.STR] Look for: A causal or structural link between this and the previous chapter.
   Answer guidance: A defensible line of argument: The novel ends its love story by rejecting love at first sight. Useful evidence: “Elizabeth’s spirits soon rising to playfulness again, she wanted Mr. Darcy to account for his having ever fallen in love with her” (Chapter LX, paragraph 1): Opening: Elizabeth's wit restored. Theme link: love that grew slowly, against first impressions. Credit any position that is supported by quotation and reasoning; push one-sided answers to address the strongest counterpoint.
7. What can we infer about a character's motives from what they say and do here, as opposed to what they claim? [DOK 3 · followUp · wait 8 s · AP-LIT.CHR] Look for: An inference about motive supported by a quoted line.
   Answer guidance: A defensible line of argument: The novel ends its love story by rejecting love at first sight. Useful evidence: “I am the happiest creature in the world” (Chapter LX, paragraph 21): Elizabeth's letter to Mrs. Gardiner echoes Jane's joy. On characterization: Elizabeth's playfulness returns; she teases him for loving her "impertinence." Credit any position that is supported by quotation and reasoning; push one-sided answers to address the strongest counterpoint.

8. The bell-ringer asked: “What does Darcy's answer suggest about love?” Now that we have read closely, how would you revise your first answer, and which line changed your mind? [DOK 2 · thinkPairShare · wait 5 s · AP-LIT.LAN] Look for: A revised answer anchored in the text.
9. Where does tone / mood appear, and how does it connect this chapter to the larger concern with women's limited choices? [DOK 3 · followUp · wait 8 s · AP-LIT.FIG] Look for: Look for word choices that reveal the narrator's attitude or the scene's feeling.
   Answer guidance: A defensible line of argument: The novel ends its love story by rejecting love at first sight. Useful evidence: “I was in the middle before I knew that I had begun” (Chapter LX, paragraph 2): Darcy's account: love as a gradual process. Theme link: love that grew slowly, against first impressions. Credit any position that is supported by quotation and reasoning; push one-sided answers to address the strongest counterpoint.
10. Background: Courtship conversation allowed reflection on character. How does knowing this change the way you read one moment in the chapter? [DOK 3 · thinkPairShare · wait 8 s · AP-LIT.SET] Look for: A specific moment reread in light of the context.
    Answer guidance: A defensible line of argument: The novel ends its love story by rejecting love at first sight. Useful evidence: “Elizabeth’s spirits soon rising to playfulness again, she wanted Mr. Darcy to account for his having ever fallen in love with her” (Chapter LX, paragraph 1): Opening: Elizabeth's wit restored. Theme link: love that grew slowly, against first impressions. Credit any position that is supported by quotation and reasoning; push one-sided answers to address the strongest counterpoint.

Evaluative / synthesis / creative

1. A critic might argue: “The answer emphasizes gradual, rational love over sudden passion.” How far do you agree? Take a stand and defend it with two lines from the chapter. [DOK 3 · fourCorners · wait 8 s · AP-LIT.LAN] Look for: A defended position with evidence and one counterpoint.
   Answer guidance: A defensible line of argument: The novel ends its love story by rejecting love at first sight. Useful evidence: “I am the happiest creature in the world” (Chapter LX, paragraph 21): Elizabeth's letter to Mrs. Gardiner echoes Jane's joy. Theme link: love that grew slowly, against first impressions. Credit any position that is supported by quotation and reasoning; push one-sided answers to address the strongest counterpoint.
2. Which character in this chapter acts most wisely, and which least? Judge them by a standard you name. [DOK 3 · thinkPairShare · wait 8 s · AP-LIT.CHR, AP-LIT.LAN] Look for: An evaluation using an explicit criterion and evidence.
   Answer guidance: A defensible line of argument: The novel ends its love story by rejecting love at first sight. Useful evidence: “I was in the middle before I knew that I had begun” (Chapter LX, paragraph 2): Darcy's account: love as a gradual process. On characterization: Elizabeth's playfulness returns; she teases him for loving her "impertinence." Credit any position that is supported by quotation and reasoning; push one-sided answers to address the strongest counterpoint.
3. Rewrite one moment of “Chapter LX” from the point of view of a different character. What does the new angle reveal or hide about reflections on love? [DOK 4 · thinkPairShare · wait 8 s · AP-LIT.LAN, AP-LIT.NAR] Look for: A creative product with a rationale tied to the text.
   Answer guidance: A defensible line of argument: The novel ends its love story by rejecting love at first sight. Useful evidence: “Elizabeth’s spirits soon rising to playfulness again, she wanted Mr. Darcy to account for his having ever fallen in love with her” (Chapter LX, paragraph 1): Opening: Elizabeth's wit restored. Theme link: love that grew slowly, against first impressions. Credit any position that is supported by quotation and reasoning; push one-sided answers to address the strongest counterpoint.

4. Write three questions of your own about “Chapter LX”: one recall, one “why/how”, and one “should/what if”. Trade with a partner and answer theirs. [DOK 3 · studentGenerated · wait 8 s · AP-LIT.LAN] Look for: Student-generated questions at three levels.

   Answer guidance: A defensible line of argument: The novel ends its love story by rejecting love at first sight. Useful evidence: “I am the happiest creature in the world” (Chapter LX, paragraph 21): Elizabeth's letter to Mrs. Gardiner echoes Jane's joy. Theme link: love that grew slowly, against first impressions. Credit any position that is supported by quotation and reasoning; push one-sided answers to address the strongest counterpoint.

5. Connect this chapter to first impressions and prejudice: is the link strong or weak so far? What would Austen need to show next to strengthen it? [DOK 4 · socraticCircle · wait 8 s · AP-LIT.LAN] Look for: A judgment of thematic development across the work.

   Answer guidance: A defensible line of argument: The novel ends its love story by rejecting love at first sight. Useful evidence: “I was in the middle before I knew that I had begun” (Chapter LX, paragraph 2): Darcy's account: love as a gradual process. Theme link: love that grew slowly, against first impressions. Credit any position that is supported by quotation and reasoning; push one-sided answers to address the strongest counterpoint.

6. Is the characterization in this chapter effective, or does it feel heavy-handed? Evaluate it as a reader would in a review. [DOK 3 · fourCorners · wait 8 s · AP-LIT.CHR, AP-LIT.LAN] Look for: An evaluative judgment with criteria and evidence.

   Answer guidance: A defensible line of argument: The novel ends its love story by rejecting love at first sight. Useful evidence: “Elizabeth’s spirits soon rising to playfulness again, she wanted Mr. Darcy to account for his having ever fallen in love with her” (Chapter LX, paragraph 1): Opening: Elizabeth's wit restored. On characterization: Elizabeth's playfulness returns; she teases him for loving her "impertinence." Credit any position that is supported by quotation and reasoning; push one-sided answers to address the strongest counterpoint.

7. Compare how “Chapter LX” treats reflections on love with how another text, film or event you know treats a similar idea. What does Pride and Prejudice see that the other misses? [DOK 4 · socraticCircle · wait 8 s · AP-LIT.LAN] Look for: A cross-text synthesis.

   Answer guidance: A defensible line of argument: The novel ends its love story by rejecting love at first sight. Useful evidence: “I am the happiest creature in the world” (Chapter LX, paragraph 21): Elizabeth's letter to Mrs. Gardiner echoes Jane's joy. Theme link: love that grew slowly, against first impressions. Credit any position that is supported by quotation and reasoning; push one-sided answers to address the strongest counterpoint.

8. Predict what “Chapter LXI” will bring, using two clues from this chapter. After reading, evaluate your prediction. [DOK 3 · thinkPairShare · wait 8 s · AP-LIT.LAN, AP-LIT.STR] Look for: A prediction or judgment justified with textual clues.

   Answer guidance: A defensible line of argument: The novel ends its love story by rejecting love at first sight. Useful evidence: “I was in the middle before I knew that I had begun” (Chapter LX, paragraph 2): Darcy's account: love as a gradual process. Theme link: love that grew slowly, against first impressions.

Credit any position that is supported by quotation and reasoning; push one-sided answers to address the strongest counterpoint.

9. Design a one-paragraph modern adaptation of this chapter (setting, characters, conflict). What must stay the same for it to still be about reflections on love? [DOK 4 · thinkPairShare · wait 8 s · AP-LIT.LAN] Look for: A creative transfer that keeps the core idea.
   Answer guidance: A defensible line of argument: The novel ends its love story by rejecting love at first sight. Useful evidence: "Elizabeth's spirits soon rising to playfulness again, she wanted Mr. Darcy to account for his having ever fallen in love with her" (Chapter LX, paragraph 1): Opening: Elizabeth's wit restored. Theme link: love that grew slowly, against first impressions. Credit any position that is supported by quotation and reasoning; push one-sided answers to address the strongest counterpoint.
10. What question would you most like to ask Jane Austen about this chapter, and what answer do you think the text itself gives? [DOK 4 · studentGenerated · wait 8 s · AP-LIT.LAN] Look for: A student-generated question answered from evidence.
    Answer guidance: A defensible line of argument: The novel ends its love story by rejecting love at first sight. Useful evidence: "I am the happiest creature in the world" (Chapter LX, paragraph 21): Elizabeth's letter to Mrs. Gardiner echoes Jane's joy. Theme link: love that grew slowly, against first impressions. Credit any position that is supported by quotation and reasoning; push one-sided answers to address the strongest counterpoint.

Annotation focus

- Characterization: look for what characters say, do and think, and how others react to them (anchor passage in the We do segment)
- Also notice Theme: statements or moments that connect to the book's big ideas
- Also notice Tone / mood: word choices that reveal the narrator's attitude or the scene's feeling

Chapter quiz: item bank (all eleven rigor versions)

1. [mc · recall · DOK 1] What does Elizabeth ask Darcy?
   A. Where he lives
   B. When he fell in love
   C. If he likes Jane
   D. How rich he is

   Key: B (When he fell in love)
2. [fill · recall · DOK 1] Complete the quotation from Chapter LX, paragraph 1: "I can _____ your going on charmingly, when you had once made a beginning; but what could set you off in the first place?" Word bank: comprehend, yourself, resolution, infinite
   Key: comprehend
3. [fill · recall · DOK 1] Complete the quotation from Chapter LX, paragraph 14: "I was not in a humour to wait for any _____ of yours." Word bank: liveliness, opening, withstood, especially Key: opening
4. [fill · recall · DOK 1] Fill in the blank with the vocabulary word that fits: "Darcy exposed to all the parading and _____ civility of her husband." Word bank: obsequious, overrated, evenness, parading
   Key: obsequious

5. [mc · recall · DOK 1] In the line “Had you not been really amiable you would have hated me for it; but in spite of the pains you took to disguise yourself, your feelings were always noble and just; and in your heart, you thoroughly despised the persons…”, what does “assiduously” most nearly mean?

   A. the quality of being alike

   B. mocking

   C. make one's home in a particular place or community

   D. with care and persistence

   Key: D (with care and persistence)

6. [mc · recall · DOK 1] What quality of hers does she joke about?

   A. Shyness

   B. Wealth

   C. Beauty

   D. Impertinence

   Key: D (Impertinence)

7. [mc · recall · DOK 1] In the line “Darcy had been overrated, Elizabeth had never yet answered Mrs.”, what does “overrated” most nearly mean?

   A. add to the end

   B. having the requisite qualities or resources to meet a task

   C. running about hurriedly

   D. valued too highly

   Key: D (valued too highly)

8. [mc · recall · DOK 1] What is Darcy's answer?

   A. He was in the middle before he knew he had begun

   B. Never

   C. At first sight

   D. After the letter

   Key: A (He was in the middle before he knew he had begun)

9. [fill · recall · DOK 1] Complete the quotation from Chapter LX, paragraph 21: “I am the _____ creature in the world”

   Key: happiest

10. [short · inference · DOK 2] What does this passage from Chapter LX, paragraph 25 reveal about the character or situation? “But, if I were you, I would stand by the nephew.” Answer in two or three sentences with one detail.

    Sample answer: The passage (Chapter LX, paragraph 25) shows the situation turning on first impressions and prejudice: love that grew slowly, against first impressions. The words “nephew” are the proof, because they show how the moment looks to the people in it. They suggest more than the narrator states outright.

11. [short · inference · DOK 2] What does this passage from Chapter LX, paragraph 13 reveal about the character or situation? “I wonder when you would have spoken, if I had not asked you!” Answer in two or three sentences with one detail.

    Sample answer: The passage (Chapter LX, paragraph 13) shows the situation turning on first impressions and prejudice:

love that grew slowly, against first impressions. The words “wonder” and “spoken” are the proof, because they show how the moment looks to the people in it. They suggest more than the narrator states outright.

12. [mc · inference · DOK 2] Which choice best states a central concern of “Chapter LX”?

    A. Reflections on love

    B. The accomplished woman

    C. A disastrous ball

    D. A persuasive tale

    Key: A (Reflections on love)

13. [short · inference · DOK 2] What can you infer from this line? “I was in the middle before I knew that I had begun” (Chapter LX, paragraph 2) Answer in two or three sentences with one detail.
    Sample answer: Darcy's account: love as a gradual process. The evidence is “I was in the middle before I knew that I had begun” (Chapter LX, paragraph 2). This develops first impressions: love that grew slowly, against first impressions.

14. [short · analysis · DOK 3] Analyze the word choice in “I am the happiest creature in the world” (Chapter LX, paragraph 21). Pick two words and explain what they suggest.
    Sample answer: Elizabeth's letter to Mrs. Gardiner echoes Jane's joy. The evidence is “I am the happiest creature in the world” (Chapter LX, paragraph 21). This develops first impressions: love that grew slowly, against first impressions. The words “creature” and “happiest” carry that meaning: they are the charged choices in the line, and changing either would soften the effect.

15. [short · analysis · DOK 3] Analyze how the word choice in this passage from Chapter LX, paragraph 17 shapes its tone: “Shall you ever have courage to announce to Lady Catherine, what is to befall her?” Pick two words and explain their effect.
    Sample answer: The words “announce” and “courage” (Chapter LX, paragraph 17) make the tone heavy and deliberate rather than neutral. That weight points the reader to pride and self-knowledge: love that grew slowly, against first impressions. The author chooses them so the moment feels significant instead of passing.

16. [short · synthesis · DOK 4] Connect this passage from Chapter LX, paragraph 5 to the story's treatment of women's limited choices: “There—I have saved you the trouble of accounting for it; and really, all things considered, I begin to think it perfectly reasonable.” Use one other moment from the story as well.
    Sample answer: This passage (Chapter LX, paragraph 5) develops women's limited choices: love that grew slowly, against first impressions. Its words “accounting” and “considered” carry that idea into this moment. The same concern returns in “Was there no good in your affectionate behaviour to Jane, while she was ill at Netherfield?” (Chapter LX, paragraph 6), so the two passages read as a pattern, not a single moment. Together they show the story treating women's limited choices as central.

17. [fill · recall · DOK 1] Complete the quotation from Chapter LX, paragraph 1: “Elizabeth’s spirits soon rising to _____ again, she wanted Mr. Darcy to account for his having ever fallen in love with her”
    Key: playfulness

18. [mc · recall · DOK 1] Whom does Darcy write to?

    A. Bingley

    B. Wickham

    C. Collins

    D. Lady Catherine

    Key: D (Lady Catherine)

19. [mc · recall · DOK 1] What kind of love does the novel value?

    A. Secret

    B. Gradual and rational

    C. Sudden passion

    D. Arranged

    Key: B (Gradual and rational)

20. [mc · recall · DOK 1] In the line “And if I had not a letter to write myself, I might sit by you, and admire the evenness of your writing, as another young lady once did.”, what does “evenness” most nearly mean?

    A. people living in the same house

    B. regularity; steadiness

    C. upsetting; disturbing

    D. interested only in money

    Key: B (regularity; steadiness)

21. [fill · recall · DOK 1] Complete the quotation from Chapter LX, paragraph 2: “I was in the _____ before I knew that I had begun”

    Key: middle

22. [mc · analysis · DOK 3] Which literary element does this describe in “Chapter LX”? Elizabeth asks Darcy how he fell in love; he answers that he ‘was in the middle before I knew that I had begun.’

    A. Symbolism

    B. Theme

    C. Dialogue

    D. Hyperbole

    Key: C (Dialogue)

23. [mc · analysis · DOK 3] Which literary element does this describe in “Chapter LX”? Elizabeth's playfulness returns; she teases him for loving her ‘impertinence.’

    A. Hyperbole

    B. Characterization

    C. Imagery

    D. Tone / mood

    Key: B (Characterization)

24. [short · synthesis · DOK 4] Synthesis: trace how first impressions develops from Chapter XLV to Chapter LX. Use one quotation from each.

    Sample answer: Earlier, in Chapter XLV, paragraph 13, the text reads “How very ill Eliza Bennet looks this morning, Mr. Darcy” — Miss Bingley's attempt to lower Elizabeth in his eyes. In Chapter LX, “I was in the middle before I knew that I had begun” (Chapter LX, paragraph 2) — Darcy's account: love as a gradual process. Love that grew slowly, against first impressions.

25. [mc · recall · DOK 1] Which word completes this sentence from Chapter LX, paragraph 13? “But I wonder how long you would have gone on, if you had been left to _____.”

    A. especially

    B. yourself

C. opening

D. embarrassed

Key: B (yourself)

26. [mc · inference · DOK 2] Which of these passages comes earliest in Chapter LX?

A. “I can comprehend your going on charmingly, when you had once made a beginning; but what could set you off in the first place?”

B. “My beauty you had early withstood, and as for my manners—my behaviour to you was at least always bordering on the uncivil, and I never…”

C. “I cannot fix on the hour, or the spot, or the look, or the words, which laid the foundation.”

D. “Now be sincere; did you admire me for my impertinence?”

Key: A (“I can comprehend your going on charmingly, when you had once made a beginning; but what could set you off in the first place?”)

27. [short · analysis · DOK 3] Analyze how the word choice in this passage from Chapter LX, paragraph 14 shapes its tone: “My aunt’s intelligence had given me hope, and I was determined at once to know everything.” Pick two words and explain their effect.

Sample answer: The words “intelligence” and “determined” (Chapter LX, paragraph 14) make the tone heavy and deliberate rather than neutral. That weight points the reader to class and social mobility: love that grew slowly, against first impressions. The author chooses them so the moment feels significant instead of passing.

28. [short · synthesis · DOK 4] Connect this passage from Chapter LX, paragraph 21 to the story's treatment of marriage and money: “Mr. Darcy sends you all the love in the world, that he can spare from me.” Use one other moment from the story as well.

Sample answer: This passage (Chapter LX, paragraph 21) develops marriage and money: love that grew slowly, against first impressions. Its words its wording carry that idea into this moment. The same concern returns in “Mr. Darcy’s letter to Lady Catherine, was in a different style; and still different from either, was what Mr. Bennet…” (Chapter LX, paragraph 23), so the two passages read as a pattern, not a single moment. Together they show the story treating marriage and money as central.

29. [short · synthesis · DOK 4] Close reading: how do the diction and syntax of “I was in the middle before I knew that I had begun” (Chapter LX, paragraph 2) shape its meaning? Consider a second, competing reading.

Sample answer: Darcy's account: love as a gradual process. The evidence is “I was in the middle before I knew that I had begun” (Chapter LX, paragraph 2). This develops first impressions: love that grew slowly, against first impressions. The words “before” and “middle” carry that meaning: they are the charged choices in the line, and changing either would soften the effect. Darcy says "I was in the middle before I knew that I had begun," which describes affection that grew from knowledge rather than from a first impression.

30. [mc · recall · DOK 1 · AP: AP-LIT.FIG] Which word completes this sentence from Chapter LX, paragraph 5? “The fact is, that you were sick of civility, of _____, of officious attention.”

A. resolution

B. embarrassed

C. comprehend

D. deference

Key: D (deference)

31. [short · analysis · DOK 3 · AP: AP-LIT.FIG] Analyze how the word choice in this passage from Chapter LX, paragraph 29 shapes its tone: “Before any answer could arrive from Mr. Collins, or any congratulations to Elizabeth, from his wife, the Longbourn family heard that the Collinses were come themselves to Lucas lodge." Pick two words and explain their effect.

Sample answer: The words "congratulations" and "themselves" (Chapter LX, paragraph 29) make the tone heavy and deliberate rather than neutral. That weight points the reader to class and social mobility: love that grew slowly, against first impressions. The author chooses them so the moment feels significant instead of passing.

32. [short · analysis · DOK 3 · AP: AP-LIT.LAN] Claim: The novel ends its love story by rejecting love at first sight. Explain how this evidence supports the claim: "I was in the middle before I knew that I had begun" (Chapter LX, paragraph 2).

    Sample answer: Darcy says "I was in the middle before I knew that I had begun," which describes affection that grew from knowledge rather than from a first impression. The evidence is "I was in the middle before I knew that I had begun" (Chapter LX, paragraph 2) — Darcy's account: love as a gradual process. This develops first impressions: love that grew slowly, against first impressions.

33. [short · synthesis · DOK 4 · AP: AP-LIT.LAN] Connect this passage from Chapter LX, paragraph 21 to the story's treatment of women's limited choices: "You must write again very soon, and praise him a great deal more than you did in your last." Use one other moment from the story as well.

    Sample answer: This passage (Chapter LX, paragraph 21) develops women's limited choices: love that grew slowly, against first impressions. Its words "praise" carry that idea into this moment. The same concern returns in "How could I be so silly as to wish it!" (Chapter LX, paragraph 21), so the two passages read as a pattern, not a single moment. Together they show the story treating women's limited choices as central.

34. [fill · recall · DOK 1 · AP: AP-LIT.FIG] Complete the quotation from Chapter LX, paragraph 7: "My good qualities are under your _____, and you are to exaggerate them as much as possible" Word bank: infinite, deference, protection, resolution

    Key: protection

35. [short · inference · DOK 2 · AP: AP-LIT.CHR] What can you infer from this line? "Elizabeth's spirits soon rising to playfulness again, she wanted Mr. Darcy to account for his having ever fallen in love with her" (Chapter LX, paragraph 1) Answer in two or three sentences with one detail.

    Sample answer: Opening: Elizabeth's wit restored. The evidence is "Elizabeth's spirits soon rising to playfulness again, she wanted Mr. Darcy to account for his having ever fallen in love with her" (Chapter LX, paragraph 1).

36. [short · analysis · DOK 3 · AP: AP-LIT.FIG] Analyze how the word choice in this passage from Chapter LX, paragraph 3 shapes its tone: "Now be sincere; did you admire me for my impertinence?" Pick two words and explain their effect.

    Sample answer: The words "impertinence" and "sincere" (Chapter LX, paragraph 3) make the tone heavy and deliberate rather than neutral. That weight points the reader to pride and self-knowledge: love that grew slowly, against first impressions. The author chooses them so the moment feels significant instead of passing.

37. [short · synthesis · DOK 4 · AP: AP-LIT.LAN] Connect this passage from Chapter LX, paragraph 7 to the story's treatment of marriage and money: "What made you so shy of me, when you first called, and afterwards dined here?" Use one other moment from the story as well.

    Sample answer: This passage (Chapter LX, paragraph 7) develops marriage and money: love that grew slowly, against first impressions. Its words "afterwards" and "called" carry that idea into this moment. The same concern returns in "Because you were grave and silent, and gave me no encouragement." (Chapter LX, paragraph 8), so the two passages read as a pattern, not a single moment. Together they show the story treating marriage and money as central.

38. [mc · inference · DOK 2 · Dual Credit (Indiana College Core): ICC-WC-1.5] What does this passage most clearly show? “I was in the middle before I knew that I had begun” (Chapter LX, paragraph 2)

    A. Charlotte's cynical realism, foreshadowing her choice.

    B. The cause of separation.

    C. Darcy's account: love as a gradual process.

    D. The colonel on money.

    Key: C (Darcy's account: love as a gradual process.)

39. [short · synthesis · DOK 4 · Dual Credit (Indiana College Core): ICC-WC-1.5] Close reading: how do the diction and syntax of “Elizabeth’s spirits soon rising to playfulness again, she wanted Mr. Darcy to account for his having ever fallen in love with her” (Chapter LX, paragraph 1) shape its meaning? Consider a second, competing reading.

    Sample answer: Opening: Elizabeth's wit restored. The evidence is “Elizabeth’s spirits soon rising to playfulness again, she wanted Mr. Darcy to account for his having ever fallen in love with her” (Chapter LX, paragraph 1). This develops first impressions: love that grew slowly, against first impressions. The words “playfulness” and “account” carry that meaning: they are the charged choices in the line, and changing either would soften the effect. Darcy says "I was in the middle before I knew that I had begun," which describes affection that grew from knowledge rather than from a first impression.

40. [mc · inference · DOK 2 · Program outcome: LeL-C2-LIT-1] What does this passage most clearly show? “I am the happiest creature in the world” (Chapter LX, paragraph 21)

    A. Public opinion shifts on manners, not character.

    B. Elizabeth's letter to Mrs. Gardiner echoes Jane's joy.

    C. The chapter opens with the letter she asked for.

    D. Darcy admits his role.

    Key: B (Elizabeth's letter to Mrs. Gardiner echoes Jane's joy.)

Rigor version	Items (in order)	Mix
Scaffolded support	1, 2, 3, 4, 5, 6, 7, 8, 9, 10, 11, 12, 13, 14, 15, 16	recall 9, inference 4, analysis 2, synthesis 1
HS Freshman	17, 18, 19, 20, 21, 4, 6, 1, 9, 8, 12, 13, 14, 22, 23, 24	recall 10, inference 2, analysis 3, synthesis 1
HS Sophomore	4, 18, 17, 3, 25, 1, 2, 10, 11, 26, 12, 27, 22, 15, 28, 29	recall 7, inference 4, analysis 3, synthesis 2
HS Junior	19, 2, 3, 17, 9, 30, 10, 12, 11, 26, 31, 15, 32, 27, 33, 24	recall 6, inference 4, analysis 4, synthesis 2
HS Senior	34, 1, 2, 25, 12, 35, 10, 13, 26, 27, 36, 31, 14, 33, 37, 28	recall 4, inference 5, analysis 4, synthesis 3
AP	17, 6, 21, 12, 26, 11, 13, 36, 23, 22, 31, 14, 24, 37, 16, 28	recall 3, inference 4, analysis 5, synthesis 4
College Freshman	4, 21, 5, 38, 26, 12, 11, 36, 22, 27, 15, 23, 39, 28, 33, 37	recall 3, inference 4, analysis 5, synthesis 4
College Sophomore	3, 8, 21, 13, 40, 26, 36, 15, 31, 22, 27, 24, 33, 37, 16, 28	recall 3, inference 3, analysis 5, synthesis 5
College Junior	4, 18, 21, 26, 10, 27, 23, 36, 15, 22, 24, 29, 33, 37, 16, 28	recall 3, inference 2, analysis 5, synthesis 6
College Senior	20, 4, 21, 12, 23, 36, 14, 22, 31, 27, 39, 24, 33, 16, 28, 37	recall 3, inference 1, analysis 6, synthesis 6

Graduate / PhD	8, 21, 17, 12, 10, 32, 22, 15, 36, 31, 23, 28, 16, 37, 33, 24	recall 3, inference 2, analysis 6, synthesis 5

Writing prompts (eleven rigor levels)

Scaffolded support (250 words; AP: see unit standards): Supported track (work from the passage your teacher selects). In “Chapter LX,” how does Austen show reflections on love? Write a paragraph that states your claim, quotes two details from the passage, and explains how each detail supports your idea. Use the characterization you noticed as one piece of evidence.

HS Freshman (350 words; AP: see unit standards): In Chapter LX, how does Austen develop the idea of reflections on love? State a clear claim, support it with two or three quotations, and explain how the characterization in the chapter helps build that idea.

HS Sophomore (450 words; AP: see unit standards): Analyze how Chapter LX develops the idea of reflections on love. Make a precise claim, support it with at least three pieces of textual evidence, and explain how the author's use of characterization and theme shapes that idea. Address one possible counterclaim.

HS Junior (550 words; AP: see unit standards): Analyze how the structure of Chapter LX (where it begins, turns and ends) and its characterization shape the reader's understanding of reflections on love. Identify one place where the text leaves matters uncertain and explain how that uncertainty adds to its meaning.

HS Senior (600 words; AP: see unit standards): Two readers disagree about what Chapter LX suggests about reflections on love. Lay out two plausible interpretations, weigh the evidence for each (including the chapter's characterization and theme), and argue for the stronger one in a sustained, well-organized essay.

AP (650 words; AP: AP-LIT.CHR, AP-LIT.LAN): Write a literary argument in which you analyze how Jane Austen uses characterization in Chapter LX to complicate the reader's understanding of reflections on love. Develop a defensible thesis, select evidence purposefully, and explain how specific choices of diction and syntax create meaning.

College Freshman (1000 words; AP: see unit standards): Situate Chapter LX within its historical and literary context and argue how the chapter's treatment of reflections on love responds to that context. Engage with at least one secondary perspective (a critic, historian or the author's own statements), integrate quotations smoothly, and cite in MLA style.

College Sophomore (1250 words; AP: see unit standards): Read Chapter LX alongside the conventions of its genre and period. Argue how the chapter's handling of reflections on love follows or bends those conventions, using the characterization as evidence, and test your reading against one published critic. Document two secondary sources in MLA.

College Junior (1500 words; AP: see unit standards): Apply a named critical approach (for example formalist, historicist, feminist, psychoanalytic or ecocritical) to Chapter LX and its treatment of reflections on love. State your method, show what it reveals in the chapter's characterization and theme, and identify where the text resists it.

College Senior (2000 words; AP: see unit standards): Develop a research argument that reads Chapter LX as evidence for a larger claim about reflections on love in Pride and Prejudice. Connect close reading of the chapter to the whole novel, engage at least four scholarly sources, and state precisely where your reading departs from theirs (Chicago style).

Graduate / PhD (2500 words; AP: see unit standards): Develop an original argument that reads Chapter LX as a hinge in the novel's larger treatment of reflections on love. Position your reading within a named critical conversation (for example formalist, historicist, psychoanalytic, feminist or postcolonial approaches), account for the textual history where relevant, and articulate the stakes of your intervention for scholarship on Pride and Prejudice.

SAT-style questions

1. "And if I had not a letter to write myself, I might sit by you, and admire the evenness of your writing, as another young lady once did.

   As used in the text, what does the word "evenness" most nearly mean?

   A. showy; ostentatious

   B. attempting to win favor from influential people by flattery

   C. regularity; steadiness

   D. with care and persistence

2. "And if I had not a letter to write myself, I might sit by you, and admire the evenness of your writing, as another young lady once did. But I have an aunt, too, who must not be longer neglected."

   Which choice best states a central concern of "Chapter LX"?

   A. Character flaws examined

   B. Reflections on love

   C. Parental conflict over the refusal

   D. Happiness for Jane

SAT key: 1. C (regularity; steadiness); 2. B (Reflections on love)

Lesson 62: Chapter LXI

Focus: endings and futures

Objective: Students will analyze how characterization develops in “Chapter LXI” by writing a claim-evidence-reasoning paragraph that cites at least 2 quotations from the section, and will score at least 80% on the section quiz.

Standards: AP: see the unit standards

Critical voice: “Vain are these speculations: the most perfect artist among women, the writer whose books are immortal, died “just as she was beginning to feel confidence in her own success”.” (Virginia Woolf, novelist and critic, "Jane Austen," The Common Reader (1925), "Jane Austen" (closing); public domain). Closure: Woolf imagines the novels Austen did not live to write. What would a sequel to Chapter LXI have to keep? Objective: Reflect on endings and Austen's place in literary history. Standards: AP: see the unit standards

Teacher only · spoilers

The epilogue: Jane and Bingley move near Pemberley; Kitty improves under her sisters' care; Mary stays home; Lydia and Wickham remain reckless. Lady Catherine eventually reconciles, and the Gardiners stay dear to the Darcys.

Background: Novel epilogues often 'settle' each character's fate.

Significance: The ending rewards growth and quietly punishes folly, affirming the novel's moral design.

Lesson plan and lecture script (90 minutes)

0–8 min · Bell-ringer · You do (8 min)
Students write to the bell-ringer, then pair-share.
Which ending surprised you most, and why? Write for five minutes. Starters: I think... because... / This connects to family and reputation because....
Prompt: Which ending surprised you most, and why?
Sentence starters: I think… because… · This connects to family and reputation because…
Strong response: A strong response takes a position and anticipates this: the Gardiners, once scorned for their trade, are welcomed at Pemberley as the people who united the couple.

8–18 min · Vocabulary with etymology notes · I do (10 min)
Three key words in context, with verified word histories.
Today's words: congratulatory — expressing congratulations; insipid — dull; lacking interest; vicinity — nearness; closeness (of place). “vicinity”: Origin: Latin vīcīnitās (“neighborhood”).
Words: congratulatory: expressing congratulations · insipid: dull; lacking interest · vicinity: nearness; closeness (of place)

18–28 min · Background and context · I do (10 min)
Mini-lecture (read or adapt the script).
Novel epilogues often 'settle' each character's fate. The ending rewards growth and quietly punishes folly, affirming the novel's moral design. Structure: The epilogue reports the futures of every character: Mrs. Bennet's delight, Kitty's improvement, Mary's staying home, Lydia and Wickham's extravagance, Lady Catherine's reconciliation. Irony: The opening sentence's "Happy for all her maternal feelings" echoes the ironic narrator of Chapter I. Watch for letters: Letters carry news, reveal character and change minds; Darcy's letter is the turning point of the novel. In this chapter: "yet be prevailed on to make his fortune. The congratulatory letter which Elizabeth received from Lydia on her marriage explained to her" (Chapter LXI, paragraph 6).

28–40 min · I do: modeled close reading · I do (12 min)
Model the close reading of the anchor quotation using the written think-aloud below.
First, meaning. I read "Happy for all her maternal feelings was the day on which Mrs. Bennet got rid of her two most deserving daughters" slowly and put it in my own words: The narrator says Mrs. Bennet was happy to get rid of her two most deserving daughters. Next, craft. I notice the irony of "got rid of," as if marriage were removal. The strongest word is "deserving": it shows the narrator's judgment that the best daughters married best. Then, effect. How does the narrator treat Mrs. Bennet at the end? My answer: At the end, the narrator treats Mrs. Bennet with gentle mockery: she sees her daughters' marriages as success and never changes.

> Happy for all her maternal feelings was the day on which Mrs. Bennet got rid of her two most deserving daughters (Chapter LXI, paragraph 1)

Think-aloud: First, meaning. I read "Happy for all her maternal feelings was the day on which Mrs. Bennet got rid of her two most deserving daughters" slowly and put it in my own words: The narrator says Mrs. Bennet was happy to get rid of her two most deserving daughters. Next, craft. I notice the irony of "got rid of," as if marriage were removal. The strongest word is "deserving": it shows the narrator's judgment that the best daughters married best. Then, effect. How does the narrator treat Mrs. Bennet at the end? My answer: At the end, the narrator treats Mrs. Bennet with gentle mockery: she sees her daughters' marriages as success and never changes.

40–55 min · We do: guided annotation · We do (15 min)
Guided analysis of a second quotation; expected answers given.
Ask: What words in this line stand out, and what do they suggest? Expected: The Gardiners honoured. Look at the craft: The opening sentence's "Happy for all her maternal feelings" echoes the ironic narrator of Chapter I. Ask: How does this line connect to family and reputation? Expected: The Gardiners, once scorned for their trade, are welcomed at Pemberley as the people who united the couple. (The Gardiners honoured.)

> they were both ever sensible of the warmest gratitude towards the persons who, by bringing her into Derbyshire, had been the means of uniting them (Chapter LXI, paragraph 15)

Ask: What words in this line stand out, and what do they suggest?
Expected answer: The Gardiners honoured. Look at the craft: The opening sentence's "Happy for all her maternal feelings" echoes the ironic narrator of Chapter I.
Ask: How does this line connect to family and reputation?
Expected answer: The Gardiners, once scorned for their trade, are welcomed at Pemberley as the people who united the couple. (The Gardiners honoured.)

55–70 min · You do: independent annotation · You do (15 min)
Independent annotation and a claim-evidence-reasoning paragraph (exemplar given).
Annotate the chapter for structure, irony (three marks with a margin note each), then write one claim-evidence-reasoning paragraph: what does this chapter suggest about endings and futures? Then start your writing prompt at your assigned level (HS Sophomore: Analyze how Chapter LXI develops the idea of endings and futures. Make a precise claim, support it with at least three pieces of textual evidence, and explain how the author's use of characterization and theme shapes that idea. Address one possible counterclaim.) Exemplar: The ending rewards character over rank, completing the novel's argument. When the text says “they were both ever sensible of the warmest gratitude towards the persons who, by bringing her into Derbyshire, had been the means of uniting them” (Chapter LXI, paragraph 15), it shows this directly. The Gardiners, people in trade, receive "the warmest gratitude" as "the means of uniting them," while the Wickhams exhaust even "Bingley's good humour."
Task: Annotate the chapter for structure, irony (three marks with a margin note each), then write one claim-evidence-reasoning paragraph: what does this chapter suggest about endings and futures? Then start your writing prompt at your assigned level (HS Sophomore: Analyze how Chapter LXI develops the idea of endings and futures. Make a precise claim, support it with at least three pieces of textual evidence, and explain how the author's use of characterization and theme shapes that idea. Address one possible counterclaim.)
Exemplar: The ending rewards character over rank, completing the novel's argument. When the text says “they were both ever sensible of the warmest gratitude towards the persons who, by bringing her into Derbyshire, had been the means of uniting them” (Chapter LXI, paragraph 15), it shows this directly. The Gardiners, people in trade, receive "the warmest gratitude" as "the means of uniting them," while the Wickhams exhaust even "Bingley's good humour."

70–80 min · Discussion · We do (10 min)
Structured discussion from the 30 tiered questions, with facilitation notes.
Anchor question: Which ending surprised you most, and why? Ask: does everyone get what they deserve? Is the ending too neat?
Anchor question: Which ending surprised you most, and why?
Facilitation: Ask: does everyone get what they deserve? Is the ending too neat?

80–87 min · Exit ticket / chapter quiz · You do (7 min)
Chapter quiz in the app and an exit ticket (answer given).
Chapter quiz in the app, then: In one sentence, what does this chapter suggest about endings and futures? Support it with one short quotation. Model answer: The ending rewards character over rank, completing the novel's argument. (“they were both ever sensible of the warmest gratitude towards the persons who, by bringing her into Derbyshire, had been the means of uniting them”, Chapter LXI, paragraph 15). Accept any defensible claim backed by a quotation from the chapter; the answer key for the quiz is in the Quiz section.
Exit ticket: In one sentence, what does this chapter suggest about endings and futures? Support it with one short quotation.
Answer: Model answer: The ending rewards character over rank, completing the novel's argument. (“they were both ever sensible of the warmest gratitude towards the persons who, by bringing her into Derbyshire, had been the means of uniting them”, Chapter LXI, paragraph 15). Accept any defensible claim backed by a quotation from the chapter; the answer key for the quiz is in the Quiz section.

87–90 min · Closure · I do (3 min)
Summarize the lesson and preview the next reading.
Today we saw how structure shapes endings and futures. Key takeaway: the Gardiners, once scorned for their trade, are welcomed at Pemberley as the people who united the couple.

Total: 90 minutes.

Teacher analysis (spoilers)

Literary elements

- Structure: The epilogue reports the futures of every character: Mrs. Bennet's delight, Kitty's improvement, Mary's staying home, Lydia and Wickham's extravagance, Lady Catherine's reconciliation.
- Irony: The opening sentence's "Happy for all her maternal feelings" echoes the ironic narrator of Chapter I.

Themes and how they develop

- family and reputation: the Gardiners, once scorned for their trade, are welcomed at Pemberley as the people who united the couple.

Symbols and motifs

- letters: Letters carry news, reveal character and change minds; Darcy's letter is the turning point of the novel. In this chapter: “yet be prevailed on to make his fortune. The congratulatory letter which Elizabeth received from Lydia on her marriage explained to her” (Chapter LXI, paragraph 6).
- pride: Pride is discussed openly and shown in action; who is proud, and whether pride is a fault, keeps shifting. In this chapter: “rid of her two most deserving daughters. With what delighted pride she afterwards visited Mrs. Bingley and talked of Mrs. Darcy may” (Chapter LXI, paragraph 1).

Key quotations (checked against the reading text)

- “Happy for all her maternal feelings was the day on which Mrs. Bennet got rid of her two most deserving daughters” (Chapter LXI, paragraph 1) Irony: "got rid of" undercuts "maternal feelings."
- “they were both ever sensible of the warmest gratitude towards the persons who, by bringing her into Derbyshire, had been the means of uniting them” (Chapter LXI, paragraph 15) The Gardiners honoured.
- “even Bingley’s good humour was overcome” (Chapter LXI, paragraph 11) The Wickhams wear out their welcome.

Model claim-evidence-reasoning

Claim: The ending rewards character over rank, completing the novel's argument.
Evidence: “they were both ever sensible of the warmest gratitude towards the persons who, by bringing her into Derbyshire, had been the means of uniting them” (Chapter LXI, paragraph 15)
Reasoning: The Gardiners, people in trade, receive "the warmest gratitude" as "the means of uniting them," while the Wickhams exhaust even "Bingley's good humour."

Vocabulary with etymology notes

Word	Definition (in this sentence)	In context	Word history
congratulatory (adjective)	expressing congratulations	The congratulatory letter which Elizabeth received from Lydia on her marriage explained to her that, by his wife at least, if not by himself, such a hope was cherished.
insipid (adjective)	dull; lacking interest	She was not of so ungovernable a temper as Lydia, and, removed from the influence of Lydia’s example, she became, by proper attention and management, less irritable, less ignorant, and less insipid.
vicinity (noun)	nearness; closeness (of place)	So near a vicinity to her mother and Meryton relations was not desirable even to his easy temper, or her affectionate heart.	“vicinity”: Origin: Latin vīcīnitās (“neighborhood”). (Liber et Libri origin note, https:// en.wiktionary.org/wiki/vicinity#Etymology)

Discussion questions

1. Which ending surprised you most, and why?
2. Where does characterization appear in this chapter, and what effect does it have? Point to one passage.
3. How does this chapter connect to the book's larger concern with first impressions and prejudice?

Classroom discussion questions (30, tiered)

Wait time after every question (3 s for DOK 1, 5 s for DOK 2, 8 to 10 s for DOK 3 and 4); think-pair-share on DOK 3 and 4; answer each response with a follow-up probe; close with student-generated questions. Focus sets by rigor level: Scaffolded support: 1, 2, 3, 4, 5, 6, 11, 12, 13, 14, 21, 22; HS Freshman: 1, 2, 3, 4, 5, 12, 13, 14, 15, 22, 23, 24; HS Sophomore: 1, 2, 3, 4, 13, 14, 15, 16, 17, 23, 24, 25; HS Junior: 1, 2, 3, 14, 15, 16, 17, 18, 24, 25, 26, 27; HS Senior: 1, 2, 3, 15, 16, 17, 18, 25, 26, 27, 28, 29; AP: 1, 2, 16, 17, 18, 19, 20, 26, 27, 28, 29, 30; College Freshman: 1, 2, 17, 18, 19, 20, 21, 22, 27, 28, 29, 30; College Sophomore: 1, 2, 11, 18, 19, 20, 21, 22, 23, 28, 29, 30; College Junior: 1, 11, 12, 19, 20, 21, 22, 23, 24, 25, 29, 30; College Senior: 1, 11, 12, 13, 20, 21, 22, 23, 24, 25, 26, 30; Graduate / PhD: 1, 11, 12, 13, 21, 22, 23, 24, 25, 26, 27, 28

Literal / recall

1. Where do Jane and Bingley eventually live? [DOK 1 · coldCallWithSupport · wait 3 s · AP: unit standards] Look for: Near Pemberley
2. Who improves under her sisters' care? [DOK 1 · turnAndTalk · wait 3 s · AP: unit standards] Look for: Kitty
3. How do Lydia and Wickham end up? [DOK 1 · coldCallWithSupport · wait 3 s · AP: unit standards] Look for: Still reckless
4. Who remains dear to the Darcys? [DOK 1 · turnAndTalk · wait 3 s · AP: unit standards] Look for: The Gardiners
5. What does the ending affirm? [DOK 1 · coldCallWithSupport · wait 3 s · AP: unit standards] Look for: Growth is rewarded
6. Retell the three most important events of “Chapter LXI” in order, in one sentence each. [DOK 1 · turnAndTalk · wait 3 s · AP: unit standards] Look for: The epilogue: Jane and Bingley move near Pemberley; Kitty improves under her sisters' care; Mary stays home; Lydia and Wickham remain reckless. Lady Catherine eventually reconciles, and the Gardiners stay dear to the Darcys.
7. Which characters appear or are mentioned in “Chapter LXI”? Name two and one thing each says or does. [DOK 1 · coldCallWithSupport · wait 3 s · AP: unit standards] Look for: Names and actions taken from the chapter; check against the teacher summary.
8. Where and when does “Chapter LXI” take place? Point to the line that tells you. [DOK 1 · turnAndTalk · wait 3 s · AP: unit standards] Look for: A place/time detail quoted from the chapter.
9. Reread: “The congratulatory letter which Elizabeth received from Lydia on her marriage explained to her that, by his wife at least, if not by himself, such a hope was cherished.” What does “congratulatory” mean here, and what is literally happening in this line? [DOK 1 · turnAndTalk · wait 3 s · AP: unit standards] Look for: congratulatory: expressing congratulations.
10. Reread: “She was not of so ungovernable a temper as Lydia, and, removed from the influence of Lydia’s example, she became, by proper attention and management, less irritable, less ignorant, and less insipid.” What does “insipid” mean here, and what is literally happening in this line? [DOK 1 · turnAndTalk · wait 3 s · AP: unit standards] Look for: insipid: dull; lacking interest.

Inferential / analytical

1. What does “Chapter LXI” suggest about endings and futures? State the inference and the line that supports it. [DOK 2 · thinkPairShare · wait 5 s · AP-LIT.LAN] Look for: The ending rewards growth and quietly punishes folly, affirming the novel's moral design.
2. Find one example of characterization in this chapter. What does it reveal that a plain statement would not? [DOK 2 · followUp · wait 5 s · AP-LIT.CHR] Look for: Look for what characters say, do and think, and how others react to them.
3. How does the theme in this chapter shape what we understand about endings and futures? [DOK 3 · thinkPairShare · wait 8 s · AP-LIT.LAN] Look for: Look for statements or moments that connect to the book's big ideas.
   Answer guidance: A defensible line of argument: The ending rewards character over rank, completing the novel's argument. Useful evidence: “Happy for all her maternal feelings was the day on which Mrs. Bennet got rid of her two most deserving daughters” (Chapter LXI, paragraph 1): Irony: "got rid of" undercuts "maternal feelings." Theme link: the Gardiners, once scorned for their trade, are welcomed at Pemberley as the people who united the couple. Credit any position that is supported by quotation and reasoning; push one-sided answers to address the strongest counterpoint.
4. In the passage that begins “Mr.”, why might Austen have chosen these particular words? Pick two and explain their connotations. [DOK 2 · followUp · wait 5 s · AP-LIT.FIG] Look for: Diction analysis of two words in the anchor passage.
5. What causes the main turn in “Chapter LXI”, and what effect is it likely to have on what follows? [DOK 2 · followUp · wait 5 s · AP-LIT.STR] Look for: The epilogue: Jane and Bingley move near Pemberley; Kitty improves under her sisters' care; Mary stays home; Lydia and Wickham remain reckless. Lady Catherine eventually reconciles, and the Gardiners stay dear to the Darcys.
6. How does “Chapter LXI” build on “Chapter LX”? Name one link of cause and effect. [DOK 3 · thinkPairShare · wait 8 s · AP-LIT.STR] Look for: A causal or structural link between this and the previous chapter.
   Answer guidance: A defensible line of argument: The ending rewards character over rank, completing the novel's argument. Useful evidence: “they were both ever sensible of the warmest gratitude towards the persons who, by bringing her into Derbyshire, had been the means of uniting them” (Chapter LXI, paragraph 15): The Gardiners honoured. On structure: The epilogue reports the futures of every character: Mrs. Bennet's delight, Kitty's improvement, Mary's staying home, Lydia and Wickham's extravagance, Lady Catherine's reconciliation. Credit any position that is supported by quotation and reasoning; push one-sided answers to address the strongest counterpoint.
7. What can we infer about a character's motives from what they say and do here, as opposed to what they claim? [DOK 3 · followUp · wait 8 s · AP-LIT.CHR] Look for: An inference about motive supported by a quoted line.
   Answer guidance: A defensible line of argument: The ending rewards character over rank, completing the novel's argument. Useful evidence: “even Bingley’s good humour was overcome” (Chapter LXI, paragraph 11): The Wickhams wear out their welcome. Theme link: the Gardiners, once scorned for their trade, are welcomed at Pemberley as the people who united the couple. Credit any position that is supported by quotation and reasoning; push one-sided answers to address the strongest counterpoint.
8. The bell-ringer asked: “Which ending surprised you most, and why?” Now that we have read closely, how would you revise your first answer, and which line changed your mind? [DOK 2 · thinkPairShare · wait 5 s · AP-LIT.LAN] Look for: A revised answer anchored in the text.

9. Where does tone / mood appear, and how does it connect this chapter to the larger concern with first impressions and prejudice? [DOK 3 · followUp · wait 8 s · AP-LIT.FIG] Look for: Look for word choices that reveal the narrator's attitude or the scene's feeling.
   Answer guidance: A defensible line of argument: The ending rewards character over rank, completing the novel's argument. Useful evidence: “Happy for all her maternal feelings was the day on which Mrs. Bennet got rid of her two most deserving daughters” (Chapter LXI, paragraph 1): Irony: "got rid of" undercuts "maternal feelings." Theme link: the Gardiners, once scorned for their trade, are welcomed at Pemberley as the people who united the couple. Credit any position that is supported by quotation and reasoning; push one-sided answers to address the strongest counterpoint.
10. Background: Novel epilogues often 'settle' each character's fate. How does knowing this change the way you read one moment in the chapter? [DOK 3 · thinkPairShare · wait 8 s · AP-LIT.SET] Look for: A specific moment reread in light of the context.
    Answer guidance: A defensible line of argument: The ending rewards character over rank, completing the novel's argument. Useful evidence: “they were both ever sensible of the warmest gratitude towards the persons who, by bringing her into Derbyshire, had been the means of uniting them” (Chapter LXI, paragraph 15): The Gardiners honoured. Theme link: the Gardiners, once scorned for their trade, are welcomed at Pemberley as the people who united the couple. Credit any position that is supported by quotation and reasoning; push one-sided answers to address the strongest counterpoint.

Evaluative / synthesis / creative

1. A critic might argue: “The ending rewards growth and quietly punishes folly, affirming the novel's moral design.” How far do you agree? Take a stand and defend it with two lines from the chapter. [DOK 3 · fourCorners · wait 8 s · AP-LIT.LAN] Look for: A defended position with evidence and one counterpoint.
   Answer guidance: A defensible line of argument: The ending rewards character over rank, completing the novel's argument. Useful evidence: “even Bingley’s good humour was overcome” (Chapter LXI, paragraph 11): The Wickhams wear out their welcome. Theme link: the Gardiners, once scorned for their trade, are welcomed at Pemberley as the people who united the couple. Credit any position that is supported by quotation and reasoning; push one-sided answers to address the strongest counterpoint.
2. Which character in this chapter acts most wisely, and which least? Judge them by a standard you name. [DOK 3 · thinkPairShare · wait 8 s · AP-LIT.CHR, AP-LIT.LAN] Look for: An evaluation using an explicit criterion and evidence.
   Answer guidance: A defensible line of argument: The ending rewards character over rank, completing the novel's argument. Useful evidence: “Happy for all her maternal feelings was the day on which Mrs. Bennet got rid of her two most deserving daughters” (Chapter LXI, paragraph 1): Irony: "got rid of" undercuts "maternal feelings." Theme link: the Gardiners, once scorned for their trade, are welcomed at Pemberley as the people who united the couple. Credit any position that is supported by quotation and reasoning; push one-sided answers to address the strongest counterpoint.
3. Rewrite one moment of “Chapter LXI” from the point of view of a different character. What does the new angle reveal or hide about endings and futures? [DOK 4 · thinkPairShare · wait 8 s · AP-LIT.LAN, AP-LIT.NAR] Look for: A creative product with a rationale tied to the text.
   Answer guidance: A defensible line of argument: The ending rewards character over rank, completing the novel's argument. Useful evidence: “they were both ever sensible of the warmest gratitude towards the persons who, by bringing her into Derbyshire, had been the means of uniting them” (Chapter LXI, paragraph 15): The Gardiners honoured. Theme link: the Gardiners, once scorned for their trade, are welcomed at Pemberley as the people who united the couple. Credit any position that is supported by quotation and reasoning; push one-sided answers to address the strongest counterpoint.

4. Write three questions of your own about “Chapter LXI”: one recall, one “why/how”, and one “should/what if”. Trade with a partner and answer theirs. [DOK 3 · studentGenerated · wait 8 s · AP-LIT.LAN] Look for: Student-generated questions at three levels.

   Answer guidance: A defensible line of argument: The ending rewards character over rank, completing the novel's argument. Useful evidence: “even Bingley’s good humour was overcome” (Chapter LXI, paragraph 11): The Wickhams wear out their welcome. Theme link: the Gardiners, once scorned for their trade, are welcomed at Pemberley as the people who united the couple. Credit any position that is supported by quotation and reasoning; push one-sided answers to address the strongest counterpoint.

5. Connect this chapter to pride and self-knowledge: is the link strong or weak so far? What would Austen need to show next to strengthen it? [DOK 4 · socraticCircle · wait 8 s · AP-LIT.LAN] Look for: A judgment of thematic development across the work.

   Answer guidance: A defensible line of argument: The ending rewards character over rank, completing the novel's argument. Useful evidence: “Happy for all her maternal feelings was the day on which Mrs. Bennet got rid of her two most deserving daughters” (Chapter LXI, paragraph 1): Irony: "got rid of" undercuts "maternal feelings." Theme link: the Gardiners, once scorned for their trade, are welcomed at Pemberley as the people who united the couple. Credit any position that is supported by quotation and reasoning; push one-sided answers to address the strongest counterpoint.

6. Is the characterization in this chapter effective, or does it feel heavy-handed? Evaluate it as a reader would in a review. [DOK 3 · fourCorners · wait 8 s · AP-LIT.CHR, AP-LIT.LAN] Look for: An evaluative judgment with criteria and evidence.

   Answer guidance: A defensible line of argument: The ending rewards character over rank, completing the novel's argument. Useful evidence: “they were both ever sensible of the warmest gratitude towards the persons who, by bringing her into Derbyshire, had been the means of uniting them” (Chapter LXI, paragraph 15): The Gardiners honoured. Theme link: the Gardiners, once scorned for their trade, are welcomed at Pemberley as the people who united the couple. Credit any position that is supported by quotation and reasoning; push one-sided answers to address the strongest counterpoint.

7. Compare how “Chapter LXI” treats endings and futures with how another text, film or event you know treats a similar idea. What does Pride and Prejudice see that the other misses? [DOK 4 · socraticCircle · wait 8 s · AP-LIT.LAN] Look for: A cross-text synthesis.

   Answer guidance: A defensible line of argument: The ending rewards character over rank, completing the novel's argument. Useful evidence: “even Bingley’s good humour was overcome” (Chapter LXI, paragraph 11): The Wickhams wear out their welcome. Theme link: the Gardiners, once scorned for their trade, are welcomed at Pemberley as the people who united the couple. Credit any position that is supported by quotation and reasoning; push one-sided answers to address the strongest counterpoint.

8. As the final chapter, does this ending resolve first impressions and prejudice? Argue whether the ending is earned. [DOK 3 · thinkPairShare · wait 8 s · AP-LIT.LAN, AP-LIT.STR] Look for: A prediction or judgment justified with textual clues.

   Answer guidance: A defensible line of argument: The ending rewards character over rank, completing the novel's argument. Useful evidence: “Happy for all her maternal feelings was the day on which Mrs. Bennet got rid of her two most deserving daughters” (Chapter LXI, paragraph 1): Irony: "got rid of" undercuts "maternal feelings." Theme link: the Gardiners, once scorned for their trade, are welcomed at Pemberley as the people who united the couple. Credit any position that is supported by quotation and reasoning; push one-sided answers to address the strongest counterpoint.

9. Design a one-paragraph modern adaptation of this chapter (setting, characters, conflict). What must stay the same for it to still be about endings and futures? [DOK 4 · thinkPairShare · wait 8 s · AP-LIT.LAN] Look for: A creative transfer that keeps the core idea.
   Answer guidance: A defensible line of argument: The ending rewards character over rank, completing the novel's argument. Useful evidence: “they were both ever sensible of the warmest gratitude towards the persons who, by bringing her into Derbyshire, had been the means of uniting them” (Chapter LXI, paragraph 15): The Gardiners honoured. Theme link: the Gardiners, once scorned for their trade, are welcomed at Pemberley as the people who united the couple. Credit any position that is supported by quotation and reasoning; push one-sided answers to address the strongest counterpoint.
10. What question would you most like to ask Jane Austen about this chapter, and what answer do you think the text itself gives? [DOK 4 · studentGenerated · wait 8 s · AP-LIT.LAN] Look for: A student-generated question answered from evidence.
    Answer guidance: A defensible line of argument: The ending rewards character over rank, completing the novel's argument. Useful evidence: “even Bingley’s good humour was overcome” (Chapter LXI, paragraph 11): The Wickhams wear out their welcome. Theme link: the Gardiners, once scorned for their trade, are welcomed at Pemberley as the people who united the couple. Credit any position that is supported by quotation and reasoning; push one-sided answers to address the strongest counterpoint.

Annotation focus

- Characterization: look for what characters say, do and think, and how others react to them (anchor passage in the We do segment)
- Also notice Theme: statements or moments that connect to the book's big ideas
- Also notice Tone / mood: word choices that reveal the narrator's attitude or the scene's feeling

Chapter quiz: item bank (all eleven rigor versions)

1. [mc · recall · DOK 1] How do Lydia and Wickham end up?
   A. In prison
   B. Rich and wise
   C. Still reckless
   D. Separated

   Key: C (Still reckless)
2. [fill · recall · DOK 1] Complete the quotation from Chapter LXI, paragraph 1: “Happy for all her maternal feelings was the day on which Mrs. Bennet got rid of her two most _____ daughters”
   Key: deserving
3. [mc · recall · DOK 1] Who remains dear to the Darcys?
   A. The Gardiners
   B. The Collinses
   C. The Forsters
   D. The Phillipses

Key: A (The Gardiners)

4. [fill · recall · DOK 1] Fill in the blank with the vocabulary word that fits: “The _____ letter which Elizabeth received from Lydia on her marriage explained to her that, by his wife at least, if not by himself, such a hope was cherished.” Word bank: vicinity, insipid, congratulatory

   Key: congratulatory

5. [mc · recall · DOK 1] What does the ending affirm?

   A. Wealth rules
   B. Nothing changes
   C. Growth is rewarded
   D. Pride wins

   Key: C (Growth is rewarded)

6. [mc · recall · DOK 1] In the line “The congratulatory letter which Elizabeth received from Lydia on her marriage explained to her that, by his wife at least, if not by himself, such a hope was cherished.”, what does “congratulatory” most nearly mean?

   A. kind and caring toward others
   B. open and bold, without any attempt to hide
   C. pleasant and well suited
   D. expressing congratulations

   Key: D (expressing congratulations)

7. [mc · recall · DOK 1] Who improves under her sisters' care?

   A. Charlotte
   B. Kitty
   C. Lydia
   D. Mary

   Key: B (Kitty)

8. [mc · recall · DOK 1] Which word completes this sentence from Chapter LXI, paragraph 4? “In society so superior to what she had generally known, her _____ was great.”

   A. afterwards
   B. accomplishments
   C. characters
   D. improvement

   Key: D (improvement)

9. [fill · recall · DOK 1] Complete the quotation from Chapter LXI, paragraph 8: “I am sure Wickham would like a place at court very much, and I do not think we shall have quite money enough to live upon _____ some help.” Word bank: especially, neighbouring, afterwards, without

   Key: without

10. [fill · recall · DOK 1] Fill in the blank with the vocabulary word that fits: “She was not of so ungovernable a temper as Lydia, and, removed from the influence of Lydia’s example, she became, by proper attention and management, less irritable, less ignorant, and less _____.” Word bank: congratulatory, insipid, vicinity

    Key: insipid

11. [short · inference · DOK 2] What does this passage from Chapter LXI, paragraph 10 reveal about the character or situation? “Their manner of living, even when the restoration of peace dismissed them to a home, was unsettled in the extreme.” Answer in two or three sentences with one detail.

    Sample answer: The passage (Chapter LXI, paragraph 10) shows the situation turning on first impressions and prejudice: the Gardiners, once scorned for their trade, are welcomed at Pemberley as the people who united the couple. The words “restoration” and “dismissed” are the proof, because they show how the moment looks to the people in it. They suggest more than the narrator states outright.

12. [mc · inference · DOK 2] Which of these passages comes earliest in Chapter LXI?

    A. “Mr. Bennet missed his second daughter exceedingly; his affection for her drew him oftener from home than anything else could do.”

    B. “With what delighted pride she afterwards visited Mrs. Bingley and talked of Mrs. Darcy may be guessed.”

    C. “He delighted in going to Pemberley, especially when he was least expected.”

    D. “Mr. Bingley and Jane remained at Netherfield only a twelvemonth.”

    Key: B (“With what delighted pride she afterwards visited Mrs. Bingley and talked of Mrs. Darcy may be guessed.”)

13. [mc · inference · DOK 2] Which choice best states a central concern of “Chapter LXI”?

    A. Marriage as a social goal

    B. Music, wit and manners

    C. Endings and futures

    D. Farewells at Hunsford

    Key: C (Endings and futures)

14. [mc · analysis · DOK 3] Which literary element does this describe in “Chapter LXI”? The epilogue reports the futures of every character: Mrs. Bennet's delight, Kitty's improvement, Mary's staying home, Lydia and Wickham's extravagance, Lady Catherine's reconciliation.

    A. Hyperbole

    B. Point of view

    C. Conflict

    D. Structure

    Key: D (Structure)

15. [short · analysis · DOK 3] Analyze how the word choice in this passage from Chapter LXI, paragraph 13 shapes its tone: “Pemberley was now Georgiana’s home; and the attachment of the sisters was exactly what Darcy had hoped to see.” Pick two words and explain their effect.

    Sample answer: The words “attachment” and “sisters” (Chapter LXI, paragraph 13) make the tone heavy and deliberate rather than neutral. That weight points the reader to class and social mobility: the Gardiners, once scorned for their trade, are welcomed at Pemberley as the people who united the couple. The author chooses them so the moment feels significant instead of passing.

16. [short · synthesis · DOK 4] Connect this passage from Chapter LXI, paragraph 8 to the story's treatment of marriage and money: “It is a great comfort to have you so rich, and when you have nothing else to do, I hope you will think of us.” Use one other moment from the story as well.

    Sample answer: This passage (Chapter LXI, paragraph 8) develops marriage and money: the Gardiners, once scorned for their trade, are welcomed at Pemberley as the people who united the couple. Its words “comfort” and “nothing” carry that idea into this moment. The same concern returns in “His affection for her soon sunk into indifference; hers lasted a little longer; and in spite of her youth and her…” (Chapter LXI, paragraph 10), so the two passages read as a pattern, not a single moment. Together they show the story treating marriage and money as central.

17. [mc · recall · DOK 1] Where do Jane and Bingley eventually live?

    A. In London

    B. At Longbourn

    C. Near Pemberley

    D. In Brighton

    Key: C (Near Pemberley)

18. [mc · recall · DOK 1] In the line “So near a vicinity to her mother and Meryton relations was not desirable even to his easy temper, or her affectionate heart.”, what does “vicinity” most nearly mean?

    A. steadiness of mind under stress

    B. propriety in manners and conduct

    C. to draw into (a difficult situation)

    D. nearness; closeness (of place)

    Key: D (nearness; closeness (of place))

19. [fill · recall · DOK 1] Complete the quotation from Chapter LXI, paragraph 11: “even Bingley’s good humour was _____”

    Key: overcome

20. [mc · analysis · DOK 3] Which literary element does this describe in “Chapter LXI”? The opening sentence's ‘Happy for all her maternal feelings’ echoes the ironic narrator of Chapter I.

    A. Alliteration

    B. Irony

    C. Metaphor

    D. Simile

    Key: B (Irony)

21. [short · synthesis · DOK 4] Close reading: how do the diction and syntax of “they were both ever sensible of the warmest gratitude towards the persons who, by bringing her into Derbyshire, had been the means of uniting them” (Chapter LXI, paragraph 15) shape its meaning? Consider a second, competing reading.

    Sample answer: The Gardiners honoured. The evidence is “they were both ever sensible of the warmest gratitude towards the persons who, by bringing her into Derbyshire, had been the means of…” (Chapter LXI, paragraph 15). This develops family and reputation: the Gardiners, once scorned for their trade, are welcomed at Pemberley as the people who united the couple. The words “gratitude” and “sensible” carry that meaning: they are the charged choices in the line, and changing either would soften the effect. The Gardiners, people in trade, receive "the warmest gratitude" as "the means of uniting them," while the Wickhams exhaust even "Bingley's good humour.".

22. [short · synthesis · DOK 4] Synthesis: trace how family and reputation develops from Chapter LVII to Chapter LXI. Use one quotation from each.

    Sample answer: Earlier, in Chapter LVII, paragraph 18, the text reads “Mr. Darcy, who never looks at any woman but to see a blemish” — Mr. Bennet's joke. In Chapter LXI, “Happy for all her maternal feelings was the day on which Mrs. Bennet got rid of her two most deserving daughters” (Chapter LXI, paragraph 1) — Irony: "got rid of" undercuts "maternal feelings.". The Gardiners, once scorned for their trade, are welcomed at Pemberley as the people who united the couple.

23. [short · synthesis · DOK 4] Close reading: how do the diction and syntax of “Happy for all her maternal feelings was the day on which Mrs. Bennet got rid of her two most deserving daughters” (Chapter LXI, paragraph 1) shape its meaning? Consider a second, competing reading.
    Sample answer: Irony: "got rid of" undercuts "maternal feelings.". The evidence is “Happy for all her maternal feelings was the day on which Mrs. Bennet got rid of her two most deserving daughters” (Chapter LXI, paragraph 1). This develops family and reputation: the Gardiners, once scorned for their trade, are welcomed at Pemberley as the people who united the couple. The words “daughters” and “deserving” carry that meaning: they are the charged choices in the line, and changing either would soften the effect. The Gardiners, people in trade, receive "the warmest gratitude" as "the means of uniting them," while the Wickhams exhaust even "Bingley's good humour.".
24. [fill · recall · DOK 1] Complete the quotation from Chapter LXI, paragraph 15: “they were both ever sensible of the warmest _____ towards the persons who, by bringing her into Derbyshire, had been the means of uniting them”
    Key: gratitude
25. [mc · recall · DOK 1] Which word completes this sentence from Chapter LXI, paragraph 10? “They were always moving from place to place in quest of a cheap _____, and always spending more than they ought.”
    A. insufficient
    B. situation
    C. pleasantry
    D. profession

    Key: B (situation)
26. [fill · recall · DOK 1] Complete the quotation from Chapter LXI, paragraph 1: “With what delighted pride she _____ visited Mrs. Bingley and talked of Mrs. Darcy may be guessed.” Word bank: situation, profession, afterwards, intimate
    Key: afterwards
27. [short · synthesis · DOK 4] Connect this passage from Chapter LXI, paragraph 5 to the story's treatment of women's limited choices: “Mary was obliged to mix more with the world, but she could still moralize over every morning visit” Use one other moment from the story as well.
    Sample answer: This passage (Chapter LXI, paragraph 5) develops women's limited choices: the Gardiners, once scorned for their trade, are welcomed at Pemberley as the people who united the couple. Its words “moralize” and “morning” carry that idea into this moment. The same concern returns in “He bore with philosophy the conviction that Elizabeth must now become acquainted with whatever of his ingratitude and…” (Chapter LXI, paragraph 6), so the two passages read as a pattern, not a single moment. Together they show the story treating women's limited choices as central.
28. [short · inference · DOK 2 · AP: AP-LIT.CHR] What can you infer from this line? “Happy for all her maternal feelings was the day on which Mrs. Bennet got rid of her two most deserving daughters” (Chapter LXI, paragraph 1) Answer in two or three sentences with one detail.
    Sample answer: Irony: "got rid of" undercuts "maternal feelings.". The evidence is “Happy for all her maternal feelings was the day on which Mrs. Bennet got rid of her two most deserving daughters” (Chapter LXI, paragraph 1).
29. [short · analysis · DOK 3 · AP: AP-LIT.FIG] Analyze how the word choice in this passage from Chapter LXI, paragraph 3 shapes its tone: “Mr. Bingley and Jane remained at Netherfield only a twelvemonth.” Pick two words and explain their effect.
    Sample answer: The words “twelvemonth” and “remained” (Chapter LXI, paragraph 3) make the tone heavy and deliberate rather than neutral. That weight points the reader to pride and self-knowledge: the Gardiners, once scorned for their trade, are welcomed at Pemberley as the people who united the couple. The author chooses them so the moment feels significant instead of passing.

30. [short · inference · DOK 2 · AP: AP-LIT.CHR] What can you infer from this line? “they were both ever sensible of the warmest gratitude towards the persons who, by bringing her into Derbyshire, had been the means of uniting them” (Chapter LXI, paragraph 15) Answer in two or three sentences with one detail.
Sample answer: The Gardiners honoured. The evidence is “they were both ever sensible of the warmest gratitude towards the persons who, by bringing her into Derbyshire, had been the means of…” (Chapter LXI, paragraph 15).

31. [short · analysis · DOK 3 · AP: AP-LIT.FIG] Analyze the word choice in “even Bingley’s good humour was overcome” (Chapter LXI, paragraph 11). Pick two words and explain what they suggest.
Sample answer: The Wickhams wear out their welcome. The evidence is “even Bingley’s good humour was overcome” (Chapter LXI, paragraph 11). This develops family and reputation: the Gardiners, once scorned for their trade, are welcomed at Pemberley as the people who united the couple. The words “overcome” and “humour” carry that meaning: they are the charged choices in the line, and changing either would soften the effect.

32. [fill · recall · DOK 1 · Dual Credit (Indiana College Core): ICC-WC-1.5] Complete the quotation from Chapter LXI, paragraph 13: “He, who had always inspired in herself a respect which almost overcame her affection, she now saw the object of open _____.” Word bank: pleasantry, without, afterwards, especially Key: pleasantry

33. [mc · inference · DOK 2 · Dual Credit (Indiana College Core): ICC-WC-1.5] What does this passage most clearly show? “Happy for all her maternal feelings was the day on which Mrs. Bennet got rid of her two most deserving daughters” (Chapter LXI, paragraph 1)
A. Wickham, just before giving it.
B. Irony: "got rid of" undercuts "maternal feelings."
C. Lydia treats the elopement as a joke at her friend's expense.
D. Wickham's charm consoles the family; irony in hindsight.
Key: B (Irony: "got rid of" undercuts "maternal feelings.")

34. [short · analysis · DOK 3 · Dual Credit (Indiana College Core): ICC-WC-1.5] Claim: The ending rewards character over rank, completing the novel's argument. Explain how this evidence supports the claim: “they were both ever sensible of the warmest gratitude towards the persons who, by bringing her into Derbyshire, had been the means of uniting them” (Chapter LXI, paragraph 15).
Sample answer: The Gardiners, people in trade, receive "the warmest gratitude" as "the means of uniting them," while the Wickhams exhaust even "Bingley's good humour.". The evidence is “they were both ever sensible of the warmest gratitude towards the persons who, by bringing her into Derbyshire, had been the means of…” (Chapter LXI, paragraph 15) — The Gardiners honoured. This develops family and reputation: the Gardiners, once scorned for their trade, are welcomed at Pemberley as the people who united the couple.

35. [mc · recall · DOK 1 · Program outcome: LeL-C2-LIT-1] In the line “She was not of so ungovernable a temper as Lydia, and, removed from the influence of Lydia’s example, she became, by proper attention and management, less irritable, less ignorant, and less insipid.”, what does “insipid” most nearly mean?
A. hides
B. dull; lacking interest
C. nearness; closeness (of place)
D. expressing congratulations
Key: B (dull; lacking interest)

Rigor version	Items (in order)	Mix
Scaffolded support	1, 2, 3, 4, 5, 6, 7, 8, 9, 10, 11, 12, 13, 14, 15, 16	recall 10, inference 3, analysis 2, synthesis 1
HS Freshman	3, 17, 18, 5, 19, 7, 1, 10, 6, 4, 13, 14, 20, 21, 22, 23	recall 10, inference 1, analysis 2, synthesis 3
HS Sophomore	24, 3, 1, 25, 9, 10, 7, 26, 13, 11, 12, 15, 20, 14, 27, 16	recall 8, inference 3, analysis 3, synthesis 2
HS Junior	5, 9, 25, 18, 8, 10, 28, 12, 13, 11, 14, 15, 29, 20, 16, 27	recall 6, inference 4, analysis 4, synthesis 2
HS Senior	26, 10, 19, 3, 18, 7, 11, 13, 12, 15, 14, 20, 29, 16, 22, 27	recall 6, inference 3, analysis 4, synthesis 3
AP	4, 10, 3, 6, 30, 12, 13, 11, 15, 31, 20, 29, 14, 22, 27, 16	recall 4, inference 4, analysis 5, synthesis 3
College Freshman	32, 5, 6, 4, 33, 12, 11, 13, 15, 29, 20, 34, 14, 16, 27, 22	recall 4, inference 4, analysis 5, synthesis 3
College Sophomore	4, 35, 25, 17, 3, 19, 11, 13, 12, 20, 29, 15, 14, 16, 27, 22	recall 6, inference 3, analysis 4, synthesis 3
College Junior	4, 5, 8, 26, 12, 11, 13, 29, 31, 20, 15, 14, 34, 27, 16, 22	recall 4, inference 3, analysis 6, synthesis 3
College Senior	5, 26, 17, 9, 28, 12, 13, 11, 29, 34, 14, 20, 15, 16, 22, 27	recall 4, inference 4, analysis 5, synthesis 3
Graduate / PhD	1, 18, 6, 9, 2, 12, 11, 13, 34, 14, 29, 15, 20, 27, 22, 16	recall 5, inference 3, analysis 5, synthesis 3

Writing prompts (eleven rigor levels)

Scaffolded support (250 words; AP: see unit standards): Supported track (work from the passage your teacher selects). In "Chapter LXI," how does Austen show endings and futures? Write a paragraph that states your claim, quotes two details from the passage, and explains how each detail supports your idea. Use the characterization you noticed as one piece of evidence.

HS Freshman (350 words; AP: see unit standards): In Chapter LXI, how does Austen develop the idea of endings and futures? State a clear claim, support it with two or three quotations, and explain how the characterization in the chapter helps build that idea.

HS Sophomore (450 words; AP: see unit standards): Analyze how Chapter LXI develops the idea of endings and futures. Make a precise claim, support it with at least three pieces of textual evidence, and explain how the author's use of characterization and theme shapes that idea. Address one possible counterclaim.

HS Junior (550 words; AP: see unit standards): Analyze how the structure of Chapter LXI (where it begins, turns and ends) and its characterization shape the reader's understanding of endings and futures. Identify one place where the text leaves matters uncertain and explain how that uncertainty adds to its meaning.

HS Senior (600 words; AP: see unit standards): Two readers disagree about what Chapter LXI suggests about endings and futures. Lay out two plausible interpretations, weigh the evidence for each (including the chapter's characterization and theme), and argue for the stronger one in a sustained, well-organized essay.

AP (650 words; AP: AP-LIT.CHR, AP-LIT.LAN): Write a literary argument in which you analyze how Jane Austen uses characterization in Chapter LXI to complicate the reader's understanding of endings and futures. Develop a defensible thesis, select evidence purposefully, and explain how specific choices of diction and syntax create meaning.

College Freshman (1000 words; AP: see unit standards): Situate Chapter LXI within its historical and literary context and argue how the chapter's treatment of endings and futures responds to that context. Engage with at least one secondary perspective (a critic, historian or the author's own statements), integrate quotations smoothly, and cite in MLA style.

College Sophomore (1250 words; AP: see unit standards): Read Chapter LXI alongside the conventions of its genre and period. Argue how the chapter's handling of endings and futures follows or bends those conventions, using the characterization as evidence, and test your reading against one published critic. Document two secondary sources in MLA.

College Junior (1500 words; AP: see unit standards): Apply a named critical approach (for example formalist, historicist, feminist, psychoanalytic or ecocritical) to Chapter LXI and its treatment of endings and futures. State your method, show what it reveals in the chapter's characterization and theme, and identify where the text resists it.

College Senior (2000 words; AP: see unit standards): Develop a research argument that reads Chapter LXI as evidence for a larger claim about endings and futures in Pride and Prejudice. Connect close reading of the chapter to the whole novel, engage at least four scholarly sources, and state precisely where your reading departs from theirs (Chicago style).

Graduate / PhD (2500 words; AP: see unit standards): Develop an original argument that reads Chapter LXI as a hinge in the novel's larger treatment of endings and futures. Position your reading within a named critical conversation (for example formalist, historicist, psychoanalytic, feminist or postcolonial approaches), account for the textual history where relevant, and articulate the stakes of your intervention for scholarship on Pride and Prejudice.

SAT-style questions

1. Mr. Bingley and Jane remained at Netherfield only a twelvemonth. So near a vicinity to her mother and Meryton relations was not desirable even to his easy temper, or her affectionate heart. The darling wish of his sisters was then gratified; he bought an estate in a neighbouring county to Derbyshire, and Jane and Elizabeth, in addition to every other source of happiness, were within thirty miles of each other.

   Which choice best states a central concern of “Chapter LXI”?

   A. Endings and futures

   B. Pemberley

   C. Strategy in courtship

   D. Family dynamics and anticipation

SAT key: 1. A (Endings and futures)

Unit test

Pride and Prejudice: unit test · 90 minutes · 50 questions per rigor version (multiple choice, fill in the blank, short answer). The class rigor level picks the version; student auto-adjust applies.

Short-answer scoring guides

Scaffolded support and HS Freshman (2 points): correct answer in a complete sentence with a detail from the text. HS Sophomore to HS Senior (3 points): claim, one accurate quotation, one sentence of explanation. AP to College Sophomore (4 points): precise claim, two embedded quotations, commentary on word choice or structure, link to theme. College Junior to Graduate (5 points): nuanced thesis, close reading of two passages, synthesis across sections, a competing reading answered. Each item lists a sample answer; partial credit is described in the app.

Unit test: item bank (all eleven rigor versions)

1. [mc · recall · DOK 1] How many daughters do the Bennets have?
   A. Three
   B. Seven
   C. Two
   D. Five

   Key: D (Five)
2. [mc · recall · DOK 1] Who has rented Netherfield Park?
   A. Mr. Darcy
   B. Mr. Bingley
   C. Mr. Wickham
   D. Mr. Collins

   Key: B (Mr. Bingley)
3. [fill · recall · DOK 1] Complete the quotation from Chapter I, paragraph 1: “It is a truth universally _____, that a single man in possession of a good fortune, must be in want of a wife”
   Key: acknowledged
4. [fill · recall · DOK 1] Fill in the blank with the vocabulary word that fits: “Bennet was so odd a mixture of quick parts, sarcastic humour, reserve, and _____, that the experience of three and twenty years had been insufficient to make his wife understand his character.” Word bank: newcomers, tiresome, compassion, caprice
   Key: caprice
5. [mc · recall · DOK 1] In the line “Sir William and Lady Lucas are determined to go, merely on that account, for in general you know they visit no newcomers.”, what does “newcomers” most nearly mean?
   A. to hesitate because of moral doubt
   B. people who have recently arrived
   C. lavish; very generous (in giving thanks or praise)
   D. call forth (emotions, feelings, and responses)

   Key: B (people who have recently arrived)

6. [mc · recall · DOK 1] Why were accomplishments valued?

   A. They prevented illness

   B. They improved marriage prospects

   C. They paid wages

   D. They were required by law

   Key: B (They improved marriage prospects)

7. [fill · recall · DOK 1] Complete the quotation from Chapter XIX, paragraph 12: “You could not make me happy, and I am _____ that I am the last woman in the world who would make you so”

   Key: convinced

8. [mc · recall · DOK 1] In the line “Almost as soon as I entered the house, I singled you out as the companion of my future life.”, what does “singled” most nearly mean?

   A. soft, round, sweet fruits with fuzzy skin

   B. a small portable timepiece

   C. picked out; chose

   D. finding out for certain

   Key: C (picked out; chose)

9. [fill · recall · DOK 1] Fill in the blank with the vocabulary word that fits: “You can hardly doubt the _____ of my discourse, however your natural delicacy may lead you to dissemble; my attentions have been too marked to be mistaken.” Word bank: purport, singled, dissemble, sanctioned

   Key: purport

10. [fill · recall · DOK 1] Complete the quotation from Chapter XIX, paragraph 6: “before I am run away with by my _____ on this subject”

    Key: feelings

11. [mc · recall · DOK 1] In the line “There were two nephews of Lady Catherine to require them, for Mr.”, what does “nephews” most nearly mean?

    A. be contingent upon (something that is elided)

    B. get or find back; recover the use of

    C. something immaterial that stands in the way and must be circumvented or surmounted

    D. sons of one's brother or sister

    Key: D (sons of one's brother or sister)

12. [mc · recall · DOK 1] How does Darcy behave on his first call?

    A. Flirtatious

    B. Rude

    C. Lively

    D. Stiff and quiet

    Key: D (Stiff and quiet)

13. [fill · recall · DOK 1] Complete the quotation from Chapter XLI, paragraph 18: “Our importance, our _____ in the world, must be affected by the wild volatility”

    Key: respectability

14. [mc · recall · DOK 1] How does Elizabeth behave toward Wickham?

    A. She hints she knows the truth

    B. She ignores him

    C. She flirts

    D. She accuses him openly

    Key: A (She hints she knows the truth)

15. [mc · recall · DOK 1] Who invites Lydia to Brighton?

    A. Lady Catherine

    B. Mrs. Forster

    C. Charlotte

    D. Mrs. Gardiner

    Key: B (Mrs. Forster)

16. [fill · recall · DOK 1] Complete the quotation from Chapter XLI, paragraph 15: “Lydia will never be easy till she has _____ herself in some public place or other”

    Key: exposed

17. [mc · recall · DOK 1] Why does Mr. Bennet allow it?

    A. He trusts Lydia

    B. He wants her married

    C. To keep peace at home

    D. He is ill

    Key: C (To keep peace at home)

18. [mc · recall · DOK 1] What does Elizabeth warn her father?

    A. Lydia is ill

    B. Wickham is rich

    C. Lydia is in danger of disgrace

    D. The house is entailed

    Key: C (Lydia is in danger of disgrace)

19. [mc · recall · DOK 1] In the line “If you, my dear father, will not take the trouble of checking her exuberant spirits, and of teaching her that her present pursuits are not to be the business of her life, she will soon be beyond the reach of amendment.”, what does “exuberant” most nearly mean?

    A. a feeling of alarm or dread

    B. drawn out with difficulty

    C. joyously unrestrained

    D. in a polite manner

    Key: C (joyously unrestrained)

20. [mc · recall · DOK 1] In the line “Such squeamish youths as cannot bear to be connected with a little absurdity, are not worth a regret.”, what does “squeamish” most nearly mean?

    A. turned to stone

    B. in a polite manner

C. attached

D. too easily shocked or disgusted

Key: D (too easily shocked or disgusted)

21. [fill · recall · DOK 1] Complete the quotation from Chapter LII, paragraph 3: “He had been some days in town before he was able to _____ them”

Key: discover

22. [mc · recall · DOK 1] In the line “I did hear, too, that there was a time, when sermon-making was not so palatable to you as it seems to be at present; that you actually declared your resolution of never taking orders, and that the business had been…”, what does “compromised” most nearly mean?

A. bags for holding sewing or needlework

B. making impossible

C. treating as less valuable than it is

D. settled by agreement

Key: D (settled by agreement)

23. [mc · recall · DOK 1] Why did Darcy act, he said?

A. He owed money

B. He wanted praise

C. He loves Lydia

D. He felt partly responsible

Key: D (He felt partly responsible)

24. [fill · recall · DOK 1] Fill in the blank with the vocabulary word that fits: “He did not judge your father to be a person whom he could so properly consult as your uncle, and therefore readily _____ seeing him, till after the departure of the former.” Word bank: amounting, expedite, compromised, postponed

Key: postponed

25. [fill · recall · DOK 1] Complete the quotation from Chapter LII, paragraph 3: “If he had another motive, I am sure it would never _____ him”

Key: disgrace

26. [mc · recall · DOK 1] Who reveals Darcy's role?

A. Jane

B. Wickham

C. Mrs. Gardiner

D. Lydia

Key: C (Mrs. Gardiner)

27. [fill · recall · DOK 1] Complete the quotation from Chapter LII, paragraph 37: “Come, Mr. Wickham, we are _____ and sister, you know. Do not let us quarrel about the past”

Key: brother

28. [fill · recall · DOK 1] Complete the quotation from Chapter LII, paragraph 1: “Elizabeth had the _____ of receiving an answer to her letter”

Key: satisfaction

29. [fill · recall · DOK 1] Complete the quotation from Chapter LIX, paragraph 1: “My dear Lizzy, where can you have been _____ to”

    Key: walking

30. [short · inference · DOK 2] What can you infer from this line? “She is tolerable; but not handsome enough to tempt me” (Chapter III, paragraph 13) Answer in two or three sentences with one detail.

    Sample answer: Darcy's insult; the source of Elizabeth's prejudice. The evidence is “She is tolerable; but not handsome enough to tempt me” (Chapter III, paragraph 13). This develops first impressions: Elizabeth's view of Darcy is formed in one overheard insult.

31. [short · inference · DOK 2] What can you infer from this line? “My good opinion once lost is lost forever” (Chapter XI, paragraph 28) Answer in two or three sentences with one detail.

    Sample answer: Darcy's self-description; it will be tested when he forgives Elizabeth's refusal. The evidence is “My good opinion once lost is lost forever” (Chapter XI, paragraph 28). This develops pride and prejudice: both characters own the faults of the title: he resentment and pride, she a will to misunderstand.

32. [mc · inference · DOK 2] What does this passage most clearly show? “is wilfully to misunderstand them” (Chapter XI, paragraph 32)

    A. Bingley's polite understatement about Jane; his good nature survives the embarrassment.

    B. Elizabeth's rejection of Charlotte's view.

    C. Elizabeth's charge that wounds him most.

    D. Darcy's reply; it is the more accurate judgment.

    Key: D (Darcy's reply; it is the more accurate judgment.)

33. [mc · inference · DOK 2] What does this passage most clearly show? “His appearance was greatly in his favour” (Chapter XV, paragraph 8)

    A. Collins's refusal of novels, written in a novel; Austen's joke at his expense.

    B. Wickham judged on appearance.

    C. Charlotte's tolerance of Darcy's pride.

    D. Mr. Bennet's teasing opening announces a visitor.

    Key: B (Wickham judged on appearance.)

34. [short · inference · DOK 2] What can you infer from this line? “you give your opinion very decidedly for so young a person” (Chapter XXIX, paragraph 35) Answer in two or three sentences with one detail.

    Sample answer: Lady Catherine on Elizabeth. The evidence is “you give your opinion very decidedly for so young a person” (Chapter XXIX, paragraph 35). This develops pride and prejudice: aristocratic pride in its purest form.

35. [mc · inference · DOK 2] Which choice best states a central concern of “Chapter XXIX”?

    A. Wit as courtship

    B. Family uproar

    C. An imperious hostess

    D. Darcy at Rosings

    Key: C (An imperious hostess)

36. [short · inference · DOK 2] What can you infer from this line? “Younger sons cannot marry where they like” (Chapter XXXIII, paragraph 12) Answer in two or three sentences with one detail.

    Sample answer: The colonel on money. The evidence is “Younger sons cannot marry where they like” (Chapter XXXIII, paragraph 12). This develops marriage and money: even an earl's son must consider fortune.

37. [short · inference · DOK 2] What can you infer from this line? “The two gentlemen left Rosings the next morning” (Chapter XXXVII, paragraph 1) Answer in two or three sentences with one detail.

    Sample answer: The quiet opening after the storm. The evidence is “The two gentlemen left Rosings the next morning” (Chapter XXXVII, paragraph 1). This develops pride and prejudice: Elizabeth now feels the justice of Darcy's objections to her family.

38. [mc · inference · DOK 2] Which choice best states a central concern of “Chapter XLVIII”?

    A. Family dynamics and anticipation

    B. Sisters and judgment

    C. Disappointment and philosophy

    D. Letters of judgment

    Key: D (Letters of judgment)

39. [short · inference · DOK 2] What can you infer from this line? “let me once in my life feel how much I have been to blame” (Chapter XLVIII, paragraph 23) Answer in two or three sentences with one detail.

    Sample answer: Mr. Bennet's admission, the most serious line he speaks. The evidence is “let me once in my life feel how much I have been to blame” (Chapter XLVIII, paragraph 23).

40. [mc · inference · DOK 2] What does this passage most clearly show? “Elizabeth had the satisfaction of receiving an answer to her letter” (Chapter LII, paragraph 1)

    A. Opening line: crisp, decisive.

    B. Darcy admits his role.

    C. The Wickhams wear out their welcome.

    D. The chapter opens with the letter she asked for.

    Key: D (The chapter opens with the letter she asked for.)

41. [short · inference · DOK 2] What can you infer from this line? “I could not have parted with you, my Lizzy, to anyone less worthy” (Chapter LIX, paragraph 37) Answer in two or three sentences with one detail.

    Sample answer: Mr. Bennet's blessing. The evidence is “I could not have parted with you, my Lizzy, to anyone less worthy” (Chapter LIX, paragraph 37). This develops marriage and money: Mr. Bennet warns against an unequal marriage.

42. [mc · analysis · DOK 3] In this chapter, which theme does the following most directly develop? Marriage is introduced as a transaction (‘a single man in possession of a good fortune’).

    A. Pride and self-knowledge

    B. First impressions and prejudice

    C. Marriage and money

    D. Class and social mobility

    Key: C (Marriage and money)

43. [short · analysis · DOK 3] Analyze the word choice in “She was a woman of mean understanding, little information, and uncertain temper” (Chapter I, paragraph 34). Pick two words and explain what they suggest.

    Sample answer: The narrator's blunt judgment of Mrs. Bennet, in three balanced phrases. The evidence is “She was a woman of mean understanding, little information, and uncertain temper” (Chapter I, paragraph 34). This develops marriage and money: marriage is introduced as a transaction ("a single man in possession of a good fortune"). The words “understanding” and “information” carry that meaning: they are the charged choices in the line, and changing either would soften the effect.

44. [short · analysis · DOK 3] Analyze the word choice in “We shall have no peace at Longbourn if Lydia does not go to Brighton” (Chapter XLI, paragraph 20). Pick two words and explain what they suggest.
    Sample answer: His reason. The evidence is “We shall have no peace at Longbourn if Lydia does not go to Brighton” (Chapter XLI, paragraph 20). This develops family and reputation: the father's failure to act sets up the crisis. The words “shall” and “peace” carry that meaning: they are the charged choices in the line, and changing either would soften the effect.

45. [mc · analysis · DOK 3] Which literary element does this describe in “Chapter XLI”? Lydia is invited to Brighton; Elizabeth warns her father; he refuses to act.
    A. Hyperbole
    B. Allusion
    C. Theme
    D. Characterization

    Key: D (Characterization)

46. [mc · analysis · DOK 3] Which literary element does this describe in “Chapter LII”? Mrs. Gardiner's letter reveals that Darcy found the couple, paid Wickham's debts, bought his commission and arranged the marriage.
    A. Imagery
    B. Personification
    C. Epistolary
    D. Structure

    Key: C (Epistolary)

47. [short · analysis · DOK 3] Analyze the word choice in “I know that you could be neither happy nor respectable, unless you truly esteemed your husband” (Chapter LIX, paragraph 35). Pick two words and explain what they suggest.
    Sample answer: Mr. Bennet's serious warning, drawn from his own marriage. The evidence is “I know that you could be neither happy nor respectable, unless you truly esteemed your husband” (Chapter LIX, paragraph 35). This develops marriage and money: Mr. Bennet warns against an unequal marriage. The words “respectable” and “esteemed” carry that meaning: they are the charged choices in the line, and changing either would soften the effect.

48. [short · synthesis · DOK 4] Close reading: how do the diction and syntax of “You take delight in vexing me. You have no compassion on my poor nerves” (Chapter I, paragraph 28) shape its meaning? Consider a second, competing reading.
    Sample answer: Mrs. Bennet's self-dramatizing; comic characterization. The evidence is “You take delight in vexing me. You have no compassion on my poor nerves” (Chapter I, paragraph 28). This develops marriage and money: marriage is introduced as a transaction ("a single man in possession of a good fortune"). The words “compassion” and “delight” carry that meaning: they are the charged choices in the line, and changing either would soften the effect. It claims every rich man "must be in want of a wife," but the next paragraph shows it is the neighbourhood families who regard him as "the rightful property" of their daughters; the "truth" is their desire, not his.

49. [short · synthesis · DOK 4] Close reading: how do the diction and syntax of “Our importance, our respectability in the world, must be affected by the wild volatility” (Chapter XLI, paragraph 18) shape its meaning? Consider a second, competing reading.
    Sample answer: Elizabeth's warning. The evidence is “Our importance, our respectability in the world, must be affected by the wild volatility” (Chapter XLI, paragraph 18). This develops family and reputation: the father's failure to act sets up the crisis. The words “respectability” and “importance” carry that meaning: they are the charged choices in the line, and changing either would soften the effect. He admits "Lydia will never be easy till she has exposed herself," yet lets her go because "we shall have no peace at Longbourn" otherwise.

50. [short · synthesis · DOK 4] Evaluate this claim about the chapter: “Darcy's secret rescue proves his character more than any speech could.” Is it fully persuasive? Argue with evidence, including a passage that complicates it.

    Sample answer: The claim is persuasive in part. “If he had another motive, I am sure it would never disgrace him” (Chapter LII, paragraph 3) supports it: Mrs. Gardiner writes that "he had been some days in town before he was able to discover them," and hints that "another motive" would "never disgrace him," which Elizabeth understands as herself. But “Come, Mr. Wickham, we are brother and sister, you know. Do not let us quarrel about the past” (Chapter LII, paragraph 37) complicates it: Elizabeth's polite dismissal of the man she once believed, and its “not” marks a limit or reversal the claim passes over. A fair verdict is that the claim is mostly right but overstated; it needs a limiting clause to cover that passage.

51. [fill · recall · DOK 1] Fill in the blank with the vocabulary word that fits: “Sir William and Lady Lucas are determined to go, merely on that account, for in general you know they visit no _____.” Word bank: newcomers, tiresome, compassion, caprice

    Key: newcomers

52. [mc · recall · DOK 1] In the line “Bennet,’ replied his wife, ‘how can you be so tiresome!”, what does “tiresome” most nearly mean?

    A. annoyances; worries

    B. never tiring

    C. annoying; wearying

    D. an emergency; a sudden difficulty (older usage)

    Key: C (annoying; wearying)

53. [mc · recall · DOK 1] In the line “Bennet was so odd a mixture of quick parts, sarcastic humour, reserve, and caprice, that the experience of three and twenty years had been insufficient to make his wife understand his character.”, what does “caprice” most nearly mean?

    A. pleasant and well suited

    B. religious talks given by a clergyman

    C. a tendency to change one's mind suddenly

    D. calmed

    Key: C (a tendency to change one's mind suddenly)

54. [fill · recall · DOK 1] Complete the quotation from Chapter I, paragraph 28: “You take delight in vexing me. You have no _____ on my poor nerves”

    Key: compassion

55. [mc · recall · DOK 1] In the line “You have no compassion on my poor nerves.”, what does “compassion” most nearly mean?

    A. giving; providing

    B. a deep awareness of and sympathy for another's suffering

    C. slightly ill

    D. a single word or sound (here, "a syllable said" = a word said)

    Key: B (a deep awareness of and sympathy for another's suffering)

56. [mc · recall · DOK 1] What theme does the refusal highlight?
    A. Marriage for respect and affection
    B. Wealth above all
    C. Obedience
    D. Religion

    Key: A (Marriage for respect and affection)

57. [fill · recall · DOK 1] Fill in the blank with the vocabulary word that fits: "Choose properly, choose a _____ for my sake; and for your own, let her be an active, useful sort of person, not brought up high, but able to make a small income go a good way." Word bank: singled, dissemble, gentlewoman, sanctioned

    Key: gentlewoman

58. [fill · recall · DOK 1] Complete the quotation from Chapter XXX, paragraph 8: "I may thank you, Eliza, for this piece of _____"

    Key: civility

59. [fill · recall · DOK 1] Fill in the blank with the vocabulary word that fits: "Such were the kind of lamentations _____ perpetually through Longbourn-house." Word bank: squeamish, vexations, resounding, exuberant

    Key: resounding

60. [mc · recall · DOK 1] What theme does this chapter show?
    A. Military glory
    B. Parental neglect
    C. Religion
    D. Love of travel

    Key: B (Parental neglect)

61. [mc · recall · DOK 1] In the line "She had even learnt to detect, in the very gentleness which had first delighted her, an affectation and a sameness to disgust and weary.", what does "sameness" most nearly mean?
    A. outvoted; overridden
    B. the event of dying or departure from life
    C. administer or bestow, as in small portions
    D. the quality of being alike

    Key: D (the quality of being alike)

62. [fill · recall · DOK 1] Fill in the blank with the vocabulary word that fits: "I only fear that the sort of cautiousness, to which you, I imagine, have been _____, is merely adopted on his visits to his aunt, of whose good opinion and judgment he stands much in awe." Word bank: vexations, alluding, squeamish, exuberant

    Key: alluding

63. [fill · recall · DOK 1] Fill in the blank with the vocabulary word that fits: "The motive professed was his conviction of its being owing to himself that Wickham's worthlessness had not been so well known, as to make it impossible for any young woman of character to love or _____ in him." Word bank: expedite, amounting, compromised, confide

    Key: confide

64. [fill · recall · DOK 1] Fill in the blank with the vocabulary word that fits: "But if you are really innocent and ignorant, I must be more _____." Word bank: expedite, amounting, compromised, explicit

    Key: explicit

65. [fill · recall · DOK 1] Fill in the blank with the vocabulary word that fits: “The vague and _____ suspicions which uncertainty had produced of what Mr.” Word bank: expedite, unsettled, compromised, amounting
Key: unsettled

66. [mc · inference · DOK 2] What does this passage most clearly show? “the improvement of her mind by extensive reading” (Chapter VIII, paragraph 51)
A. Ironic praise of the Bingley sisters.
B. Elizabeth's frustration in a series of questions.
C. The chapter opens by clearing the stage for new arrivals.
D. Darcy's addition: values mind.
Key: D (Darcy's addition: values mind.)

67. [short · inference · DOK 2] What can you infer from this line? “Mr. Collins was not a sensible man, and the deficiency of nature had been but little assisted by education or society” (Chapter XV, paragraph 1) Answer in two or three sentences with one detail.
Sample answer: The narrator's verdict. The evidence is “Mr. Collins was not a sensible man, and the deficiency of nature had been but little assisted by education or society” (Chapter XV, paragraph 1).

68. [short · inference · DOK 2] What can you infer from this line? “You could not make me happy, and I am convinced that I am the last woman in the world who would make you so” (Chapter XIX, paragraph 12) Answer in two or three sentences with one detail.
Sample answer: Elizabeth's refusal. The evidence is “You could not make me happy, and I am convinced that I am the last woman in the world who would make you so” (Chapter XIX, paragraph 12).

69. [short · inference · DOK 2] What can you infer from this line? “before I am run away with by my feelings on this subject” (Chapter XIX, paragraph 6) Answer in two or three sentences with one detail.
Sample answer: Collins's comic emotion. The evidence is “before I am run away with by my feelings on this subject” (Chapter XIX, paragraph 6). This develops marriage and money: he reminds her of her small fortune.

70. [short · inference · DOK 2] What can you infer from this line? “Sir William stayed only a week at Hunsford” (Chapter XXX, paragraph 1) Answer in two or three sentences with one detail.
Sample answer: The chapter opens by clearing the stage for new arrivals. The evidence is “Sir William stayed only a week at Hunsford” (Chapter XXX, paragraph 1). This develops first impressions: Elizabeth's settled opinion blinds her to evidence in front of her.

71. [short · inference · DOK 2] What can you infer from this line? “How despicably have I acted” (Chapter XXXVI, paragraph 8) Answer in two or three sentences with one detail.
Sample answer: Self-judgment. The evidence is “How despicably have I acted” (Chapter XXXVI, paragraph 8). This develops pride and prejudice: Elizabeth sees that vanity, not reason, guided her.

72. [short · inference · DOK 2] What can you infer from this line? “Our importance, our respectability in the world, must be affected by the wild volatility” (Chapter XLI, paragraph 18) Answer in two or three sentences with one detail.
Sample answer: Elizabeth's warning. The evidence is “Our importance, our respectability in the world, must be affected by the wild volatility” (Chapter XLI, paragraph 18). This develops family and reputation: the father's failure to act sets up the crisis.

73. [short · inference · DOK 2] What can you infer from this line? “I have been thinking it over again, Elizabeth” (Chapter XLVII, paragraph 1) Answer in two or three sentences with one detail.
Sample answer: Mr. Gardiner's reasoning that Wickham would not risk his career; Elizabeth knows better. The evidence is

"I have been thinking it over again, Elizabeth" (Chapter XLVII, paragraph 1). This develops family and reputation: the Bennet household's lack of discipline is exposed for all to see.

74. [short · inference · DOK 2] What can you infer from this line? "to hear herself called 'Mrs. Wickham,' by each of them" (Chapter LI, paragraph 10) Answer in two or three sentences with one detail.
Sample answer: Her vanity in the title. The evidence is "to hear herself called 'Mrs. Wickham,' by each of them" (Chapter LI, paragraph 10). This develops family and reputation: Lydia's shamelessness is complete.

75. [mc · inference · DOK 2] What does this passage most clearly show? "It taught me to hope" (Chapter LVIII, paragraph 10)
A. Elizabeth's comment on distance.
B. Elizabeth's charge that wounds him most.
C. Elizabeth insists Jane's loss was caused by "the interference of friends," not chance: an accurate suspicion of Darcy.
D. Lady Catherine's report gave him hope.
Key: D (Lady Catherine's report gave him hope.)

76. [mc · analysis · DOK 3] Which literary element does this describe in "Chapter I"? The opening 'truth universally acknowledged' is really the belief of mothers hunting husbands; the narrator mocks it while stating it.
A. Tone / mood
B. Irony
C. Metaphor
D. Imagery
Key: B (Irony)

77. [short · analysis · DOK 3] Analyze the word choice in "Your portion is unhappily so small" (Chapter XIX, paragraph 17). Pick two words and explain what they suggest.
Sample answer: Collins on her lack of fortune. The evidence is "Your portion is unhappily so small" (Chapter XIX, paragraph 17). This develops marriage and money: he reminds her of her small fortune. The words "unhappily" and "portion" carry that meaning: they are the charged choices in the line, and changing either would soften the effect.

78. [mc · analysis · DOK 3] Which literary element does this describe in "Chapter XXXVII"? Comic relief after the crisis; Elizabeth's private reflections run underneath.
A. Tone / mood
B. Structure
C. Hyperbole
D. Conflict
Key: A (Tone / mood)

79. [short · analysis · DOK 3] Analyze the word choice in "It will pass away soon enough" (Chapter XLVIII, paragraph 23). Pick two words and explain what they suggest.
Sample answer: He predicts his remorse will fade, and it does. The evidence is "It will pass away soon enough" (Chapter XLVIII, paragraph 23). This develops family and reputation: Collins says Lydia's death "would have been a blessing" by comparison: the society's harshest view, made grotesque. The words "enough" and "pass" carry that meaning: they are the charged choices in the line, and changing either would soften the effect.

80. [mc · analysis · DOK 3] Which literary element does this describe in “Chapter XLVIII”? Letters arrive from Mr. Gardiner and from Mr. Collins, whose ‘consolation’ is a cruelty.

    A. Tone / mood

    B. Diction / vocabulary

    C. Symbolism

    D. Epistolary

    Key: D (Epistolary)

81. [short · synthesis · DOK 4] Synthesis: trace how marriage and money develops from Chapter XIV to Chapter XIX. Use one quotation from each.

    Sample answer: Earlier, in Chapter XIV, paragraph 10, the text reads “whether these pleasing attentions proceed from the impulse of the moment, or are the result of previous study” — Mr. Bennet's sly question. In Chapter XIX, “before I am run away with by my feelings on this subject” (Chapter XIX, paragraph 6) — Collins's comic emotion. He reminds her of her small fortune.

82. [short · synthesis · DOK 4] Synthesis: trace how family and reputation develops from Chapter XXXIX to Chapter XLI. Use one quotation from each.

    Sample answer: Earlier, in Chapter XXXIX, paragraph 1, the text reads “It was the second week in May, in which the three young ladies set out together from Gracechurch-street” — Opening. In Chapter XLI, “Lydia will never be easy till she has exposed herself in some public place or other” (Chapter XLI, paragraph 15) — Mr. Bennet's acceptance. The father's failure to act sets up the crisis.

83. [mc · recall · DOK 1] What is Mrs. Bennet's main goal?

    A. Buying a new house

    B. Marrying off her daughters

    C. Educating her daughters

    D. Travelling to London

    Key: B (Marrying off her daughters)

84. [fill · recall · DOK 1] Complete the quotation from Chapter I, paragraph 34: “She was a woman of mean _____, little information, and uncertain temper”

    Key: understanding

85. [mc · recall · DOK 1] How does Mr. Bennet treat his wife's excitement?

    A. He teases her dryly

    B. He shares it

    C. He scolds her angrily

    D. He ignores her entirely

    Key: A (He teases her dryly)

86. [fill · recall · DOK 1] Fill in the blank with the vocabulary word that fits: “In his present behaviour to herself, moreover, she had a fresh source of displeasure, for the inclination he soon testified of _____ those attentions which had marked the early part of their acquaintance, could only serve, after what had since passed, to…” Word bank: squeamish, exuberant, renewing, vexations

    Key: renewing

87. [mc · recall · DOK 1] In the line “It was not in her nature, however, to increase her vexations, by dwelling on them.”, what does “vexations” most nearly mean?

    A. making impossible

    B. hurt the pride of; humiliated

    C. annoyances; worries

    D. showing; giving evidence of

    Key: C (annoyances; worries)

88. [mc · recall · DOK 1] What did Darcy insist on?

    A. Secrecy

    B. Public thanks

    C. A reward

    D. Elizabeth's hand

    Key: A (Secrecy)

89. [mc · recall · DOK 1] In the line “Since such were her feelings, it only remained, he thought, to secure and expedite a marriage, which, in his very first conversation with Wickham, he easily learnt, had never been his design.”, what does “expedite” most nearly mean?

    A. be or come between

    B. a crafty and involved plot to achieve your (usually sinister) ends

    C. a light round box for hats

    D. to speed up; to hasten

    Key: D (to speed up; to hasten)

90. [mc · inference · DOK 2] What does this passage most clearly show? “She was a woman of mean understanding, little information, and uncertain temper” (Chapter I, paragraph 34)

    A. Miss Bingley's attempt to lower Elizabeth in his eyes.

    B. The narrator's blunt judgment of Mrs. Bennet, in three balanced phrases.

    C. Darcy's self-description; it will be tested when he forgives Elizabeth's refusal.

    D. The quiet opening after the storm.

    Key: B (The narrator's blunt judgment of Mrs. Bennet, in three balanced phrases.)

91. [short · inference · DOK 2] What can you infer from this line? “Mr. Bennet’s expectations were fully answered” (Chapter XIV, paragraph 12) Answer in two or three sentences with one detail.

    Sample answer: The narrator shares Mr. Bennet's pleasure in absurdity. The evidence is “Mr. Bennet’s expectations were fully answered” (Chapter XIV, paragraph 12). This develops marriage and money: Collins's patron Lady Catherine shows how rank controls careers in the church.

92. [mc · inference · DOK 2] What does this passage most clearly show? “Elizabeth related to Jane the next day, what had passed between Mr. Wickham and herself” (Chapter XVII, paragraph 1)

    A. Direct evidence that Darcy's manners have changed; note the list of what has vanished.

    B. Collins on her lack of fortune.

    C. Elizabeth repeats gossip she has not tested; the sisters' debate starts from hearsay.

    D. Charlotte's cynical realism, foreshadowing her choice.

    Key: C (Elizabeth repeats gossip she has not tested; the sisters' debate starts from hearsay.)

93. [mc · inference · DOK 2] What does this passage most clearly show? “The whole party have left Netherfield by this time” (Chapter XXI, paragraph 6)

    A. The key to Charlotte's marriage.

    B. Caroline's letter announces the departure in a careless phrase that hides a deliberate plan.

    C. Wickham's interest shifts to an heiress, Miss King.

    D. The dramatic irony stated directly.

    Key: B (Caroline's letter announces the departure in a careless phrase that hides a deliberate plan.)

94. [short · inference · DOK 2] What can you infer from this line? “I am not romantic you know. I never was” (Chapter XXII, paragraph 17) Answer in two or three sentences with one detail.

    Sample answer: Charlotte's honesty. The evidence is “I am not romantic you know. I never was” (Chapter XXII, paragraph 17). This develops marriage and money: marriage as security.

95. [short · inference · DOK 2] What can you infer from this line? “there were some very strong objections against the lady” (Chapter XXXIII, paragraph 30) Answer in two or three sentences with one detail.

    Sample answer: The cause of separation. The evidence is “there were some very strong objections against the lady” (Chapter XXXIII, paragraph 30). This develops marriage and money: even an earl's son must consider fortune.

96. [mc · inference · DOK 2] Which choice best states a central concern of “Chapter XXXVII”?

    A. The accomplished woman

    B. Endings and futures

    C. Leaving Kent

    D. Jealousy at Pemberley

    Key: C (Leaving Kent)

97. [short · inference · DOK 2] What can you infer from this line? “It was gratitude. Gratitude, not merely for having once loved her, but for loving her still well enough, to forgive all the petulance and acrimony of her manner in rejecting him” (Chapter XLIV, paragraph 16) Answer in two or three sentences with one detail.

    Sample answer: Austen defines Elizabeth's change of heart precisely; the repetition of "gratitude" slows the moment. The evidence is “It was gratitude. Gratitude, not merely for having once loved her, but for loving her still well enough, to forgive all the petulance and…” (Chapter XLIV, paragraph 16).

98. [short · inference · DOK 2] What can you infer from this line? “Though Lydia’s short letter to Mrs. F. gave them to understand that they were going to Gretna Green, something was dropped by Denny expressing his belief that W. never intended to go there” (Chapter XLVI, paragraph 5) Answer in two or three sentences with one detail.

    Sample answer: Jane's letter: the fear that Wickham will not marry Lydia, which would ruin her. The evidence is “Though Lydia’s short letter to Mrs. F. gave them to understand that they were going to Gretna Green, something was dropped by Denny…” (Chapter XLVI, paragraph 5).

99. [mc · analysis · DOK 3] Which literary element does this describe in “Chapter I”? Mr. and Mrs. Bennet are drawn almost entirely through dialogue: his dry teasing, her nerves. The final paragraph sums them up with Austen's authority.

    A. Characterization

    B. Alliteration

    C. Setting

    D. Diction / vocabulary

Key: A (Characterization)

100. [mc · analysis · DOK 3] Which literary element does this describe in “Chapter XIX”? His speech about ‘violence of my affection’ is anything but passionate.

A. Hyperbole

B. Diction / vocabulary

C. Plot

D. Irony

Key: D (Irony)

101. [short · analysis · DOK 3] Analyze the word choice in “I may thank you, Eliza, for this piece of civility” (Chapter XXX, paragraph 8). Pick two words and explain what they suggest.

Sample answer: Charlotte jokes that Darcy's visit is for Elizabeth. The evidence is “I may thank you, Eliza, for this piece of civility” (Chapter XXX, paragraph 8). This develops first impressions: Elizabeth's settled opinion blinds her to evidence in front of her. The words “civility” and “thank” carry that meaning: they are the charged choices in the line, and changing either would soften the effect.

102. [mc · analysis · DOK 3] Which literary element does this describe in “Chapter XLI”? Mr. Bennet's reply shows his indolence.

A. Plot

B. Setting

C. Conflict

D. Dialogue

Key: D (Dialogue)

103. [short · analysis · DOK 3] Analyze the word choice in “Elizabeth had the satisfaction of receiving an answer to her letter” (Chapter LII, paragraph 1). Pick two words and explain what they suggest.

Sample answer: The chapter opens with the letter she asked for. The evidence is “Elizabeth had the satisfaction of receiving an answer to her letter” (Chapter LII, paragraph 1). This develops pride and prejudice: Darcy has overcome his pride in the most practical way: by binding himself to Wickham as a brother-in-law. The words “satisfaction” and “receiving” carry that meaning: they are the charged choices in the line, and changing either would soften the effect.

104. [mc · analysis · DOK 3] Which literary element does this describe in “Chapter LIX”? Elizabeth tells Jane and her father; Mr. Bennet worries she does not love Darcy.

A. Imagery

B. Characterization

C. Metaphor

D. Setting

Key: B (Characterization)

105. [short · synthesis · DOK 4] Synthesis: trace how women's choices develops from Chapter VII to Chapter VIII. Use one quotation from each.

Sample answer: Earlier, in Chapter VII, paragraph 1, the text reads “Mr. Bennet’s property consisted almost entirely in an estate of two thousand a year, which, unfortunately for his daughters, was entailed”, which shows the entail: the economic stakes. In Chapter VIII, “A woman must have a thorough knowledge of music, singing, drawing, dancing, and the modern languages, to deserve the word” (Chapter VIII, paragraph 50) — Miss Bingley's checklist. Accomplishments as a marriage market display.

106. [short · synthesis · DOK 4] Synthesis: trace how first impressions develops from Chapter XII to Chapter XV. Use one quotation from each.

Sample answer: Earlier, in Chapter XII, paragraph 4, the text reads “She attracted him more than he liked” — Darcy's resistance to his own feelings. In Chapter XV, “Mr. Collins was not a sensible man, and the deficiency of nature had been but little assisted by education or society” (Chapter XV, paragraph 1) — The narrator's verdict. Wickham's charm is all surface, and Elizabeth is charmed.

107. [short · synthesis · DOK 4] Synthesis: trace how first impressions develops from Chapter XXI to Chapter XXX. Use one quotation from each.

Sample answer: Earlier, in Chapter XXI, paragraph 21, the text reads “Caroline is incapable of wilfully deceiving anyone” — Jane's charity. In Chapter XXX, “Sir William stayed only a week at Hunsford” (Chapter XXX, paragraph 1), which shows the chapter opens by clearing the stage for new arrivals. Elizabeth's settled opinion blinds her to evidence in front of her.

108. [short · synthesis · DOK 4] Synthesis: trace how pride and prejudice develops from Chapter XLIV to Chapter LII. Use one quotation from each.

Sample answer: Earlier, in Chapter XLIV, paragraph 10, the text reads “Never, even in the company of his dear friends at Netherfield, or his dignified relations at Rosings, had she seen him so desirous to…” — Direct evidence that Darcy's manners have changed; note the list of what has vanished. In Chapter LII, “He had been some days in town before he was able to discover them” (Chapter LII, paragraph 3) — Darcy's personal effort. Darcy has overcome his pride in the most practical way: by binding himself to Wickham as a brother-in-law.

109. [fill · recall · DOK 1 · AP: AP-LIT.FIG] Fill in the blank with the vocabulary word that fits: “This _____ friend was a very young woman, and very lately married.” Word bank: invaluable, vexations, squeamish, exuberant

Key: invaluable

110. [mc · recall · DOK 1 · AP: AP-LIT.STR] How does Elizabeth treat Wickham afterward?

A. She refuses to speak

B. Gently but pointedly

C. With rage

D. Flirtatiously

Key: B (Gently but pointedly)

111. [mc · recall · DOK 1 · AP: AP-LIT.STR] What did Darcy do?

A. Paid Collins

B. Found them, paid debts, arranged the marriage

C. Nothing

D. Sent soldiers

Key: B (Found them, paid debts, arranged the marriage)

112. [short · inference · DOK 2 · AP: AP-LIT.CHR] What can you infer from this line? “Happiness in marriage is entirely a matter of chance” (Chapter VI, paragraph 10) Answer in two or three sentences with one detail.

Sample answer: Charlotte's cynical realism, foreshadowing her choice. The evidence is “Happiness in marriage is entirely a matter of chance” (Chapter VI, paragraph 10). This develops marriage and money: Charlotte's realism: "Happiness in marriage is entirely a matter of chance.".

113. [mc · inference · DOK 2 · AP: AP-LIT.LAN] Which choice best states a central concern of “Chapter XVII”?

A. Parental conflict over the refusal

B. Bingley returns

C. Doubts and preparations

D. The Brighton plan

Key: C (Doubts and preparations)

114. [short · inference · DOK 2 · AP: AP-LIT.CHR] What can you infer from this line? “Gardiner was a sensible, gentleman-like man, greatly superior to his sister, as well by nature as education” (Chapter XXV, paragraph 2) Answer in two or three sentences with one detail.

Sample answer: Class is not character: a man in trade is a gentleman in manners. The evidence is “Gardiner was a sensible, gentleman-like man, greatly superior to his sister, as well by nature as education” (Chapter XXV, paragraph 2).

115. [short · inference · DOK 2 · AP: AP-LIT.CHR] What can you infer from this line? “Where does discretion end, and avarice begin” (Chapter XXVII, paragraph 9) Answer in two or three sentences with one detail.

Sample answer: Mrs. Gardiner's sharper version. The evidence is “Where does discretion end, and avarice begin” (Chapter XXVII, paragraph 9). This develops marriage and money: Mrs. Gardiner asks the key question: what is the difference between prudence and greed?.

116. [mc · inference · DOK 2 · AP: AP-LIT.LAN] Which choice best states a central concern of “Chapter XXXI”?

A. The second proposal

B. Family uproar

C. The Brighton plan

D. Music, wit and manners

Key: D (Music, wit and manners)

117. [short · inference · DOK 2 · AP: AP-LIT.CHR] What can you infer from this line? “Be not alarmed, Madam, on receiving this letter” (Chapter XXXV, paragraph 4) Answer in two or three sentences with one detail.

Sample answer: The letter's opening. The evidence is “Be not alarmed, Madam, on receiving this letter” (Chapter XXXV, paragraph 4). This develops first impressions: evidence replaces impression.

118. [mc · inference · DOK 2 · AP: AP-LIT.LAN] Which choice best states a central concern of “Chapter XLIV”?

A. Family uproar

B. Family in crisis

C. A changed Darcy

D. The first proposal

Key: C (A changed Darcy)

119. [short · inference · DOK 2 · AP: AP-LIT.CHR] What can you infer from this line? “He had been some days in town before he was able to discover them” (Chapter LII, paragraph 3) Answer in two or three sentences with one detail.

Sample answer: Darcy's personal effort. The evidence is “He had been some days in town before he was able to discover them” (Chapter LII, paragraph 3). This develops pride and prejudice: Darcy has overcome his pride in the most practical way: by binding himself to Wickham as a brother-in-law.

120. [short · inference · DOK 2 · AP: AP-LIT.CHR] What can you infer from this line? “He is come—Mr. Bingley is come” (Chapter LV, paragraph 7) Answer in two or three sentences with one detail.

Sample answer: Mrs. Bennet's excitement: repetition is her voice. The evidence is “He is come—Mr. Bingley is come” (Chapter LV, paragraph 7). This develops marriage and money: a marriage of affection and fortune both.

121. [mc · analysis · DOK 3 · AP: AP-LIT.CHR] Which literary element does this describe in “Chapter XXII”? Charlotte accepts Collins; she explains she is ‘not romantic.’

A. Personification

B. Allusion

C. Setting

D. Characterization

Key: D (Characterization)

122. [short · analysis · DOK 3 · AP: AP-LIT.FIG] Analyze the word choice in “Her father, contented with laughing at them, would never exert himself to restrain the wild giddiness of his youngest daughters” (Chapter XXXVII, paragraph 17). Pick two words and explain what they suggest.

Sample answer: Elizabeth's new, critical view of her father. The evidence is “Her father, contented with laughing at them, would never exert himself to restrain the wild giddiness of his youngest daughters” (Chapter XXXVII, paragraph 17). This develops pride and prejudice: Elizabeth now feels the justice of Darcy's objections to her family. The words “contented” and “giddiness” carry that meaning: they are the charged choices in the line, and changing either would soften the effect.

123. [mc · analysis · DOK 3 · AP: AP-LIT.CHR] Which literary element does this describe in “Chapter XL”? Elizabeth tells Jane of the proposal and the letter but not about Bingley; they decide not to expose Wickham.

A. Metaphor

B. Setting

C. Theme

D. Characterization

Key: D (Characterization)

124. [short · analysis · DOK 3 · AP: AP-LIT.FIG] Analyze the word choice in “Elizabeth’s impatience to acquaint Jane with what had happened could no longer be overcome” (Chapter XL, paragraph 1). Pick two words and explain what they suggest.

Sample answer: Opening. The evidence is “Elizabeth’s impatience to acquaint Jane with what had happened could no longer be overcome” (Chapter XL, paragraph 1). This develops first impressions: the sisters debate what to do with what they know. The words “impatience” and “acquaint” carry that meaning: they are the charged choices in the line, and changing either would soften the effect.

125. [short · analysis · DOK 3 · AP: AP-LIT.LAN] Claim: The crisis forces Mr. Bennet to admit his failure, though he expects the feeling not to last. Explain how this evidence supports the claim: “let me once in my life feel how much I have been to blame” (Chapter XLVIII, paragraph 23).

Sample answer: He says "let me once in my life feel how much I have been to blame" and adds "it will pass away soon enough," honest about both his guilt and his character. The evidence is “let me once in my life feel how much I have been to blame” (Chapter XLVIII, paragraph 23) — Mr. Bennet's admission, the most serious line he speaks. This develops family and reputation: Collins says Lydia's death "would have been a blessing" by comparison: the society's harshest view, made grotesque.

126. [mc · analysis · DOK 3 · AP: AP-LIT.CHR] Which literary element does this describe in “Chapter LII”? Darcy acted secretly, out of a sense of responsibility for not exposing Wickham, and, Mrs. Gardiner hints, out of love.

A. Characterization

B. Irony

C. Setting

D. Hyperbole

Key: A (Characterization)

127. [mc · analysis · DOK 3 · AP: AP-LIT.STR] Which literary element does this describe in “Chapter LIX”? Father and daughter's most serious talk.

A. Conflict

B. Simile

C. Dialogue

D. Metaphor

Key: C (Dialogue)

128. [short · synthesis · DOK 4 · AP: AP-LIT.LAN] Synthesis: trace how pride and prejudice develops from Chapter III to Chapter IV. Use one quotation from each.

Sample answer: Earlier, in Chapter III, paragraph 13, the text reads “She is tolerable; but not handsome enough to tempt me” — Darcy's insult; the source of Elizabeth's prejudice. In Chapter IV, “You never see a fault in anybody” (Chapter IV, paragraph 7) — Elizabeth on Jane: a criticism and a compliment. Elizabeth names Jane's "candour" as a fault, foreshadowing her own errors.

129. [short · synthesis · DOK 4 · AP: AP-LIT.FIG] Close reading: how do the diction and syntax of “Sir William stayed only a week at Hunsford” (Chapter XXX, paragraph 1) shape its meaning? Consider a second, competing reading.

Sample answer: The chapter opens by clearing the stage for new arrivals. The evidence is “Sir William stayed only a week at Hunsford” (Chapter XXX, paragraph 1). This develops first impressions: Elizabeth's settled opinion blinds her to evidence in front of her. The words “stayed” and “week” carry that meaning: they are the charged choices in the line, and changing either would soften the effect. She tells Elizabeth "I may thank you, Eliza, for this piece of civility," guessing his motive, while Elizabeth, contrasting him with the colonel's "readiness and ease," sees only pride.

130. [mc · recall · DOK 1 · AP: AP-LIT.FIG] In the line “Pray forgive me, if I have been very presuming, or at least do not punish me so far, as to exclude me from P.”, what does “presuming” most nearly mean?

A. a person who prepared and sold medicines and gave medical advice

B. too bold; taking liberties

C. to increase; to make better

D. frank; careless about hiding feelings

Key: B (too bold; taking liberties)

131. [mc · inference · DOK 2 · AP: AP-LIT.LAN] What does this passage most clearly show? “ten thousand a year” (Chapter III, paragraph 5)

A. Jane's letter: the fear that Wickham will not marry Lydia, which would ruin her.

B. The room first admires him for his income.

C. Darcy's personal remark, which startles Elizabeth.

D. Jane admits her error.

Key: B (The room first admires him for his income.)

132. [short · inference · DOK 2 · AP: AP-LIT.CHR] What can you infer from this line? “A woman must have a thorough knowledge of music, singing, drawing, dancing, and the modern languages, to deserve the word” (Chapter VIII, paragraph 50) Answer in two or three sentences with one detail.

Sample answer: Miss Bingley's checklist. The evidence is “A woman must have a thorough knowledge of music, singing, drawing, dancing, and the modern languages, to deserve the word” (Chapter VIII, paragraph 50).

133. [mc · inference · DOK 2 · AP: AP-LIT.LAN] Which choice best states a central concern of “Chapter VIII”?

A. Cold reception

B. The accomplished woman

C. Self-recognition

D. Family in crisis

Key: B (The accomplished woman)

134. [short · inference · DOK 2 · AP: AP-LIT.CHR] What can you infer from this line? “I am sure I should be deceived again” (Chapter XXVI, paragraph 26) Answer in two or three sentences with one detail.

Sample answer: Jane's honesty. The evidence is “I am sure I should be deceived again” (Chapter XXVI, paragraph 26). This develops pride and prejudice: Jane learns to judge.

135. [short · inference · DOK 2 · AP: AP-LIT.CHR] What can you infer from this line? “Elizabeth was sitting by herself the next morning, and writing to Jane” (Chapter XXXII, paragraph 1) Answer in two or three sentences with one detail.

Sample answer: Opening. The evidence is “Elizabeth was sitting by herself the next morning, and writing to Jane” (Chapter XXXII, paragraph 1). This develops marriage and money: Darcy's comment that "fifty miles of good road" is "a very easy distance" hints at his thoughts.

136. [mc · inference · DOK 2 · AP: AP-LIT.LAN] Which choice best states a central concern of “Chapter XXXIII”?

A. A revelation from the colonel

B. Keeping secrets

C. Embarrassing relations

D. Cold reception

Key: A (A revelation from the colonel)

137. [mc · inference · DOK 2 · AP: AP-LIT.LAN] Which choice best states a central concern of “Chapter XXXIX”?

A. Leaving Kent

B. Embarrassing relations

C. Scandal

D. The Brighton plan

Key: D (The Brighton plan)

138. [short · inference · DOK 2 · AP: AP-LIT.CHR] What can you infer from this line? “If he fears me, why come hither? If he no longer cares for me, why silent? Teasing, teasing, man” (Chapter LIV, paragraph 4) Answer in two or three sentences with one detail.

Sample answer: Elizabeth's frustration in a series of questions. The evidence is “If he fears me, why come hither? If he no longer cares for me, why silent? Teasing, teasing, man” (Chapter LIV, paragraph 4).

139. [mc · inference · DOK 2 · AP: AP-LIT.LAN] Which choice best states a central concern of “Chapter LVIII”?

A. The second proposal

B. Scandal

C. A ridiculous proposal

D. Sisters and judgment

Key: A (The second proposal)

140. [short · inference · DOK 2 · AP: AP-LIT.CHR] What can you infer from this line? “Happy for all her maternal feelings was the day on which Mrs. Bennet got rid of her two most deserving daughters” (Chapter LXI, paragraph 1) Answer in two or three sentences with one detail.

Sample answer: Irony: "got rid of" undercuts "maternal feelings.". The evidence is “Happy for all her maternal feelings was the day on which Mrs. Bennet got rid of her two most deserving daughters” (Chapter LXI, paragraph 1).

141. [short · analysis · DOK 3 · AP: AP-LIT.LAN] Claim: Collins's proposal treats marriage as a practical bargain, and Elizabeth's refusal asserts her right to choose. Explain how this evidence supports the claim: “Your portion is unhappily so small” (Chapter XIX, paragraph 17).

Sample answer: He reminds her that "your portion is unhappily so small" that she is unlikely to get another offer, but she insists "you could not make me happy.". The evidence is “Your portion is unhappily so small” (Chapter XIX, paragraph 17) — Collins on her lack of fortune. This develops marriage and money: he reminds her of her small fortune.

142. [mc · analysis · DOK 3 · AP: AP-LIT.LAN] In this chapter, which theme does the following most directly develop? He reminds her of her small fortune.

A. Class and social mobility

B. First impressions and prejudice

C. Marriage and money

D. Pride and self-knowledge

Key: C (Marriage and money)

143. [mc · analysis · DOK 3 · AP: AP-LIT.CHR] Which literary element does this describe in “Chapter XXVI”? Jane in London is coldly received by Caroline Bingley; her letter admits she was deceived.

A. Characterization

B. Irony

C. Simile

D. Hyperbole

Key: A (Characterization)

144. [short · analysis · DOK 3 · AP: AP-LIT.LAN] Claim: After the letter, Elizabeth begins to judge her own family as Darcy did. Explain how this evidence supports the claim: “Her father, contented with laughing at them, would never exert himself to restrain the wild giddiness of his youngest daughters” (Chapter XXXVII, paragraph 17).

Sample answer: She now sees that her father, "contented with laughing at them, would never exert himself to restrain the wild giddiness of his youngest daughters," which is Darcy's objection in her own words. The evidence is “Her father, contented with laughing at them, would never exert himself to restrain the wild giddiness of his youngest daughters” (Chapter XXXVII, paragraph 17) — Elizabeth's new, critical view of her father. This develops pride and prejudice: Elizabeth now feels the justice of Darcy's objections to her family.

145. [short · synthesis · DOK 4 · AP: AP-LIT.FIG] Close reading: how do the diction and syntax of “My good opinion once lost is lost forever” (Chapter XI, paragraph 28) shape its meaning? Consider a second, competing reading.

Sample answer: Darcy's self-description; it will be tested when he forgives Elizabeth's refusal. The evidence is “My good opinion once lost is lost forever” (Chapter XI, paragraph 28). This develops pride and prejudice: both characters own the faults of the title: he resentment and pride, she a will to misunderstand. The words “forever” and “opinion” carry that meaning: they are the charged choices in the line, and changing either would soften the effect. Elizabeth accuses him of "a propensity to hate everybody," and he answers that hers is "wilfully to misunderstand them," so the novel gives each a fault the other can see.

146. [short · synthesis · DOK 4 · AP: AP-LIT.FIG] Close reading: how do the diction and syntax of “I feel it exceedingly” (Chapter XXXVII, paragraph 3) shape its meaning? Consider a second, competing reading.
Sample answer: Lady Catherine on the departure: she treats everything as about her. The evidence is “I feel it exceedingly” (Chapter XXXVII, paragraph 3). This develops pride and prejudice: Elizabeth now feels the justice of Darcy's objections to her family. The words “exceedingly” and “feel” carry that meaning: they are the charged choices in the line, and changing either would soften the effect. She now sees that her father, "contented with laughing at them, would never exert himself to restrain the wild giddiness of his youngest daughters," which is Darcy's objection in her own words.

147. [short · synthesis · DOK 4 · AP: AP-LIT.LAN] Synthesis: trace how marriage and money develops from Chapter LV to Chapter LIX. Use one quotation from each.
Sample answer: Earlier, in Chapter LV, paragraph 52, the text reads “I am certainly the most fortunate creature that ever existed” — Jane's joy. In Chapter LIX, “I could not have parted with you, my Lizzy, to anyone less worthy” (Chapter LIX, paragraph 37) — Mr. Bennet's blessing. Mr. Bennet warns against an unequal marriage.

148. [mc · recall · DOK 1 · AP: AP-LIT.STR] What is the tone of the opening sentence?

A. Ironic

B. Angry

C. Tragic

D. Mysterious

Key: A (Ironic)

149. [short · inference · DOK 2 · AP: AP-LIT.CHR] What can you infer from this line? “It is a truth universally acknowledged, that a single man in possession of a good fortune, must be in want of a wife” (Chapter I, paragraph 1) Answer in two or three sentences with one detail.
Sample answer: Verbal irony: it is the families who want the rich man, not the man who wants a wife. The evidence is “It is a truth universally acknowledged, that a single man in possession of a good fortune, must be in want of a wife” (Chapter I, paragraph 1).

150. [mc · inference · DOK 2 · AP: AP-LIT.LAN] What does this passage most clearly show? “You take delight in vexing me. You have no compassion on my poor nerves” (Chapter I, paragraph 28)

A. Darcy's self-description; it will be tested when he forgives Elizabeth's refusal.

B. Elizabeth's comment on distance.

C. The narrator steps in to defend a love based on esteem rather than "first sight."

D. Mrs. Bennet's self-dramatizing; comic characterization.

Key: D (Mrs. Bennet's self-dramatizing; comic characterization.)

151. [mc · inference · DOK 2 · AP: AP-LIT.LAN] What does this passage most clearly show? “Sir William stayed only a week at Hunsford” (Chapter XXX, paragraph 1)

A. Pemberley's taste mirrors character.

B. The chapter opens by clearing the stage for new arrivals.

C. Lydia's first close portrait: young, bold, indulged; it prepares her role later.

D. The narrator lets us see Darcy's attention, while Elizabeth misreads it as disapproval.

Key: B (The chapter opens by clearing the stage for new arrivals.)

152. [mc · inference · DOK 2 · AP: AP-LIT.LAN] What does this passage most clearly show? “Colonel Fitzwilliam entered into conversation directly with the readiness and ease of a well-bred man” (Chapter XXX, paragraph 10)

A. The colonel's easy manners make Darcy's stiffness look worse by contrast.

B. Elizabeth repeats gossip she has not tested; the sisters' debate starts from hearsay.

C. Mrs. Gardiner's sharper version.

D. Elizabeth's letter to Mrs. Gardiner echoes Jane's joy.

Key: A (The colonel's easy manners make Darcy's stiffness look worse by contrast.)

153. [mc · inference · DOK 2 · AP: AP-LIT.LAN] What does this passage most clearly show? “Her father, contented with laughing at them, would never exert himself to restrain the wild giddiness of his youngest daughters” (Chapter XXXVII, paragraph 17)

A. Wickham on Darcy's unpopularity.

B. Elizabeth's new, critical view of her father.

C. Miss Bingley's flattery of Darcy's letter-writing: comic and transparent.

D. Opening reversal: he has done what he pretended to refuse.

Key: B (Elizabeth's new, critical view of her father.)

154. [mc · inference · DOK 2 · AP: AP-LIT.LAN] What does this passage most clearly show? “The death of your daughter would have been a blessing in comparison of this” (Chapter XLVIII, paragraph 12)

A. Wickham's interest shifts to an heiress, Miss King.

B. Collins's letter: hypocrisy dressed as piety.

C. Mrs. Bennet protests too much; comic self-contradiction.

D. Elizabeth's realization comes too late.

Key: B (Collins's letter: hypocrisy dressed as piety.)

155. [mc · inference · DOK 2 · AP: AP-LIT.LAN] What does this passage most clearly show? “I know that you could be neither happy nor respectable, unless you truly esteemed your husband” (Chapter LIX, paragraph 35)

A. Opening line: crisp, decisive.

B. The quiet opening after the storm.

C. "Wisely" is ironic: his caution will deepen her misjudgment.

D. Mr. Bennet's serious warning, drawn from his own marriage.

Key: D (Mr. Bennet's serious warning, drawn from his own marriage.)

156. [mc · inference · DOK 2 · AP: AP-LIT.LAN] Which choice best states a central concern of “Chapter LIX”?

A. The first proposal

B. Letters of judgment

C. Confiding and consent

D. Strategy in courtship

Key: C (Confiding and consent)

157. [short · analysis · DOK 3 · AP: AP-LIT.FIG] Analyze the word choice in “His appearance was greatly in his favour” (Chapter XV, paragraph 8). Pick two words and explain what they suggest.

Sample answer: Wickham judged on appearance. The evidence is “His appearance was greatly in his favour” (Chapter XV, paragraph 8). This develops first impressions: Wickham's charm is all surface, and Elizabeth is charmed. The words

"appearance" and "greatly" carry that meaning: they are the charged choices in the line, and changing either would soften the effect.

158. [mc · analysis · DOK 3 · AP: AP-LIT.STR] Quote identification: in which section does this passage appear? "Mr. Collins was not a sensible man, and the deficiency of nature had been but little assisted by education or society"

A. Chapter LIX
B. Chapter XVI
C. Chapter LVI
D. Chapter XV

Key: D (Chapter XV)

159. [mc · analysis · DOK 3 · AP: AP-LIT.STR] Quote identification: in which section does this passage appear? "before I am run away with by my feelings on this subject"

A. Chapter XIX
B. Chapter LVIII
C. Chapter LIX
D. Chapter XVI

Key: A (Chapter XIX)

160. [short · analysis · DOK 3 · AP: AP-LIT.FIG] Analyze the word choice in "His apparent partiality had subsided, his attentions were over, he was the admirer of someone else" (Chapter XXVI, paragraph 29). Pick two words and explain what they suggest.

Sample answer: Wickham's interest shifts to an heiress, Miss King. The evidence is "His apparent partiality had subsided, his attentions were over, he was the admirer of someone else" (Chapter XXVI, paragraph 29). This develops pride and prejudice: Jane learns to judge. The words "attentions" and "partiality" carry that meaning: they are the charged choices in the line, and changing either would soften the effect.

161. [short · analysis · DOK 3 · AP: AP-LIT.LAN] Claim: Jane's letter shows a generous judge learning to see faults without becoming bitter. Explain how this evidence supports the claim: "My dearest Lizzy will, I am sure, be incapable of triumphing in her better judgment, at my expense, when I confess myself to have been entirely deceived in Miss Bingley's regard for me" (Chapter XXVI, paragraph 26).

Sample answer: She confesses "myself to have been entirely deceived in Miss Bingley's regard for me," but asks Lizzy not to triumph, keeping charity even in disappointment. The evidence is "My dearest Lizzy will, I am sure, be incapable of triumphing in her better judgment, at my expense, when I confess myself to have been…" (Chapter XXVI, paragraph 26) — Jane admits her error. This develops pride and prejudice: Jane learns to judge.

162. [mc · analysis · DOK 3 · AP: AP-LIT.STR] Quote identification: in which section does this passage appear? "Lydia will never be easy till she has exposed herself in some public place or other"

A. Chapter LXI
B. Chapter XLI
C. Chapter XIV
D. Chapter XV

Key: B (Chapter XLI)

163. [short · analysis · DOK 3 · AP: AP-LIT.LAN] Claim: Jane's engagement rewards her patience and goodness. Explain how this evidence supports the claim: "I am certainly the most fortunate creature that ever existed"

(Chapter LV, paragraph 52).

Sample answer: She calls herself "the most fortunate creature that ever existed" and asks "why am I thus singled from my family," showing humility even in triumph. The evidence is “I am certainly the most fortunate creature that ever existed” (Chapter LV, paragraph 52) — Jane's joy. This develops marriage and money: a marriage of affection and fortune both.

164. [mc · analysis · DOK 3 · AP: AP-LIT.LAN] In this chapter, which theme does the following most directly develop? Mr. Bennet warns against an unequal marriage.

A. Pride and self-knowledge

B. Class and social mobility

C. Marriage and money

D. First impressions and prejudice

Key: C (Marriage and money)

165. [mc · analysis · DOK 3 · AP: AP-LIT.STR] Quote identification: in which section does this passage appear? “I could not have parted with you, my Lizzy, to anyone less worthy”

A. Chapter LIII

B. Chapter XIX

C. Chapter XLVIII

D. Chapter LIX

Key: D (Chapter LIX)

166. [short · synthesis · DOK 4 · AP: AP-LIT.FIG] Close reading: how do the diction and syntax of “A woman must have a thorough knowledge of music, singing, drawing, dancing, and the modern languages, to deserve the word” (Chapter VIII, paragraph 50) shape its meaning? Consider a second, competing reading.

Sample answer: Miss Bingley's checklist. The evidence is “A woman must have a thorough knowledge of music, singing, drawing, dancing, and the modern languages, to deserve the word” (Chapter VIII, paragraph 50). This develops women's choices: accomplishments as a marriage market display. The words “languages” and “knowledge” carry that meaning: they are the charged choices in the line, and changing either would soften the effect. Miss Bingley's list of music, drawing and languages describes skills for display, while Elizabeth replies that she wonders at Darcy "knowing any," exposing the impossibility of the ideal.

167. [short · synthesis · DOK 4 · AP: AP-LIT.FIG] Close reading: how do the diction and syntax of “I am no longer surprised at your knowing only six accomplished women. I rather wonder now at your knowing any” (Chapter VIII, paragraph 52) shape its meaning? Consider a second, competing reading.

Sample answer: Elizabeth's wit. The evidence is “I am no longer surprised at your knowing only six accomplished women. I rather wonder now at your knowing any” (Chapter VIII, paragraph 52). This develops women's choices: accomplishments as a marriage market display. The words “accomplished” and “surprised” carry that meaning: they are the charged choices in the line, and changing either would soften the effect. Miss Bingley's list of music, drawing and languages describes skills for display, while Elizabeth replies that she wonders at Darcy "knowing any," exposing the impossibility of the ideal.

168. [short · synthesis · DOK 4 · AP: AP-LIT.FIG] Close reading: how do the diction and syntax of “And your defect is a propensity to hate everybody” (Chapter XI, paragraph 31) shape its meaning? Consider a second, competing reading.

Sample answer: Elizabeth's sharp verdict. The evidence is “And your defect is a propensity to hate everybody” (Chapter XI, paragraph 31). This develops pride and prejudice: both characters own the faults of the title: he resentment and pride, she a will to misunderstand. The words “propensity” and “everybody” carry that meaning: they are the charged choices in the line, and changing either would soften the effect. Elizabeth accuses him of "a propensity to hate everybody," and he answers that hers is "wilfully to misunderstand them," so the novel gives each a fault the other can see.

169. [short · synthesis · DOK 4 · AP: AP-LIT.FIG] Close reading: how do the diction and syntax of “Mr. Bennet’s expectations were fully answered” (Chapter XIV, paragraph 12) shape its meaning? Consider a second, competing reading.

    Sample answer: The narrator shares Mr. Bennet's pleasure in absurdity. The evidence is “Mr. Bennet’s expectations were fully answered” (Chapter XIV, paragraph 12). This develops marriage and money: Collins's patron Lady Catherine shows how rank controls careers in the church. The words “expectations” and “answered” carry that meaning: they are the charged choices in the line, and changing either would soften the effect. Mr. Bennet asks whether his compliments are "the result of previous study," and Collins admits they are; the narrator then notes that "Mr. Bennet's expectations were fully answered.".

170. [short · synthesis · DOK 4 · AP: AP-LIT.FIG] Close reading: how do the diction and syntax of “Mr. Collins had only to change from Jane to Elizabeth—and it was soon done—done while Mrs. Bennet was stirring the fire” (Chapter XV, paragraph 4) shape its meaning? Consider a second, competing reading.

    Sample answer: Comic speed: marriage as a choice among interchangeable daughters. The evidence is “Mr. Collins had only to change from Jane to Elizabeth—and it was soon done—done while Mrs. Bennet was stirring the fire” (Chapter XV, paragraph 4). This develops first impressions: Wickham's charm is all surface, and Elizabeth is charmed. The words “stirring” and “change” carry that meaning: they are the charged choices in the line, and changing either would soften the effect. Collins switches brides "while Mrs. Bennet was stirring the fire," treating the daughters as interchangeable, while Wickham's "appearance was greatly in his favour," which is all Elizabeth knows of him.

171. [short · synthesis · DOK 4 · AP: AP-LIT.LAN] Synthesis: trace how pride and prejudice develops from Chapter XXIV to Chapter XXVI. Use one quotation from each.

    Sample answer: Earlier, in Chapter XXIV, paragraph 10, the text reads “The more I see of the world, the more am I dissatisfied with it” — Elizabeth's disillusion. In Chapter XXVI, “I am sure I should be deceived again” (Chapter XXVI, paragraph 26) — Jane's honesty. Jane learns to judge.

172. [short · synthesis · DOK 4 · AP: AP-LIT.FIG] Close reading: how do the diction and syntax of “I am sure I should be deceived again” (Chapter XXVI, paragraph 26) shape its meaning? Consider a second, competing reading.

    Sample answer: Jane's honesty. The evidence is “I am sure I should be deceived again” (Chapter XXVI, paragraph 26). This develops pride and prejudice: Jane learns to judge. The words “deceived” and “should” carry that meaning: they are the charged choices in the line, and changing either would soften the effect. She confesses "myself to have been entirely deceived in Miss Bingley's regard for me," but asks Lizzy not to triumph, keeping charity even in disappointment.

173. [short · synthesis · DOK 4 · AP: AP-LIT.FIG] Close reading: how do the diction and syntax of “let me once in my life feel how much I have been to blame” (Chapter XLVIII, paragraph 23) shape its meaning? Consider a second, competing reading.

    Sample answer: Mr. Bennet's admission, the most serious line he speaks. The evidence is “let me once in my life feel how much I have been to blame” (Chapter XLVIII, paragraph 23). This develops family and reputation: Collins says Lydia's death "would have been a blessing" by comparison: the society's harshest view, made grotesque. The words “blame” and “much” carry that meaning: they are the charged choices in the line, and changing either would soften the effect. He says "let me once in my life feel how much I have been to blame" and adds "it will pass away soon enough," honest about both his guilt and his character.

174. [short · synthesis · DOK 4 · AP: AP-LIT.FIG] Close reading: how do the diction and syntax of “If he had another motive, I am sure it would never disgrace him” (Chapter LII, paragraph 3) shape its meaning? Consider a second, competing reading.

Sample answer: Mrs. Gardiner's hint about love. The evidence is “If he had another motive, I am sure it would never disgrace him” (Chapter LII, paragraph 3). This develops pride and prejudice: Darcy has overcome his pride in the most practical way: by binding himself to Wickham as a brother-in-law. The words “disgrace” and “another” carry that meaning: they are the charged choices in the line, and changing either would soften the effect. Mrs. Gardiner writes that "he had been some days in town before he was able to discover them," and hints that "another motive" would "never disgrace him," which Elizabeth understands as herself.

175. [short · synthesis · DOK 4 · AP: AP-LIT.FIG] Close reading: how do the diction and syntax of “My dear Lizzy, where can you have been walking to” (Chapter LIX, paragraph 1) shape its meaning? Consider a second, competing reading.

Sample answer: Jane's question. The evidence is “My dear Lizzy, where can you have been walking to” (Chapter LIX, paragraph 1). This develops marriage and money: Mr. Bennet warns against an unequal marriage. The words “walking” and “where” carry that meaning: they are the charged choices in the line, and changing either would soften the effect. He warns that she "could be neither happy nor respectable, unless you truly esteemed your husband," and, once convinced, says "I could not have parted with you, my Lizzy, to anyone less worthy.".

176. [fill · recall · DOK 1 · Dual Credit (Indiana College Core): ICC-WC-1.5] Fill in the blank with the vocabulary word that fits: “Bennet; and, as he spoke, he left the room, fatigued with the _____ of his wife.” Word bank: fretfully, raptures, conjecturing, extracts

Key: raptures

177. [short · inference · DOK 2 · Dual Credit (Indiana College Core): ICC-WC-1.5] What can you infer from this line? “You take delight in vexing me. You have no compassion on my poor nerves” (Chapter I, paragraph 28) Answer in two or three sentences with one detail.

Sample answer: Mrs. Bennet's self-dramatizing; comic characterization. The evidence is “You take delight in vexing me. You have no compassion on my poor nerves” (Chapter I, paragraph 28). This develops marriage and money: marriage is introduced as a transaction ("a single man in possession of a good fortune").

178. [short · inference · DOK 2 · Dual Credit (Indiana College Core): ICC-WC-1.5] What can you infer from this line? “I feel it exceedingly” (Chapter XXXVII, paragraph 3) Answer in two or three sentences with one detail.

Sample answer: Lady Catherine on the departure: she treats everything as about her. The evidence is “I feel it exceedingly” (Chapter XXXVII, paragraph 3). This develops pride and prejudice: Elizabeth now feels the justice of Darcy's objections to her family.

179. [mc · inference · DOK 2 · Dual Credit (Indiana College Core): ICC-WC-1.5] What does this passage most clearly show? “The two gentlemen left Rosings the next morning” (Chapter XXXVII, paragraph 1)

A. The quiet opening after the storm.

B. Darcy's personal remark, which startles Elizabeth.

C. Elizabeth's rebuttal by analogy.

D. The chapter opens by clearing the stage for new arrivals.

Key: A (The quiet opening after the storm.)

180. [mc · inference · DOK 2 · Dual Credit (Indiana College Core): ICC-WC-1.5] Which choice best states a central concern of “Chapter LII”?

A. Leaving Kent

B. Scandal

C. Bingley returns

D. The hidden benefactor

Key: D (The hidden benefactor)

181. [short · inference · DOK 2 · Dual Credit (Indiana College Core): ICC-WC-1.5] What can you infer from this line? “My dear Lizzy, where can you have been walking to” (Chapter LIX, paragraph 1) Answer in two or three sentences with one detail.

Sample answer: Jane's question. The evidence is “My dear Lizzy, where can you have been walking to” (Chapter LIX, paragraph 1). This develops marriage and money: Mr. Bennet warns against an unequal marriage.

182. [short · analysis · DOK 3 · Dual Credit (Indiana College Core): ICC-WC-1.5] Analyze the word choice in “Between him and Darcy there was a very steady friendship, in spite of a great opposition of character” (Chapter IV, paragraph 14). Pick two words and explain what they suggest.

Sample answer: Contrast of Bingley and Darcy. The evidence is “Between him and Darcy there was a very steady friendship, in spite of a great opposition of character” (Chapter IV, paragraph 14). This develops pride and prejudice: Elizabeth names Jane's "candour" as a fault, foreshadowing her own errors. The words “opposition” and “friendship” carry that meaning: they are the charged choices in the line, and changing either would soften the effect.

183. [mc · analysis · DOK 3 · Dual Credit (Indiana College Core): ICC-WC-1.5] Which literary element does this describe in “Chapter XXVI”? The chapter uses Jane's letter to report events from London.

A. Imagery

B. Epistolary

C. Setting

D. Alliteration

Key: B (Epistolary)

184. [short · analysis · DOK 3 · Dual Credit (Indiana College Core): ICC-WC-1.5] Claim: Charlotte's realism makes her a better reader of Darcy than Elizabeth. Explain how this evidence supports the claim: “I may thank you, Eliza, for this piece of civility” (Chapter XXX, paragraph 8).

Sample answer: She tells Elizabeth "I may thank you, Eliza, for this piece of civility," guessing his motive, while Elizabeth, contrasting him with the colonel's "readiness and ease," sees only pride. The evidence is “I may thank you, Eliza, for this piece of civility” (Chapter XXX, paragraph 8) — Charlotte jokes that Darcy's visit is for Elizabeth. This develops first impressions: Elizabeth's settled opinion blinds her to evidence in front of her.

185. [mc · analysis · DOK 3 · Dual Credit (Indiana College Core): ICC-WC-1.5] Which literary element does this describe in “Chapter LV”? Mr. Bennet jokes that Jane and Bingley are so easy-going ‘every servant will cheat you.’

A. Characterization

B. Hyperbole

C. Allusion

D. Metaphor

Key: A (Characterization)

186. [short · synthesis · DOK 4 · Dual Credit (Indiana College Core): ICC-WC-1.5] Close reading: how do the diction and syntax of “It is a truth universally acknowledged, that a single man in possession of a good fortune, must be in want of a wife” (Chapter I, paragraph 1) shape its meaning? Consider a second, competing reading.

Sample answer: Verbal irony: it is the families who want the rich man, not the man who wants a wife. The evidence is “It is a truth universally acknowledged, that a single man in possession of a good fortune, must be in want of a wife” (Chapter I, paragraph 1). This develops marriage and money: marriage is introduced as a transaction ("a single man in possession of a good fortune"). The words “acknowledged” and “universally” carry that meaning: they are the charged choices in the line, and changing either would soften the effect. It claims every rich man "must be in want of a wife," but the next paragraph shows it is the neighbourhood families who regard him as "the rightful property" of their daughters; the "truth" is their desire, not his.

187. [short · synthesis · DOK 4 · Dual Credit (Indiana College Core): ICC-WC-1.5] Evaluate this claim about the chapter: "The letter-writing scene shows Elizabeth misreading Darcy's attention because she has already decided he dislikes her." Is it fully persuasive? Argue with evidence, including a passage that complicates it.
Sample answer: The claim is persuasive in part. "Elizabeth could not help observing as she turned over some music books that lay on the instrument, how frequently Mr. Darcy's eyes were fixed on her" (Chapter X, paragraph 46) supports it: She notices "how frequently Mr. Darcy's eyes were fixed on her" but concludes he finds something wrong in her; the reader, who knows his admiration, sees prejudice shaping her interpretation. But "I am afraid you do not like your pen" (Chapter X, paragraph 11) complicates it: Miss Bingley's flattery of Darcy's letter-writing: comic and transparent, and its "not" marks a limit or reversal the claim passes over. So the claim stands only in a qualified form: true of the chapter's main pattern, but not of every moment in it.

188. [short · synthesis · DOK 4 · Dual Credit (Indiana College Core): ICC-WC-1.5] Close reading: how do the diction and syntax of "Miss Bingley sees that her brother is in love with you" (Chapter XXI, paragraph 18) shape its meaning? Consider a second, competing reading.
Sample answer: Elizabeth tells Jane that Miss Bingley sees Bingley's love for Jane and means to separate them. The evidence is "Miss Bingley sees that her brother is in love with you" (Chapter XXI, paragraph 18). This develops first impressions: Elizabeth's skepticism here is correct. The words "brother" and "that" carry that meaning: they are the charged choices in the line, and changing either would soften the effect. Jane says "Caroline is incapable of wilfully deceiving anyone," but Elizabeth sees that Miss Bingley wants to separate them.

189. [short · synthesis · DOK 4 · Dual Credit (Indiana College Core): ICC-WC-1.5] Close reading: how do the diction and syntax of "I am not romantic you know. I never was" (Chapter XXII, paragraph 17) shape its meaning? Consider a second, competing reading.
Sample answer: Charlotte's honesty. The evidence is "I am not romantic you know. I never was" (Chapter XXII, paragraph 17). This develops marriage and money: marriage as security. The words "romantic" and "never" carry that meaning: they are the charged choices in the line, and changing either would soften the effect. She says "I ask only a comfortable home," which for a woman of twenty-seven with no money is a reasonable aim.

190. [short · synthesis · DOK 4 · Dual Credit (Indiana College Core): ICC-WC-1.5] Close reading: how do the diction and syntax of "My dearest Lizzy will, I am sure, be incapable of triumphing in her better judgment, at my expense, when I confess myself to have been entirely deceived in Miss Bingley's regard for me" (Chapter XXVI, paragraph 26) shape its meaning? Consider a second, competing reading.
Sample answer: Jane admits her error. The evidence is "My dearest Lizzy will, I am sure, be incapable of triumphing in her better judgment, at my expense, when I confess myself to have been…" (Chapter XXVI, paragraph 26). This develops pride and prejudice: Jane learns to judge. The words "triumphing" and "incapable" carry that meaning: they are the charged choices in the line, and changing either would soften the effect. She confesses "myself to have been entirely deceived in Miss Bingley's regard for me," but asks Lizzy not to triumph, keeping charity even in disappointment.

191. [mc · inference · DOK 2 · Program outcome: LeL-C2-LIT-1] What does this passage most clearly show? "It is a truth universally acknowledged, that a single man in possession of a good fortune, must be in want of a wife" (Chapter I, paragraph 1)

A. Elizabeth deflates the household's awe of rank with a joke.

B. Mrs. Gardiner's sharper version.

C. Verbal irony: it is the families who want the rich man, not the man who wants a wife.

D. Darcy's resistance to his own feelings.

Key: C (Verbal irony: it is the families who want the rich man, not the man who wants a wife.)

192. [mc · inference · DOK 2 · Program outcome: LeL-C2-LIT-1] What does this passage most clearly show? “Younger sons cannot marry where they like” (Chapter XXXIII, paragraph 12)

A. Wickham's interest shifts to an heiress, Miss King.

B. Elizabeth's comment on distance.

C. The colonel on money.

D. Her judgment follows her feelings.

Key: C (The colonel on money.)

193. [mc · inference · DOK 2 · Program outcome: LeL-C2-LIT-1] What does this passage most clearly show? “there were some very strong objections against the lady” (Chapter XXXIII, paragraph 30)

A. The cause of separation.

B. Elizabeth's rejection of Charlotte's view.

C. Jane admits her error.

D. Collins on her lack of fortune.

Key: A (The cause of separation.)

194. [mc · inference · DOK 2 · Program outcome: LeL-C2-LIT-1] What does this passage most clearly show? “It will pass away soon enough” (Chapter XLVIII, paragraph 23)

A. Lydia's note: thoughtless and triumphant; note the grammar ("with who") and the tone.

B. He predicts his remorse will fade, and it does.

C. Mr. Bennet stops Mary's singing in public.

D. The visual image that divides the Bingley sisters and Darcy.

Key: B (He predicts his remorse will fade, and it does.)

195. [short · analysis · DOK 3 · Program outcome: LeL-C2-LIT-1] Analyze the word choice in “is wilfully to misunderstand them” (Chapter XI, paragraph 32). Pick two words and explain what they suggest.

Sample answer: Darcy's reply; it is the more accurate judgment. The evidence is “is wilfully to misunderstand them” (Chapter XI, paragraph 32). This develops pride and prejudice: both characters own the faults of the title: he resentment and pride, she a will to misunderstand. The words “misunderstand” and “wilfully” carry that meaning: they are the charged choices in the line, and changing either would soften the effect.

196. [mc · analysis · DOK 3 · Program outcome: LeL-C2-LIT-1] Which literary element does this describe in “Chapter XI”? Elizabeth and Darcy discuss faults directly. Darcy admits his temper is ‘resentful’; Elizabeth's teasing hides real criticism.

A. Theme

B. Characterization

C. Imagery

D. Irony

Key: B (Characterization)

197. [short · analysis · DOK 3 · Program outcome: LeL-C2-LIT-1] Claim: The ball provides Darcy with the evidence he later uses against the Bennet family. Explain how this evidence supports the claim: “had her family made an agreement to expose themselves as much as they could during the evening” (Chapter XVIII, paragraph 71).

Sample answer: Elizabeth herself thinks it seemed "her family made an agreement to expose themselves as much as they could," which explains why Darcy fears for Bingley. The evidence is “had her family made an agreement to expose themselves as much as they could during the evening” (Chapter XVIII, paragraph 71) — Elizabeth's mortification. This develops family and reputation: the Bennets "expose themselves," as Elizabeth puts it.

198. [mc · analysis · DOK 3 · Program outcome: LeL-C2-LIT-1] Which literary element does this describe in “Chapter XIX”? Collins proposes to Elizabeth with a list of reasons and refuses to hear her refusal as genuine.

A. Imagery

B. Characterization

C. Theme

D. Setting

Key: B (Characterization)

199. [mc · analysis · DOK 3 · Program outcome: LeL-C2-LIT-1] Quote identification: in which section does this passage appear? “The two gentlemen left Rosings the next morning”

A. Chapter III

B. Chapter XXXVII

C. Chapter XXIX

D. Chapter XXXVI

Key: B (Chapter XXXVII)

200. [short · analysis · DOK 3 · Program outcome: LeL-C2-LIT-1] Analyze the word choice in “Such a change in a man of so much pride, excited not only astonishment but gratitude” (Chapter XLIV, paragraph 16). Pick two words and explain what they suggest.

Sample answer: Darcy's change is read as proof of love. The evidence is “Such a change in a man of so much pride, excited not only astonishment but gratitude” (Chapter XLIV, paragraph 16). This develops pride and prejudice: Darcy has answered her charge of ungentlemanlike behaviour by changing his manners, and she recognizes it. The words “astonishment” and “gratitude” carry that meaning: they are the charged choices in the line, and changing either would soften the effect.

201. [short · synthesis · DOK 4 · Program outcome: LeL-C2-LIT-1] Close reading: how do the diction and syntax of “crossing field after field at a quick pace, jumping over stiles and springing over puddles” (Chapter VII, paragraph 45) shape its meaning? Consider a second, competing reading.

Sample answer: Energetic, unconventional. The evidence is “crossing field after field at a quick pace, jumping over stiles and springing over puddles” (Chapter VII, paragraph 45). This develops family and reputation: the Bingley sisters sneer at her muddy petticoat. The words “springing” and “crossing” carry that meaning: they are the charged choices in the line, and changing either would soften the effect. She arrives "with weary ankles, dirty stockings, and a face glowing," a picture of devotion that the Bingley sisters despise and Darcy admires.

202. [short · synthesis · DOK 4 · Program outcome: LeL-C2-LIT-1] Close reading: how do the diction and syntax of “despise me if you dare” (Chapter X, paragraph 50) shape its meaning? Consider a second, competing reading.

Sample answer: Elizabeth's challenge: playful and defiant, the voice Darcy finds irresistible. The evidence is “despise me if you dare” (Chapter X, paragraph 50). This develops pride and prejudice: Elizabeth refuses to give Darcy the satisfaction of dancing a reel: "despise me if you dare.". The words “despise” and “dare” carry that meaning: they are the charged choices in the line, and changing either would soften the effect. She notices "how frequently Mr. Darcy's eyes were fixed on her" but concludes he finds something wrong in her; the reader, who knows his admiration, sees prejudice shaping her interpretation.

203. [short · synthesis · DOK 4 · Program outcome: LeL-C2-LIT-1] Close reading: how do the diction and syntax of “You have delighted us long enough” (Chapter XVIII, paragraph 68) shape its meaning? Consider a second, competing reading.

    Sample answer: Mr. Bennet stops Mary's singing in public. The evidence is “You have delighted us long enough” (Chapter XVIII, paragraph 68). This develops family and reputation: the Bennets "expose themselves," as Elizabeth puts it. The words “delighted” and “enough” carry that meaning: they are the charged choices in the line, and changing either would soften the effect. Elizabeth herself thinks it seemed "her family made an agreement to expose themselves as much as they could," which explains why Darcy fears for Bingley.

204. [short · synthesis · DOK 4 · Program outcome: LeL-C2-LIT-1] Close reading: how do the diction and syntax of “Colonel Fitzwilliam entered into conversation directly with the readiness and ease of a well-bred man” (Chapter XXX, paragraph 10) shape its meaning? Consider a second, competing reading.

    Sample answer: The colonel's easy manners make Darcy's stiffness look worse by contrast. The evidence is “Colonel Fitzwilliam entered into conversation directly with the readiness and ease of a well-bred man” (Chapter XXX, paragraph 10). This develops first impressions: Elizabeth's settled opinion blinds her to evidence in front of her. The words “conversation” and “readiness” carry that meaning: they are the charged choices in the line, and changing either would soften the effect. She tells Elizabeth "I may thank you, Eliza, for this piece of civility," guessing his motive, while Elizabeth, contrasting him with the colonel's "readiness and ease," sees only pride.

205. [short · synthesis · DOK 4 · Program outcome: LeL-C2-LIT-1] Close reading: how do the diction and syntax of “The death of your daughter would have been a blessing in comparison of this” (Chapter XLVIII, paragraph 12) shape its meaning? Consider a second, competing reading.

    Sample answer: Collins's letter: hypocrisy dressed as piety. The evidence is “The death of your daughter would have been a blessing in comparison of this” (Chapter XLVIII, paragraph 12). This develops family and reputation: Collins says Lydia's death "would have been a blessing" by comparison: the society's harshest view, made grotesque. The words “comparison” and “blessing” carry that meaning: they are the charged choices in the line, and changing either would soften the effect. He says "let me once in my life feel how much I have been to blame" and adds "it will pass away soon enough," honest about both his guilt and his character.

206. [short · synthesis · DOK 4 · Program outcome: LeL-C2-LIT-1] Close reading: how do the diction and syntax of “He had been some days in town before he was able to discover them” (Chapter LII, paragraph 3) shape its meaning? Consider a second, competing reading.

    Sample answer: Darcy's personal effort. The evidence is “He had been some days in town before he was able to discover them” (Chapter LII, paragraph 3). This develops pride and prejudice: Darcy has overcome his pride in the most practical way: by binding himself to Wickham as a brother-in-law. The words “discover” and “before” carry that meaning: they are the charged choices in the line, and changing either would soften the effect. Mrs. Gardiner writes that "he had been some days in town before he was able to discover them," and hints that "another motive" would "never disgrace him," which Elizabeth understands as herself.

207. [short · synthesis · DOK 4 · Program outcome: LeL-C2-LIT-1] Close reading: how do the diction and syntax of “He is come—Mr. Bingley is come” (Chapter LV, paragraph 7) shape its meaning? Consider a second, competing reading.

    Sample answer: Mrs. Bennet's excitement: repetition is her voice. The evidence is “He is come—Mr. Bingley is come” (Chapter LV, paragraph 7). This develops marriage and money: a marriage of affection and fortune both. She calls herself "the most fortunate creature that ever existed" and asks "why am I thus singled from my family," showing humility even in triumph.

208. [short · inference · DOK 2 · Program outcome: LeL-C3-LIT-1] What can you infer from this line? “Colonel Fitzwilliam entered into conversation directly with the readiness and ease of a well-bred man” (Chapter XXX, paragraph 10) Answer in two or three sentences with one detail.
Sample answer: The colonel's easy manners make Darcy's stiffness look worse by contrast. The evidence is “Colonel Fitzwilliam entered into conversation directly with the readiness and ease of a well-bred man” (Chapter XXX, paragraph 10).

209. [mc · inference · DOK 2 · Program outcome: LeL-C3-LIT-1] What does this passage most clearly show? “If he had another motive, I am sure it would never disgrace him” (Chapter LII, paragraph 3)
A. Mrs. Gardiner's hint about love.
B. "Wisely" is ironic: his caution will deepen her misjudgment.
C. Collins's refusal of novels, written in a novel; Austen's joke at his expense.
D. Opening: Elizabeth's wit restored.
Key: A (Mrs. Gardiner's hint about love.)

210. [mc · inference · DOK 2 · Program outcome: LeL-C3-LIT-1] What does this passage most clearly show? “Come, Mr. Wickham, we are brother and sister, you know. Do not let us quarrel about the past” (Chapter LII, paragraph 37)
A. Elizabeth's polite dismissal of the man she once believed.
B. The visual image that divides the Bingley sisters and Darcy.
C. The colonel on money.
D. Charlotte's cynical realism, foreshadowing her choice.
Key: A (Elizabeth's polite dismissal of the man she once believed.)

211. [short · analysis · DOK 3 · Program outcome: LeL-C3-LIT-1] Claim: The novel's opening sentence uses irony to show that marriage in this society is driven by money. Explain how this evidence supports the claim: “It is a truth universally acknowledged, that a single man in possession of a good fortune, must be in want of a wife” (Chapter I, paragraph 1).
Sample answer: It claims every rich man "must be in want of a wife," but the next paragraph shows it is the neighbourhood families who regard him as "the rightful property" of their daughters; the "truth" is their desire, not his. The evidence is “It is a truth universally acknowledged, that a single man in possession of a good fortune, must be in want of a wife” (Chapter I, paragraph 1) — Verbal irony: it is the families who want the rich man, not the man who wants a wife. This develops marriage and money: marriage is introduced as a transaction ("a single man in possession of a good fortune").

212. [short · analysis · DOK 3 · Program outcome: LeL-C3-LIT-1] Analyze the word choice in “the improvement of her mind by extensive reading” (Chapter VIII, paragraph 51). Pick two words and explain what they suggest.
Sample answer: Darcy's addition: values mind. The evidence is “the improvement of her mind by extensive reading” (Chapter VIII, paragraph 51). This develops women's choices: accomplishments as a marriage market display. The words “improvement” and “extensive” carry that meaning: they are the charged choices in the line, and changing either would soften the effect.

213. [mc · analysis · DOK 3 · Program outcome: LeL-C3-LIT-1] Which literary element does this describe in “Chapter XLVIII”? Mr. Bennet returns, admits blame in a rare serious moment, then recovers his irony at Kitty's expense.
A. Characterization
B. Allusion
C. Personification

D. Symbolism

Key: A (Characterization)

214. [short · synthesis · DOK 4 · Program outcome: LeL-C3-LIT-1] Close reading: how do the diction and syntax of “Mr. Bennet’s property consisted almost entirely in an estate of two thousand a year, which, unfortunately for his daughters, was entailed” (Chapter VII, paragraph 1) shape its meaning? Consider a second, competing reading.

Sample answer: The entail: the economic stakes. The evidence is “Mr. Bennet’s property consisted almost entirely in an estate of two thousand a year, which, unfortunately for his daughters, was entailed” (Chapter VII, paragraph 1). This develops family and reputation: the Bingley sisters sneer at her muddy petticoat. The words “unfortunately” and “consisted” carry that meaning: they are the charged choices in the line, and changing either would soften the effect. She arrives "with weary ankles, dirty stockings, and a face glowing," a picture of devotion that the Bingley sisters despise and Darcy admires.

215. [short · synthesis · DOK 4 · Program outcome: LeL-C3-LIT-1] Close reading: how do the diction and syntax of “You could not make me happy, and I am convinced that I am the last woman in the world who would make you so” (Chapter XIX, paragraph 12) shape its meaning? Consider a second, competing reading.

Sample answer: Elizabeth's refusal. The evidence is “You could not make me happy, and I am convinced that I am the last woman in the world who would make you so” (Chapter XIX, paragraph 12). This develops marriage and money: he reminds her of her small fortune. The words “convinced” and “happy” carry that meaning: they are the charged choices in the line, and changing either would soften the effect. He reminds her that "your portion is unhappily so small" that she is unlikely to get another offer, but she insists "you could not make me happy.".

216. [short · synthesis · DOK 4 · Program outcome: LeL-C3-LIT-1] Close reading: how do the diction and syntax of “Lady Catherine was a tall, large woman, with strongly-marked features” (Chapter XXIX, paragraph 11) shape its meaning? Consider a second, competing reading.

Sample answer: Description. The evidence is “Lady Catherine was a tall, large woman, with strongly-marked features” (Chapter XXIX, paragraph 11). This develops pride and prejudice: aristocratic pride in its purest form. The words “features” and “strongly” carry that meaning: they are the charged choices in the line, and changing either would soften the effect. Lady Catherine tells her she gives "your opinion very decidedly for so young a person," a rebuke for not deferring, and Elizabeth goes on doing it.

217. [short · synthesis · DOK 4 · Program outcome: LeL-C3-LIT-1] Close reading: how do the diction and syntax of “you give your opinion very decidedly for so young a person” (Chapter XXIX, paragraph 35) shape its meaning? Consider a second, competing reading.

Sample answer: Lady Catherine on Elizabeth. The evidence is “you give your opinion very decidedly for so young a person” (Chapter XXIX, paragraph 35). This develops pride and prejudice: aristocratic pride in its purest form. The words “decidedly” and “opinion” carry that meaning: they are the charged choices in the line, and changing either would soften the effect. Lady Catherine tells her she gives "your opinion very decidedly for so young a person," a rebuke for not deferring, and Elizabeth goes on doing it.

218. [short · synthesis · DOK 4 · Program outcome: LeL-C3-LIT-1] Close reading: how do the diction and syntax of “How despicably have I acted” (Chapter XXXVI, paragraph 8) shape its meaning? Consider a second, competing reading.

Sample answer: Self-judgment. The evidence is “How despicably have I acted” (Chapter XXXVI, paragraph 8). This develops pride and prejudice: Elizabeth sees that vanity, not reason, guided her. The words “despicably” and “acted” carry that meaning: they are the charged choices in the line, and changing either would soften the effect. She realizes she was "pleased with the preference of one, and offended by the neglect of the other," and concludes, "Till this moment I never knew myself.".

219. [short · synthesis · DOK 4 · Program outcome: LeL-C3-LIT-1] Close reading: how do the diction and syntax of “One has got all the goodness, and the other all the appearance of it” (Chapter XL, paragraph 15) shape its meaning? Consider a second, competing reading.

Sample answer: Key line. The evidence is “One has got all the goodness, and the other all the appearance of it” (Chapter XL, paragraph 15). This develops first impressions: the sisters debate what to do with what they know. The words “appearance” and “goodness” carry that meaning: they are the charged choices in the line, and changing either would soften the effect. She tells Jane that "one has got all the goodness, and the other all the appearance of it," reversing her earlier judgment of Darcy and Wickham.

220. [short · synthesis · DOK 4 · Program outcome: LeL-C3-LIT-1] Close reading: how do the diction and syntax of “It was gratitude. Gratitude, not merely for having once loved her, but for loving her still well enough, to forgive all the petulance and acrimony of her manner in rejecting him” (Chapter XLIV, paragraph 16) shape its meaning? Consider a second, competing reading.

Sample answer: Austen defines Elizabeth's change of heart precisely; the repetition of "gratitude" slows the moment. The evidence is “It was gratitude. Gratitude, not merely for having once loved her, but for loving her still well enough, to forgive all the petulance and…” (Chapter XLIV, paragraph 16). This develops pride and prejudice: Darcy has answered her charge of ungentlemanlike behaviour by changing his manners, and she recognizes it. The words “gratitude” and “rejecting” carry that meaning: they are the charged choices in the line, and changing either would soften the effect. She has never seen him "so desirous to please, so free from self-consequence," and her response is "gratitude ... for loving her still well enough, to forgive all the petulance and acrimony" of her refusal; her feeling rests on what he has done.

221. [short · synthesis · DOK 4 · Program outcome: LeL-C3-LIT-1] Close reading: how do the diction and syntax of “instead of spending his whole income, he had laid by an annual sum, for the better provision of his children” (Chapter L, paragraph 1) shape its meaning? Consider a second, competing reading.

Sample answer: Mr. Bennet's regret. The evidence is “instead of spending his whole income, he had laid by an annual sum, for the better provision of his children” (Chapter L, paragraph 1). This develops marriage and money: the cost of Mr. Bennet's carelessness becomes concrete. The words “provision” and “spending” carry that meaning: they are the charged choices in the line, and changing either would soften the effect. She "was convinced that she could have been happy with him; when it was no longer likely they should meet"; the semicolon holds realization and loss together.

222. [short · synthesis · DOK 4 · Program outcome: LeL-C3-LIT-1] Close reading: how do the diction and syntax of “My affections and wishes are unchanged, but one word from you will silence me on this subject forever” (Chapter LVIII, paragraph 7) shape its meaning? Consider a second, competing reading.

Sample answer: Darcy's humility. The evidence is “My affections and wishes are unchanged, but one word from you will silence me on this subject forever” (Chapter LVIII, paragraph 7). This develops pride and prejudice: both acknowledge their faults. The words “affections” and “unchanged” carry that meaning: they are the charged choices in the line, and changing either would soften the effect. Darcy says "my affections and wishes are unchanged, but one word from you will silence me," and admits "I have been a selfish being all my life.".

223. [mc · inference · DOK 2 · Program outcome: LeL-C4-LIT-1] Which choice best states a central concern of “Chapter XXVI”?

A. An unhappy marriage observed

B. Embarrassing relations

C. Cold reception

D. Visit to Hunsford

Key: C (Cold reception)

224. [short · inference · DOK 2 · Program outcome: LeL-C4-LIT-1] What can you infer from this line? “Lydia will never be easy till she has exposed herself in some public place or other” (Chapter XLI, paragraph 15) Answer in two or three sentences with one detail.

Sample answer: Mr. Bennet's acceptance. The evidence is “Lydia will never be easy till she has exposed herself in some public place or other” (Chapter XLI, paragraph 15). This develops family and reputation: the father's failure to act sets up the crisis.

225. [mc · analysis · DOK 3 · Program outcome: LeL-C4-LIT-1] Quote identification: in which section does this passage appear? “It is a truth universally acknowledged, that a single man in possession of a good fortune, must be in want of a wife”

A. Chapter XLVI

B. Chapter I

C. Chapter XXXVII

D. Chapter XXI

Key: B (Chapter I)

226. [short · analysis · DOK 3 · Program outcome: LeL-C4-LIT-1] Claim: The contrast between Jane and Elizabeth introduces the novel's interest in how we judge others. Explain how this evidence supports the claim: “You never see a fault in anybody” (Chapter IV, paragraph 7).

Sample answer: Elizabeth teases that Jane will "never see a fault in anybody," implying her own judgment is more reliable; the novel will test that confidence. The evidence is “You never see a fault in anybody” (Chapter IV, paragraph 7) — Elizabeth on Jane: a criticism and a compliment. This develops pride and prejudice: Elizabeth names Jane's "candour" as a fault, foreshadowing her own errors.

227. [mc · analysis · DOK 3 · Program outcome: LeL-C4-LIT-1] Which literary element does this describe in “Chapter VIII”? Miss Bingley's list of accomplishments is designed to describe herself.

A. Hyperbole

B. Alliteration

C. Irony

D. Metaphor

Key: C (Irony)

228. [short · analysis · DOK 3 · Program outcome: LeL-C4-LIT-1] Claim: The chapter sets two suitors side by side, one absurd and one charming, and both are judged on surface. Explain how this evidence supports the claim: “Mr. Collins had only to change from Jane to Elizabeth—and it was soon done—done while Mrs. Bennet was stirring the fire” (Chapter XV, paragraph 4).

Sample answer: Collins switches brides "while Mrs. Bennet was stirring the fire," treating the daughters as interchangeable, while Wickham's "appearance was greatly in his favour," which is all Elizabeth knows of him. The evidence is “Mr. Collins had only to change from Jane to Elizabeth—and it was soon done—done while Mrs. Bennet was stirring the fire” (Chapter XV, paragraph 4) — Comic speed: marriage as a choice among interchangeable daughters. This develops first impressions: Wickham's charm is all surface, and Elizabeth is charmed.

229. [mc · analysis · DOK 3 · Program outcome: LeL-C4-LIT-1] Which literary element does this describe in “Chapter XXXIII”? The colonel explains that as a younger son he must marry money.

A. Simile

B. Hyperbole

C. Characterization

D. Tone / mood

Key: C (Characterization)

230. [short · analysis · DOK 3 · Program outcome: LeL-C4-LIT-1] Claim: Darcy's secret rescue proves his character more than any speech could. Explain how this evidence supports the claim: “If he had another motive, I am sure it would never disgrace him” (Chapter LII, paragraph 3).

Sample answer: Mrs. Gardiner writes that "he had been some days in town before he was able to discover them," and hints that "another motive" would "never disgrace him," which Elizabeth understands as herself. The evidence is “If he had another motive, I am sure it would never disgrace him” (Chapter LII, paragraph 3) — Mrs. Gardiner's hint about love. This develops pride and prejudice: Darcy has overcome his pride in the most practical way: by binding himself to Wickham as a brother-in-law.

231. [mc · analysis · DOK 3 · Program outcome: LeL-C4-LIT-1] Quote identification: in which section does this passage appear? “I am certainly the most fortunate creature that ever existed”

A. Chapter XX

B. Chapter VIII

C. Chapter LV

D. Chapter I

Key: C (Chapter LV)

232. [mc · analysis · DOK 3 · Program outcome: LeL-C4-LIT-1] Which literary element does this describe in “Chapter LV”? Bingley proposes to Jane; Jane calls herself ‘the most fortunate creature that ever existed.’

A. Diction / vocabulary

B. Symbolism

C. Simile

D. Characterization

Key: D (Characterization)

233. [short · synthesis · DOK 4 · Program outcome: LeL-C4-LIT-1] Close reading: how do the diction and syntax of “She is tolerable; but not handsome enough to tempt me” (Chapter III, paragraph 13) shape its meaning? Consider a second, competing reading.

Sample answer: Darcy's insult; the source of Elizabeth's prejudice. The evidence is “She is tolerable; but not handsome enough to tempt me” (Chapter III, paragraph 13). This develops first impressions: Elizabeth's view of Darcy is formed in one overheard insult. The words “tolerable” and “handsome” carry that meaning: they are the charged choices in the line, and changing either would soften the effect. Darcy is admired for "ten thousand a year" until his manners turn "the tide of his popularity," so the crowd's judgment moves with surface impressions.

234. [short · synthesis · DOK 4 · Program outcome: LeL-C4-LIT-1] Close reading: how do the diction and syntax of “his manners gave a disgust which turned the tide of his popularity” (Chapter III, paragraph 5) shape its meaning? Consider a second, competing reading.

Sample answer: Public opinion shifts on manners, not character. The evidence is “his manners gave a disgust which turned the tide of his popularity” (Chapter III, paragraph 5). This develops first impressions: Elizabeth's view of Darcy is formed in one overheard insult. The words “popularity” and “manners” carry that meaning: they are the charged choices in the line, and changing either would soften the effect. Darcy is admired for "ten thousand a year" until his manners turn "the tide of his popularity," so the crowd's judgment moves with surface impressions.

235. [short · synthesis · DOK 4 · Program outcome: LeL-C4-LIT-1] Close reading: how do the diction and syntax of “They were in fact very fine ladies” (Chapter IV, paragraph 11) shape its meaning? Consider a second, competing reading.

Sample answer: Ironic praise of the Bingley sisters. The evidence is “They were in fact very fine ladies” (Chapter IV, paragraph 11). This develops pride and prejudice: Elizabeth names Jane's "candour" as a fault, foreshadowing her own errors. The words “ladies” and “fact” carry that meaning: they are the charged choices in the line, and changing either would soften the effect. Elizabeth teases that Jane will "never see a fault in anybody," implying her own judgment is more reliable; the novel will test that confidence.

236. [short · synthesis · DOK 4 · Program outcome: LeL-C4-LIT-1] Close reading: how do the diction and syntax of “I beg your pardon;—one knows exactly what to think” (Chapter XVII, paragraph 7) shape its meaning? Consider a second, competing reading.

Sample answer: Elizabeth's certainty, answering Jane's hesitation. The evidence is “I beg your pardon;—one knows exactly what to think” (Chapter XVII, paragraph 7). This develops pride and prejudice: Elizabeth's certainty is her pride. The words “exactly” and “pardon” carry that meaning: they are the charged choices in the line, and changing either would soften the effect. Jane suggests "they have both been deceived," while Elizabeth is sure Darcy is guilty; the novel will show Jane was closer to the truth.

237. [short · synthesis · DOK 4 · Program outcome: LeL-C4-LIT-1] Close reading: how do the diction and syntax of “before I am run away with by my feelings on this subject” (Chapter XIX, paragraph 6) shape its meaning? Consider a second, competing reading.

Sample answer: Collins's comic emotion. The evidence is “before I am run away with by my feelings on this subject” (Chapter XIX, paragraph 6). This develops marriage and money: he reminds her of her small fortune. The words “feelings” and “subject” carry that meaning: they are the charged choices in the line, and changing either would soften the effect. He reminds her that "your portion is unhappily so small" that she is unlikely to get another offer, but she insists "you could not make me happy.".

238. [short · synthesis · DOK 4 · Program outcome: LeL-C4-LIT-1] Close reading: how do the diction and syntax of “We do not suffer by accident” (Chapter XXV, paragraph 7) shape its meaning? Consider a second, competing reading.

Sample answer: Elizabeth insists Jane's loss was caused by "the interference of friends," not chance: an accurate suspicion of Darcy. The evidence is “We do not suffer by accident” (Chapter XXV, paragraph 7). This develops marriage and money: Mrs. Gardiner's advice is prudent rather than romantic. The words “accident” and “suffer” carry that meaning: they are the charged choices in the line, and changing either would soften the effect. Mr. Gardiner is "a sensible, gentleman-like man, greatly superior to his sister," though he lives by trade, and his wife gives Elizabeth the wisest advice in the chapter.

239. [short · synthesis · DOK 4 · Program outcome: LeL-C4-LIT-1] Close reading: how do the diction and syntax of “I expected at least that the pigs were got into the garden, and here is nothing but Lady Catherine and her daughter” (Chapter XXVIII, paragraph 14) shape its meaning? Consider a second, competing reading.

Sample answer: Elizabeth deflates the household's awe of rank with a joke. The evidence is “I expected at least that the pigs were got into the garden, and here is nothing but Lady Catherine and her daughter” (Chapter XXVIII, paragraph 14). This develops marriage and money: Charlotte's marriage works because she arranges her life to see little of him. The words “expected” and “daughter” carry that meaning: they are the charged choices in the line, and changing either would soften the effect. "When Mr. Collins could be forgotten, there was really a great air of comfort," the narrator says, a precise description of a compromise.

240. [short · synthesis · DOK 4 · Program outcome: LeL-C4-LIT-1] Close reading: how do the diction and syntax of “I certainly have not the talent which some people possess … of conversing easily with those I have never seen before” (Chapter XXXI, paragraph 24) shape its meaning? Consider a second, competing reading.

Sample answer: Darcy's self-defense: shyness, not contempt?. The evidence is “I certainly have not the talent which some people possess … of conversing easily with those I have never seen before” (Chapter XXXI, paragraph 24). This develops pride and prejudice: Elizabeth answers with an analogy to her own unpractised playing: skill comes from practice, not talent. The words “conversing” and “certainly” carry that meaning: they are the charged choices in the line, and changing either would soften the effect. He says he lacks "the talent which some people possess ... of conversing easily with those I have never seen before," and adds "we neither of us perform to strangers," suggesting shyness and a likeness between them; she treats it as a joke.

241. [short · synthesis · DOK 4 · Program outcome: LeL-C4-LIT-1] Close reading: how do the diction and syntax of “Never, even in the company of his dear friends at Netherfield, or his dignified relations at Rosings, had she seen him so desirous to please, so free from self-consequence, or unbending reserve” (Chapter XLIV, paragraph 10) shape its meaning? Consider a second, competing reading.

Sample answer: Direct evidence that Darcy's manners have changed; note the list of what has vanished. The evidence is “Never, even in the company of his dear friends at Netherfield, or his dignified relations at Rosings, had she seen him so desirous to…” (Chapter XLIV, paragraph 10). This develops pride and prejudice: Darcy has answered her charge of ungentlemanlike behaviour by changing his manners, and she recognizes it. The words “consequence” and “relations” carry that meaning: they are the charged choices in the line, and changing either would soften the effect. She has never seen him "so desirous to please, so free from self-consequence," and her response is "gratitude ... for loving her still well enough, to forgive all the petulance and acrimony" of her refusal; her feeling rests on what he has done.

242. [short · synthesis · DOK 4 · Program outcome: LeL-C4-LIT-1] Close reading: how do the diction and syntax of “I am going to Gretna Green, and if you cannot guess with who, I shall think you a simpleton” (Chapter XLVII, paragraph 61) shape its meaning? Consider a second, competing reading.

Sample answer: Lydia's note: thoughtless and triumphant; note the grammar ("with who") and the tone. The evidence is “I am going to Gretna Green, and if you cannot guess with who, I shall think you a simpleton” (Chapter XLVII, paragraph 61). This develops family and reputation: the Bennet household's lack of discipline is exposed for all to see. The words “simpleton” and “cannot” carry that meaning: they are the charged choices in the line, and changing either would soften the effect. She writes that she "cannot help laughing" at Mrs. Forster's "surprise tomorrow morning" and calls anyone who cannot guess the man "a simpleton," treating an act that could ruin her family as a prank.

243. [short · synthesis · DOK 4 · Program outcome: LeL-C4-LIT-1] Close reading: how do the diction and syntax of “A man who has once been refused! How could I ever be foolish enough to expect a renewal of his love” (Chapter LIV, paragraph 19) shape its meaning? Consider a second, competing reading.

Sample answer: She assumes pride will keep Darcy from proposing again. The evidence is “A man who has once been refused! How could I ever be foolish enough to expect a renewal of his love” (Chapter LIV, paragraph 19). This develops pride and prejudice: Jane claims indifference to Bingley that no one believes; both sisters struggle to read and to show their feelings. The words “renewal” and “refused” carry that meaning: they are the charged choices in the line, and changing either would soften the effect. She asks "If he fears me, why come hither? If he no longer cares for me, why silent?"; for the first time she does not jump to a conclusion, and the questions show her uncertainty.

244. [short · synthesis · DOK 4 · Program outcome: LeL-C4-LIT-1] Close reading: how do the diction and syntax of “I have been a selfish being all my life, in practice, though not in principle” (Chapter LVIII, paragraph 24) shape its meaning? Consider a second, competing reading.

Sample answer: Darcy's self-knowledge. The evidence is “I have been a selfish being all my life, in practice, though not in principle” (Chapter LVIII, paragraph 24). This develops pride and prejudice: both acknowledge their faults. The words “principle” and “practice” carry that meaning: they are the charged choices in the line, and changing either would soften the effect. Darcy says "my affections and wishes are unchanged, but one word from you will silence me," and admits "I have been a selfish being all my life.".

245. [short · analysis · DOK 3 · Program outcome: LeL-GR-LIT-1] Claim: Elizabeth's walk to Netherfield shows her love for Jane matters more to her than propriety. Explain how this evidence supports the claim: “with weary ankles, dirty stockings, and a face glowing with the warmth of exercise” (Chapter VII, paragraph 45).
Sample answer: She arrives "with weary ankles, dirty stockings, and a face glowing," a picture of devotion that the Bingley sisters despise and Darcy admires. The evidence is “with weary ankles, dirty stockings, and a face glowing with the warmth of exercise” (Chapter VII, paragraph 45), which shows the visual image that divides the Bingley sisters and Darcy. This develops family and reputation: the Bingley sisters sneer at her muddy petticoat.

246. [short · analysis · DOK 3 · Program outcome: LeL-GR-LIT-1] Claim: The colonel's disclosure confirms Elizabeth's worst view of Darcy and sets up the proposal. Explain how this evidence supports the claim: “having lately saved a friend from the inconveniences of a most imprudent marriage” (Chapter XXXIII, paragraph 28).
Sample answer: He says Darcy congratulated himself on "having lately saved a friend from the inconveniences of a most imprudent marriage," which Elizabeth instantly understands as Jane's ruin. The evidence is “having lately saved a friend from the inconveniences of a most imprudent marriage” (Chapter XXXIII, paragraph 28) — The revelation. This develops marriage and money: even an earl's son must consider fortune.

247. [mc · analysis · DOK 3 · Program outcome: LeL-GR-LIT-1] Quote identification: in which section does this passage appear? “Younger sons cannot marry where they like”

A. Chapter XIX

B. Chapter XXXIII

C. Chapter XXX

D. Chapter II

Key: B (Chapter XXXIII)

248. [short · synthesis · DOK 4 · Program outcome: LeL-GR-LIT-1] Close reading: how do the diction and syntax of “Kitty has no discretion in her coughs” (Chapter II, paragraph 9) shape its meaning? Consider a second, competing reading.
Sample answer: Mrs. Bennet vents her frustration about Bingley on Kitty's harmless coughing. The evidence is “Kitty has no discretion in her coughs” (Chapter II, paragraph 9). This develops family and reputation: the parents' mismatch shapes the daughters' prospects. The words “discretion” and “coughs” carry that meaning: they are the charged choices in the line, and changing either would soften the effect. He has secretly "waited on Mr. Bingley" yet lets his wife complain she is "sick of Mr. Bingley" before revealing it, choosing the joke over plain kindness.

249. [short · synthesis · DOK 4 · Program outcome: LeL-GR-LIT-1] Close reading: how do the diction and syntax of “He wisely resolved to be particularly careful that no sign of admiration should now escape him” (Chapter XII, paragraph 4) shape its meaning? Consider a second, competing reading.
Sample answer: "Wisely" is ironic: his caution will deepen her misjudgment. The evidence is “He wisely resolved to be particularly careful that no sign of admiration should now escape him” (Chapter XII, paragraph 4). This develops first impressions: Darcy's restraint deepens Elizabeth's dislike. The words “particularly” and “admiration” carry that meaning: they are the charged choices in the line, and changing either would soften the effect. Because "she attracted him more than he liked," he resolves that "no sign of admiration should now escape him," so his behaviour gives her more reason to think he dislikes her.

250. [short · synthesis · DOK 4 · Program outcome: LeL-GR-LIT-1] Close reading: how do the diction and syntax of “Mr. Collins was not a sensible man, and the deficiency of nature had been but little assisted by education or society” (Chapter XV, paragraph 1) shape its meaning? Consider a second, competing reading.
Sample answer: The narrator's verdict. The evidence is “Mr. Collins was not a sensible man, and the deficiency of nature had been but little assisted by education or society” (Chapter XV, paragraph 1). This develops first impressions: Wickham's charm is all surface, and Elizabeth is charmed. The words “deficiency” and “education” carry that meaning: they are the charged choices in the line, and changing either would soften the effect. Collins switches brides "while Mrs. Bennet was stirring the fire," treating the daughters as interchangeable, while Wickham's "appearance was greatly in his favour," which is all Elizabeth knows of him.

251. [short · synthesis · DOK 4 · Program outcome: LeL-GR-LIT-1] Close reading: how do the diction and syntax of “I have no right to give my opinion” (Chapter XVI, paragraph 14) shape its meaning? Consider a second, competing reading.

    Sample answer: Wickham, just before giving it. The evidence is “I have no right to give my opinion” (Chapter XVI, paragraph 14). This develops first impressions: Elizabeth believes him immediately because his story confirms her dislike. The words “opinion” and “right” carry that meaning: they are the charged choices in the line, and changing either would soften the effect. She "honoured him for such feelings, and thought him handsomer than ever," letting attraction and prejudice stand in for evidence.

252. [short · synthesis · DOK 4 · Program outcome: LeL-GR-LIT-1] Close reading: how do the diction and syntax of “Miss Bingley’s letter arrived, and put an end to doubt” (Chapter XXIV, paragraph 1) shape its meaning? Consider a second, competing reading.

    Sample answer: Opening line: crisp, decisive. The evidence is “Miss Bingley’s letter arrived, and put an end to doubt” (Chapter XXIV, paragraph 1). This develops pride and prejudice: Elizabeth's cynicism is another kind of quick judgment. The words “arrived” and “letter” carry that meaning: they are the charged choices in the line, and changing either would soften the effect. She declares that "the more I see of the world, the more am I dissatisfied with it," and Wickham's company becomes a "material service" to the family, so her anger and his charm feed each other.

253. [short · synthesis · DOK 4 · Program outcome: LeL-GR-LIT-1] Close reading: how do the diction and syntax of “Gardiner was a sensible, gentleman-like man, greatly superior to his sister, as well by nature as education” (Chapter XXV, paragraph 2) shape its meaning? Consider a second, competing reading.

    Sample answer: Class is not character: a man in trade is a gentleman in manners. The evidence is “Gardiner was a sensible, gentleman-like man, greatly superior to his sister, as well by nature as education” (Chapter XXV, paragraph 2). This develops marriage and money: Mrs. Gardiner's advice is prudent rather than romantic. The words “gentleman” and “education” carry that meaning: they are the charged choices in the line, and changing either would soften the effect. Mr. Gardiner is "a sensible, gentleman-like man, greatly superior to his sister," though he lives by trade, and his wife gives Elizabeth the wisest advice in the chapter.

254. [short · synthesis · DOK 4 · Program outcome: LeL-GR-LIT-1] Close reading: how do the diction and syntax of “My fingers … do not move over this instrument in the masterly manner which I see so many women’s do” (Chapter XXXI, paragraph 25) shape its meaning? Consider a second, competing reading.

    Sample answer: Elizabeth's rebuttal by analogy. The evidence is “My fingers … do not move over this instrument in the masterly manner which I see so many women’s do” (Chapter XXXI, paragraph 25). This develops pride and prejudice: Elizabeth answers with an analogy to her own unpractised playing: skill comes from practice, not talent. The words “instrument” and “masterly” carry that meaning: they are the charged choices in the line, and changing either would soften the effect. He says he lacks "the talent which some people possess ... of conversing easily with those I have never seen before," and adds "we neither of us perform to strangers," suggesting shyness and a likeness between them; she treats it as a joke.

255. [short · synthesis · DOK 4 · Program outcome: LeL-GR-LIT-1] Close reading: how do the diction and syntax of “Elizabeth was sitting by herself the next morning, and writing to Jane” (Chapter XXXII, paragraph 1) shape its meaning? Consider a second, competing reading.

    Sample answer: Opening. The evidence is “Elizabeth was sitting by herself the next morning, and writing to Jane” (Chapter XXXII, paragraph 1). This develops marriage and money: Darcy's comment that "fifty miles of good road" is "a very easy distance" hints at his thoughts. The words “morning” and “writing” carry that meaning: they are the charged choices in the line, and changing either would soften the effect. When he says "you cannot have been always at Longbourn," he is suggesting she could live far from home, a hint she does not read.

256. [short · synthesis · DOK 4 · Program outcome: LeL-GR-LIT-1] Close reading: how do the diction and syntax of “In vain have I struggled. It will not do. My feelings will not be repressed. You must allow me to tell you how ardently I admire and love you” (Chapter XXXIV, paragraph 4) shape its meaning? Consider a second, competing reading.

Sample answer: Proposal opening. The evidence is “In vain have I struggled. It will not do. My feelings will not be repressed. You must allow me to tell you how ardently I admire and love…” (Chapter XXXIV, paragraph 4). This develops pride and prejudice: his pride shapes the proposal; her prejudice shapes the refusal. The words “repressed” and “struggled” carry that meaning: they are the charged choices in the line, and changing either would soften the effect. He confesses "in vain have I struggled," dwelling on her inferiority even as he declares love, and she replies that no offer "in any possible way" could have tempted her.

257. [short · synthesis · DOK 4 · Program outcome: LeL-GR-LIT-1] Close reading: how do the diction and syntax of “Poor Charlotte!—it was melancholy to leave her to such society” (Chapter XXXVIII, paragraph 7) shape its meaning? Consider a second, competing reading.

Sample answer: Elizabeth's pity. The evidence is “Poor Charlotte!—it was melancholy to leave her to such society” (Chapter XXXVIII, paragraph 7). This develops marriage and money: Charlotte's life is respectable and narrow. The words “melancholy” and “society” carry that meaning: they are the charged choices in the line, and changing either would soften the effect. She thinks "poor Charlotte! it was melancholy to leave her to such society," yet notes that "her home and her housekeeping, her parish and her poultry" had "not yet lost their charms.".

258. [short · synthesis · DOK 4 · Program outcome: LeL-GR-LIT-1] Close reading: how do the diction and syntax of “Lydia was Lydia still; untamed, unabashed, wild, noisy, and fearless” (Chapter LI, paragraph 4) shape its meaning? Consider a second, competing reading.

Sample answer: The narrator's list of five adjectives. The evidence is “Lydia was Lydia still; untamed, unabashed, wild, noisy, and fearless” (Chapter LI, paragraph 4). This develops family and reputation: Lydia's shamelessness is complete. The words “unabashed” and “fearless” carry that meaning: they are the charged choices in the line, and changing either would soften the effect. "Lydia was Lydia still; untamed, unabashed, wild, noisy, and fearless," and she longs to hear herself called "Mrs. Wickham," prizing the title over the man.

259. [short · synthesis · DOK 4 · Program outcome: LeL-GR-LIT-1] Close reading: how do the diction and syntax of “I am certainly the most fortunate creature that ever existed” (Chapter LV, paragraph 52) shape its meaning? Consider a second, competing reading.

Sample answer: Jane's joy. The evidence is “I am certainly the most fortunate creature that ever existed” (Chapter LV, paragraph 52). This develops marriage and money: a marriage of affection and fortune both. The words “certainly” and “fortunate” carry that meaning: they are the charged choices in the line, and changing either would soften the effect. She calls herself "the most fortunate creature that ever existed" and asks "why am I thus singled from my family," showing humility even in triumph.

260. [short · synthesis · DOK 4 · Program outcome: LeL-GR-LIT-1] Close reading: how do the diction and syntax of “they were both ever sensible of the warmest gratitude towards the persons who, by bringing her into Derbyshire, had been the means of uniting them” (Chapter LXI, paragraph 15) shape its meaning? Consider a second, competing reading.

Sample answer: The Gardiners honoured. The evidence is “they were both ever sensible of the warmest gratitude towards the persons who, by bringing her into Derbyshire, had been the means of…" (Chapter LXI, paragraph 15). This develops family and reputation: the Gardiners, once scorned for their trade, are welcomed at Pemberley as the people who united the couple. The words "gratitude" and "sensible" carry that meaning: they are the charged choices in the line, and changing either would soften the effect. The Gardiners, people in trade, receive "the warmest gratitude" as "the means of uniting them," while the Wickhams exhaust even "Bingley's good humour.".

Rigor version	Items (in order)	Mix
Scaffolded support	1, 2, 3, 4, 5, 6, 7, 8, 9, 10, 11, 12, 13, 14, 15, 16, 17, 18, 19, 20, 21, 22, 23, 24, 25, 26, 27, 28, 29, 30, 31, 32, 33, 34, 35, 36, 37, 38, 39, 40, 41, 42, 43, 44, 45, 46, 47, 48, 49, 50	recall 29, inference 12, analysis 6, synthesis 3
HS Freshman	51, 52, 53, 1, 54, 3, 55, 56, 57, 58, 59, 16, 60, 61, 15, 13, 62, 14, 25, 26, 24, 23, 21, 63, 64, 65, 66, 67, 68, 69, 70, 36, 71, 72, 73, 74, 40, 75, 76, 43, 77, 78, 44, 45, 79, 80, 47, 81, 82, 50	recall 26, inference 12, analysis 9, synthesis 3
HS Sophomore	2, 83, 51, 84, 52, 85, 53, 14, 86, 19, 16, 87, 62, 25, 63, 21, 88, 89, 23, 90, 66, 91, 33, 92, 93, 94, 70, 95, 71, 96, 97, 98, 39, 74, 75, 42, 99, 100, 101, 44, 102, 46, 103, 104, 105, 106, 107, 49, 50, 108	recall 19, inference 16, analysis 9, synthesis 6
HS Junior	83, 3, 55, 84, 54, 5, 16, 61, 109, 13, 18, 25, 110, 65, 111, 89, 30, 112, 66, 33, 92, 113, 114, 115, 116, 117, 72, 118, 38, 119, 40, 120, 43, 42, 77, 100, 121, 122, 123, 124, 125, 46, 126, 127, 128, 106, 129, 82, 50, 108	recall 16, inference 16, analysis 12, synthesis 6
HS Senior	55, 2, 53, 84, 54, 109, 17, 16, 60, 130, 89, 22, 27, 90, 131, 132, 133, 66, 33, 94, 134, 135, 136, 137, 74, 138, 139, 75, 140, 76, 141, 100, 142, 143, 144, 78, 102, 125, 103, 126, 127, 105, 145, 106, 129, 146, 49, 108, 50, 147	recall 13, inference 16, analysis 12, synthesis 9
AP	5, 148, 2, 62, 87, 13, 27, 65, 22, 149, 150, 66, 68, 151, 152, 153, 37, 154, 119, 155, 156, 43, 157, 158, 100, 159, 141, 160, 161, 102, 44, 162, 79, 103, 163, 164, 165, 166, 167, 168, 169, 170, 171, 172, 146, 49, 173, 174, 50, 175	recall 9, inference 12, analysis 16, synthesis 13
College Freshman	53, 148, 176, 15, 14, 109, 130, 26, 88, 177, 90, 133, 68, 152, 151, 178, 179, 38, 180, 119, 181, 182, 157, 158, 159, 77, 142, 183, 184, 144, 162, 102, 103, 185, 163, 47, 165, 186, 187, 168, 170, 188, 189, 190, 171, 49, 173, 108, 174, 147	recall 9, inference 12, analysis 16, synthesis 13
College Sophomore	4, 148, 86, 14, 27, 23, 150, 90, 191, 68, 70, 192, 193, 72, 194, 180, 40, 181, 195, 196, 157, 197, 141, 198, 184, 144, 199, 102, 162, 200, 46, 164, 47, 165, 201, 187, 202, 145, 169, 203, 189, 172, 190, 204, 146, 205, 173, 206, 174, 207	recall 6, inference 12, analysis 16, synthesis 16
College Junior	4, 148, 86, 14, 110, 22, 150, 90, 133, 151, 208, 72, 209, 210, 41, 211, 182, 212, 157, 77, 159, 160, 161, 101, 122, 162, 213, 103, 164, 127, 47, 201, 214, 167, 166, 187, 169, 215, 189, 172, 216, 217, 218, 219, 220, 221, 206, 207, 222, 175	recall 6, inference 9, analysis 16, synthesis 19
College Senior	4, 84, 130, 150, 90, 68, 223, 224, 72, 119, 40, 41, 225, 226, 227, 157, 228, 141, 161, 184, 229, 122, 199, 213, 230, 231, 232, 164, 233, 234, 235, 166, 168, 236, 237, 188, 189, 238, 239, 129, 204, 240, 146, 241, 242, 243, 207, 222, 244, 175	recall 3, inference 9, analysis 16, synthesis 22
Graduate / PhD	51, 17, 63, 150, 90, 72, 224, 209, 180, 245, 227, 212, 157, 141, 159, 160, 101, 246, 247, 122, 79, 103, 127, 47, 165, 186, 248, 202, 249, 250, 251, 215, 252, 253, 190, 254, 255, 256, 218, 146, 257, 220, 205, 258, 206, 259, 207, 244, 175, 260	recall 3, inference 6, analysis 16, synthesis 25

Final paper

Pride and Prejudice: final paper (formal literary analysis). Choose one prompt.

1. Analyze how Jane Austen develops first impressions and prejudice across Pride and Prejudice. Trace the idea through at least three moments (beginning, middle and end) and argue what the ending finally suggests.
2. Choose one recurring symbol, image or motif in Pride and Prejudice and argue how its meaning changes over the novel and why that change matters to pride and self-knowledge.
3. Analyze a central character's choices in Pride and Prejudice. Argue whether the novel judges that character, and how its structure or point of view shapes your answer.
4. Two readers disagree about whether Pride and Prejudice finally endorses or criticizes its society's view of marriage and money. Weigh both readings and argue for one, answering the strongest objection.

Length: Scaffolded support 500-700 words; HS Freshman 700-900 words; HS Sophomore 900-1,100 words; HS Junior 1,000-1,300 words; HS Senior 1,200-1,500 words; AP 1,300-1,600 words; College Freshman 1,500-2,000 words; College Sophomore 2,000-2,500 words; College Junior 2,500-3,000 words; College Senior 3,000-4,000 words; Graduate / PhD 4,000-6,000 words Evidence requirement: at least 6 quotations from at least three sections, from the beginning, middle and end. Quote the reading text exactly and cite the chapter and paragraph (MLA style). HS Senior and above: one scholarly or historical source; College Sophomore and above: two, cited in MLA.

Criterion	Points	Descriptor	Exemplary	Proficient	Developing	Beginning
Thesis	20	A specific, arguable claim that answers the prompt and organizes the paper.	Specific, arguable and precise; it organizes every section.	Clear and arguable, but broad in places.	States a topic or a summary more than an argument.	Missing, or restates the prompt.
Evidence	25	Well-chosen, accurately quoted and cited passages from across the work, meeting the evidence requirement.	Accurate, well-chosen quotations from across the work, all cited; meets the requirement.	Accurate and cited, but clustered in one part of the work.	Too few quotations, or some inaccurate or uncited.	Little or no quoted evidence.
Analysis	30	Explains how language, structure and literary elements create meaning; goes beyond summary.	Explains how specific words, structure and devices create meaning; weighs a competing reading.	Explains the evidence, with some close reading.	Mostly summary; the link to the claim is asserted, not shown.	Summary only.

Organization	15	Logical progression, clear topic sentences and transitions; introduction and conclusion frame the argument.	Each paragraph advances the argument; transitions show logic.	Logical order with minor jumps.	Order is loose; paragraphs repeat or drift.	No discernible structure.
Style and conventions	10	Formal academic voice, present tense for literature, correct grammar and MLA format.	Formal, precise, present tense; MLA format; virtually error-free.	Formal with a few errors that do not obscure meaning.	Informal or error-prone in ways that distract.	Errors obscure meaning.

Exemplar paragraph: The novel's opening sentence uses irony to show that marriage in this society is driven by money. The text makes this visible when it says “It is a truth universally acknowledged, that a single man in possession of a good fortune, must be in want of a wife” (Chapter I, paragraph 1). It claims every rich man "must be in want of a wife," but the next paragraph shows it is the neighbourhood families who regard him as "the rightful property" of their daughters; the "truth" is their desire, not his. A full paper would carry this reading through the beginning, middle and end, and answer the strongest competing reading.

Critical voice: “The catastrophe, however, is happy, and we are left in doubt whether it would have been better for her or not, to accept the first proposal; and this we conceive is precisely the proper medium; for, though we would not have prudential calculations the sole principle to be regarded in marriage, we are far from advocating their exclusion.” (Richard Whately (attrib.; the review is unsigned), logician and later Archbishop of Dublin, Review of Northanger Abbey and Persuasion, The Quarterly Review (January 1821), reprinted in Famous Reviews, ed. R. Brimley Johnson (1914), "Archbishop Whately on Jane Austen"; public domain). Whately on Austen's method: this 1821 review discusses Northanger Abbey and Persuasion, and "her" is Persuasion's Anne Elliot, not Elizabeth Bennet. Use it as a period critic's general principle about prudence in Austen's marriages, not as a comment on this novel. Period voice for the "endorses" side: Whately (writing on Persuasion's Anne Elliot) wants prudence in marriage but not only prudence. Test that "proper medium" against Charlotte Lucas (Ch. XXII), Lydia (Ch. XLVI-L) and Elizabeth's answer to Jane about Pemberley (Ch. LIX). Note for students: "her" is Anne Elliot, not Elizabeth. Objective: Final paper Prompt 4: weigh whether the novel endorses or criticizes its society's view of marriage and money. Standards: AP: see the unit standards

Essay assignments

Essay: First impressions and prejudice

Scaffolded support (600 words; AP: see unit standards): Supported track: write a five-paragraph essay explaining what Pride and Prejudice teaches about first impressions and prejudice. Use at least three quotations from passages your teacher selects from different parts of the book.

HS Freshman (800 words; AP: see unit standards): Write a multi-paragraph essay explaining how Jane Austen develops first impressions and prejudice in Pride and Prejudice. Use evidence from the beginning, middle and end of the book.

HS Sophomore (1000 words; AP: see unit standards): Write an argumentative essay analyzing how Jane Austen develops first impressions and prejudice across Pride and Prejudice. Trace the idea through at least three chapters and address a counterclaim.

HS Junior (1100 words; AP: see unit standards): Write an analytical essay on how the structure of Pride and Prejudice (its order, turns and ending) shapes the meaning of first impressions and prejudice. Discuss at least one place where the book leaves the question open.

HS Senior (1200 words; AP: see unit standards): Write a sustained argument comparing two interpretations of first impressions and prejudice in Pride and Prejudice. Weigh the evidence for each and defend the stronger reading in a mature, well-organized essay.

AP (1300 words; AP: AP-LIT.LAN): Write a literary argument: develop a defensible thesis about how Jane Austen's choices in Pride and Prejudice (a recurring element, structure and narration) shape a complex understanding of first impressions and prejudice, weigh at least one competing reading, and sustain commentary on well-chosen evidence. Do not merely summarize.

College Freshman (1600 words; AP: see unit standards): Write a researched essay (4–6 pages) that places Pride and Prejudice's treatment of first impressions and prejudice in its historical context, using at least two scholarly sources.

College Sophomore (2200 words; AP: see unit standards): Write a contextual essay (6–8 pages) on first impressions and prejudice in Pride and Prejudice that reads the novel against its genre and period and engages two published critics. At this level students write ONE of the unit's essays (choose one theme), not all five.

College Junior (2800 words; AP: see unit standards): Write a theoretically informed essay (8–10 pages) on first impressions and prejudice in Pride and Prejudice. Name your critical method, apply it closely, and acknowledge its limits. At this level students write ONE of the unit's essays (choose one theme), not all five.

College Senior (4000 words; AP: see unit standards): Write a research paper (12–15 pages) with an original argument about first impressions and prejudice in Pride and Prejudice, engaging at least four scholarly sources in Chicago style. At this level students write ONE of the unit's essays (choose one theme), not all five.

Graduate / PhD (6000 words; AP: see unit standards): Write a seminar paper (15–20 pages) that intervenes in the critical conversation on first impressions and prejudice in Pride and Prejudice, engaging the relevant scholarship and textual history. At this level students write ONE of the unit's essays (choose one theme), not all five.

Rubric: Claim · Evidence · Analysis · Organization · Conventions

Essay: Pride and self-knowledge

Scaffolded support (600 words; AP: see unit standards): Supported track: write a five-paragraph essay explaining what Pride and Prejudice teaches about pride and self-knowledge. Use at least three quotations from passages your teacher selects from different parts of the book.

HS Freshman (800 words; AP: see unit standards): Write a multi-paragraph essay explaining how Jane Austen develops pride and self-knowledge in Pride and Prejudice. Use evidence from the beginning, middle and end of the book.

HS Sophomore (1000 words; AP: see unit standards): Write an argumentative essay analyzing how Jane Austen develops pride and self-knowledge across Pride and Prejudice. Trace the idea through at least three chapters and address a counterclaim.

HS Junior (1100 words; AP: see unit standards): Write an analytical essay on how the structure of Pride and Prejudice (its order, turns and ending) shapes the meaning of pride and self-knowledge. Discuss at least one place where the book leaves the question open.

HS Senior (1200 words; AP: see unit standards): Write a sustained argument comparing two interpretations of pride and self-knowledge in Pride and Prejudice. Weigh the evidence for each and defend the stronger reading in a mature, well-organized essay.

AP (1300 words; AP: AP-LIT.LAN): Write a literary argument: develop a defensible thesis about how Jane Austen's choices in Pride and Prejudice (a recurring element, structure and narration) shape a complex understanding of pride and self-knowledge, weigh at least one competing reading, and sustain commentary on well-chosen evidence. Do not merely summarize.

College Freshman (1600 words; AP: see unit standards): Write a researched essay (4–6 pages) that places Pride and Prejudice's treatment of pride and self-knowledge in its historical context, using at least two scholarly sources.

College Sophomore (2200 words; AP: see unit standards): Write a contextual essay (6–8 pages) on pride and self-knowledge in Pride and Prejudice that reads the novel against its genre and period and engages two published critics. At this level students write ONE of the unit's essays (choose one theme), not all five.

College Junior (2800 words; AP: see unit standards): Write a theoretically informed essay (8–10 pages) on pride and self-knowledge in Pride and Prejudice. Name your critical method, apply it closely, and acknowledge its limits. At this level students write ONE of the unit's essays (choose one theme), not all five.

College Senior (4000 words; AP: see unit standards): Write a research paper (12–15 pages) with an original argument about pride and self-knowledge in Pride and Prejudice, engaging at least four scholarly sources in Chicago style. At this level students write ONE of the unit's essays (choose one theme), not all five.

Graduate / PhD (6000 words; AP: see unit standards): Write a seminar paper (15–20 pages) that intervenes in the critical conversation on pride and self-knowledge in Pride and Prejudice, engaging the relevant scholarship and textual history. At this level students write ONE of the unit's essays (choose one theme), not all five.

Rubric: Claim · Evidence · Analysis · Organization · Conventions

Essay: Marriage and money

Scaffolded support (600 words; AP: see unit standards): Supported track: write a five-paragraph essay explaining what Pride and Prejudice teaches about marriage and money. Use at least three quotations from passages your teacher selects from different parts of the book.

HS Freshman (800 words; AP: see unit standards): Write a multi-paragraph essay explaining how Jane Austen develops marriage and money in Pride and Prejudice. Use evidence from the beginning, middle and end of the book.

HS Sophomore (1000 words; AP: see unit standards): Write an argumentative essay analyzing how Jane Austen develops marriage and money across Pride and Prejudice. Trace the idea through at least three chapters and address a counterclaim.

HS Junior (1100 words; AP: see unit standards): Write an analytical essay on how the structure of Pride and Prejudice (its order, turns and ending) shapes the meaning of marriage and money. Discuss at least one place where the book leaves the question open.

HS Senior (1200 words; AP: see unit standards): Write a sustained argument comparing two interpretations of marriage and money in Pride and Prejudice. Weigh the evidence for each and defend the stronger reading in a mature, well-organized essay.

AP (1300 words; AP: AP-LIT.LAN): Write a literary argument: develop a defensible thesis about how Jane Austen's choices in Pride and Prejudice (a recurring element, structure and narration) shape a complex understanding of marriage and money, weigh at least one competing reading, and sustain commentary on well-chosen evidence. Do not merely summarize.

College Freshman (1600 words; AP: see unit standards): Write a researched essay (4–6 pages) that places Pride and Prejudice's treatment of marriage and money in its historical context, using at least two scholarly sources.

College Sophomore (2200 words; AP: see unit standards): Write a contextual essay (6–8 pages) on marriage and money in Pride and Prejudice that reads the novel against its genre and period and engages two published critics. At this level students write ONE of the unit's essays (choose one theme), not all five.

College Junior (2800 words; AP: see unit standards): Write a theoretically informed essay (8–10 pages) on marriage and money in Pride and Prejudice. Name your critical method, apply it closely, and acknowledge its limits. At this level students write ONE of the unit's essays (choose one theme), not all five.

College Senior (4000 words; AP: see unit standards): Write a research paper (12–15 pages) with an original argument about marriage and money in Pride and Prejudice, engaging at least four scholarly sources in Chicago style. At this level students write ONE of the unit's essays (choose one theme), not all five.

Graduate / PhD (6000 words; AP: see unit standards): Write a seminar paper (15–20 pages) that intervenes in the critical conversation on marriage and money in Pride and Prejudice, engaging the relevant scholarship and textual history. At this level students write ONE of the unit's essays (choose one theme), not all five.

Rubric: Claim · Evidence · Analysis · Organization · Conventions

Essay: Class and social mobility

Scaffolded support (600 words; AP: see unit standards): Supported track: write a five-paragraph essay explaining what Pride and Prejudice teaches about class and social mobility. Use at least three quotations from passages your teacher selects from different parts of the book.

HS Freshman (800 words; AP: see unit standards): Write a multi-paragraph essay explaining how Jane Austen develops class and social mobility in Pride and Prejudice. Use evidence from the beginning, middle and end of the book.

HS Sophomore (1000 words; AP: see unit standards): Write an argumentative essay analyzing how Jane Austen develops class and social mobility across Pride and Prejudice. Trace the idea through at least three chapters and address a counterclaim.

HS Junior (1100 words; AP: see unit standards): Write an analytical essay on how the structure of Pride and Prejudice (its order, turns and ending) shapes the meaning of class and social mobility. Discuss at least one place where the book leaves the question open.

HS Senior (1200 words; AP: see unit standards): Write a sustained argument comparing two interpretations of class and social mobility in Pride and Prejudice. Weigh the evidence for each and defend the stronger reading in a mature, well-organized essay.

AP (1300 words; AP: AP-LIT.LAN): Write a literary argument: develop a defensible thesis about how Jane Austen's choices in Pride and Prejudice (a recurring element, structure and narration) shape a complex understanding of class and social mobility, weigh at least one competing reading, and sustain commentary on well-chosen evidence. Do not merely summarize.

College Freshman (1600 words; AP: see unit standards): Write a researched essay (4–6 pages) that places Pride and Prejudice's treatment of class and social mobility in its historical context, using at least two scholarly sources.

College Sophomore (2200 words; AP: see unit standards): Write a contextual essay (6–8 pages) on class and social mobility in Pride and Prejudice that reads the novel against its genre and period and engages two published critics. At this level students write ONE of the unit's essays (choose one theme), not all five.

College Junior (2800 words; AP: see unit standards): Write a theoretically informed essay (8–10 pages) on class and social mobility in Pride and Prejudice. Name your critical method, apply it closely, and acknowledge its limits. At this level students write ONE of the unit's essays (choose one theme), not all five.

College Senior (4000 words; AP: see unit standards): Write a research paper (12–15 pages) with an original argument about class and social mobility in Pride and Prejudice, engaging at least four scholarly sources in Chicago style. At this level students write ONE of the unit's essays (choose one theme), not all five.

Graduate / PhD (6000 words; AP: see unit standards): Write a seminar paper (15–20 pages) that intervenes in the critical conversation on class and social mobility in Pride and Prejudice, engaging the relevant scholarship and textual history. At this level students write ONE of the unit's essays (choose one theme), not all five.

Rubric: Claim · Evidence · Analysis · Organization · Conventions

Essay: Women's limited choices

Scaffolded support (600 words; AP: see unit standards): Supported track: write a five-paragraph essay explaining what Pride and Prejudice teaches about women's limited choices. Use at least three quotations from passages your teacher selects from different parts of the book.

HS Freshman (800 words; AP: see unit standards): Write a multi-paragraph essay explaining how Jane Austen develops women's limited choices in Pride and Prejudice. Use evidence from the beginning, middle and end of the book.

HS Sophomore (1000 words; AP: see unit standards): Write an argumentative essay analyzing how Jane Austen develops women's limited choices across Pride and Prejudice. Trace the idea through at least three chapters and address a counterclaim.

HS Junior (1100 words; AP: see unit standards): Write an analytical essay on how the structure of Pride and Prejudice (its order, turns and ending) shapes the meaning of women's limited choices. Discuss at least one place where the book leaves the question open.

HS Senior (1200 words; AP: see unit standards): Write a sustained argument comparing two interpretations of women's limited choices in Pride and Prejudice. Weigh the evidence for each and defend the stronger reading in a mature, well-organized essay.

AP (1300 words; AP: AP-LIT.LAN): Write a literary argument: develop a defensible thesis about how Jane Austen's choices in Pride and Prejudice (a recurring element, structure and narration) shape a complex understanding of women's limited choices, weigh at least one competing reading, and sustain commentary on well-chosen evidence. Do not merely summarize.

College Freshman (1600 words; AP: see unit standards): Write a researched essay (4–6 pages) that places Pride and Prejudice's treatment of women's limited choices in its historical context, using at least two scholarly sources.

College Sophomore (2200 words; AP: see unit standards): Write a contextual essay (6–8 pages) on women's limited choices in Pride and Prejudice that reads the novel against its genre and period and engages two published critics. At this level students write ONE of the unit's essays (choose one theme), not all five.

College Junior (2800 words; AP: see unit standards): Write a theoretically informed essay (8–10 pages) on women's limited choices in Pride and Prejudice. Name your critical method, apply it closely, and acknowledge its limits. At this level students write ONE of the unit's essays (choose one theme), not all five.

College Senior (4000 words; AP: see unit standards): Write a research paper (12–15 pages) with an original argument about women's limited choices in Pride and Prejudice, engaging at least four scholarly sources in Chicago style. At this level students write ONE of the unit's essays (choose one theme), not all five.

Graduate / PhD (6000 words; AP: see unit standards): Write a seminar paper (15–20 pages) that intervenes in the critical conversation on women's limited choices in Pride and Prejudice, engaging the relevant scholarship and textual history. At this level students write ONE of the unit's essays (choose one theme), not all five.

Rubric: Claim · Evidence · Analysis · Organization · Conventions

Original Liber et Libri curriculum. Quotations from the public-domain text. Vocabulary definitions are modern and contextual (curated; based on Princeton WordNet 3.0). Word histories appear only where verified: short origin notes in our own words, with the facts (language, form, meaning) checked against the Online Etymology Dictionary or Wiktionary; no dictionary text is reproduced, and unverified ones are left out. AP and Cambridge entries are our own summaries with links, not College Board or Cambridge text; ICC-WC and LeL IDs are Liber et Libri labels. Included with every curriculum purchase and with Classroom Pro.

Built from curriculum-v5.9.2 (f0080de7).