Essential questions

- What does The Story of an Hour suggest about freedom and marriage?
- What does The Story of an Hour suggest about identity?
- What does The Story of an Hour suggest about irony of joy?

Objectives

- Students will cite at least 2 quotations, with locations, to support each written claim about what the text says explicitly and implicitly (scored on the writing-prompt rubric).
- Students will trace one theme across at least 3 sections of the story in the final paper, earning at least 70 of 100 rubric points.
- Students will explain how characters, setting and point of view interact in at least 3 exit tickets, each meeting the claim-evidence-reasoning criteria.
- Students will determine the in-context meaning of taught vocabulary, scoring at least 80% on the vocabulary items of the story quizzes.
- Students will write an argument with a clear claim, reasons and relevant evidence, scoring at least 80% on the unit test's short-answer scoring guides.

Author biography

Kate Chopin was born Katherine O'Flaherty in St. Louis on 8 February 1850. She married the Louisiana cotton trader Oscar Chopin and lived in New Orleans and Cloutierville among Creole and Cajun communities. Widowed in 1882 with six children, she returned to St. Louis and began writing; her stories appeared in Vogue and other magazines and were collected in Bayou Folk (1894). Her story The Awakening (1899), about a married woman's desire for independence, was condemned by reviewers. She died on 22 August 1904; her work was rediscovered in the 1960s.

Historical and cultural context

In the 1890s, married American women had limited legal identities; the "new woman" debate about women's independence was intense.

Publication and reception, then and now

Written on 19 April 1894 and first published as "The Dream of an Hour" in Vogue on 6 December 1894.

Then: Little noticed.

Now: A brief, widely taught feminist classic with a famous ironic ending.

Overview (spoiler-free)

Louise Mallard, who has a heart condition, learns that her husband has been killed in a railroad accident.

Main themes

- freedom and marriage.
- irony.
- self-assertion.

Why it matters

It asks how social roles limit people, even in loving relationships.

Spoilers · teacher only

Alone, she realizes she is free; then her husband walks in alive, and she dies, the doctors say, "of the joy that kills."

Model a close reading of one passage using the written think-aloud below.
First, meaning. I read "Knowing that Mrs. Mallard was afflicted with a heart trouble, great care was taken to break to her as gently as possible the news of her..." slowly and put it in my own words: Because Mrs. Mallard has a heart condition, people take great care to tell her gently that her husband has died. Next, craft. I notice the passive voice, "care was taken," which hides who is doing it and makes her someone things are done to. The strongest word is "gently": it shows they think of her as fragile, a view the story will question. Then, effect. What does this careful, gentle opening sentence suggest about how people treat Mrs. Mallard? My answer: The people around her treat her as weak and protected, which is part of the life she will briefly feel free from.

> Knowing that Mrs. Mallard was afflicted with a heart trouble, great care was taken to break to her as gently as possible the news of her husband's death. (The Story of an Hour, paragraph 1)

Chopin was widowed at 32 and began writing to support her six children; she published "The Story of an Hour" in Vogue in 1894, and her story The Awakening was attacked by critics in 1899. What does that suggest about how society saw women who wrote about women's freedom? Answer: Accept answers such as: such writing was seen as shocking in 1890s America; women were expected to find fulfillment in marriage; Chopin wrote honestly about women's inner lives despite criticism of The Awakening.

Lesson 2: The Story of an Hour

Focus: a woman's brief taste of freedom

Objective: Students will analyze how irony develops in “The Story of an Hour” by writing a claim-evidence-reasoning paragraph that cites at least 2 quotations from the section, and will score at least 80% on the section quiz.

Standards: AP: see the unit standards

Content note (death, marriage as constraint, alcohol or drugs (mentioned)): Sensitive content: Death; marriage as constraint. Preview the story, tell students in advance, and allow a pass on reading aloud. Keep discussion on how the writer uses these elements, not on graphic detail. This section mentions drinking or a drug (“…Go away. I am not making myself ill." No; she was drinking in a very elixir of life through that o…”). Treat it as period custom or plot detail; name it plainly and don't glamorize it.
Student preview: Heads-up: this story includes death; marriage as constraint.
Suggested language: “Why does the writer include this, and what does it make us notice?”

Told gently that her husband Brently has died in a railroad accident, Louise Mallard weeps, then alone in her room feels a growing, monstrous joy: 'Free, free, free!' She looks ahead to years that will belong to herself. Leaving the room, she sees Brently walk in the door, unharmed; he had not been on the train. She dies, and the doctors say of 'the joy that kills'.

Background: Published in Vogue in 1894, when married women's legal identity was still largely bound up in their husbands'.

Significance: Very widely anthologized; its last line is a famous case of dramatic irony.

Model the close reading of the anchor quotation using the written think-aloud below.
First, meaning. I read "afflicted with a heart trouble" slowly and put it in my own words: Everyone handles the news gently because Mrs. Mallard has a weak heart. Next, craft. I notice the medical fact is presented first, before her name or the news, so it frames everything. The strongest word is "afflicted": it makes her sound fragile and passive, how others see her. Then, effect. Why does the story mention Mrs. Mallard's heart trouble in the very first line? My answer: The heart trouble shapes how others treat her and sets up the ending; Chopin plants it so that the final heart failure has a double meaning.

Make a precise claim, support it with at least three pieces of textual evidence, and explain how the author's use of irony and imagery shapes that idea. Address one possible counterclaim.) Exemplar: Chopin uses irony to show that Louise's death comes from lost freedom, not joy. When the text says “of the joy that kills” (The Story of an Hour, paragraph 19), it shows this directly. She whispers "Free! Body and soul free!", and when her husband returns the doctors say she died "of the joy that kills," a diagnosis the reader knows is wrong.

   Answer guidance: A defensible line of argument: Chopin uses irony to show that Louise's death comes from lost freedom, not joy. Useful evidence: “Free! Body and soul free” (The Story of an Hour, paragraph 12): Realization. On imagery: Spring imagery outside her window signals new life. Credit any position that is supported by quotation and reasoning; push one-sided answers to address the strongest counterpoint.
4. In the passage that begins “She was young, with a fair, calm face, whose lines bespoke repression and even a certain strength.”, why might Chopin have chosen these particular words? Pick two and explain their connotations. [DOK 2 · followUp · wait 5 s · AP-LIT.FIG] Look for: Diction analysis of two words in the anchor passage.
5. What causes the main turn in “The Story of an Hour”, and what effect is it likely to have on what follows? [DOK 2 · followUp · wait 5 s · AP-LIT.STR] Look for: Told gently that her husband Brently has died in a railroad accident, Louise Mallard weeps, then alone in her room feels a growing, monstrous joy: 'Free, free, free!' She looks ahead to years that will belong to herself. Leaving the room, she sees Brently walk in the door, unharmed; he had not been…
6. As the opening story, what does “The Story of an Hour” set up that the rest of The Story of an Hour will need? [DOK 3 · thinkPairShare · wait 8 s · AP-LIT.STR] Look for: A causal or structural link between this and the previous story.

   Answer guidance: A defensible line of argument: Chopin uses irony to show that Louise's death comes from lost freedom, not joy. Useful evidence: “afflicted with a heart trouble” (The Story of an Hour, paragraph 1): Literal and symbolic. Theme link: she does not hate her husband but loves her freedom. Credit any position that is supported by quotation and reasoning; push one-sided answers to address the strongest counterpoint.
7. What can we infer about a character's motives from what they say and do here, as opposed to what they claim? [DOK 3 · followUp · wait 8 s · AP-LIT.CHR] Look for: An inference about motive supported by a quoted line.

   Answer guidance: A defensible line of argument: Chopin uses irony to show that Louise's death comes from lost freedom, not joy. Useful evidence: “of the joy that kills” (The Story of an Hour, paragraph 19): The ironic end. On characterization: Her "heart trouble" is literal and figurative. Credit any position that is supported by quotation and reasoning; push one-sided answers to address the strongest counterpoint.
8. The bell-ringer asked: “What does freedom mean to you? Can you feel free and loved at the same time?” Now that we have read closely, how would you revise your first answer, and which line changed your mind? [DOK 2 · thinkPairShare · wait 5 s · AP-LIT.LAN] Look for: A revised answer anchored in the text.
9. Where does symbolism appear, and how does it connect this story to the larger concern with freedom and marriage? [DOK 3 · followUp · wait 8 s · AP-LIT.FIG] Look for: Look for objects, places or actions that stand for larger ideas.

   Answer guidance: A defensible line of argument: Chopin uses irony to show that Louise's death comes from lost freedom, not joy. Useful evidence: “Free! Body and soul free” (The Story of an Hour, paragraph 12): Realization. Theme link: she does not hate her husband but loves her freedom. Credit any position that is supported by quotation and reasoning; push one-sided answers to address the strongest counterpoint.

10. Background: Published in Vogue in 1894, when married women's legal identity was still largely bound up in their husbands'. How does knowing this change the way you read one moment in the story? [DOK 3 · thinkPairShare · wait 8 s · AP-LIT.SET] Look for: A specific moment reread in light of the context.
    Answer guidance: A defensible line of argument: Chopin uses irony to show that Louise's death comes from lost freedom, not joy. Useful evidence: “afflicted with a heart trouble” (The Story of an Hour, paragraph 1): Literal and symbolic. Theme link: she does not hate her husband but loves her freedom. Credit any position that is supported by quotation and reasoning; push one-sided answers to address the strongest counterpoint.

Evaluative / synthesis / creative

1. A critic might argue: “Very widely anthologized; its last line is a famous case of dramatic irony.” How far do you agree? Take a stand and defend it with two lines from the story. [DOK 3 · fourCorners · wait 8 s · AP-LIT.LAN] Look for: A defended position with evidence and one counterpoint.
   Answer guidance: A defensible line of argument: Chopin uses irony to show that Louise's death comes from lost freedom, not joy. Useful evidence: “of the joy that kills” (The Story of an Hour, paragraph 19): The ironic end. Theme link: she does not hate her husband but loves her freedom. Credit any position that is supported by quotation and reasoning; push one-sided answers to address the strongest counterpoint.
2. Which character in this story acts most wisely, and which least? Judge them by a standard you name. [DOK 3 · thinkPairShare · wait 8 s · AP-LIT.CHR, AP-LIT.LAN] Look for: An evaluation using an explicit criterion and evidence.
   Answer guidance: A defensible line of argument: Chopin uses irony to show that Louise's death comes from lost freedom, not joy. Useful evidence: “Free! Body and soul free” (The Story of an Hour, paragraph 12): Realization. On characterization: Her "heart trouble" is literal and figurative. Credit any position that is supported by quotation and reasoning; push one-sided answers to address the strongest counterpoint.
3. Rewrite one moment of “The Story of an Hour” from the point of view of a different character. What does the new angle reveal or hide about a woman's brief taste of freedom? [DOK 4 · thinkPairShare · wait 8 s · AP-LIT.LAN, AP-LIT.NAR] Look for: A creative product with a rationale tied to the text.
   Answer guidance: A defensible line of argument: Chopin uses irony to show that Louise's death comes from lost freedom, not joy. Useful evidence: “afflicted with a heart trouble” (The Story of an Hour, paragraph 1): Literal and symbolic. Theme link: she does not hate her husband but loves her freedom. Credit any position that is supported by quotation and reasoning; push one-sided answers to address the strongest counterpoint.
4. Write three questions of your own about “The Story of an Hour”: one recall, one “why/how”, and one “should/what if”. Trade with a partner and answer theirs. [DOK 3 · studentGenerated · wait 8 s · AP-LIT.LAN] Look for: Student-generated questions at three levels.
   Answer guidance: A defensible line of argument: Chopin uses irony to show that Louise's death comes from lost freedom, not joy. Useful evidence: “of the joy that kills” (The Story of an Hour, paragraph 19): The ironic end. Theme link: she does not hate her husband but loves her freedom. Credit any position that is supported by quotation and reasoning; push one-sided answers to address the strongest counterpoint.
5. Connect this story to identity: is the link strong or weak so far? What would Chopin need to show next to strengthen it? [DOK 4 · socraticCircle · wait 8 s · AP-LIT.LAN] Look for: A judgment of thematic development across the work.

Answer guidance: A defensible line of argument: Chopin uses irony to show that Louise's death comes from lost freedom, not joy. Useful evidence: “Free! Body and soul free” (The Story of an Hour, paragraph 12): Realization. Theme link: she does not hate her husband but loves her freedom. Credit any position that is supported by quotation and reasoning; push one-sided answers to address the strongest counterpoint.

6. Is the irony in this story effective, or does it feel heavy-handed? Evaluate it as a reader would in a review. [DOK 3 · fourCorners · wait 8 s · AP-LIT.LAN, AP-LIT.NAR] Look for: An evaluative judgment with criteria and evidence.
   Answer guidance: A defensible line of argument: Chopin uses irony to show that Louise's death comes from lost freedom, not joy. Useful evidence: “afflicted with a heart trouble” (The Story of an Hour, paragraph 1): Literal and symbolic. On irony: The doctors misread her death. Credit any position that is supported by quotation and reasoning; push one-sided answers to address the strongest counterpoint.
7. Compare how “The Story of an Hour” treats a woman's brief taste of freedom with how another text, film or event you know treats a similar idea. What does The Story of an Hour see that the other misses? [DOK 4 · socraticCircle · wait 8 s · AP-LIT.LAN] Look for: A cross-text synthesis.
   Answer guidance: A defensible line of argument: Chopin uses irony to show that Louise's death comes from lost freedom, not joy. Useful evidence: “of the joy that kills” (The Story of an Hour, paragraph 19): The ironic end. Theme link: she does not hate her husband but loves her freedom. Credit any position that is supported by quotation and reasoning; push one-sided answers to address the strongest counterpoint.
8. As the final story, does this ending resolve freedom and marriage? Argue whether the ending is earned. [DOK 3 · thinkPairShare · wait 8 s · AP-LIT.LAN, AP-LIT.STR] Look for: A prediction or judgment justified with textual clues.
   Answer guidance: A defensible line of argument: Chopin uses irony to show that Louise's death comes from lost freedom, not joy. Useful evidence: “Free! Body and soul free” (The Story of an Hour, paragraph 12): Realization. Theme link: she does not hate her husband but loves her freedom. Credit any position that is supported by quotation and reasoning; push one-sided answers to address the strongest counterpoint.
9. Design a one-paragraph modern adaptation of this story (setting, characters, conflict). What must stay the same for it to still be about a woman's brief taste of freedom? [DOK 4 · thinkPairShare · wait 8 s · AP-LIT.LAN] Look for: A creative transfer that keeps the core idea.
   Answer guidance: A defensible line of argument: Chopin uses irony to show that Louise's death comes from lost freedom, not joy. Useful evidence: “afflicted with a heart trouble” (The Story of an Hour, paragraph 1): Literal and symbolic. Theme link: she does not hate her husband but loves her freedom. Credit any position that is supported by quotation and reasoning; push one-sided answers to address the strongest counterpoint.
10. What question would you most like to ask Kate Chopin about this story, and what answer do you think the text itself gives? [DOK 4 · studentGenerated · wait 8 s · AP-LIT.LAN] Look for: A student-generated question answered from evidence.
    Answer guidance: A defensible line of argument: Chopin uses irony to show that Louise's death comes from lost freedom, not joy. Useful evidence: “of the joy that kills” (The Story of an Hour, paragraph 19): The ironic end. Theme link: she does not hate her husband but loves her freedom. Credit any position that is supported by quotation and reasoning; push one-sided answers to address the strongest counterpoint.

11. [short · inference · DOK 2] What does this passage from paragraph 2 reveal about the character or situation? “Her husband's friend Richards was there, too, near her.” Answer in two or three sentences with one detail.

    Sample answer: The passage (paragraph 2) shows the situation turning on freedom and marriage: she does not hate her husband but loves her freedom. The words “husband's” and “friend” are the proof, because they show how the moment looks to the people in it. They suggest more than the narrator states outright.

12. [short · inference · DOK 2] What does this passage from paragraph 15 reveal about the character or situation? “Her fancy was running riot along those days ahead of her.” Answer in two or three sentences with one detail.

    Sample answer: The passage (paragraph 15) shows the situation turning on freedom and marriage: she does not hate her husband but loves her freedom. The words “running” are the proof, because they show how the moment looks to the people in it. They suggest more than the narrator states outright.

13. [short · inference · DOK 2] What can you infer from this line? “Free! Body and soul free” (The Story of an Hour, paragraph 12) Answer in two or three sentences with one detail.

    Sample answer: Realization. The evidence is “Free! Body and soul free” (The Story of an Hour, paragraph 12). This develops freedom and marriage: she does not hate her husband but loves her freedom.

14. [short · analysis · DOK 3] Analyze how the word choice in this passage from paragraph 16 shapes its tone: “She arose at length and opened the door to her sister's importunities.” Pick two words and explain their effect.

    Sample answer: The words “importunities” and “sister's” (paragraph 16) make the tone heavy and deliberate rather than neutral. That weight points the reader to freedom and marriage: she does not hate her husband but loves her freedom. The author chooses them so the moment feels significant instead of passing.

15. [short · analysis · DOK 3] Analyze the word choice in “of the joy that kills” (The Story of an Hour, paragraph 19). Pick two words and explain what they suggest.

    Sample answer: The ironic end. The evidence is “of the joy that kills” (The Story of an Hour, paragraph 19). This develops freedom and marriage: she does not hate her husband but loves her freedom. The words "kills" and "that" carry that meaning: they are the charged choices in the line, and changing either would soften the effect.

16. [short · synthesis · DOK 4] Connect this passage from paragraph 10 to the story's treatment of freedom and marriage: "There would be no one to live for her during those coming years; she would live for herself." Use one other moment from the story as well.
    Sample answer: This passage (paragraph 10) develops freedom and marriage: she does not hate her husband but loves her freedom. Its words "herself" and "during" carry that idea into this moment. The same concern returns in "What could love, the unsolved mystery, count for in face of this possession of self-assertion which she suddenly…" (paragraph 11), so the two passages read as a pattern, not a single moment. Together they show the story treating freedom and marriage as central.
17. [mc · recall · DOK 1] What word does she whisper?
    A. Gone
    B. Lost
    C. Alone
    D. Free

    Key: D (Free)
18. [mc · recall · DOK 1] Who first brings the news?
    A. Brently himself
    B. The doctor
    C. A telegram boy
    D. Her sister Josephine and Richards

    Key: D (Her sister Josephine and Richards)
19. [fill · recall · DOK 1] Complete the quotation from paragraph 10: "And she opened and spread her arms out to them in _____." Word bank: significance, welcome, itself, twittering
    Key: welcome
20. [short · analysis · DOK 3] Analyze how the word choice in this passage from paragraph 7 shapes its tone: "But now there was a dull stare in her eyes, whose gaze was fixed away off yonder on one of those patches of blue sky." Pick two words and explain their effect.
    Sample answer: The words "patches" and "yonder" (paragraph 7) make the tone heavy and deliberate rather than neutral. That weight points the reader to freedom and marriage: she does not hate her husband but loves her freedom. The author chooses them so the moment feels significant instead of passing.
21. [short · analysis · DOK 3] Analyze how the word choice in this passage from paragraph 5 shapes its tone: "In the street below a peddler was crying his wares." Pick two words and explain their effect.
    Sample answer: The words "peddler" and "street" (paragraph 5) make the tone heavy and deliberate rather than neutral. That weight points the reader to freedom and marriage: she does not hate her husband but loves her freedom. The author chooses them so the moment feels significant instead of passing.
22. [fill · recall · DOK 1] Fill in the blank with the vocabulary word that fits: "Now her bosom rose and fell _____."
    Word bank: composedly, coursing, tumultuously, elusive
    Key: tumultuously
23. [short · synthesis · DOK 4] Synthesis: trace how freedom and marriage develops from the opening of "The Story of an Hour" to its ending. Use one quotation from each part.
    Sample answer: Near the start, "Free! Body and soul free" (The Story of an Hour, paragraph 12) — Realization. Later, "of the joy that kills" (The Story of an Hour, paragraph 19) — The ironic end. She does not hate her husband but loves her freedom.

24. [short · synthesis · DOK 4] Close reading: how do the diction and syntax of “afflicted with a heart trouble” (The Story of an Hour, paragraph 1) shape its meaning? Consider a second, competing reading.
    Sample answer: Literal and symbolic. The evidence is “afflicted with a heart trouble” (The Story of an Hour, paragraph 1). This develops freedom and marriage: she does not hate her husband but loves her freedom. The words “afflicted” and “trouble” carry that meaning: they are the charged choices in the line, and changing either would soften the effect. She whispers "Free! Body and soul free!", and when her husband returns the doctors say she died "of the joy that kills," a diagnosis the reader knows is wrong.
25. [short · analysis · DOK 3 · AP: AP-LIT.LAN] Claim: Chopin uses irony to show that Louise's death comes from lost freedom, not joy. Explain how this evidence supports the claim: “of the joy that kills” (The Story of an Hour, paragraph 19).
    Sample answer: She whispers "Free! Body and soul free!", and when her husband returns the doctors say she died "of the joy that kills," a diagnosis the reader knows is wrong. The evidence is “of the joy that kills” (The Story of an Hour, paragraph 19) — The ironic end. This develops freedom and marriage: she does not hate her husband but loves her freedom.
26. [short · synthesis · DOK 4 · AP: AP-LIT.FIG] Close reading: how do the diction and syntax of “Free! Body and soul free” (The Story of an Hour, paragraph 12) shape its meaning? Consider a second, competing reading.
    Sample answer: Realization. The evidence is “Free! Body and soul free” (The Story of an Hour, paragraph 12). This develops freedom and marriage: she does not hate her husband but loves her freedom. The words “soul” and “free” carry that meaning: they are the charged choices in the line, and changing either would soften the effect. She whispers "Free! Body and soul free!", and when her husband returns the doctors say she died "of the joy that kills," a diagnosis the reader knows is wrong.
27. [short · inference · DOK 2 · AP: AP-LIT.CHR] What can you infer from this line? “afflicted with a heart trouble” (The Story of an Hour, paragraph 1) Answer in two or three sentences with one detail.
    Sample answer: Literal and symbolic. The evidence is “afflicted with a heart trouble” (The Story of an Hour, paragraph 1). This develops freedom and marriage: she does not hate her husband but loves her freedom.
28. [short · synthesis · DOK 4 · AP: AP-LIT.LAN] Connect this passage from paragraph 9 to the story's treatment of freedom and marriage: “She said it over and over under her breath: ‘free, free, free!’ The vacant stare and the look of terror that had followed it went from her eyes.” Use one other moment from the story as well.
    Sample answer: This passage (paragraph 9) develops freedom and marriage: she does not hate her husband but loves her freedom. Its words “followed” and “breath” carry that idea into this moment. The same concern returns in “She was beginning to recognize this thing that was approaching to possess her, and she was striving to beat it back…” (paragraph 9), so the two passages read as a pattern, not a single moment. Together they show the story treating freedom and marriage as central.

Writing prompts (eleven rigor levels)

Scaffolded support (250 words; AP: see unit standards): Supported track (work from the passage your teacher selects). In “The Story of an Hour,” how does Chopin show a woman's brief taste of freedom? Write a paragraph that states your claim, quotes two details from the passage, and explains how each detail supports your idea. Use the irony you noticed as one piece of evidence.

HS Freshman (350 words; AP: see unit standards): In The Story of an Hour, how does Chopin develop the idea of a woman's brief taste of freedom? State a clear claim, support it with two or three quotations, and explain how the irony in the story helps build that idea.

HS Sophomore (450 words; AP: see unit standards): Analyze how The Story of an Hour develops the idea of a woman's brief taste of freedom. Make a precise claim, support it with at least three pieces of textual evidence, and explain how the author's use of irony and imagery shapes that idea. Address one possible counterclaim.

HS Junior (550 words; AP: see unit standards): Analyze how the structure of The Story of an Hour (where it begins, turns and ends) and its irony shape the reader's understanding of a woman's brief taste of freedom. Identify one place where the text leaves matters uncertain and explain how that uncertainty adds to its meaning. Distinguish what is directly stated from what is really meant.

HS Senior (600 words; AP: see unit standards): Two readers disagree about what The Story of an Hour suggests about a woman's brief taste of freedom. Lay out two plausible interpretations, weigh the evidence for each (including the story's irony and imagery), and argue for the stronger one in a sustained, well-organized essay. Distinguish what is directly stated from what is really meant.

AP (650 words; AP: AP-LIT.NAR, AP-LIT.LAN): Write a literary argument in which you analyze how Kate Chopin uses irony in The Story of an Hour to complicate the reader's understanding of a woman's brief taste of freedom. Develop a defensible thesis, select evidence purposefully, and explain how specific choices of diction and syntax create meaning.

College Freshman (1000 words; AP: see unit standards): Situate The Story of an Hour within its historical and literary context and argue how the story's treatment of a woman's brief taste of freedom responds to that context. Engage with at least one secondary perspective (a critic, historian or the author's own statements), integrate quotations smoothly, and cite in MLA style.

College Sophomore (1250 words; AP: see unit standards): Read The Story of an Hour alongside the conventions of its genre and period. Argue how the story's handling of a woman's brief taste of freedom follows or bends those conventions, using the irony as evidence, and test your reading against one published critic. Document two secondary sources in MLA.

College Junior (1500 words; AP: see unit standards): Apply a named critical approach (for example formalist, historicist, feminist, psychoanalytic or ecocritical) to The Story of an Hour and its treatment of a woman's brief taste of freedom. State your method, show what it reveals in the story's irony and imagery, and identify where the text resists it.

College Senior (2000 words; AP: see unit standards): Develop a research argument that reads The Story of an Hour as evidence for a larger claim about a woman's brief taste of freedom in The Story of an Hour. Connect close reading of the story to the whole story, engage at least four scholarly sources, and state precisely where your reading departs from theirs (Chicago style).

Graduate / PhD (2500 words; AP: see unit standards): Develop an original argument that reads The Story of an Hour as a hinge in the story's larger treatment of a woman's brief taste of freedom. Position your reading within a named critical conversation (for example formalist, historicist, psychoanalytic, feminist or postcolonial approaches), account for the textual history where relevant, and articulate the stakes of your intervention for scholarship on The Story of an Hour.

SAT-style questions

1. It was Brently Mallard who entered, a little travel-stained, composedly carrying his grip-sack and umbrella.

   As used in the text, what does the word “composedly” most nearly mean?

   A. without knowing or intending

   C. continuing firmly in spite of difficulty

   D. in a self-collected or self-possessed manner

2. She was young, with a fair, calm face, whose lines bespoke repression and even a certain strength. But now there was a dull stare in her eyes, whose gaze was fixed away off yonder on one of those patches of blue sky. It was not a glance of reflection, but rather indicated a suspension of intelligent thought.

   Which choice best states a central concern of “The Story of an Hour”?

   A. A woman's brief taste of freedom

   C. Endurance turning to justice

   D. Love and rivalry destroyed by racial violence

SAT key: 1. D (in a self-collected or self-possessed manner); 2. A (A woman's brief taste of freedom)

11. [short · inference · DOK 2] What does this passage from paragraph 5 reveal about the character or situation? “There were patches of blue sky showing here and there through the clouds that had met and piled one above the other in the west facing her window.” Answer in two or three sentences with one detail.
    Sample answer: The passage (paragraph 5) shows the situation turning on irony of joy: she does not hate her husband but loves her freedom. The words “showing” and “patches” are the proof, because they show how the moment looks to the people in it. They suggest more than the narrator states outright.

12. [mc · inference · DOK 2] Which of these passages comes earliest in the story?

    A. “She could see in the open square before her house the tops of trees that were all aquiver with the new spring life.”

    B. “Into this she sank, pressed down by a physical exhaustion that haunted her body and seemed to reach into her soul.”

    C. “When the storm of grief had spent itself she went away to her room alone.”

    D. “There stood, facing the open window, a comfortable, roomy armchair.”

    Key: C (“When the storm of grief had spent itself she went away to her room alone.”)

13. [short · inference · DOK 2] What does this passage from paragraph 9 reveal about the character or situation? “She was beginning to recognize this thing that was approaching to possess her, and she was striving to beat it back with her will — as powerless as her two white slender hands would have been." Answer in two or three sentences with one detail.

Sample answer: The passage (paragraph 9) shows the situation turning on identity: she does not hate her husband but loves her freedom. The words "approaching" and "powerless" are the proof, because they show how the moment looks to the people in it. They suggest more than the narrator states outright.

14. [short · analysis · DOK 3] Analyze how the word choice in this passage from paragraph 11 shapes its tone: "What could love, the unsolved mystery, count for in face of this possession of self-assertion which she suddenly recognized as the strongest impulse of her being!" Pick two words and explain their effect.

    Sample answer: The words "possession" and "recognized" (paragraph 11) make the tone heavy and deliberate rather than neutral. That weight points the reader to identity: she does not hate her husband but loves her freedom. The author chooses them so the moment feels significant instead of passing.

15. [short · analysis · DOK 3] Analyze how the word choice in this passage from paragraph 10 shapes its tone: "But she saw beyond that bitter moment a long procession of years to come that would belong to her absolutely." Pick two words and explain their effect.

    Sample answer: The words "absolutely" and "procession" (paragraph 10) make the tone heavy and deliberate rather than neutral. That weight points the reader to irony of joy: she does not hate her husband but loves her freedom. The author chooses them so the moment feels significant instead of passing.

16. [short · analysis · DOK 3] Analyze how the word choice in this passage from paragraph 9 shapes its tone: "A clear and exalted perception enabled her to dismiss the suggestion as trivial." Pick two words and explain their effect.

    Sample answer: The words "perception" and "suggestion" (paragraph 9) make the tone heavy and deliberate rather than neutral. That weight points the reader to irony of joy: she does not hate her husband but loves her freedom. The author chooses them so the moment feels significant instead of passing.

17. [short · synthesis · DOK 4] Connect this passage from paragraph 16 to the story's treatment of irony of joy: "Richards stood waiting for them at the bottom." Use one other moment from the story as well.

    Sample answer: This passage (paragraph 16) develops irony of joy: she does not hate her husband but loves her freedom. Its words "waiting" and "bottom" carry that idea into this moment. The same concern returns in "She arose at length and opened the door to her sister's importunities." (paragraph 16), so the two passages read as a pattern, not a single moment. Together they show the story treating irony of joy as central.

18. [short · analysis · DOK 3] Analyze how the word choice in this passage from paragraph 15 shapes its tone: "She breathed a quick prayer that life might be long." Pick two words and explain their effect.

    Sample answer: The words "breathed" and "prayer" (paragraph 15) make the tone heavy and deliberate rather than neutral. That weight points the reader to identity: she does not hate her husband but loves her freedom. The author chooses them so the moment feels significant instead of passing.

19. [short · synthesis · DOK 4] Connect this passage from paragraph 4 to the story's treatment of irony of joy: "There stood, facing the open window, a comfortable, roomy armchair." Use one other moment from the story as well.

    Sample answer: This passage (paragraph 4) develops irony of joy: she does not hate her husband but loves her freedom. Its words "comfortable" and "armchair" carry that idea into this moment. The same concern returns in "In the street below a peddler was crying his wares." (paragraph 5), so the two passages read as a pattern, not a single moment. Together they show the story treating irony of joy as central.

20. [short · analysis · DOK 3] Analyze how the word choice in this passage from paragraph 3 shapes its tone: "She wept at once, with sudden, wild abandonment, in her sister's arms." Pick two words and explain their effect.

Sample answer: The words “abandonment” and “sister's” (paragraph 3) make the tone heavy and deliberate rather than neutral. That weight points the reader to identity: she does not hate her husband but loves her freedom. The author chooses them so the moment feels significant instead of passing.

21. [short · synthesis · DOK 4] Connect this passage from paragraph 17 to the story's treatment of identity: “He had been far from the scene of the accident, and did not even know there had been one.” Use one other moment from the story as well.

    Sample answer: This passage (paragraph 17) develops identity: she does not hate her husband but loves her freedom. Its words “accident” carry that idea into this moment. The same concern returns in “Her husband's friend Richards was there, too, near her.” (paragraph 2), so the two passages read as a pattern, not a single moment. Together they show the story treating identity as central.

22. [short · synthesis · DOK 4] Connect this passage from paragraph 8 to the story's treatment of identity: “There was something coming to her and she was waiting for it, fearfully.” Use one other moment from the story as well.

    Sample answer: This passage (paragraph 8) develops identity: she does not hate her husband but loves her freedom. Its words “something” and “fearfully” carry that idea into this moment. The same concern returns in “A clear and exalted perception enabled her to dismiss the suggestion as trivial.” (paragraph 9), so the two passages read as a pattern, not a single moment. Together they show the story treating identity as central.

23. [short · synthesis · DOK 4 · AP: AP-LIT.LAN] Connect this passage from paragraph 5 to the story's treatment of identity: “She could see in the open square before her house the tops of trees that were all aquiver with the new spring life.” Use one other moment from the story as well.

    Sample answer: This passage (paragraph 5) develops identity: she does not hate her husband but loves her freedom. Its words “aquiver” and “square” carry that idea into this moment. The same concern returns in “There were patches of blue sky showing here and there through the clouds that had met and piled one above the other in…” (paragraph 5), so the two passages read as a pattern, not a single moment. Together they show the story treating identity as central.

24. [short · synthesis · DOK 4 · AP: AP-LIT.LAN] Connect this passage from paragraph 13 to the story's treatment of irony of joy: “I beg, open the door — you will make yourself ill.” Use one other moment from the story as well.

    Sample answer: This passage (paragraph 13) develops irony of joy: she does not hate her husband but loves her freedom. Its words “yourself” carry that idea into this moment. The same concern returns in “Her fancy was running riot along those days ahead of her.” (paragraph 15), so the two passages read as a pattern, not a single moment. Together they show the story treating irony of joy as central.

Final paper

The Story of an Hour: final paper (formal literary analysis). Choose one prompt.

1. Analyze how Kate Chopin develops freedom and marriage across The Story of an Hour. Trace the idea through at least three moments (beginning, middle and end) and argue what the ending finally suggests.
2. Choose one recurring symbol, image or motif in The Story of an Hour and argue how its meaning changes over the story and why that change matters to identity.
3. Analyze a central character's choices in The Story of an Hour. Argue whether the story judges that character, and how its structure or point of view shapes your answer.
4. Two readers disagree about whether The Story of an Hour finally endorses or criticizes its society's view of irony of joy. Weigh both readings and argue for one, answering the strongest objection.

Length: Scaffolded support 500-700 words; HS Freshman 700-900 words; HS Sophomore 900-1,100 words; HS Junior 1,000-1,300 words; HS Senior 1,200-1,500 words; AP 1,300-1,600 words; College Freshman 1,500-2,000 words; College Sophomore 2,000-2,500 words; College Junior 2,500-3,000 words; College Senior 3,000-4,000 words; Graduate / PhD 4,000-6,000 words Evidence requirement: at least 4 quotations from at least two parts of the story. Quote the reading text exactly and cite the paragraph (MLA style). HS Senior and above: one scholarly or historical source; College Sophomore and above: two, cited in MLA.

Criterion	Points	Descriptor	Exemplary	Proficient	Developing	Beginning
Thesis	20	A specific, arguable claim that answers the prompt and organizes the paper.	Specific, arguable and precise; it organizes every section.	Clear and arguable, but broad in places.	States a topic or a summary more than an argument.	Missing, or restates the prompt.
Evidence	25	Well-chosen, accurately quoted and cited passages from across the work, meeting the evidence requirement.	Accurate, well-chosen quotations from across the work, all cited; meets the requirement.	Accurate and cited, but clustered in one part of the work.	Too few quotations, or some inaccurate or uncited.	Little or no quoted evidence.
Analysis	30	Explains how language, structure and literary elements create meaning; goes beyond summary.	Explains how specific words, structure and devices create meaning; weighs a competing reading.	Explains the evidence, with some close reading.	Mostly summary; the link to the claim is asserted, not shown.	Summary only.
Organization	15

		Logical progression, clear topic sentences and transitions; introduction and conclusion frame the argument.	Each paragraph advances the argument; transitions show logic.	Logical order with minor jumps.	Order is loose; paragraphs repeat or drift.	No discernible structure.
Style and conventions	10	Formal academic voice, present tense for literature, correct grammar and MLA format.	Formal, precise, present tense; MLA format; virtually error-free.	Formal with a few errors that do not obscure meaning.	Informal or error-prone in ways that distract.	Errors obscure meaning.

Exemplar paragraph: Chopin uses irony to show that Louise's death comes from lost freedom, not joy. The text makes this visible when it says “of the joy that kills” (The Story of an Hour, paragraph 19). She whispers "Free! Body and soul free!", and when her husband returns the doctors say she died "of the joy that kills," a diagnosis the reader knows is wrong. A full paper would carry this reading through the beginning, middle and end, and answer the strongest competing reading.

Essay assignments

Essay: Freedom and marriage

Scaffolded support (600 words; AP: see unit standards): Supported track: write a five-paragraph essay explaining what The Story of an Hour teaches about freedom and marriage. Use at least three quotations from passages your teacher selects from different parts of the book.

HS Freshman (800 words; AP: see unit standards): Write a multi-paragraph essay explaining how Kate Chopin develops freedom and marriage in The Story of an Hour. Use evidence from the beginning, middle and end of the book.
